The forward movement of Sherman's army in May called the Kentucky Brigade into action. It was stationed to the right of Buzzard Roost Gap, and, while the Fourth Corps occupied the opposite slope, the brigade moved about from point to point, skirmishing and sharpshooting, until the night of the 12th of May, when it marched to Resaca and took part in the battle on the 15th. The brigade suffered a loss of forty in killed and wounded during this battle, having borne the brunt of the attack upon Bates' division. At New Hope Church, on the 27th, Gen. Lewis, in command of two regiments of his brigade, supported by two Tennessee regiments, charged a heavy line of Union skirmishers on the right of the Atlanta road and defeated them with slight loss. On the following day the Kentuckians made a desperate charge, in which many of the most gallant officers and soldiers in the command were killed, while a large number of wounded were taken prisoners.

*Killed in action.

On the 20th of June, in front of Kenesaw, an attack was made upon the line occupied by Gens. Lewis and Gist, which resulted in driving them back, when both commanders made a counter charge to recapture the works, but failed to carry them. The brigade participated in the fight at Peachtree Creek, but met its severest loss on the 22d of July, when 135 of its best and bravest men were killed and wounded. The brigade was constantly on duty in the various battles and skirmishes between the contending forces until the last of August, when Sherman's movement around Atlanta caused Bates' division to be ordered to East Point. The Kentucky Brigade was detached and sent to Jonesboro, where it participated in the attack and bloody repulse of Hood's army, on the 30th of August. In this action the loss in the brigade was severe in killed, wounded and missing. On the 1st of September, the brigade suffered a loss of 200 in prisoners, and on the next day formed a part of the line drawn up by Gen. Hood at Lovejoy's Station, which Sherman declined to attack.

The campaign had been very severe upon the Army of the Tennessee, and probably few brigades suffered heavier losses in killed, wounded and missing than the Kentucky Brigade. The 5,000 with which the regiments of the brigade entered the service, had dwindled to 120 officers and 1,120 enlisted men in May, 1864. The Atlanta campaign closed with but 278 men in the ranks.

In conformity with an often expressed wish by the men of the brigade, an order was issued at department headquarters authorizing Gen. Lewis to mount his brigade, and, in accordance with this order, the command marched to Barnesville, where 200 horses were obtained. The brigade began at once to increase in numbers; 200 captured at Jonesboro were exchanged and joined the brigade; wounded men came hobbling into camp and by the 19th the aggregate swelled to about 900, 200 of whom, however, were never mounted. The next two months were spent in constant scouting, and on the advance of Sherman's army in November, the brigade joined Gen. Wheeler in harassing the army of Gen. Sherman, as, under the lead of the great commander, it marched down to the sea.

At Savannah the brigade was dismounted by order of Gen. Hardee and placed in the works, where spurs and sabers were thrown aside, and, with their trusty Enfields, the men resumed their infantry tactics. On the evacuation of the city the brigade was again mounted, and performed arduous service in South Carolina until the surrender of the two main armies of Lee and Johnston.

Edward Porter Thompson, from whose interesting "History of the First Kentucky Brigade," much of the foregoing sketch has been compiled, says: "After it was definitely ascertained that the armies under Lee and Johnston had surrendered, Gen. Lewis proceeded to Washington, Ga., where he was met by Gen. Wilson's provost-marshal, prepared to receive surrender of such troops as should report at that point. The arms were laid by on the afternoon of Saturday, May 6, 1865. Paroles were received, the survivors of many trials and many conflicts separated, and the First Kentucky Brigade as an organization was no more."

TABLE ROCK.

CHAPTER XIX.

PEACE PROBLEMS, RECONSTRUCTION, ETC., ETC.

THE surrender at Appomattox was the beginning of the end, and the surrender of Gen. Johnston, which followed shortly after, virtually closed the war. The dawn of peace found Kentucky in a less deplorable condition than most of the Southern States. Affairs here, however, were bad enough. The State was overrun with guerrillas, whose depredations were confined to no particular class of victims, but who preyed upon all coming in their way with the same relentless cruelty. These robber bands were independent of any military organization, and acknowledged allegiance to neither Federal nor Confederate government. Many of them had never seen regular military service, but had banded together for the purposes of pillage and the gratification of revenge upon actual or imagined enemies. Toward the close of 1864, there was scarcely a county in Kentucky wholly free from their predatory incursions, and to such an extent did they carry their outrages, as to evoke summary action on the part of the State government, and arouse in the army a bitter spirit of revenge. Known guerrillas captured by regular soldiers, in a majority of cases, met with a short shrift. If honest soldiers were sometimes mistaken for these outlaws, and caused to suffer as such, it was one of the misfortunes of war, and directly attributable to guerrilla indignities. The condition of the State at that time may be compared with that which came with the "Thirty years' war in Germany," and the latter stages of the war between king and parliament in England. The ravages of these outlaw bands continued until the establishment of peace. But with the final suppression of guerrilla warfare, the general state of society still was anything but tranquil. Says a writer of that period:

By the 1st of July, 1865, the State was so secured in its position that with perfect safety the Federal troops could have been withdrawn, and the civil government left to go its appointed way. This was, unhappily, not to be. The armies came home, and went again to their fields and firesides, or, where these were no more, began again to create for themselves places in the world. There were no better and more peaceful citizens than the veterans of the two armies, and no relations were ever more friendly than those between the men who learned to respect each other's manliness in a war that tried them well. Yet it suited the purposes of a political body that had fattened on the system of passes and permits, and the other profitable complications of the civil war, to maintain in time of peace a system that had its only justification in the hard conditions of war, if it can find any justification at all.

If Lincoln had survived, we may well believe that his admirable good sense, which enabled him to help his native State wherever he could see her trouble, would have removed these barriers to the tide of peace and good will that came like a flood upon the people. His death and his replacement by a cheap and small-minded man brought on the last and most painful stage of the struggle, that in which a disarmed and war-worn people were driven to fight for the elementary rights of good government against the tyrannous exactions of a political junta which was insensible to the nobility of the victory.

Fortunately for Kentucky it was not possible for the party in power to sink the State to the depths of degradation into which all the rebellious States were at once plunged. There was no valid pretense at hand for overthrowing the machinery of the State government, though there was every evidence of a desire to do so. Her sufferings were trifling compared with those of the States in that hell on earth, the reconstructed South; still, as we shall see, even Kentucky had a time of purgatorial existence, which delayed the period of quiet, and left a mass of painful memories that will hardly ever be forgotten.

The August election of 1865 showed something of the existing state of affairs. The election was for congressmen, members of the legislature and State treasurer. To the latter office James H. Garrard was elected over his opponent, William L. Neale, by a small majority. Garrard represented the Conservative party, and Neale the Radical party. Five Conservative and four Radical members of congress were elected; twenty Conservatives and eighteen Radicals were elected to the State senate, and sixty Conservatives and forty Radicals to the house of representatives. There was "very serious interference in many counties with the election by the military. In some cases soldiers prevented voters from going near the polls, and in others arrested and took them off to prison. In Lexington 'citizens stood in front of the polls, and indicated to the soldiers those who were not entitled to vote, and all thus pointed out were not allowed to present themselves to the judges,' so telegraphed the sheriff, W. W. Dowden, to Gov. Bramlette. Negro soldiers were sent as guardians of the polls in several precincts in Mercer County. * * * In Campbell County the board of contested elections decided that on August 7th 'there was such an interference at the different voting places, by armed soldiers, who so governed and controlled the elections as to render it invalid, null and void,' they judged Thomas Jones, the incumbent, not lawfully elected clerk of the circuit court, and declared the office vacant. * * * * The grand jury of Powell County indicted Henry C. Lilly, senator-elect, and John N. B. Hardwick, county judge, for obstructing the freedom of elections."*

The vote for State treasurer stood: for Mr. Garrard, the Conservative candidate, 42,187 to 42,082 for the Radical candidate, a vote, the smallness of which shows that the ex-Confederate element did not vote. Interference with elections were not the only indignities the people of the State suffered. Nearly every form of civil life was more or less disturbed. An example is found in the case of Rev. Lorenzo D. Huston, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South) in Newport. He was imprisoned because he had opposed the proposition of the Kentucky conference withdrawing from the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in order to join the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States. He was detained in confinement until October, 1865, without trial, and was finally liberated by order of Gen. Grant, "requiring his immediate and unconditional release." The war was over and peace established, but martial law still prevailed in Kentucky. "Every petty officer commanding a post," says a writer, "had summary jurisdiction over the persons of the people, which he could exercise to gratify private malice or to increase his sense of personal importance." The long continuation of martial law in Kentucky is thus explained in the political history of that stormy time:

The Republican party secured substantial control of the other border States, while Kentucky, though she had been the only one of the slave-holding States that had shown a very decided loyalty to the Federal cause, had eluded all efforts of the Republican leaders to cajole or coerce her into its fold. They chose to assume that Kentucky was at this time disloyal, hostility to their party and disloyalty being then, to their minds, synonymous terms. At this time the Republican party was principally in the control of men who had no knowledge of the war, no sympathy with its sufferings or its nobler emotions. They had received great political, and often great pecuniary, profit from its events. Unhesitatingly they stigmatized as disloyal the commonwealth which had given as large a share of its life and treasure to maintain the Union as any other State, which had borne patiently and unflinchingly the most grevious burdens of the struggle, and had in fact clung more closely to the traditions of the Union than any other part of the country.

All this is quite true. While Kentucky was not desolated like some of the more extreme southern States, yet lying as it did, on the dividing line between North and South, it was exposed to the fire of both sides, and suffered from the indignities of both armies. Not the least of its troubles and perils were in the numerous raids made through every part of the State, as already noticed, by the squads of guerrillas who claimed to belong either to the Federal or Confederate cause, but, who, in reality, were only robbers and freebooters, subject to no military laws or control. Both governments disowned these lawless gangs, but that did not put a stop to their outrages, which were perpetrated almost daily during the last year or two of the war.

*Collins' History, Vol. I, p. 163.

The Freedman's Bureau, one of the most offensive engines of reconstruction to the white people of Kentucky, and of the whole south, and, as it eventually proved, a curse to the colored people, developed new evils, and that too, of a most exasperating type. There never was any necessity for the Freedman's Bureau in Kentucky, however much its operation, may have been needed in those States that had been in rebellion. Its organization here was but another of the indignities heaped upon a loyal State that "had given as large a share of its life and treasure to maintain the Union as any other State." Its first indignity was committed under a recent act of congress, which provided that the wives and children of negro soldiers should be free. As this was prior to the adoption of the constitutional amendments upon the subject of slavery, or the freedom of the slaves, its gross injustice is seen at a glance—the injustice of depriving people of their property without due process of law. The families of Kentucky colored soldiers comprised thousands of women and childen, and the Freedman's Bureau undertook to compel their owners to pay them wages for all the time that had elapsed since the enlistment of their fathers and husbands. Of course this brought confusion, and produced serious difficulties; it caused numerous suits to be filed against slave owners, and entailed upon them endless annoyances. The Hon. Garrett Davis, United States senator from Kentucky, and one of the most unconditional and unswerving Union men of the State during the war, was the first victim of this species of prosecution. A suit was brought against him for wages of former slaves, and many other suits of a similar character were instituted against other citizens of the commonwealth. These suits, however, amounted to nothing, except to still further exasperate the people, and indeed, this seems to have been the original intention of them. The following upon negro testimony in the courts is to the point:

> The last important problem left by the war was the question of negro testimony in the courts. The old slavery laws of Kentucky limited the testimony of the negro in many ways; white men could not be convicted of grave crime by their evidence. These laws should have been at once repealed, and it is to the discredit of the State that they remained upon the statute books until 1872. There is, however, some excuse for this delay. The Freedman's Bureau had constituted itself the keepers of the whole negro population, and had in an unfortunate way removed them from the control of the ordinary civil law of the State. To the appeal for the abrogation of the statute the people answered: "Do away with this interference with the negroes, and we will give them equal position before the law." When, in 1872, the end of this system of supervision of the negro population by the Freedman's Bureau was abandoned, the resistance to the complete assimilation of the negro with the white race in all matters of the law came about. The negro has been found to be a very trustworthy witness, and none regret his full admission to the courts.

The negro, it is an indisputable fact, was the great question involved in the civil war. His emancipation from slavery entailed a heavy pecuniary loss to the people of the State, and yet, when his freedom was brought about, society felt the relief of a patient, whose life is saved at the expense of a limb. Slavery had become somewhat unprofitable, and was yearly growing more so, to an extent more marked in Kentucky than in the far South. The institution was hedged about by humanitarian instincts and laws of Kentucky that were unknown in the cotton and sugar-growing States; black labor, considering the total capital involved and the small returns received, was growing unprofitable in a rapid ratio, while the vast irreducible expense of the institution, the growing impoverished condition of the land, and its utter lack of adaptability to other pursuits, rendered ruin near and inevitable. And so, while the opposition to emancipation was unanimous and determined, when once it was effected the relief was immediately apparent and rejoiced in. The agricultural system has been greatly improved under the new order of things, farm labor is more profitable, the dominant class is more enterprising and vigorous, and the old slave caste is now broken down and the last vestiges of it fast disappearing. The conditions effected by this radical change have been met with a creditable spirit by both races. Freedom found the negroes destitute of everything but the meager clothing in their possession. A number anticipated the final abolition of slavery in the border States by going into the army, but those who remained found themselves wholly improvided and without resources. In this condition the greatest misery might have followed had the masters cherished a vindictive spirit. A few of the liberated slaves tried their new found wings only to fail utterly in their first flight, and begged to be taken back on the old place. It is undoubtedly true that the physical condition of the freedmen for the first year or two was worse than during the period of slavery (and with many it is still worse), but the masters, partly through sympathy and partly because they needed them, allowed their former slaves to remain. There was no necessity for so great a number, however, and many found it to their interest to emigrate to Kansas and elsewhere. Those who remained found ready employment and considerate treatment generally. Many are doing well, making a good living and educating their children, many are doing but little better than under the old regime, and some are doing worse.

The freeing of a large number of ignorant negroes, whose whole training taught them to lie, pilfer, to live improvidently and unchaste, has imposed upon society a heavy burden of responsibility. Twenty years have passed since the war which set them free, but society has not yet adjusted itself completely to the new order of things. Neither race adequately appreciate the full extent of the change that has been wrought, and the responsibilities which it imposes upon each. The negroes, trained to an utter disregard of personal character in themselves, have not yet learned that this must now be cultivated. The whites fail in the same respect. Negroes convicted of felony lose caste with neither race, and find employment at the hands of the whites as readily as the honest black. Women notoriously unchaste are employed by the whites as cooks or servants, and lose no standing in colored society. This fatal lack of self-respect is encouraged by the heedless action of the whites, and so long as it exists is a menace against society, and a successful hindrance to the elevation of the race. Education to such a people is a dangerous power, and religion a sham, and yet, nothing but education, liberal, practical education, will ever raise the colored people to the standard of respectable citizenship. It is the duty of every good citizen to heartily co-operate with well-directed effort to this end, and with better methods, backed by such co-operation, much may be done for the betterment of this helpless ward of the nation.

The indignities perpetrated upon the people by the Freedman's Bureau, as might naturally have been expected, produced results inimical to good order. It bred a spirit of lawlessness that culminated in 1866 in the disburbances of the Ku Klux Klan. This secret tribunal, whose name became as terrible almost as that of the Spanish Inquisition or the Holy Vehme of Germany in the middle ages, was common to the whole south, but its acts were fewer and less serious in Kentucky. The motives for its organization and the results of its existence, have been discussed by a prominent author,* as follows:

The sudden closing of the war left a considerable amount of social rubbish within the State, both white and black. The negroes, as a rule, behaved exceedingly well in their unaccustomed condition, accepting their new lot of citizenship in an excellent spirit; but a portion of them, especially those who had been employed in the army as teamsters and as camp servants, proved very troublesome. Nearly the whole of this part of the negro people had gathered into small separate settlements away from their original homes, and were under the influence of a bad class of white leaders. This demoralized condition of the lower classes of blacks led to a large amount of stealing; no farmer could keep his sheep or pigs from their furtive hands; usually the thieving was not accompanied by violence, but in some cases the trouble was more serious. In many counties the negroes organized themselves into marauding bands; there were a number of outrages upon women, an offense that had always been particularly abhorrent to the people of Kentucky, and which they have always visited with condign punishment when the perpetrators could be found. In its beginning, at least in Kentucky, the Ku Klux Klan was probably designed to restrain and punish these transgressions. It doubtless did in the outset certain rude acts of justice. Its cheap mystic accompaniments were certainly well designed to strike terror to the superstitious blacks. When it had accomplished the little good that was possible to a system so fundamentally evil, it fell into the hands of the most wretched class of the population, the very element it was designed to overthrow, and became a great curse to society. For a time the organization defied the civil law; the secrecy of its action and the terrorism exercised on witnesses, made it impossible to apply adequate punishment through the courts.

*American Commonwealths, p, 369.

Beginning in 1866, this evil system continued in intermittent action until 1873. Like most social evils in a vigorous State, this system finally brought about its own remedy. For years the country folk tolerated the outrages for the profit they brought to them; their pigs were safer even if the common people of the realm did suffer a bit. The old dislike of lawlessness, common to well organized societies, was lessened by the long time of strife. For several years the Ku Klux vented its outrages upon the essentially criminal class; the rough justice of many of their actions made the mass of the people pardon their worst crimes. Finally, there came a general sense that they were going too far, and that they should no longer be tolerated. When this feeling became general they were speedily crushed out. With the Ku Klux disappeared the last remnant of the greater ills that came in the train of the war. Regarding, then, the Ku Klux system and the Freedmen's Bureau as the closing evils of the war, we may accept 1873 as the last year of that great revolution which began in 1860, moved swiftly to the state of war, raged for four years with a fury of thought, words and actions unequaled in any struggle of the race, and then for eight years left its wreckage to trouble men weary with the nobler part of their great labor.

That part of the development of Kentucky, which can be in any proper sense termed historic, ended in 1873 with the sweeping away of the last cloud left by the war; all the rest of its life is still in the process of evolution. Before we turn to consider the present condition of the State, let us bring before our minds the outline of these years of rapid change through which this people had just passed. In 1860, when, after infinite debate, Kentucky slowly came to the remarkable resolution that she would bar her doors to the great storm that was about to move heaven and earth about her, the commonwealth was still a mediæval society in all its essential qualities; the institution of slavery had acted like a pickle to preserve unchanged much of the notions that belonged in other centuries of the race's life. Her very resolution to stand aloof in a war in which the nineteenth century fought against the seventeenth, shows that the people, despite an intense interest in politics, had not come to a point of view whence they could see where their social life stood in the world. They were as much out of the world of their day as if they had been shut in on every side by mountain heights; a clean-blooded, land-loving, fairly thrifty lot, they had, through their activities, not suffered any of the degradation that comes to other races from their connection with slaves.

Kentucky suffered less, as stated, than her sister States of the south, but the "shock to the commonwealth, arising from the conjoined loss of life and property, defies expression in words, nor do the ordinary accidents of society supply any analogy." Her loss of property was proportionately as great as the loss of life among her soldiers. In 1860 the slave property of Kentucky was estimated at over $100,000,000. This, in 1865, had disappeared, and other elements of wealth had greatly diminished. Describing the condition of the State at the close of the war, it was said that, "although the war as carried on in Kentucky had been, on the whole, a singularly decent struggle, the actual destruction of property was very large. Nearly all the live stock was swept away. A considerable part of the houses had been burned; fences were gone, and the forest, quick to recover its grasp on the rich soil, had changed vast districts of fertile fields into thickets that had to be re-won to the plow. * * * * * * When a city is burned its men remain; a commercial crisis destroys neither the men nor the productive power of a State; a pestilence leaves the real property untouched; but the destruction of a long continued civil war is a thing by itself combining all the evils which an ordinary society can suffer, and adds to those a new element of ruin in the overthrow of the precious trust in civil government."

After the close of the war political parties in Kentucky were reorganized on new lines. The extreme to which the "civil rights" had been carried, disgust at the emancipation of the slaves, the irritation resulting from the acts of the Freedmen's Bureau, and other proceedings "hostile to the governmental integrity of the State," all combined to make Kentucky an overwhelmingly Democratic State. Pertinent to the subject is the following:

Perhaps the most satisfactory feature in the close of the civil war was the really quick restoration of the civil order in the State and the perfect reunion of the divided people. The prompt and complete abrogation of the severe penalties laid upon the Confederate soldiers and sympathizers, greatly contributed to this speedy return to the conditions of peace. In this course the people of Kentucky set an excellent but unheeded example to the Federal government. By this action they avoided all risks of having a large part of their citizens parted in spirit from the life and work of the commonwealth. This reconciliation was helped by the fact that both Federals and Confederates had played a manly part in the struggle. Not only had the soldiers in both parties shown themselves to be brave and manly men in the field, but the Kentucky troops on both sides had done all in their power to make war decent and honorable, and to lighten its burdens on non-combatants. They could wear their laurels and live their lives together without shame. What was left of the 40,000 who went away into the southern service, came back to their place in the State sadder and wiser men, yet the better citizens for their dearly bought experience. We search in vain for any evidence of hatred or even dislike among these men who were lately in arms against each other. In all the walks of life, in the courts and in the legislature, as well as in the relations of kindred, we find these old enemies going together to their work of repairing the ruin that war had brought on the State—fighting at times their battles over again in good-natured talk, but each dearer to the other for the fearful parting of the war.

The session of the legislature of 1865–66 repealed the laws that disfranchised Confederate soldiers. An act had been passed, during the war, consigning to the penitentiary those Confederate soldiers who had invaded the State. This act was repealed by a vote of twenty-one to fifteen in the senate, and sixty-two to thirty-three in the house. By a similar vote the expatriation act was repealed, as were all other laws which had been passed to "disqualify or punish persons for sympathy with the rebellion." The returned Confederate soldiers comprised a large and valuable portion of the male population of the State, and their restoration to citizenship was an act of wisdom on the part of the legislature. "The dangers arising from the animosities of the war," says one versed in the politics of the time, "were at once done away with, and the breaches that were made in the society of the rebellious States by the continued disfranchisement of its citizens were avoided. It was an absolutely safe measure, considered even from the point of view of Federal politics. The experience of the Confederate soldiers in the years gone by had destroyed all desire of resistance to the Federal authority. It is doubtful if these men had been polled after their return to Kentucky whether they would have voted for a peaceable secession of the Confederate States. The problem of secession had been worked out to the end; the result was generally accepted by the soldiers of the Confederacy as final. To have maintained the isolation of these returned Confederates would have been an act of political madness, and in receiving them in friendliness, the State of Kentucky did an act that unfortunately was not imitated by the Federal government. When, in the centuries to come, the historian looks over the graves of all those who took part in the civil war, and sees their acts cleared of the cloud of prejudice that even now envelops them, we must believe that these acts of reconciliation will stand forth as the noblest features in the history of this commonwealth. He will see in them the best possible evidence of the civil strength, of the State making and State preserving power, of this people. He will certainly note the fact that the Union party in a border State, where passions were infuriated in the presence of immediate war, had a higher element of reason in their action than was found in the whole Federal Union, the greater and dominant part of which saw nothing of war except in the mind's eye."

At the August election in 1867 there were three tickets presented to the voters of the commonwealth, viz.: "Democratic," "Conservative Union," and "Union" or "Republican." John L. Helm, the Democratic candidate for governor, and John W. Stevenson, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor, were elected, by an overwhelming majority, over William B. Kinkead and Harrison Taylor, Conservative Union, and Sidney M. Barnes and R. T. Baker, Union Republican. John Rodman, Democrat, was elected attorney-general over Gen. John M. Harlan (now of the Supreme Court of the United States) and Col. John Mason Brown; Col. D. Howard Smith, Democrat, was elected auditor, over Col. J. S. Hurtt and Silas Adams; James W. Tate, Democrat, was elected treasurer over Alford Allen and M. J. Roark; James A. Dawson, Democrat, was elected register of the land office over Col. J. J. Craddock and J. M. Fidler; Z. F. Smith, Democrat, was elected superintendent of public instruction over Benjamin M. Harney and Rev. Daniel Stevenson. The legislature bore the following complexion: Senate, twenty-eight Democrats, three Union Democrats, and seven Union Republicans; house of representatives, eighty-five Democrats, five Union Democrats, and ten Union Republicans. This shows pretty conclusively how strongly Democratic the State had become under the policy of reconstruction. Gov. Helm was lying very ill at his home in Elizabethtown when the election came off. He never recovered, but died on the 8th of September following. He had been inaugurated governor on the 3d, at Elizabethtown, being too ill to go to Frankfort. Lieut.-Gov. Stevenson was inaugurated governor, as the successor of Mr. Helm, on the 13th of September. In August, 1868, Mr. Stevenson was duly elected governor, a special election having been called, over R. T. Baker, receiving 115,560 votes, to 26,605 for Baker, Republican.

In the presidential election this year Horatio Seymour carried Kentucky by a vote of 115,889 to 39,566 for Gen. U. S. Grant, the Republican candidate. Gen. Grant was elected president by a majority of 134 electoral votes. Nine Democratic congressmen were elected in Kentucky. The Eighth Congressional District gave Gen. Grant 1,259 popular majority, but notwithstanding elected a democratic congressmen. Four years later (1872), the presidential candidates were Horace Greeley and Gen. Grant, with a fifth wheel to the political wagon, entitled Charles O'Conor. The vote of Kentucky was as follows: Horace Greeley, nominee of the Democratic party, 100,212; Gen. Grant, Republican, 88,816; Charles O'Conor, Bourbon Democrat, 2,374; Greeley over Grant, 11,396 majority. A full Democratic delegation was elected to congress. Two years previously (in 1870), Kentucky elected a Democratic delegation to congress. With the exception of one or two districts, Kentucky has ever since elected Democrats to congress; also to State offices.

In the State election of 1871, Preston H. Leslie, the Democratic candidate, was elected governor over Gen. John M. Harlan, by a vote of 126,455 to 89,299. By similar majorities the Democrats elected John Rodman, attorney-general; D. Howard Smith, auditor; James W. Tate, treasurer; J. A. Grant, register of the land office; Rev. H. A. M. Henderson, superintendent of public instruction. To the State senate thirty-five Democrats and three Republicans were elected, and eighty-two Democrats and eighteen Republicans to the house of representatives. In 1875 James B. McCreery was elected governor by the Democrats; in 1879, Dr. Luke P. Blackburn was elected governor, and in 1883, J. Proctor Knott, the present executive, was elected by the usual Democratic majority.

The presidential election of 1876 will long be remembered in Kentucky, as well as in national history. The cry of fraud attaching to it, and the excitement aroused, will not be forgotten for generations to come. From a Democratic standpoint, the popular vote stood: Samuel J. Tilden, 4,300,590; Rutherford B. Hayes, 4,036,298, a popular Democratic majority of 264,292. The elections of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida were contested, and in the final settlement of the contest the result arrived at presented some novel facts, the most important of which were majorities for the Republican national ticket, and for the Democratic State ticket. Years hence it may be a matter of interest to know how this (notorious) election was finally settled. As both parties claimed South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida, congress passed an act providing for an electoral commission to pass upon all matters in dispute, the decision to be final. This commission was composed of five senators, five representatives and five justices of the supreme court. The senate selected George F. Edmunds, Oliver P. Morton, Frederick T. Frelinghuysen (Republicans), Allen G. Thurman and Thomas F. Bayard (Democrats). The house of representatives chose Eppa Hunton, Henry B. Payne, Josiah E. Abbott (Democrats), James A. Garfield and George F. Hoar (Republicans). Four justices of the supreme court designated by the act, were Nathan Clifford and Stephen J. Field (Democrats), and William Strong and Samuel F. Miller (Republicans). They chose as the fifth justice Joseph P. Bradley, a Republican. The natural choice would have been David Davis, but he had been elected a senator from Illinois only five days before. The commission divided in voting on the main issues on a party line, the eight Republicans overruling the seven Democrats, and the result was the admission of the Republican electoral votes from the States in contest and the seating of the Republican candidates.*

As finally counted, the electoral vote was as follows: Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana—184 votes for Tilden and Hendricks. Main, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Florida, Lousiana, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Nevada, California, Oregon—185 votes for Hayes and Wheeler, a majority of one electoral vote. Had the three States, South Carolina, Florida and Lousiana, claimed for Tilden, been given him, he would have had a majority of thirty-nine votes in the electoral college.

The presidential campaign of 1880 placed four tickets before the voters of the country, viz.: James A. Garfield and Chester A. Arthur, Republicans; Gen. Winfield S. Hancock and William E. English, Democrats; James B. Weaver, Greenbacker; and Gen. Neal Dow, Prohibitionist. The vote in the electoral college was 214 for Garfield and Arthur, and 155 for Hancock and English. In 1884 the Democratic party triumphed, and elected Grover Cleveland and Thomas A. Hendricks, president and vice-president, over James G. Blaine and John A. Logan, Republicans.

The progress of public education in Kentucky since the close of the war far exceeds that of any other period in the history of the State. But its system of public schools, as compared with those of the northern and western States, is still lamentably defficient. One reason for this has been the unfortunate pride of caste which prevailed among the southern people—to a greater extent prior to the war than now—and which led to the organization and support of hundreds of seminaries, academies, and other high grade schools. These educational institutions were established mainly by private enterprise, and for pecuniary advantages to the projectors. They have greatly retarded the growth of the public schools and the cuuse of public education, and the majority of them, though rejoicing in the high-sounding name of "colleges," are as incapable of giving the pupil a collegiate education as the ordinary graded school of a country village—more so than the graded public school of a northern or western village of 1,000 inhabitants. Since the war, however, the people are growing out of this foolish idea of caste, and it is to their credit that it is so. The late superintendent of public instruction, Rev. Mr. Henderson, very pertinently said:

> Ten years ago, a man in the blue grass country, worth $10,000, would as soon have thought of sending his children to the poor-house as to the public school. The public school was generally regarded as a charity, devised for the education of paupers, but not to be countenanced by the rich, save as a benefaction to the poor. The schools were common in the sense of low, vulgar and inferior. The very accent with which the adjective was pronounced, indicated the contempt in which men of means regarded it. But our citizens have now learned to regard it as common, in the sense of a community of interest, as the laws are common, the common land; as the State is common, the commonwealth, etc. Now the idea of conferring a benefit upon the indigent has given place to the true one, namely, to prepare citizens for the intelligent exercise of thei suffrages, and to protect society from the penalties of ignorance.

*History of Presidential Campaigns, by Edward Stanwood.

The public schools, form the true foundation of our educational system. Colleges and universities are proper in their place, and should be carefully fostered and liberally endowed. They are essential to a higher education, and we could no more dispense with them than with any other branch of education, or of the government. But the public schools, schools for the education of the masses, should be equally fostered. "With what scrupulous care," says a zealous friend of public education, "does England foster her great universities for the training of the sons of the nobility, for their places in the house of lords, in the army, navy and church. What, then, should be the character of citizenship in a country where every man is born a king and sovereign, heir to all the franchises and trusts of the State and republic? An ignorant people can be governed, but only an intelligent and educated people can govern themselves."

MODERN COUNTRY SCHOOLHOUSE.

The interest being manifested of late years, in the public schools, is ample proof of the intellectual developement of the State, under the new order of things brought about by the war. Illustrative of their increasing popularity, is the following extract from the State superintendent's report, a few years ago:

The wealthiest counties are becoming the best friends of the public schools, and tax payers are voting levies upon themselves to improve their quality, and extend their terms. Half a million dollars are annually raised, by the election of the people, to supplement the public bonus. Tasteful and comfortable schoolhouses are fast taking the places of those old shams and shames, in which the children of the poor erstwhile were corraled. Eighteen hundred have been built within the last eight years. A home supply of teachers, furnished from our best young men and women, are taking the place of impecunious tramps and shiftless natives. The system is no longer an infirmary for the lame and halt and feeble, incompetents to be provided for, no more are pensioned upon the bounty afforded by the school fund. It is not now a "stepping stone" to professions, a temporary expedient, accepted until something better turns up or is turned up. Men and women among us are choosing it for their life work, and emulating each other in their aspirations and achievements of a profession which confers honor, and whose prizes are to be coveted, and whose badges are to be worn with pride. Cities and towns vie with each other in maintaining graded schools better than our average western colleges, with their half-starved faculties. School examinations and teachers' institutes have become occasions looked forward to with anticipations of pleasure, and enjoyed as feasts of soul. Communities bid for these convocations, and rival each other in the tender of hospitalities to their members. At these sessions teachers take on power and inspiration for practical work, when they return to their school-rooms, loaded with valuable suggestions and methods. Discriminating patrons witness the exercises, to determine who among the instructors is best fitted for the post of district teacher. Citizens crowd to the polls to elect the officers of the system, and men are aspiring for the dignities of the trustees office. Aspirants for the county commissionership are as eager for its honors as candidates for county judgeships. Calls for the superintendent are loud and frequent from every part of the State.

He who fails to see these tokens of interest is wilfully and wantonly blind. These and other signs of the times argue that an auspicious period is at hand, when the benefits of education will crush out ignorance, and intelligence hold the ballots that fall in the nation's urn of fate. The importance of our common school system is apparent, when it is remembered that there are only 35,000 pupils in all the universities, colleges, seminaries and private academies of our State, while a quarter of a million of children flock to our 7,000 public schools. In half the counties no schools are taught but common schools. In some of our counties of wealth and refinement, the public schools have absorbed all private educational enterprises, because co-operative effort furnishes a superior quality of education. If our colleges decline in the number of matriculates, the cause is not to be found in diminished interest in education, but in the fact that our public schools are affording at home advantages formerly sought abroad.

This is but proof of the advance made by the State in educational development since the close of the war. This intellectual advancement is still increasing and improving every year. And there is still room for further improvements. Education alone will stop the lawlessness that stalks abroad in some portions of the State. The refining influence of a good school upon the society of any neighborhood, hitherto without one, has never failed to show happy effects. But a few years ago official statistics showed that Kentucky had 40,000 white voters who could not read. Add to this the negro voters, estimated at 55,000, but few of whom can read, and the majority of whom are far more ignorant than the illiterate whites, and we have 95,000, nearly one-third of the entire electoral population of the State, who are "ignorant of the very means by which to acquaint themselves with the merits of the questions submitted for their decision at the polls." Let this mass of ignorance increase until it rises into a majority, and what will be the result? It requires no prophet to foretell the doom of the State in such an event. This ignorance must and will increase if left to itself, without State encouragement for its own improvement. Citizenship can only be improved, lawlessness lessened, and intemperance driven from the community by education, and the sooner the people awake to this fact, the better it will be for the credit and prosperity of the commonwealth. Competent legislation is required, and, if need be, a reorganization of the entire school system. "It is a singular phenomenon," says Mr. Collins, "of the history of the internal economy of our State for seventy years, that our main attempts at internal improvement and public education, at State expense, and under State superintendence, have been embarrassed or defeated, almost wholly by the misdirection and mismanagement of incompetent legislation." There is too much truth in this to gainsay. If the average legislator has not been criminally neglectful, he has certainly been lamentably indifferent to legislation for the benefit and improvement of public education.

The colored schools are increasing in importance each year. It is highly commendable in the colored people that they evince so great an interest and enthusiasm in the cause of education, and proves that they are desirous of improving themselves, and of becoming good and respectable citizens. In some sections of the State they are taking really more interest in the public schools than the whites. Said Mr. Henderson, in one of his annual reports as State superintendent: "Their system has more than met the expectation of its projectors and friends, and is rapidly, by gratifying development, disappointing the prophesies and hopes of its enemies. The colored people are now taking hold of it with that enthusiasm and earnestness so characteristic of the race, when their interests are at stake, and their claims to notice recognized by authority. They are exhibiting a most commendable zeal in supplementing the fund, and are really doing more to make the most of the opportunities tendered them by the State, than the whites."

The colored people receive a school fund direct from the State, to which is added the taxes paid by themselves. In some localities they have built comfortable houses; in the city of Louisville, and in some of the other larger cities of the State, their school buildings compare favorably with those of the whites, and they are supplied with teachers well qualified for the stations they fill. A gratifying fact, in connection with the education of the colored people, is the interest in the matter, "manifested by representative white men throughout the State, and their earnest disapproval of the policy of bitter antagonism of those who still cherish hereditary prejudice, instead of rising to the level of an intelligence which respects the issues that the changed relations of this race have introduced into the policies of the State." The negroes are now all freemen, but their future, without education, would be little better than actual slavery. The older ones, who were brought up and educated to work, are rapidly passing away, while a new generation is coming on—reared without restraints, and to look upon work as one of the relics of slavery. For these there is no hope but in education. The following may be a little severe, but is not wholly without truth:

The greatest crime of the century was the sudden enfranchisement of 4,000,000 of unlettered Africans. Those who perpetrated this outrage upon our republican institutions, did it in the face of all the social science they had propagated. The North had emphasized the doctrine, that "virtue and intelligence are essential to the perpetuity of the republic;" and yet, in an ill advised hour of heated passion, rendered hot by the fires of civil war, they made a horde of ignorant slaves the peers of their intelligent masters, and thus provided the condition that prostrated the South, and subjected its people to the most destroying despotism that ever ground into the dust a free citizenship. The only indemnity for this stupendous wrong is their education at the national expense. To require the people they impoverished by this act of folly to bear the burden of their education, would be a continued piece of injustice, which no political casuistry can justify, no species of sophistry disguise, and no maudlin philanthrophy dignify with a decent apology.

Berea College is a liberal educational institution located in Madison County, and is open to the education of the colored people on equal terms with the whites. It dates its origin back to 1855—a time when it required an indomitable will and unbounded courage to establish such a school in a slave-holding State. It may, in some degree, be termed an offshoot of Oberlin College, Ohio, as the first teachers, employed in the Berea School, William E. Lincoln and Otis B. Waters, were students who had been educated at that institution. It was the cause of much excitement throughout the surrounding country, and more or less mob violence was exercised against the zealous founders of the school, and also the church which had been established in the same vicinity. Rev. John G. Fee, who was the originator of the school, has been pastor of the church at Berea for nearly a third of a century, and is a native Kentuckian, received many indignities during his early ministrations in this and the adjoining counties, from the rough elements of society, spurred on by those who opposed "abolitionism."

LADIES' HALL—BEREA COLLEGE.

The third teacher of the Berea school was Prof. J. A. R. Rogers. The second term of the school under his administration was opened in September, 1859, with two additional teachers —John G. Hanson and his wife. It was during this term that the question of admitting colored pupils was discussed in the young men's literary society of the school. After considerable discussion it was decided that, "if any one made in God's image comes to get knowledge which will enable him to understand the revelation of God in Jesus Christ, he can not be rejected." This sentiment was obnoxious to the slave-holding families, and many of them withdrew their children from the school.

Efforts were made, in 1858, to transform the school into a college, by the adoption of a constitution, at a meeting held on September 7th, of that year, at the residence of Rev. Mr. Fee. The following clauses from the document will show the grand object of Berea College:

> This college shall be under an influence strictly christian, and, as such, opposed to sectarianism, slave-holding, caste, and every other wrong institution or practice.
>
> The object of this college shall be to furnish the facilities for a thorough education to all persons of good moral character, at the least possible expense to the same, and all the inducements and facilities for manual labor which can reasonably be supplied by the board of trustees shall be offered its students.

Many difficulties still remained to be surmounted by the friends of the institution, but they persevered. A tract of land containing something over a hundred acres was purchased for $1,800, and Mr. Fee went east to raise funds for the college. But political influences disturbed its peace, and on the 23d of December, 1859, a "committee of safety" visited Berea, and delivered notice to some dozen of those most zealous in the school to leave the county within ten days. They petitioned the governor for protection, but he informed them he could not afford them protection, owing to the excitement caused by the John Brown raid in Virginia, which had just occurred. The families who were forced to leave the place numbered about forty persons. The war soon opened, and with the beginning of hostilities the institution closed temporarily.

In 1865 the school was reopened. A charter for a college was obtained under a general law of the State, the board of trustees reorganized, and other lands were purchased. The admission of colored pupils caused considerable excitement, and half the white pupils deserted the institution. But their places were soon filled, and the requisite qualifications for admission into the institution still remained—"a good moral character." Temporary buildings for the accomodation of the increased attendance were erected in 1866–67. Howard Hall was erected in 1869 by the Freedman's Bureau at a cost of $18,000. It is a three-story wood building with a tin roof. In 1870–71, "Ladies' Hall," was erected. It is a superb building, three stories high, built of brick, and has two fronts of 120 feet each. The Ladies' Hall at Oberlin, Ohio, was taken as a pattern, and "its excellencies, if possible, were improved, and its defects remedied." It is furnished with every modern convenience, and is a very model of excellence in every respect. "All other college buildings, including Howard Hall, Recitation Hall, Office Building, Grammar School, Intermediate School, Primary School, very good buildings, and the chapel, a very fine building, costing $9,000, are situated in the college campus, consisting of two large and beautiful groves of forest trees embracing about forty-five acres. The larger grove, in which the buildings are, is on the high land, and the other in the plain, fifty feet below."

The college owns, besides the buildings, which are estimated at $82,000, 300 acres of land, not including the grounds about the buildings, and worth about $15,000; it owns about twenty-five good business lots, 25x125 feet, and worth $125 per lot. The college has an endowment of $95,000, not including the land.

The following extract, from an article by Prof. A. P. Peabody, of Harvard, on the co-education of the races, will present an appropriate conclusion to this sketch of Berea:

> Of all the experiments in co-education that have been instituted, we regard Berea College, in Kentucky, as the most important in its sphere of influence and in its prophecy of enduring benefit to the colored race. It has carried the war into the enemy's camp, and has brought its whole Christian panoply and armament into the immediate encounter with the surviving spirit of slavery—a spirit made all the more virulent by the destruction of its body. At other institutions, black students are admitted to an equality with the white; at Berea, white students are admitted to an equality with the black. The trustees and professors at Berea can not invite their white neighbors to unite with them in throwing the doors of their institutions wide open to all that choose to come. They must first gather their little flock of black pupils, with a very few white youths from their own or friendly families, and then they must make their light shine bright enough and far enough to win the regard and confidence of a distrustful and scornful public; and to demonstrate to that unwilling public that it is for their own and their childrens' interest that they patronize this institution. This has been effected. The college has shown its large educational capacity. Its public exercises have been attended in successive years by persons of established reputation as educationists and literary men, and have received their unqualified commendation and praise. There is, for many miles around, no institution of learning that does nearly so much or so well for its pupils. The consequence is that those at first vehemently opposed to it are fast falling into the ranks of neutrals or friends. Many who deemed it a nuisance have already sent their children to it. Its sterling value as a seminary of education is now recognized on all hands. But it is of much more worth for its silent, yet most efficient propagandism of the due relation between the races; for co-education includes within itself or involves as its necessary consequence, equality in all civic and social rights, immunities, duties and obligations.

Kentucky has never encouraged foreign immigration as some other portions of the republic have done. But, on the contrary, the State has opposed it more or less, until within the past few years. The tide of immigration, however, flowing by her northern border to the west and north, enriching the great Northwest, has aroused her to action, and brought the question of foreign immigration to the consideration and attention of the people, and also of the legislature. Within the last five years, a bureau of immigration has been established and facts and statistics and other important intelligence concerning the material resources of the State, have been profusely distributed far and wide. The result of this judicious dissemination of knowledge of Kentucky's material wealth has been the planting of a number of colonies of English, German and Swiss people in the State. Their prosperity shows conclusively that the State affords fine opportunities for immigrants.

The accumulation of aliens from all lands and countries, within a new American State, has been considered by many to be somewhat perilous. Upon this subject a late writer says: "Kentucky has had the good fortune to inherit a nearly pure English blood. Aside from the diminishing negro population, the blood of the people is of a singularly unmixed origin. Her success in meeting the strains of the civil war could not have been secured if its people had not had this singular unity of race and the solidarity of motive that it brought with it. While there are, doubtless, evils that come from this predominance of English stock and the consequent uniformity of the motives of the people, leading as it does to a certain acceptance of existing conditions, there are other dangers, and graver, which come from the confusion of motives in the States that have a large foreign population, that are much more menacing to society."

VIEW IN SWISS COLONY—LAUREL COUNTY.

There have been several influences that have retarded foreign immigration to Kentucky. The strongest of these influences, perhaps, is the competition with negro labor. The European immigrant is not willing to enter into competition with this species of labor, and the result is they seek those States where slavery never existed. Kentucky has but a small negro population, and it is diminishing in numbers, and there are large tracts of country within the State where there are no negroes, yet the name of a "slave State" clings to it as a plague, driving immigration to other and less fertile regions. This objection to Kentucky must soon pass away, and when it does, and the fine climate and fertile lands of Kentucky become better known to immigrants, then will the tide of immigration turn within her borders. The advantages of Kentucky only need to become well known to induce immigration. The Swiss colonies in Laurel and Lincoln Counties, with the air of prosperity that prevails about them, demonstrate unmistakably the fine field Kentucky presents to the colonist.

MASONIC WIDOW'S AND ORPHAN'S HOME—LOUISVILLE.

CHAPTER XX.

INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE STATE.

THE late war developed a new phase in every form of life as well in the political history of Kentucky. Everything has changed—much for the better—and a new era has been inaugurated that in intellectual advancement bids fair to surpass the hopes and expectations of the most sanguine friends of the commonwealth. While it cannot be claimed that the scriptural dispensation, when "old things are to pass away," and "all things become new," has dawned, yet the vast changes and improvements seem to indicate an approach to that period. The people emerged from the horrors of war purified "like gold tried in the fire," and at once entered into the work of improving their social and literary institutions, and in restoring peace and tranquility to their State. The press has borne no inconsiderable part in achieving this triumph, and has done more, actual education perhaps excepted, than any other influence brought to bear to reach this grand result.

The press, as an institution, when it happens to fall into the hands of men competent to make it discharge its duty fully and properly, is a most important factor in the advancement of any community. One of the best things that can be said of our nation is, that it has a free press. No man has to be licensed or selected by the government either to print a book or publish a newspaper. It has been circumscribed by no law except natural selection. Any one who wished could start a paper at any time, say almost anything he desired to say, and if he chose not to be suppressed, there was no power to suppress him—except a "military necessity," and once in a great while mob violence. The government foresaw the eventual wants of mankind, and committed the wisest act in all its history in unbridling the press. It was the seed planted in good ground for its own perpetuity, and the happiness and welfare of its people. Says a late writer: "To make the press absolutely free, especially after the centuries of vile censorship over it, was an act of wisdom transcending in importance the original invention of movable types. This enjoyment of a free press, means free speech, free schools, free religion, and, supremest and best of all, free thought. If our government endure, and the people continue free, here will be much of the reason thereof, for freedom, though well established, will not maintain and perpetuate itself, because by the laws of heredity that lurks in every man, more or less, the latter customs or habits or mental convictions of a barbarous ancestry, leave the seeds of monarchy and despotism. The Americans have this (speaking in reference to a Republican form of government) less than any other people in the world; they are further removed from an ancestry that worshiped under kingly rulers: and yet even here it is as true now as when uttered, that 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.' The press is, therefore, essential to the perpetuation of free institutions in America."

That the press can do no wrong, it would be idle to assert. So great an institution, so varied its interests, so numerous its controllers and guides—he would be a foolish man, indeed, who would even hope that it would ever become infallible. It has committed wrongs against the public quite as often as wrongs have been perpetrated against it. The averages, say, are even. Then, if two wrongs can make a right, a reasonable justice has been done, and the "great palladium" remains to us as the drudge and pack-horse, and at the same time "the crowned king of all mankind." Another, and an able authority,* says of the press: "The grandest temporal blessing God has given to the nineteenth century is the newspaper. We would have a better appreciation of this blessing if we knew the money, the brain, the losses, the anxieties, the wear and tear involved in its production. Under the impression that almost anybody can make a newspaper, scores of inexperienced capitalists every year enter the lists, and, consequently, during the last few years a newspaper has died almost every day. With more than 6,000 dailies in the United States and Canadas, there are but thirty-six a half century old. Newspapers do not average more than five years' existence. * * * Newspapers make knowledge democratic and for the multitudes. The public library is a hay-mow so high up that few can reach it, while the newspaper throws down the forage to our feet. Public libraries are the reservoirs where the great floods are stored high up and a great way off. The newspaper is the tunnel that brings them down to the pitchers of all the people. The chief use of great libraries is to make newspapers out of. Great libraries make a few men and women wise; newspapers lift whole nations into the sunlight. Better have 50,000,000 people moderately intelligent than 100,000 Solons. A false impression is abroad that newspaper knowledge is ephemeral, because periodicals are thrown aside, and not one out of 10,000 people files them for future reference. Such knowledge, so far from being ephemeral, goes into the very structure of the world's heart and brain, and decides the destiny of churches and nations. Nearly all the best minds and hearts have their hands on the printing-press to-day, and have had since its emancipation. Adams and Hancock used to go to the Boston Gazette, and compose articles on the rights of the people. Benjamin Franklin, De Witt Clinton, Hamilton, Jefferson, were strong in newspaperdom. Many of the immortal things that have been published in book form, first appeared in what may be called the ephemeral periodical. All Macaulay's essays first appeared in a review; all Carlyle's, all Ruskin's, all Sidney Smith's, all Thackeray's, all the elevated works of fiction in our day are reprints from periodicals, in which they appeared as serials. The poems of Tennyson, Longfellow, Emerson, Burns, Lowell, Whittier, were once fugitive pieces. You cannot find ten literary men in Christendom with strong minds and great hearts but are, or have been, somehow connected with the printing-press. * * * It is sometimes complained that newspapers report the evil when they ought only to report the good. They must report the evil as well as the good, or how shall we know what is to be reformed, what guarded against, what brought down? A newspaper that pictures only the honesty and virtue of society is a misrepresentation. That family is best prepared for the duties of life, which, knowing the evil, is taught to select the good. Keep children under the impression that all is fair and right in the world, and when they go out into it they will be as poorly prepared to struggle with it as a child who is thrown into the middle of the Atlantic and told to learn to swim. * * * Another blessing of the newspaper is the foundation it lays for accurate history of the time in which we live. We, for the most part, blindly guess about the ages that ante-date the newspaper, and are dependent on the prejudices of this or that historian. But after a hundred or two years what splendid opportunity the historian will have to teach the people the lesson of this day. Our Bancroft got from the early newspapers of this country, from the Boston News Letter, the New York Gazette, and the American Rag Bag, and Royal Gazetteer, and Independent Chronicle, and Massachusetts Spy and Philadelphia Aurora, accounts of Perry's victory, and Hamilton's duel, and Washington's death, and the oppresive foreign tax on luxuries which turned Boston harbor into a tea-pot, and Paul Revere's midnight ride, and Rhode Island's rebellion and South Carolina's nullification.

*Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

But what a field for the chronicler of the great future when he opens the files of a hundred standard American newspapers, giving the minutiæ of all things occurring under the social, political, international, ecclesiastical, hemispherical. Five hundred years from now, if the world lasts so long, the student looking for stirring and decisive history will pass by the misty corridors of other centuries, and say to the librarian: 'Find me the volume that gives the century in which American presidents were assassinated, the civil war enacted, and the cotton-gin, the steam locomotive, the telegraph and telephone, and Hoe's cylinder presses were invented.' It is not more what newspapers do for to-day, than the fact that they make a storehouse of history. * * * More than all, the blessings of a good newspaper is in its evangelistic influence. The secular press of this country discusses all religious questions, scatters abroad religious intelligence and multiplies sermons until the gospel comes every week within reach of every intelligent man and woman in America. The good newspaper is to be the right wing of the apocalyptic angel. On the Sabbath the minister preaches to a few hundred or thousand people, and on Monday morning and evening, through the printing-press, preaches to millions. The telegraph gathers for it matter on one side, and the express railway train waits to be loaded with the tons of folded sheets on the other. I set it down as the mightiest force for the world's evangelization."

These lengthy extracts require no apology. Like everything emanating from the great preacher, though couched in his peculiar style, they are full of wisdom. The press is the great power of the present age. This is indisputable. In any community it is an influence for good, admitting of not a single doubt. Thomas Jefferson, who penned the Declaration of Independence, one of the grandest documents that ever fell from the pen of mortal man, wrote also: "If I had to choose between a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should prefer the latter." Another sage remarks: "If man should, from childhood to old age, see only his Bible, Webster's dictionary and his newspaper, he could be prepared for all the duties of this life, or all the happiness of the next." Daniel Webster said: "I care not how unpretending a newspaper may be, every issue contains something that is worth the subscription price." Of all the blessings that man can have in this world, the newspaper is the one "whose rose need have no thorn, whose sweet need have no bitter." Thanks, then, a million thanks, to our revolutionary sires for giving us the great boon of a free press.

When the war closed there had been completed a revolution in the newspaper publishing business. The telegraph had been utilized, and men had been taught to look for news, and not for the opinions and fine writings of certain individuals. The business of writing for the paper had to adjust itself to circumstances, and short, crisp editorials, and the news of the hour; and instead of the long "thundering leader," came the wit, that largely consists of slang and bad spelling. The metropolitan press, through the telegraph, and the perfected Hoe press began to absorb from the country, first its talent among writers, and then to monopolize the business itself, until the country paper found no other avenue to walk in except the purely local news, gossip and chit-chat of its immediate locality. But notwithstanding this the local press is not to be despised, nor denied credit for its part in elevating the standard of civilization. Far from it. It contributes as much, in its humble way, as the more pretentious city daily. The improvement in the art of making newspapers is not surpassed by that made in any institution, or other branch of business, of the present century. The Courier-Journal, with its corps of editors and reporters and correspondents, and its attaches and employes, its improved printing presses and magnificent building, the pride of Kentucky's metropolis, is a sample of the modern daily newspaper, and strikingly illustrates its great power and influence. Compared to the Kentucke Gazette, the first newspaper in the West, it shows the wonderful advancement made by the press within the past hundred years.

The first newspaper published west of the Alleghany Mountains, with a single exception,* was established at Lexington. It is not intended to go back to the beginning of the newspaper history of Kentucky, and follow it through all its vicissitudes to the present time. A few words, however, of some of the early newspapers of the State, and some of the leading ones, cannot very well be avoided. The first paper was established in 1787, almost 100 years ago, by John Bradford. It was christened the Kentucke Gazette. The final e of Kentucky was afterward changed to y, in consequence of the Virginia Legislature requiring certain advertisements to be "inserted in the Kentucky Gazette." The efforts to separate Kentucky from Virginia and form it into a distinct State, necessitated the establishment of this paper. The convention that met at Danville, in 1785, to discuss the subject of separation, adopted the following resolution: "That to insure unanimity in the opinion of the people respecting the propriety of separating the district of Kentucky from Virginia, and forming a distinct State government, and to give publicity to the proceedings of the convention, it is deemed essential to the interests of the country to have a printing press." Arrangements were finally made with John Bradford to establish a paper at Lexington, then the principal town in the district, and in 1786 he sent to Philadelphia for the necessary outfit. It did not arrive until late in the summer of 1787, and on the 11th of August he issued the first number of the Gazette, the pioneer newspaper of the western country. His editorial surroundings would contrast strangely with the princely style of the great metropolitan journals of the present day. His steamboat, railroad, telegraph and mail-carrier was a pack-mule; his office a log-cabin. His rude and unwieldy hand-press was of the old-fashioned style, that for years and years had not been improved; and, in addition, it was a second-hand one. He daubed on the ink by hand with two ancient dog-skin inking balls, and probably managed to get sixty or seventy copies printed on one side in an hour. If he wrote at night it was by the light of a rousing fire, a bear-grease lamp, or a buffalo-tallow candle. An editorial desk, made of a smooth slab, supported by two pairs of cross-legs, a three-legged stool, ink-horn and a rifle, composed the rest of his office furniture.*

COURIER-JOURNAL BUILDING.

*The first paper west of the Alleghanies was published at Pittsburgh.

John Bradford, the pioneer editor of Kentucky, was a native of Virginia, and was born in Fauquier County, in 1749. He came to Kentucky in 1785, and settled on Cane Run, but the next year located in Lexington. He was a practical printer, as was his father before him, and he brought up his sons to the same business. The next year after starting the Gazette, he published the Kentucky Almanac, the first pamphlet printed west of the mountains, and the annual publication of which he continued for twenty years. From all the biographical record left of Mr. Bradford, it is evident that he was not especially brilliant as an editor, but, what was better for the times in which he lived, he was a man of sound practical sense and sterling honesty. He was chairman of the board of village trustees, and delivered the address of welcome to Gov. Shelby in 1792, upon his arrival in Lexington, then the capital of the new-made State. He was the first State printer, and received from the State government £100 sterling, as the emoluments of the office. He printed books as early as 1794, and some of his early publications are still to be seen in the Lexington public library. He served for a time as chairman of the board of trustees of Transylvania University, and held other positions of honor and trust. His mind was so well stored with useful and valuable information that he was considered the town oracle, and from his decisions on local topics there was no appeal. So great was the confidence of the people in his judgment that he won the sobriquet of "Old Wisdom." He was high sheriff of Fayette County at the time of his death, which occured in March, 1830. Circuit court was in session, and the distinguished Jesse Bledsoe, who was the presiding judge, alluded to his death in eloquent terms, and adjourned court in respect to his memory.

The Kentucky Gazette was conducted by Mr. Bradford with great energy and success until early in 1802, when he turned it over to his son, Daniel Bradford, and took charge of the Kentucky Herald, the first rival paper in the State. He kept up a watchful supervision, however, of the Gazette, and, after seven years, he again assumed editorial charge of it. In 1814, his son, Fielding Bradford, Jr., became its proprietor and continued his connection with it until 1825, when it again passed into the hands of the senior Bradford. In 1835, it again reverted to Daniel Bradford, who, in March, 1840, sold it to Joshua Cunningham of Louisville, foreman of the Advertiser, a paper edited by Shadrach Penn, the brilliant rival of George D. Prentice. Under the management of Mr. Cunningham, who was in bad health, the paper declined, and in 1848 its publication ceased. So ended the first paper published west of Pittsburgh.

*G. W. Ranck, in History of Fayette County, p. 364.

The second newspaper in Kentucky was also established at Lexington. It will be borne in mind that for a number of years after settlements began to be made in Kentucky, Lexington was the metropolis of the State. It was the first capital, and being the leading town, not only of Kentucky but all the western country, it drew within its limits the majority of the wealth, intelligence and business of the entire community. Thus it became the seat of learning and business enterprise. Its second newspaper was started in 1793, the next year after the admission of Kentucky as a State into the Federal Union. It was called Stewart's Kentucky Herald, and was established by James H. Stewart. Its publication was continued for about ten years, when it was absorbed by the Bradfords and the Kentucky Gazette. Mr. F. L. McChesney, editor of the Western Citizen, in a sketch of Paris written a few years ago, mentioned a paper—the Kentucky Herald—as started in that town in 1797, by James Stewart, and which existed for about a year. In the same year, William Hunter established the Kentucky Mirror, at Washington, a town situated about four miles from the present city of Maysville. In 1798, Hunter established a paper in Frankfort called the Palladium, and was annually elected State printer for ten years. In 1803, the Western Messenger, and in 1806, the Republican Auxiliary were established at Washington. The first paper in Louisville was called the Farmer's Library, and dates back to 1807. Its history is comprised in an act of the legislature requiring certain laws to be published in its columns. Not even the names of its owners or publishers are known. The next year (1808) another paper—the Gazette—made its appearance in Louisville, but its record, like that of the Farmer's Library, is obscure. In this year also was established the Western Citizen, at Paris. Mr. McChesney in his sketch of Paris, says the Citizen was started by Grimes Johnson; Collins in his history of Kentucky, says by Joel R. Lyle. The Lyles (Joel R. and William C.) were long connected with it, but it was purchased, Mr. McChesney says, by Joel R. Lyle early in 1809. It is one of the early papers of Kentucky that has survived the storms of adversity and is still flourishing and prosperous. It opposed the old Federalist party and warmly advocated the war of 1812. In the great conflict between the old and new court parties, it adopted the side of the former, and supported Mr. Adams and Mr. Clay in opposition to Gen. Jackson. When politics divided, under the name of Whigs and Democrats, it espoused the cause of the Whigs, and ever continued a zealous advocate of that party. F. L. McChesney became the owner of it after the war, and during the reconstruction period it changed its politics to the Democratic faith, and has since remained true to those principles.

The Lexington Observer and Reporter, originally the Lexington Reporter, was established in 1807, by William W. Worsley and Samuel R. Overton. It was continued uninterruptedly as the Reporter until 1832, when it was purchased by Bryant & Finnell and consolidated with the Observer. The Observer and Reporter existed until 1873, when its publication ceased. During its long career it had many able and brilliant editors and contributors, among whom were Edwin Bryant, Robert N. Wickliffe, William A. Dudley, Daniel C. Wickliffe, William C. P. Breckinridge, Thomas E. Pickett and others. No paper in central Kentucky, perhaps, wielded a greater influence than the Observer and Reporter, and when discontinued it was the oldest paper in the State, having been established the year before the Western Citizen.

The first paper in Louisville that attained to any prominence, and of which there is any authentic history, was established in 1810 by Nicholas Clark. It was called the Western Courier, and was conducted with considerable ability. Mann Butler, the historian, and an able writer, was connected with it as associate editor in 1814, but he did not remain long in the position. S. H. Bullen and A. G. Meriwether became interested in the paper in 1821, and the name was changed to the Emporium and Commercial Advertiser, and from a weekly, it became a semi-weekly. Clark and Meriwether retired in February, 1822, transfering their interest to S. H. Bullen and F. E. Goddard, and the latter gentleman finally became the sole owner. While under his management (in 1832) the paper was discontinued. The Louisville Correspondent, a weekly paper, was started in the same year as the Western Courier. Its owner and publisher was E. C. Barry, who continued it until 1817, when it passed from the public gaze.

The Advertiser, the first daily paper published in Kentucky, was established in 1818, and soon became a formidable opponent to the Western Courier. It was founded by Shadrach Penn, the ablest editor ever in Louisville until the appearance of George D. Prentice. Mr. Ben Casseday, in a sketch of the Louisville press, says: "Mr. Penn was an experienced politician, a forcible writer, and a man of extraordinary tact. His paper soon took the position of political leader, not merely in its local circle, but all over the west. It was the acknowledged Jackson organ, and both city and State recognized its power and influence. It was without a rival, and if it did not create, it represented, the dominant party for over twelve years. Until 1830 (the birth of the Journal) Penn found 'no foeman worthy of his steel.' His adversaries had, one by one, fallen before him. He was supreme in his position, and a few years previous to the date above referred to was confirmed in it by a great victory over the old court or anti-relief party, and his acknowledged championship of a party victorious in a political struggle as bitter as had ever agitated the State."

Shadrach Penn was a native of Kentucky, and had been a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a large man, a fine specimen of the typical Kentuckian, six feet high, weighing over 200 pounds, and one of the best hearted men that ever lived. He was well educated, was a statesman and a leader naturally, and a politician from choice. Although rival editors for many years, and often on bad terms and indulging in bitter controversy, yet a warm friendship grew up between him and Prentice, that continued until the death of Penn in 1853. Mr. Penn left Louisville in 1842, went to St. Louis, and took editorial charge of the Missouri Democrat, which position he filled until the close of his life.

In 1826 the Focus was established in Louisville by W. W. Worsley and Dr. Buchanan. Worsley was an experienced newspaper man, and had been one of the original owners of the Lexington Reporter, and was a man of some ability. The Focus opposed Gen. Jackson, the Advertiser and Shadrach Penn, but being more of a literary and scientific journal than a partisan organ, it was unable to stand before the political projectiles hurled at it by Penn. After a fitful existence of a little more than three years it was purchased by Cavins & Robinson, and shortly after was merged into the Louisville Journal.

The Kentuckian was a newspaper established at Lancaster in 1821, and was published by Albert G. Hodges, who afterward became widely known as a newspaper publisher throughout the State. He published the Kentuckian only about three months, when he left Lancaster, and went back to Lexington. There he became foreman of the Reporter office, a place he filled acceptably for several years. He next went to Louisville, and, in 1824, in connection with D. C. Pinkham, purchased from S. H. Bullen the Louisville Morning Post. Pinkham proved an unprofitable partner, as he got away with most of the profits of the paper, and in about a year, William Tanner, who had attained some prominence as an editor, succeeded him. Hodges and Tanner did not agree well on politics, the latter advocating, on one side of the paper, the fallacies of the new court, while Hodges on the other side championed the old court party. It was literally "a house divided against itself," and to prevent its fall, the proprietors "threw heads and tails" for its ownership. Tanner won, and Hodges sold out to him on favorable terms, returned to Lexington, and started the Kentucky Whig. This paper had a brief existence, less than a year. He then went to Frankfort, and together with James G. Dana published the Commentator, and served as State printer until 1832, when he sold out to Dana. In 1833, Hodges was elected State printer, and shortly after started the Frankfort Commonwealth. It was thoroughly a Whig paper, and when that party became extinct, it came to the support of the Know-nothing, and then of the American party. During the late war, it was for the Union unconditionally, and after the war Republican in politics, until its suspension in April, 1872, at the age of thirty-nine years. Col. Hodges, although a stanch Union man, and later an ardent Republican, discontinued the publication of his paper, which he had established more than a third of a century before, rather than to support President Grant for renomination, in 1872, to a second term as chief magistrate. In refusing to support the hero of Appomattox, he found his "occupation gone," and retired permanently from the newspaper business.

Col. Hodges was a true type of the old Kentucky gentleman, a race that is rapidly passing away. He was born in Virginia, in 1802, and when but eight years old, his mother (his father having died) brought him to Fayette County. At the age of twelve he was apprenticed to the printing business with Worsley & Smith, the proprietors of the Lexington Reporter. After the suspension of the Commonwealth in 1872, Col. Hodges removed to Louisville, and accepted the position of secretary and treasurer of the Masonic Temple Company. He was one of the most prominent Masons of Kentucky, and from 1845 to the time of his death was grand treasurer of the Grand Lodge. When he died (a few years ago) he was the last officer of the Grand Lodge, who, in 1845, witnessed his election as grand treasurer of that body.

The Louisville Journal, whose influence for more than a third of a century was equaled by few American newspapers, was established on the 24th of November, 1830, by George D. Prentice. His business partner was A. S. Buxton, a practical printer of Cincinnati, who had a joint interest in the paper, but Prentice was sole editor. The success of the Journal was assured from the circulation of its first issue, and in four weeks from its birth it was the most extensively read paper that had ever been published in the State. Prentice immediately crossed swords with Shadrach Penn, and the contest between these rival editors, often sharp and bitter, is still vividly remembered by the older citizens of Louisville and Kentucky. Prentice's pen bristled like the "fretful porcupine," and he shot the pointed quills in every direction, regardless of who might stand in the way. In his writings he frequently made people laugh, sometimes stare and often squirm, and he seemed ever equally indifferent as to which result flowed out from his pen. The Journal soon obtained political ascendency, but the editorial warfare between Prentice and Penn was kept up as long as Penn remained in Louisville.

The Journal was born of the exigencies of the time. Political excitement, growing out of one of the most bitter party conflicts that had occurred in the State, was violent, and partisan strife was raging at white heat. Parties were dividing on the questions of the time, and to the bitterness of conflicting interests was added the enthusiasm which the rival claims of two great party chieftains everywhere excited. An historical sketch of the Courier-Journal, published in 1876, says: "Henry Clay and Gen. Jackson were the opposing candidates for the succession, and Kentucky having voted two years before for Jackson, the Journal threw all its energies into the conflict in favor of Mr. Clay, whose political friends were then known as national Republicans. Its appearance was cordially and even enthusiastically greeted by its party, another national Republican paper, the Louisville Focus, having failed, although skillfully edited, to satisfy the party's demands for vehemence and spirit."

A history of the Journal is a history of George D. Prentice. From the origin of the paper, Mr. Buxton continued his business relation with Mr. Prentice in its publication, until 1833, when he sold his interest to John N. Johnson, and two years later Mr. Johnson sold to George W. Weissinger. The latter continued his connection with the paper until his death in 1849, when his interest was purchased by Isham Henderson, long a well known citizen of Louisville, and but recently dead. During all these years, Mr. Prentice had been editor of the Journal, and had given it a world wide reputation, but about this time he called to his editorial aid Paul R. Shipman, a writer of unusual force and brilliance, and who remained with the paper many years. In a short time after purchasing Weissinger's interest, Mr. Henderson sold one-half of it (a quarter interest in the paper) to his kinsman, John D. Osborne, and the firm became Prentice, Henderson & Osborne —the last named gentleman the business manager. This arrangement continued until after the close of the war, when the firm changed into a stock corporation, under the title of the "Louisville Journal Company." In the winter of 1867–68, Mr. Henderson purchased the stock of Mr. Osborne, who retired from the business management of the paper. A few months later, Mr. Henderson bought Mr. Prentice's interest, and during the summer sold an interest in the paper to Mr. Henry Watterson, the present brilliant editor of the Courier-Journal. Thus the editorial and also the business control of the Journal passed from the hands of its founder. From its origin in 1830, to its purchase by Mr. Henderson in 1868, a few months prior to its consolidation with the Courier, its history and that of its editor had been inseparable. Dr. Theodore S. Bell, the life-long friend of Mr. Prentice, said: "Mr. Prentice impressed the conviction on the public mind that he and the daily Journal were one and the same thing, and I am not sure that he was not himself impressed with that conviction. He regarded the Journal as a part and parcel of his own being. An insult thrown at the Journal was promptly accepted as a personal insult, and as such punished in his own way —a way well known to many to their sorrow. It is, indeed, questionable whether he would have regarded with complacency any personal triumph in which the Journal was not a participant."

Mr. Prentice was a native of Connecticut, and was born in New London County, December 18, 1802. After preparing for college, he entered Brown University at the age of eighteen, and in 1823 graduated with honors. Upon completing his education, he spent some time in teaching, and wrote occasional articles for the local press. His writings attracted considerable attention, and in 1828 he was offered the position of editor of the New England Review, which he accepted. He came to Kentucky in 1830, at the instance of the Whigs of Connecticut, for the purpose of writing the life of Henry Clay. When John Quincy Adams, in 1828, failed in his re-election to the presidency, Mr. Clay, who held the first place in his cabinet, retired (the following March) from public life, and to bring him again prominently before his party was the object of the biography. It more than accomplished its purpose, for it led to the establishment of the Louisville Journal, and served to make Mr. Prentice a citizen of Kentucky. His biography of Clay was written from the standpoint of strong partisanship, and scarcely had he finished it than he was persuaded by prominent party leaders in Kentucky to establish a new daily paper at Louisville, in opposition to the Jackson Democracy.

Few men have attained fame as editors equal to that of Prentice. In a memorial address on the great journalist, Hon. Henry Watterson* said: "From 1830 to 1861 the influence of Prentice was perhaps greater than the influence of any political writer who ever lived; it was an influence directly positive and personal. It owed its origin to the union in his person of gifts which no one had combined before him. He had to build upon an intellect naturally strong and practical, and this was trained by rigid scholarly culture. He was brave and aggressive, and though by no means quarrelsome, he was as ready to fight as to write, and his lot was cast in a region where he had to do a good deal of both. By turns a statesman, a wit, a poet, a man of the world, and always a journalist, he gave the press of his country its most brilliant illustration, and has left to the State and to his progeny by odds the largest reputation ever achieved by a newspaper writer."

*An address delivered by Mr. Watterson before the Kentucky legislature at the request of that body shortly after the death of Mr. Prentice.

During the late civil war Mr. Prentice was an unswerving Union man, and all his great energies were enlisted to avert the calamities of war and preserve the government. He failed in his efforts, but there can be no doubt that the vast influence he wielded through the Journal prevented the secession of Kentucky. In all the long and desperate struggle that ensued between the North and South his fidelity to the cause of the Union never once faltered. Notwithstanding his two sons, his only children, had entered the Confederate army, and numbers of his life-long friends were arrayed under the "Southern Cross," he stood firmly by the old flag and made a gallant fight. When the war closed he was pretty well broken down; his health and spirits were gone, and the great battle he had fought had left him a feeble old man. His wife, the companion of his youth, died in 1868, and shortly after her decease the Journal passed into other hands, and in November following it was consolidated with the Courier, the name changed to the Courier-Journal, on which Mr. Prentice did excellent editorial work on a salary up to the time of his death. His work now seemed done; he stood alone; he had outlived his day and generation. He died on the 22d of January, 1870, at the country residence of his son, Col. Clarence J. Prentice, ten miles below Louisville, on the Ohio River, whither he had gone to spend the Christmas holidays. Upon the announcement of his death great respect was paid to his memory throughout the country. The legislatures of Kentucky and Tennessee, in session at the time, adopted appropriate resolutions, pronouncing his death a "public bereavement." He was buried with Masonic honors in Cave Hill Cemetery.

No newspaper published in Kentucky, perhaps none published south of the Ohio River, ever wielded an influence equal to that of the Louisville Journal. It built the city of Louisville, and gave an importance to the whole State it had never before known. When the Journal was established Louisville was a straggling village of a few thousand inhabitants. In describing it at a time when the Journal was in the full tide of its glory, the correspondent of a New York journal said: "Louisville is situated on the south bank of the Ohio River, at the falls, but it is significant for nothing except as the place where the Louisville Journal is published." Its consolidation with the Courier formed a new era in journalism in Kentucky and the South.

The history of the Journal would not be complete without an extended notice of the Courier and also of the Democrat. The Courier was established, in 1844, by Mr. W. N. Haldeman, now president of the Courier-Journal Company. A paper had been started in March, 1843, by a company of practical printers, called the Daily Dime. This enterprise was not a financial success, and on the 11th of February, 1844, the Dime passed into the hands of Mr. Haldeman, who demonstrated the fact that the right man had taken hold of it. He changed it on the 3d of June following, into the Morning Courier. Casseday's sketch, already quoted from, says: "Haldeman brought to his task inflexible will and indomitable energy. In the hands of almost any other man, the paper would soon have emulated the example of so many of its immediate predecessors. Haldeman did not know the meaning of failure; adversity only fixed his determination more firmly, and urged him to increased effort. He fairly conquered success in the face of all difficulties. He started out with the idea of making a newspaper, and his enterprise in this direction soon woke up the sleepy old journalists, not only in Louisville, but all over the West. As there were few railroads reaching his city, and as the telegraph was yet unborn, the securing of news at the earliest possible moment was a matter of energy, enterprise and expense. Haldeman spared none of these, and from the very start his paper was what is now called a 'live institution.' As an instance of his determination to spare no expense for the benefit of his readers he sent (in 1849) H. M. McCarty to Frankfort, as resident correspondent, to remain during the constitutional convention, which framed the present constition of Kentucky. No paper in the State had ever before incurred the expense of a daily correspondent during the whole session of a legislative body."

In January, 1852, Mr. Haldeman sold a small interest in the Courier to F. B. French, but it soon passed back to him. The next year William D. Gallagher purchased a half interest, but in June, 1854, Mr. Haldeman again became sole owner. In October, 1857, he sold a half interest to Reuben T. Durrett, who continued his connection with the paper until in September, 1859, when he sold out to Walter G. Overton. Haldeman & Overton published the Courier until the commencement of the civil war in 1861, when it was suppressed by the United States military authorities for "disloyalty." Mr. Haldeman made his escape to the Confederate lines, and during the war he continued to publish the Courier, whenever time, opportunity and the "fortunes of war" would permit. At Bowling Green he was requested by Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston to resume its publication; such being considered a necessity at that time. Kentucky was trembling in the political balance, and it was still a little uncertain upon which side of Mason and Dixon's line she would fall. In order to influence her decision, and to retain its own Kentucky identity, the Courier was dated at Bowling Green, but the typesetting and printing were done in Nashville, owing to the impossibility of securing the proper mechanical facilities at the former place. Col. Robert McKee was stationed at Bowling Green as editor, while Mr. Haldeman took up his headquarters in Nashville to superintend publication. When the Confederate army fell back to Nashville, the Courier fell back with it, and continued to make its regular appearance. "The Louisville-Bowling-Green-Nashville Courier," as it was facetiously called by the papers in the Federal lines, was probably as brilliant a success as journalistic annals afford. It at once became the favorite of the army and of the people of the South, and immediately attained a circulation limited only by its mechanical ability to supply the demand. Extraordinary efforts were made to procure northern papers, which were not then easily accessible, and voluminous extracts were made from them daily. No outlay was considered too great to secure these papers, and, so perfect were the arrangements, that up to the evacuation of Nashville scarcely a day but full files of papers from all the northern cities were received at the Courier office. Several active men were constantly employed in this service, and their adventures in running through the military lines to secure papers and news were often exciting and dangerous. So perfect was the system that the military relied on the Courier for the most important intelligence outside of their lines. Mr. Haldeman had been for many years a most indefatigable and laborious newspaper man, and was considered perfectly familiar with the business, even to the minutest details, but during the four months he published the Courier in Nashville he acquired a knowledge of the business, and an insight into its workings, of which he previously had no conception. To this experience may be largely attributed his remarkable success as the business manager of a great newspaper.* Upon the restoration of peace Mr. Haldeman returned to Louisville, and at the urgent request of many of his old friends and prominent citizens of the city and State, he, on the 4th of December, 1865, recommenced the publication of the Courier. Its success was almost unparalleled from its revival to its consolidation with the Journal.

The Louisville Democrat was established, in 1843, by Phineas M. Kent, of New Albany, Ind. He was aided by subscriptions from James Guthrie and other leading Democrats of Louisville, Ky. The object of the paper was to advocate the claims of the democracy in the presidential campaign of 1844, then opening, and it went vigorously into the contest. Mr. Kent did not fulfill all the requirements of the party leaders, and in a short time the paper was purchased by John H. Harney, who remained its editor until his death, which occurred soon after the close of the war. Shortly after the purchase of the paper, Mr. Harney took into partnership William E. and Thomas P. Hughes. The latter soon retired, but William Hughes remained with the paper, and, under the firm title of Harney & Hughes, published it until absorbed by the Courier-Journal combination.

*Historical sketch of the Courier-Journal.

Mr. Harney was a man of fine scholarly attainments, and broad and statesman-like views. He had no experience in journalism when he took charge of the Democrat, but he soon became a prominent politician and recognized leader of his party. His style was strong, forcible, and correct, and he wrote to convince, and went about it in the most direct manner. His party acknowledged his services, and he held his leading position without any attempt at rivalry from any source. A wordy warfare sometimes prevailed between him and Prentice, but it was more good-natured than otherwise, and never characterized by extreme bitter partisan feeling, and when Mr. Harney died (in 1868) Mr. Prentice wrote a beautifully touching and generous eulogy of him.

Such is a brief sketch of the three papers comprised in the Louisville Courier-Journal, a newspaper recognized as the ablest south of the Ohio River, and as one of the most influential published in the United States. It probably controls the general sentiment throughout a larger extent of country than any other newspaper in existence. In the South and Southwest it wields a power never before reached in the history of the press, except by Prentice's Journal. The limits of this article will not permit a sketch of all the gentlemen who have filled editorial chairs on these three newspapers, and who are now dead, or have retired from the field of journalism. A just tribute to each would comprise a volume of itself. Of the names that should not be forgotten, are those of the accomplished Edwin Bryant; the fair-minded politician, Thomas H. Shreve; the poet-editors, William D. Gallagher and Will Wallace Harney; the talented Reuben T. Durrett, the witty "Wat" Overton, the brilliant and scholarly Paul R. Shipman, the sparkling correspondent, Charles D. Kirke ("Se De Kay"); the able Charles O. Faxon, the humorous and tenderly pathetic John E. Hatcher, and many others of talent and genius.

No event in the newspaper history of Louisville or Kentucky created the surprise and interest involved in the consolidation of the Journal and the Courier. These papers, although of the same political faith, were apparently bitterly hostile, and each was striving for party leadership. The consolidation took place, without any preliminary notice, on the 8th of November, a few days after the presidential election of 1868. A brief extract from the sketch already quoted from, will more fully explain the matter: "Each paper was sustained by a large and influential class, but the business of the city did not justify the outlays which both were forced to make, in order to sustain a rivalry so ambitious. It was not until the presidential campaign was well-nigh ended that the matter was seriously canvassed. There could hardly be a doubt of its expediency in the minds of any experienced journalist cognizant of all the facts, and the only points difficult to be settled, because complicated, related to details. These were, however, finally adjusted in a manner much to the satisfaction and advantage of all parties."

The history of the Courier-Journal, under its present title, is well known. It has had a brilliant existence, and a long career of usefulness is before it. Its editor, Mr. Watterson, is one of the ablest in the South or West, and he is a worthy successor of the talented Prentice. Mr. Haldeman, the president of the Courier-Journal Company, has few equals in the business management of newspapers. Few men living, perhaps, except himself, could have taken the Courier-Journal at the time of the consolidation, and carried it through the many difficulties that surrounded it, and made it the successful newspaper it is to-day. He is a writer of more than ordinary ability, but it is as a financier, and a practical business man, that he has been most useful to the Courier-Journal in obtaining for it the prosperity it enjoys, and the prominent position it occupies among the great newspapers of the country.

The only paper or periodical ever published in the West that attained any renown as a literary paper exclusively, was issued by Prentice & Weissinger, from the office of the Louisville Journal. It was called the Literary News-Letter, and was established in December, 1838, and its publication continued until in November, 1840. Dr. E. S. Crosier, in a sketch of it, written a few years ago, says: "It was under the editorial control of Edmund Flagg until December 14, 1839, when it went into the hands of the lamented Leonard Bliss. It may safely be said that no periodical at the West, professing to be exclusively literary, has ever proved so successful, or around which have so many delightful associations clustered. The aim was not entire originality, but the contributions and selections exhibited a degree of excellence rarely found in older and more pretentious periodicals."

Many who attained fame and renown in the world of letters furnished original articles for the Literary News-Letter, or was represented in its columns by selections from their best productions. Of the number were Bryant and Longfellow, whose writings will live as long as pure literature is admired; and Albert Pike, the poet and scholar, and Francis S. Osgood, and Washington Irving, and George P. Morris, and N. P. Willis, and John G. Whittier, "the good Quaker poet of Amesbury," and others well known in the fields of literature, among whom were Mrs. Laura J. Thurston ("Viola"), Amelia B. Welby ("Amelia"), Mrs. R. S. Nichols ("Ellen"), Mrs. S. J. Howe ("Egeria"). There was also an occasional contribution from J. Ross Browne, the "artist traveler," as he is sometimes called. But with all the genius and brilliancy that sparkled in its columns, the News-Letter enjoyed but a brief existence, and in a little less than two years it became extinct.

A number of other newspapers were started in Louisville, previous to the war, but most of them were short-lived and none attained any great importance. The Times was established about 1851, and existed for three or four years. In 1852 a paper called the Union was established, but like the Times, its existence was brief. About the same time the Evening Bulletin made its appearance, and the Anzeiger, the leading German paper ever published in Louisville or in the State. The latter is still in existence, and is a live and enterprising journal.

The Daily Commercial is the only English morning paper—in addition to the Courier-Journal—published in Louisville. It was established soon after the close of the war as a Republican paper, and was conducted several years as such. Recently, however, it has changed into an independent organ. It has been greatly improved and enlarged, and is an able, first-class popular newspaper, but still too young for an extended notice. The Post and the Times are evening papers, and are much superior to the average of that class of journals in ability and importance. Several religious and secular weekly papers are published in Louisville, and form no inconsiderable part of the city press.

The country press of Kentucky is equal in merit and ability perhaps to that of any other State. Nearly every county has one or more newspapers. The large majority of them are ably conducted, and wield a large influence for good in their respective counties. While the great dailies furnish national and foreign news, the country press, equally important in its particular sphere, gathers up and preserves the local news. The papers of Frankfort, Lexington, Paris, Covington, Cynthiana, Maysville, Newport, Richmond, Danville, Bowling Green, Russellville, Hopkinsville, Owensboro, Henderson, Paducah, etc., are excellent samples of the State and country press.

An era in the newspaper history of Kentucky was the establishment of an abolition or anti-slavery paper at Lexington. The author of what was then considered a very questionable enterprise was Cassius M. Clay, and he published the first number of his paper, which was called the True American, on the 14th of June, 1845. It was devoted to the "overthrow of slavery," and was bold and defiant, and even aggressive in the advocacy of that then unpopular doctrine. Mr. Clay published his paper until in August, when public indignation was aroused, and the people arose in their might, and from all parts of central Kentucky assembled in a great mass meeting in Lexington. A resolution was adopted which will show the temper of the meeting: "Resolved, that the press and materials of the True American, an anti-slavery newspaper conducted by Mr. Cassius M. Clay, shall be sent beyond the confines of the State." A committee consisting of sixty prominent citizens was appointed by the meeting to carry out the spirit of the resolution. They quietly proceeded to the office, took possession, boxed up the material and presses, had them conveyed to the depot, and shipped to a responsible house in Cincinnati, subject to the order of Mr. Clay. Nothing was destroyed or even injured, nor was there the least mob violence displayed, but there was a calm determination to rid the town and State of the obnoxious journal.

Mr. Clay was a man of courage—was brave even to rashness—and had he been present when his office was invaded there doubtless would have been bloodshed. But he was confined to a sick bed at the time, and was thus prevented from defending his property. The establishment of an anti-slavery paper at that time in a Southern or slave State was little less than the act of a madman, notwithstanding the venture was made in a free country, priding itself upon having and fostering a free press. The time had not come to tolerate the free expression of such political sentiments, and this was the first and last effort made to establish a paper of that cast of politics in Kentucky until an administration came into power of similar principles, and thereby rendered the enterprise a safe investment.

Kentucky has produced many persons, both male and female, of high literary talent. Additional to those whose names have been mentioned in connection with the press, some of the most distinguished are William Ross Wallace, Fortunatus Cosby, Jr., James Birney Marshall, Theodore O'Hara, Mrs. Mary R. McAboy, James R. Barrick, Mrs. Sarah T. Bolton and Joel T. Hart, the "poet sculptor." Others of less extended fame are Mrs. Sophia H. Oliver, Mrs. Mary E. Nealy, Granville M. Ballard, Mrs. Mary E. T. Shannon, Mrs. Alice McC. Griffin, Mrs. Nellie Marshall McAfee, Ben Casseday, Mrs. Annie C. Ketchum, Miss Laura C. Ford, Mrs. Sallie M. B. Piatt, Mrs. Helen Truesdell, Miss Lila Va. Johnston, etc. The following, though not natives of Kentucky, were and have been citizens, some of them for many years, of the State: Noble Butler (the author of a popular English grammar), James G. Drake, George W. Cutter, Mrs. Catherine Ann Warfield, Lewis F. Thomas, William W. Fosdick, Mrs. Rosa Vertner Jeffrey, Henry T. Stanton, Mrs. Florence A. Clark and Mrs. Alice Smith Winston.

Education in Kentucky, in the last decade or two, has reached a degree of perfection never before attained in the history of the State. Kentucky has not the well organized system of common schools prevailing in the Northern and Western States — in those known as the "non-slaveholding States," but of the higher grade of schools she stands side by side with the foremost States of the Union. The majority of her seminaries and academies and colleges and universities are of no mean order, but will compare favorably with the best in the land. Since the close of the civil war they have greatly improved and their facilities been enlarged in order to adapt them to the new state of affairs inaugurated in what may be termed the "new commonwealth." The power and influence of these institutions form one of the greatest sources of moral and intellectual development of the State.

Transylvania University, whose history extends back more than a hundred years, was the first public institution of learning established west of the Alleghanies. It is scarcely possible to sketch all the schools and colleges of the State, but only to glance at some of the earliest and also of the most important of these institutions of learning, by way of contrasting the old with the new order of things; and a history of Kentucky would hardly be complete without considerable notice of Transylvania University.

The general assembly of Virginia in May, 1780, passed the following act:

An act to vest certain Escheated Lands in the County of Kentucke* in Trustees for a Public School:

Whereas it is represented to this General Assembly that there are certain lands within the County of Kentucke formerly belonging to the British Subjects, not yet sold under the Law of Escheats and Forfeitures, which might at a future day be a valuable fund for the maintenance and education of youth, and it being the interest of this commonwealth always to promote and encourage every design which may tend to the improvement of the mind and the diffusion of knowledge, even among the most remote citizens, whose situation in a barbarous neighborhood and a savage intercourse might otherwise render unfriendly to science. Therefore,

Be it enacted that eight thousand acres of Land within the said County of Kentucke, late the property of Robert McKenzie, Henry Collins and Alexander McKee, be, and the same is hereby vested in William Hemming, William Christian, John Todd, John Cowan, Stephen Trigg, Benjamin Logan, John Floyd, John May, Levi Todd, George Meriwether, John Cobb, George Thompson, and Edmund Taylor, Trustees, as a free donation from the Commonwealth for the purpose of a public school or seminary of learning, to be erected in said County as soon as the circumstances of the County and the state of the funds will admit, and for no other purpose whatever, saving and reserving to the said Henry Collins, Robert McKenzie and Alexander McKee, and every one of them and every person claiming under them, all right and interest in the above mentioned Lands, to which they may be by law entitled, and of which they shall in due time avail themselves, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

This was the original charter of Transylvania University. The general assembly of Virginia in 1783 passed another act formally chartering the school under the name and title of "Transylvania Seminary." This act gave the school all the powers and privileges of a university. It required that the officers of the institution should take a special oath before a judge of the supreme court; invested in a new board of trustees 12,000 additional acres of escheated lands in the district of Kentucky, exempting the whole from taxation; empowered the trustees to receive land and other property from various sources and donors, and providing in its last clause "that no land or other property that may hereafter be vested in said trustees as an inalienable endowment to said seminary, shall ever be sold or otherwise transferred from the special purpose to which it was appropriated by the donor." *

No institution was ever founded from nobler impulses than Transylvania, but its early career was clouded with adversities. On the 10th of November, 1783, the trustees elected Rev. David Rice, a Presbyterian clergyman, chairman. The outlook was not encouraging. But by way of cheering the friends of the institution, the Rev. John Todd donated to the school a small library. This formed the nucleus of what became one of the most extensive public libraries of Kentucky—a library still in existence in Lexington. When Mr. Rice was elected chairman of the board of trustees, the indications for a flourishing school were unpromising in the extreme. The pioneers, surrounded by difficulties and dangers, with prowling bands of hostile Indians roaming through the country, could devote little time to classical education. But amid these discouraging circumstances, the trustees persevered, and in spite of all obstacles the seminary was opened in February, 1785, for pupils. The first term was taught in the house of Mr. Rice near Danville, and he was the first teacher. The endowment at the time was so small as to afford a scanty salary for one professor.

The original acts pertaining to Transylvania were passed while Kentucky was a county of Virginia, but soon after its admission as a State into the Union, the legislature enacted laws exempting lands from escheat. This legislation served to deprive Transylvania of all the escheated lands with which it had been endowed by the State of Virginia, except 8,000 acres, from the sale of which the sum of $30,000 was realized. This transaction proved unfortunate. The money was invested in stock of the Bank of Kentucky, and shortly after the investment was made, the legislature repealed the bank's charter, by which, it is alleged, the seminary lost $20,000. This misfortune not only discouraged the friends, but seriously crippled the resources of the institution. It, however, continued to struggle on.

*Kentucky was a county of Virginia, and still retained the Indian pronunciation.

*Ranck, in History of Fayette County, p. 292.

Transylvania was not originally intended to be denominational, yet it was opened under the auspices of the Presbyterians, and, indeed, it was mainly owing to a few prominent members of that church that it was established. The Rev. Mr. Rice, the first principal of the school, was perhaps the first Presbyterian minister to cross the mountains into the wilderness of Kentucky. He took an active part in building up the institution. The school was opened near Danville, but the arrangement was temporary, and its permanent location was left to future considertions. The matter provoked considerable discussion, and, in the fall of 1788, it was removed to Lexington, but it was not until 1793, that the question of location was definitely settled. The Transylvania Land Company pledged a donation of a lot of ground for the buildings on condition that the school be permanently located at Lexington. The trustees accepted the offer in the following resolution: "Resolved, that the permanent seat of the seminary be established on the lot of ground in the town of Lexington, adjoining Messrs. January's, and which is the same mentioned by the company of gentlemen calling themselves the Transylvania Company." On this lot was erected, about 1794, the first building used by the Transylvania Seminary in Lexington, a plain, two story brick edifice.

Upon the removal of the school to Lexington, Elias Jones was elected principal, in place of Rev. Mr. Rice, resigned. The terms of this pioneer institution would present a rather amusing contrast to some of our great colleges and universities of the present. They were, as published in the Kentucky Gazette, as follows: "Five pounds a year, one-half cash, the other in property. Boarding nine pounds a year, in property, pork, corn, tobacco, etc." The grammar school department was added in 1789, and Isaac Wilson appointed "professor" at a salary of "£100 sterling per anumn."

In the early history of Transylvania, its career was often disturbed by the yell of the Indian, and the crack of his rifle. Troops were almost constantly needed for defense, and even the women and children had to bear their part in defending the settlements against the savages. The roll of the drum called many a youth from the quiet of the schoolhouse, and the turbulence of the times forced them to exchange books for rifle and tomahawk. The unsettled state of the country was a serious drawback to the school, and from thirteen pupils in attendance at the beginning of the session, in 1790, the number was reduced next year to five. Its finances were correspondingly low. The trustees, however, did not despair, but set about raising £500 for current expenses. The fees from the county surveyors* had not been sufficient to support it, and landed property was still too nearly valueless to be available. So low was the treasury that the Rev. James Moore, who had succeeded Mr. Wilson as principal, was forced to carry on the school in his own house, and received but £25 for his year's service, with permission from the trustees to charge an extra fee for the "Roman and Greek classics." The school seems to have prospered under all these difficulties, for, in December, 1793, the Lexington Gazette announced that "Transylvania Seminary was well supplied with teachers of Natural and Moral Philosophy, of the Mathematics and of the learned Languages." Quite a serious dissatisfaction arose in 1794. The board of trustees elected Rev. Harry Toulmin†, a Baptist minister, principal. Sectarian jealously was at once aroused, and the usefulness of the institution for a time seemed in a fair way to be destroyed. The Baptists claimed equal rights in the seminary as a State institution; the Presbyterians claimed control, on the ground that its endowment was due to their exertions. Jealousy and bitterness increased. Rev. Mr. Moore, principal of the grammar department, who belonged to the Presbyterians, resigned his position, and his church finally withdrew its patronage of the institution. In 1796, they established the Kentucky Academy at Pisgah, eight miles southwest of Lexington. The trustees of the new academy comprised some of the leading men of the State, and they went vigorously to work to raise funds for its support. They soon had an endowment of $14,000, an amount liberal for that early period. About $10,000 of this sum had been contributed by the friends of popular education in the older States of the east, among whom were George Washington, then president; and John Adams, vice-president; and Aaron Burr, and Robert Morris. The Rev. Dr. Gordon, of London, contributed £80 sterling, toward purchasing books and apparatus. An active rivalry sprang up between the two schools. But fortunately for their influence as educational institutions, good sense and moderation prevailed, and finally led to a consolidation on terms consistent with honor and justice, A petition was presented to the legislature in 1798, in which it was proposed that "the Transylvania Seminary and Kentucky Academy, together with their respective trusts and funds, shall be united, and compose one general institution for the promotion of learning, to be styled and known by the name of the 'Transylvania University.'" The petition was granted, and Transylvania was chartered as a university December 22, 1798. The Rev. James Moore was the first president of the new institution. The next year (1799) it was given the appearance of a regular university, by the addition of law and medical departments.

*In 1787 the general assembly of Virginia further endowed the school with one-sixth of the surveyors' fees in the district of Kentucky, which had formerly been given to William and Mary College.

†Mr. Toulmin was a man of ability, and was afterward secretary of State under Gov. Garrard.

Transylvania University for two-thirds of a century was the most famous educational institution ever chartered in the west. Its record is as proud as any similar institution within the limits of the Republic, and its roll of graduates show names of men distinguished throughout the country. Among them are Jefferson Davis, the whilom president of the southern Confederacy; Thomas F. Marshall, the "silver-tongued" orator; Dr. Benjamin W. Dudley, one of the most noted surgeons the State has known; Richard H. Menifee, John Boyle, Rev. James McChord, Dr. Joseph Buchanan, Richard M. Johnson (a vice-president of the United States), John Rowan, Charles S. Morehead (a governor of Kentucky), William T. Barry, Jesse Bledsoe, Charles A. Wickliffe (a governor of Kentucky), Elijah Hise and many others equally pre-eminent. Among its alumni are presidents, vice-presidents, cabinet officers, foreign ministers, governors, generals, physicians, merchants, lawyers, divines, and men of every profession and business of life. There are few towns in the south and west of any note that does not contain one or more graduates of this once renowned institution. It is a matter to be regretted, that its career could not be prolonged and a sufficient endowment secured to insure its perpetuation.

The first president of Transylvania was Rev. James Moore. He was succeeded, in 1804, by Rev. James Blythe, and he, in 1818, by Dr. Horace Holley, one of the most distinguished of all its presidents. In 1828 Dr. Holley was succeeded by the Rev. Alva Woods as president; in 1830 he was succeeded by Rev. Benjamin O. Peers, and he, in 1832, by Rev. Thomas W. Coit, who, in 1840, was succeeded by Rev. Robert Davidson. In 1840 the institutions passed into the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. Henry B. Bascom (afterward a bishop of that church) chosen president. He resigned in 1849, and the school reverted back to the State. It was wholly reorganized in 1856 and a normal department added under State patronage, with an appropriation of $12,000 per annum for its support. About this time the Rev. Lewis W. Green was called to the presidency, and was the ninth and last president of Transylvania. He held the position two years, and then resigned it to accept the position of president of Centre College, at Danville. From the time of his resignation, the prosperity of Transylvania waned, and in 1865, it was merged into Kentucky University.

The law and medical departments of Transylvania were ably conducted, and furnished many eminent lawyers and physicians to the country. Among the professors of the law department, was Col. George Nicholas, one of the most profound jurists of Kentucky. Among his pupils, who afterward became distinguished lawyers, statesmen, and politicians, were Joseph Hamilton Daviess, John Rowan, Martin D. Hardin, Robert Wickliffe, William T. Barry, Isham Talbott, John Green, etc., etc. He died in Lexington in July, 1799, while still in the prime of life. He was succeeded as professor of law in Transylvania University by Henry Clay. After Mr. Clay, the chair was filled by James Brown, John Pope, William T. Barry, Jesse Bledsoe, John Boyle, Charles Humphreys, George Robertson, Thomas A. Marshall, and A. K. Wooley, all men distinguished in their profession.

The medical department was equally distinguished. Among its professors may be mentioned James Fishback, Benjamin W. Dudley, Elisha Warfield, Joseph Buchanan, James Overton, William A. Richardson, Daniel Drake, Charles Caldwell, Constantine F. Rafinesque, John Esten Cooke, Lunsford P. Yandell, H. H. Eaton, Charles W. Short, etc.

The Kentucky Academy owed its existence, as we have seen, to a spirit of jealousy that sprang up in Transylvania in its early years. It was established in 1796, and soon attained a high reputation. The trustees of the institution comprised some of the leading men of the State, such as James Blythe, James Moore, Andrew Steele, Robert Steele, Andrew McCalla, Samuel and John McDowell, Caleb Watson and James Johnson. But the institution was short-lived, as a separate and distinct school, and a conservative influence led to its consolidation, in the course of a few years, with Transylvania.

Centre College at Danville, is the oldest educational institution in Kentucky. It is denominational (Presbyterian) and has had an uninterrupted existence since 1819. The historical sketch here given was prepared for this work by Prof. Beatty, president of the college. He prefaces his sketch with a synopsis of the facts that led to its establishment as follows:

The Presbyterians were dissatisfied with the course of Transylvania University, and took steps to secure a charter for a school which should be under their own control. Their zeal was quickened by their hostility to the celebrated Dr. Horace Holley, who had been chosen president, and whose theological views they deemed unsound. They were so far successful, as to secure a charter for "The Centre College of Kentucky, at Danville," approved January 21, 1819. But the legislature, jealous of anything looking like a union of church and state, refused to put the school under denominational control, and chartered it as a State college. But while, from the first the Presbyterian influence was predominant in the college, they were unwilling to endow it, unless their control was assured for the future. As the school could not permanently succeed without an endowment, the legislature was induced to amend the charter, and place it exclusively under Presbyterian control, upon condition that they would donate to its funds the sum of $20,000. The amended charter was approved January 27, 1824. The synod of Kentucky agreed to pay into the treasury of the college $5,000 a year until the whole sum of $20,000 was paid. Upon the payment of the first installment of $5,000 the synod would be entitled to appoint one-fourth of the members of the board of trustees, and a like additional number for each additional payment of the like sum. The full payment was completed, and the right to elect the entire body of trustees was vested in the synod, in 1830. Thus, after fifty years of effort, from 1780 to 1830, the Presbyterians secured the exclusive control of a college of their own. Immediately after the original charter was obtained in 1819, contributions were made by the citizens of the town and vicinity, and a modest building was erected in Danville. The first president elected was the eloquent and distinguished Presbyterian preacher, the Rev. James McChord, D. D., who was pastor of the church to which he gave his own name in Lexington. He died in the year of his election, 1820; but it is believed, though not certainly known, that before his death, he had declined the appointment. The office having been temporarily filled by Rev. Samuel Finley, the board of trustees, in 1822, elected the Rev. Jeremiah Chamberlain, D. D., the fragrance of whose memory lingers with a few old people about Danville, who remember him as a man of learning, ability and piety. He resigned in 1826, and the office was filled temporarily by the Rev. David C. Proctor, until the Rev. Gideon Blackburn, D. D., was elected in 1827. Dr. Blackburn was distinguished rather for his popular eloquence than for profound scholarship. He resigned in 1830, and was succeeded the same year by the Rev. John Clark Young, D. D., elected October 26th. Some difficulties connected with the resignation of Dr. Blackburn gave offense to his friends and to the students of the college, a number of whom left with their departing president. Dr. Young was thus elected the very year in which the exclusive right to choose trustees was vested in the synod of Kentucky. The money that had been subscribed having been spent in the erection of buildings, purchase of apparatus and books, the support of the faculty and other purposes, the college was without funds and without students. But the times were auspicious. Transylvania had lost her prestige, and no other school in the State had acquired her ascendancy. Dr. Young, now twenty-seven years of age, was supplying the McChord Church of Lexington, from which the board had attempted to take the first president. Upon him his Presbyterian brethren laid their hands and sent him to Danville. While in college, Dr. Young had been the pupil of the great Dr. John M. Mason, of New York. He had received his theological training at Princeton Seminary, and had been a tutor in Princeton College. An eloquent and effective speaker, he brought rare gifts and attainments to the office. His amiable disposition, his large scholarship, his clear and discriminating intellect, his power of apt illustration, his readiness, his copious and ready flow of correct language, his wisdom, prudence and piety combined to fit him admirably for his work. He soon became a great favorite with the people among whom he lived, with his pupils and his brethren of the synod. He exerted a profound influence, moral and religious, in the community and over his pupils. Those who enjoyed the privilege of his instruction usually ranked him very high, perhaps above every other teacher whom they had known. Under his administration Centre College soon rose to distinction. Students flocked to its halls, and funds were contributed to its endowment. At the age of twenty-seven, he began his work in college, and for another term of twenty-seven years he presided over its destinies until his death, which occurred at the early age of fifty-four, on the 23d of June, 1857. He left, as his monument, an institution whose endowment was greatly enlarged, whose halls were filled with nearly 200 students, and whose fame was spread abroad by 500 graduates whom he had sent forth through the land, especially to the south and west.

Dr. Young was succeeded by the Rev. L. W. Green, D. D., who was one of the two who composed the first graduating class. He was elected August 6, 1857, and died in office May 26, 1863. He was a worthy successor of Dr. Young, and during his administration the college continued to prosper until the unhappy civil war broke out, and the young men of the country left the college halls for military camps.

Upon the death of Dr. Green, the Rev. William L. Breckinridge, D. D., was elected October 18, 1863, and held the office for five years, resigning October 16, 1868. He struggled bravely against adverse circumstances, but the civil war had necessarily greatly lessened the number of students, though it had never entirely suspended the work of the college. But after the termination of the civil strife, the Presbyterians of Kentucky were compelled to witness the sad spectacle of a disrupted and contending church. The synod was divided, and each of the separate parts claimed to be the true representative of that body to which belonged the exclusive right of appointing the board of trustees. Various unsuccessful efforts were made to heal the schism, or to unite the fragments in support of the college, or to divide the funds. At length the civil power was invoked to determine the rights of the respective parties. The case came before the circuit and appellate courts of Kentucky, and the United States district court. In all of these courts the decision was in favor of the party in control of the college at the time, and who had always steadfastly adhered to the general assembly (northern), with which they were then and still are connected. The college could not fail to suffer under such circumstances. To add to its troubles, it lost about $60,000 of its funds, by the robbery of the Falls City Tobacco Bank of Louisville, in whose vaults its bonds were kept. About two-thirds of this sum was ultimately recovered. But the friends of the college stood by it in its dark days, and far more than replaced its lost funds. Its property, including about $70,000 of unproductive real estate, amounts to near a quarter of a million dollars. Its benefactors are numbered literally by hundreds, if not by thousands. Its funds have been contributed in part by many small donations. But it has had many liberal friends who have given much larger sums. Perhaps the largest contributor was Mr. Samuel Laird, of Fayette County, who gave about $12,000. The next largest donations were made by Messrs. L. L. Warren, Caldwell Campbell, and B. F. Avery, who first and last gave over $10,000 each. Dr. John W. Scott has given, in different ways, about $10,000. Mr. A. M. January and Mrs. M. A. Wilson each contributed $5,000 or over, and a large number $1,000 or more, and a still larger number have given in smaller sums. Mr. David Sayre erected at a cost of $5,000 the "Sayre Hall" for a library. Its graduates number 931, and now fill or have filled many posts of honor and trust, especially in the south and west.

Prof. Ormond Beatty, long connected with the college, was chosen to succeed Dr. Breckinridge as president, September 1, 1871, and still (1885) holds the office. A new building was completed in 1872; enlarged facilities of instruction in the way of books, apparatus, a larger faculty, and a fuller course of studies betoken increased prosperity and usefulness in the future.

Other colleges were established in Kentucky very early—prior to Centre College, pehraps—but none of them now exist, and some of them are even forgotten. The Southern College, at Bowling Green, was established prior to 1820. In that year the legislature passed an act appropriating "one-half of the profits of the Lexington branch of the Commonwealth's Bank to Transylvania University; one-third of the profits of the Harrodsburg branch, to purchase a library and philosophical apparatus for Centre College, and a like sum from the Bowling Green branch for the like purpose of the Southern College of Kentucky."

Augusta College was founded in 1822. This is claimed as the first college established in the world, under the patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Church. During its career, extending over a third of a century or more, it had among its presidents some distinguished men, viz.: Rev. Martin Ruter, Rev. Joseph S. Tomlinson, Rev. Henry B. Bascom, Rev. Burr H. McCown, and others equally noted. Its library at one time contained about 2,500 volumes. The college building was destroyed by fire in 1852, but was immediately rebuilt, and a few years later the college went down. Since it ceased to exist the building has been used for a high school.

The first school of a high grade established in the State, under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church, was St. Joseph's College at Bardstown. It was chartered by the legislature December 24, 1825, and soon became the leading educational institution of that church in the State.

A female academy, the first in the west, and among the first in the United States, was established, in 1806, by Rev. John Lyle. It was a Protestant school and was quite prosperous for several years. Located at Paris, in the heart of the thickly settled portion of the State, it sometimes had 300 pupils or more. But after a few years of prosperity it passed out of existence.

Bacon College was chartered in 1836. It was originally located at Georgetown, but in 1840 was removed to Harrodsburg, and in 1865 was merged into Kentucky University. St. Mary's College, in Marion County (Roman Catholic), was incorporated in January, 1837; Louisville College in 1840, and Marshall College at Hopkinsville the same year; Henderson College in 1842, and Maysville College in 1846. Thus seminaries, academies, colleges and universities sprang up in all parts of the State—too many really for the good of the common schools, which, after all, comprise the true system of popular education in America. The common schools languish in proportion to the increase of colleges, academies, and other private schools. No State in the Union is better supplied with educational institutions of a higher grade than Kentucky, but her common school system, although being improved every year, is still very deficient. Among first-class schools, now in successful operation, may be mentioned Kentucky University, and the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Lexington, Centre College at Danville, Kentucky Military Institute near Frankfort, Central University at Richmond, Cumberland College at Princeton, with a college, academy, seminary, or other private school in every town of any importance in the State.

The Kentucky Military Institute, situated six miles from Frankfort, was incorporated under the State laws in 1847, and placed under the control and direction of a board of visitors, appointed by the governor, who, by virtue of his office, is ex-officio inspector of the institute. The superintendent, faculty and cadets are constituted a quasi military corps. The officers are commissioned under the seal of the commonwealth, and are responsible to the board of visitors for the faithful performance of prescribed duties. The institute is a private enterprise, and has always been self-sustaining. The State furnishes the military equipment and assumes supervision over the military organization, but contributes nothing to its support.

The location of the institute is a beautiful one, and is reached by an hour's ride by stage from the State capital over the Frankfort & Harrodsburg Turnpike. The buildings were erected at a cost of $100,000, and are admirably adapted to school purposes. They are heated by steam and lighted by gas, and the excellent taste displayed in arrangement of buildings and grounds commends the establishment to visitors as a place of unequaled beauty. The following is the true aim of the military feature:

> The design of the miltary organization is not only to bring about a just discipline, but to direct to a high purpose the aimless energies of youth, which would otherwise be wasted in unprofitable sport. A robust frame, a manly carriage, and a graceful bodily development, are objects not less worthy than the acquirement of a soldierly knowledge, which may be of great practical value in the chances of life. The esprit de corps excited by this organization creates checks upon willful or thoughtless error, and urges the cadet to an observance of strict propriety, in a degree far greater than would be thought by one not familiar with its workings. The virtues of truthfulness, self-respect and self-reliance are the most direct results of a military education. While this is true, it is also true that the military discipline is entirely subservient to the grander purposes of the intellectual and moral development of the youth. It is but a means, and not the end, of earnest endeavor in the inculcation of subordination to rightful authority. An obedience is sought to be attained from the consciousness of right, and not from the fear of punishment. It is believed that a noble manhood is centered in no other element of character.

Kentucky University is one of the ablest and most renowned institutions of learning in Kentucky. It is located at Lexington, and is a genuine university, complete in every college, with a liberal endowment. It was incorporated in 1858 as a university, and located at Harrodsburg. It grew out of Bacon College, an institution established by the Reformed or Christian Church at Georgetown in 1836, and afterward removed to Harrodsburg. It finally failed through want of sufficient endowment, and about the year 1850 was virtually abandoned. Upon the incorporation of Kentucky University, the funds and property of Bacon College were turned over to it, and the identity of the latter was thus lost in the new institution.

Kentucky University owes its origin mainly to the efforts and zeal of Mr. John B. Bowman, a graduate of Bacon College. He conceived the idea of erecting a great university—a university in the full sense of the word—upon the ruins of old Bacon College, and dedicated his life to the accomplishment of this purpose. He abandoned his business aims, and devoted his time and energies to the raising of a fund for its endowment, and with such material success that within less than six months he had secured $150,000. The college of science, literature and arts, the first regular department of the university, was opened at Harrodsburg in September, 1859, with nearly 200 students. Mr. Bowman was not idle. He raised $5,000 to purchase apparatus, and $50,000 to purchase, as the site for the buildings, the celebrated Harrodsburg Springs, together with 200 acres of land adjacent. In this last he was defeated through the civil war, and other causes. The college edifice and much of the furniture, etc., were destroyed by fire in 1864. About this time a proposition was made to Mr. Bowman to remove the institution to Lexington, Louisville or Covington. The trustees of Transylvania University, in order that Lexington might maintain its character and usefulness as an educational center, proposed to convey the entire property of Transylvania and consolidate it with Kentucky University, on condition that the latter be removed to Lexington, and that it preserve all the Transylvania trusts. This proposition was accepted, and Kentucky University removed to Lexington in 1865, and permanently located in that city. The next year after its removal, Mr. Bowman purchased "Ashland," the homestead of Henry Clay, for the permanent site of Kentucky University and its different colleges; he also purchased the adjoining estate of "Woodlands," which extends within the limits of Lexington, the two estates containing 433 acres of as fine land as lies in the famous blue grass region.

STATE AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College was organized in 1866, largely through the instrumentality of its first president, John Augustus Williams, one of the most eminent educators in the west. In the early part of 1865, congress proposed to donate to the State 330,000 acres of land for the purpose of agricultural and mechanical education. The legislature, astounded at the munificent provision of congress, was somewhat undecided as to the disposal of the donation, when Mr. Bowman came to its aid, and proposed to make the State Agricultural College a department of Kentucky University. He further agreed, if this should be done, to provide an experimental farm, and all the requisite buildings, and to give gratuitous instruction to 300 students, to be selected by the State; and furthermore pledged that the board of curators would carry out, in the agricultural department, the spirit and intent of the act of congress, encouraging the education of the industrial classes.* This was agreed upon, and a bill embodying the spirit of the proposal was presented to the legislature, and, after a rather heated discussion, was passed by a large majority. It was under the provisions of this act that Mr. Bowman purchased "Ashland" and "Woodlands," as already described.

The legislature in 1878 detached the Agricultural and Mechanical College from the University, and established it on an independent basis—the act taking effect on the 1st of July, 1880. A commission had been appointed by the legislature to select a suitable place for the location of the college. Lexington made an offer of the city park, containing fifty-two acres of land, and $30,000 in city bonds; Fayette County added to this sum $20,000 in county bonds, for the erection of buildings or the purchase of land. The legislature accepted the offer, and Lexington became the permanent seat of the Agricultural and Mechanical College. It is growing in importance every year, and is fast becoming one of the most famous institutions of learning in the State.

*History of Fayette County, p. 310.

CHAPTER XXI.

RECENT GROWTH AND PROMISE FOR THE FUTURE.

INTERNAL improvement has received the earnest attention of the legislature and the people of Kentucky from the organization of the State. While it never embarked so deeply and recklessly in the system as others of the Western States in their earlier history, yet it involved itself in debt to an extent that required it years to recover from. The surface of the State is not adapted to the cheap construction of roads and canals as are the prairie States, but it affords an inexhaustible supply of material for road building that is not surpassed by any country in the world, and when a road is once made it requires little work or expense to keep it in good order.

The common highway of travel is one of the best signs or symbols by which to understand an age or people. Something can be learned of the status of society, of the culture of a community, of the enlightenment of a government, by visiting universities and libraries, churches, palaces, and the marts of trade; but quite as much by the roads. For if there is any activity in society, or any vitality to a government, it will always be indicated by the highway, the type of civilized motion and prosperity.

Kentucky is noted for having some of the best as well as some of the worst roads in the country. The turnpike system in the central part of the State, so far as pertains to the excellent quality of the road, cannot be excelled, and the abolishment of tolls would render the system well nigh perfect. In other and less favored portions of the commonwealth, where only "mud pikes" are in use, they are no better than similar roads elsewhere.

The first act of the legislature for the opening of a road, passed after Kentucky became a State, was approved December 14, 1793, and was for a road from Frankfort to Cincinnati. On December 12, 1794, the next act was passed for a road. This was to extend from Madison Court House, or Milford, as it was called, situated about four miles from the present city of Richmond, to the hazel patch, on the road leading from Crab Orchard to Powell's Valley. This was followed by another act in 1795, providing for a road "to commence in the neighborhood of Crab Orchard, and to terminate on the top of the Cumberland Mountain, in the gap through which the present road to Virginia passes." These acts were not always followed by the immediate opening of the roads designated in them. The latter road was not opened for a year after the act was passed, and the road from Madison Court House, etc., was not opened until 1797. The expenses of opening both were paid by State appropriations. The legislature of Kentucky, in 1797, re-enacted a law of Virginia, for the "opening of new roads, and the alteration of former roads, under surveyors appointed by the courts." This act required "that all male laboring persons, sixteen years old, or more, shall work the roads, except those who are masters of two or more slaves over said age; or else pay a fine of 7s 6d for each day's absence, or neglect thus to work." It further provided, "that in the absence of bridges, mill-dams should be built at least twelve feet wide, for the passage of public roads, with bridges over the pier-heads and flood-gates." The surveyors were authorized to "impress wagons, and to take timber, stone or earth, for building roads," the same to be paid for out of the taxes of the different counties. For several years, a number of similar acts were passed by each session of the legislature. On December 21, 1821, the first act was passed, making an appropriation of a specified sum for road purposes. The appropriation was $1,000, and it was for the improvement of the State Road from Lexington, Ky., to Nashville, Tenn., from the Rolling Fork of Salt River, south, over the summit of Muldrow's Hills. As stated in the act, this was "owing to the thinness of the population in the neighborhood, and to the quantity of labor requisite to put in repair that part of the great highway, leading from northwest of the Ohio and upper settlements of this State, to the States of Tennessee and Alabama, and the Orleans country."

Turnpike originally meant a toll-gate, and not a road, but at the present day, the word "turnpike" is usually applied to all macadamized roads. On March 1, 1797, the legislature passed an act, appointing Joseph Crockett "to erect a 'turnpike' at some convenient place, and purchase as much land as may be necessary for that purpose, not exceeding two acres, on the road leading from the Crab Orchard to Cumberland Gap, beyond where the road from Madison Court House intersects said road." To give the reader some idea of the importance of this turnpike (or toll-gate), the act provided that "the turnpike should be farmed out to the highest bidder, who should give bond and security, payable to the governor of the State, for the faithful payment of his bid." When he had complied with this provision, he was allowed to charge the following tolls: "For every person, except post riders, expresses, women, and children under the age of ten years, 9d (12½ cents); for every horse, mare or mule, 9d; two-wheel carriage, 3s; four-wheel carriage, 6s ($1), and for every head of neat cattle going to the eastward, 3d." After paying for repairing the road, and keeping it in good order, the surplus of tolls went to the keeper of the turnpike, or toll-gate.

The introduction of macadamized roads* into Kentucky formed a new era in road building in the State. The first road of this character, authorized by the legislature, was that known as the "Maysville & Lexington Turnpike Road." Gov. Desha was a zealous advocate of turnpikes. In his annual message, December 4, 1826, he recommended the building of a road from Maysville to Louisville, via Paris, Lexington, Frankfort, and other towns between the two points. He suggested several other important turnpikes, and closed with the following words: "The subject of common schools and internal improvements may be made auxiliary to each other. Let the school fund now in the Bank of the Commonwealth ($140,917), the proceeds of the sale of vacant lands, the stock in the two banks belonging to the State ($781,238), and all other funds which can be raised by other means than taxes on the people, be vested in the turnpike roads; and the net profits arising from tolls on those roads be forever sacredly devoted to the interests of education."

The first macadamized road built in the State was from Maysville to Washington, a distance of four miles. By an act of the legislature, passed February 4, 1817, a company was incorporated to build a turnpike road from Lexington to Louisville, and another to build one from Lexington to Maysville, and the capital stock of each company fixed at $350,000, in shares of $100 each. The road from Maysville to Lexington was to pass through Washington, Mayslick, Millersburg and Paris. During the next year turnpike roads were chartered from Louisville to Portland and Shippingport, from Lexington toward Boonesborough, from Lexington to Georgetown, and from Georgetown to Frankfort. In February, a road was chartered from Georgetown to Cincinnati. But with all this legislation on the subject it was not until 1829, that a macadamized road was built in the State.

The legislature, on the 22d of January, 1827, chartered the Maysville & Lexington Turnpike Road Company anew, with a capital stock of $320,000. At any time, according to the provisions of the act, within three years after complete organization of the company, the United States government was authorized to subscribe $100,000, and the State of Kentucky the like sum. Gen. Metcalfe, a representative in congress at the time, and afterward governor of the commonwealth, induced the secretary of war to order a survey for the location of a leading highway and "mail road" from Zanesville, in Ohio, through Maysville and Lexington, in Kentucky, and Nashville, Tenn., to Florence, Ala., and New Orleans. The survey was commenced at Maysville, in May following, by Col. Long and Lieut. Trimble, of the United States engineer department. On the 13th of February, 1828, the Kentucky legislature recommended congress to extend a branch of the national road from Zanesville, Ohio, to Maysville, and "thence through the States of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi to New Orleans." The resolution instructed the senators from Kentucky, and requested the members of congress "to use their utmost exertions to effect this object." A bill was introduced into the national congress, with an appropriation for this great enterprise, and passed the lower house, but was defeated in the senate by one of the Kentucky senators, John Rowan. Mr. Rowan's action was severely criticized, on the grounds that, but for his opposition, the bill would have passed in the spring of 1828, at a time when President John Quincy Adams would readily have approved it, and thus have secured the prompt completion of the road by national and State aid.

* The macadamized road was invented by Macadam, and consists, after the road-bed is prepared, in covering it to a certain depth with broken stone.

Maysville, with a spirit of enterprise worthy of emulation, and disgusted somewhat at the "wind-work," that, so far, was all that had been done, went to work, and succeeded in getting a charter from the legislature on the 29th of January, 1829, for "the Maysville & Washington Turnpike Road Company." By April the stock was taken, and the road commenced in July following—the first shovel of dirt being thrown on the 4th. The road was steadily pushed forward, and in November, 1830, was completed between the two points, and ultimately extended to Lexington, under an amended charter, entitling it "the Maysville, Washington, Paris & Lexington Turnpike Road Company." On the 29th of April, 1830, a bill was passed by the national house of representatives (by a vote of 102 to 84), "authorizing and directing the secretary of the treasury to subscribe, in the name and for the use of the United States, for 1,500 shares ($150,000) of the capital stock of the Maysville, Washington, Paris & Lexington Turnpike Road Company, to be paid for in the same installments as by the stockholders generally, except that not more than one-third should be demanded during the year 1830." The bill passed the senate by a vote of 24 to 18, one of the senators from Kentucky—George M. Bibb—voting against it, and the other—John Rowan—voting in favor of it, but doing so "under instructions." All the senators from the Southern States voted against the bill, except John McKinley, of Alabama. Of the twelve members of congress from Kentucky, Dr. Nathan Gaither, alone voted against it. But on the 27th of May, twelve days after the passage of the bill by the United States senate, President Jackson vetoed it. Says Mr. Collins:* "This extraordinary measure (Jackson's veto) gave to the road a fame broad as the Union, but of no avail toward its completion—unless it may have stimulated somewhat or aroused afresh the enthusiasm excited the year before by the spirited and independent course of the brave little city, Maysville (by whose name the road has always been best known), and by the additional fact that, on January 29, 1830, the legislature of Kentucky had made it lawful for the governor to subscribe for not over $25,000 in the stock of the company—none of which, however, to be paid until three times the amount required of the State had been paid by the stockholders, in gold or silver or its equivalent." During the year (1830) large sums—large for the time—were subscribed at Lexington, Paris, Millersburg, Maysville, and by Nicholas County, and thirty-one miles of the road were promptly put under contract. The State subscribed different sums at different times, until the total amount of State aid aggregated $213,200—one-half the cost of the road. The total cost of the road from Maysville to Lexington, a distance of sixty-four miles, was $426,400, including thirteen toll-houses and six covered bridges.

*History of Kentucky, Vol. I, p. 540.

The first appropriation made by the State to a turnpike or macadamized road was on January 29, 1830. This appropriation, as we have seen, was based on the condition that private stockholders should subscribe for three times the amount. The State made its first unconditional subscription on January 15, 1831, and to the same enterprise—the road from Maysville to Lexington. The State acted with great caution at first, and made its appropriations slowly and in small sums; but in the great internal improvement storm which swept over the country, and well nigh bankrupted some of the Western States, Kentucky became imbued with the spirit of enterprise, and appropriations were made to the different roads and thoroughfares, until the State had invested in such works over $2,500,000. By the fall of 1837, the subscription of individual stockholders aggregated about $2,000,000 more. Something of the excess to which the spirit of internal improvement was carried, is shown by the following summary of roads, most of them receiving more or less aid from the State, completed, under contract, or in contemplation, in the fall of 1837: the Maysville & Lexington, 64 miles in length; Lexington, Danville & Lancaster, 42 miles; Lexington, Harrodsburg & Perryville, 42 miles; Lexington & Winchester, 18 miles; Lexington & Richmond, 25 miles; Lexington, Versailles & Frankfort, 27 miles; Frankfort & Shelbyville, 32 miles; Frankfort, Hardinsville & Crab Orchard, 65 miles; Frankfort & Georgetown, 17 miles; Lexington & Georgetown, 12 miles; Georgetown, Williamstown & Covington, 73 miles; Maysville & Bracken, 11 miles; Maysville & Mt. Sterling, 50 miles; Bardstown & Springfield, 18 miles; Louisville, Bardstown & Glasgow to the Tennessee line, 144 miles; Louisville via mouth of Salt River to Elizabethtown, 43 miles; Elizabethtown & Bowling Green to the Tennessee line, 96 miles; Logan, Todd & Christian, 76 miles; New Market, Lebanon & Washington, 15 miles; Muldrow's Hill and bridge, 5 miles; Versailles to Kentucky River, 12 miles; aggregating a total of nearly 900 miles of road, and a cost to the State of between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. The cost of building some of these roads was nearly one-third of the cost of building a railroad. The Maysville Road cost $6,662.50 per mile, including bridges and toll-houses, and the road from Louisville to the Tennessee line via Bardstown and Glasgow, cost about $6,736 per mile. The roads enumerated above, were built on the macadamized plan, and cost, including bridges, etc., from $5,000 to $7,350 per mile. In addition to the macadamized roads built prior to 1840, a number of "State roads" were authorized by the legislature; and "ordered surveyed and opened." Most of these were paid for out of the county levies, and received no aid from the State. They were graded, the "dirt thrown from the sides to the center," and had toll-gates on them at intervals; the tolls being used in keeping the roads in good condition for travel.

Next to the building of roads the improvement of river navigation early engaged the attention of the legislature. Indeed, the latter has the right of seniority, as the first river improvement act, or the re-enactment of an old law of Virginia, dates back to December 15, 1792. This law imposed "a fine of $2 for each twenty-four hours any obstruction was continued to the passage of fish or boats in any navigable stream—except said obstruction were a dam for the purpose of working a water grist-mill or other water-works of public utility." Another act was passed December 19, 1793, which appointed commissioners to raise a fund for the clearing of the south fork of the Licking River, and opening it for navigation, from its mouth to the junction of Hinkston and Stoner, and also that of the latter fork as high as the mouth of Strode's Creek. Mill-dams already erected, were not required to be removed, but the owners were directed to build such locks and slopes as would allow the passage of all boats that might navigate the streams. An act, December 12, 1794, ordered the removal of mills and fish-dams and other obstructions in Licking River and Slate Creek, by May 1, 1795, under a penalty of £30. This law was repealed December 21, 1799, and an act passed permitting mill-dams across the main Licking, with provisos as to height, locks and slopes.

In 1801 a company was incorporated by the legislature for the purpose of improving river navigation. It was known as the "Kentucky River Company," and had a capital stock of $10,000, divided into shares of $50 each. The stock was apportioned among the different counties, and commissioners appointed to receive the subscriptions as follows: Franklin County, twenty shares, and Christopher Greenup, Bennett Pemberton and Thomas Todd, commissioners; Woodford County, twenty shares, and Robert Alexander, Thomas Bullock and William Steele, commissioners; Fayette County, thirty shares, and James Trotter, John Jordan and Thomas Wallace, commissioners; Clark County, fifteen shares, and David Bullock, Robert Clark, Jr., and Dillard Collins, commissioners; Madison County, twenty-two shares, and John Patrick, James Barnett and John Wilkerson, commissioners; Garrard County, eighteen shares, and John Harrison, Thomas Kennedy and Abner Baker, commissioners; Mercer County, twenty-two shares, and Gabriel Slaughter, James Birney and James Moore, commissioners; Jessamine County, fifteen shares, and William Price, George Walker and Benjamin Bradshaw, commissioners; Scott County, twenty shares, and William Henry, David Flournoy and Bartlett Collins, commissioners; Lincoln County, eighteen shares, and Isaac Shelby, William Logan and William Whitley, commissioners.

The design of the Kentucky River Company was to clear the Kentucky River of all obstructions from its mouth to the mouth of its south fork, which would impede the passage of boats or might be considered necessary to improve the navigation of the river. According to the charter of the company, when the work was completed, and so long as approved by two commissioners appointed by the governor to examine the navigation of the river annually in July or August, the company was allowed to collect tolls as follows: "For each boat not more than fourteen feet wide and thirty feet long, $4; forty-five feet, $5; sixty feet, $6; and 9 cents for each foot larger. For each keel-boat, pirogue, or canoe, of over one ton burden, 12½ cents for each foot in length. For each 100 hogshead or pipe staves or headings, or each 100 feet of plank or scantling, if floated on a raft, 4 cents, or other timber, 12½ cents. Boats loaded with coal, lime, iron or other ore, or household furniture, to pay not over three-fourths of the above rates."

This enterprise proved a failure, and on the 10th of January, 1811, an act was passed which authorized the raising of $10,000 by lottery, under the supervision of eleven commissioners or directors. The amount thus raised was to be expended in "clearing all logs, brush, trees, rocks, fish traps, 'shrubbing' the points of islands, and removing other impediments from the Kentucky River, and its south fork, and Goose Creek, as high up as the salt-works of Gov. James Garrard and sons." This enterprise was likewise a failure, and nothing ever came of it of practical value.

Without going into a detailed account of all the acts, and the various projects inaugurated for the improvement of Kentucky River and its branches, the following summary* may be given: "In 1836, the total estimated cost of locks and dams was $1,950,868; to which was to be added for lock-houses $17,000, hydraulic lime, $102,000, clearing river banks at $300 per mile, $77,250, and 7 per cent, for contingences, superintendence, etc., $150,298; total, $2,297,416, or an average cost per mile of $8,922. The increased cost of the five completed locks over the estimate was, for construction alone, $185,226. The actual cost of the 95 miles was $901,932.70, or an average of $9,494 per mile; at the same ratio, the entire navigation to the middle fork would have cost $2,444,705. The outlay for engineering and instruments, land, removing snags, and other incidental expenses, on the 95 miles, was $72,231 and $52,416 for hydraulic lime."

*Collins' History, Vol. I, p. 550.

The improvement of Green and Barren Rivers, has received considerable attention at various times from the State. The first legislative enactment for the improvement of Green River was February 16, 1808. The act made it obligatory upon the several counties lying along a certain portion of the river, to keep it in a navigable condition, and annually, in July, August and September, "to work it with hands from the neighborhood." To "work it" meant to "remove all fish pots, all dams not erected under authority of the legislature, and all logs, to cut and clear away all projecting timber, to shrub all points of islands, and to remove any other obstructions in the channel." An act of the legislature declared the navigable part of the river to be that below the mouth of Knob Lick Creek, in Casey County. A year later this was changed to that below the Adair County line. An act of the legislature, January 18, 1810, provided for the improvement of the branches of the Green River as follows: Muddy River from its mouth up to its Wolf Lick Fork; Big Barren from its mouth to Bays Fork; Pond River from its mouth to within half a mile of Brier Creek; and Rough Creek from its mouth to Long's Ferry. These improvements were to be made by subscriptions raised along the streams, in the country that would be most benefited by the improvement. Every session of the legislature for years passed acts upon acts for the improvement of small rivers and creeks, and declaring them "navigable streams," and thus often giving them "a dignity and importance they did not merit."

As early as 1833, money was expended by the State upon work, surveys, etc., of the Green and Barren Rivers. In 1834, the sum of $15,272 was appropriated for engineering work on the locks and dams, and $40,033 the next year. The State appropriated, for this work, the total sum of $125,000, most which was expended before the close of 1836. In 1834 the estimated cost of four locks and dams in the Green River, and one in the Barren River, was $238,988. The system embraced the improvement of 180 miles of the Green and Barren Rivers, thirty miles in the Green River above the mouth of the Barren, thirty miles in the Muddy River, nine in the Pond River, and nineteen in Rough Creek—268 miles in all. To November 20, 1837, nearly $250,000 had been expended upon the Green and Barren Rivers. The total amount appropriated to complete their navigation up to Bowling Green was $859,126.79. The average cost of the improvement was estimated at $5,010.73 per mile. The gross expenditures upon these rivers from 1843 to 1865, was $269,813.66; gross receipts for the same period was $265,002.59, an excess of $4,811.07 in expenditures.

A survey of the Salt River, and of the Beech and Rolling Forks (branches), was made in 1837. It was estimated that, with four locks and dams, the Salt River could be made navigable for small boats a distance of about thirty-seven miles from its mouth. The cost of the four locks was estimated at $282,533. It was also estimated that two locks, from the mouth of Rolling Fork to the mouth of Beech Fork, would render navigable about nineteen miles between those points.

The Big and Little Sandy Rivers, though streams of some importance, especially the former, have never received the attention and appropriations that other streams in the State of really no greater magnitude. A survey of the Little Sandy, made in 1837, developed the fact that the stream was "too crooked for the successful navigation of steamboats." The Big Sandy and its west fork were partially surveyed in 1835, but the work was not completed until 1838. The report of the survey estimated, that for "the removal of rocks, snags and leaning trees, and the excavation of a channel through each of the principal shoals or ripples, so as to admit of descending navigation, the sum of $25,300 would probably be sufficient." The improvement of this stream is not yet completed, and appropriations are still occasionally made for the purpose. The sum of $75,000 was appropriated in 1870, and a "chute sufficiently wide, with slope so as to admit the passage of boats, cut in a solid rock in the falls of the Tug Fork." It was estimated to require seven lock and dams on the main stream and the West Fork, and five on the Tug Fork, costing $569,100 to render navigation certain for the inexhaustible supplies of the celebrated Peach Orchard, block and cannel coals." These coals are among the best found west of Pennsylvania, and comprise millions and millions of bushels. Statistics show the exports from the Big Sandy Valley for the year ending July 1, 1870, at $1,219,000 in value. These have greatly increased since that date.

The Licking River received its full share of notice during the rage of internal improvements, and, as we have seen, was one of the first streams coming under legislative enactments, but it did not receive the substantial aid which was given many other streams in the State quite as insignificant. The first survey of the Licking was ordered about 1835-36. In 1837 the survey was continued to West Liberty, a point 231 miles from its mouth. The total ascent in the distance was 310 feet, and to render slack-water navigation feasible twenty-one locks were required, with "lifts varying from nine to eighteen feet." The cost of the improvement up to West Liberty was estimated at $1,826,481, and the time in which it was to be completed four years. The first five locks and dams on the Licking, between Falmouth and the mouth of the river, were put under contract in October, 1837, and the work pushed on with spirit. But in 1842, owing to the great financial pressure of the times, which had existed for several years, the public works throughout the State were almost entirely abandoned. They came to a dead stop on the Licking River, and the outlay, which, up to this time, was $372,520, proved a loss to the State.

This does not include all the river improvements of Kentucky. For many years before the era of railroad building, the improvements of inland streams was agitated, and carried on vigorously. Many projects of this kind were inaugurated, that in the present age would appear supremely ridiculous to us, and that, had they all proved successful, would have cut the State up into water highways, natural and artificial. Enough of the river improvement has been given, to show the extent to which this species of internal improvement was carried in the earlier years of the commonwealth; to notice every individual enterprise of the kind is unnecessary, and would but weary the reader.

Kentucky is not adapted to canals. The uneven surface and the vast beds of limestone underlying it, render canals an "expensive luxury" in the way of internal improvements that the State has not felt able to indulge in to any very great extent. More than one project, however, of this kind, has at different times been agitated, but the canal around the falls of the Ohio, at Louisville, is the only monument to that kind of enterprise in existence in the State. During the internal improvement craze, when the construction of canals became an epidemic in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, similar enterprises were inaugurated in Kentucky. The most gigantic scheme of this kind, was a canal to connect the Ohio River with the Atlantic Ocean. The following report made by Maj. R. P. Baker, chief engineer, to the State board of internal improvements, is from the senate journal of 1835:

From the Ohio up the Kentucky River, by locks and dams, to the three forks of the Kentucky; thence up the South Fork and Goose Creek, to the salt works; thence by a canal thirty-six miles long, with 160 feet of lockage, into Cumberland River at Cumberland Ford; thence four miles in Cumberland River to the mouth of Yellow Creek; thence by canal, in the bed of Yellow Creek, to Cumberland Gap; through Cumberland Gap by a tunnel, probably 700 to 800 yards long, and by canal from thence into Powell's River, five miles below; down that river successively into the Clinch and Tennessee, and up the Hiwassee River, by locks and dams; from the Hiwassee, continue the improvements by a canal to the navigable waters of the Savannah, at the head of steamboat navigation on that river.

Such a canal would outflank the whole chain of the Appalachian Mountains, on the southwest; and in the course of its extent, would cross the various noble rivers, Coosa, Chattahooche, Oconee, etc., which, taking their rise in the chain of the Appalachians, flow into the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean, between the cities of Charleston and New Orleans. This would throw open to the commerce of the counties bordering on the Ohio River, a choice among the numerous markets presented by the vast extent of cotton country; independently of the facilities it would offer for reaching the northeastern cities or European ports, through the ports of Savannah and Charleston.

The average cost per mile of a lock and dam navigation, upon the most perfect plan, will but little, if any, exceed one-half that of a turnpike road. More than three-fifths of the distance on the route proposed would be in the beds of rivers improved for this kind of navigation. The most perfect kind of canal can be constructed for one-half the cost of the most perfect railroad. The experience of the northeastern States has fully settled the question that the cost of transportation on railroads exceeds that upon canals by 200 to 300 per cent. * * * * * The day would not be distant from the completion of such a work, until the demands of commerce would be equal to all the capacities of the Kentucky River improved upon the largest plan proposed. This remark applies with peculiar force to the projected railroad from Charleston to the Ohio River, now undergoing discussion in the legislature of Kentucky.

At this day, when the people are groaning under railroad monopolies, and are ground down by exorbitant tariff rates required to transport their goods and produce to and fro, there can be no doubt or question but that such a water highway between the Ohio River and the Atlantic Ocean would have proven of incalculable value to the country. At the very least, it would have afforded formidable competition to railroad transportation, and have been an important factor in keeping railroad charges at lower figures than are now maintained. It is a matter for regret that the statesmen of half a century ago could not peer far enough into the future to have foreseen the value of this important enterprise, and not allowed it to fail.

The Ohio Canal Company, organized for the purpose of constructing a canal around the falls of the Ohio at Louisville, was incorporated by the legislature on the 10th of December, 1804. Under the act, "commissioners were appointed to open books in seventeen of the most important towns of the State, for the subscription of $50,000 in $50 shares." A clause was added to the charter, authorizing the company to increase their stock to "any amount found necessary to complete the canal." The company was authorized to cut a canal around the falls, construct the necessary locks and dams, and to charge sufficient tolls to keep the work in proper repair, etc. If the requisite sum was not raised by subscription, the company was allowed to raise $15,000 by lottery under rather rigid restrictions. This law was not satisfactory, and an amended act was passed December 20, 1805, by which a quorum for the transaction of business must represent, or consist of, the holders of at least 2,000 shares of the capital stock. It also "increased the capital stock to $500,000; directed the governor to subscribe for 1,000 shares, provided the amount payable by the State should not exceed $10,000 annually; reserved 1,000 other shares for the future disposition of the legislature; required the canal to be cut on the Kentucky side of the river; made it lawful for the United States to subscribe not over $60,000, the States of Pennsylvania and Virginia not over $30,000 each, and those of Maryland, New York and Ohio, $20,000 each; made the work and canal 'real estate, and forever exempt from the payment of any tax, imposition or assessment whatever;' fixed the toll on ships or other sea vessels of 100 tons or under, down to twenty tons, at from $6 to $11.75, and on those exceeding 100 tons, at 12 cents per ton; legalized a lottery to raise not over $30,000; declared the canal should be sufficient for the passage of boats drawing, in low water, not more than three feet, and at least twenty-four feet wide at bottom; and forfeited this charter unless the canal should be begun before December 20, 1808, and be completed before January 1, 1815." The charter was forfeited. Like the preceeding act, it amounted to nothing, and the construction of a canal around the falls seemed as remote as before. On the 30th of January, 1818, a new company was incorporated by the legislature under the title of the "Kentucky Ohio Canal Company," with a capital stock of $600,000, and authority to organize when one-half of the amount was subscribed. The new company, like the old one, accomplished nothing. An amended act of February 10, 1820, removed some of the restrictions from the charter, but even this did not serve to awaken sufficient interest to carry through the proposed improvement.

It was not until 1825, that there seemed a probability of the work being accomplished. The increasing commerce of the west demanded some improvements at the falls of the Ohio, and on the 12th of January, 1825, the legislature chartered the Louisville & Portland Canal Company—a private corporation. The capital stock was fixed at $600,000, and before the end of the year the full amount was subscribed. A subsequent act (December 12, 1829), increased the capital stock to $700,000, and an act passed on the 12th of December, 1831, authorized its increase to an amount "sufficient to pay all costs of construction, and interest on all sums expended up to the time the canal is opened." Work soon commenced, and from 600 to 1,000 men were at once employed and set to work excavating. The work was pushed along as fast as circumstances would permit, and during the year 1831, though still far from being completed, the canal was opened for navigation. The great freshet of 1832 damaged it to an extent that heavy repairs were required. Its total cost of construction, as shown in the report made January 2, 1832, was $742,869.94. This was merely for construction, and does not include the amount necessary to repair it after the great freshet alluded to above.

For many years after the opening of the canal it paid large dividends on the investment. In 1837 the dividends were thirteen, in 1838 eleven, and in 1839 seventeen per cent. Fifty shares of the forfeited stock were sold in 1837, at $121 per share, and, in 1838, 200 shares were sold at $130 per share, the par value being $100 per share. The United States government, under an act of congress, purchased in 1826, 1,000 shares of stock, and shortly after, 1,335 shares more—the total par value being $233,500. In lieu of dividend for 1831, it received 567 shares more, and up to 1842 received $257,778 in semi-annual cash dividends; thus making the total income of the government from this canal, $24,278, and 567 shares of stock more than it invested.

The canal was too small for the accomodation of all the craft upon the Ohio, and its enlargement was determined on. The work of widening and deepening it was commenced in 1860, and continued through the period of the war, and up to 1866, when the funds being exhausted the work ceased. Major Weitzel, United States engineer, in charge of the work, estimated at that time, that $1,178,000 would complete the enlargement. Congress, in 1868, appropriated $300,000 toward its completion; in 1869, $300,000; in 1871, $300,000; in 1871, $300,000; in 1872, $100,000, and in 1874 took final action toward assuming the payment of the bonds still outstanding. Such an arrangement was consummated, and the government took possession of this great public work, and made it a free canal. The benefit to commerce, of this act of liberality on the part of the general government, can scarcely be computed. Under its control, the enlargement of the canal has been completed, and is a master-piece of work. The largest boats that ply on the Ohio River pass through the canal with perfect ease and safety, and no longer are the falls an impediment to river commerce and navigation.

The Ohio River in the early history of Kentucky was the great feature of interest to the people, and its navigation, next to the pack horse, the first mode of transportation they knew. Many of the early settlers, in fact the great majority of them, floated down the Ohio to Limestone (Maysville), to the mouth of the Licking and of the Kentucky, or to the falls, on rafts, barges, and almost every description of water craft, except steam-vessels, and from their landing places, would make their way to the interior settlements. "The location of Louisville," says a late writer, "was due to an obstruction to commerce—the falls of the Ohio—and its growth has been due to the improvement in the methods of transportation." As early as 1776 boats and barges from the headwaters of the Ohio passed down into the lower Mississippi. Col. Richard Taylor, and his brother Hancock Taylor, in that year, 1776, descended from Pittsburgh to the mouth of the Yazoo, and in the latter part of the same year, Gibson and Linn made a trip from Pittsburgh to New Orleans for military stores for the use of the army stationed at Pittsburgh. They returned to the falls the next year, having procured 156 kegs of powder. This was carried around the falls by hand and finally delivered at Pittsburgh according to contract. Tardiveau and Honore, of Louisville, descended to New Orleans in 1782, and for several years afterward continued to make regular trips to the French and Spanish forts on the Lower Mississippi. Their mode of navigation was very slow, and attended with great danger. To make a voyage occupied from six months to a year; the river swarmed with pirates, who would steal and rob, and even murder, if necessary to do so, to secure booty. This system of navigation continued until the era of steamboats.

In the year 1809 Fulton and Livingston commenced their experiments to navigate by steam the Hudson River. As soon as their attempt on the Hudson was crowned with success, they turned their attention immediately toward the great water-ways of the west. They saw that here were the greatest streams in the world, but it may be doubted if they prolonged their vision to the present time, and realized a tithe of the possibilities they were giving to the world. They unrolled the map of this continent, and sent Capt. Roosevelt out to Pittsburgh to go over the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans, and report whether they could be navigated or not. His favorable report of the inspection he made resulted in the immediate construction of the steamboat "New Orleans," which was launched at Pittsburgh in December, 1811, and was the first steamboat to descend the Ohio River. "At this time there were but two steamboats on this continent; these were the North River and the Clermont, and they were employed on the Hudson River. The New Orleans on her first trip took neither freight nor passengers. Her inmates were Mr. Roosevelt, an associate of Fulton, with his wife and family, Mr. Baker, the engineer, Andrew Jack, the pilot, and six hands, with a few domestics."*

*Casseday's History of Louisville, p. 120.

The steamboat "New Orleans" was furnished with a propelling wheel at the stern and two masts; for Fulton believed, at that time, that the occasional use of sails would be indispensable. The boat's capacity was 100 tons, and her speed about three miles an hour. Before her ability to move through the water without the aid of sails or oars had been exemplified, comparatively few persons believed she could be made to answer any purpose of real utility. In fact, the boat had made several voyages before the general prejudice began to subside, and for quite a time many of the river merchants preferred the old mode of transportation, with all its risks, delays and extra expense, rather than make use of such a contrivance as a steamboat, which, to their apprehensions, appeared too marvelous and miraculous for the business of every-day life.

The first appearance of a steamboat on the western waters, produced, as well may be supposed, not a little excitement, admiration and superstition. The time of the "New Orleans'" first downward voyage, was a period of phenomena. A "fiery comet was blazing athwart the horizon," and while lying at the mouth of the Ohio, the steamer encountered the great earthquake of 1811. Many of the ignorant "squatters" along the river believed that the steamboat was the cause of both; that the comet was the harbinger of its approach, and the earthquake was but the result of its appearance. It was, they believed, this flying in the face of Providence, and making a boat to run with "bilin' water" that caused this terrific convulsion of nature. "Presumptuous man had boiled the water, when, if God had wanted it to boil, he would have so made it." People had navigated the river in flat-boats, keel-boats and canoes, and under these the glad rivers went singing to the sea. But man must come with his "fire-boat," and the earth went into convulsions, and terror and desolation brooded over the land. The arrival of the "New Orleans" at Louisville was described in Latrobe's Rambler in America, as follows:

Late at night, on the fourth day after quitting Pittsburgh, they arrived in safety at Louisville, having been but seventy hours descending upward of 700 miles. The novel appearance of the vessel, and the fearful rapidity with which it made its passage over the broad reaches of the river, excited a mixture of terror and surprise among many of the settlers on the banks, whom the rumor of such an invention had never reached; and it is related that on the unexpected arrival of the boat before Louisville, in the course of a fine, still moonlight night, the extraordinary sound which filled the air, as the pent-up steam was suffered to escape from the valve, on rounding to, produced a general alarm, and multitudes in the town rose from their beds to ascertain the cause. I have heard that the general impression among the Kentuckians was, that the comet had fallen into the Ohio; but this does not rest upon the same foundation as the other facts which I lay before you, and which I may at once say, I had directly from the lips of the parties themselves.

The "New Orleans" was detained at Louisville on account of low water, which would not permit her to pass over the falls. In the meantime, she made several trips to and from Cincinnati, and toward the middle of December a rise in the river enabled her to pass the rapids, and successfully "weathering the earthquake," at the mouth of the Ohio, reached Natchez about January 1, 1812, and passed on to New Orleans, where she arrived in safety. As soon as she had accomplished her trip and returned, commerce on the western rivers began to grow, and assume something of importance. Steam navigation opened a new era. From this rude, imperfect steamboat, that made its trial trip amid the throes of earthquake and the blazing of comets, has come the world's Armada, that now plows the waves of every river and sea, until the busy life upon the waters, and its wealth of nations, almost equal those upon the land. From the new era thus inauguarated

> Swift commerce spreads her wings,
> And tires the sinewy sea-bird as she flies,
> Fanning the solitudes from clime to clime.

The "New Orleans" continued to ply between Natchez and New Orleans for some two years. Her voyages, upon an average, occupied about seventeen days. She was finally wrecked, and sunk near Baton Rouge, on her passage up the river.

The second steamboat on the Ohio was the "Comet," the name, perhaps, being suggested by the comet which, in connection with the first steamboat and the earthquake, had created so much excitement. It was owned by Samuel Smith, and was built at Pittsburgh by Daniel French, on a patent granted in 1809. It made a voyage to Louisville in 1813, and the next year to New Orleans. It was a small craft, of about only forty-five tons burden. She made two trips between New Orleans and Natchez, and was then sold, her engine taken out and placed in a cotton-gin. Dr. McMurtrie, in his sketches of Louisville, published in 1819, gives a list of the steamboats on the Ohio River up to that date; Ben Casseday, in his history of Louisville, published a third of a century later, gives a similar list, as also does Gov. Reynolds in his "Pioneer History of Illinois." The list,* as given by Dr. McMurtrie is as follows: First, "New Orleans;" second, "Comet;" third, "Vesuvius;" fourth, "Enterprise;" fifth, "Ætna;" sixth, "Despatch;" seventh and eighth, "Buffalo" and "James Monroe;" ninth, "Washington;" tenth, "Franklin;" eleventh, "Oliver Evans;" twelfth, "Harriet;" thirteenth, "Pike;" fourteenth, "Kentucky;" fifteenth, "Gov. Shelby;" sixteenth, "New Orleans;" seventeenth, "George Madison;" eighteenth, "Ohio;" nineteenth, "Napoleon;" twentieth, "Volcano;" twenty-first, "Gen. Jackson;" twenty-second, "Eagle;" twenty-third, "Hecla;" twenty-fourth, "Henderson;" twenty-fifth, "Johnson;" twenty-sixth, "Cincinnati;" twenty-seventh, "Exchange;" twenty-eighth, "Louisiana;" twenty-ninth, "James Ross;" thirtieth, "Frankfort;" thirty-first, "Tamerlane;" thirty-second, "Cedar Branch," thirty-third, "Experiment;" thirty-fourth, "St. Louis;" thirty-fifth, "Vesta;" thirty-sixth, "Rifleman;" thirty-seventh, "Alabama;" thirty-eighth, "Rising States;" thirty-ninth, "General Pike;" fortieth, "Independence;" forty-first, "United States."†

*The names of the boats are given in the order of their construction.

†A steamboat called the "Firefly," it is claimed, was among the first boats built in the west, and also among the first that navigated the Ohio River. No history, however, of Louisville or Kentucky, mentions the fact of the existence of a boat of that name, or of Dr. Thomas Ruble, who is claimed to have been its owner and builder. There was most probably such a boat, but was, doubtless, so very small that it escaped notice in all the histories of that day. Dr. Ruble was quite a prominent man of the early period of Louisville and Kentucky, and was interested somewhat in navigation at that time, but no one now seems to remember anything definitely of the steamboat "Firefly."

The "Vesuvius" was built at Pittsburgh by Fulton, and left that port for New Orleans, in the spring of 1814, under command of Capt. Frank Ogden. She was of 390 tons, and was built for a company of men of New York and New Orleans. The "Enterprise" was built at Brownsville, Penn., by Daniel French, and made two voyages to Louisville in the summer of 1814. On the 1st of December she started to New Orleans with a cargo of ordnance stores, and upon her arrival there was pressed into the United States service by Gen. Jackson. After the close of the war she left New Orleans (6th of May, 1815) and reached Louisville in twenty-five days out. This was the first voyage made by a steamboat from New Orleans to Louisville. The experiment, however, was not satisfactory, as the river was very high at the time, and the boat ran all the cut-offs, over fields, etc., leaving the public still in doubt whether a steamboat could ascend the Mississippi when the river was within its banks, with the usually rapid current common in that stage of water.

It was about this time that the steamer "Washington" commenced her career. According to Dr. McMurtrie, she was the ninth boat on the river, but another authority* places her as the fifth. She was built under the personal superintendence of Capt. Henry M. Shreve, whom many Kentucky, Louisville and Cincinnati people doubtless still well remember. The hull of the "Washington" was built at Wheeling, Va., and the engines at Brownsville, Penn. She was the first "two-decker" on the western rivers—the cabin was placed between the two decks. Hitherto steamboats had carried their engines in the hold, but Capt. Shreve placed the boiler of the Washington on the lower deck. This plan was such an obvious improvement that steamboats have retained it to the present day. The engines constructed under Fulton's patent had upright and stationary cylinders; in French's engines, vibrating cylinders were used. But in the "Washington," Shreve caused the cylinders to be placed in a horizontal position, and gave the vibrations to the pitman. Fulton and French used single low-pressure engines; Shreve employed a double high-pressure engine, with cranks at right angles. This was the first engine of that kind ever used in western steamboats. David Prentice had previously used cam wheels for working the valves of the cylinder; Capt. Shreve added his invention of the cam-cut-off, with flues to the boiler, by which three-fifths of the fuel was saved.

The "Washington," on the 24th of September, 1816, passed over the falls of the Ohio on her first trip to New Orleans, and returned to Louisville in November following. While at New Orleans the ingenuity of her construction excited the admiration of the most intelligent citizens of that place. Edward Livingston, after a critical examination of the boat and her machinery, remarked to Capt. Shreve: "You deserve well of your country, young man; but we (referring to the Livingston & Fulton monopoly) shall be compelled to beat you (in the courts) if we can." The "Washington" was delayed at Louisville, by ice in the river, until March 12, 1817, when she started on her second voyage to New Orleans. She accomplished the round trip, arriving at the foot of the falls (at Shippingsport) in forty-one days. The ascending voyage was made in twenty-five days, and from this voyage, dates the actual commencement of steam navigation in the Mississippi Valley. It was now practically demonstrated, to the satisfaction of the public in general, that steamboats could ascend this river in less than one-fourth the time which the barges and keel-boats had required for the same purpose. This triumphal voyage of the "Washington" excited great interest everywhere, but especially in the river towns and cities. The citizens of Louisville gave a public dinner to Capt. Shreve, at which he predicted the time would come when the trip from New Orleans to Louisville would be made in ten days. This may have been regarded as a boastful declaration, but the prediction has been more than fulfilled, for in a quarter of a century the trip was made in a little less than five days. All prejudices against steam navigation being now removed, steamboat building was vigorously prosecuted, as the foregoing list of boats built prior to 1820 shows. But a new obstacle now presented itself, which, for a time threatened to give an effectual check to the spirit of enterprise, which had been thus developed. This was the claim made by Fulton & Livingston to the exclusive right of steam navigation on the rivers of the United States. This claim was openly resisted by Capt. Shreve, and litigation followed. The "Washington" was attached at New Orleans and taken possession of by the sheriff. When the cause came before the district court of Louisiana, that tribunal negatived the exclusive privileges claimed by Fulton & Livingston, which were decided to be unconstitutional. Their claims were finally withdrawn in 1819 and the last restraint on the steamboat navigation of the western rivers was thus removed, leaving western enterprise full liberty to carry on the great work of improvement. This work became so progressive and immense that at one time there were no less than 800 steamboats running on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. The era of railroads lessened this number very materially, but there are still a great many boats in operation on these rivers, and river commerce still maintains vast proportions.

*H. C. Bradsby in the History of Cairo, Ill.

The railroad is the most important internal improvement of modern times, and its invention and construction form an interesting part of our history. There is not a single occupation of interest, which the railroad has not radically affected. Agriculture, manufactures, commerce, city and country life, banking, finance, law, and even government itself, have all felt its power. Wholly unknown three-fourths of a century ago, it has become the greatest single factor in the development of the material progress, not only of the United States and the other civilized nations of the earth, but its blessings are being rapidly extended into the hitherto semi-civilized and barbarous portions of the globe. The railroad system of the United States now forms a perfect net work of iron and steel from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the lakes to the gulf, on which run thousands of freight and passenger cars, loaded with the products of the country, and valuable merchandise from every part of the world, and carrying thousands of thousands of human beings with lightning-like speed from one city to another.

The invention of the railroad, and its introduction in this country, was most opportune as a practical settlement of the question of internal improvement, which had for years been hotly contested. A recent writer upon the subject says:

In 1796 Tennessee was admitted to the Union, and the same year congress authorized the survey of lands north of the Ohio, and their offer for sale at $2 an acre, with a year's credit, and 10 per cent discount for cash. By the ordinance of 1787 slavery was prohibited within this territory, and the next year the first settlement was made in Ohio at Marietta. The same year Fort Washington, on the site of Cincinnati, was built, and a road constructed by Virginia, about 300 miles long, finished from Alexandria to the Ohio, opposite Marietta. The Ohio Company, in 1787, bought a tract of 5,000,000 acres, extending along the Ohio from the Muskingum to the Scioto, for two-thirds of a dollar an acre, payable in installments and in certificates of the public debt. * * * Population flowed so rapidly into the territory, that, in 1802, the people petitioned for the right to organize a State government. A convention for this purpose was held in November following at Chilicothe. When this was done the most liberal inducements were offered to settlers of the new State. * * * * * * From this date the question of internal improvements began to assume prominence in our politics; and the Cumberland Turnpike, running from Cumberland, Md., to the Ohio, occupied the attention of congress at various times up to 1836, when its control was abandoned to the States. This road cost $6,670,000, and is now merely a highway, a parallel railroad route having deprived it of the importance it once held when it was known as the "National Road." * * * There was need for new methods of inter-communication, the increasing population made every day more apparent. In 1784 the cost of transportation from Philadelphia to Erie is stated to have been $249 a ton, the method being by pack horses principally, which were driven in lines of ten or twelve, each horse being tied to the tail of the one preceding, so that the train was under the management of a single driver. In 1789 the first saw-mill was built in Ohio. The crank for this mill was made in Connecticut, and weighed 180 pounds. It was carried by pack-horses over the mountains to the Youghiogheny River at Simrell's Ferry, and thence shipped by water to Marietta. * *

In 1808, Albert Gallatin, secretary of the treasury, made a report upon the subject of internal improvements. In this report he stated that a great number of roads had been built in the Eastern and Middle States, while few had been constructed south of the Potomac. The roads were chiefly turnpikes, varying in cost from less than $1,000 a mile to $14,000. In five years Connecticut had incorporated fifty turnpike companies, and New York in less than seven years had incorporated sixty-seven companies. The report recommended that $2,000,000 should be appropriated yearly for the next ten years in improving the means of inter-communication between the different parts of the Union, and made suggestions for certain specific measures of this nature. * * * *

On the 1st of January, 1832, it was reported that there were nineteen railroads either completed or in process of construction in the Middle States, and that their aggregate was nearly 1,400 miles. Though congress afforded no material aid to this new era of internal improvements, yet this same year it exempted from duty the iron imported for railways and inclined planes, and actually used for their construction. In 1840, it has been estimated that our yearly average of railroad construction was about 500 miles. In 1850 this average had increased to 1,500 miles. In 1860 it was nearly 10,000, and in 1871 it was stated that enterprises requiring an expenditure of $800,000,000, and involving the construction of 20,000 miles of railroad, were in actual process of accomplishment. In 1872 the aggregate capital of the railroads of the United States, which were estimated to embrace one-half of the railroads of the civilized world, was stated to amount to the sum of $3,159,423,057, and $473,241,055 as their gross revenue.

Thus has the construction of railroads increased with almost unparalled rapidity, and grown into formidable proportions, becoming, as we have said, the greatest single factor in the developement of our material progress. To better understand this marvelous growth and expansion, a brief glance at the early history of the railroad is not out of place. The first railroad of which we have any account was built in the north of England (in the collieries) nearly two centuries before the introduction of the locomative. Upon this road, which had wooden rails, cars were drawn by horses and mules, and were used in hauling coal from the mines. As early as 1794, the use of the locomotive in the place of animal power was suggested, but none were built until several years afterward, nor did they come into practical use until 1830, upon the opening of the Liverpool & Manchester Railway. The first railroad in this country was built in 1807. It was but a few hundred yards in length, and was constructed for transporting gravel from the top of Beacon Hill down into Charles Street, in the city of Boston. The rails were entirely of wood, and the propelling power the momentum of the loaded cars, which in descending, by means of a rope attachment, pulled the empty cars up, a double track, of course, being necessary to the proper working of the road.

Rude and simple as were these first efforts at railroad building, they suggested plans and designs which time and experience, together with the inventive genius of man, have continued ever since to improve upon. Scientific research demonstrates that what is now reduced to system, and rises to the dignity of science, was discovered through some trivial casualty or circumstance, which falling under the notice of a reflecting mind, gave rise to surprising results. The simple circumstance of a falling apple developed the great law of gravitation. The idea of fortifying a military camp with an insurmountable obstruction behind it, was first suggested to Pyrrhus, King of Epirus (who lived nearly 300 years before the Christian era, and who was the most celebrated warrier of his time), by seeing a wild boar, when hunted to desperation, back himself against a tree, that he might fight his pursuers, without danger of being assailed in his rear. Similar hints have led to the triumph of mechanical art, which it may be said, has culminated in the perfected railroad system of the present day.

In 1827 a railroad was built from the granite quarries of Quincy, Mass., to the Neponset River, a distance of three miles. During the same year, a road nine miles in length was laid out from the Mauch Chunk coal mines of Pennsylvania to the Lehigh River, and in 1828, a road constructed by the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company, from their coal mines to Honesdale, and a commissioner sent to England to purchase rails and locomotives. These locomotives arrived in the spring of 1829, and were the first used in the United States.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was chartered, and work commenced on it in 1828. In the early part of the same year the South Carolina Railroad was chartered by the legislature of that State. It has been claimed that the latter was the first road in the country, undertaken with the intention of of using steam power as a propelling force. It was originally built from Charleston to Hamburg, but afterward extended to Augusta, Ga., and in 1833-34, was the longest railroad in the world, being 130 miles in length. The first locomotive built in this country,* was constructed especially for this road. Its trial trip was made on a small portion of the road out of Charleston, when, according to the Courier of that date, it run "on the wings of the wind, at the varied speed of fifteen to twenty miles an hour; annihilating time and space, and like the renowned John Gilpin, 'leaving all the world behind.'"

The first railroad built in Kentucky, and the first completed west of the Alleghanies, was the old "Lexington & Ohio Railroad," afterward known as the "Lexington & Frankfort," then as the "Louisville, Frankfort & Lexington," and at present, the "Shortline" division of the Louisville & Nashville system. It was originally chartered as the Lexington & Ohio Railroad, and was to extend from Lexington to Portland, on the Ohio River, a village now included in the corporate limits of Louisville. The act of incorporation passed the legislature January 27, 1830, and takes up twelve printed pages in the official proceedings of that body. Among the incorporators were John W. Hunt, John Brand, Richard Higgins, Benjamin Gratz, Luther Stevens, Robert Wickliffe, Leslie Combs, Elisha Warfield, Robert Frazer, James Weir, Michael Fishell, Thomas E. Boswell, George Boswell, Benjamin Taylor, Elisha I. Winter, Joseph Boswell, David Megowan, John Norton, M. C. Johnson and Henry C. Payne. Elisha I. Winter was elected president of the company, but was shortly afterward succeeded by Benjamin Gratz, of Lexington, who, consequently was the second president of the company. Among others who have served as president of the road, are William R. McKee, Thomas Smith, James O. Harrison, W. A. Dudley, James B. Wilder, and Jacob Kreiger, Sr. A preliminary survey followed the incorporation of the company, and was made in April, in order "to ascertain the level, and whether inclined planes and stationary engines would be required, and to furnish the company with an accurate description of the face of the country, to enable them to estimate the cost," etc. The engineer's report of the survey between Lexington and Frankfort, showed the following result: First.—There will be but one inclined plane, about 2,200 feet long, descending one foot in fourteen. All the residue of the road can be graded to thirty feet or less in a mile, which is a fraction over one-fifteenth of an inch rise in one foot. Second.—On that grade there will be no cut deeper than nineteen feet, and but one of that depth. Third.—There will be no embankment over twenty feet high, nor any bridge over thirty feet high. Fourth.—The distance to Frankfort will not be increased two miles in length over the present traveled road. Fifth.—There will be as much rock excavation in the grading as will be required to construct the road. Sixth.—On the thirty feet grade which has been adopted, a single horse is capable of traveling with seven tons' weight, with as much ease as five horses can draw two tons on our present roads in their best condition.

A strong prejudice existed in early times against railroads, and many fair-minded men opposed their construction as being impracticable, and costly beyond their possible value when built. But the friends and advocates of railroads argued that, in almost all places where canals* could be built, railroads could be built also, and at less cost, and that railroads could be built in thousands of places where canals could not be, for the want of water; that they afforded as cheap and safe if not a cheaper and safer mode of communication than canals, and could be traveled in one-third of the time; that they did not interpose any obstacle to the cross-communication of the country, or to the free passage from one part to another of the same farms as canals do; that they may be as eaily crossed as a common turnpike, or other road; that they may be used all the year, while canals are made dry by drouth, or closed by frost; that they are not only constructed at less cost than canals, but are easier kept in repair, and that no improved communication ever invented required so little for repairs as railroads. This system of argument carried the day in favor of the railroad, and left the croakers to croak on to small audiences, while preparations were made for beginning the then important work of building a railroad. The cost of constructing the Lexington & Ohio Railroad was estimated at $1,000,000, a sum that shows railroad engineers were not as extravagant in their estimates for building roads as they are now. The amount was soon subscribed, and the contracts for grading the road between Lexington and Frankfort let, the distance being divided into several divisions to better expedite the work. Railroads were built very different then, and the Lexington & Ohio, it was determined, should be without "flaw or blemish" in its construction. Instead of wooden cross-ties "stone sills" were laid lengthwise, to which the rails were spiked and then soldered. The first stone sill was laid October 22, 1831, at the Lexington end of the road, in the presence of a large assemblage of people, and amid the strains of martial music and the roar of artillery. A description of this event, which occured over half a century ago, will doubtless be of interest to the general reader, and from a chronicle of the time,* the following is taken:

*It was built at the West Point foundry (New York) and completed December 9, 1830, under the supervision of E. L. Miller, Esq. It was called the "Best Friend"—a name more appropriate than entered into the imagination of its projectors at that time.

*It will be remembered that canal building prevailed to excess about this time in the west.

The three military companies were formed for escort duty, and marched to the college grounds, where they met the various societies and individuals. A procession was then formed in the following order: Col. Leslie Combs as marshal and J. R. Coleman as aid, on horseback; Maj.-Gen. Pendleton and staff on horseback; field officers and staff on horseback; officers of the line on foot; Capt. Hunt's artillery in platoons; Gov. Metcalfe supported by Prof. Caldwell, orator of the day, and Rev. W. H. Hall, officiating clergyman; Judges Underwood and Buckner, of the court of appeals; Judge Hickey of the Fayette circuit court; the Hon. R. M. Johnson, R. P. Letcher and T. A. Marshall, members of congress, with several members of the Kentucky legislature; Capt. T. A. Russell, assistant marshal; president and directors of the Lexington & Ohio Railroad Company; Samuel H. Kneas, chief engineer, and the treasurer of the company; contractors and pioneers, with their implements of labor; Capt. Neet's Rifle Guards, in platoons; military band of music; trustees of the town of Lexington and clerk; justices of the Fayette county court and clerk; trustees and professors of Transylvania University; principal of preparatory department and pupils; principal and pupils of Wentworth's Academy; principal and tutors of Shelby Female Academy and pupils; principal and professors of the Eclectic Institute and pupils; strangers; stockholders of the Lexington & Ohio Railroad; Capt. Postlethwaite's light infantry company in platoons; Lieut.-Col. Stephens, assistant marshal; citizens on foot, etc., etc.

A Federal salute was fired at sunrise on the eventful morning, and seven guns when the first stone sill was laid, indicating the seven sections or divisions of the road then under contract. As the procession moved, the various church bells rang out a merry peal, which continued until it reached the place where the ceremony was performed. Arriving upon the ground the military formed a hollow square, within which the civic procession was inclosed. A large number of ladies were present for whom ample accommodations had been made. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Hall, when Elisha I. Winter, Esq., president of the company, handed a hammer to the governor of the State, who drove the nail attaching the first iron rail to the beginning stone sill. The music struck up "Hail Columbia," and afterward "Yankee Doodle," which continued until the artillery ceased firing. Prof. Charles Caldwell then delivered an address, the text of which was internal improvements, after which the crowd dispersed, and the ceremonies were brought to an end.

The work, from this auspicions beginning, progressed steadily but rather slowly. The great pains taken to make a "solid" roadbed, and the labor of laying the stone sills, rendered the work tedious. The contract for preparing and laying the stone sills was given to Holburn & Benson, who received "great praise for executing their work so faithfully, and in a style of beauty and elegance which excited the admiration of all who examined it." By the 1st of August,

*From the Lexington Observer.

1832, one and a half miles of the road were completed, and a "splendid car" put on, and on the 14th the road was formally opened; the car "leaving its moorings at 12 o'clock, with about forty people aboard, among whom were Gov. Metcalfe and other distinguished persons." Six and a quarter miles were completed by the 1st of January, 1833, and "the car" made two regular trips daily for the accommodation of the people. The Lexington Intelligencer, of January 27, 1835, closed a lengthy article on the railroad as follows: "We cannot refrain from congratulating our fellow-citizens of the town and country adjacent upon the new and brilliant prospects which the railroad and the introduction of steam power have opened upon us. It is the beginning of a new era to Kentucky, and to this part of the Union, an era in which the population of the interior country may and will enjoy the commercial facilities which have hitherto been the exclusive property of the seaboard and river population. Interior cities need only to exert their strength and enterprise in constructing works of internal improvement, in order to compete, with certain success, with the most favored of river and seaport towns."

Considerable opposition was encountered from the enemies of railroad building, and from men who believed the project premature and far ahead of the times. They believed like Thomas Jefferson, that the time had not arrived for such improvements. It is told of Thomas Jefferson, that when the New York Grand Canal was begun, Gov. Clinton, in a letter to Mr. Jefferson, asked his opinion of the undertaking. "It is a noble project," replied Mr. Jefferson, "but you are a century too soon." A few years passed, and the great canal was finished, when another letter from Gov. Clinton to Mr. Jefferson announced the fact, with the query: "What do you think of it now?" Mr. Jefferson's reply was: "I now perceive that in regard to your resources and energies, I committed an error of one century in my calculation." Just so it was with the opponents of railroads. They believed the world was not yet old enough for the successful building of railroads, and were ready, at the slightest indication of failure, to exclaim in chorus—"I told you so." Hence, when, one bright day in December, 1835, the iron-horse dashed into Frankfort with a train of cars at his heels, drawn all the way from Lexington, they were forced to admit, that like Jefferson, they had erred in their calculations as to time. Frankfort and Lexington were now connected by rail, and the event was appropriately celebrated by the two cities.

The project, as we have seen, was chartered as the "Lexington & Ohio Railroad," and was so known for several years. In 1847, the legislature issued a charter to the "Louisville & Frankfort Railroad Company," and a company was at once organized under this title, which purchased from the State* that portion of the road between Louisville and Frankfort. The next year (1848), another company was formed, under the title of the "Lexington & Frankfort Railroad Company." This new company purchased from the State the road between Lexington and Frankfort, and in 1851 the two divisions were fully completed and connected, and trains ran through from Lexington to Louisville. This arrrangement was continued until 1857, when the two companies were consolidated, and the title of the road changed to that of the "Louisville, Frankfort & Lexington Railroad." Upon the completion of the Louisville and Cincinnati "Shortline," in the spring of 1869, a branch diverging from the main line at La Grange, and extending to Cincinnati, the title was again changed, this time to the "Louisville, Cincinnati & Lexington Railroad." In 1881 it was purchased by the Louisville & Nashville system, and since that time (and henceforth, perhaps) it has been operated as a division of that immense corporation.

The Charleston & Cincinnati Railroad excited more interest, perhaps, in the early history of railroad enterprise in Kentucky, than any road ever projected in the State. This trunk line was designed to extend from Charleston, S. C., to Cincinnati, Ohio, pass-

*The Lexington & Ohio Railroad was sold at auction in Frankfort, on the 12th of January, 1842, to pay the State the sum of $150,000 and interest, which, as security, she had assumed. In this sale, the State became the purchaser of the road.

ing through Lexington, with diverging lines to Louisville, Paris, Maysville and Newport. A lively interest was manifested in the enterprise, and the indications were favorable at one time for its early completion. Some controversy arose, however, between its friends and supporters, and those of the canal already described (which covered nearly the same ground). And it is possible that if sentiment had been concentrated on the one or the other, it might have proved successful; as it was, both projects failed, though grand in their conception. The idea of connecting the southeastern and northwestern States by a railroad or canal, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Ohio River, half a century ago, was a scheme worthy of the greatest railroad magnates of the present day. The importance with which it was considered, is shown by the following extract*: "The project is a magnificent one, whether viewed in reference to its commercial, geographical, political, civil or social influence. Carried into successful operation, it will form a bond of union between the States immediately concerned, which no ordinary political accidents or combinations can dissolve. Completed, it will make Charleston a great commercial emporium, rivaling, or, at least successfully competing with, her elder sisters, in receiving the northwest trade. And if we could for a moment suppose that New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans and Mobile could allow themselves to be governed by a narrow, selfish and short-sighted policy, we might, from all these sources, anticipate strong and interested opposition to this truly majestic project. This anticipation, however, we will not indulge in, but will believe that the intelligent and patriotic of all sections will rejoice to see the whole country prosper."

In February, 1836, the Charleston & Cincinnati Railroad was chartered by the Kentucky legislature. When the news reached Cincinnati, that the bill had passed, the mayor issued his proclamation for an illumination of the city, and a general rejoicing prevailed. A convention was called to meet at Knoxville, Tenn., on the 4th of July, 1836, in the interest of the road. On the 13th of June, preceding the convention, a meeting was held in Lexington, for the purpose of selecting delegates, and the following gentlemen were chosen: Hon. Robert Wickliffe, Benjamin Taylor, William C. Richardson, Henry C. Payne, Leslie Combs, T. C. Turner, Thomas A Russell and Henry Beard. When the convention convened in Knoxville, nine States were represented. The meeting was characterized by harmony and good feeling, and it was confidently believed the work would proceed without delay. A charter had been granted by the States of South and North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, under the name and title of the "President and Directors of the Charleston & Cincinnati Railroad Company." According to the charter, as granted by Kentucky, it was made obligatory upon the company, when reaching the Kentucky line, "so to construct the road that a branch should be made to Louisville, and the main road be so constructed, as to pass through the city of Lexington, and thence to the Ohio River, opposite Cincinnati; and that another branch or prong of said road be constructed from the city of Lexington to the city of Maysville, on the Ohio River." Resolutions were adopted in the Kentucky legislature, recommending the early construction of the road, as "an enterprise of national importance," and requested their senators and representatives in congress to exert their influence in securing an "appropriation from the national government for the same." As an evidence of the interest taken in the road, Lexington alone subscribed for $100,000 of stock, a liberal sum fifty years ago. By the middle of November, 1836, sufficient stock had been subscribed to admit of the organization of the company, and at a preliminary meeting, John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, was recommended for the presidency of the road. After formally organizing under the title of the "Louisville, Cincinnati & Charleston Railroad," the stockholders held a meeting at Knoxville, on the 9th of January, 1837, to elect officers and directors. The result of the election was as follows: E. D. Mansfield, W. Green and J. W. Bonsall, of Ohio; Robert Wickliffe, William C. Richardson, James Taylor, John W. Tibbatts, J. L. Ludlow and J. B. Casey, of Kentucky; John Williams, J. C. M. Ramsay and Alexander E. Smith, of Tennessee; Robert Y. Hayne, Mitchell King, James Hamilton, Charles Edmondson, J. W. Simpson, B. F. Ellmore, John C. Calhoun, A. Blanding and B. G. Mills, of South Carolina; James Hardy, T. H. Forney and P. Roberts, of North Carolina, directors. Gen. Robert Y. Hayne was unanimously elected president of the company. Surveys were ordered made of the different routes contemplated, and all preliminary steps taken toward inaugurating the work.

*From the Lexington Intelligencer.

An amendment to the charter, designed to relieve the company from their obligation to build the branch to Louisville, was defeated in the legislature at the session of 1836–37. As a matter of interest to herself, Louisville opposed the amendment, and for the time, succeeded in defeating it, whereupon she was assailed by the Lexington press, as having killed the road altogether. Shortly after the defeat of the amendment, however, the proposition was reconsidered, and the amendment finally adopted, thereby revoking that part of the charter applying to the Louisville branch of the contemplated road. But the project had not only attained the summit of its greatness, but had already begun to decline in popularity, and all interest in it finally subsided. It laid down to a Rip Van Winkle sleep, to awake something more than a quarter of a century later, under the name and title of the Cincinnati Southern.

Considerable space has been given to these two railroad projects, because one of them was the first road built in the State, and the other one of the most stupendous schemes of internal improvement conceived of in that early day. Most of the contemplated route of the Charleston & Cincinnati Railroad, has since been covered by the Cincinnati Southern, Kentucky Central and the Knoxville division of the Louisville & Nashville, but had the original road been built, who can tell how different the history of the south might have been. It might have resulted in a reversal of the wealth, influence and importance of the sections, and made the south the great ruling power in the republic, as the north has been, through its vast and improved system of internal communications.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad is the most important work of internal improvement that has been completed in the State. Its construction was a Herculean task, when the character of the country, through which it passes, is taken into consideration. To build a railroad through the chain of the Muldrow Hills was a triumph of engineering skill, and an enduring monument alike to the men who conceived the project and those who accomplished the great work. The tunnels, bridges, trestles, cuts and fills of the Louisville & Nashville Road, are perfect in their construction, and of such magnitude as would have discouraged and appalled any but men of the most determined energy.

The road was chartered March 2, 1850, and may almost be termed a Louisville institution. To the city of Louisville, and the energy and enterprise of its inhabitants, more perhaps than to any other one influence is the State and the country indebted for this great thoroughfare of travel between the north and the south. Confirmatory of this is the following extract from the New York Courier and Enquirer, of August 20, 1851:

The Louisville papers contain two ordinances, passed by the common council of that city, one authorizing a subscription of $1,000,000 for the construction of a railroad from Louisville to Nashville, Tenn., and the other authorising a subscription to the capital stock of the Jeffersonville & Columbus Railroad Company of $200,000. We believe Kentucky is rather deficient in railroads, compared with some of the Southern States, notwithstanding the eligible position of Louisville as a terminus. This movement, therefore, is important to the internal interests of the State, and will add, if carried out, greatly to the growth and future consequence of her metropolis. Combining the two propositions, we perceive the object of the city authorities, which is to intercept the western trade of the central routes of Indiana and Ohio, eastward, and direct such as would naturally flow to the lower Atlantic States, to pass through Louisville, instead of going by way of Baltimore, as is at present the case. Louisville has become emulous of the advantages possessed by Wheeling, and she is (we should infer from this) determined, if the State will not aid her, as Virginia has contributed to the support of the latter, to build her own railroads, and enjoy singly their benefits. We are glad to witness the exercise of a spirit that tends to multiply the facilities of trade, and add to the prosperity of our people, without respect to locality. Kentucky should have abounded with railroads ten years since—Virginia twenty. However, by delaying their measures, they may be the better able to plan, mature and execute them now.

But in a no less degree is Louisville indebted to the Louisville & Nashville Road for its own importance as a great commercial emporium. "To it," says a recent writer, "Louisville owes its commercial influence and prosperity. It made her, with the exception of New Orleans, the leading city of the south; it strengthened the social and commercial ties which bound her to that section; it changed her from a slowly growing, contented provincial town to a progressive and aggressive competitor with larger and richer rivals. For the States of Kentucky and Tennessee it did no less than for Louisville.

The first president of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad was Mr. Levin Shreve, a well-known and prominent business man of Louisville forty years ago. During his administration, work on the road was begun and pushed on toward the Muldrow Hills as rapidly as possible, and the iron laid nearly to that point. But in its earlier history the road met with various financial obstacles, which were not overcome for several years after the work was commenced. Its principal difficulty was in floating its bonds, which a lack of public confidence in its success rendered unsaleable. About this time Hon. James Guthrie and other wealthy citizens of Louisville and of Kenthcky and Tennessee became interested in it, and succeeded in securing a number of county subscriptions, which resulted in the completion of 185 miles of the line to Nashville, to which point it was opened for business in November, 1859. About this time financial troubles again threatened, and the road was in imminent danger of going into bankruptcy, but was saved by the action of the city of Louisville, which took stock to the amount of $1,000,000 and in so doing benefited the entire State.* In the earlier history of the road Helm, Guthrie and the Elder Newcomb were the master spirits connected with it, and to them and their indomitable energy its successful completion is mainly due.

The first two of these gentlemen were statesmen and politicians, as well as financiers, while the last, Mr. H. D. Newcomb, aspired to neither politics nor statesmanship, but was an able financier, and a most accomplished and successful business man. He was a native of Massachusets, and located in Louisville about the year 1833. He was for many years—a quarter of a century or more—one of the leading merchants of Louisville. For twenty years he conducted the largest cotton-mill in the west, and aided much in improving and beautifying his adopted city. He was mainly instrumental in rebuilding the Galt House, one of the best arranged and most elegant hotels in the country, and which cost $1,000,000. He became president of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in 1868, and held the position until his death. Under his administration it became one of the most powerful railroad systems of the south or southwest.

James Guthrie, whose great abilities as a financier were so largely instrumental in carrying the Louisville & Nashville Road through to completion, was a native Kentuckian, and was born near Bardstown, December 5, 1792. He was educated principally at the Bardstown Academy, and, after a few years spent in flat-boating to New Orleans, studied law with John Rowan, was admitted to the bar, and commenced practice in Nelson County. He soon removed to Louisville, and in a short time obtained a lucrative practice. He served repeatedly in both branches of the State legislature, and in 1849, was a member of the constitutional convention, and its presiding officer. He was secretary of the treasury under President Pierce from 1853 to 1857, and a candidate for the nomination to the presidency in 1860, before the National Democratic Convention at Charleston, S. C., but was defeated. He was a delegate to the *Historical sketch of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Peace Conference at Washington in 1861, and also, to the Border State Convention at Frankfort shortly after; he was elected to the United States senate in 1865, but owing to feeble health resigned in 1868. He died in Louisville, March 13, 1869. Mr. Guthrie was a great financier. He amassed a large fortune, and his ability as a financier is illustrated in its management, no less than in that of the national treasury and the affairs of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

John L. Helm became president of the Louisville & Nashville Road in 1854, and by his great energy and excellent business management completed it. He was born in Hardin County, July 4, 1802. When but a lad, he entered the circuit clerk's office as a deputy, and was fortunate in attracting the notice of Gen. Duff Green, a prominent merchant and business man of Elizabethtown, who directed his education. At the age of twenty-one Mr. Helm was admitted to the bar, and in 1826 was elected to the lower house of the legislature. He was re-elected again and again, serving eleven years in the house of representatives and six years in the senate. He was elected lieutenant-governor in 1848 on the Whig ticket with John J. Crittenden, and became governor in 1850 upon the resignation of Mr. Crittenden, who was called to the cabinet of President Fillmore, as his attorney-general. In 1867 he was elected governor on the Democratic ticket, and was inaugurated at his residence in Elizabethtown, September 3d (1867), being too ill at the time to go to Frankfort. He died on the 8th of the same month, and on the 13th the lieutenant-governor, John W. Stevenson, was inaugurated governor as his successor.

No three men ever connected with the Louisville & Nashville Railroad (and certainly no road has been more fortunate in the selection of its executive officers) took more interest in its affairs, or exerted greater energy and ability to make it a successful enterprise, than John L. Helm, James Guthrie and H. D. Newcomb. They did what few others could have done at that time; they built and equipped one of the most important railroads ever built south of the Ohio River. Says the writer already quoted: "Success demonstrates so clearly the wisdom of a great undertaking that we fail to do justice to the men whose wisdom, courage and devotion make success possible. There were many dark hours in the early history of the Louisville & Nashville railroad; when the public lost faith in it; when it seemed too vast an undertaking for that section and that time; when bears and skeptics, who always abound, were assuring a deluded public that failure was inevitable. Through all these years Helm and Guthrie and the elder Newcomb, and their associates, had Louisville and Louisville's credit and the confidence of her citizens with them. It was invaluble; the money subscribed and the endorsements given finally wrought their perfect work and the road was completed."

In 1857, some two years previous to the completion of the main line to Nashville, the company had built a branch to Lebanon. This branch, and the main line, comprised the Louisville and Nashville system, at the breaking out of the late civil war. To the United States government it was worth much more, during each year of the war, than its entire construction had cost. Louisville became the basis of supplies, and of operations of the armies of the United States, and along its lines, built for the benefit of commerce, the battles raged. The vast importance of this north and south trunk line, had been fully demonstrated by the military movements. It was proposed, at one time, to build, for military purposes, a line branching from the main stem to Knoxville. This work would doubtless have been done had not the war closed when it did. A branch to Knoxville was a favorite idea with Mr. Guthrie, but he was never able to accomplish its construction, and it was left for those who came after him to carry out and complete it. Most of the roads in the south were wrecked during the war, but the Louisville & Nashville, as compared to others, was in a healthy condition, financially. Its management, however, knew that its future success depended largely on the reorganization and co-operation of other roads south of it. Mr. Guthrie and Mr. Newcomb boldly pushed the reorganization. The local business of the road was cared for, and encouraged, and active assistance, resulting in time in absolute control, was lent to the roads in Tennessee, and further to the south. In this way the Louisville & Nashville pushed its lines through to Memphis and Montgomery.*

The Bardstown branch, a road in process of construction from Bardstown to Louisville, was purchased in 1865, and became a feeder, and a part of the reorganized system of the Louisville & Nashville. The Richmond branch was opened in 1868, and the same year the Memphis, Clarksville & Louisville Road was leased. Two years after, the Memphis & Ohio Road was secured, and what is now known as the Memphis division was formally opened. Both lines of road composing the Memphis division, were subsequently (in 1871–72), bought by the Louisville & Nashville Company. The Cecilian branch was purchased in 1871; in 1879 the Edgefield & Kentucky Road, and the Evansville, Henderson & Nashville Road were both bought, and, together, form the Kentucky and Tennessee portion of the St. Louis division. The Louisville, Cincinnati & Lexington Road was purchased in 1881, and now forms an important part of the Louisville & Nashville system, connecting it at Cincinnati with all the Eastern lines. The Cumberland & Ohio Road was leased in 1879, and completed from Lebanon to Greensburg, and shortly after many other additions were made. The Pensacola & Selma was secured, then the Mobile & Montgomery was acquired by the purchase of its capital, and a little later the New Orleans & Mobile became a valuable part of the system. There are, also, embraced in the control of the Louisville & Nashville, by lease or ownership, the Nashville & Decatur, the Owensboro & Nashville, the Glasgow branch, and the Western Alabama Roads; and it owns the greater part of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Road's stock, which, with its branches, has 521 miles of line. But these do not comprise all the roads in which the influence of the Louisville & Nashville is felt. With the Central Railroad of Georgia, it controls a large system in that State. To sum up its wealth, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company owns in fee, or through the entire capital stock, thirteen branches, giving an aggregate of 1,437 miles; four divisions, operated under lease, and two by stock majority embrace 433 miles more, and these, with the southern roads, in which it has joint control, give its systems a grand total of 3,034 miles. The road and all its branches are furnished with steel rails, and the equipment, both for frieght and passenger traffic, is first class in every particular, and the equal of any road in the country.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, stretching from ocean to ocean, is an important road to Kentucky, and destined to exert a powerful influence in the development of the State. Traversing its entire length from east to west, with diverging lines at important points, it penetrates the vast coal and mineral and timber regions, and as these are opened up and developed the great value of this trunk line railroad becomes apparent.

The original line of the Chesapeake & Ohio extended from Newport News in Virginia, via Richmond, to the Big Sandy River, and was formed in 1868 by consolidating the Virginia Central and the Covington & Ohio Railroads, comprising a line 512 miles in length. The road became involved financially, and in 1875 passed into the hands of a receiver. In April, 1878, it was sold, and a new company organized with Mr. C. P. Huntington at its head, one of the great railroad capitalists of the present day. The new company expended large sums of money in the reconstruction of all its lines, extending them on the east to Chesapeake Bay, and on the west to Memphis, on the Mississippi River. This formed a continuous line of road 927 miles long, made up of the Chesapeake & Ohio to the Big Sandy River, the Elizabethtown, Lexington & Big Sandy, and Louisville, Frankfort & Lexington to Louisville, and the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern (formerly the Elizabethtown & Paducah), extending from Louisville to Memphis, via Paducah, a distance of 390 miles from Louisville.

The Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern, the title of Mr. Huntington's road west of Louisville, is formed of the old Elizabethtown & Paducah Road,* and the road extending from Paducah to Memphis, known originally as the Paducah & Memphis, which was sold under foreclosure in April, 1877. It was purchased by the bondholders, and reorganized as the Memphis, Paducah & Northern in May, 1878. This and the road from Louisville to Paducah were leased and consolidated by Mr. Huntington, thus forming an important link in his trans-continental line.

* Historical sketch.

The Kentucky Central Railroad was agitated as early as 1848, and was originally known as the "Lexington & Maysville Railroad." In March, 1851, Lexington voted $200,000 toward building it, and in September following voted a like amount to the Lexington & Covington Railroad. The work was completed from Lexington to Paris in 1853, and in the fall of 1854 it was finished, and the road completed between Paris and Covington, and trains ran through to Lexington. The road to Maysville was completed a few years later. The lines of the Kentucky Central are being extended south, and are rapidly covering the last of the old route of the projected Charleston & Cincinnati Road. In the reorganization of the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Kentucky Central passed into the hands of Mr. Huntington, and forms the Cincinnati division of his road.

The Cincinnati Southern is a great trunk line road, extending from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Chattanooga, Tenn., and passing north and south through Kentucky, and through the towns of Williamstown, Georgetown, Lexington, Nicholasville, Danville, Somerset, etc. It was built principally by Cincinnati and Cincinnati capital, and is one of the finest conditioned and equipped roads in the State. Its cost is variously estimated at from $12,000,000 to $20,000,000. The charter was passed by the Kentucky legislature, and the right of way granted through the State in January, 1872, and the road built as soon thereafter as possible. The completion of this great trunk line between north and south is to some extent the culmination of the old project of the Charleston & Cincinnati Railroad, as it covers much of the route designed for that road.

It was the purpose in building the Cincinnati Southern to make it a formidable rival of the Louisville & Nashville Road, and to bring Cincinnati in stronger competition with Louisville, and win her southern trade. The project was not successful. While it certainly excited a stronger competition between Louisville and Cincinnati, the latter did not, as fondly anticipated, completely eclipse Louisville, or materially turn the tide of southern trade. But a few years passed after the completion of the road, when, under a new regime (the Erlanger system), it was running regular trains into Louisville, and that, too, without a dollar's cost to the city.

Northern railroads terminating at Louisville, or extending their lines into the city, are the Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis, now operated by the Pennsylvania Company; the Ohio & Mississippi; the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago, and the St. Louis Air Line. These roads have all been liberally treated by Louisville and Kentucky, and some of them substantially aided by Louisville. Money was given, and given liberally to the Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis and the St. Louis Air Line, and at a time when they most needed it. These roads afford Louisville, Kentucky and the south close connection with St. Louis, Chicago and the east.

In addition to the railroads mentioned there are others, mostly local roads, now being built and still others in contemplation, which, doubtless, will be under contract in a few years. The most important of these, perhaps, are the Kentucky Union Railroad and the Ohio River Railroad, the first now in course of construction and the latter a projected road of considerable importance, designed to run down the river, tapping the principal towns between Louisville and Paducah. The road has been chartered by the legislature, a company organized and stock subscribed. Several routes, or parts of routes, have been surveyed, and although the project is now lying dormant, it is but a question of time when it will be revived and the road built. The growing demands of the rich section of country through which it is to pass, must sooner or later compel its construction.

*This road was originally chartered in February, 1854, as the Louisville, Paducah & Southwestern.

The Kentucky Union Railroad was originally chartered in 1854, and re-incorporated in 1880. It extends in a southeasterly course from Lexington to the Virginia State line through some of the richest agricultural and mineral regions of Kentucky. Work is in progress at the present time, and the energy of the men in control of the project will insure its ultimate completion, and through it the development of a mineral section of the State* hitherto possessing few internal improvements or facilities of transportation beyond the ordinary road wagon. So it is with other railroad projects in different parts of the State. The fine timbered valleys, the rich mineral regions, the vast agricultural areas, and the stock-producing portions of the State must soon make the construction of additional railroads an absolute demand of commerce.

The railroad facilities of Kentucky are thus becoming, and must continue to become, more and more extended every year. Its lines at four different points on the Ohio River connect with northern, eastern and western roads. At two of these points the river is spanned by superb bridges, and at a third a bridge is in process of construction (where trains are now ferried over), and will soon be completed; at the fourth trains cross regularly by improved ferriage. At Cincinnati the Kentucky Central (Chesapeake & Ohio), the Cincinnati Southern, the "Short-line" division of the Louisville & Nashville connect by bridges across the river with the Little Miami, the "Bee Line" the "Pan-handle" (Pennsylvania Company), the Baltimore & Ohio Roads, etc., etc. At Louisville, Kentucky and southern roads, by means of one of the longest and most magnificent railroad bridges in the world, connect with the Ohio & Mississippi, the Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis, the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago and the St. Louis Air Line; at Henderson the St. Louis division of the Louisville & Nashville crosses, and at Evansville and St. Louis make northern and eastern connections. The Illinois Central and the Mobile & Ohio pass north and south through the "Purchase" district of Kentucky, crossing the Ohio River at Cairo, Ill., where they connect with the St. Louis & Iron Mountain, the Texas & Pacific, the Cairo & St. Louis, and with the Wabash system. A few years more, and energy and enterprise will render the Ohio River no serious obstacle to railway traffic, and trains will cross it to and fro without even slacking their rate of speed.

The railroad bridge across the Ohio River at Louisville is claimed to be the second longest railroad bridge in the world. Its construction was the culmination of a project that originated more than fifty years ago A bridge over the falls of the Ohio was an enterprise, that, if it did not originate with James Guthrie, was long a favorite project of his. As early as 1831–32 a charter was granted by the Kentucky legislature authorizing the formation of a company "to construct a permanent bridge across the Ohio at the falls." Through the influence of James Guthrie, Samuel Gwathney and Daniel McAllister, who visited Indianapolis for the purpose, the passage of the charter by the Indiana legislature was secured at its session in January, 1832. Though the matter was agitated for several years it was finally abandoned for the time. After the close of the war the necessity for closer railroad communications between the sections revived the project, and the required legislation was secured both in Kentucky and Indiana, and the work commenced. It was completed, and the first passenger train crossed over the bridge on the 18th of February, 1870. The State officers and members of the legislature had been invited by the board of trade and city council of Louisville to be present at its formal opening, and most of them accepted the invitation and participated in the interesting proceedings. Mr. Guthrie lived to see his favorite project of spanning the river by a great bridge in process of construction, but died about a year before its completion.

*The mountainous portion of the State beyond the limits of the Blue Grass region.

A bridge across the Ohio at Cincinnati was contemplated as early as 1815. but no such enterprise was actually inaugurated until 1856, when the wire suspension bridge between Covington and Cincinnati was commenced. It was completed and opened to the public on the 1st of December, 1866. The structure is a superb model of excellence, and a triumph of mechanical skill and genius, and cost, in round numbers, about $2,000,000. It has a passage way for vehicles and street cars, and walks for foot passengers. The river is also spanned by a railroad bridge—a substantial iron structure—between Newport and Cincinnati. It was opened in 1872, and trains of the Kentucky and southern roads, by this means, run regularly into the city of Cincinnati.

There is in the course of construction at this time (1885), and about completed, a bridge across the Ohio, between Louisville and New Albany, Ind. Another at Henderson, Ky., has been finished within the past few weeks, for the passage of trains. The bridge at Louisville is to have a railroad track, a passage way for vehicles, street cars, etc., and a walk-way for foot passengers; that at Henderson is a railroad bridge only, and was built, principally, by the St. Louis division of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Among the important works of internal improvement are the charitable institutions of the State. They were established and are principally supported by legislative appropriations, and consist of asylums for the insane, the blind, deaf mutes, feeble-minded children, etc. There are, in the State, three asylums for the insane, located respectively at Lexington, Hopkinsville and Anchorage; the asylum for deaf mutes is at Danville; that for feeble-minded children at Frankfort, and that for the education of the blind is at Louisville.

The Eastern Insane Asylum at Lexington was founded in 1816, and was the first institution of the kind established in the western country, and is believed to have been the second State asylum opened in the United States. It was originally known as "Fayette Hospital," and was inaugurated by private individuals. Chief among the projectors of this great public charity, was Andrew McCalla, one of the early citizens of Lexington. He was assisted in his benevolent work by Alexander Parker, John W. Hunt, George Trotter, Thomas January, Lewis Sanders, Samuel Trotter, John Bradford, J. D. Young, David Williamson, Thomas H. Pindell, William Morton, John Pope, E. Warfield, Daniel Bradford, J. Postlethwaite, L. McCullough, John H. Morton, John Hart, James Weir, Robert H. McNair, Samuel Ayers, Thomas Tibbats, and others. They were incorporated early in 1816, under the name of "The Contributors to the Fayette Hospital." On the 1st of March, they organized under the charter, and shortly after purchased the "Sinking Spring" property, on which the present buildings are located.

The corner-stone of the building was laid June 30, 1817, with appropriate ceremonies, and in the presence of a large assemblage of people. The proceedings concluded with an oration delivered by Henry Clay. Before the building was completed, a financial crisis overtook the benevolent projectors of the enterprise, and in 1822, it was deemed advisable to tender the property to the State. The next year the State purchased it, changed its title to the "Kentucky Eastern Lunatic Asylum," and appropriated $10,000 for its benefit. The institution was formally opened May 1, 1824. For twenty years the physicians in charge were Dr. S. Theobolds, Dr. Louis Decognets and others, assisted by the faculty of Transylvania University. In 1844, the management was changed, and Dr. John R. Allen was made superintendent under the new order of things. The legislature appropriated $150,000 in 1867 to the asylum, and its capacity was extended. Dr. W. S. Chipley succeeded Dr. Allen in 1855, as superintendent, a position he held for fourteen years. Since then there have been several superintendents, all of whom have been able physicians, and have discharged their duties with ability. In 1873, upon the establishment of the Anchorage asylum, the name of the Lexington asylum was changed to "First Kentucky Lunatic Asylum." Since 1822, the State has appropriated nearly $1,000,000 to the institution, and the lot of ground on which the original building was erected, has been increased to 300 acres of fine blue grass lands. Every convenience and comfort are afforded the patients, and the institution ranks highly among its class in the United States.

The Western Lunatic Asylum is located in Christian County, about two miles from Hopkinsville. It was established by an act of the legislature passed February 28, 1848. The growth of settlements in the State, and the increase of population, necessitated the measure as a matter of convenience, both as to capacity and locality. The asylum at Lexington could not accommodate all applicants, and before the era of railroads, it required a long journey to reach it from the southwestern portion of the State, and thus made it necessary to have a similar institution in that section. The "Spring Hill" tract of land, containing 383 acres, and lying on the turnpike road east of Hopkinsville, was purchased for $1,971.50. The citizens refunded this sum to the State, and in addition paid $2,000 toward the erection of buildings. In 1849, there was expended $43,052; in 1850, $43,-484. The legislature in 1848, appropriated $15,000; in 1849, $20,000; in 1850, $45,000; in 1851, $35,000; in 1852, $43,000; in 1854, $44,017: a total of $202,017. The first patients were received on the 18th of September, 1854, and by the 1st of December, 1857, 208 had been admitted. Dr. S. Annan was the first superintendent, and under his care the institution was well managed.

The main building was destroyed by fire, November 30, 1861, "which caught from sparks from a chimney falling upon the shingle roof." There were, at the time of the fire, 210 patients in the institution, all of whom escaped uninjured, except one, who fastened himself in his room and obstinately resisted all efforts to rescue him, and finally perished in the flames. The court house and other buildings in Hopkinsville were tendered the superintendent for the use of the unfortunate inmates, and everything done by the officials and the people to render the patients comfortable until the asylum could be rebuilt. Twenty-three log-cabins were erected temporarily, at a cost of $90 each, and into these the patients were removed. The legislature in February, 1861, made an appropriation to commence rebuilding, and to January 1, 1867, had appropriated in all $258,-930. Add to this the sum of $145,420, the value of the land and other buildings on it, makes the total value of the property then (1867) $404,350, with accommodations for 325 patients.

This asylum bears the name of being one of the best managed institutions of the kind in the United States. It has been in charge of Dr. James Rodman, the present able superintendent, since 1863—about twenty-two years. In October, 1871, there had been received the total number of 1,273 patients, of whom 321 were then in the asylum.

The Central Lunatic Asylum is located at Anchorage, a beautiful little village in Jefferson County, twelve miles from the city of Louisville. Like the Hopkinsville asylum, its establishment was due to the inability of the Eastern and Western Asylums to accommodate the insane of the State. It was completed, and opened for patients but a few years ago, and at present it is pretty well filled. Rumors of mismanagement recently caused a legislative investigation of the institution, and a resignation of the superintendent early in the year 1884. He was succeeded by Dr. H. K. Pusey, whose management of it has won the approbation of all interested in its welfare.

The Institution for Deaf Mutes is located at Danville. It was established by an act of the legislature January 7, 1823, and is claimed to be fourth of its kind, in the order of establishment, in the United States. The legislature appropriated $3,000 to aid it, and $100 for each pupil, and in 1824, appropriated $3,000 toward the erection of buildings. In 1852, $3,000 per annum was appropriated for the support of the institution, and in 1865, this sum was increased to $6,000. To this may be added extra appropriations for clothing for the indigent, and for each pupil, thus giving the asylum a very fair endowment. The building and grounds are fine, and well adapted to the purposes for which they are used. The school session continues through the whole year, with the exception of July and August. The branches taught are reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, history, original composition, Scripture lessons in books; and by lectures on physical geography, chemistry and natural philosophy. A colored department has been added, and the deaf mutes of that race now receive liberal educational training.

The Kentucky Institution for the Education and Training of Feeble-minded Children is located near Frankfort. The following sketch of the institution was furnished for this work by Dr. Stewart, superintendent:

The Kentucky Institution for the Education and Training of Feeble-minded Children was organized in 1860. An act was passed by the legistature on February 11th, of that year, appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of lands and the erection of suitable buildings.

A tract of land containing sixty-five acres, belonging to Dr. Lloyd, located within one mile of Frankfort, was purchased for $6,500, and the school immediately started in a small frame building on the grounds. Dr. James Rodman, now superintendent of the Western Lunatic Asylum at Hopkinsville, was elected first superintendent, and the first child was received on August 16, 1860. Dr. Rodman resigned February 11, 1863, and Rev. William McD. Abbott was elected to fill his place. He was succeeded by Dr. E. H. Black, who was elected superintendent March 13, 1868, and served until February 25, 1878, when the present superintendent, Dr. John Q. A. Stewart, was appointed by Gov. James B. McCreary.

The plan of the building was to consist of a main building and east and west wings. The main building was commenced October 28, 1860, and completed and occupied the following year. It had capacity for about fifty children and was soon filled. Additions were made to it from time to time, and in 1870 the west wing was completed and occupied. To complete the original plan the east wing will have to be built.

There have been in all about $65,000 appropriated for buildings and grounds, and it will cost about $30,000 more to complete the buildings according to the original designs. Its capacity will then be increased to 250 children.

There are now 156 children in the institution, and are maintained principally by the State. An appropriation of $150 per caput per annum is made for their support.

The feature of industrial education has been introduced into the institution under the administration of Dr. Stewart. It is the first institution of the kind in the United States to adopt industrial education, and the experiment promises to be remunerative and pleasing. By this means physical culture will be made productive, and the pupils prepared to earn a livelihood when discharged from the institution. The apprenticeship to this system is made to contribute to the health and happiness of the amateur artisans, by strengthening their physical powers, and improving by engaging their minds in useful pursuits. In a short time all the carpentry needed by, and all the shoes used in, the institution will be supplied by the craft of the pupils. The girls are being taught all the domestic arts, including hand and machine sewing. This industrial education is not permitted to interfere with the intellectual studies of the children, but is made auxilary to them.

The Kentucky Institution for the Education of the Blind is located in the eastern suburbs of the city of Louisville. The institution was established by act of the legislature in 1842. The preamble to the original act recognizes the fact that the blind were equally entitled with the seeing children to the benefit of the school fund. The appropriation of $10,000 was made, to be paid out of the interest on certain bonds held by the board of education. These bonds had been issued fraudulently by the agent of the State of Kentucky, and at the date of the act referred to it was seriously doubted whether these bonds thus fraudulently issued would be recognized by the State. At that time efforts were made by agents of the State to trace the bonds, and thus relieve the State from their payment. The donation, therefore, to the institution for the blind was deemed of very doubtful value.

It is true, as a matter of history, the legislature was very incredulous as to the feasibility of educating the blind, and the good to result therefrom. This is illustrated by the provisions contained in the act that the school should be established and kept up for twelve months before the very doubtful appropriation could be collected. This was effected, and the school sustained for twelve months by the liberality of the people of Louisville. The appropriation of $10,000 was ultimately collected. It was the only one ever charged to or paid out of the public school fund.

The same individual was the author of the acts establishing the system of common schools and the Kentucky Institution for the Education of the Blind. No specific provision was made in the system of common schools for the education of the blind, and whilst in drafting the act he recognized their equal claims with the other children of the State on the common school fund; and at no subsequent time in his numerous applications to the legislature for aid to the institution, did he ever ask for or receive an appropriation payable from the common school fund. No special tax has ever been levied for its support. At no time has the institution been subjected to the jurisdiction or supervision of the superintendent of public instruction. It is now and always has been one of the public charities of the State, and has been liberally sustained out of its common treasury.

KENTUCKY INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

The establishment of the school was aided by the kind efforts of Dr. S. G. Howe, the superintendent of the institution for the blind in Massachusetts, and of Mr. William Chapin, the superintendent of the institution for the blind in Ohio, who, with some of their pupils, gave an exhibition before the legislature at Frankfort, and several exhibitions subsequently in Louisville. At these exhibitions, which were largely attended by the citizens, much interest was manifested, and a committee of twenty-one appointed to collect money to support the school for one year. The efforts of the committee were successful, and the school was opened May 9, 1842, on Sixth Street, west side, between Walnut and Chestnut, with Bryce M. Patten, superintendent, Miss Maria Howe, matron, and Otis Patten, one of the pupils from Dr. Howe's school in Boston, as a teacher.

In the year 1844, in virtue of an appropriation made by the legislature, a lot of land was purchased and a building erected on the south side of Broadway, between First and Second Streets. In May, 1847, the ladies of Louisville interested in the school gave a tea party, the proceeds of which, amounting to $500, were spent in furnishing the house. On the 29th of September, 1851, this building was destroyed by fire. The trustees of the University of Louisville at once very liberally tendered the use of the large and commodious edifice erected for the collegiate and law departments of the university, so that the operations of the school were hardly interrupted by the calamity. The legislature promptly made an appropriation for a new building and for the purchase of more extensive grounds. A commissioner was appointed by the governor of the State to select grounds for the institution, and the present site was chosen and a new building begun. On the 8th of October, 1855, it was far enough advanced to remove the school to its new quarters, where it remained with a constantly increasing prosperty until November, 1862, when the building was seized by the medical authorities of the United States army for hospital purposes, and retained until an appeal to the president resulted in a restoration of the building to the State. During this compulsory exit, which lasted five months, the school occupied the building on the workhouse road belonging to the Alexander estate. Since that time the occupation of the present building has been uninterrupted.

The present superintendent, Mr. B. B. Huntoon, an educator of long experience, has been in charge for years. He is an efficient man, and under his administration the institution has become a very model of excellence in its every department.

The American Printing House for the Blind, attached to the institution, and located upon a part of the same grounds, was originally chartered by the legislature in 1860. Its facilities for printing have been increased from time to time, until to-day it is the most extensive establishment of the kind in the world. It is the standard printing house for the blind in the United States, and in addition orders for books are constantly being received from Europe and the Canadas. The number of books printed each year runs up into the hundreds, and the demand is rapidly increasing. National aid is received under an act of congress passed March 3, 1879. The annual report of the trustees for that year says:

> By the provisions of this act the American Printing House for the Blind receives a sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars a year, with which to supply every public institution for the education of the blind in the United States with embossed books and tangible apparatus, according to the number of its pupils. The entire sum is to be expended in furnishing books and apparatus, and none of the money may be used in the erection or leasing of buildings. At a meeting of the board of trustees, held April 4, 1879, the trust imposed on them by the act was formally accepted.

Prior to this appropriation by congress, the American Printing House for the Blind had been mainly sustained by the beneficent wisdom of the State of Kentucky, as an indispensable means in the education of her own blind. An act of the legislature, passed soon after the printing house was established, appropriated $5 annually for every blind person in the State, according to the United States' census reports, to "aid the institution in printing books in raised letters for the blind, and in furnishing the same gratuitously to the indigent blind, and at cost to others, in accordance with the provisions of the charter of the said printing house for the blind." Other appropriations were made at different times, as the printing house needed them. Indeed, no State in the Union has been more liberal than Kentucky in support of her public charities.

A new printing house has recently been erected. It stands in a corner of the spacious grounds of the Institution for the Education of the Blind, and is an elegant brick building, three stories high, finished off with all the modern improvements. The printing presses run by steam, and although the orders for books are many, and are yearly increasing, the facilities for printing are equal to the demand.

AMERICAN PRINTING HOUSE FOR THE BLIND—LOUISVILLE.

The material wealth and resources of Kentucky are second to no State in the Union. With an area of 37,680 square miles, it contains some of the finest agricultural lands in North America, and its productions comprise almost everything grown in the temperate zone, but are chiefly wheat, corn, oats, grasses, tobacco, cotton, hemp, fruits, etc., etc. No country in the world is more famous for its fine stock; Kentucky thoroughbred horses and shorthorn cattle command higher prices than those of any other section. Coal, of an excellent quality, is found in many portions of the State, notably in the eastern and western portions; also beds of the finest cannel coal lie in certain localities. The State is rich in deposits of lead and iron ore, particularly the latter, and of salt; an excellent quality of marble and lithographic stone are found in the hilly and mountainous regions. With the "soil full of bread, and the earth full of minerals; with an upper surface of food, and underlayer of fuel; with perfect natural drainage, and abundant springs and streams, and navigable rivers; mid-way between the forests of the north and the fruits of the south," Kentucky is rich in her agricultural, animal and mineral productions, as well as highly favored in her geographical position.

The following article, on the material resources of Kentucky, was written by Hon. John R. Proctor, State geologist, for the Encyclopædia Britannica, and is published in this work by permission:

The area of the State has been variously estimated at from 37,000 to 40,000 square miles. The surface is an elevated plateau sloping from the great Appalachian uplift on the southeast to the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers on the north and west. Only that portion of the State, including and lying between Pine or Laurel Mountain, and the Cumberland range, may be said to partake of the mountain structure. These parallel ranges have an elevation of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet above sea-level, whilst the mountains in the Cumberland Valley between these ranges, have an elevation of 3,500. The Cumberland River, near where it passes through a break in Pine Mountain, is, at low-water mark, 960 feet above the sea. Some of the hills, immediately to the north, are as high as Pine Mountain, gradually decreasing in height to the western edge of the Appalachian coal field, where the greatest elevation is less than 1,600 feet above the sea. The eastern coal field, with an area over 10,000 square miles, has an elevation of 650 on the Ohio River, to 1,400 feet of the southwestern edge of the Tennessee line, and 3,500 feet on the southeastern border of the State. The great central, or "Blue Grass region," has an area of about 10,000 square miles, and an elevation of from 800 to 1,150 feet. Although elevated several hundred feet above the drainage level, the surface is that of a gently undulating plateau, with a pleasing topography. The Upper Silurian and Devonian, with an area of about 2,500 square miles, have an elevation of 450 on the northwest, and 800 on the northeastern end, to 1,100 feet where these formations curve around the Lower Silurian on the southwest. In this region are wide stretches of very level country, often with insufficient drainage. Around this central region extends, from the mouth of Salt River to the mouth of the Scioto, a continuous ridge, known as Muldrow's Hill, King's Mountain, Big Hill, and other local names, having an abrupt escarpment on its inner circle, and sloping away from the central uplifted dome of the Blue Grass region, as a broken plateau on the east, and an almost level plateau on the west, where the subcarboniferous limestone determines the topography. This range of hills is one of the prominent features in the State. The subcarboniferous has an area of about 10,000 square miles, with an elevation of from 350 to 600 feet on the southwestern, to 950 in the central region. In the eastern portion of this formation the streams have cut deep gorges in the limestone, but in its central part only the larger streams are open to daylight, and most of the drainage is subterraneous, which gives to that region a peculiar topography—the surface being a series of slight round or oval depressions, through which the surface water escapes to the streams below. Whenever the small passage way, leading downward from one of these sinks, becomes closed, a "pond" is formed. In this formation are the numerous caverns, for which this State is noted. The western coal field has an area of about 4,000 square miles, and an elevation of from 400 feet along the Ohio River, to 850 feet in its southeastern portion. The Quaternary, with an area of 2,500 square miles, has an elevation of about 280 feet on the river bottom lands, and from 350 to 450 on the uplands. The average elevation for the entire State is over 1,000 feet above the sea, and the numerous streams penetrating all portions have cut their channels deep enough to secure ample drainage, and exemption from the dangers of floods, with the exception of very limited areas.

The State has a river boundry of 813 miles of navigable streams:—the Chatterawha or Big Sandy on the east for 120 miles, the Ohio on the north for 643 miles, and the Mississippi on the west for 50 miles. The Chatterawha, Licking, Kentucky, Cumberland, and Tennessee Rivers have their sources in the Appalachain coal-field, and flow through the State to the Ohio River. The Green and Tradewater Rivers drain the western coal-field. Kentucky has many hundred miles of navigable rivers, connecting with the Mississippi system and furnishing a most advantageous means of cheap transport for coal, timber, etc. A system of river improvement, begun by the State some years ago, by which the Green and Barren Rivers from Bowling Green downward, and also the lower portion of the Kentucky River, were made continuously navigable, is being prosecuted still further by the United States government. It is now possible to float down logs, rafts, flat boats, etc., from almost the fountain heads of the rivers.

The climate is very mild and salubrious. The mean annual temperature ranges in different parts of the State from 50° to 55° Fahrenheit. The extreme range is less than in the States north and west. The lowest record at the United States Signal Service station during the exceptionally cold months of December, 1880, and January, 1881, was −8°. During the very hot summer of 1881, the maximum temperature was greater as far north as Chicago than in Kentucky. Cattle remain upon the pasture during the entire winter, with but little additional food, and there is seldom a day, winter or summer, when a man may not perform a full day's work in the open air. The healthfulness of the climate is attested by the low death-rate, and by the strength and vigor of the population. The tabulated measurements of the United States volunteers during the civil war show that the soldiers born in Kentucky and Tennessee exceed all others in height, weight, circumference of head, circumference of chest, and ratio of weight to stature. The speed and endurance of the Kentucky horse, and the superior development of all kinds of domestic animals, are well known. The annual rain-fall ranges in various parts of the State from forty-five to fifty inches, and is probably still higher in the Cumberland Mountains.

With the exception of the more recent formations in the portion of the State west of the Tennessee River, and along the valleys of some of the streams, Kentucky is composed entirely of Paleozoic strata, having present all of the various groups found in the Ohio Valley, from the calciferous sandrock (3a of Dana's Table of Formations) to and including the carboniferous. The united thickness of the various groups is not great in Kentucky—probably not aggregating over 5,000 feet. The entire State is included within the area of the great Appalachian uplift. In the southeast the disturbance is greater, the strata often being inclined at a high angle, the successive undulations gradually diminishing toward the northwest. This disturbance in the southeast is emphasized by the Great Pine Mountain fault extending parallel to the axis of the Appalachian uplift, entirely through the southeastern portion of the State and bringing to the surface in the coal-measures rocks as low as the Clinton group of the Upper Silurian. The axis of the greatest geological elevation in the State is parallel to the above, and passes in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction through the counties of Montgomery, Clark, Madison, Garrard, Jessamine and Boyle, shown on the map by the deflexion of the Kentucky River from its general course toward the Ohio River. This uplift brings to the surface the lowest rocks exposed in the State, the "bird's eye" limestone of the Trenton (4a of Dana), and the dolomite, known as "Kentucky River marble," including what is probably the equivalent of the calciferous sandrock of the New York section. These lowest rocks of the Kentucky section form a triangular area having its depressed apex northwest of Frankfort, and its elevated base in the counties named above. Through these formations, having a thickness of over 400 feet, the picturesque gorge of the Kentucky River has been cut. Next in ascending order we have 150 feet of blue fossiliferous limestone, containing characteristic forms of the Trenton of New York, and 800 feet of limestone and shales containing the fossils of the Hudson River or Cincinnati groups (4c of Dana). These groups make up the well-known "Blue Grass" region of Kentucky, celebrated for the fertility of soil, high agricultural development, and superiorty of the horses and other domestic animals produced. The soils of the most fertile portion of this region are derived from the 150 feet immediately above the bird's eye limestone. These rocks are very rich in phosphate of lime, and with careful tillage and proper rotation of crops the lands are not exhausted by cultivation. The blue limestones of central Kentucky are very prolific in fossil forms.

Surrounding this central region are the rocks of the Upper Silurian, averaging in thickness about 100 feet. East of Louisville this formation is about twenty-five miles wide, and in eastern central Kentucky about ten miles wide, decreasing in thickness and in superficial extent toward the southwestern portion. The rocks are mostly magnesian limestone, rich in fossil forms, of which the most characteristic are the beautiful chain corals. The soils of this formation are less fertile than those derived from the blue shell limestone and marly shales of the Lower Silurian. Above the latter formation, and forming the outer portion of the semi-circle or irregular triangle extending around the great central uplift, are the corniferous limestones of the Devonian (9c of Dana). The principal exposure is seen at the falls of the Ohio below Louisville, at low water presenting probably the most beautiful and extensive natural cabinet of corals in the world—a reef of corals perfectly preserved in minutest structure, and of exquisite beauty. The soils derived from these rocks are almost of equal fertility to the best soils of the blue limestone, and the topography is equally pleasing to the eye. The next formation in order is the black shale (10c of Dana), of the Devonian, with a thickness of about 150 feet in the northeast and decreasing gradually to the south and west. This formation is peculiar from the high percentage of petroleum contained in the shale. Before the discovery of oil-wells, oil was distilled from these shales, and the oil in the productive wells of Kentucky is derived from the same source. Where this shale determines the topography, the lands are generally flat, often with insufficient drainage, and are not so productive as analyses would seem to warrant. Doubtless underdraining will increase the yield.

The subcarboniferous rocks, consisting of the several groups identified by fossil remains with the Waverly, Keokuk, Warsaw, St. Louis, and Chester groups (13a, 13b and 13c of Dana), composed of sandstones, shales, and limestones, with a total thickness of over 1,000 feet, cannot here be described in detail. Muldrow's Hill, representing the retreating escarpment of formations which formerly extended over the central Blue Grass region, is composed of these rocks, capped at Big Hill in Madison County with the carboniferous conglomerate. The subcarboniferous limestone region of western and southern Kentucky, drained by the Green and Cumberland Rivers, is characterized for the most part by an excellent soil, well adapted to the growth of Indian corn, wheat, barley, and other cereals, producing a very fine quality of tobacco, and certain grasses in great perfection. This formation is noted for the numerous caverns of large size and great beauty—the best known being the celebrated Mammoth Cave in Edmonson County, which is the largest known cavern in the world. Here many miles of subterranean passages have been excavated by the eroding action of water charged with carbonic acid, assisted in places by the action of the atmosphere. The caverns are beautified by columns and stalagmites formed by the deposition of carbonate of lime from the percolating waters, and by exfoliation of sulphate of lime, taking the form of flowers, rosettes, and other shapes, rendered more beautiful by their power of reflecting light.*

The detailed survey of the carboniferous strata of Kentucky is not yet completed, but enough is known to justify the assertion that the total area in the State is over 14,000 square miles—10,000 square miles of the Appalachian coalfield and 4,000 square miles of the western or Illinois coalfield. In the eastern field two workable coals are found below, and twelve above the carboniferous conglomerate. The eastern field is remarkable for the thickness of some of the coal strata, and the purity of coals, for the large area of excellent cannel coals, and for the ease with which the coals may be mined, being mostly elevated above the drainage level. The thickest portion of the measures is in the synclinal trough between the Pine and Cumberland Mountains—there being a vertical thickness of over 2,200 feet of coal-measure rocks above the drainage level. In the southeastern portion of the eastern field an excellent coking coal has been traced over a wide area. This coal ranges from four feet to eight feet in thickness, can be mined cheaply, and has a very low percentage of ash and sulphur. The western coal-field is a broad synclinal, its axis almost parallel to the general direction of Green River, crossed by undulations, the axes of which extend from northeast to southwest. No workable coal has been opened below the conglomerate, which is thinner than in eastern Kentucky. Twelve coals are present in the measures above the conglomerate. Some of these coals are of excellent quality, although the percentage of sulphur is larger than in the best of the eastern Kentucky coals. The soils of the coal measures are variable in quality. Some of the most productive lands in the State are in the western coal-field. In the eastern field are very fertile valleys, and the uplands in the Cumberland Valley are quite productive. Even the poorest of the coal-measure soils are well adapted to certain grasses and fruits, and will yield good returns from intelligent culture.

*For historical description of Mammoth Cave, see Appendix A, Note 32.

There only remain to be noticed the Quaternary strata. The region west of the Tennessee River, and the level plains bordering the principal rivers and above high water level, are composed of a homogeneous buff-colored, silicious loam, known as the "bluff" or loess formation (20b of Dana). This is, with the exception of the alluvial "bottoms" along the rivers, the most recent formation in Kentucky. The deposit has a thickness of from 40 to 50 feet. Owing partly to the presence of numerous land and fresh-water shells (Helix, Cyclostoma, Pupa, Cyclas, etc.), this formation is highly calcareous, giving, from an average sample, 9.6 per cent of lime, and the soils are of marked fertility. This bluff loam rests upon a coarse gravel, varying in thickness from a few inches to thirty feet, composed mainly of water-worn pebbles from the carboniferous conglomerate, and slightly water-worn angular pebbles of chert and hornstone from the lower subcarboniferous and corniferous groups, and coarse angular sand. Intermingled throughout are silicified fragments of many of the Paleozoic fossils to be found in the Ohio Valley. In descending order are beds of white sand and clay, and shales of the Eocene (Tertiary), only slightly exposed in the extreme western part of the State, where the streams have cut deepest.

THE ENTRANCE TO MAMMOTH CAVE (LOOKING OUT).

Nowhere in the State, have evidences of glacial action been found. Over the uplifted Blue Grass region, are often thick deposits of what has been called drift material; but such deposits are composed altogether of silicified remains from the several formations above the Lower Silurian, and the evidences are conclusive that they are the remains of rocks decomposed in situ.

No precious metals have been discovered in Kentucky. The amount of coal hitherto mined has not been as large as the quantity and quality in the State would justify, but the increased facilities of transport have stimulated production, and the output will increase from year to year. In 1870, the amount mined was 150,582 tons, and in 1880, 1,050,095 tons, a larger percentage of increase than any other State in the Union. Iron ores of good quality abound in various parts of the State. In Bath County is a large deposit of Clinton ore, similar to the red fossil ore occurring in this formation from New York to Alabama. The same ore probably is in position along the western base of Pine Mountain. Along the southeastern border of the State it extends for many miles in Tennessee and Virginia, with a thickness of from eighteen inches to seven feet, where the very near proximity to the excellent coking coal of Kentucky, renders it of peculiar value in determining the future development of that portion of the State. In the Cumberland Valley of Western Kentucky, a high grade limonite is abundant in the subcarboniferous limestone, and in eastern Kentucky, a superior iron ore rests upon the top of the St. Louis group of this formation. Excellent carbonates and limonites abound in the eastern coal-measures and have been mined extensively in the northeastern part of the State. In the lower coal-measures of western Kentucky, a number of iron ore strata ranging in thickness from a few inches to five feet.

Galena, associated with sulphate of baryta, occurs in veins in the lower members of the blue limestone of central Kentucky, and also in the subcarboniferous strata in the lower Cumberland Valley, where it is associated with valuable deposits of fluorspar.

Petroleum has been produced from wells in Barren County, for a number of years. The oil is here derived from the Devonian black shale. Heavy lubricating oil is produced from the same formation in Wayne County. There is a wide area in the State, where petroleum may be obtained by boring.

Salt-brine is obtained from wells in the eastern coal field, and in the subcarboniferous limestone of western Kentucky.

Fire and pottery clays abound in the coal measures; pottery clays occur in the surface deposits in valleys of central Kentucky, and in the flat lands where the soil is derived from the decomposition of the Devonian black shale, and the argillaceous shales of the Waverly group. In the Tertiary shales below the gravel bed west of the Tennessee River, are pottery-clays, and fire-clays occur in great abundance.

Building stones of great variety abound in almost every section.

Forests.—Probably two-thirds of the State is yet covered by virgin forests of valuable timbers. At the time of the settlement of the State by the whites it was covered by forests, excepting a portion of the southwestern part, known as the "Barrens," which was a prairie, covered with tall grass, known as "barren-grass." Here only the roots of certain hardy trees had withstood the annual burning of the dry grasses; from these roots, "sprouts" grew every year, only to be destroyed by fire, and the roots or base grew horizontally under the soil. When the country was settled and the fires checked, the saplings springing from these roots soon grew into trees, and the region, was speedily covered with a dense growth, the prevailing timbers being black-jack oak (Quercus nigra), post oak (Q. obtusiloba), and black oak (Q. tinctoria). The outline of these barrens was almost identical with the outline of the cavernous group of the subcarboniferous limestone. On the lower limestones and shales of the subcarboniferous, the most valuable timbers remaining are yellow poplar (Liriodendron tulipfera), white oak (Q. alba), the hickories, and some black walnut (Juglans nigra). The several divisions of the Lower Silurian are characterized by a variation in the forest growth. On the lower rocks the most characteristic timbers are over-cup oak (Q. macrocarpa), white oak, shell bark hickory (Carya alba), black walnut and black ash (Fraxinus sambuci folia). The prevalent timbers on the best soils of this region are sugar maple (Acer saccharinum), blue ash (Fr. quadrangulata), black walnut, pig-nut hickory (C. glabra), hackberry (Celtis occidentalis), mulberry (Morus rubra), buckeye (Æsculus glabra), honey-locust (Gleditschia triacanthos), box elder (Negundo aceroides) and Kentucky coffee-tree (Gymnocladus). On the soils derived from the silicious member of the Cincinnati group, the prevalent timbers are yellow poplar, beech, white and red oak, and hickory. White oak is the prevailing timber on the upper portion. On the Upper Silurian lands the timbers are mainly white oak, of superior quality, sweet gum (Liquidambar styraci flua), and water maple (A. rubrum). The growth on the corniferous limestone is very similar to that on the best soils of the blue limestone, with the exception that beeches and yellow poplars are more numerous. On the black shale of the Devonian are over-cup oak, black oak, sweet gum, beech and elm, and in places where the soil is well-drained, yellow poplar, wild cherry, and black walnut. The growth on the flat lands of the Waverly is elm, beech, sweet gum and white oak; on the uplands, chestnut, oak, (Q. Prinus), and small hickories, and on the thin uplands the above timbers and yellow pine (Pinus mitis). The great stores of valuable timbers are in the coal-measures. In eastern Kentucky there is an area of 10,000 square miles of virgin forests of white oak, ash, hickory, wild cherry and other valuable timbers. On the out-crop of the conglomerate sandstone, on the western edge of the coal-field, and on the top of the eastern slope of Pine Mountain and the western slope of Cumberland Mountain, the prevailing timbers are chestnut, oak and yellow pine and hemlock (Abies canadensis), where the streams have cut deep in the rock, with an undergrowth of rhododendrons, and kalmias, and on the dryer slopes azaleas. The above is also the growth where the conglomerate is thick on the eastern out-crop of the western coal-field. In the valley of Red River, on the conglomerate series, there is an area of about 40,000 acres where the prevalent timber is white pine (P. strobus). There are fine forests remaining on the Quaternary west of the Tennessee River. On the lowlands are forests of large cypress (Taxodium distychum). In this region the Catalpa speciosa and pecan (Carya olivæformis) abound and cotton-wood (populus angulata) on the banks of streams. Many valuable timbers in addition to the above, are to be had in various parts of the State. Owing to the large demands for timber on the treeless prairies, and the rapid exhaustion of timbers in the States north of the Ohio River, the extensive forests of Kentucky have an especial value.

With the exception of the area west of the Tennessee River, all the soils are derived from the decomposition of rocks in situ. The soils over an area of about 22,000 square miles are derived from the decomposition of limestones of various geological horizons. The soils of the Blue Grass region, derived from the decomposition of phosphatic limestone and shales, and the soils of a portion of the subcarboniferous limestone groups, are of great fertility, and are easily restored by a judicious rotation with clover and grasses.

The State was peopled almost exclusively with agriculturists from Virginia and Maryland, and agriculture has remained the favorite occupation. Out of a total population of 1,321,011, in 1870, only 44,197 were engaged in manufacturing, mechanical and mining industries. The peculiarity of Kentucky agriculture is its great diversity. It will be seen from the United States census that in each decade, from 1810 to the present time, the State ranked first in the production of one or more staple articles. Thus in 1840, though sixth in rank in population, it was the first in production of wheat and hemp, and the second in the production of swine, Indian corn and tobacco. In 1850 it ranked first in the production of Indian corn, flax and hemp, and second in swine, mules and tobacco. In 1870 it was the eighth State in population, and the eighth in the total value of agricultural products (notwithstanding over one-half of the area of the State was virgin forests), it ranked first in the production of hemp and tobacco, sixth in Indian corn, and eighth in wheat. In 1880 it ranked first in the production of hemp and tobacco and seventh in Indian corn and rye. The decline in the relative position in the production of Indian corn and wheat was not caused by a decreased production, but by the increased production of these cereals by States in the west, where these are almost the exclusive crops. In Kentucky a diversified agriculture is found to be more profitable. Especial care has been devoted to the importation and improvement of domestic animals, until the State has become the great center for fine stock of all kinds. In arriving at this preeminence, the breeders have doubtless been assisted by the climate, the water and the perfection of pasturage. The Blue Grass (Poa pratensis), attains perfection in this region, making a beautiful turf; it grows in the shade of woodlands, and affords an excellent winter pasturage. Virginia, in early times, imported choice horses from England (when the breeders there paid attention to the endurance). The Kentucky breeders have kept those strains pure, and have from time to time added by importations from England until a race-horse having endurance and speed is the result. Probably over 75 per cent of the winnings on the American turf is by Kentucky-bred horses. The attention of many of the Kentucky stock breeders of late years has been turned to breeding trotting horses with very marked results. The production of the very fleet trotting horses of Kentucky is the result of intelligent breeding, under favorable conditions.

Kentucky is the principal tobacco growing State in the Union. In 1870, of the total of 262,735,371 pounds produced in the United States, Kentucky produced 105,305,869 pounds; and in 1880, out of the total of 473,107,573 pounds, Kentucky produced 171,121,134 pounds. The ten principal tobacco growing counties are:

	Pounds.
Christian	12,577,574
Henderson	10,312,631
Daviess	9,523,451
Graves	8,901,434
Mason	6,261,385
Bracken	6,126,635
Logan	6,039,983
Todd	5,808,425
Owen	5,765,351
Trigg	5,667,143

The production of the principal cereals in Kentucky was as follows in 1870 and 1880:

	1870.	1880.
Indian Corn	50,091,006	73,977,829
Wheat	5,728,704	11,355,340
Oats	6,620,103	4,582,968
Barley	238,486	487,031
Rye	1,108,933	676,245

Hemp, since the early settlement of the State, has been a favorite crop, more especially in the Blue Grass region. Contrary to an accepted opinion it has not here proved an exhausting crop where retted upon the land. Wheat succeeds almost as well after hemp as after clover sod. The yield of hemp for the year 1880, was about 15,000 tons. Cotton is grown only to a limited extent west of the Tennessee River, the total production amounting in 1880 to 1,367 bales. The total number of farms in 1870 was 118,422, the average size being 158 acres. In 1850 the average size of farms was 227 acres, and in 1860, 211 acres. Over 60 per cent of the area returned as farms was unimproved or in timber. The area returned as improved or under fence was less than one-third the area of the State.

Before the freeing of the slaves, domestic manufacturing on the farms was carried on to a large extent, and as late as 1870, the State ranked second in the value of domestic or home manufactures. The total value of manufactures was, in 1850, $21,712,210; in 1860, $37,931,240; and in 1870, $54,625,809. The increase since 1870 has been larger than before, and the State will soon rank high as a manufacturing State.

KENTUCKY INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN, FRANKFORT.—SEE PAGE 536.

APPENDIX A.

NOTE 1, PAGE 95.

SEVERAL shell-heaps are noted in the Report of the Geological Survey of Indiana for 1873. On page 124, the State geologist, E. T. Cox, in speaking of the food of the Mound-Builders, says: Fresh water bivalves (Unionidæ) and univalve mollusks were also consumed in such quantities that great banks of shells, miles in length, are left to mark the places, where, it is possible, high carnivals were held over fresh-water "clam-bakes." At Clarksville, just below the falls of the Ohio River, in Clarke County, there is a shell-heap extending for a mile or more up and down the river. This locality must have been a favorite place of resort; an ancient Long-Branch where it was possible to find enjoyment and pass a pleasant summer, catching fish at the foot of the falls, where they congregated at certain seasons of the year in such vast numbers as to become an easy prey to the bone hooks and spears used for their capture by these pre-historic people.

Another of these shell heaps is located on the farm of W. T. Aydelotte, six miles below New Albany, and was carefully examined by Dr. E. S. Crosier at the time of its discovery. It is described by the assistant State geologist, William W. Borden, on page 185 of the above-mentioned report, as follows: It is situated in the river bottom, a short distance from the stream, and covers a large space. It is about fifteen or twenty feet high, and has an oval or elliptical form. Several years ago, Mr. Aydelotte had occasion to build a new house, and located it upon this mound above high water mark. In excavating the cellar, the shells were met within a foot below the surface, and are continuous to the bottom of the cellar. A quantity of human bones, including fragments of a skull, with the bones of animals, and quite a number of bone implements, were exhumed by the laborers, and are preserved in the museum of the New Albany Society of Natural History. Subsequently several stone axes manufactured of syenite and granite were found by further excavation, and have been also added to the collection at New Albany. The river bank from Mr. W. T. Aydelotte's farm to New Albany affords a fine field for the collection of Indian relics.

Similar relics are found along the Wabash River. See same report, page 371.

NOTE 2, PAGE 111.

Genealogy of the Boone Family.—It may be interesting to the general reader to learn as much as is known of the genealogy of the family from which Kentucky's honored pioneer descended, and the following is therefore copied from the original record presented to the Polytechnic Library in Louisville, some years ago:

Our genealogy, or pedigree, traced as far back as had come to the knowledge of John Boone (son of George and Mary Boone) wrote by James Boone (son of James Boone, Sr., and Mary, his wife, and grandson of the said George and Mary Boone), in the year of our Lord, 1787:

George Boone I (that is the first that we have heard of) was born in old England.

George Boone II (son of George Boone the First) was born in or near the city of Exeter, being a blacksmith. His wife's maiden name was Sarah Uppey. He died aged sixty; and she died, aged eighty years, and never had an aching bone or decayed tooth.

George Boone III (son of George and Sarah Boone) was born at Stoak (a village near the city of Exeter), A. D. 1666, being a weaver. His wife's maiden name was Mary Maugridge, who was born at Bradswick (a town eight miles from the city of Exeter), in A. D. 1669; the said Mary Maugridge was a daughter of John Maugridge and Mary, his wife, whose maiden name was Milton. They, the said George III and Mary, his wife, had nine children that lived to be men and women, namely: George, Sarah, Squire, Mary, John, Joseph, Benjamin, James and Samuel, having each of them several children, excepting John, who never married. The said George and Mary Boone, with their family, came from the town of Bradwinch, in Devonshire, old England. They arrived at Philadelphia, Penn., in A. D. 1717, September 29th, old style (or October 10th, according to the new style). Three of the children, to-wit: George, Sarah and Squire, they sent in a few years before from Abington, and stayed a few months there; thence to North Wales, and lived about two years there; thence to Oley, in the same county of Philadelphia, where Sarah (being married) had moved to sometime before. This last place of their residence (since the division made in the township of Oley and county of Philadelphia), is called the township of Exeter, in the county of Berks. It was called Exeter because they came from a place near the city of Exeter. He, the said George Boone III, died A. D. 1744, July 27th, about 8 o'clock, aged seventy-eight years, and Mary, his wife, died February 2, 1740–41, aged seventy-two years, and they were decently interred in the Friend's Burying Ground, in the said township of Exeter. When he died he left eight children, fifty-two grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren living—in all seventy—being as many persons as the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt.

George Boone IV (eldest son of George and Mary Boone) was born in Bradwinch aforesaid, July 13th, in the year 1691, and died in Exeter Township aforesaid, aged about sixty-three years and four months. He taught school for several years near Philadelphia, was a good mathematician, and taught the several branches of English learning; was a magistrate for several years. His wife's maiden name was Deborah Howell.

George Boone V (eldest son of George and Deborah Boone) was never married, and died in Exeter Township aforesaid, aged about twenty-four years.

James Boone, Sr., (the sixth son of George and Mary Boone) was born in Bradwinch aforesaid, A. D. 1709, July 7th (old style), about one-half past two in the morning then (when it was between 9 and 10 o'clock at night here, in Pennsylvania), and was married May 3, 1735, in the twenty-sixth year of his age, to Mary Foulke (the eldest daughter of Hugh and Anne Foulke), by whom he had fourteen children, and nine of them lived to be grown up, namely: Annie, Mary, Martha, James, John, Judah, Joshua, Rachel and Moses; she, the said Mary, his first wife, died February 20, 1756, at twenty minutes past one o'clock, P. M., aged forty-one years and eleven weeks. John, their second son, just now mentioned, died in 1773, March 29, in the twenty-eighth year of his life, on the 1st day of September, A. D. 1785, at ten minutes past nine at night, in the seventy-seventh year of his age, and was decently interred in the Friends' Burying Ground, at Exeter. And as he was born in England when it was between 9 and 10 here in Pennsylvania, so he died when it was 9 and 10 at night here.

John Boone, Sr., (son of George and Mary Boone) was born in the town of Bradwinch, in Devonshire, old England, on the seventh day of the week, about 11 in the morning, and on the 3d of January, 1701–2, old style, or 1702, January 14 (new style), and he departed this life on the 11th of October, 1785, in the eighty-fourth year of his age (being the eldest of our name and family that we have heard of, and the last of all those of our relations who came from England). He was decently interred in the Friends' Burying Ground, at Exeter, the next day after his decease. He (with his parents, etc.) left England in the sixteenth year of his age, and 'tis remarkable that he lived exactly sixty-eight years here in North America from the day he landed at Philadelphia, and he lived only five weeks and four days after the decease of his brother James.

This genealogy, it will be observed, does not mention the subsequent history of Squire Boone, Sr. (son of George III and Mary Boone). How many children he had is not known, but Daniel, Squire, Edward, George, Hannah, and perhaps two other sisters, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. William Bryan, were residents of Kentucky for a time. Daniel was born February 11, 1731, and Squire about 1737, both in Berks County, Penn. It is not probable that Daniel was the eldest of the family of children, though the eldest of the brothers named. The children seem to have been left orphans about 1745, when they were taken by friends first to Winchester, Va., and thence to Holman's Ford, on the South Yadkin, in North Carolina. Here Daniel met Rebecca Bryan and his fate in a rather romantic way, if the current story of the event may be credited.

When a young man, Boone was out one night with some companions on a "fire hunt." While proceeding through a heavily timbered piece of bottom land, which bordered a small stream, that formed the boundary of Morgan Bryan's plantation, two brilliant sparks in the gloom gave indication that the fire had "shined the eyes" of a deer. Boone, who carried his rifle, ready to shoot the game which the light should hold with its fascinating glare, gave the concerted signal to the torch-bearer who preceded him, dismounted from his horse, and having secured him to a tree, crept cautiously forward. Finding a convenient covert in a clump of hazel and plum bushes, he peered about to discover the exact location of the surprised animal. Again the eyes turned with a steady gaze toward the treacherous light, and Boone raised his rifle to fire, when some mysterious impulse caused him to hesitate. At that instant, the game, startled by some sound or motion which broke the fatal charm, sprang through the underbrush with a rustle and bound, the ardent young hunter following in rapid pursuit.

The chase led toward the cabin, and thinking he had fallen upon a pet animal of the family, he continued his course to the house, impeded in his progress by hunting-traps and dogs which beset him on his nearest approach. Reaching the door he was admitted and welcomed, but before the young hunter regained his breath sufficient to tell his story, a boy of ten years, accompanied by a breathless girl of sixteen, "with ruddy cheeks, flaxen hair, and soft blue eyes," rushed into the room. "Oh father, father," cried the boy, "Sis was down to the creek to set my lines, and was chased by a painter or something. She's too skeart to tell."

It is not probable that this was the first meeting of the young man and maiden, but however that may be, it is said that the circumstances attending this event evoked an interest in each other which eventually brought the principal actors together in marriage.

NOTE 3, PAGE 114.

It is eminently proper that the names of the adventurers who bore subordinate parts in these early surveys should be preserved as far as painstaking researches have revealed them, and for the results achieved in this direction credit is largely due to

Mr. R. C. Collins. In Bullitt's company were Col. James Harrod, subsequently founder of Harrodsburg, John Smith, Isaac Hite, James Sodousky, Abraham Haptonstall, Ebenezer Severns, John Fitzpatrick and others. In the McAfee company were James, George and Robert McAfee, brothers; James McCoun, brother-in-law, and Samuel Adams, a young man and neighbor. In Taylor's company were Matthew Bracken and Jacob Drennon, perhaps others. James Douglass appears to have come alone to join Bullitt. John Finley—not to be confused with the first pioneer—was probably a member of Thompson's company, the other members of which seem to have left no trace of their personality.

NOTE 4, PAGE 115.

In the fall of 1758 Thomas Decker and some others commenced a settlement on the Monongahela River, at the mouth of what is now Decker's Creek. In the ensuing spring it was entirely broken up by a party of Delawares and Mingoes, and the greater part of its inhabitants murdered. There was at this time at Brownsville a fort then known as Redstone Fort, under the command of Capt. Paul. One of Decker's party escaped from the Indians who destroyed the settlement, and making his way to Fort Redstone gave its commander the melancholy intelligence. The garrison being too weak to admit of sending a detachment in pursuit, Capt. Paul dispatched a runner with the information to Capt. John Gibson, then stationed at Fort Pitt. Leaving the fort under the command of Lieut. Williamson, Capt. Gibson set out with thirty men to intercept the Indians on their return to their towns. In consequence of the distance which the pursuers had to go, and the haste with which the Indians had retreated, the expedition failed in its object. They, however, accidentally came on a party of six or seven Mingoes, on the head of Cross Creek, in Ohio, near Steubenville. These had been prowling about the river below Fort Pitt seeking an opportunity of committing depredations. As Capt. Gibson passed the point of a small knoll just after daybreak he came unexpectedly upon them. Some of them were lying down; the others were sitting around a fire making thongs of green hides. Kiskepila, or Little Eagle, a Mingo chief, headed the party. As soon as he discovered Capt. Gibson he raised the war-whoop and fired his rifle; the ball passed through Gibson's hunting-shirt and wounded a soldier just behind him. Gibson sprang forward, and swinging his sword with herculean force severed the head of Little Eagle from his body. Two other Indians were shot down, and the remainder escaped to their towns on the Muskingum.

When the captives who were restored under the treaty of 1763 came in, those who were at the Mingo towns when the remnant of Kiskepila's party returned stated that the Indians represented Gibson as having cut off Little Eagle's head with a long knife. Several of the white persons were then sacrificed to appease the manes of Kiskepila, and a war dance ensued, accompanied with terrific shouts and bitter denunciations of revenge on "the big knife warrior." This name was soon after applied to Virginia militia generally; and to this day they are known among the northwestern Indians as the "Long Knives" or "Big Knife Nation."—Wither's Chronicles of Border Warfare, 1821.

NOTE 5, PAGE 115.

Big Bone Lick is situated in Boone County, about a mile and a half east from Hamilton, on the Ohio River. This Lick, widely known as the original depository of numerous remains of extinct animals, was discovered by Longueil, a Frenchman, in 1739, and was early resorted to by the Indians in quest of game. In 1773 it was visited by various surveying parties, and its appearance is described in Robert McAfee's journal. It extended over about ten acres, which was bare of timber and herbage, and worn away by the hoofs and tongues of the animals that frequented the spot to a level some three or four feet below the original surface. Through this area the creek ran, which is fed on either side by two never-failing streams of salt water. Here the explorers of 1773 found a large number of mammoth bones in the lick or near it, indicating that the animals had stood side by side mired in mud, and so died. Some portions of the back bones lay out upon solid ground, and were used by the surveyors as seats; the ribs were found long enough to serve as tent poles, and one tusk protruded from a bank some six feet, defying the united efforts of six men to remove it. Teeth were found weighing upward of ten pounds, and with a grinding surface of seventy-five inches.

The first collection of these interesting remains was made in 1803 by Dr. William Goforth, then a physician in Cincinnati. In 1804 or 1805 the collector shipped about five tons of the bones to Pittsburgh, with the intention of forwarding them to Philadelphia, or where they could be profitably disposed of for scientific purposes. Unfortunately, this collection remained here until Thomas Ash, an Irish traveler, whose only claim to public notice is based on his literary piracies and base robbery of Dr. Goforth, met the collector. Insinuating himself into the confidence of his victim, Ash entered into a written engagement to secure the sale of these fossils for the benefit of the owner, for which the agent was to receive a percentage of the net proceeds. Thus gaining possession of the collection, Ash shipped it to New Orleans, where he refused an offer of $7,000 for it, and subsequently took it to England. Here he sold the valuable remains at a large price and pocketed the proceeds. Parts of this collection afterward found their way to the Royal College of Surgeons in London, to Dr. Blake, of Dublin, and to Prof. Monroe, of Edinburgh.

No complete description of these fossils exists, but in a letter to Thomas Jefferson, written in 1807, Dr. Goforth gives some interesting facts concerning them from memory: "The part of a head which was in my possession, and which I thought to be the head of the mammoth, appeared small. I only possessed the maxilla superior and maxilla inferior, with the teeth. The maxilla superior was furnished with four large teeth, two on each side of the jaw; the two nearest the jaw were molars, and had two points or cones on each side of the tooth, making double processes thickly enameled on the cones or masticating surface. The maxilla inferior was in two parts naturally, teeth the same as in maxilla superior, and from the appearance of both jaws I concluded they had their full complement of teeth. —I judged the head to which these bones belonged was small, as I had teeth of the same kind more than five times the size of the largest in either jaw —each under jaw with the teeth weighing forty-eight pounds.

"I had a number of teeth ribbed transversely on the masticating surface, and enamelled, weighing from one and a half to twelve pounds each. Of the teeth of the mammoth kind, furnished with double coned or blunt pointer processes on the masticating surfaces, and thickly enamelled, and generally four processes for insertion in the jaw, as many as a wagon and four horses could draw, weighing from twelve to twenty pounds each.

"One small femoris, weight 31 pounds; 4 ribs, weight and length not recollected; they appeared to be so connected with the vertebræ as to throw their edge outward; one tusk, weighing 100 pounds, 21 inches in circumference in the middle, which was the thickest part; one other tusk, weight 150 pounds, 23 inches in circumference, and measuring 10 feet, 6 inches in length; its form thus—J; one horn 5 feet long, weight 21 pounds.

"The bones of one jaw nearly filled a flour barrel; it had four claws, and when the bones were regularly placed together, measured from the os calcis to the end of either middle claw 5 feet, 2 inches. The bones of this paw were similar to those of a bear's foot. Where I found these bones I found large quantities of bear's bones at the same time, and had opportunity of arranging and comparing the bones together, and the similarity was striking in every particular, except the size.

"The vertebræ of the back and neck, when arranged in order with the os sacrum and coccygis, measured nearly 60 feet, allowing for cartilages, though I am not confident the bones all belonged to one animal, and the number of vertebræ I cannot recollect. I had some thigh bones of incognita of a monstrous size when compared with my other bones, which I much regret I neither weighed nor measured, and a number of large bones so much impaired by time, it was fruitless to conjecture to what part of any animal they belonged."

A second collection was made by order of Mr. Jefferson, while he was president of the American Philosophical Society, about the year 1805, which was divided between that society and M. Cuvier, the distinguished French naturalist. A third collection was made in 1819, by the Western Museum Society, and in 1831 a fourth collection was made by Mr. Finnell. In 1840 it was estimated that the bones of 100 mastodons and of twenty elephants, besides other extinct species, had been collected here.

NOTE 6, PAGE 115.

Of the plain on which Louisville is built—including the sites of Portland and Shippingsport—2,000 acres were patented December 16, 1773, in the name of Dr. John Connolly, a surgeon's mate in the general hospital of the royal forces. On the same day 2,000 acres, adjoining and below the former, were patented to Charles de Warrenstaff, an ensign in the (royal) Pennsylvania regiment. In 1774 the latter conveyed his tract to Connolly and Col. John Campbell. In the following year Campbell purchased of Connolly an undivided half on the first mentioned 2,000 acres, and the 4,000 acres were partitioned in such a way that the upper and lower 1,000 acres fell to the share of Connolly. On July 1, 1780, owing to Dr. Connolly having previously been active in the cause of the crown, the upper 1,000 acres were escheated to the State, and Louisville established thereon by an act of the Virginia legislature. The other portion Connolly had conveyed to Campbell in 1778. The proof that any lots were sold on Bullitt's plan is entirely inferential, though reasonably certain. A new survey, however, was made in 1780 by Col. William Pope, and still another by William Peyton, subsequently. None of these early plats are preserved, however, and the earliest recorded plat to be found is that made in 1812 by Jared Brooks, which is just one-half of the 2,000 acres granted to Connolly. (See Collins, Vol. II, p. 360.)

NOTE 7, PAGE 118.

The names of these first settlers have not all been preserved. From the examination of various depositions, Mr. Collins has discovered the following names: James Blair, James Brown, Abraham Chapline, John Clark, John Crawford, Jared Cowan, John Cowan, John Crow, Azariah Davis, William Fields, David Glenn, Thomas Glenn, Silas Harlan, James Harlan, James Harrod, Thomas Harrod, Evan (or John) Hinton, — Rees, John Shelp, James Wiley and John Wilson. Of Isaac Hite's company, the following are derived from the same authority: Robert Gilbert, James Hamilton, Isaac Hite, James Knox, James McColloch, Alexander Petrey, Jacob Sanduskey, James Sodousky, Benjamin Tutt and David Williams. (See Collins, Vol. II, p. 517.)

NOTE 8, PAGES 79–140.

At the subsequent meeting of the Indians held at Fort Stanwix, where negotiations were opened October 24, 1768, four grants were made by the Indians to the whites. One to the proprietors of Pennsylvania; one to George Croghan; one to William Trent, attorney for twenty-two traders; and one to his majesty, the king of England. A deed for the one to the traders was executed on the 3d of November, but Sir William Johnson and the commissioners recommended that the chiefs of the Six Nations who had signed it, should carry it into congress and publicly acknowledge the execution of it, at the same time they executed the grant to the king of England and the proprietors of Pennsylvania. Accordingly, on November 5, these deeds being laid upon a table, were executed in the presence of the governor of New Jersey, the commissioners of Virginia and Pennsylvania, and other gentlemen present. The tract thus conveyed to the traders was between the Kanawha and Monongahela Rivers, and was by the traders named Indiana. It was subsequently practically confiscated by Virginia. (See "Plain Facts," published by R. Aitken, Philadelphia, 1781.)

NOTE 9, PAGE 143.

The dimensions are not found on the original draft but the general estimate of twenty feet for each cabin and opening would give the fort a length of about 260 feet and a breadth of 180 feet. The actual situation of the fort was so changed from the suggestion of the plan as to present the end of the structure toward the river. (Romance of Western History, p. 164.)

FORT AT BOONESBOROUGH.

1. Colonel Henderson's house.
2. Stockades
3. Colonel Henderson's kitchen.
4. Mr. Luttrell's house.
5. Mr. Luttrell's kitchen.
9. Fort gates.
14. Houses built for Cols. Hart and Williams.
Places not numbered, were cabins.

NOTE 10, PAGE 155.

The Girty family, of which this renegade was but one of several who achieved an infamous notoriety, is thus described by Judge Campbell: "Girty, the father, was an emigrant from Ireland, about eighty years ago, if report can be relied on. He settled in Pennsylvania, where that liberty he sought degenerated in his possession into the basest licentiousness. His hours were wasted in idleness and beastly intemperance. Nothing ranked higher in his estimation, or so entirely commanded his regard, as a jug of whisky. 'Grog was his song, and grog would he have.' His sottishness turned his wife's affection. Ready for seduction, she yielded her heart to a neighboring rustic, who, to remove all obstacles to their wishes, knocked Girty on the head and bore off the trophy of his prowess.

"He left four sons, Thomas, Simon, George and James. The three latter were taken prisoners by the Shawanese, Delawares and Senecas, in that war which developed the military talents of Gen. Washington. George was adopted by the Delawares, and continued with them until his death. He became a perfect savage, his manners being entirely Indian. To consummate cunning, he added the most fearless intrepidity. He fought in the battles of Kenhawa, Blue Licks and Sandusky, and gained himself much distinction for skill and bravery. In his latter years like his father, he gave himself up to intemperance and died drunk about twenty-five years ago on the Miami of the Lake.

"Simon was adopted by the Senecas, and became as expert a hunter as any of them. In Kentucky and Ohio, he sustained the reputation of an unrelenting barbarian. Forty-five years ago, with his name was associated everything cruel and fiend-like. To the women and children, in particular, nothing was more terrifying than the name of Simon Girty. At that time it was believed by many that he had fled from justice and sought refuge among the Indians, determined to do his countrymen all the harm in his power. This impression was an erroneous one. It is true he joined the Indians in their wars against the whites, and conformed to their usages. This was the education he had received, and those who were the foes of his brethren were also his foes. Although trained in all his pursuits as an Indian, it is said to be a fact, susceptible of proof, that through his importunities, many prisoners were saved from death. His influence was great, and when he chose to be merciful, it was generally in his power to protect the imploring captive. His reputation was that of an honest man. In the payment of his debts, he was scrupulously exact. Knowing and duly appreciating integrity, he fulfilled his engagement to the last cent. It is stated that on one occasion he sold his horse, rather than incur the odium of violating his promise.

"He was a great lover of rum; nothing could afford him more joy than a keg of this beverage. When intoxicated, in abuse he was indiscriminate sparing neither friends nor foes. Then it was he had no compassion in his heart. Although much disabled by rheumatism for the last ten years of his life, he rode to his hunting grounds in pursuit of game. Suffering the most excruciating pains, he often boasted of his warlike spirit. It was his constant wish that he might breathe his last in battle. So it happened. He was at Proctor's defeat on the River Thames, and was cut to pieces by Col. Johnson's mounted men.

"James Girty fell into the hands of the Shawanese, who adopted him as a son. As he approached manhood, he became dextrous in all the arts of savage life. To the most sanguinary spirit he added all the vices of the depraved frontiersmen, with whom he frequently associated.

"It is represented that he often visited Kentucky at the time of its first settlement, many of the inhabitants feeling the effects of his courage and cruelty. Neither age nor sex found mercy at his hands. His delight was in carnage. When unable to walk in consequence of disease, he laid low with his hatchet captive women and children, who came within his reach. Traders, who were acquainted with him, say that so furious was he, that he would not have turned on his heel to save a prisoner from the flames. His pleasure was to see new and refined tortures inflicted; and to perfect his gratification he frequently gave directions. To this barbarian are to be attributed many of the cruelties charged upon his brother Simon. Yet this monster was caressed by Elliott and Proctor." (See "Campbell's Remains," Columbus, 1838).

NOTE 11, PAGE 165.

This is not the view taken by the greater number of writers, who have had occasion to recount the events which follow. Indeed the order of these events is generally reversed, though it must be observed without very clear grounds for doing so. In any statement of the relation of "Rogers' defeat" and "Bowman's expedition," however, harmony is apparently to be secured only by arbitrary methods, and the order determined by the preponderance of circumstantial evidence. The confusion arrises from the careless and inadequate statement of the facts of McClung, p. 148. Marshall does not mention the first event; Butler does, pp. 102–4, and it is his narration which the text follows, avoiding the manifest error into which he is betrayed by adopting McClung's conclusion of the story.

The order followed in the text is based upon the following considerations: First.—McClung's narrative is found to contain such irreconcilable statements as to require some adjustments; the chief difficulty in the way of such adjustment being the date of Capt. Benham's rescue, i. e., the "27th of November." Second.—Butler, by independent evidence (pp. 102–3), indicates that the boats proceeded up the river from the falls "in the spring of 1779." Third.—When the wounded men were discovered, they had only partially recovered from their wounds, and a period of about six weeks is generally assigned to the interval between the action and the rescue. Fourth.—Collins, Vol. II, p. 426, quotes the narrative of Samuel Frazee to the effect that he left the mouth of the Licking for Harrodsburg "to give the alarm of Indian depredations and expeditions." Returning with the volunteers to this point, the same narrator says: "We struck the trail of the red men, and followed it to Old Chillicothe," etc. Fifth.—Marshall, Vol. I, p. 91, and Butler, p. 108, place the march of Bowman's expedition in July; McClung, p. 113, in May. The former are accepted as correct. Sixth.—McClung speaks of the Indians as coming down the Little Miami in their retreat from Kentucky, a statement which is obviously a mistake. The natural correction seems to be that this band of "four or five hundred" Shawanese—Butler, p. 105—was on its way to attack the frontier posts in Kentucky; that falling in with Rogers, and achieving a signal victory, they accepted it as glory enough for one campaign, and retired — a proceeding entirely in accordance with their well-known practice. Seventh.—Such an explanation receives confirmation from the fact that it is clearly improbable that so large a force should have been repelled with such success as to cause so early a retreat, without finding some more complete record in the annals of this year. Neither Ranck, in his "History of Lexington," nor McClung, in his "Outline History," in Collins, mentions it. Eighth.—It should be observed, also, that such an expedition on the part of the savages was more likely to occur in the early part of the year, as in September the Shawanese were attending a conference at Fort Pitt with Brodhead, which terminated to the satisfaction of both parties. ("Annals of the West," p. 216.) Ninth.—It follows, therefore, that if the Indian invasion be placed in the fall the expedition must have been organized immediately after this conference, to which the savages had been drawn by the chastisement inflicted upon the Pennsylvania frontier, which is improbable. Tenth.—these considerations all tend to point out the date of "the 27th of November" as an error; that "Rogers' defeat" occurred in the late spring or early summer of 1779, and is so indicated in the text.

NOTE 12, PAGE 180.

Peter Duree was the leading man in the company of Pennsylvanians, who, in 1779, established Hart's or White Oak Station on the Kentucky River in connection with Nathaniel Hart. In the fall of 1781, or in the succeeding winter, he determined to build a new station between the mouth of Muddy Creek and Estill's Station, and, having erected a block-house on the chosen site, his son, Peter Duree, Jr., and his son-in-law, John Bullock, with their families, took possession of it. Here they were attacked by the Indians about the 20th of March. The men were outside of the cabin adjusting a hand-mill, when both were shot. After running a short distance toward the block-house Bullock fell, but Duree succeeded in reaching it and throwing himself upon a bed. Mrs. Bullock, going to the door to ascertain the fate of her husband, received a shot in her breast, and fell dead upon the threshhold. Mrs. Duree, doubtful whether her husband had been wounded or had fainted, drew the murdered woman within the cabin and closed the door. Grasping a rifle, she told her husband she would help him to defend the cabin, when he told her he was wounded and dying. Presenting the gun in quick succession at the different port-holes, she turned to her dying husband, and calmly watched his life go out. After waiting several hours without seeing anything more of the Indians, she ventured out to go to the older station, carrying an infant in her arms, and leading a four-year-old son by her side. Avoiding the beaten track, she hurried through the forest, hoping to gain her destination unobserved. She struck the trail at some distance from her starting-point, however, and with her strength so far exhausted that she determined to follow it. A few miles further on she met the elder Peter Duree, with his wife and youngest son, on their way with their household effects to the new station. The shocking story which the poor refugee had to relate changed their course, and, unloading their horses in an adjacent cane-brake, the whole party hurried to White Oak Station, where they arrived before daylight.

NOTE 13, PAGE 181.

Of the five descriptions of this heroic encounter examined, no two agree upon all the essential points. That of R. H. Collins (Historical Sketches of Kentucky, Vol. II, p. 634 et seq.), who bases his statements upon an examination of the evidence presented in the case of E. Crews vs. Crews Heirs and other equally authoritative data (see note, p. 636), is perhaps most entitled to credit. But this account is unfortunately marred by such carelessness of statement as to throw some doubt upon an otherwise consistent narrative. This will be observed in the last two paragraphs on page 234, which seem to indicate that a body of men who "pressed forward," consumed the time from "early next morning" till "an hour before sunset" in making the distance from Little Mountain to the scene of the battle, some two miles above Mount Sterling. If true, it is of sufficient importance to warrant the author in giving the reason for such an unusual delay, but it is probably an inaccuracy, in which the writer has fallen in amending the account as it existed in the original edition. Other accounts do not attempt to fix the hour of the engagement. It was probably somewhat earlier than "an hour before sunset;" it is more probable that it occurred an hour before sunrise. This time would satisfy all the conditions much better.

Authors differ in their characterization of Miller's conduct. A tradition is mentioned by Marshall which authorizes the statement that the lieutenant made the diversion as ordered, was met by the savages, and suffered the loss of three or four men killed or wounded. Besides its manifest improbability, this tradition is opposed by the almost unanimous conviction of the settlers and their descendants in the neighborhood of Estill's Station, and the subsequent action of Miller. For twenty years, it is said, one of the men wounded in the action patiently watched for Miller's return to Richmond, vowing to kill him on sight. "If he had met the threatened fate, no jury in Madison County would have convicted Cook—so intense was, and to this day is, * * * * the detestation for those who shamefully retreated." Miller did not return to Richmond.

There is a wide disagreement as to the date of the encounter. Marshall (Vol. I, p. 126) places the event in May, 1782, and Butler quotes his account without remark. The question seems to be authoritatively settled, and a sufficient warrant for the prominence accorded this inconclusive skirmish in history is given in the decision of Chief Justice Robertson, in the case of Conley's Heirs vs. Chiles, found in the 5th Marshall's Reports (note p. 124, Butler), the chief justice said: The battle was fought on the 22d of March, 1782. in the new county of Montgomery, and in the vicinity of Mount Sterling. It is a memorable incident, and perhaps one of the most memorable in the interesting history of the settlement of Kentucky. The usefulness and popularity of Capt. Estill; the deep and universal sensibility excited by the premature death of a citizen so gallant and so beloved; the emphatic character of his associates in battle; the masterly skill and chivalric daring displayed throughout the action ("every man to his man, and each to his tree"); the grief and despondence produced by the catastrophe, all contribute to give to "Estill's defeat" a most signal notoriety and importance, especially among the "early settlers." All the story, with all the circumstances of locality, and of "the fight," was told and told again and again, until even children knew it "by heart." No legendary tale was ever listened to with as intense anxiety, or was inscribed in as vivid and indelible an impress on the hearts of the few of both sexes, who then constituted the hope and the strength of Kentucky.

Such is the traditional as well as the recorded history of this sanguinary battle between the white men and the Indians; and such, too, is the testimony embodied in this cause.

NOTE 14, PAGE 182.

The details in regard to the attack on Bryant's or Bryan's Station are involved in the greatest confusion. According to Marshall the Indians attacked the station on the 15th, after the settlers had engaged in their ordinary work for the day, and continued their investment of the place until "the morning of the fourth day." Butler describes the enemy as approaching the fort in the darkness of the night of the 14th, and maintaining their siege until the morning of the fourth day, the 18th inst. McClung says the Indians came on the night of the 14th, and implies that they left on the morning of the 16th. Gov. Morehead, who had access to statements of those who were actors in the events of this period, agrees with McClung. Boone's narrative says the attack took place on the 15th, and that the enemy retired on the 17th, but in his letter, quoted below (note 15), he says the attack was on the 16th, and the retreat "about 10 o'clock the next day." An account by one who was present, quoted from Cist's Cincinnati Miscellany (Vol. I, page 236) makes the attack occur on the 16th, and the retreat "before daylight." on the 17th.

Later writers here generally accepted the night of the 14th, as the date of the arrival of the Indians, though why this rather than the 16th is not clear. By the concurrent testimony of McClung, Morehead, Boone and Cist's Miscellany, the period of active hostilities extended only through one day. The relieving party arrived on the next day, and on the third day fought the battle at the Lower Blue Lick. The date of the battle is invariably fixed on the 19th, and the date of the arrival of the force from Lexington and the beginning of the pursuit, on the 18th. This will be found the case in Marshall, Butler, McClung, Morehead, Collins, Perkins' "Annals of the West," Ranck's "History of Fayette County, Ky.," McKnight's "Our Western Border," and Shaler's "Kentucky." If these dates may be considered established, it follows that the attack occurred on the 17th, and the approach of the enemy on the night before, as in the text.

NOTE 15, PAGE 188.

The various writers who have recounted the battle of Blue Lick differ in their account of the opening details. The common narrative is given by Marshall, Stipp (Miscellany, Xenia, Ohio, 1827), McClung and Cooper. They represent the whole army following McGary in headlong confusion, without previous examination of the locality by scouts, or halt until confronted by the enemy. Boone's account in a letter to the governor of Virginia is as follows:

BOONE'S STATION, FAYETTE CO., August 30, 1782.

Sir:—Present circumstances of affairs cause me to write to your Excellency as follows: On the 16th inst, a large number of Indians with some white men attacked one of our frontier stations, known by the name of Bryan's Station. The siege continued from about sunrise till about 10 o'clock the next day, when they marched off.

Notice being given to the neighboring stations, we immediately raised 181 horsemen, commanded by Col. John Todd, including some of the Lincoln County militia, commanded by Col. Trigg, and having pursued about forty miles, on the 19th inst. we discovered the enemy lying in wait for us. On this discovery we formed our columns into one single line and marched up to their front within about forty yards before there was a guu fired. Col. Trigg commanded on the right, myself on the left, Maj. McGary in the center, and Maj. Harlan, the advance party, in the front.

From the manner in which we had formed, it fell to my lot to bring on the attack. This was done with a very heavy fire on both sides, and extended back of the line to Col. Trigg, where the enemy was so strong that they rushed up and broke the right wing at the first fire. Thus the enemy got in our rear, and we were compelled to retreat with the loss of seventy-seven of our men and twelve wounded.

Afterward we were enforced by Col. Logan, which made our force 460 men. We marched again to the battle-ground, but finding that the enemy had gone we proceeded to bury the dead. We found forty-three on the ground, and many lay about which we could not stay to find, hungry and weary as we were, and somewhat dubious that the enemy might not have gone off quite. By the sign we thought the Indians had exceeded 400, while the whole of the militia of this county does not amount to more than 130.

From these facts your Excellency may form an idea of our situation. I know that your own circumstances are critical, but are we to be wholly forgotten? I hope not. I trust about 500 men may be sent to our assistance immediately. If these shall be stationed as our county lieutenants shall deem necessary, it may be the means of saving our part of the country, but if they are placed under the direction of Gen. George Rogers Clark they will be of little or no service to our settlement. The falls lie 100 miles west of us, and the Indians northeast, while our men are frequently called to protect them. I have encouraged the people in this county all that I could, but can no longer justify them or myself to risk our lives here under such extraordinary hazards. The inhabitants of this county are very much alarmed at the thought of the Indians bringing another campaign into our country this fall. If this should be the case it will break up these settlements. I hope, therefore, your Excellency will take the matter into your consideration, and send us some relief as quickly as possible.

These are my sentiments without consulting any person. Col. Logan will, I expect, immediately send you an express, by whom I humbly request your Excellency's answer. In the meanwhile

I remain, DANIEL BOONE.

In this letter it will be observed Boone does not mention McGary's reckless conduct, and leaves it to be inferred that the battle was brought on by the determination of the council and in regular order. That it was begun in regular order receives confirmation from "a distinguished citizen of Kentucky" whom Mr. Collins quotes (Vol. II, p. 659). This gentleman gained his information from participants in the battle, and agrees with the accounts given from actors in this scene by Kenton and Clark.

Morehead, whom the text follows, takes a middle course; notes the precipitate action of McGary, but describes the final approach in accordance with Boone's account. This account raises the questions whether McGary would be likely to stop when once started in his mad career, and whether, if McGary did act the part generally assigned to him, Boone would be likely to omit all mention of it. To the latter it may be replied that Boone aimed only to give the outlines of the event, and omits many undoubtedly authentic details which have been recorded by the historians; that his purpose was not to make an official report, but to picture the general situation, and on his own responsibility to seek relief for the alarmed settlers; and that if the fact be as Marshall states, McGary's action would not appear of such importance as to be noted in the letter referred to.

Whether McGary would be any more amenable to reason after crossing the river than before, is a question for the decision of which there exists no evidence. It may be supposed, however, that the crossing may have given the crowd which followed him an opportunity for a sober second thought, and the "Rubicon" having been passed, they may have been inclined to accept the precautionary measures offered.

There is little reason to doubt that McGary forced the fighting in some way contrary to the calmer judgment of his superiors, and that by his contemporaries he was generally held responsible, to a large degree, for the disaster which followed. This responsibility, it is said, he defended rather than denied, and in so doing, aspersed the character of Todd, a proceeding which seems to make his culpability more probable. Butler (p. 129) refers to his defense as a tradition in which it was held that he "counseled a delay at Bryant's Station for twenty-four hours, until Logan could arrive with his powerful re-enforcement. This was rather tauntingly rejected, as it is alleged, by Col. Todd, who, in the honorable ambition of a brave man, was fearful of the escape of the Indians, and was apprehensive that he should lose this opportunity of distinguishing himself, by the arrival of his senior colonel." This view is not at all in keeping with the known character of the respective officers. McGary was of a reckless disposition, insubordinate, quarrelsome in his relations to his superiors. Todd was of a quiet, judicial temperament, and unselfish in his public and private life. Of this there is abundant evidence. It is true that Logan ranked higher in public esteem as an Indian fighter than any, save Clark, on the border, but Cooper is authority for the statement that Logan was not certainly expected, and as a matter of fact Todd was not only colonel in the militia, but also in the State line, which made him Logan's senior. In this connection, Mr. Charles McKnight ("Our Western Border," p. 283) relates: "Several years after the battle of the Blue Lick, a gentleman of Kentucky, since dead, fell in company of McGary at one of the circuit courts, and the conversation soon turned on the battle. McGary frankly acknowledged that he was the immediate cause of the loss of blood on that day, and with great heat and energy, assigned his reasons for urging on the battle. He said that in the hurried council that was held at Bryant's, on the 18th, he strenuously urged Todd and Trigg to halt for twenty-four hours, assuring them that with the aid of Logan, they would be able to follow them even to Chillicothe if necessary, and that their numbers then were too weak to encounter them alone. He offered, he said, to pledge his head that the Indians would not return with such precipitation as was supposed, but would afford ample time to collect more force, and give them battle with a prospect of success.

"He added that Col. Todd scouted his arguments and declared that, if a single day were lost, the Indians would never be overtaken; but would cross the Ohio and disperse; that now was the time to strike them, while they were in a body; that to talk of their numbers was nonsense, the more the merrier; that for his part he determined to pursue them without a moment's delay and did not doubt that there were brave men enough on the ground to enable him to attack them with effect." McGary declared that he felt somewhat nettled at the manner in which his advice had been received; that he thought Todd and Trigg jealous of Logan, who, as senior colonel, would be entitled to the command on his arrival; and that, in their eagerness to have the honor of victory to themselves, they were rashly throwing themselves into a condition which would endanger the safety of the country.

" 'However, sir' (continued he, with an air of unamiable triumph) 'when I saw the gentlemen so keen for a fight, I gave way, and joined in the pursuit as willingly as any; but when we came in sight of the enemy, and the gentlemen began to talk of numbers, position, Logan and waiting, I burst into a passion, d——d them for a set of cowards, who could not be wise until they were scared into it, and swore that since they had come so far for a fight, they should fight, or I would disgrace them forever. That when I spoke of waiting for Logan on the day before, they had scouted the idea, and hinted about courage, that now it would be shown who had courage, or who were d——d cowards, who could talk big when the enemy were at a distance, but turned pale when danger was near. I then dashed into the river, and called upon all who were not cowards to follow.' The gentleman, upon whose authority this is given, added that even then, McGary spoke with bittnerness of the deceased colonels, and swore that they had received just what they deserved, and that he, for one, was glad of it."

Such a statement can scarcely be credited, but if it be true, as there are indications that it is, it leaves nothing further wanting to mark McGary as the willful murderer of his comrades and the malicious slanderer of the noble dead.

The loss of the Indians is stated generally as equal to that of the whites. This appears incredible when the number and advantageous position of the savages are considered. Logan found no Indian burials, and but few trails of blood, but Boone states in his narrative that on numbering their dead the Indians discovered that their loss exceeded the whites by four, and therefore four of the prisoners were, by general consent, ordered to be killed. This is confirmed by the statement of prisoners who were exchanged in the next year. The loss of the Indians referred to, however, may have included the casualties received in both the battle of the Blue Lick and before Bryan's Station. In the latter engagement the whites had only two killed in the station, while the savages are believed to have lost heavily. The losses in the two battles may have been equalized in the manner stated.

NOTE 16, PAGE 195.

In 1802 F. A. Michaux, M. D., a distinguished French naturalist, made a tour of the newer portions of the United States under the auspices of the French minister of the interior, and subsequently recorded the result of his observations in a volume printed in Paris. This was translated into English by B. Lambert, and published at London in 1805. It is from this work that the following extract is made:

The Barrens or meadows of Kentucky comprise an extent of sixty or seventy miles in length by fifty or sixty in breadth. From the signification of the word I expected to cross a bare tract, with a few plants scattered here and there upon it; and in this opinion I was supported by the notion which some of the inhabitants had given me of these meadows before I reached them. They told me that at this season (28th of August) I should perish with heat and thirst, and that I should not meet with any shade the whole length of the road, for the greater number of the Americans who live in woods have no conception that countries can exist that are entirely free from them, and still less that they can be habitable. Instead of finding a country such as described to me, I was agreeably surprised to see a beautiful meadow well covered with grass of two or three feet in height, which is used to feed cattle. A great variety of plants also grow here. * * * In some parts of these meadows several species of wild creeping vines are met with, and particularly that called by the inhabitants summer grapes. These grapes are as large and of as good a quality as those from the vineyards in the neighborhood of Paris, with this difference, that they are not so close upon the bunches.

* * * * * *

The Barrens are circumscribed within a chain of woods two or three miles in breadth, forming a continuation of the forests which cover the country. The trees comprising them are not very close, and their distances from each other increase in approaching the meadows. On the Tennessee side this chain is formed exclusively of post oaks, Quercus obtusiloba, the wood of which being very hard and not perishing easily is preferred to all others in the formation of fences. * * * Here and there through the meadows are also to be seen black oaks, Quercus nigra, and walnuts, Juglans hickery, which rise to about twelve or fifteen feet; sometimes they form small groves, but always so far asunder as not in any way to interrupt the sight. With the exception of little sallows about two feet high, Salix longrostris, and some sumachs, there is not any shrub to be seen. The surface of these meadows is in general very even; but toward the Dripping Spring I observed a long and high hill, slightly covered with wood and with enormous detached rocks which are visible from the road.

There appears to be a great number of subterraneous caverns in the Barrens, some of which are very near the surface. A short time before I passed this way, one of them sunk in the road near Bears' Wallow, under the feet of a traveler, who only escaped by a most fortunate chance. The danger of such accidents in a country where the habitations are so remote from each other, and where, perhaps, a traveler does not pass once in fifteen days, may be conceived.

There are also to be seen in these meadows broken holes of the shape of a funnel, the breadth of which varies, according to the depth, from fifteen to thirty feet. In some of these cavities, at five or six feet from the bottom, there is a small, trickling stream of water, which is totally lost in the crevice at the lower extremity of the funnel. These kind of streams never dry up, which has induced several of the inhabitants to settle in their vicinity; for except the Big Barren River, I did not discover the smallest brook or creek through all these plains. Neither have I heard of any attempt having been made to dig wells; and, therefore, can form no judgmen of the success of the trials, which will doubtless be hereafter made. From these observations it is evident that the want of water, and of wood fit for fences, will long be an obstacle to the increase of the establishments in this part of Kentucky.* * * The Barrens are therefore at present very thinly inhabited in comparison with their extent; for on the road, where the plantations are the most contiguous, there are only eighteen in a space of seventy miles.

Some of the inhabitants divide the land of the Barrens of Kentucky into three classes, according to their qualities, and in their opinion the middle class occupies the largest part of them. That part which I crossed, where the soil is yellowish and a little gravelly, seemed to be very well calculated for the culture of wheat. * * * * * *

Every year, in the course of the months of March and April, the inhabitants set fire to the herbage, which at that period is dry, and the extreme length of which would deprive the cattle, for a fortnight or three weeks longer, of the new grass, which then begins to shoot. This custom is, however, generally blamed, and with reason; for, being set fire to early, the grass dries, and, in consequence of its drooping, does not protect the rising crop from the spring frosts, and its vegetation retarded. This custom was formerly practiced by the natives, who came to hunt in these countries, and is still continued by them in other parts of North America, where there are savannahs of vast extent. Their object in setting fire to them is to attract the stags, bison, etc., into the burnt parts, when they can perceive them at a distance.

No idea can be formed of these dreadful conflagrations without having seen them. The flame, which generally occupies a line of several miles in extent, is sometimes driven forward with such rapidity that men on horseback have become their prey

The American hunters and the savages preserve themselves from this danger by a method as simple as ingenious; they immediately set fire to that part of the meadow in which they happen to be, and afterward retreat to this burnt spot, where the flame, which threatened them, stops for want of fuel. This is what the Canadian hunters call making their own fire.—Michaux's Travels, pp. 182–190.

NOTE 17, PAGE 195.

The early promise of success in grape culture was not confirmed by experience. Nearly eighteen years after Imlay wrote, Michaux recorded the result of the "agitation," to which the text refers: I left Lexington for Nashville, in the State of Tennessee, on the 10th of August, wrote the French traveler, and as the establishment formed for naturalizing the vine in Kentucky was only a few miles out of my road, I determined to visit it. * * *

At fourteen miles from Lexington, I quitted the road to Hickman's Ferry. I turned to the left and lost myself in the middle of the woods, so that I did not reach the vineyard until evening, where I was very politely received by M. Dufour, who directs the undertaking. He invited me to sleep there and pass the following day with him, which I accepted.

There is a public spirit in the United States which causes them to seize with avidity every prospect tending to enrich the country by agriculture or commerce. That of acclimating the vine in Kentucky was eagerly received. Several individuals formed themselves into a society to carry it into execution, and it was determined to raise a capital of 10,000 piasters (dollars,) divided into 200 shares of 50 piasters each. This subscription was soon filled. M. Defour, the principal of a small Swiss colony, who had established himself seven or eight years before in Kentucky, and was the proposer of this scheme, was employed to look for a suitable soil to procure some plants, and to do everything which he might judge necessary to insure success. The spot which he had selected and cleared was situated on the River Kentucky, twenty miles from Lexington. The soil is excellent, and the vines are planted on a small hill with a steep declivity, exposed to the south, and the base of which is about 200 toises (a fathom, six French feet, or 6.39459 English feet) from the river.

M. Dufour intended to pass into France to procure the vine plants, and with this view he went to New York, but the war or some other cause, with which I am unacquainted, prevented him, and he contented himself with procuring there and at Philadelphia plants of every species, which he could obtain from individuals who had them in their gardens. He collected twenty-five species, which he brought to Kentucky, where he has endeavored to multiply them. But his success is not equal to his attention; not more than four or five varieties are left, among which are those which he calls by the names of Burgundy and Madeira, and the first does not thrive well; the fruit always rots before it arrives at maturity. When I saw them the bunches were few and stinted, the grapes small, and everything appeared as though the vintage of the year 1802 would not be more abundant than those of the preceding years. The Madeira vines, on the contrary, seemed to give some hopes of 150 or 200 plants—about a third were loaded with very fine grapes. These vines do not occupy a space of more than six acres; they are planted and supported by props, as in the environs of Paris. The vicinity of the woods attracts a species of bird which is very destructive to them, and the nature of the country is a great obstacle to getting freed from them.

Such was then the situation of this establishment, in which the proprietors took but slight interest, and which was likely to meet with another hindrance in the division of M. Dufour's family, a part of which was on the point of quitting it to settle on the banks of the Ohio. These details are sufficient to give a very different idea of the state of the pretended flourishing vines of Kentucky, from that which may have been formed on the pompous accounts of them some months ago in the public papers.—Michaux's Travels, pp. 163–167.

NOTE 18, PAGE 199.

The decade which preceded Kenton's removal from Kentucky, marked the culmination and rapid decline of his fortunes. He had entered large tracts of land, which the continued immigration greatly enhanced in value. On the site of his old blockhouse, near Washington, he erected a fine brick residence, which became widely noted for the open-handed hospitality dispensed by its owner. But this prosperity was only short-lived. The great tide of immigration, which at first contributed so largely to his prosperity finally proved his ruin. Land became more scarce, and the greedy speculator began to invade his domains and involve him in legal difficulties, to which his ignorance and credulity made him an easy victim. One after another of his possessions were wrested from him on legal informalities, until not only was his valuable property absorbed, but even his body taken to satisfy the warranty of deeds to land which he had given away. Thus, four years after the general pacification of the Indians had promised him a life of ease, dearly earned by twenty years of constant danger and hardship, he found himself beggared by land suits.

In this predicament he turned to Ohio, where he had previously pushed his speculations. Here, in 1799, he "took up" land and began anew, settling, in 1802, near Urbana. His misfortunes still followed him, and it was not until 1820, when he moved to the head-waters of the Mad River, in Logan County, and entered land in the name of his wife and children, that he escaped the persecutions of the malign spirit which presided over the lands of Kentucky. In all this trouble he never inveighed against the injustice of his country, which to his exalted patriotism, seemed incapable of doing wrong. In 1805, he was made brigadier-general of Ohio militia, and was ready at all times to give his services in defense of the frontier. On the breaking out of hostilities in 1812, he was anxious to take part in the military operations, and in the succeeding year, when Gov. Shelby led the Kentucky troops northward, he joined them with his rifle and horse as a volunteer, though constrained to act as a privileged member of the Governor's military family. In this capacity he was present at the battles of the Thames and of the Moravian town, where he displayed his old-time courage and address. With this he ended his military career.

In 1824 he made his first visit to Kentucky after his removal from that State. Certain mountainous lands of little value, which had, on that account, escaped the voracity of the land-hunters, had become forfeited to the State for unpaid taxes. To seek the release of this last vestige of his Kentucky fortunes, he was induced to undertake the journey alone. He made his way to Frankfort, where the legislature was in session, with as little idea of what steps were to be taken to effect his wishes as a child. On reaching his destination, he found himself an utter stranger. His worn out horse and tattered garments proclaimed his fallen fortunes, while his simple, dazed manner sharpened the curiosity of those who observed his entry into the town. Aimlessly wandering in the street, peering into each face for some familiar countenance, and followed by a crowd of curious urchins, the old white-haired man was at length recognized by Gen. Thomas Fletcher, who provided him with decent clothing, and took the old pioneer home for entertainment. His presence was soon noised abroad, and large numbers came to greet the renowned hunter and scout. He was taken to the capitol and placed in the speaker's chair, where the leading members of the government, as well as prominent citizens, were introduced to him. This spontaneous courtesy completely won his heart, and the simple-hearted old man counted this the proudest day of his life. His lands were promptly released by the State, and in the same year, through the exertions of Judge Burnett, of Cincinnati, and Gov. Vance, of Ohio, then members of congress, the United States granted Kenton a pension of $20 a month. This thoughtful provision enabled the old pioneer to end his days free from want. He died April 29, 1836, a victim of the cholera, which prevailed in this year.

Kenton married Elizabeth Jarbo, probably in Kentucky, by whom he had several children, though, strange to say, of all the notices of his eventful career to be found in the various encyclopedias and reviews, these important details omitted by his biographer have been supplied in none. His descendants subsequently moved to Indiana. McDonald, who became acquainted with the veteran pioneer in 1789, and knew him well during the remainder of his life, writes thus of his character and general appearance: "Gen. Kenton was of fair complexion, six feet one inch in height. He stood and walked very erect, and in the prime of life weighed about 190 pounds. He never was inclined to be corpulent, although of sufficient fullness to form a graceful person. He had a soft, tremulous voice, very pleasing to the hearer. He had laughing grey eyes, which appeared to fascinate the beholder. He was a pleasant, good-humored and obliging companion. When excited or provoked to anger (which was seldom the case) the fiery glance of his eye would almost curdle the blood of those with whom he came in contact. His rage, when roused, was a tornado. In his dealing he was perfectly honest; his confidence in man and his credulity were such that the same man might cheat him twenty times, and if he professed friendship he might cheat him still." His remains still rest in the obscurity of his unmarked grave in Ohio.

NOTE 19, PAGE 200.

On leaving Kentucky, Boone seems to have been swayed by alternating impulses, which carried him hither and thither, the prey of conflicting desires. In April, 1794, he is found at Point Pleasant, in western Virginia; in February, 1796, a few miles from Paris, Bourbon Co., Ky.; in April, 1797, floating down the Ohio River in a canoe, bound for that part of the Spanish possessions now known as Missouri. In all these wanderings his wife was his devoted companion, and in the last named year this aged couple found a resting place with their son, Daniel, Jr.

It appears that the venerable pioneer had received assurances from the governor of upper Louisiana that a liberal grant of land should be awarded him and his family. Ten thousand acres of choice land were accordingly marked out on the Missouri River, and given him for his individual use, but the title was never completed, as it could only be done by a trip to New Orleans, which Boone unfortunately failed to make. He became a citizen of Spain, and was appointed syndic or chief of the district of St. Charles. For a time prosperity seemed to shine upon him; he once more enjoyed the unbounded freedom of the woods, and with his rifle and traps earned sufficient to pay the debts which he was obliged to leave unsettled on his removal from Kentucky. It is said, he one day suddenly appeared amid the scenes of his pioneer labors, clad and armed as of old, sought out his various creditors, and taking their account of his indebtedness, paid each one in full, disappearing as suddenly as he came.

But the settlements began once more to intrude upon his hunting grounds. The territory was ceded to the French, and then to the United States. Longer trips were necessary for his hunting and trapping excursions, which took him far up the Missouri River and its tributaries. On one occasion he went to the Osage, accompanied only by a negro lad. Having pitched his camp he was suddenly taken sick, and continued seriously ill for so long a time that the old woodsman thought the end was approaching. One pleasant day, when feeling somewhat stronger, he took his attendant to a slight eminence, and imperturbably marked out his own grave, and gave minute directions in regard to the distribution of his personal effects, and the manner of his burial. This done, he returned to his camp to await the arrival of the "awful summons," but his strong vitality weathered the storm, and he recovered to live some years.

About 1810 he again fell a victim to his incapacity for business affairs. Settlers intruded upon his land, and when he laid his claim before the commissioners of land claims, appointed by congress, they were compelled by their instructions to reject it, because he had failed to settle on and cultivate the land. These were the usual conditions annexed by the Spanish to their grants of land, but in the case of Boone, his official duties in the Spanish government requiring his residence elsewhere, these conditions were dispensed with. However, his failure to complete his title of gift, and his failure to occupy the land claimed, defeated his case before the commissioners. He, therefore, memorialized congress to afford relief, and "left once more, at about the age of eighty, to be a wanderer in the world," he prayed the legislature of Kentucky "to support his application to congress by their aid and influence." This petition promptly received the favorable attention of the legislature, and its instruction to the Kentucky senators and representatives in congress to use their exertions to secure a confirmation of the Spanish grant, or a suitable quantity as a donation, was prefaced by a tribute to the "many eminent services rendered by Col. Daniel Boone," which was alike honorable to the sentiment which moved the assembly and grateful to the simple, guileless spirit, whose keen sagacity and generous bravery had done so much for the infant fortunes of the commonwealth. It is pleasant to record that this effort on the part of the assembly was crowned with success. On February 10, 1814, congress granted Boone, as a donation, 1,000 arpens of land.

His old misfortunes still followed him. Not only did he lose the lands which he called his own, but such as he had sold became a source of loss and trouble. In selling these he gave a "warrantee deed," and subsequently when the original title proved invalid, under the jugglery of the Virginia law, he was obliged to part with his late grant from the United States to satisfy the purchaser. A greater misfortune befel Boone, however, about 1813, in the death of his aged wife. He mourned her loss as one who "would not be comforted," and from this event forward his spirit seems to have been completely broken. He took up his residence with his son, Nathan, and sought forgetfulness in long hunting excursions, which he extended in 1816 as far as Fort Osage, on the Kansas River, a hundred miles from his home. In these expeditions he was accompanied by an attendant who was bound by a written agreement to return his body, wherever he might die, to be buried beside his wife. But the infirmities of age curbed, at last, even the untiring energies of this indefatigable man. Obliged to forego his hunting excursions, and unable to walk far, he would sit at his cabin door for hours at a time, his trusty rifle across his knee, and his eyes directed toward the forest with a dreamy gaze, while in fancy he lived again amid the stirring scenes of his vigorous manhood.

His narrative, preserved by Filson, was a constant source of enjoyment to the kind-hearted old man, and he was never more gratified than when some friend would read to him the meager story of his eventful life. He listened with the keenest interest, occasionally rubbing his hands with excess of satisfaction, and ejaculate, "All true, every word true; not a lie in it." But while thus pleased with the record of his exploits, he seldom spoke of himself, save when particularly questioned. It was the printed memorial that "completely overcame the cold philosophy of his general manner, and he seemed to think it a master-piece of composition."

In 1819 an American artist, prompted by a patriotic wish to preserve the portrait of this notable man, visited him in Missouri, and communicated the following description of his surroundings to Gov. Morehead, who embodied it in his address: "He found him in a small rude cabin, indisposed and resting on his bed. A slice from the loin of a buck, twisted round the rammer of his rifle, within reach of him as he lay, was roasting before the fire. Several other cabins, arranged in the form of a parallelogram, marked the spot of a dilapidated station. They were occupied by the descendants of the pioneer. Here he lived in the midst of his posterity. His withered energies and locks of snow indicated that the sources of existence were nearly exhausted." A fever terminated his life on September 26, 1820, at the house of his son-in-law, Flanders Callaway, in Charette Village, on the Missouri River. He was buried by the side of his wife.

The legislature in session at St. Louis, on the announcement of this event, adjourned for the day in token of respect to his memory, and wore the usual badge of mourning for twenty days. In Kentucky no special observance of the event was made for some years. In its session of 1844–45, the Kentucky legislature adopted measures to have the mortal remains of the celebrated pioneer and his wife removed from Missouri to the public cemetery at Frankfort. On the 13th of September, 1845, these efforts were consummated by the elaborate obsequies with which the remains of the pioneer couple were placed in their new resting place. Since then a handsome monument has been erected, which, though somewhat marred by time, and relic hunters, still remains to mark the resting place of Daniel and Rebecca Boone.

NOTE 20, PAGE 202.

It is probable that Harrod's life was ended by murder. He had had a suit at law with one Bridges, in regard to some property, the result of which had produced a bitter enmity between the two litigants. They had not spoken to each other for some time, when, one day in 1793, Bridges returned after several weeks' absence, and, professing to wish a reconciliation, disclosed to Harrod that he had discovered an abandoned silver mine, of which there was a current tradition, and solicited him to furnish the capital to work it. Harrod's wife earnestly opposed his going alone with Bridges to examine the alleged discovery, and prevailed on him to allow a third person to join the investigation.

On reaching the Three-Forks of the Kentucky River, in the vicinity of which the mine was supposed to be located, the company halted, prepared a camp, and then set out in quest of game, each one pursuing his own course. Bridges and Harrod were not widely separated and proceeded some distance from camp, while the third man explored the less remote regions. He soon heard the report of a gun in the direction and about the vicinity he supposed Harrod was, and thinking he had secured a deer, returned to camp. Here he found Bridges apparently greatly alarmed; he said he had seen fresh Indian "signs," and believed Harrod had been killed; and insisted upon a precipitate retreat, in spite of the earnest remonstrance of his companion, who, rather than be left alone, soon followed to the settlements.

Bridges subsequently sold a quantity of furs to a hatter in Lexington, and at the same time disposed of a pair of silver buttons engraved with the letter H. These being sent to Mrs. Harrod, she instantly recognized them as the ones the colonel had worn in his linen hunting-shirt, when he set out on the expedition. A party of men at once set out for the Three-Forks, where they discovered the bones of a human being, picked bare by the wild beasts of the woods, but a hunting-shirt with the buttons gone remained, and was identified as belonging to Harrod. In the meanwhile, Bridges took the alarm, left the country, and was never more heard of. (See Dr. Graham's narrative in Collins, Vol. II, p. 614.)

NOTE 21, PAGE 208.

The "Kentucky boat," or "broad horn," was a flat-boat, constructed upon the crudest principles of naval architecture. Until 1800, it was the only traffic boat on the western rivers, but at this time the "keel-boat" was introduced, which gradually superseded its predecessor in the public service, although flat-boats were found on the Mississippi in considerable numbers until the steam-boat ended the career of all such craft,

The numerous water-ways and the utter lack of roads made travel and transportation by water an early necessity, and the flat-boat was an outgrowth of the self-help of the pioneers. It was earliest in demand as a means to transport immigrants and their goods to Kentucky, which gave rise to its name. At first these boats were constructed by those who had need of them, but immigration subsequently increased to such an extent that their construction became one of the more prominent industries of Brownsville and Pittsburgh, Penn., and of Wheeling, W. Va. The business was not confined to these points, however, and almost every settlement upon the navigable portion of the Monongahela and Youghiogheny Rivers, did more or less of boat building. Subsequently, when the "keel-boat" became prominent, the flat-boat lost its distinctive name, and was chiefly used by the farmers and merchants of Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana to convey their produce to the New Orleans market.

The form of these boats was a parallelogram, varying in length from fifteen to fifty feet, and in width from ten to fifteen feet, affording a capacity which varied from fifty to 500 tons burthen. On the Kentucky and Illinois Rivers they were sometimes built seventy-five feet long, and carried from 2,000 to 5,000 bushels of grain. The method and style of construction was simple, and suited to the meager resources of the times. The plan was to take a fine poplar or sycamore tree, hew it in rectangular shape about eighteen by twenty-four inches. This was split through the middle, leaving strips about twelve by eighteen inches and of varying length to suit the boat. These formed the gunwales, and constituted the main strength of the boat. The heart side was placed outward, amd on the inner corner was cut a "gain" large enough to allow the two-inch flooring to rest in it, and come to the level of the bottom of the gunwale. The width of the boat was established by cross pieces framed in the gunwales at moderate distances apart. Lengthwise the boat was further strengthened by "streamers" running parallel with the gunwales about four feet apart. Upon this framework, securely framed and fastened together, flooring of two-inch oak planks was laid double, pinned with wooden pins and heavy nails.

The boat, thus far constructed, was bottom side up, and after being well caulked, the difficulty encountered was to turn it over to be finished and launched. Among the farmers the practice was to choose a location on the bank of the river convenient for launching, and when the work reached this stage to turn it on the land, though the more skillful turned it on the water. If it was done on the land, the men of the neighborhood were invited, and all joined in lifting one side of the wooden leviathan, and letting it fall over on brush heaps and a multitude of hoop-poles, somewhat inclined to break its fall. This was attended with considerable risk of damage, and the other way was preferred. That was to place a temporary board railing on one side and the ends. Against this railing an embankment of earth was placed on the boat, and thus prepared, it was launched into the stream and towed by yawls into deep water. The side of the boat, weighted with earth was placed up stream across the current, and while held in this position the embankment was broken in two places, to allow the water to find its way into the boat. The weight of the earth held this side lower than the other, to which was added the weight of the admitted water; this resulted in such a depression of this side as to give the current such hold of the structure as to turn it under the stream, when, the dirt falling off, it righted with the proper side uppermost. Great care was necessary to prevent the embankment from being prematurely broken, and for those who managed the turning to escape a serious wetting by leaping into a small boat kept near at hand.

When turned, it was hauled ashore by a cable previously fastened to it, and then completed. The gunwales were trimmed off at the prow to give the boat the proper "rake;" sides about four feet high were added by nailing clapboards on studding, framed in the sills or gunwales, and caulking applied to the first and second joints from the bottom, and sometimes higher. In case of boats bound for New Orleans, about three feet of the prow was left uninclosed to prevent snags piercing into the cargo. The inclosed portion was roofed over with boards projecting over the sides to shed the water perfectly, and rounded from one side to the other, the center being about five and a half to six feet high. This was the rule in case of traffic boats, but in other cases only the cabin was provided with roof. This was located at the stern, about six feet of which was devoted to bunks, a stone fireplace with "cat and clay" chimney. Emigrant boats were made to resemble a box and were abandoned to the current without any effort or means of navigating them. Traffic boats were provided with "sweeps," and a steering oar.

Such a craft could be purchased of regular builders at a price varying from $1 to $1.25 per linear foot, but the purchaser found it necessary to provide a cable, pump and fire-place at an additional cost of about $10. Flat-boats were built with square prow to resist the rapid current, and were illy adapted to progress up stream. Traffic boats were, therefore, sold as lumber or firewood on reaching their destination. Emigrant boats found some purchasers who would use them to continue the trip to New Orleans, but they were generally disposed of cheaply for the lumber in them.

NOTE 22, PAGE 209.

In his reminiscential letters, Dr. Drake, speaking of a visit in 1845 to the scene of his early home at Mayslick, Mason Co., Ky., says: "It is a remarkable fact that in the early period of which I am writing, from 1794 to 1800, the white population was greater in that neighborhood than I found it in the visit referred to. In a single solitary walk of two miles, which included the spot of our old home, I passed over the foundation—the decayed logs and dust—of no less than twelve cabins, on the broad hearths of which I used to warm myself in winter, or play around in other seasons, when sent to them on errands, or permitted to visit the boys and girls with which they were redolent. Besides, I saw two of a better kind than the first, erected of hewed logs, which were tenantless and surrounded by hemp. * * * * * * * The loss of white population so impressively shown forth by what I have said, has occurred in various parts of Kentucky. ("Pioneer Life in Kentucky," pp. 182–3.)

The following table shows the population at each census, 1790–1880:

Census Years.	Whites.	Free Colored.	Slaves.	Total.
1790	61,133	114	12,430	73,677
1800	179,873	739	40,343	220,955
1810	324,237	1,713	80,561	406,511
1820	434,647	2,759	126,732	564,135
1830	517,787	4,917	165,213	687,917
1840	590,253	7.317	182,258	779,828
1850	761,413	10,011	210,981	982,405
1860	919,484	10,684	225,483	1,155,684
1870	1,098,692	222,210	.....	1,321,011
1880	1,377,187	271,521*	.....	1,648,708

*Including 10 Chinese and 50 Indians.

The following cities had in 1880 a population exceeding 5,000:

Louisville	123,645
Covington	29,720
Newport	20,433
Lexington	16,656
Paducah	8,376
Frankfort (State capital)	6,958
Maysville	5,220

NOTE 23, PAGE 214.

"We have individvals in Kentucky," wrote the famous naturalist, Audubon, "that even there are considered wonderful adepts in the management of the rifle. Having resided some years in Kentucky, and having more than once been witness of rifle sport, I shall present the results of my observation, leaving the reader to judge how far rifle shooting is understood in that State.

"Several individuals who conceive themselves adepts in the management of the rifle, are often seen to meet for the purpose of displaying their skill; and, betting a trifling sum, put up a target, in the center of which, a common sized nail is hammered for about two thirds its length. The marksmen make choice of what they consider a proper distance, and which may be forty paces. Each man cleans the interior of his tube, which is called wiping it, places a ball in the palm of his hand, pouring as much powder from his horn as will cover it. This quanity is supposed to be sufficient for any distance short of 100 yards. A shot which comes very close to the nail is considered that of an indifferent marksman; the bending of the nail is of course somewhat better; but nothing less than hitting it right on the head is satisfactory. One out of three shots generally hits the nail; and should the shooters amount to half a dozen, two nails are frequently needed before each can have a shot.

Those who drive the nail have a further trial among themselves, and the two best shots out of these generally settle the affair, when all the sportsmen adjourn to some house and spend an hour or two in friendly intercourse, appointing before they part a day for another trial. This is technically termed, 'driving the nail.'

"Barking of squirrels is delightful sport, and in my opinion, requires a greater degree of accuracy than any other. I first witnessed this manner of procuring squirrels while near the town of Frankfort. The performer was the celebrated Daniel Boone. We walked out together and followed the rocky margins of the Kentucky River until we reached a piece of flat land, thickly covered with black walnuts, oaks and hickories. As the general mast was a good one for that year, squirrels were seen gamboling on every tree around us. My companion, a stout, hale, athletic man, dressed in a homespun hunting shirt, bare-legged and moccasined, carried a long and heavy rifle, which, as he was loading, he said had proved efficient in all of his former undertakings, and which he hoped would not fail on this occasion, as he felt proud to show me his skill. The gun was wiped, the powder measured, the ball patched with six-hundred-thread linen, and a charge sent home with a hickory rod. We moved not a step from the place, for the squirrels were so thick that it was unnecessary to go after them.

"Boone pointed to one of these animals, which had observed us, and was crouched on a bough about fifty paces distant, and bade me mark well where the ball should hit. He raised his piece gradually until the bead, or sight of the barrel, was brought to a line with he spot he intended to hit. The whip-like report resounded through the woods, and along the hills in repeated echoes. Judge of my surprise when I perceived that the ball had hit the piece of bark immediately underneath the squirrel, and shivered it into splinters, the concussion produced by which had killed the animal, and sent it whirling through the air as if it had been blown up by the explosion of a powder magazine. Boone kept up his firing, and before many hours had elapsed, we had procured as many squirrels as we wished. Since that first interview with the veteran Boone, I have seen many other individuals perform the same feat.

"The snuffing of a candle with a ball I first had an opportunity of seeing near the banks of the Green River, not far from a large pigeon-roost, to which I had previously made a visit. I had heard many reports of guns during the early part of a dark night, and knowing them to be those of rifles, I went forward toward the spot to ascertain the cause. On reaching the place I was welcomed by a dozen tall, stout men, who told me they were exercising for the purpose of enabling them to shoot after night, at the reflected light from the eyes of a deer or wolf by torch-light. A fire was blazing near, the smoke of which rose curling among the thick foliage of the trees. At a distance which rendered it scarcely distinguishable, stood a burning candle, but which in reality was only fifty yards from the spot on which we all stood. One man was within a few yards of it to watch the effect of the shots, as well as to light the candle should it chance to go out, or to replace it should the shot cut it across. Each marksman shot in his turn. Some never hit either the snuff or the candle, and were congratulated with a loud laugh, while others actually snuffed the candle without putting it out, and were recompensed for their dexterity with numerous hurrahs. One of them, who was particularly expert, was very fortunate, and snuffed the candle three times out of seven, while the other shots either put out the candle or cut it immediately under the light.

"Of the feats performed by the Kentuckians with the rifle, I might say more than might be expedient on the present occasion. By way of recreation, they often cut off a piece of the bark of a tree, make a target of it, using a little powder wetted with water or saliva, for the bulls-eye, and shoot into the mark all the balls they have about them, picking them out of the wood again."

NOTE 24, PAGE 223.

A great part of the insecurity of land-titles arose from the eagerness of ignorant men. The location of land at that date was attended with no little danger, arising from the hostility of the Indians, and demanded for its successful accomplishment such qualifications as were seldom possessed by the frontiersmen. To the technical proficiency of the surveyor, the situation demanded the addition of the wood-craft of the pioneer and the bold hardiness of the scout. Those who possessed the last two generally lacked the first qualification, and it was believed it could better be omitted in choosing a locator than the others. Hence it followed that, in their eagerness to anticipate their competitors for possession of public lands, many holders of land-warrants entrusted their interests to persons who were more skilled in wood-craft than in the legal requirements of the legislative enactment. But the success of such locators was generally hindered by the dangers and natural difficulties of the work, as well as by the urgency of their employers, and the inevitable result was that, notwithstanding the honest intentions of the agents, "locations" were strewn "over the face of the country, as autumn distributes its falling leaves." The character of the consequent confusion is aptly illustrated by Marshall (Vol. I, pp. 150, 151) as follows: "Lewis Craig enters 500 acres of land upon a treasury warrant, adjoining his former entry on the north side, and running along northwardly with Christian's and Todd's line for quantity."

Here, it is to be remarked, that of all the country north of the Kentucky River, no particular water-course is called for, or other object of general description named, whereby the attention of the subsequent locator could be led to a particular section or circuit, within, or about, which to look for the particular objects of location. Again, it does not appear what former entry of Craig's is meant; neither is it certain what line of Christian and Todd is intended, or who, among many of the name, they are; or what line of theirs is to be followed, or where it is to be found; or, if one be found, whether it be the same called for by Craig or not. This exemplifies a vague entry.

The same day "George Smith enters 500 acres of land on a treasury-warrant, lying on the north side of Kentucky, a mile below a creek, beginning about twenty poles below a lick, running down the river, westerly and northwestwardly, for quantity."

It is obvious that the location-calls in this entry are all vague and uncertain to a subsequent locator.

The "north side of Kentucky" comprehended the whole county of Fayette, and more than one-third of the whole country. The next call is, "a mile below a creek," but which of the 500 creeks on the north side of the Kentucky does not appear either by name or description; and finally it is to begin "about twenty poles from a lick," but what lick, or where, are questions all-important to the locator of the adjoining land, but which are left unanswered and unanswerable by anything in Mr. Smith's entry. It is presumable that the person who made Mr. Smith's location knew the place which he intended to include, but certainly those holding unlocated warrants were not bound to find him; nor could his verbal explanation, if seen, aid an entry which the law required should be in writing. The holder of a warrant, which he desired to locate, with a copy of Mr. Smith's entry in his hand, could not know how to adjoin it, nor yet how to avoid an interference. He would, however, proceed to make his entry, and possibly, with a similar degree of vagueness. When they came to be surveyed, very probably, and to the very great surprise of both owners, the two interfered.

Another instance: "Edward Hall enters 622 acres of land, upon a treasury warrant, on Eagle Creek, a branch of Kentucky; beginning at a small beech, marked thus, 'I. N,' on the north side of a small drain; then east 320 poles; then north at right angles for quantity."

To see that this entry is wholly vague and uncertain to a subsequent locator, it is only necessary to observe that Eagle Creek is fifty miles in length, has 1,000 drains, and 1,000,000 of beech trees; while I. N. being cut on any one of them left it still destitute of notoriety. Hence it was totally unreasonable to require of a subsequent locator that he should find where it was in order to avoid an interference. He, of course, proceeded without knowing.

Besides these, there were other circumstances which contributed to produce interference between the claims to land, and which the importance of the subject requires should be mentioned. The country, being unknown and unsettled in its greatest extent, was explored by individuals, or small parties, who often gave different names to the same objects, such as water-courses, traces, licks, etc., and often mistook or confounded places and distances from the one to the other.

Whence sprang an infinitude of conflicting claims. Others made or referred to obscure marks, which, not having acquired the attention of those conversant in their vicinity, wanted notoriety to supply the absence of description, and relied on them as the foundation of their locations. To notice another source of interference, though last not least productive, it often happened that two sets of locators, commencing their entries on parallel creeks, and running out each way until they interlocked, were quite astonished to find their surveyors crossing each other's lines.

NOTE 25, PAGE 228.

This plant, known to the botanist as Panax quinque folium, is highly prized by the Chinese. The root, when dried, is of a yellowish white color, with a mucilaginous sweetness in the taste, somewhat resembling licorice, accompanied with a slight aromatic bitterness. It is found in America, from Lower Canada as far as the State of Georgia. It thrives most in the mountainous regions of the Alleghanies, where it is more abundant. It is also met with in the environs of New York and Philadelphia, as well as in those parts of the northern States situated between the mountains and the sea, but it is so scarce as not to be worth the trouble of seeking. It is not found in the lower parts of Virginia and the Carolinas. It grows on declivities of mountains, in cool shady places, and in the richest soil. A man will not take up more than eight or nine pounds of the fresh roots in a day; these roots are always less than an inch in diameter, even after a growth of fifteen years, if any dependence can be placed on the number of rings on the upper part of the neck of the root, which are produced by the annual addition of successive layers.

Its collection in the United States is begun in the spring and ends when frost begins. Its root shrivels in drying, and finally becomes extremely hard, losing a third of its volume, and nearly half its weight in the process. By a simple process the Chinese give it a semi-transparency, which greatly enhances its commercial value. A description of this operation, though no secret, was early sold for $400 to persons in Kentucky, who turned the knowledge to a valuable account. Ginseng, thus prepared, brought $6 or $7 a pound in Philadelphia, and was sold at $50 to $100 in Canton. A considerable quantity was exported direct to China from Kentucky. It is still gathered and sold to some extent.

NOTE 26, PAGE 265.

On January 1, 1785, all that part of Jefferson south of Salt River became Nelson County, in accordance with an act of the legislature passed the previous year. In the fall session of this year acts were passed forming three new counties, and all that part of Fayette lying "within a line beginning at the mouth of Upper Howard's Creek, on Kentucky River, running up the main fork thereof to the head; thence with the dividing ridge between Kentucky and Licking, until it comes opposite Eagle Creek; from thence a direct line to the nearest part of Raven Creek, a branch of Licking, and down Raven Creek to the mouth thereof; thence with Licking to the Ohio; thence with the Ohio to the mouth of Sandy Creek, up said creek to Cumberland Mountain; thence with the said mountain to the line of Lincoln County; thence with that line and the Kentucky River to the beginning," was constituted the county of Bourbon, and organized May 1, 1786.

The county of Mercer was formed of that part of Lincoln County lying within "a line beginning at the confluence of Sugar Creek and Kentucky River; thence a direct line to the mouth of Clark's Run; thence a straight line to Wilson's Station, in the fork of Clark's Run; then the same course continued to the line of Nelson County; thence with the said line to the line of Jefferson County; thence with that line to the Kentucky River; thence up the said river to the beginning."

Madison County was formed at the same time from that portion of Lincoln lying within "a line beginning at the confluence of Kentucky River and Sugar Creek; thence up said creek to the fork that James Thompson lives on; thence up said fork to the head thereof; thence a straight line to where an east course from John Ellis' will intersect the ridge that divides the waters of Paint Lick from the waters of Dick's River; thence along the top of said ridge southwardly, opposite to Hickman's Lick; thence south, forty-five degrees east, to the main Rockcastle River; thence up the said river to the head thereof; thence with the ridge that divides the waters of Kentucky River from the waters of Cumberland River to the line of Washington County; thence along said line to the main fork of Kentucky River that divides the county of Fayette from the county of Lincoln; thence down the said river to the beginning."

This will suffice to indicate the order and character of this development, which may be summarized in the following table:

	New Counties.	Formed from	Year.
1	Jefferson	Kentucky	1780
2	Fayette	Kentucky	1780
3	Lincoln	Kentucky	1780
4	Nelson	Jefferson	1784
5	Bourbon	Fayette	1785
6	Mercer	Lincoln	1785
7	Madison	Lincoln	1785
8	Mason	Bourbon	1788
9	Woodford	Fayette	1788
10	Washington	Nelson	1792
11	Scott	Woodford	1792
12	Shelby	Jefferson	1792
13	Logan	Lincoln	1792
14	Clark	Fayette and Bourbon	1792
15	Hardin	Nelson	1792
16	Greene	Lincoln and Nelson	1792
17	Harrison	Bourbon and Scott	1793
18	Franklin	Woodford, Mercer and Shelby	1794
19	Campbell	Harrison, Scott and Mason	1794
20	Bullitt	Jefferson and Nelson	1796
21	Christian	Logan	1796
22	Montgomery	Clark	1796
23	Bracken	Mason and Campbell	1796
24	Warren	Logan	1796
25	Garrard	Mercer, Lincoln and Madison	1796
26	Fleming	Mason	1798
27	Pulaski	Lincoln and Greene	1798
28	Pendleton	Bracken and Campbell	1798
29	Livingston	Christian	1798
30	Boone	Campbell	1798
31	Henry	Shelby	1798
32	Cumberland	Greene	1798
33	Gallatin	Franklin and Shelby	1798
34	Muhlenburg	Logan and Christian	1798
35	Ohio	Hardin	1798
36	Jessamine	Fayette	1798
37	Barren	Warren and Greene	1798
38	Henderson	Christian	1798
39	Breckinridge	Hardin	1799
40	Floyd	Fleming, Montgomery and Mason	1799
41	Knox	Lincoln	1799
42	Nicholas	Bourbon and Mason	1799
43	Wayne	Pulaski and Cumberland	1800
44	Adair	Greene	1801
45	Greenup	Mason	1803
46	Casey	Lincoln	1806
47	Clay	Madison, Knox and Floyd	1806
48	Lewis	Mason	1806
49	Hopkins	Henderson	1806
50	Estill	Madison and Clark	1808
51	Caldwell	Livingston	1809
52	Rockcastle	Lincoln, Pulaski, Madison and Knox	1810
53	Butler	Logan and Ohio	1810
54	Grayson	Hardin and Ohio	1810
55	Union	Henderson	1811
56	Bath	Montgomery	1811
57	Allen	Warren and Barren	1815
58	Daviess	Ohio	1815
59	Whitley	Knox	1818
60	Harlan	Floyd and Knox	1819
61	Hart	Hardin and Greene	1819
62	Owen	Scott, Franklin and Greene	1819
63	Simpson	Logan, Warren and Allen	1819
64	Todd	Logan	1819
65	Monroe	Barren and Cumberland	1820
66	Trigg	Christian and Caldwell	1820
67	Grant	Pendleton	1820
68	Perry	Clay and Ford	1820
69	Lawrence	Greenup and Floyd	1821
70	Pike	Floyd	1821
71	Hickman	Caldwell and Livingston	1821
72	Calloway	Hickman	1822
73	Morgan	Floyd and Bath	1822
74	Oldham	Jefferson, Shelby and Henry	1823
75	Graves	Hickman	1823
76	Meade	Hardin and Breckinridge	1823
77	Spencer	Nelson, Shelby and Bullitt	1824
78	McCracken	Hickman	1824
79	Edmonson	Warren, Hart and Grayson	1825
80	Laurel	Rockcastle, Clay, Knox and Whitley	1825
81	Russell	Adair, Wayne and Cumberland	1825
82	Anderson	Franklin, Mercer and Washington	1827
83	Hancock	Breckinridge, Daviess and Ohio	1829

New Counties.	Formed from.	Year.
84 Marion	Washington	1834
85 Clinton	Wayne and Cumberland	1835
86 Trimble	Gallatin, Henry and Oldham	1836
87 Carroll	Gallatin	1838
88 Carter	Greenup and Lawrence	1838
89 Breathitt	Clay, Perry and Estill	1839
90 Kenton	Campbell	1840
91 Crittenden	Livingston	1842
92 Marshall	Calloway	1842
93 Ballard	Hickman and McCracken	1842
94 Boyle	Mercer and Lincoln	1842
95 Letcher	Perry and Harlan	1842
96 Owsley	Clay, Estill and Breathitt	1843
97 Johnson	Floyd, Lawrence and Morgan	1843
98 Larue	Hardin	1843
99 Fulton	Hickman	1845
100 Taylor	Greene	1848
101 Powell	Montgomery, Clark and Estill	1852
102 Lyon	Caldwell	1854
103 McLean	Daviess, Muhlenburg and Ohio	1854
104 Rowan	Fleming and Morgan	1856
105 Jackson	Estill, Owsley, Clay, Laurel, Rockcastle and Madison	1858
106 Metcalfe	Barren, Greene, Adair, Cumberland and Monroe	1860
107 Boyd	Greenup, Carter and Lawrence	1860
108 Magoffin	Morgan, Johnson and Floyd	1860
109 Webster	Hopkins, Henderson and Union	1860
110 Wolfe	Morgan, Breathitt, Owsley and Powell	1860
111 Robertson	Nicholas, Harrison, Bracken and Mason	1867
112 Bell	Harlan and Knox	1867
113 Menifee	Bath, Morgan, Powell, Montgomery and Wolfe	1869
114 Elliott	Morgan, Carter and Lawrence	1869
115 Lee	Owsley, Estill, Wolfe and Breathitt	1870
116 Martin	Pike, Johnson, Floyd and Lawrence	1870
117 Knott	Floyd, Letcher, Perry and Breathitt	1884

For a time the organization of successive counties indicated the gradual development of the country, but that period has passed sometime since. Many of the later counties owe their origin to other motives than the demands of a sound public policy, and a number of "pauper counties" have been added to the list, the existence of which is prejudicial to nearly every interest concerned. The last county formed is a conspicuous example of this unfortunate legislation, the origin of which is given in a very readable article found in the Louisville Commercial for July 8, 1885, as follows:

The last legislature included a plain-looking man of forty-five, of the average size, cheaply dressed, slightly bald and wearing spectacles—Robert Bates, the member from Letcher and some other counties. He occupied a seat in a remote corner of the House of Representatives, and never arose to speak even to a "point of order." The chief distinction he wore was that of being a brother to "Baby Bates," the celebrated Kentucky giant, known to the patrons of every museum in the land. Back of the seat occupied by Bates, frequently leaning over the railing of the lobby to talk with him, sat an ex-member named Fitzpatrick, tall, awkward, smooth-faced, and always appearing in the same heavy drab overcoat. Before the session closed an act was passed to create a county to be called Knott, with a county-seat named Hindman, in honor of the two officials wearing these names. Perhaps it would not have been termed inappropriately "An act to establish a county-seat upon the land of Robert Bates."

The traveler southward from Catlettsburg, on the Chattaroi Railroad, will find that the cars stop at Richardson, on the Big Sandy River. In the winter some sort of a boat can be procured to Prestonburg, in Floyd County, but at this season part of the distance must be traveled in a vehicle, which may be described as an ambulance, and part on horseback. Here the traveler is still forty-two miles from the Forks of Troublesome, indicated by the act as the seat of government for the new county. Another horse must be procured for the ride over the rough road which follows Beaver Creek during a greater part of the way. Upon arriving at the Forks of Troublesome nothing appears but two or three log houses, not grouped together with any view of making a beginning for a town, while vast forests extend in every direction. A road extends to Whitesburg, the county-seat of Letcher; another to Hazard, in Perry County, and a third to Jackson, in Breathitt. Two of these counties, at least, have made a reputation for outlawry that has extended beyond the State.

On Monday, July 7, 1884, the commissioners named to form the new county of Knott assembled at the "forks." The event had been duly advertised throughout those parts of Breathitt, Floyd, Perry and Letcher Counties, which were to be embraced in the new organization. A few persons from a distance were lodged in the "double" log-house, which served as the only inn in that section. It consisted of two log pens, covered by one roof, with a space between them large enough for another room. The second largest house was the store of "Chick" Allen, a son-in-law of Robert Bates aforesaid. The third house was what is facetiously known in the "moonshine" districts as a "bonded warehouse." No distillery was in sight, but a plentiful supply of white native whisky was served from the log-cabin with the high-sounding name. Mr. Bates was on hand, of course, as was his friend, Fitzpatrick, the latter being the spokesman of the commissioners.

Early in the day the neighboring people—and not all of them near neighbors—began to assemble. The young people predominated, because a "good time" was promised. Rustic maidens, accompanied by their swains, and rugged farmers with their families came on foot or on horseback, according to the distance. Soon two fiddlers of local repute made an appearance, which was a signal for clearing a small level space near the store, which was used for dancing through the day. The "bonded warehouse" was the chief attraction, however, and the pure mountain liquor, as the good people deemed it, flowed steadily from morning until night. With some, numerous potations proved an incentive for greater agility on the dancing-ground—not that anybody was drunk, but "they war a drinkin' some." The effect upon others was to make them boisterous, singing and shouting, now and then firing a pistol to add to the general "hilarity." The people of these counties are the most hospitable in the world, and the most amiable toward strangers, who give no grounds for suspicion. Everything was good natured, therefore, though a few small disputes had to be settled by personal encounters in which no weapons were employed.

A marked figure on this scene was old man Everidge, evidently of the age of sixty, who had never owned a hat, "'cause it made his head too warm." Nor did he wear any shoes in summer. Not even a coat was needed to complete his costume for the dance. He drank nothing, but was none the less hilarious for that, and danced as regularly as any of the younger bloods. The dancing ground was small, bounded on one side by a dry ditch, which, during part of the year, is one of the branches of Troublesome Creek. Once, while dancing a cotillion, the old man was led to the brink of the ditch by two of the women, whose hands held him, when they suddenly let him go, with the effect of landing him on his back on the sand below. It was great sport for everybody, and the old man lost no temper in consequence. A figure more noticeable was the belle of the ball—a young woman of twenty, with a most attractive form and the bearing of a princess. A ruddy complexion, great brown eyes, and a profusion of auburn ringlets were additional attractions. Dressed tastefully, she would have attracted wide admiration on any of our fashionable streets. Perhaps she would have excited greater curiosity, however, in her native habiliments. She wore a dress of red calico, severely plain with the exception of a yellow ruffle about the bottom of the skirt and a narrow blue ribbon around the waist. A small green sun-bonnet, which did not hide half her ringlets, formed the rest of her attire. The belle wore shoes, without stockings, upon her arrival, but like the other dancers she placed these against the stone wall which lined one side of the dancing-ground. She was heard to say that she "couldn't dance to do no good with shoes on." The ladies drank more sparingly than their lords of the white whisky, so that none of them, except one or two of dubious reputations, became intoxicated.

Meanwhile the commissioners were compelled, by the general excitement, to adjourn to a farmhouse half a mile down the creek, where their business was transacted. The nature of that business perhaps was never recorded. It was not altogether a peaceable meeting. The territory to be formed into a new county embraced the homes of the assessor of Floyd County, the sheriff of Letcher, the coroner of Breathitt and the surveyor of Perry. The first mentioned, Bolling Hall, was named as the head of a committee to divide the county into magisterial districts, but refused to serve, asserting that he would never consent to any arrangement which would deprive him of his former well-paying office, as the formation of the new county would do. Another work of the commissioners was to arrange for the election of county officers a month later, and to order a set of blank books for the county records. The latter have been secured, and the bill for them sent, as the law requires, to Frankfort, to be paid by the State. The shrewdness of these unsophisticated people is shown in the fact that while no other new county has expended more than $1,200 for an outfit of record books, the bill sent by Knott was $2,100, an amount which Auditor Hewitt has refused to pay until forced by law to do so. Thus it seems that one of the first acts of the new county was to raid the State treasury for the private benefit of a few citizens. There is a story told at Frankfort which is a propos: The late James Davidson, while State treasurer, always doled out the public moneys grudgingly, as if bestowing private alms upon undeserving persons. One day the sheriff of Perry County came in to make his settlement with the State. There were twenty-five "idiot claims," which were approved by the auditor, who gave a warrant upon the treasurer for their payment. Mr. Davidson counted the claims slowly and aloud, turning, as he finished, to the sheriff with the remark:

"Why, Mr. Coombs, you must all be idiots up in Perry County."

"Pretty near, I guess," was the reply, "but we generally have sense enough to get what's comin' to us from the treasury."

In the latter respect it seems that Perry County people are not unlike all the others.

The close of the festivities at what had become, during the day, the town of Hindman, was a fitting climax. The local magistrate and the only physician in the community lay on their backs in the sand, which lined the bottom of the dry creek, the former singing with all his might until he became too drowsy longer to make any exertion. Many others lay stretched at full length upon the grass. The growth of the darkness made the enthusiastic survivors more reckless, and pistol shots became more frequent until late in the night. Since the first day's performance in making the new county it is not reported that any further measures have been taken toward setting the county machinery in motion. The double log-house is the only known repository of the expensive record books, and no accommodations have been provided for holding courts. Such is the new county named for the present governor of Kentucky. Such is the county formed for the benefit of Mr. Bates and his friends.

Yet these are not bad people. Their quarrels are among themselves, and they do not offer to molest a stranger. Their ideas are narrow because they have no relations with the rest of the world. The man among them who happens to get to Frankfort once or twice in a lifetime, as the steerer of a raft of logs, is listened to thereafter on public questions as an oracle. Probably not more than two dozen persons present at the organization of Knott County could read, but there was evident a certain amount of respect for the man able to read and write. Some one was being discussed with reference to his becoming a candidate for the legislature.

"Hell!" says one; "he ain't fitten for no legislature."

"Yes he is!" ejaculated his neighbor; "he can read and repeat!"

What degree of qualification this may be is left for the reader to conjecture.

NOTE 27, PAGE 268.

James Wilkinson was born in Maryland in 1757, studied medicine in Philadelphia, but after the battle of Bunker Hill repaired to Cambridge, and was soon appointed captain in Reed's New Hampshire regiment, serving as such with Arnold in the northern army; promoted brigade-major July, 1776, and lieutenant-colonel January 12, 1777; bearer of dispatches to Gen. Washington from Gen. Gates December, 1776, he participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton. Upon Gates' accession to command of the northern army, Wilkinson was made his adjutant-general May, 1777, and upon surrender of Burgoyne he conveyed the official dispatches to congress. Brevetted brigadier-general in November, he was, in January, 1778, appointed secretary of the board of war, of which Gates was president. A quarrel arising with the latter at the time of the Conway cabal, Wilkinson resigned his secretaryship, and in July, 1779, was appointed clothier-general of the army. Settled in Kentucky after the peace, and engaged in mercantile affairs. Appointed lieutenant-colonel Second Infantry November, 1791, and conducted an expedition against the Wabash Indians in 1791–92; promoted to be brigadier-general March 1792, and commanded the right wing of Wayne's army at Maumee Rapids, and in December, 1796, became general-in-chief of the army, serving on the western frontier; one of the commissioners to receive Louisiana from the French in 1803; he was governor of that territory in 1805–06; ordered to command on the Mississippi December, 1808; he was recalled to Washington in 1810, and tried by court-martial in 1811 on charges of corruptly receiving money from Spain, and being in complicity with Aaron Burr. The court acquitted him with credit, and he returned to the southern department. In 1813 he was appointed major-general and transferred to the northern frontier. Owing to the failure of Hampton to co-operate with him, his plans for the occupation of Canada totally failed. He was superseded in command, and a court of inquiry ordered in 1815, which acquitted him of all blame. On the re-organization of the army in 1815, he was discharged, and passed the later years of his life upon his estates in Mexico. In 1816 he published "Memoirs of My Own Times" (3 Vols., 8 vo.); died near the City of Mexico December 28, 1825. (Johnson's Cyclopedia.)

NOTE 28, PAGE 275.

A memoir by Daniel Clark, supposed to be the nephew of the gentleman of the same name who was appointed Wilkinson's agent, gives a concise history of the matter, which is extracted from American State Papers, Vol. XX, p. 707. Wilkinson, in his "Memoirs of My Own Times," confirms this account as substantially correct. "About the period of which we are now speaking, in the middle of the year 1787, the foundation of an intercourse with Kentucky and the settlements on the Ohio was laid, which daily increased. Previous to that time, all those who ventured on the Mississippi had their property seized by the first commanding officer whom they met, and little or no communication was kept up between the countries. Now and then an emigrant who wished to settle in Natchez, by dint of entreaty, and solicitation of friends who had interests in New Orleans, procured permission to move there with his family, slaves, cattle, furniture and farming utensils, but was allowed to bring no other property except cash. An unexpected incident, however, changed the face of things, and was productive of a new line of conduct. The arrival of a boat, belonging to Gen. Wilkinson, loaded with tobacco and other productions of Kentucky, is announced in town, and a guard was immediately sent on board of it. The general's name had hindered this being done at Natchez, as the commandant was fearful that such a step might be displeasing to his superiors, who might wish to show some respect to the property of a general officer; at any rate the boat was proceeding to New Orleans, and they would there resolve on what measures they ought to pursue and put in execution. The government, not much disposed to show any mark of respect or forbearance toward the general's property, he not having at that time arrived, was about proceeding in the usual way of confiscation, when a merchant in New Orleans, who had considerable influence there, and who was formerly acquainted with the general, represented to the governor that the measures taken by the intendant would very probably give rise to disagreeable events; that the people of Kentucky were already exasperated at the conduct of the Spaniards in seizing on the property of all those who navigated the Mississippi; and if this system was pursued, they would very probably, in spite of congress and the executive of the United States, take upon themselves to obtain the navigation of the river by force, which they were well able to do; a measure for some time before much dreaded by this government, which had no force to resist them, if such a plan was put in execution. Hints were likewise given that Wilkinson was a very popular man, who could influence the whole of that country; and probably that his sending a boat before him with a wish that she might be seized was but a snare at his return to influence the minds of the people, and, having brought them to the point he wished, induce them to appoint him their leader, and then, like a torrent, spread over the country, and carry fire and desolation from one end of the province to the other.

"Gov. Miro, a weak man, unacquainted with the American government, ignorant even of the position of Kentucky with respect to his own province, but alarmed at the very idea of an irruption of Kentucky men, whom he feared without knowing their strength, communicated his wishes to the intendant that the guard might be removed from the boat, which was accordingly done, and a Mr. Patterson, who was the agent of the general, was permitted to take charge of the property on board, and to sell it free of duty. The general, on his arrival in Orleans, sometime after, was informed of the obligation he lay under to the merchant, who had impressed the government with such an idea of his importance and influence at home, waited on him, and in concert with him, formed a plan for their future operations. In his interview with the governor, that he might not seem to derrogate from the character given of him, by appearing concerned in so trifling a business as a boat load of tobacco, hams and butter, he gave him to understand that the property belonged to many citizens of Kentucky, who, availing themselves of his return to the Atlantic States, by way of Orleans, wished to make trial of the temper of this government, as he, on his arrival, might inform his own what steps had been pursued under his eye, that adequate measures might be afterward taken to procure satisfaction. He acknowledged with gratitude the attention and respect manifested by the governor toward himself in the favor shown to his agent; but at the same time mentioned that he would not wish the governor to expose himself to the anger of his court by refraining from seizing on the boat and cargo, as it was but a trifle, if such were the positive orders from the court, and that he had not power to relax them according to circumstances. Convinced by this discourse that the general rather wished for an opportunity of embroiling affairs than sought to avoid it, the governor became more alarmed. For wo or three years before, particularly since the arrival of the commissioners from Georgia, who had come to Natchez to claim that country, he had been fearful of an invasion at every annual rise of the waters, and the news of a few boats being seen was enough to alarm the whole province. He revolved in his mind what measures he ought to pursue (consistent with the orders he had from home not to permit the free navigation of the river), in order to keep the Kentucky people quiet; and in his succeeding interviews with Wilkinson, having procured more knowledge than he had hitherto acquired of their character, population, strength and dispositions, he thought he could do nothing better than hold out a bait to Wilkinson to use his influence in restraining the people from an invasion of this province till he could give advice to his court, and require further instructions. This was the point to which the parties wished to bring him, and being informed that in Kentucky two or three crops were on hand, for which, if an immediate vent was not to be found, the people could not be kept within bounds, he made Wilkinson the offer of a permission to import, on his own account to New Orleans, free of duty, all the productions of Kentucky, thinking by this means to conciliate the good will of the people, without yielding the point of navigation, as the commerce carried on would appear the effect of an indulgence to an individual, which could be withdrawn at pleasure. On consultation with his friends, who well knew what further concessions Wilkinson would extort from the fears of the Spaniards, by the promise of his good offices in preaching peace, harmony, and good understanding with this government, until arrangements were made between Spain and America, he was advised to insist that the governor should insure him a market for all the flour and tobacco he might send, as in the event of an unfortunate shipment, he would be ruined whilst endeavoring to do a service to Louisiana. This was accepted. Flour was always wanted in New Orleans, and the king of Spain had given orders to purchase more tobacco for the supply of his manufactories at home than Louisiana at that time produced, and which was paid for at about $9.50 per cwt. In Kentucky it cost but $2, and the profit was immense. In consequence, the general had appointed his friend Daniel Clark his agent here, returned by way of Charleston in a vessel, with a particular permission to go to the United States, even at the very moment of Gardoqui's information; and on his arrival in Kentucky, bought up all the produce he could collect, which he shipped and disposed of as before mentioned, and for some time all the trade for the Ohio was carried on in his name, a line from him sufficing to ensure the owner of the boat every privilege and protection he could desire."

NOTE 29, PAGE 284.

An act concerning the erection of the District of Kentucky into an independent State. Passed the 18th of December, 1789.

WHEREAS it is represented to this present General Assembly, that the act of last session entitled "an act concerning the erection of the District of Kentucky into an independent State," which contains terms materially different from those of the act of October session, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five, are found incompatible with the real views of this Commonwealth, as well as injurious to the good people of said district:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That in the month of May, next, on the respective court days of the counties within the said district, and at the respective places of holding courts therein, Representatives to continue in appointment for one year, and to compose a convention, with the powers, and for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, shall be elected by the free male inhabitants of each county above the age of twenty-one years, in like manner as delegates to the General Assembly have been elected within said district in the proportions following: In the county of Jefferson shall be elected five representatives; in the county of Nelson, five representatives; in the county of Mercer, five representatives; in the county of Lincoln, five representatives; in the county of Madison, five representatives; in the county of Fayette, five representatives; in the county of Woodford, five representatives; in the county of Bourbon, five representatives; and in the county of Mason, five representatives: Provided, That no free male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one years shall vote in any other county except that in which he resides, and that no person shall be capable of being elected unless he has been a resident within the said district at least one year.

SEC. 2. That full opportunity may be given to the good people of exercising their right of suffrage on an occasion so interesting to them, each of the officers holding such elections, shall continue the same from day to-day, passing over Sunday, for five days, including the first day, and shall cause this act to be read on each day immediately preceding the opening of the election at the door of the court house or other convenient place; each of the said officers shall deliver to each person duly elected a representative, a certificate of his election, and shall transmit a general return to the clerk of the Supreme Court, to be, by him, laid before the convention.

SEC. 3. For every neglect of any of the duties hereby enjoined on such officer, he shall forfeit one hundred pounds, to be recovered by action of debt by any person suing for the same.

SEC. 4. The said convention shall be held at Danville, on the twenty-sixth day of July next, and shall and may proceed, after choosing a president and other proper officers, and settling the proper rules of proceeding, to consider and determine whether it be expedient for, and the will of the good people of the district, that the same be erected into an independant State, on the terms and conditions following:

SEC. 5. First, that the boundary between the proposed State and Virginia, shall remain the same as at present separates the district from the residue of this commonwealth.

SEC. 6. Second, that the proposed State shall take upon itself a just proportion of the debt of the United States, and the payment of all the certificates granted on account of the several expeditions carried on from the Kentucky district against the Indians, since the first day of January, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five.

SEC. 7. Third, that all private rights and interests of lands within the said district, derived from the laws of Virginia prior to such separation, shall remain valid and secure under the laws of the proposed State, and shall be determined by the laws now existing in this State.

SEC. 8. Fourth, that the lands within the proposed State of non-resident proprietors, shall not in any case be taxed higher than the lands of residents, at any time prior to the admission of the proposed State to a vote by its delegates in Congress, where such non-residents reside out of the United States, nor at any time either before or after such admission, where such non-residents reside within this Commonwealth, within which the stipulation shall be reciprocal; or where such non-residents reside within any other of the United States, which shall declare the same to be reciprocal within its limits; nor shall a neglect of cultivation or improvement of any land within either the proposed State of this Commonwealth, belonging to non-residents, citizens of the other, subject such non-residents to forfeiture or other penalty, within the term of six years, after the admission of the said State into the Federal Union.

SEC. 9. Fifth, that no grant of land or land warrant to be issued by the proposed State, shall interfere with any warrant heretofore issued from the land office of Virginia, which shall be located on land within the said district, now liable thereto, on or before the first day of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one.

SEC. 10. Sixth, that the unlocated lands within the said district, which stand appropriated to individuals of description of individuals, by the laws of this Commonwealth, for military or other services, shall be exempted from the disposition of the proposed State, and shall remain subject to be disposed of by the Commonwealth of Virginia, according to such appropriation until the first day of May, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, and no longer; thereafter the residue of all lands remaining within the limits of the said, shall be subject to the disposition of the proposed State.

SEC. 11. Seventh, that the use and navigation of the river Ohio, so far as the territory of the proposed State, or the territory which shall remain within the limits of this Commonwealth lies therein, shall be free and common to the citizens of the United States, and respective jurisdictions of this Commonwealth and of the proposed State on the river as aforesaid, shall be concurrent only with the States which may possess the opposite shores of the said river.

SEC. 12. Eighth, that in case any complaint or dispute shall at any time arise between the Commonwealth of Virginia and the said district, after it shall be an independent State, concerning the meaning or execution of the foregoing articles, the same shall be determined by six commissioners, of whom two shall be chosen by each of the parties, and the remainder by the commissioners so first appointed.

SEC. 13. Provided, however, That five members assembled shall be a sufficient number to adjourn from day to day, and to issue writs for supplying vacancies which may happen from deaths, resignations or refusals to act; a majority of the whole shall be a sufficient number to choose a President, settle the proper rules of proceeding, authorize any number to summon a convention during a recess, and to act in all other instances where a greater number is not expressly required. Two-thirds of the whole shall be a sufficient number to determine on the expediency of forming the said district into an independent State on the aforesaid terms and conditions: Provided, that a majority of the whole number to be elected concur therein.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That if the said convention shall approve of the erection of the said district into an independent State on the foregoing terms and conditions, they shall and may proceed to fix a day posterior to the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, on which the authority of this Commonwealth, and of its laws, under the exceptions aforesaid, shall cease and determine forever over the proposed State, and the said articles become a solemn compact mutually binding on the parties, and unalterably by either without the consent of the other.

SEC. 15. Provided, however, That prior to the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, the general government of the United States shall consent to the erection of the said district into an independent State, shall release this Commonwealth from all its Federal obligations arising from the said district as being part thereof, and shall agree that the proposed State shall immediately after the day to be fixed as aforesaid, posterior to the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, or at some convenient time future thereto. be admitted into the Federal Union.

SEC. 16. And to the end that no period of anarchy may happen to the good people of the proposed State, it is to be understood that the said convention shall have the authority to take the necessary provisional measures for the election and meeting of a convention, at some time prior to the day fixed for the determination of the authority of this Commonwealth, and of its laws over said district, and posterior to the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one aforesaid, with full power and authority to frame and establish a fundamental constitution of government for the proposed State, and to declare what laws shall be in force therein, until the same shall be abrogated or altered by the legislative authority acting under the constitution so to be framed and established.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the electors in going to, continuing at, and returning from an election of members to the said convention, shall be entitled to the same privileges from arrest, as are by law allowed at an election of members to the General Assembly; and each person returned to serve as a member in said convention, shall be entitled to the same privileges from arrest in going to, during his attendance on, and returning from said convention, as are by law allowed to members of the General Assembly.

SEC. 18. This act shall be transmitted by the Executive to the representatives of this Commonwealth in Congress, who are hereby instructed to use their endeavors to obtain from Congress a speedy act to the effect above specified.

NOTE 30, PAGE 297.

The House, according to the standing order of the day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole on the state of the Commonwealth, Mr. Caldwell in the chair. And after some time spent therein, the Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Caldwell reported that the committee had, according to order, had under consideration the Governor's address, and had come to the following resolutions therepon, which he had delivered in at the Clerk's table, where they were twice read and agreed to by the House.*

I. Resolved, That the several States composing the United States of America, are not united on the principle of unlimited submission to their general government; but that by compact under the style and title of a Constitution for the United States and of amendments thereto, they constituted a general government for special purposes, delegated to that government certain definite powers, reserving each State to itself, the residuary mass of right to their own self-government; and that whensoever the general government assumes undelegated powers, its acts are unauthoritative, void and of no force; That to this compact each State acceded as a State, and is an integral party, its co-States forming, as to itself, the other party; That the government created by this compact was not made the exclusive or final judge of the extent of the powers delegated to itself; since that would have made its discretion, and not the Constitution, the measure of its powers; but that as in all other cases of compact among parties having no common judge, each party has an equal right to judge for itself, as well of infractions as of the mode and measure of redress.

II. Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States having delegated to Congress a power to punish treason, counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States, piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the laws of nations, and no other crimes whatever, and it being true as a general principle, and one of the amendments to the Constitution having also declared "that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people," therefore, also, the same act of Congress passed on the 14th day of July, 1798, entitled "An act in addition to the act entitled an act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States;" as also the act passed by them on the 27th day of June, 1798, entitled "An act to punish frauds committed on the Bank of the United States" (and all other of their acts which assume to create, define or punish crimes other than those enumerated in the Constitution), are altogether void and of no force, and that the power to create, define and punish such other crimes is reserved, and of right appertains solely and exclusively to the respective States, each within its own territory.

III. Resolved, That it is true as a general principle, and is also expressly declared by one of the amendments to the Constitution that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people;" and that no power over the freedom of religion, freedom of speech, or freedom of the press being delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, all lawful powers respecting the same did of right remain, and were reserved to the States or to the people: That thus was manifested their determination to retain to themselves the right of judging how far the licentiousness of speech and of the press may be abridged without lessening their useful freedom, and how far those abuses, which cannot be separated from their use, should be tolerated, rather than the use be destroyed, and thus also they guarded against all abridgement by the United States of the freedom of religious opinions and exercises, and retained to themselves the right of protecting the same, as this State, by a law passed on the general demand of its citizens, had already protected them from all human restraint or interference. And that in addition to this general principle and express declaration, another and more special provision has been made by one of the amendments to the Constitution which expressly declares that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercises thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press," whereby guarding in the same sentence and under the same words, the freedom of religion, of speech, or of the press insomuch, that whatever violates either, throws down the sanctuary which covers the others, and that libels, falsehoods, defamation equally with heresy and false religion, are withheld from the cognizance of Federal tribunals. That therefore the act of Congress of the United States passed on the 14th day of July, 1798, entitled "An act in addition to the act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States," which does abridge the freedom of the press, is not law, but is altogether void and of no effect.

IV. Resolved, That alien friends are under the jurisdiction and protection of the laws of the State wherein they are; that no power over them has been delegated to the United States nor prohibited to the individual State distinct from their power over citizens; and it being true as a general principle and one of the amendments to the Constitution having also declared that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people," the act of the Congress of the United States passed on the 22d day of June, 1798, entitled "An act concerning aliens," which assumes power over alien friends not delegated by the Constitution, is not law, but is altogether void and of no force.

*Proceedings Kentucky Legislature, November 10, 1798.

V. Resolved, That in addition to the general principle as well as the express declaration, that powers not delegated are reserved, another and more special provision inserted in the Constitution from abundant caution has declared, "that the migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year 1808." That this Commonwealth does admit the migration of alien friends described as the subject of the said act concerning aliens; that a provision against the prohibiting their migration is a provision against all acts equivalent thereto, or it would be nugatory; that to remove them when migrated is equivalent to a prohibition of their migration, and is therefore contrary to the said provision of the Constitution, and void.

VI. Resolved, That the imprisonment of a person under the protection of the laws of this Commonwealth on his failure to obey the simple order of the President to depart out of the United States, as is undertaken by the said act entitled "An act concerning aliens," is contrary to the Constitution, one amendment to which has provided that "no person shall be deprived of liberty without due process of law," and that another having provided "that in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a public trial by an impartial jury, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense," the same act undertaking to authorize the President to remove a person out of the United States who is under the protection of the law, on his own suspicion, without accusation, without jury, without public trial, without confrontation of the witnesses against him, without having witnesses in his favor, without defense, without counsel, is contrary to these provisions also of the Constitution, is therefore not law, but utterly void and of no force. That transferring the power of judging any person who is under the protection of the laws, from the courts to the President of the United States, as is undertaken by the same act concerning aliens, is against the article of the Constitution which provides that "the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in courts, the judges of which shall hold their offices during good behavior," and that the said act is void for that reason also; and it is further to be noted, that this transfer of judiciary power is to that magistrate of the general government who already possesses all the executive, and a qualified negative in all the legislative powers.

VII. Resolved, That the construction applied by the general government (as is evinced by sundry of their proceedings) to those parts of the Constitution of the United States, which delegate to Congress a power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; to pay the debts and provide for the common defense, and general welfare of the United States, and to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the powers vested by the Constitution in the government of the United States, or any department thereof, goes to the destruction of all the limits prescribed to their power by the Constitution; that words meant by that instrument to be subsidiary only to the execution of the limited powers ought not to be so construed as themselves to give unlimited powers, nor a part so to be taken as to destroy the whole residue of the instrument; that the proceedings of the general government, under color of these articles, will be a fit and necessary subject for revisal and correction at a time of greater tranquility, while those specified in the preceding resolutions call for immediate redress.

VIII. Resolved, That the preceding resolutions be transmitted to the senators and representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth, who are hereby enjoined to present the same to their respective houses, and to use their best endeavors to procure, at the next session of Congress, a repeal of the aforesaid unconstitutional and obnoxious acts.

IX. Resolved, Lastly, that the governor of this Commonwealth be, and is hereby authorized and requested to communicate the preceding resolutions to the legislatures of the several States, to assure them that this Commonwealth considers union for specified national purposes, and particularly for those specified in their late Federal compact, to be friendly to the peace, happiness, and prosperity of all the States; that faithful to that compact, according to the plain intent and meaning in which it was understood and acceded to by the several parties, it is sincerely anxious for its preservation; that it does also believe, that to take from the States all the powers of self-government, and transfer them to a general and consolidated government, without regard to the special delegations and reservations solemnly agreed to in that compact, is not for the peace, happiness, or prosperity of these States. And that, therefore, this Commonwealth is determined, as it doubts not its co-States are, to tamely submit to undelegated and consequently unlimited powers in no man or body of men on earth; that if the acts before specified should stand, these conclusions would flow from them; that the general government may place any act they think proper on the list of crimes and punish it themselves, whether enumerated or not enumerated by the Constitution as cognizable by them; that they may transfer its cognizance to the President or any other person, who may himself be the accuser, counsel, judge and jury, whose suspicions may be the evidence, his order the sentence, his officer the executioner, and his breast the sole record of the transaction; that a very numerous and valuable description of the inhabitants of these States being by this precedent reduced as outlaws to the absolute dominion of one man, and the barrier of the Constitution thus swept away from us all, no rampart now remains against the passions and the powers of a majority of Congress, to protect from a like exportation or other more grievous punishment the minority of the same body, the Legislature, judges, governors, and counselors of the States, nor their other peaceable inhabitants who may venture to reclaim the constitutional rights and liberties of the State and people, or who for other causes, good or bad, may be obnoxious to the views or marked by the suspicions of the President, or be thought dangerous to his or their elections or other interests, public or personal; that the friendless alien has indeed been selected as the safest subject of a first experiment, but the citizens will soon follow, or rather has already followed; for already has a sedition act marked him as its prey; that these and successive acts of the same character, unless arrested on the threshold, may tend to drive these States into revolution and blood, and will furnish new calumnies against Republican governments, and new pretexts for those who wish it to be believed that man cannot be governed but by a rod of iron; that it would be a dangerous delusion were a confidence in the men of our choice to silence our fears for the safety of our rights; that confidence is everywhere the parent of despotism. Free government is founded in jealousy and not in confidence. It is jealousy and not confidence which prescribes limited constitutions to bind down those whom we are obliged to trust with power; that our Constitution has accordingly fixed the limits to which and no further our confidence may go; and let the honest advocate of confidence read the alien and sedition acts, and say if the Constitution has now been wise in fixing limits to the government it created, and whether we should be wise in destroying those limits. Let him say what the government is if it be not a tyranny, which the men of our choice have conferred on the President, and the President of our choice has assented to and accepted over the friendly strangers, to whom the mild spirit of our country and its laws had pledged hospitality and protection; that the men of our choice have more respected the bare suspicions of the President than the solid rights of innocence, the claims of justification, the sacred force of truth, and the forms and substance of law and justice. In questions of power then let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the claims of the Constitution. That this Commonwealth does therefore call on its co-States for an expression of their sentiments on the acts concerning aliens, and for the punishment of certain crimes hereinbefore specified, plainly declaring whether these acts are or are not authorized by the Federal compact. And it doubts not that their sense will be so announced as to prove their attachment unaltered to limited government, whether general or particular, and that the rights and liberties of their co-States will be exposed to no dangers by remaining embarked on a common bottom with their own; that they will concur with this Commonwealth in considering the said acts as so palpably against the Constitution as to amount to an undisguised declaration, that the compact is not meant to be the measure of the powers of the general government, but that it will proceed in the exercise over these States of all powers whatsoever; that they will view this as seizing the rights of the States and consolidating them in the hands of the general government with a power assumed to bind the States (not merely in cases made Federal) but in all cases whatsoever, by laws made not with their consent; that this would be to surrender the form of government we have chosen, and to live under one deriving its power from its own will, and not from out authority; and that the co-States, recurring to their natural right in cases not made Federal, will concur in declaring these acts void and of no force, and will each unite with this Commonweath in requesting their repeal at the next session of Congress.

EDMUND BULLOCK,
Speaker House of Representatives.

JOHN CAMPBELL,
Speaker Senate, pro tem.

Passed the House of Representatives November 10, 1798.

Attest: THOMAS TODD,
Chairman House of Representatives.

In Senate, November 13, 1798, unanimously concurred in.

Attest: B. THRUSTON,
Clerk Senate.

Approved November 16, 1798, by the Governor.

JAMES GARRARD,
Governor Kentucky.

HARRY TOULMIN,
Secretary of State.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Secretary's Department Boston, October 20, 1884.

A true copy of the original, on file in this Department.

[L. S.] Witness the Seal of the Commonwealth.

HENRY B. PIERCE,
Secretary.

NOTE 31, PAGE 325.

CONSTITUTION OF 1850.

ARTICLE I.

CONCERNING THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE POWERS OF GOVERNMENT.

SECTION 1. The powers of the government of the State of Kentucky shall be divided into three distinct departments, and each of them to be confided to a separate body of magistracy, to-wit, those which are legislative to one; those which are executive to another, and those which are judiciary to another.

SEC. 2. No person, or collection of persons, being of one of those departments, shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except in the instances hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

ARTICLE II.

CONCERNING THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power shall be vested in a House of Representatives and Senate, which together shall be styled "The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky."

SEC. 2. The members of the House of Representatives shall continue in service for the term of two years from the day of the general election, and no longer.

SEC. 3. Representatives shall be chosen on the first Monday in August in every second year, and the mode of holding the election shall be regulated by law.

SEC. 4. No person shall be a Representative, who, at the time of his election, is not a citizen of the United States, has not attained the age of twenty-four years, and who has not resided in this State two years next preceding his election, and the last year thereof in the county, town or city for which he may be chosen.

SEC. 5. The General Assembly shall divide each county of this Commonwealth into convenient election precincts, or may delegate power to do so to such county authorities as may be designated by law; and elections for Representatives for the several counties shall be held at the places for holding their respective courts, and in the several election precincts into which the counties may be divided. Provided, That when it shall appear to the General Assembly that any city or town hath a number of qualified voters equal to the ratio then fixed, such city or town shall be invested with the privilege of a separate Representative, in either or both houses of the General Assembly, which shall be retained so long as such city or town shall contain a number of qualified voters equal to the ratio which may from time to time be fixed by law, and, thereafter, elections for the county in which such city or town is situated shall not be held therein; but such city or town shall not be entitled to a separate representation unless such county, after the separation, shall also be entitled to one or more representatives. That whenever a city or town shall be entitled to a representation in either house of the General Assembly, and by its members shall be entitled to more than one representative, such city or town shall be divided, by squares which are contiguous, so as to make the most compact form, into representative districts, as nearly equal as may be, equal to the number of representatives to which such city or town may be entitled; and one representative shall be elected from each district. In like manner shall said city or town be divided into senatorial districts, when by the apportionment more than one Senator shall be allotted to such city or town, and a Senator shall be elected from each senatorial district; but no ward or municipal division shall be divided by such division of senatorial or representative districts, unless it be necessary to equalize the elective, senatorial or representative districts.

SEC. 6. Representation shall be equal and uniform in this Commonwealth, and shall be forever regulated and ascertained by the number of qualified voters therein. In the year 1850, again in the year 1857, and every eighth year thereafter, an enumeration of all qualified voters of the State shall be made, and to secure uniformity and equality of representation, the State is hereby laid off into ten districts. The first district shall be composed of the counties of Fulton, Hickman, Ballard, McCracken, Graves, Calloway, Marshall, Livingston, Crittenden, Union, Hopkins, Caldwell and Trigg. The second district shall be composed of the counties of Christian, Muhlenburgh, Henderson, Daviess, Hancock, Ohio, Breckinridge, Meade, Grayson, Butler and Edmonson. The third district shall be composed of the counties of Todd, Logan, Simpson, Warren, Allen, Monroe, Barren and Hart. The fourth district shall be composed of the counties of Cumberland, Adair, Green, Taylor, Clinton, Russell, Wayne, Pulaski, Casey, Boyle and Lincoln. The fifth district shall be composed of the counties of Hardin, Larue, Bullitt, Spencer, Nelson, Washington, Marion, Mercer and Anderson. The sixth district shall be composed of the counties of Garrard, Madison, Estill, Owsley, Rockcastle, Laurel, Clay, Whitley, Knox, Harlan, Perry, Letcher, Pike, Floyd and Johnson. The seventh district shall be composed of the counties of Jefferson, Oldham, Trimble, Carroll, Henry and Shelby and the city of Louisville. The eighth district shall be composed of the counties of Bourbon, Fayette, Scott, Owen, Franklin, Woodford and Jessamine. The ninth district shall be composed of the counties of Clark, Bath, Montgomery, Fleming, Lewis, Greenup, Carter, Lawrence, Morgan and Breathitt. The tenth district shall be composed of the counties of Mason, Bracken, Nicholas, Harrison, Pendleton, Campbell, Grant, Kenton, Boone and Gallatin. The number of Representatives shall, at the several sessions of the General Assembly next after making the enumerations, be apportioned among the ten several districts, according to the number of qualified voters in each; and the representatives shall be apportioned, as near as may be, among the counties, towns and cities in each district; and in making such apportionment the following rules shall govern, to-wit: Every county, town or city, having the ratio, shall have one Representative; if double the ratio, two Representatives, and so on. Next the counties, towns or cities having one or more Representatives, and the largest number of qualified voters above the ratio, and counties having the largest number under the ratio, shall have a Representative, regard being always had to the greatest number of qualified voters. Provided, That when a county may not have a sufficient number of qualified voters to entitle it to one Representative, then such county may be joined to some adjacent county or counties, which counties shall send one Representative. When a new county shall be formed of territory belonging to more than one district, it shall form a part of that district having the least number of qualified voters.

SEC. 7. The House of Representatives shall choose its speaker and other officers.

SEC. 8. Every free white male citizen of the age of twenty-one years, who has resided in the State two years, or in the county, town, or city in which he offers to vote, one year next preceding the election, shall be a voter; but such voter shall have been for sixty days next preceding the election a resident of the precinct in which he offers to vote, and he shall vote in said precinct and not elsewhere.

SEC. 9. Voters, in all cases, except treason, felony, breach or surety of the peace, shall be privileged from arrest during their attendance at, going to, and returning from elections.

SEC. 10. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, and the Senate shall have power to choose its officers biennially.

SEC. 11. Senators and Representatives shall be elected under the first apportionment after the adoption of this Constitution, in the year 1851.

SEC. 12. At the session of the General Assembly next after the first apportionment under this Constitution, the Senators shall be divided by lot, as equally as may be, into two classes; the seats of the first class shall be vacated at the end of two years from the day of the election, and those of the second class at the end of four years, so that one-half shall be chosen every two years.

SEC. 13. The number of Representatives shall be one hundred, and the number of Senators thirty-eight.

SEC. 14. At every apportionment of representation, the State shall be laid off into thirty-eight senatorial districts, which shall be so formed as to contain, as near as may be, an equal number of qualified voters, and so that no county shall be divided in the formation of a senatorial district, except such county shall be entitled, under the enumeration, to two or more Senators; and where two or more counties compose a district, they shall be adjoining.

SEC. 15. One Senator for each district shall be elected by the qualified voters therein, who shall vote in the precincts where they reside, at the places where elections are by law directed to be held.

SEC. 16. No person shall be a Senator, who at the time of his election, is not a citizen of the United States, has not attained the age of thirty years, and who has not resided in this State six years next preceding his election, and the last year thereof in the district for which he may be chosen.

SEC. 17. The election for Senators, next after the first apportionment under this constitution shall be general throughout the State, and at the same time that the election for representatives is held, and thereafter there shall be a biennial election for Senators to fill the places of those whose term of service may have expired.

SEC. 18. The General Assembly shall convene on the first Monday in November, after the adoption of this constitution, and again on the first Monday in November, 1851, and on the same day of every second year thereafter, unless a different day be appointed by law, and their sessions shall be held at the seat of government.

SEC. 19. Not less than a majority of the members of each house of the General Assembly shall constitute a quorm to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and shall be authorized by law to compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as may be prescribed thereby.

SEC. 20. Each house of the General Assembly shall judge of the qualifications, elections and returns of its members; but a contested election shall be determined in such manner as shall be directed by law.

SEC. 21. Each house of the General Assembly may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish a member for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause.

SEC. 22. Each house of the General Assembly shall keep and publish, weekly, a journal of its proceedings, and the yeas and nays of the members on any question shall, at the desire of any two of them, be entered on their journal.

SEC. 23. Neither house during the session of the General Assembly shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

SEC. 24. The members of the General Assembly shall severally receive from the public treasury a compensation for their services, which shall be three dollars a day during their attendance on, and twelve and a half cents per mile for the necessary travel in going to, and returning from, the sessions of their respective houses: Provided, That the same may be increased or diminished by law; but no alteration shall take effect during the session at which such alteration shall be made; nor shall a session of the General Assembly continue beyond sixty days, except by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each house, but this shall not apply to the first session held under this constitution.

SEC. 25. The members of the General Assembly shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, breach or surety of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

SEC. 26. No Senator or Representative shall, during the term for which he was elected, nor for one year thereafter be appointed or elected to any civil office of profit under this Commonwealth, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased, during said term, except to such offices or appointments as may be filled by the election of the people.

SEC. 27. No person, while he continues to exercise the functions of a clergyman, priest or teacher of any religious persuasion, society or sect, nor while he holds or exercises any office of profit under this Commonwealth, or under the government of the United States, shall be eligible to the General Assembly except attorneys at law, justices of the peace and militia officers: Provided, That attorneys for the Commonwealth who receive a fixed annual salary, shall be ineligible.

SEC. 28. No person who at any time may have a collector of taxes or public moneys for the State or the assistant or deputy of such collector, shall be eligible to the General Assembly unless he shall have obtained a quietus, six months before the election, for the amount of such collection, and for all public moneys for which he may have been responsible.

SEC. 29. No bill shall have the force of a law until on three several days it be read over in each House of the General Assembly, and free discussion allowed thereon, unless, in cases of urgency, four-fifths of the house where the bill shall be depending, may deem it expedient to dispense with this rule.

SEC. 30. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose amendments, as in other bills: Provided, that they shall not introduce any new matter, under color of amendment, which does not relate to raising revenue.

SEC. 31. The General Assembly shall regulate by law by whom and in what manner writs of election shall be issued to fill the vacancies which may happen in either branch thereof.

SEC. 32. The General Assembly shall have no power to grant divorces, to change the names of individuals, or direct the sales of estates belonging to infants or other persons laboring under legal disabilities, by special legislation; but by general laws shall confer such powers on the courts of justice.

SEC. 33. The credit of this Commonwealth shall never be given or loaned in aid of any person, association, municipality or corporation,

SEC. 34. The General Assembly shall have no power to pass laws to diminish the resources of the sinking-fund, as now established by law, until the debt of the State be paid, but may pass laws to increase them; and the whole resources of said fund from year to year, shall be sacredly set apart and applied to the payment of the interest and principal of the State debt, and to no other use or purpose, until the whole debt of the State is fully paid and satisfied.

SEC. 35. The General Assembly may contract debts to meet casual deficits or failures in the revenue; but such debts, direct or contingent, singly or in the aggregate, shall not at any time exceed $500,000; and the moneys arising from loans creating such debts shall be applied to the purposes for which they were obtained or to repay such debts: Provided, That the State may contract debts to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, or if hostilities are threatened, provide for the public defense.

SEC. 36. No act of the General Assembly shall authorize any debt to be contracted on behalf of the Commonwealth, except for the purposes mentioned in the thirty-fifth section of this article, unless provision be made therein to lay and collect an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest stipulated, and to discharge the debt within thirty years; nor shall such act take effect until it shall have been submitted to the people at a general election, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for or against it: Provided, that the General Assembly may contract debts, by borrowing money to pay any part of the debt of the State, without submission to the people, and without making provision in the act authorizing the same for a tax to discharge the debt so contracted, or the interest thereon.

SEC. 37. No law enacted by the General Assembly shall relate to more than one subject, and that shall be expresssed in the title.

SEC. 38. The General Assembly shall not change the venue in any criminal or penal prosecution, but shall provide for the same by general laws.

SEC. 39. The General Assembly may pass laws authorizing writs of error in criminal or penal cases, and regulating the right of challenge of jurors therein.

SEC. 40. The General Assembly shall have no power to pass any act or resolution for the appropriation of any money, or the creation of any debt, exceeding the sum of one hundred dollars, at any one time, unless the same, on its final passage, shall be voted for by a majority of all the members then elected to each branch of the General Assembly, and the yeas and nays thereon entered on the journal.

ARTICLE III.

CONCERNING THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of the Commonwealth shall be vested in a chief magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

SEC. 2. The Governor shall be elected for the term of four years by the qualified voters of the State, at the time when and places where they shall respectively vote for Representatives. The person having the highest number of votes shall be Governor; but if two or more shall be equal and highest in votes, the election shall be determined by lot, in such manner as the General Assembly may direct.

SEC. 3. The Governor shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected.

SEC. 4. He shall be at least thirty-five years of age, and a citizen of the United States. and have been an inhabitant of this State at least six years next preceding his election.

SEC. 5. He shall commence the execution of the duties of his office on the fifth Tuesday succeeding the day of the general election on which he shall have been chosen, and shall continue in the execution thereof until his successor shall have taken the oath or affirmation prescribed by this Constitution.

SEC. 6. No member of Congress, or person holding any office under the United States, or minister of any religious society, shall be eligible to the office of Governer.

SEC. 7. The Governor shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the term for which he was elected.

SEC. 8. He shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of this Commonwealth, and of the militia thereof, except when they shall be called into the service of the United States; but he shall not command personally in the field, unless advised so to do by a resolution of the General Assembly

SEC. 9. He shall have power to fill vacancies that may occur, by granting commissions, which shall expire when such vacancies shall have been filled according to the provisions of this Constitution.

SEC. 10. He shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures, grant reprieves and pardons, except in cases of impeachment. In cases of treason he shall have power to grant reprieves until the end of the next session of the General Assembly, in which the power of pardoning shall be vested; but he shall have no power to remit the fees of the Clerk, Sheriff, or Commonwealth Attorney in penal or criminal cases.

SEC. 11. He may require information, in writing, from the officers in the executive department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

SEC. 12. He shall, from time to time, give to the General Assembly information of the state of the Commonwealth, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he may deem expedient.

SEC. 13. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the General Assembly at the seat of government, or at a different place if that should have become, since their last adjournment, dangerous from an enemy or from contagious disorders; and in case of disagreement between the two Houses. with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper, not exceeding four months.

SEC. 14. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 15. A Lieutenant-Governor shall be chosen at every regular election for Governor, in the same manner, to continue in office for the same time, and possess the same qualifications as the Governor. In voting for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor the electors shall state for whom they vote as Governor and for whom as Lieutenant-Governor.

SEC. 16. He shall, by virtue of his office, be Speaker of the Senate, have a right, when in Committee of the Whole, to debate and vote on all subjects, and, when the Senate are equally divided to give the casting vote.

SEC. 17. Should the Governor be impeached, removed from office, die, refuse to qualify, resign, or be absent from the State, the Lieutenant-Governor shall exercise all the power and authority appertaining to the office of Governor, until another be duly elected and qualified, or the Governor absent or impeached shall return or be acquitted.

SEC. 18. Whenever the government shall be administered by the Lieutenant-Governor, or he shall fail to attend as Speaker of the Senate, the Senators shall elect one of their own members as Speaker for that occasion. And if during the vacancy of the office of Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor shall be impeached, removed from office, refuse to qualify, resign, die, or be absent from the State, the Speaker of the Senate shall, in like manner, administer the government: Provided, That whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of Governor, before the first two years of the term shall have expired, a new election for Governor shall take place to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 19. The Lieutenant-Governor, or Speaker pro tempore of the Senate, while he acts as Speaker of the Senate. shall receive for his services the same compensation which shall, for the same period, be allowed to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and no more; and during the time he administers the government, as Governor, shall receive the same compensation which the Governor would have received had he been employed in the duties of his office.

SEC. 20. If the Lieutenant-Governor shall be called upon to administer the government, and shall, while in such administration, resign, die, or be absent from the State during the recess of the General Assembly, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of State, for the time being, to convene the Senate for the purpose of choosing a Speaker.

SEC. 21. The Governor shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint a Secretary of State, who shall be commissioned during the term for which the Governor was elected, if he shall so long behave himself well. He shall keep a fair register, and attest all the official acts of the Governor, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all papers, minutes and vouchers relative thereto, before either House of the General Assemby; and shall perform such other duties as may be required of him by law.

SEC. 22. Every bill which shall have passed both Houses shall be presented to the Governor. If he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, who shall enter the objections at large upon their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, a majority of all the members elected to that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be considered, and, if approved by a majority of all the members elected to that House, it shall be a law; but in such cases, the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the members voting for and against the bill shall be entered upon the journals of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, it shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the General Assembly, by their adjournment, prevent its return; in which case it shall be a law, unless sent back within three days after their next meeting.

SEC. 23. Every order, resolution, or vote in which the concurrence of both Houses may be necessary, except on a question of adjournment, shall be presented to the Governor, and before it shall take effect be approved by him; or, being disapproved, shall be repassed by a majority of all the members elected to both Houses, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in case of a bill.

SEC. 24. Contested elections for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor shall be determined by both houses of the General Assembly, according to such regulations as may be established by law.

SEC. 25. A Treasurer shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State, for the term of two years; and an Auditor of Public Accounts, Register of the Land-Office, and Attorney-General for the term of four years. The duties and responsibilities of these officers shall be prescribed by law: Provided; That inferior State officers, not specially provided for in this Constitution, may be appointed or elected in such manner as shall be prescribed by law, for a term not exceeding four years.

SEC. 26. The first election under this Constitution for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Treasurer, Auditor of Public Accounts, Register of the Land-Office and Attorney-General, shall be held on the first Monday in August, in the year 1851.

ARTICLE IV.

CONCERNING THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this Commonwealth, both as to matters of law and equity, shall be vested in one Supreme Court (to be styled the Court of Appeals), the courts established by this Constitution, and such courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as the General Assembly may, from time to time, erect and establish.

CONCERNING THE COURT OF APPEALS.

SEC. 2. The Court of Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be co-extensive with the State, under such restrictions and regulations, not repugnant to this Constitution, as may, from to time be prescribed by law.

SEC. 3. The Judges of the Court of Appeals shall, after their first term, hold their offices for eight years, from and after their election, and until their successors shall be duly qualified, subject to the conditions hereinafter prescribed; but for any reasonable cause the Governor shall remove any of them on the address of two-thirds of each House of the General Assembly: Provided, however, That the cause or causes for which such removal may be required shall be stated at length in such address and on the journal of each House. They shall, at stated times, receive for their services an adequate compensation, to be fixed by law, which shall not be diminished during the time for which they have been elected.

SEC. 4. The Court of Appeals shall consist of four Judges, any three of whom may constitute a court for the transaction of business. The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall divide the State, by counties, into four districts, as nearly equal in voting population and with as convenient limits as may be, in each of which the qualified voters shall elect one Judge of the Court of Appeals: Provided, That whenever a vacancy shall occur in said court, from any cause, the General Assembly shall have the power to reduce the number of Judges and districts; but in no event shall there be less than three Judges and districts. Should a change in the number of the Judges of the Court of Appeals be made, the term of office and number of districts shall be so changed as to preserve the principle of electing one Judge every two years.

SEC. 5. The Judges shall, by virtue of their office, be conservators of the peace throughout the State. The style of all process shall be "The Commonwealth of Kentucky." All prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and conclude "against the peace and dignity of the same."

SEC. 6. The Judges first elected shall serve as follows, to wit: One shall serve until the first Monday in August, 1852; one until the first Monday in August, 1854; one until the first Monday in August, 1856; and one until the first Monday in August, 1858. The Judges, at the first term of the court suceeding their election, shall determine, by lot, the length of time which each one shall serve; and at the expiration of the service of each an election in the proper district shall take place to fill the vacancy. The Judge having the shortest time to serve shall be styled Chief Justice of Kentucky.

SEC. 7. If a vacancy shall occur in said court from any cause, the Governor shall issue a writ of election to the proper district to fill such vacancy for the residue of the term: Provided, That if the unexpired term be less than one year, the Governor shall appoint a Judge to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 8. No person shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the Court of Appeals who is not a citizen of the United States, a resident of the district for which he may be a candidate two years next preceding his election, at least thirty years of age, and who has not been a practicing lawyer eight years or whose service upon the bench of any court of record when added to the time he may have practiced law, shall not be equal to eight years.

SEC. 9, The Court of Appeals shall hold its sessions at the seat of government, unless otherwise directed by law; but the General Assembly may, from time to time, direct that said court shall hold sessions in any one or more of said districts.

SEC. 10. The first election of the Judges and Clerks of the Court of Appeals shall take place on the second Monday in May, 1851, and thereafter, in each district, as a vacancy may occur, by the expiration of the term of office; and the Judges of the said court shall be commissioned by the Governor.

SEC. 11. There shall be elected, by the qualified voters of this State, a Clerk of the Court of Appeals, who shall hold his office, from the first election, until the first Monday in August, 1858, and thereafter for the term of eight years from and after his election; and should the General Assembly provide for holding the Court of Appeals in any one or more of said districts, they shall also provide for the election of a Clerk by the qualified voters of such district, who shall hold his office for eight years, possess the same qualifications, and be subject to removal in the same manner, as the Clerk of the Court of Appeals; but if the General Assembly shall, at its first or any other session, direct the Court of Appeals to hold its session in more than one district, a Clerk shall be elected by the qualified voters of such district. And the Clerk first provided for in this section shall be elected by the qualified voters of the other district or districts. The same principle shall be observed whenever the court shall be directed to hold its sessions in either of the other districts. Should the number of Judges be reduced, the term of the office of Clerk shall be six years.

SEC. 12. No person shall be eligible to the office of Clerk of the Court of Appeals, unless he be a citizen of the United States, a resident of the State two years next preceding his election, of the age of twenty-one years, and have a certificate from a Judge of the Court of Appeals, or a Judge of a Circuit Court, that he has been examined by the Clerk of his Court, under his supervision, and that he is qualified for the office for which he is a candidate.

SEC. 13. Should a vacancy occur in the office of Clerk of the Court of Appeals, the Governor shall issue a writ of election, and the qualified voters of the State, or of the district in which the vacancy may occur, shall elect a Clerk of the Court of Appeals, to serve until the end of the term for which such Clerk was elected: Provided, That when a vacancy shall occur from any cause, or the Clerk be under charges upon information, the Judges of the Court of Appeals shall have power to appoint a clerk pro tempore, to perform the duties of Clerk until such vacancy shall be filled or the Clerk acquitted: And provided further, That no writ of election shall issue to fill a vacancy unless the unexpired term exceed one year.

SEC. 14. The General Assembly shall direct, by law, the mode and manner of conducting and making due returns to the Secretary of State of all elections of the Judges and Clerk or Clerks of the Court of Appeals, and of determining contested elections of any of these offices.

SEC. 15. The General Assembly shall provide for an additional Judge or Judges, to constitute, with the remaining Judge or Judges, a special court for the trial of such cause or causes as may, at any time, be pending in the Court of Appeals, on the trial of which a majority of the Judges cannot sit, on account of interest in the event of the cause, or on account of their relationship to either party, or when a Judge may have been employed in or decided the cause in the inferior court.

CONCERNING THE CIRCUIT COURTS.

SEC. 16. A Circuit Court shall be established in each county now existing, or which may hereafter be erected in this commonwealth.

SEC. 17. The jurisdiction of said court shall be and remain as now established, hereby giving to the General Assembly the power to change or alter it.

SEC. 18. The right to appeal or sue out a writ of error to the Court of Appeals shall remain as it now exists, until altered by law, hereby giving to the General Assembly the power to change, alter, or modify said right.

SEC. 19. At the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall divide the State into twelve judicial districts, having due regard to business, territory, and population: Provided, That no county shall be divided.

SEC. 20. They shall, at the same time that the judicial districts are laid off, direct elections to be held in each district, to elect a Judge for said district, and shall prescribe in what manner the election shall be conducted. The first election of Judges of the Circuit Court shall take place on the second Monday in May, 1851; and afterward on the first Monday in August, 1856, and on the first Monday in August in every sixth year thereafter.

SEC. 21. All persons qualified to vote for members of the General Assembly, in each district, shall have the right to vote for Judges.

SEC. 22. No person shall be eligible as Judge of the Circuit Court who is not a citizen of the United States, a resident of the district for which he may be a candidate two years next preceding his election, at least thirty years of age, and who his not been a practicing lawyer eight years, or whose service upon the bench of any court of record, when added to the time he may have practiced law, shall not be equal to eight years.

SEC. 23. The Judges of the Circuit Court shall, after their first term, hold their office for the term of six years from the day of their election. They shall be commissioned by the Governor, and continue in office until their successors be qualified, but shall be removable from office in the same manner as the Judges of the Court of Appeals; and the removal of a Judge from his district shall vacate his office.

SEC. 24. The General Assembly, if they deem it necessary, may establish one additional district every four years, but the judicial districts shall not exceed sixteen, until the population of this State shall exceed 1,500,000.

SEC. 25. The Judges of the Circuit Court shall, at stated times, receive for their service an adequate compensation, to be fixed by law, which shall be equal and uniform throughout the State, and which shall not be diminished during the time for which they were elected.

SEC. 26. If a vacancy shall occur in the office of Judge of the Circuit Court, the Governor shall issue a writ of election to fill such vacancy for the residue of the term: Provided, that if the unexpired term be less than one year, the Governor shall appoint a Judge to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 27. The judicial districts of this State shall not be changed, except at the first session after enumeration, unless when a new district may be established.

SEC. 28. The General Assembly shall provide by law for holding Circuit Courts when, from any cause, the Judge shall fail to attend, or, if in attendance, cannot properly preside.

CONCERNING COUNTY COURTS.

SEC. 29. A County Court shall be established in each county now existing, or which may hereafter be erected within this Commonwealth, to consist of a Presiding Judge and two Associate Judges, any two of whom shall constitute a court for the transaction of business: Provided, the General Assembly may at any time abolish the office of the Associate Judges, whenever it shall be deemed expedient; in which event they may associate the said court any or all of the Justices of the Peace for the transaction of business.

SEC. 30. The Judges of the County Court shall be elected by the qualified voters in each county, for the term of four years, and shall continue in office until their successors be duly qualified, and shall receive such compensation for their services as may be provided by law.

SEC. 31. The first election of County Court Judges shall take place at the same time of the election of Judges of the Circuit Court. The Presiding Judge, first elected, shall hold his office until the first Monday in August, 1854. The Associate Judges shall hold their offices until the first Monday in August, 1852, and until their successors be qualified; and afterward elections shall be held on the first Monday in August, in the years in which vacancies regularly occur.

SEC. 32. No person shall be eligible to the office of Presiding or Associate Judge of the County Court, unless he be a citizen of the United States, over twenty-one years of age, and shall have been a resident of the county in which he shall be chosen one year next preceding the election.

SEC. 33. The jurisdiction of the County Court shall be regulated by law; and, until changed, shall be the same now vested in the County Courts of this State.

SEC. 34. Each county in this State shall be laid off into districts of convenient size, as the General Assembly may from time to time direct. Two Justices of the Peace shall be elected in each district, by the qualified voters therein, at such time and place as may be prescribed by law, for the term of four years, whose jurisdiction shall be co-extensive with the county. No person shall be eligible as a Justice of the Peace unless he be a citizen of the United States, twenty-one years of age, and a resident of the district in which he may be a candidate.

SEC. 35. Judges of the County Court and Justices of the Peace shall be conservators of the peace. They shall be commissioned by the Governor. County and district-officers shall vacate their offices by removal from the district or county in which they shall be appointed. The General Assembly shall provide by law the manner of conducting and making due return of all elections of Judges of the County Court and Justices of the Peace, and for determining contested elections, and provide the mode of filling vacancies in these offices.

SEC. 36. Judges of the County Court and Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Coroners, Surveyors, Jailors, County Assessor, Attorney for the County, and Constables, shall be subject to indictment or presentment for malfeasance or misfeasance in office, or willful neglect in the discharge of their official duties, in such mode as may be prescribed by law, subject to appeal to the Court of Appeals; and upon conviction, their offices shall become vacant.

SEC. 37. The General Assembly may provide by law that the Justices of the Peace in each County shall sit at the Court of Claims and assist in laying the county levy and making appropriations only.

SEC. 38. When any city or town shall have a separate representation, such city or town, and the county in which it is located, may have such separate municipal courts and executive and ministerial officers as the General Assembly may from time to time provide.

SEC. 39. The Clerks of the Court of Appeals Circuit and County Courts, shall be removable from office by the Court of Appeals, upon information and good cause shown. The court shall be judges of the fact as well as the law. Two-thirds of the members present must concur in the sentence.

SEC. 40. The Louisville Chancery Court shall exist under this Constitution, subject to repeal, and its jurisdiction to enlargement and modification of the General Assembly. The Chancellor shall have the same qualifications as the Circuit Court Judge, and the Clerk of the said Court as the Clerk of the Circuit Court, and the Marshal of said Court as a Sheriff; and the General Assembly shall provide for the election, by the qualified voters within its jurisdiction, of the Chancellor, Clerk and Marshal of said Court, at the same time that the Judge and Clerk of the Circuit Court are elected for the County of Jefferson, and they shall hold their offices for the same time, and shall be removable in the same manner; Provided, that the Marshal of said Court shall be ineligible for the succeeding term.

SEC. 41. The City Court of Louisville, the Lexington City Court, and all other police courts established in any city or town, shall remain until otherwise directed by law, with their present powers and jurisdictions; and the Judges, Clerks, and Marshals of said Courts shall have the same qualifications, and shall be elected by the qualified voters of such cities or towns at the same time, and in the same manner, and hold their offices for the same term, as County Judges, Clerks and Sheriffs, respectively, and shall be liable to removal in the same manner. The General Assembly may vest judicial powers, for police purposes, in Mayors of cities, Police Judges and Trustees of towns.

ARTICLE V.

CONCERNING IMPEACHMENTS.

SECTION 1. The House of Representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 2. All impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose, the Senators shall be on oath or affirmation. No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

SEC. 3. The Governor and all civil officers shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under this Commonwealth; but the party convicted shall, nevertheless, be subject and liable to indictment, trial, and punishment by law.

ARTICLE VI.

CONCERNING EXECUTIVE AND MINISTERIAL OFFICERS FOR COUNTIES AND DISTRICTS.

SECTION 1. A Commonwealth's Attorney for each Judicial District, and a Circuit Court Clerk for each County, shall be elected, whose term of office shall be the same as that of the Circuit Judges; also a County Court Clerk, an Attorney, Surveyor, Coroner, and Jailer, for each County, whose term of office shall be the same as that of the presiding Judge of the County Court.

SEC. 2. No person shall be eligible to the offices mentioned in this article who is not at the time twenty-four years old (except Clerks of the County and Circuit Courts, Sheriffs, Constables and County Attorneys, who shall be eligible at the age of twenty-one years), a citizen of the United States, and who has not resided two years next preceding the election in the State, and one year in the county or district for which he is a candidate. No person shall be eligible to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney or County Attorney unless he shall have been a licensed practicing attorney for two years. No person shall be eligible to the office of Clerk unless he shall have procured from a Judge of the Court of Appeals, or a Judge of the Circuit Court, a certificate that he has been examined by the Clerk of his court, under his supervision, and that he is qualified for the office for which he is a candidate.

SEC. 3. The Commonwealth's Attorney and Circuit Court Clerk shall be elected at the same time as the Circuit Judge—the Commonwealth's Attorney by the qualified voters of the district, the Circuit Court Clerk by the qualified voters of the county. The County Attorney, Clerk, Surveyor, Coroner and Jailer shall be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the Presiding Judge of the County Court.

SEC. 4. A Sheriff shall be elected in each county by the qualified voters thereof, whose term of office shall, after the first term, be two years, and until his successor be qualified; and he shall be re-eligible for a second term; but no Sheriff shall, after the expiration of the second term, be re-eligible, or act as deputy, for the succeding term. The first election of Sheriff shall be on the second Monday in May, 1851; and the Sheriffs then elected shall hold their offices until the first Monday in January, 1853, and until their successors be qualified; and on the first Monday in August, 1852, and on the first Monday of August every second year thereafter, elections for Sheriff shall be held: Provided, That the Sheriffs first elected shall enter upon the duties of their respective offices on the first Monday in June, 1851, and after the first election on the first Monday in January next succeeding their election.

SEC. 5. A Constable shall be elected in every Justice's district, whos hall be chosen for two years, at such time and place as may be provided by law, whose jurisdiction shall be co-extensive with the county in which he may reside.

SEC. 6. Officers for towns and cities shall be elected for such terms, and in such manner, and with such qualifications as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 7. Vacancies in offices under this article shall be filled, until the next regular election, in such manner as the General Assembly may provide.

SEC. 8. When a new county shall be erected, officers for the same to serve until the next stated election, shall be elected or appointed in such a way and at such times as the general assembly may prescribe.

SEC. 9. Clerks, Sheriffs, Surveyors, Coroners, Constables and Jailers, and such other officers as the General Assembly may from time to time require, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, and as often thereafter as may be deemed proper, give such bond and security as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 10. The General Assembly may provide for the election or appointment, for a term not exceeding four years, of such other county or district ministerial and executive officers as shall, from time to time, be necessary and proper.

SEC. 11. A County Assessor shall be elected in each county at the same time and for the same term that the Presiding Judge of the County Court is elected, until otherwise provided for by law. He shall have power to appoint such assistants as may be necessary and proper.

ARTICLE VII.

CONCERNING THE MILITIA.

SECTION 1. The militia of this Commonwealth shall consist of all free, able-bodied male persons (negroes, mulattoes and Indians excepted) resident in the same, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years; except such persons as now are, or hereafter may be, exempted by the laws of the United States or of this State; but those who belong to religious societies, whose tenets forbid them to carry arms, shall not be compelled to do so, but shall pay an equivalent for personal services.

SEC. 2. The Governor shall the Adjutant-General and his other staff-officers, the Major-Generals, Brigadier-Generals, and Commandants of regiments shall respectively appoint their staff-officers; and commandants of companies shall appoint their non-commissioned officers.

SEC. 3. All militia officers, whose appointment is not herein otherwise provided for, shall be elected by persons subject to military duty within their respective companies—battalions, regiments, brigades and divisions—under such rules and regulations, and for such terms, not exceeding six years, as the General Assembly may, from time to time, direct and establish.

ARTICLE VIII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SECTION 1. Members of the General Assembly and all officers, before they enter upon the execution of the duties of their respective offices, and all members of the bar, before they enter upon the practice of their profession, shall take the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear [or affirm, as the case may be] that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of this State, and be faithful and true to the Commonwealth of Kentucky so long as I continue a citizen thereof, and that I will faithfully execute, to the best of my abilities, the office of ——, according to law; and I do further solemnly swear [or affirm] that since the adoption of the present Constitution I, being a citizen of this State, have not fought a duel, with deadly weapons, within this State, nor out of it, with a citizen of this State, nor have I sent or accepted a challenge to fight a duel, with deadly weapons, with a citizen of this State; nor have I acted as second in carrying a challenge, or aided or assisted any person thus offending: So help me God."

SEC. 2. Treason against this Commonwealth shall consist only in levying war against it, or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or his own confession in open court.

SEC. 3. Every person shall be disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit for the term for which he shall have been elected, who shall be convicted of having given or offered any bribe or threat to procure his election.

SEC. 4. Laws shall be made to exclude from office and from suffrage those who shall be hereafter convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other crimes or high misdemeanors. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult or other improper practices.

SEC. 5. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in pursuance of appropriations made by law, nor shall any appropriations of money for the support of an army be made for a longer time than two years, and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public moneys shall be published annually.

SEC. 6. The General Assembly may direct by law, in what manner, and in what courts, suits may be brought against the Commonwealth.

SEC. 7. The manner of administering an oath or affirmation shall be such as is most consistent with the conscience of the deponent, and shall be esteemed by the General Assembly the most solemn appeal to God.

SEC. 8. All laws which, on the first day of June, 1792, were in force in the State of Virginia, and which are of a general nature, and not local to the State, and not repugnant to this Constitution, nor to the laws which have been enacted by the General Assembly of this Commonwealth, shall be in force within this State, until they shall be altered or repealed by the General Assembly.

SEC. 9. The compact with the State of Virginia, subject to such alterations as may be made therein agreeably to the mode prescribed by the said compact, shall be considered as a part of this Constitution.

SEC. 10. It shall be the duty of the General Assembly to pass such laws as shall be necessary and proper to decide differences by arbitrators, to be appointed by the parties who may choose that summary mode of adjustment.

SEC. 11. All civil officers for the Commonwealth at large shall reside within the State, and all district, county, or town officers, within their respective districts; counties or towns (trustees of towns excepted), and shall keep their offices at such places therein as may be required by law; and all militia officers shall reside in the bounds of the division, brigade, regiment, battalion or company to which they may severally belong.

SEC. 12. Absence on the business of this State or the United States, shall not forfeit a residence once obtained, so as to deprive any one of the right of suffrage, or of being elected or appointed to any office under this Commonwealth, under the exception contained in this Constitution.

SEC. 13. It shall be the duty of the General Assembly to regulate, by law, in what cases, and what deductions from the salaries of public officers shall be made, for neglect of duty in their official capacity.

SEC. 14. Returns of all elections by the people shall be made to the Secretary of State, for the time being, except in those cases otherwise provided for this Constitution, or which shall be otherwise directed by law.

SEC. 15. In all elections by the people, and also by the Senate and House of Representatives jointly or separately, the votes shall be publicly and personally given viva voce: Provided, That dumb persons, entitled to suffrage, may vote by ballot.

SEC. 16. All elections by the people shall be held between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and seven o'clock in the evening.

SEC. 17. The General Assembly shall, by law, prescribe the time when the several officers authorized or directed by this Constitution to be elected or appointed shall enter upon the duties of their respective offices, except where the time is fixed by this Constitution.

SEC. 18. No member of Congress, nor person holding or exercising any office of trust or profit under the United States, or either of them, or under any foreign power, shall be eligible as a member of the General Assembly of this Commonwealth, or hold or exercise any office of trust or profit under the same.

SEC. 19. The General Assembly shall direct by law how persons who now are, or who may hereafter become, securites for public officers may be relieved or discharged on account of such securityship.

SEC. 20. Any person who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, either directly or indirectly, give, accept, or knowingly carry a challenge to any person or persons to fight in single combat, with a citizen of this State, with any deadly weapon, either in or out of the State, shall be deprived of the right to hold any office of honor or profit in this Commonwealth, and shall be punished otherwise in such manner as the General Assembly may prescribe by law.

SEC. 21. The Governor shall have power, after five years from the time of the offence, to pardon all persons who shall have in anywise participated in a duel, either as principals, seconds or otherwise, and to restore him or them to all the rights, privileges and immunities to which he or they were entitled before such participation. And upon the presentation of such pardon, the oath prescribed in the first section of this article shall be varied to suit the case.

SEC. 22. At its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall appoint not more than three persons, learned in the law, whose duty it shall be to revise and arrange the statute laws of this Commonwealth, both civil and criminal, so as to have but one law on any subject; and also three other persons, learned in the law, whose duty it shall be to prepare a code of practice for the courts both civil and criminal in this Commonwealth, by abridging and simplifying the rules of practice and laws in relation thereto; all of whom shall, at as early a day as practicable, report the result of their labors to the General Assembly for their adoption or modification.

SEC. 23. So long as the Board of Internal Improvement shall be continued, the President thereof shall be elected by the qualified voters of this Commonwealth, and hold the office for the term of four years, and until another be duly elected and qualified. The election shall be held at the same time, and be conducted in the same manner, as the election of Governor of this Commonwealth under this Constitution; but nothing herein contained shall prevent the General Assembly from abolishing said Board of Internal Improvement, or the office of President thereof.

SEC. 24. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the trial of any contested election of Auditor, Register, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Judges of Circuit Courts, and all other officers not otherwise herein specified.

SEC. 25. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the making of the returns, by the proper officers, of the election of all officers to be elected under this Constitution; and the Governor shall issue commissions to the Auditor, Register, Treasurer, President of the Board of Internal Improvement, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and such other officers as he may be directed by law to commission, as soon as he has ascertained the result of the election of those officers respectively.

SEC. 26. When a vacancy shall happen in the office of Attorney-General, Auditor of Public Accounts, Treasurer, Register of the Land Office, President of the Board of Internal Improvements, or Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Governor, in the recess of the Senate, shall have power to fill the vacancy, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of the next session, and shall fill the vacancy for the balance of the time by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

ARTICLE IX.

CONCERNING THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

The seat of government shall continue in the city of Frankfort, until it shall be removed by law: Provided, however, That two-thirds of all the members elected to each House of the General Assembly shall concur in the passage of such law.

ARTICLE X.

CONCERNING SLAVES.

SECTION 1. The General Assembly shall have no power to pass laws for the emancipation of slaves without the consent of their owners, or without paying their owners, previous to such emancipation, a full equivalent in money for the slaves so emancipated, and providing for their removal from the State. They shall have no power to prevent immigrants to this State from bringing with them such persons as are deemed slaves by the laws of any of the United States, so long as any person of the same age or description shall be continued in slavery by the laws of this State. They shall pass laws to permit owners of slaves to emancipate them, saving the rights of creditors, and to prevent them from remaining in this State after they are emancipated. They shall have full power to prevent slaves being brought into this State as merchandise. They shall have full power to prevent slaves being brought into this State who have been, since the first day of January, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine, or may hereafter be, imported into any of the United States from a foreign country. And they shall have full power to pass such laws as may be necessary to oblige the owners of slaves to treat them with humanity; to provide for them necessary clothing and provisions; to abstain from all injuries to them, extending to life or limb, and in case of their neglect or refusal to comply with the directions of such laws, to have such slave or slaves sold for the benefit of their owner or owners.

SEC. 2. The General Assembly shall pass laws providing that any free negro or mulatto hereafter immigrating to, and any slave hereafter emancipated in, and refusing to leave this State, or having left, shall return and settle within this State, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and punished by confinement in the penitentiary thereof.

SEC. 3. In the prosecution of slaves for felony no inquest by a grand jury shall be necessary, but the proceedings in such prosecutions shall be regulated by law, except that the General Assembly shall have no power to deprive them of the privilege of an impartial trial by a petit jury.

Article XI.

CONCERNING EDUCATION.

Section 1. The capital of the fund called and known as the "common school fund," consisting of one million two hundred and twenty-five thousand seven hundred and sixty-eight dollars and forty-two cents, for which bonds have been executed by the State to the Board of Education, and seventy-three thousand five hundred dollars of stock in the Bank of Kentucky; also, the sum of fifty-one thousand two hundred and twenty-three dollars and twenty-nine cents, balance of interest on the school-fund of the year 1848, unexpended, together with any sum which may be hereafter raised in the State by taxation, or otherwise, for the purposes of education, shall be held inviolate, for the purpose of sustaining a system of common schools. The interest and dividends of said funds, together with any sum which may be produced for that purpose, by taxation, or otherwise, may be appropriated in aid of common schools, but for no other purpose. The General Assembly shall invest said fifty-one thousand two hundred and twenty-three dollars and twenty-nine cents in some safe and profitable manner, and any portion of the interest and dividends of said school-fund, or other money or property raised for school purposes, which may not be needed in sustaining common schools, shall be invested in like manner. The General Assembly shall make provision by law for the payment of the interest of said school-fund. Provided, That each county shall be entitled to its proportion of the income of said fund, and if not called for for common school purposes, it shall be re-invested from time to time for the benefit of such county.

Sec. 2. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified voters of this Commonwealth at the same time the Governor is elected, who shall hold his office for four years, and his duties and salary shall be prescribed and fixed by law.

Article XII.

MODE OF REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

Section 1. When experience shall point out the necessity of amending this Constitution, and when a majority of all the members elected to each house of the General Assembly shall, within the first twenty days of any regular session, concur in passing a law for taking the sense of the good people of this Commonwealth as to the necessity and expediency of calling a convention, it shall be the duty of the several Sheriffs and other officers of elections, at the next general election which shall be held for Representatives to the General Assembly after the passage of such a law, to open a poll for, and make a return to the Secretary of State, for the time being, of the names of all those entitled to vote for Representatives who have voted for calling a convention; and if thereupon it shall appear that a majority of all the citizens of the State entitled to vote for Representatives have voted for calling a convention, the General Assembly shall, at their next regular session, direct that a similar poll shall be opened and return made for the next election for Representatives, and if thereupon it shall appear that a majority of all the citizens of this State entitled to vote for Representatives have voted for calling a convention, the General Assembly shall, at their next session, pass a law calling a convention to consist of as many members as there shall be in the House of Representatives, and no more, to be chosen on the first Monday in August thereafter, in the same manner and proportion, and at the same places, and possessed of the same qualifications of a qualified elector by citizens entitled to vote for Representatives, and to meet within three months after their election for the purpose of re-adopting, amending or changing this Constitution; but if it shall appear by the vote of either year, as aforesaid, that a majority of all the citizens entitled to vote for Representatives did not vote for calling a convention, a convention shall not then be called. And for the purpose of ascertaining whether a majority of the citizens entitled to vote for Representatives, did or did not vote for calling a convention as above, the General Assembly passing the law authorizing such vote shall provide for ascertaining the number of citizens entitled to vote for Representatives within the State.

Sec. 2. The convention when assembled shall judge of the election of its members, and decide contested elections, but the General Assembly shall, in calling a convention, provide for taking testimony in such cases and for issuing a writ of election in case of a tie.

Article XIII.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

That the general, great and essential principles of liberty and free government may be recognized and established, we declare:

Section 1. That all freemen, when they form a social compact, are equal, and that no man or set of men are entitled to exclusive, separate public emoluments or privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services.

Sec. 2. That absolute, arbitrary power over the lives, liberty and property of freemen, exists nowhere in a Republic, not even in the largest majority.

Sec. 3. The right of property is before and higher than any constitutional sanction; and the right of the owner of a slave to such slave, and its increase, is the same, as inviolable as the right of the owner of any property whatever.

Sec. 4. That all property is inherent in the people and all free governments are founded on their authority and instituted for their peace, safety, happiness, security and the protection of property. For the advancement of these ends, they have at all times an inalienable and indefeasible right to alter, reform or abolish their government, in such manner as they may think proper.

Sec. 5. That all men have a natural and indefeasible right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences; that no man shall be compelled to attend, erect or support any place of worship, or to maintain any ministry against his consent; that no human authority ought, in any case, whatever, to control or intefere with the rights of conscience; that no preference shall ever be given, by law, to any religious societies or modes of worship.

Sec. 6. That the civil rights, privileges or capacities of any citizen shall in no wise be diminished or enlarged on account of his religion.

Sec. 7. That all elections shall be free and equal.

Sec. 8. That the ancient mode of trial by jury shall be held sacred, and the right thereof remain inviolate, subject to such modifications as may be authorized by this Constitution.

Sec. 9. That printing-presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the general assembly, or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen may freely speak, write and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty.

SEC. 10. In prosecutions for the publication of papers investigating the official conduct of officers or men in a public capacity, or where the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libels, the jury shall have a right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court as in other cases.

SEC. 11. That the people shall be secure in their persons, houses, papers and possessions from unreasonable seizures and searches, and that no warrant to search any place, or to seize any person or thing, shall issue, without describing them as nearly as may be, nor without probable cause supported by oath or affirmation.

SEC. 12. That in all criminal prosecutions, the accused hath a right to be heard by himself and counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him; to meet the witness face to face; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and, in prosecutions by indictment or information, a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the vicinage; that he cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself; nor can he be deprived of his life, liberty or property unless by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land.

SEC. 13. That no person shall, for any indictable offence, be proceeded against criminally, by information, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service, in time of war or public danger, or by leave of the court, for oppression or misdemeanor in office.

SEC. 14. No person shall, for the same offence, be twice put in jeopardy of his life or limb; nor shall any man's property be taken or applied to public use without the consent of his representatives and without just compensation being previously made to him.

SEC. 15. That all courts shall be open, and every person, for an injury done him in his lands, goods, person or reputation, shall have remedy by the due course of law and right and justice administered without sale, denial or delay.

SEC. 16. That no power of suspending laws shall be exercised, unless by the General Assembly or its authority.

SEC. 17. That excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel punishments inflicted.

SEC. 18. That all prisoners shall be bailable by sufficient securities, unless for capital offences, when the proof is evident or presumption great; and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless, when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

SEC. 19. That the person of a debtor, where there is not strong presumption of fraud, shall not be continued in prison after delivering up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 20. That no ex post facto law, nor any law impairing contracts, shall be made.

SEC. 21. That no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the General Assembly.

SEC. 22. That no attainder shall work corruption of blood, nor, except during the life of the offender, forfeiture of the estate to the Commonwealth.

SEC. 23. That the estates of such persons as shall destroy their own lives shall descend or vest as in case of natural death; and if any person shall be killed by casualty, there shall be no forfeiture by reason thereof.

SEC. 24. That the citizens have the right, in a peaceable manner, to assemble together for their common good, and to apply to those invested with the powers of government for redress of grievances, or other proper purposes, by petition, address or remonstrance.

SEC. 25. That the rights of the citizens to bear arms in defense of themselves and the State shall not be questioned; but the General Assembly may pass laws to prevent persons from carrying concealed arms.

SEC 26. That no standing army shall, in time of peace, be kept up without the consent of the General Assembly, and the military shall, in all cases and at all times, be in strict subordination to the civil power.

SEC. 27. That no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 28. That the General Assembly shall not grant any title of nobility, or hereditary distinction, nor create any office, the appointment to which shall be for a longer time than for a term of years.

SEC. 29. That emigration from the State shall not be prohibited.

SEC. 30. To guard against transgressions of the high powers which we have delegated, we declare that everything in this article is excepted out of the general powers of government, and shall forever remain inviolate, and that all laws contrary thereto, or contrary to this Constitution shall be void.

SCHEDULE.

That no inconvenience may arise from the alterations and amendments made in the Constitution of this Commonwealth, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared and ordained:

SECTION 1. That all the laws of this Commonwealth, in force at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims, and contracts, as well of individuals as of bodies-corporate, shall continue as if this Constitution had not been adopted.

SEC. 2. The oaths of office herein directed to be taken, may be administered by any Judge or Justice of the Peace, until the general assembly shall otherwise direct.

SEC. 3. No office shall be superseded by the adoption of this Constitution, but the laws of the State relative to the duties of the several officers, legislative, executive, judicial, and military, shall remain in full force, though the same be contrary to this Constitution, and the several duties shall be performed by the respective officers of the State, according to the existing laws, until the organization of the government, as provided for under this Constitution, and the entering into office of the officers to be elected or appointed under said government, and no longer.

SEC. 4. It shall be the duty of the General Assembly which shall convene in the year 1850, to make an apportionment of the representation of this State, upon the principles set forth in this Constitution; and until the first apportionment shall be made as herein directed, the apportionment of Senators and Representatives among the several districts and counties in this State shall remain as at present fixed by law: Provided, That on the first Monday in August, 1850, all Senators shall go out of office, and on that day an election for Senators and Representatives shall be held throughout the State, and those then elected shall hold their offices for one year, and no longer: Provided further, that at the elections to be held in the year 1850, that provision in this Constitution which requires voters to vote in the precinct within which they reside, shall not apply.

SEC. 5. All recognizances heretofore taken, or which may be taken before the organization of the judicial department under this Constitution, shall remain as valid as though this Constitution had not been adopted, and may be prosecuted in the name of the Commonwealth. All criminal prosecutions and penal actions which have arisen or may arise, before the reorganization of the judicial department under this Constitution, may be prosecuted to judgment and execution in the name of the Commonwealth.

We, the Representatives of the freemen of Kentucky, in convention assembled, in their name, and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and in virtue of the powers vested in us, as delegates from the counties respectively affixed to our names, do ordain and proclaim the foregoing to be the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Kentucky from and after this day.

Done at Frankfort this eleventh day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and fifty, and in the fifty-ninth year of the Commonwealth.

JAMES GUTHRIE, President.

THO. S. HELM, Secretary,
THO. D. TILFORD, Assistant Secretary.

NOTE 32, PAGE 542.

The Mammoth Cave in Edmonson County, Ky., by rail eighty-five miles south-southwest of Louisville, was discovered in 1809 by a hunter named Hutchins, while in pursuit of a wounded bear. Its mouth is in a forest ravine, 194 feet above Green River, and 600 feet above the sea. This aperture is not the original mouth, the latter being a chasm a quarter of a mile north of it, and leading into what is known as Dixon's Cave. The two portions are not now connected, though persons in one can make themselves heard by those in the other. Saltpetre was formerly made from the nitrous earth, in which the cave abounded, but it is now mainly turned to account as a place of exhibition.

The cavernous limestone of Kentucky covers an area of 8,000 square miles, is massive and homogeneous, and belongs to the subcarboniferous period. It shows few traces of dynamic disturbance, but has been carved since the Miocene epoch into many caverns, of which the Mammoth Cave is the noblest specimen known. The region is undulating, but its valleys are mostly funnel-shaped depressions, emptying through fissures into subterranean streams, which feed rivers, often of navigable size, and whose waters are never frozen over, even in severe winters. Such valleys are called sink-holes.

The natural arch that admits one to the Mammoth Cave has a span of seventy feet, and from a ledge above it a cascade leaps fifty feet to the rocks below, where it disappears. A winding flight of stone steps leads the way down to a narrow passage, through which the air rushes with violence, outward in summer and inward in winter. The temperature of the cave is uniformly 54° Fahrenheit throughout the year, and the atmosphere is both chemically and optically of singular purity. While the lower levels are moist from the large pools that have secret connection with Green River, the upper galleries are extremely dry. These conditions led, at one time, to the erection of thirteen cottages, at a point about a mile under ground, for the use of invalids, especially consumptives. The experiment ended in failure, and only two cottages now remain.

The main cave, from forty to 300 feet wide, and from thirty-five to 125 feet high, has several vast rooms, e. g., the Rotunda, where are the ruins of the old saltpetre works; the Star Chamber, where the protrusion of white crystals through a coating of the black oxide of manganese, creates an optical illusion of great beauty; the Chief City, where an area of two acres is covered by a vault 125 feet high, and the floor is strewn with rocky fragments, among which are found numerous half-burnt torches made of canes, and other signs of prehistoric occupancy. Two skeletons were exhumed near the Rotunda, but no other bones have been found. The so-called Mammoth Cave "mummies" (i. e., bodies kept by being inhumed in nitrous earth), with accompanying utensils, ornaments, braided sandals, and other relics were found in Short and Salt Caves near by, and removed to Mammoth Cave for exhibition. The main cave, which abruptly ends four miles from the entrance, is joined by winding passages, with spacious galleries on different levels, and although the diameter of the area of the whole cavern is less than ten miles, the combined length of all accessible avenues is supposed to be about 150 miles.*

The chief points of interest are ranged along two lines of exploration, beside which there are certain side excursions. The "short route" requires about four hours, and the "long route" nine. Audubon's Avenue, the one nearest the entrance, is seldom visited except by the bats that hang from the walls in clusters like swarms of bees. The Gothic Avenue contains numerous large stalactites and stalagmites, and an interesting place called the Chapel, and ends in a small double dome and cascade. Among the most suprising features of cave scenery are the vertical shafts that pierce through all levels, from the uppermost galleries, or even from the sink-holes, down to the lowest floor. These are styled pits or domes according to the position occupied by the observer. A crevice behind a block of stone, forty feet long by twenty wide, called the Giant's Coffin, admits the explorer to a place where six pits, varying in depth from 65 to 220 feet, exist in an area of 600 yards. This includes Gorin's Dome, which is viewed from a point midway in its side, and is by many regarded as the finest room in the cavern. Others admire more the Mammoth Dome, at the termination of Spark's Avenue, where a cataract falls from a height of 250 feet amid walls wonderfully draped with stalactitic tapestry. The Egyptian Temple, which is a continuation of the Mammoth Dome, contains six massive columns, two of them quite perfect, and eighty feet high and twenty-five feet in diameter. The combined length of these contiguous chambers is 400 feet. By a crevice above, they are connected with an arm of Audubon's Avenue. Lucy's Dome, about 300 feet high, is supposed to be the loftiest of all these vertical shafts. A pit, called the "Maelstrom," in Croghan's Hall, is the spot most remote from the mouth of the cave. A son of Prentice, the poet, permitted himself to be lowered 190 feet by a rope to the bottom in 1859. There are some fine stalactites near this pit, and others in the Fairy Grotto and in Pensico Avenue, but considering the magnitude of Mammoth Cave, its poverty of stalactitic ornamentation is remarkable. The wealth of crystals is, however, surprising. These are of endless variety and fantastic beauty. Beside the sparkling vault of the Star Chamber (300 feet long and 80 feet high), there are halls canopied by fleecy clouds or studded with mimic snowballs, and others displaying various grotesque resemblances on the walls and ceiling.

Cleveland's Cabinet and Marion's Avenue, each a mile long, are adorned by myriads of gypsum rosettes and curiously twisted crystals called "oulopholites." These cave flowers are unfolded by pressure, as if a sheaf were forced through a tight binding, and the crystal fibres curl outward from the center of the group. Thus spotless arches of fifty feet span are embellished by floral clusters and garlands, hiding nearly every foot of grey limestone. The botryoidal formations, hanging by thousands in Mary's Vineyard, resemble mimic clusters of grapes as the oulopholites resemble roses. Again, there are chambers with drifts of snowy crystals of the sulphate of magnesia, the ceilings so thickly covered with their efflorescence that a loud concussion of the air will cause them to fall like the flakes of a snow storm.

Many small rooms and tortuous paths, where nothing of special interest can be found, are avoided as much as possible on the regular routes; but certain disagreeable experiences are inevitable. There is a peril also in the vicinity of the deep pits. The one known as the Bottomless Pit was for many years a barrier to all further exploration, but is now crossed by a wooden bridge. Long before the shaft had been cut as deep as now, the water flowed away by a channel gradually contracting to a serpentine way, so extremely narrow as to be called the Fat Man's Misery. The walls, only eighteen inches apart, change direction eight times in 105 yards, while the distance from the sandy path to the ledge overhead is but five feet. The rocky sides are finely marked with waves and ripples, as if running water had suddenly been petrified. This winding way conducts one to River Hall, beyond which lie the crystalline gardens that have been described. It used to be said that if this narrow passage were blocked up, escape would be impossible; but lately an intricate web of fissures, called the Corkscrew, has been discovered, by means of which a good climber, ascending only a few hundred feet, lands 1,000 yards from the mouth of the cave, and cuts off one or two miles.

The waters entering through numerous domes and pits, and falling, during the rainy season, in cascades of great volume, are finally collected at River Hall, where they form several extensive lakes or rivers, whose connection with Green River is known to be in two deep springs, appearing under arches on its margin. Whenever there is a freshet in Green River the streams in the cave are joined in a continuous body of water, the rise being sometimes sixty feet above the low water mark. The subsidence within is less rapid than the rise; and the streams are impassable for about seven months in each year. They are navigable from May to October, and furnish interesting features of cave scenery. The first approached is called the Dead Sea, embraced by cliffs sixty feet high and 100 feet long, above which a path has been made, whence a stairway conducts us down to the banks of the River Styx, a body of water forty feet wide and 400 feet long, crossed by a natural bridge. Lake Lethe comes next, a broad basin, enclosed by walls ninety feet high, below which a narrow path leads to a pontoon at the neck of the lake. A beach of the finest yellow sand extends for 500 yards to Echo River, the largest of all, being from twenty to 200 feet wide, ten to forty feet deep, and about three quarters of a mile long. It is crossed by boats. The arched passage-way is very symmetrical, varying in height from ten to thirty-five feet, and famous for its musical reverberations,—not a distinct echo, but an harmonious prolongation of sound for from ten to thirty seconds after the original tone is produced. The long vault has a certain key-note of its own, which, when firmly struck, excites harmonies, including tones of incredible depth and sweetness.

*The present manager, Mr. F. Klett, has undertaken the difficult task of a thorough survey, the results of which, so far as completed, are presented on the accompanying map. The portion beyond River Hall is supplemented by an older survey by Stephen, the guide.

The fauna of Mammoth Cave has been classed by Putman, Packard and Cope, who have catalogued twenty-eight species truly subterraneous, besides those that may be considered as stragglers from the surface. They are distributed thus: Vertebrata, 4 species; insects, 11, arachnida, 6; myriapoda, 2; crustacea, 2; vermer, 3. Ehrenberg adds a list of 8 polygastric infusoria, 1 fossil infusorian, 5 phytolitharia, and several microscopic fungi. A bed of Agaricus was found by the writer near the River Styx; and upon this hint an attempt has been made to propagate edible fungi in this locality. The most interesting inhabitants of the Mammoth Cave are the blind, wingless grasshoppers, with extremely long antennæ; blind, colorless crayfish (cambarus pellucidus, telk); and the blind fish (amblyopsis spelæus), colorless and viviparous, from one inch to six inches long. The cambarus and amblyopsis have wide distinction, being found in many other caves, and also in deep wells in Kentucky and Indiana. Fish not blind are occasionally caught, which are apparently identical with species existing in streams outside. The true subterranean fauna may be regarded as chiefly of pleistocene origin; yet certain forms are possibly remnants of tertiary life. The strongly marked divergence of these animals from those found outside, convinced the elder Agassiz that they were especially created for the limits in which they dwell. But the opinion now held is that they are modified from allied species existing in the sunlight, and that their peculiarities may all be accounted for on principles of evolution, the process being accelerated (or retarded) by their migration from the outer world to a realm of absolute silence and perpetual darkness.—Rev. H. C. Hovey, in the Encyclopedia Britannica.

APPENDIX B.

UNITED STATES ARMY.

*Alphabetical List of General and Staff Officers from Kentucky, Appointed and Commissioned by the President.

Anderson, Robert, Brig.-Gen., May 15, 1861; Bvt. Maj.-Gen., Feb. 9, 1865.
Adams, Geo. M.. Capt. and Com. Sub., Aug. 17, 1861; resigned Dec. 23, 1862.
Alexander, Jas. B., Capt. and Com. Sub., Sept. 23, 1861; since vacated.
Allen, Chas. J. F., Maj. and Paymaster, July 16, 1862; honorably mustered out Nov. 15, 1865.
Ambrose, M. J. W., Hospital Chap., Sept. 28, 1863; expired by constitutional limitation.
Adams, Geo. M., Maj. and Paymaster, May 28, 1864; resigned May 19, 1865.
Artsman, Gus., Capt. and Ass't Q. M., Sept. 13, 1864.
Boyle, Jeremiah T., Brig.-Gen., Nov. 9, 1861; resigned Jan. 26, 1864.
Bradford, J. T., Maj. and Surg., Apr. 4, 1862; discharged Feb. 19, 1863.
Burbridge, Stephen G., Brig.-Gen., June 9, 1862; brevetted Maj.-Gen. July 4, 1864; resigned Dec. 1, 1865.
Buford, Louis M., Maj. and Aid-de-Camp, Mar. 11, 1863; resigned Dec. 17, 1864.
Boyd, Joseph F., Capt. and Ass't Q. M., Mar. 4, 1863; brevetted Brig.-Gen.; honorably mustered out March 13, 1866.
Bramlette, Thomas E., Brig.-Gen., Apr. 24, 1863; declined accepting.
Badger, Norman, Hospital Chap., June 30, 1864; honorably mustered out Sept. 23, 1865.
Butler, John S., Capt. and Ass't Adj.-Gen., Dec. 5, 1863; honorably mustered out June 14, 1865.
Brooks, D. A., Capt. and Com. Sub. May 18, 1864; declined accepting.
Bruch, Samuel, Capt. and Ass't Q. M., Aug. 8, 1862; died March 31, 1865, at Memphis, Tenn.
Boone, J. Rowan, Bvt.-Col., Mar. 13, 1865; was Lieut.-Col. Twenty-eighth Kentucky Veteran Infantry.
Crittenden, Thomas L., Maj.-Gen., July 17, 1862; was Brig.-Gen. from Sept. 27, 1861, to July 17, 1862; resigned Dec. 13, 1864.
Clay, Henry, Capt. and Ass't Adj.-Gen., Oct. 15, 1861; died June 5, 1862, at Louisville, Ky.
Clay, Cassius M., Maj.-Gen., Apr. 11, 1862; resigned Mar. 11, 1863.
Cloak, Burkitt, Maj. and Surg.; June 9, 1862; brevetted Lieut.-Col; honorably mustered out Nov. 22, 1865.
Curtis, Albert A., Capt. and Ass't Q. M., Nov. 26, 1862; resigned Apr. 21, 1864.
Cramer, Michael J., Hospital Chap., June 30, 1864; honorably mustered out June 29, 1865.
Croxton, John T., Brig.-Gen., July 30, 1864; brevetted Maj.-Gen; resigned Dec. 26, 1865.
Clark, James T., Capt. and Ass't Q. M., Dec. 2, 1863; honorably mustered out Mar. 13, 1866.
Campbell, John B., Capt. and Ass't Q. M., May 7, 1864; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out June 20, 1866.
Chevalier, Arthur H., Capt. and Com. Sub., May 18, 1864; honorably mustered out Feb. 2, 1866.
Cook, Milton J., Capt. and Com. Sub., Feb. 21, 1865; honorably mustered out June 15, 1865.
Dobyns, Geo. H., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., Feb. 29, 1864; honorably mustered out Jan. 8, 1866.
Dunlap, H. C., Bvt. Brig.-Gen., Mar. 13, 1865; was Col. Third Kentucky Infantry.
Edwards, Z. C., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., Sept. 18, 1861.
Ernest, Wm. D., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., Nov. 26, 1862; dismissed March 25, 1865.
Fry, John, Capt. and Com. Sub., Oct. 31, 1861; brevetted Maj. Mar. 13, 1865; honorably mustered out Feb. 2, 1866.
Fry, Speed S., Brig.-Gen., Mar. 21, 1862; honorably mustered out Aug. 24, 1865.
Fullerton, Wm. G., Maj. and Paymaster, Nov. 26, 1862; resigned April 1, 1865.
Goldsmith, M., Maj. and Surg., Oct. 30, 1861; brevetted Lieut.-Col.; honorably mustered out Jan. 18, 1866.
Garrard, Theophilus T., Brig.-Gen., Nov. 29, 1862; honorably mustered out Apr. 4, 1864.
Goodloe, Wm. C., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., June 1, 1863; resigned Jan. 31, 1864.
Gordon, Wm. A., Asst. Surg., Nov. 25, 1864; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out Nov. 22, 1865.
Huber, J. F., Capt. and Com. Sub., Oct. 25, 1861; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out Oct. 12, 1865.
Hatchitt, James G., Maj. and Surg., Apr. 4, 1862; brevetted Lieut.-Col.; honorably mustered out Dec. 8, 1865.
Hopkins, Orlando J., Capt. and Com. Sub., July 17, 1862; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out May 31, 1866.
Hall, Gustavus A., Military Storekeeper, July 21, 1862.
Hobson, Edward H., Brig.-Gen., Nov. 29, 1862; honorably mustered out Aug. 24, 1865.
Hoffman, Joel E., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., July 21, 1863; resigned May 19, 1864.
Hayes, Job. J., Capt. and Com. Sub., Sept. 4, 1863; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out July 15, 1865.
Hawthorn, Leroy R., Capt. and Com. Sub., Apr. 7, 1864; honorably mustered out Jan. 27, 1866.
Henry, Thos. H., Asst. Surg., June 30, 1864.
Hunter, Hiram A., Hospital Chaplain, Sept. 28, 1864; honorably mustered out Oct. 12, 1865.
Holloway, Geo. A., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., ————; resigned Dec. 27, 1864.
Hollingsworth, C. P., Bvt. Capt., March 13, 1865.
Holloway, William, Maj. and Paymaster, Feb. 19, 1863; honorably mustered out Nov. 15, 1865.
Jones, Stephen E., Capt. and Aide-de-Camp, July 9, 1862; resigned Mar. 13, 1865.
Jackson, James S., Brig.-Gen., July 16, 1862; killed Oct. 8, 1862, at battle of Perryville, Ky.
Johnson, J. H., Capt. and Com. Sub., Oct. 22, 1862; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out Dec. 8, 1865.

*From the report of the Adjutant-General of Kentucky, from 1861-65.

Johnson, Richard W., Brig.-Gen., Oct. 11, 1861; brevetted Maj.-Gen. Dec. 16, 1864; honorably mustered out Jan. 15, 1866.
Keenon, John G., Maj. and Surg., Oct. 9, 1861; died Aug. 12, 1864, at Memphis, Tenn.
Keefer, H. G., Asst. Surg., June 30, 1864; brevetted Maj. Mar. 13, 1865; honorably mustered out Jan. 27, 1866.
Kniffin, G. C., Capt. and Com. Sub., Aug. 20, 1861; Lieut.-Col. and Chief C. S. Twenty-first Army Corps, Jan. 20, 1861; honorably mustered out July 19, 1865.
Letcher, Saml. M., Bvt. Col., July 25, 1865; was Major of Twelfth Kentucky Infantry.
Long, Eli, Brig.-Gen., Aug. 18, 1864; brevetted Maj.-Gen. Mar. 13, 1865; honorably mustered out Jan. 15, 1866.
Mackenzie, J. M., Capt. and Com. Sub., Oct. 31, 1864; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out Aug. 31, 1865.
McMillan, Thos., Asst. Surg., Aug. 19, 1862; brevetted Maj. Mar. 13, 1865.
McDowell, H. C., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Nov. 19, 1861; resigned Aug. 27, 1862.
McDowell, Wm. P., Maj. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen , Mar. 11, 1863; resigned Dec. 9, 1863.
McKenzie, Alex., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., Jan. 27, 1865; honorably mustered out Aug. 15, 1865.
Murray, Eli H., Bvt. Brig.-Gen., Mar. 25, 1865; was Col. Third Kentucky Veteran Cavalry.
Monroe, Geo. W., Bvt. Brig.-Gen., Mar. 13, 1865; was Col. Seventh Kentucky Veteran Infantry.
Milward, H. K., Bvt. Col., Mar. 13, 1865; was Lieut.-Col. Eighteenth Kentucky Veteran Infantry.
Nelson, Wm., Maj.-Gen., July 7, 1862; was Brig.-Gen. from Sept. 16, 1861; died Sept. 29, 1862, at Louisville, Ky.
Neal, Wm. L., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., May 18, 1864; honorably mustered out July 28, 1865.
Nelson, Abial W., Asst. Surgeon, Dec. 13, 1864.
Oldershaw, Percival P., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Aug. 26, 1862; resigned Nov. 6, 1863.
Piatt, Benjamin M., Maj. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., May 16, 1862; honorably mustered out Nov. 22, 1865.
Peay, J. Speed, Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., July 15, 1862; resigned May 2, 1863.
Paul, Augustus C., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., June 1, 1863; appointed Second Lieut. Twelfth U. S. Infantry, May 11, 1866.
Purnell, Thomas F., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., May 8, 1863; honorably mustered out March 20, 1866.
Rousseau, Lovell H., Maj.-Gen., Oct. 8, 1862; was Brig.-Gen. from Oct. 1, 1861; resigned Nov. 30, 1865.
Speed, Philip, Maj. and Paymaster, Sept, 11, 1861; resigned Dec. 23, 1862.
Starling, Lyne, Maj. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Aug. 13, 1862; was Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen. from Oct. 10, 1861; resigned Jan. 20, 1864.
Sinton, T. R., Capt. and Com. Sub., Sept. 23, 1861; resigned Oct. 10, 1862.
Spillman, G. F., Capt. and Com. Sub., May 12, 1862; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out July 19, 1865.
Smith, Green Clay, Brig.-Gen., June 11, 1862; resigned Dec. 1, 1863.
Semple, Alexander C., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Sept. 29, 1862; resigned March 18, 1864.
Shackleford, James M., Brig.-Gen., Jan. 2, 1863; resigned Jan. 18, 1864.
Speed, John. Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., March 11, 1863; vacated by appointment as additional Paymaster March 22, 1865.
Smith, Rodney, Maj. and Paymaster, Feb. 23, 1864.
Sanders, Wm. P., Brig.-Gen., Oct. 18, 1863; died Nov. 19, 1863, of wounds received in action at Knoxville, Tenn.
Starks, Wm. M., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., May 18, 1864; canceled.
Speed, John, Maj. and Paymaster, March 22, 1865; resigned May 19, 1865.
Speer, Alexander M., Asst. Surgeon, Feb. 19, 1863; brevetted Maj.; honorably mustered out Oct. 7, 1865.
Stout, Alexander M., Bvt. Brig.-Gen., March 13, 1865; was Col. Seventeenth Kentucky Infantry.
Terrell, Wm. G., Maj. and Paymaster, Aug, 31, 1861; brevetted Lieut.-Col.; honorably mustered out Dec. 1, 1865.
Thustin, L. T., Maj. and Paymaster, Sept. 11, 1861; brevetted Lieut.-Col.; honorably mustered out April 30, 1866.
Terrell, C. M., Maj. and Paymaster, June 30, 1862.
Terry, Josiah M., Capt. and Com. Sub., Nov. 26, 1862.
Tevis, Joshua, Capt. and Com. Sub., Nov. 26, 1862; canceled.
Tarbell, Doctor, Capt. and Com. Sub., Nov. 26, 1862; honorably mustered out July 27, 1865.
Threlkeld, Wm., Maj. and Surgeon, July 9, 1863; was Asst. Surg. from April 23, 1863; brevetted Lieut.-Col.; honorably mustered out Aug. 25, 1865.
Talbott, Wm. K., Hospital Chaplain, April 22, 1863; honorably mustered out July 15, 1865.
Tureman, James F., Maj. and Paymaster, April 21, 1864; died Oct. 28, 1864, at Cincinnati, Ohio.
Thorp, James C., Asst. Surg., Nov. 25, 1864; resigned April 17, 1865.
Ward, Wm. T., Brig.-Gen., Sept. 18, 1861; brevetted Maj.-Gen. Feb. 24, 1865; honorably mustered out Aug. 24, 1865.
Williams, J. D., Capt. and Com. Sub., Sept. 18, 1861; honorably mustered out Jan. 3, 1866.
Waggener, Robert J., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Oct. 8, 1861; killed in action May 28, 1864, near Dallas, Ga.
Webster, George P., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., May 12, 1862.
Wolfley, Wm. J., Maj. and Surgeon, May 18, 1864; was Asst. Surgeon from April 16, 1862; brevetted Lieut.-Col. June 1, 1865; honorably mustered out July 18, 1865.
Webster, R. C., Capt. and Asst. Q. M., Sept. 30, 1861.
Whitaker, Walter C., Brig.-Gen., June 25, 1863; brevetted Maj.-Gen. March 13, 1865; honorably mustered out Aug. 24, 1865.
Williams, B. D., Capt. and A. D. C., March 11, 1863; honorably mustered out Nov. 11, 1865.
Wright, John A., Capt. and Asst. Adjt.-Gen., May 18, 1864; honorably mustered out Feb. 21, 1866.
Woodson, Wm. C., Maj. and Paymaster, May 28, 1864; honorably mustered out Nov. 15, 1865.
Watkins, Louis D., Brig.-Gen., Sept. 25, 1865; was Bvt. Brig.-Gen. from June 24, 1864; honorably mustered out April 30, 1866.
Wolcott, Francis E., Maj. and Judge Advocate, Dec. 17, 1864; for the Army of the Ohio.
Wood, Thomas J., Maj.-Gen., Jan. 27, 1865; was Brig.-Gen. from Oct. 11, 1861; appointed Bvt. Brig.-Gen., U. S. A., March 13, 1865.
Young, Berry S., Maj. and Paymaster, April 21, 1864; resigned Feb. 24, 1865.

INFANTRY—FIRST REGIMENT.

James V. Guthrie, colonel; resigned Dec. 21, 1861.

David A. Enyart, colonel; lieutenant-colonel, from muster-in to January 22, 1862.

Bart G. Leiper, lieutenant-colonel; major from muster-in to Jan. 22, 1862.

Frank P. Cahill, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Nov. 6, 1862; resigned Aug. 17, 1863.

Alva R. Hadlock, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Sept. 1, 1863.

James W. Mitchell, major; captain Company G; promoted major Sept. 1, 1863.

James W. Conine, adjutant; transferred to Company E, Sept. 1, 1861, as 1st lieutenant.

Courtland W. King, adjutant; promoted adjutant from sergeant major Sept. 1, 1861.

John A. Wright, adjutant; appointed from civil life Jan. 22, 1862.

Franklin W. Fee, regimental quartermaster.

Samuel G. Menzies, surgeon.

William L. White, assistant surgeon; resigned Jan. 22, 1862.

John Dickerson, assistant surgeon; promoted from hospital steward Jan. 22, 1862.

COMPANY A.

Joseph T. Wheeler, captain; Samuel L. Christie-captain; Charles F. Groves, captain; John Jack, son, 1st lieutenant; Legrand LaBoiteaux, 1st lieutenant; Theodore Harrol, 2d lieutenant; Byron R. Underhill, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Alva R. Hadlock, captain; John B. Wagener, captain; Thomas K. Fraser, 1st lieutenant; David Hammond, 1st lieutenant; George W. Henson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Ralph Hunt, captain; Frank W. Fee, 1st lieutenant; John A. Snediker, 1st lieutenant; John F. Lamme, 2d lieutenant; John B. Guthrie, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

David Y. Johns, captain; Samuel Barr, Jr., captain; David J. Jones, captain; Patrick J. Brown, 1st lieutenant; James Farran, 2d lieutenant; John D. Kautz, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E

was detached as Artillery early in 1861.

COMPANY F.

Jesse J. Stepleton, captain; David M. Dryden, captain; Thomas Cox, Jr., captain; Albert H. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Joseph B. Sockwell, 1st lieutenant; James G. Lawrence, 2d lieutenant; Joseph M. Leiper, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

James W. Mitchell, captain; Edward S. Atkinson, captain; John W. Gorin, 1st lieutenant; Joseph M. Leiper, 1st lieutenant; George Hunter, 1st lieutenant; John C. Hyland, 1st lieutenant; Gilbert Ely, 2d lieutenant; James C. Cozine, 2d lieutenant; Samuel M. Starling, 2d lieutenant; H. W. Benton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Frank Cahill, captain; James T. Williamson, captain; John F. Lamme, captain; Samuel L. Christie, 1st lieutenant; C. F. W. Tahrenhorst, 1st lieutenant; William H. Lyons, 2d lieutenant; Louis H. Hocke, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Thomas Cox, Jr., captain; Andrew J. Hagan, captain; Courtland W. King, 1st lieutenant; William R. McChesney, 1st lieutenant; William James McKee, 1st lieutenant; Leonidas L. Tittle, 2d lieutenant; James Farran, 2d lientenant.

COMPANY K.

John Becker, captain; Jacob Theis, 1st lieutenant; Samuel B. Lowenstein, 1st lieutenant; George Homung, 1st lieutenant; Frederick Wolf, 2d lieutenant; Alexander Tilley, 2d lieutenant.

This regiment was organized at Camp Clay, Ohio, in June, 1861, under Col. James V. Guthrie, and was mustered into the United States service on the 4th day of June, 1861, by Maj. S. Burbank, 1st United States Infantry. After organization it was ordered to the Department of West Virginia, where it performed much valuable service in the early engagements of the war.

INFANTRY—SECOND REGIMENT.

William E. Woodruff, colonel; taken prisoner at battle of Scury Creek, Va., July 17, 1861.

Thomas D. Sedgewick, colonel; promoted from major to colonel, Jan. 25, 1862.

George W. Neff, lieutenant-colonel; taken prisoner July 17, 1861, at battle of Scury Creek, Va.

Warner Spencer, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Jan. 25, 1862.

John R. Hurd, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Jan. 13, 1863.

Oliver L. Baldwin, major; promoted to colonel Fifth Kentucky Cavalry Jan. 1, 1864.

Fernando Cook, major; promoted from captain, Company E, to major March 9, 1864.

Henry Wimedell, adjutant; assigned to Company A as 1st lieutenant Jan. 1, 1864.

Thomas N. Davis, adjutant; appointed adjutant Jan. 1, 1864.

Gilbert H. Clemens, regimental quartermaster; appointed regimental quartermaster June 12, 1861.

Joseph M. Blundell, regimental quartermaster; appointed regimental quartermaster Sept. 16, 1861.

James W. Poe, regimental quartermaster; appointed regimental quartermaster April 13, 1863.

John F. White, surgeon; resigned Jan. 20, 1862.

David J. Griffiths, surgeon; appointed surgeon Feb. 6, 1862.

Stephen P. Bonner, ass't surgeon; resigned Feb. 12, 1862.

Lawrence Russell, ass't surgeon; resigned May 7, 1862.

James E. Cox, ass't surgeon; resigned Dec. 6, 1863.

William L. Reed, ass't surgeon; promoted from hospital steward to ass't surgeon Dec. 12, 1862.

Frederick Rectanus, ass't surgeon; appointed ass't surgeon March 2, 1864.

COMPANY A.

Alfred J. M. Browne, captain; Henry B. Martin, captain; Joseph M. Blundell, 1st lieutenant; Thomas N. Davis, 1st lieutenant; Henry Wimedell, 1st lieutenant; George Taylor, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Thomas D. Sedgewick, captain; George Austin, captain; Oliver L. Baldwin, captain; Seth W. Tuley, captain; Archibald McLellan, 1st lieutenant; William Brannin, 1st lieutenant; William P. Bell, 1st lieutenant; George R. McFadden, 1st lieutenant; Gideon V. Vandyke, 2d lieutenant; Sidmund Huber, 2d lieutenant; Orlando C. Bryant, 2d lieutenant

COMPANY C.

John H. Spellmeyer, captain; Anthony Lauman, captain; Francis Miller, 1st lieutenant; William Pettibone, 1st lieutenant; James E. Stewart, 2d lieutenant; William Miller, 2d lieutenant; John H. Albers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Warner Spencer, captain; Joseph W. Miller, captain; Lemach Duvall. captain; William B. Folger, 1st lieutenant; Calvin W. Brown, 1st lieutenant; Daniel W. Finch, 2d lieutenant; John Milton Blair, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Flamen Ball, captain; George W. Dasher, captain; Ferdinand Cook, captain; Charles W. Karr, captain; Frederick E. Roelofson, 1st lieutenant; Seth W. Tuley, 1st lieutenant; Edward B. Kirman, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John R. Hurd, captain; Jacob H. Smith, captain; J. M. Blair, captain; Jesse C. Hurd, 1st lieutenant; Cyrenus J. Coe, 1st lieutenant; James A. Miller, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

James M. Bodine, captain; John D. Parkhurst, captain; David McK. Ong, 1st lieutenant; Joseph C. Bontecon, 1st lieutenant; Hiram D. Bodine, 1st lieutenant; William Bell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

James E. Stacy, captain; John H. Archdeacon, captain; William H. Taylor, 1st lieutenant; George W. Dasher, 1st lieutenant; John D. Parkhurst, 1st lieutenant; William R. McChesney, 2d lieutenant; Delos Alden, 2d lieutenant; Thomas J. Elliott, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Joseph Whittlesey, captain; Henry Gross, captain; Jesse C. Hurd, captain; Atherton Thayer, 1st lieutenant; George Potter, 1st lieutenant; Herman Alms, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John F. Wisnewski, captain; Louis Steubing, captain; George Beinert, 1st lieutenant; Theodore Leiser, 1st lieutenant; Herman Horst, 2d lieutenant; Oscar Mitchel, 2d lieutenant.

The Second Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry was organized at Camp Clay, Ohio, under Col. William E. Woodruff, and was mustered into the United States service on the 13th day of June, 1861, by Maj. Burbank, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—THIRD REGIMENT.

Thomas E. Bramlette, colonel; resigned July 13, 1862, at Decherd, Tenn.

William T. Scott, colonel; promoted colonel July 13, 1862.

Samuel McKee, colonel; promoted colonel Dec. 7, 1862.

William H. Spencer, colonel, promoted colonel Dec. 7, 1862.

Henry C. Dunlap, colonel; promoted from captain, Company A.

Daniel R. Collier, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Dec. 7, 1862.

William A. Bullitt, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel April 19, 1863.

Charles H. Buford, major; resigned May 2d, 1862.

John Brennan, major; wounded at Kenesaw, Ga., June 27, 1864.

Garvin D. Hunt, adjutant; died Nov. 30, 1863, of wounds received at Mission Ridge.

Henry Porter, adjutant; promoted from 1st lieutenant, Company C, April 5, 1864.

Benj. F. Wayne, regimental quartermaster; resigned May 1, 1862.

Thomas M. Selby, Jr., regimental quartermaster; resigned Sept. 15, 1862.

Richard J. West, regimental quartermaster; promoted from private 5th Kentucky Infantry.

Hector Owens, surgeon; resigned Jan. 22, 1863.

Joseph Foreman, surgeon; resigned Sept. 9, 1863.

John B. Burns, surgeon.

James G. Turk, asst. surgeon; resigned Aug. 5, 1862.

Samuel K. Rhorer, asst. surgeon; promoted from hospital steward.

James R. Scott, asst. surgeon.

Richard H. Gray, chaplain; resigned April 13, 1862, at Shiloh, Tenn.

Jacob Cooper, chaplain; resigned Sept. 30, 1863, at Nashville, Tenn.

COMPANY A.

Samuel McKee, captain; Henry C. Dunlap, captain; Benjamin F. Powell, captain; Wm. T. Epperson, 1st lieutenant; Alban D. Bradshaw, 1st lieutenant; Joseph Russell, 1st lieutenant; Abram P. Brown, 2d lieutenant; Norman R. Christie, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Augustine Dunn, captain; Daniel R. Collier, captain; William J. Hogan, captain; William H. Barnett, captain; Uriah T. Merritt, 1st lieutenant; Peter Haldeman, 1st lieutenant; Morton Scott, 2d lieutenant; Samuel Newton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

D. H. Denton, captain; Lucien H. Ralston, captain; John L. Logan, captain; Henry Porter, 1st lieutenant; Sidney F. Collins, 1st lieutenant; Tyrey Turpin, 2d lieutenant; Monroe Floyd, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. Barnett, 2d lieutenant; John W. Warren, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John C. Bolin, captain; John L. Gilmore, captain; Reuben B. Dunbar, 1st lieutenant; Mathew Cullen, 1st lieutenant; Wm. H. Barnett, 1st lieutenant; Christopher C. Gossett, 2d lieutenant; Robert Gilmore, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

James A. Rosseau, captain; Austin M. Burbank, captain; James M. Bristow, captain; George R. Price, 1st lieutenant; William B. Skaggs, 1st lieutenant; Christopher T. Grinstead, 1st lieutenant; McHaley Yates, 1st lieutenant; James D. Salmons, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Harbert King, captain; John Brennan, captain; Joseph J. Carson, captain; James M. Gooch, captain; Albert F. Hoarine, 1st lieutenant; Daniel Severence, 1st lieutenant; Samuel D. Powel, 1st lieutenant; James H. Bridgewater, 2d lieutenant; Nathaniel D. Wilmot, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Isham Bolin, captain; Wm. T. Jackman, captain; John W. Tuttle, captain; Benjamin J. Bolin, 1st lieutenant, James L. Hardin, 1st lieutenant; John Akers, 1st lieutenant; John C. Bolin, 2d lieutenant; James T. Bramlette, 2d lieutenant; Barnett C. Young, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Henry S. Taylor, captain; William H. Hudson, captain; John W. Tuttle, 1st lieutenant; James M. Bristow, 1st lieutenant; Harrison B. Carter, 1st lieutenant; William L. Bramlette, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Milton Frazer, captain; John S. S. Maret, captain; Norman R. Christie, captain; John L. Gilmore, 1st lieutenant; Joseph J. Carson, 1st lieutenant; William D. Murrah, 1st lieutenant; George W. Roberts, 2d lieutenant; Solon D. Moore, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

James T. W. Barnett, captain; John Roberts, captain; George W. Roberts, captain; Wm. R. Buford, 1st lieutenant; George McClure, 1st lieutenant; John H. Black, 2d lieutenant; Robert L. Tracy, 2d lieutenant; Spencer B. Hughes, 2d lieutenant.

The Third Regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, was organized at Camp Dick Robinson, under Col. Thomas E. Bramlette, and mustered into the United States service on the 8th day of October, 1861, by Gen. George H. Thomas. The regiment was one of the first to respond to the call of the government for troops to guard munitions of war to the Unionists of east Tennessee.

INFANTRY—FOURTH REGIMENT.

Speed S. Fry, colonel; promoted to brigadier-general March 21, 1862.

John T. Croxton, colonel; promoted brigadier-general Aug. 16, 1864.

Robert M. Kelly, colonel; promoted colonel Aug. 25, 1864.

P. Burgess Hunt, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel March 23, 1862.

Josephus H. Tompkins, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Aug. 25, 1864.

Joshua W. Jacobs, major; promoted major June 7, 1865.

William Goodloe, adjutant; resigned Nov. 6, 1862.

Charles V. Ray, adjutant; transferred as 1st lieutenant to Company H, Sept. 29, 1864.

Charles T. Schable, adjutant; promoted adjutant Sept. 29, 1864.

Michael B. Hope, regimental quartermaster; transferred to Company B, Aug. 16, 1863.

Minor C. Humston, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster Aug. 15, 1863.

James R. White, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster Dec. 19, 1864.

Stephen L. Burdett, surgeon.

Mathew H. Young, surgeon; promoted surgeon Oct. 24, 1864.

Harrison Phillips, asst. surgeon.

John W. Jacobs, chaplain; died at Lebanon, Ky., Jan. 20, 1862.

John R. Eades, chaplain; resigned June 4, 1863.

COMPANY A.

Wellington Harlan, captain; William W. Sanders, captain; Joshua W. Jacobs, captain; James H. Linney, 1st lieutenant; Charles T. Schable, 1st lieutenant; Sidney M. Wiehl, 2d lieutenant; Thomas P. Young, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Peter J. Hiatt, captain; James A. Vaughan, captain; Emory R. Harrington, captain; Lewis C. Lancaster, captain; Mason C. Miller, 1st lieutenant; G. D. Hunt, 1st lieutenant; Michael B. Hope, 1st lieutenant; James M. Hall, 2d lieutenant; Henry B. Stanwood, 2d lieutenant; James M. Duke, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John L. Williams, captain; Luther Jenkins, captain; Robert T. Williams, 1st lieutenant; Granville C. West, 1st lieutenant; George F. Rowland, 1st lieutenant; John W. Lewis, 2d lieutenant; Edward M. Anderson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James J. Hudnall, captain; Jno. A. Roberts, captain; Nicholas M. Kelley, 1st lieutenant; Charles V. Ray, 1st lieutenant; Geo. H. Patten, 1st lieutenant; Charles T. Swope, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Geo. M. Jackson, captain; Nathaniel L. Turner, captain; James A. Moores, captain; Isaac N. Jacobs, 1st lieutenant; Archibald Moores, 1st lieutenant; James A. Moores, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

W. F. Hoch, captain; Josephus H. Tompkins, captain; Robert F. Long, captain; Merrill Hicks, 1st lieutenant; John M. Burton, 2d lieutenant; John T. Merrimee, 2d lieutenant; Luther Jenkins, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Richard L. Myers, captain; James H. West, captain; Robt. D. Cook, 1st lieutenant; Allen S. Whetstone, 1st lieutenant; Lindsey C. Duncan, 1st lieutenant; William F. Hoch, 2d lieutenant; James C. Broughton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Sylvester Rockwell, captain; Milton Graham, captain; Mathew H. Jenkins, captain; Henry P. Merrill, captain; Henry Teney, 1st lieutenant; Robert F. Long, 1st lieutenant; Charles V. Ray, 1st lieutenant; Francis M. Hardin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

James B. Brewer, captain; Wm. B. Riggs, captain; Charles T. Swoope, captain; Sidney B. Jones, 1st lieutenant; James McDermott, 1st lieutenant; Elliott Kelley, 1st lieutenant; Samuel A. Spencer, 2d lieutenant; Harvey W. Secrest, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Robt. M. Kelly, captain; James M. Givens, captain; Alfred S. Stewart, captain; Burwell S. Tucker, 1st lieutenant; Samuel S. Rich, 1st lieutenant; Robt. F. Long, 2d lieutenant; Charles T. Schable, 2d lieutenant.

The Fourth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Infantry was organized at Camp Dick Robinson, Ky., under Col. Speed S. Fry, mustered into the United States service on October 9, 1861, by Brig.-Gen. George H. Thomas, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—FIFTH REGIMENT.

Lovell H. Rousseau, colonel; promoted to brigadier-general Oct. 5, 1861.

Harvey M. Buckley, colonel; promoted colonel Oct. 5, 1861.

William W. Berry, colonel; promoted colonel Feb. 9, 1863.

John L. Treanor, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Feb 23, 1863.

Charles L. Thomasson, major; killed at battle of Chickamauga Sept. 19, 1863.

Henry C. Dunlap, adjutant; resigned to accept commission as captain in 3d Kentucky Infantry.

Edward W. Johnstone, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Dec. 22, 1862.

Thomas C. Pomroy, regimental quartermaster; resigned June 17, 1862.

John M. Moore, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster Sept. 10, 1862.

John Matthews, surgeon; resigned Feb. 1, 1862.

Enos S. Swain, surgeon: promoted from assistant surgeon to surgeon Oct. 1, 1862.

William E. Gilpin, assistant surgeon; resigned Nov. 23, 1861.

Samuel J. F. Miller, assistant surgeon; promoted to assistant surgeon May 1, 1862.

James H. Bristow, Chaplain.

COMPANY A.

William Mangan, captain; Thomas Foreman, captain; James F. Cullen, captain; John M. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Henry Cassen, 1st lieutenant; John Finley, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Lafayette P. Lovett, captain; John P. Hurley, 1st lieutenant; Horatio C. McCorkhill, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. McManen, 2d lieutenant; David Jones, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Asaph H. Speed, captain; Christopher Leonard, captain; Richard Jones, 1st lieutenant; John Leaf, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John L. Treanor, captain; William W. Rowland, captain; Theodore F. Cummings, 1st lieutenant; Joseph E. Miller, 1st lieutenant; John Baker, 1st lieutenant; Milton W. Curry, 2d lieutenant; James H. Baty, 2d lieutenant; John Ryan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

August Schweitzer, captain; Stephen Lindenfelser, captain; Jno. C. Scheible, 1st lieutenant; Adolph Rentlinger, 2d lieutenant; Frank Dessell, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. H. Ayars, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John E. Vansant, captain; John Lucas, captain; William H. Powell, 1st lieutenant; William Batman, 1st lieutenant; John Martz, 2d lieutenant; Terrance F. Burns, 2d lieutenant; Thomas M. Hite, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John M. Huston, captain; Joseph E. Miller, captain; Wm. H. Powell, captain; David Q. Rousseau, 1st lieutenant; John W. Huston, 1st lieutenant; Charles Anderson, 1st lieutenant; Theodore E. Elliott, 2d lieutenant; David Thomas, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Charles L. Thomasson, captain; Norman B. Moninger, captain; George A. Albert, 1st lieutenant; Edmund B. Randolph, 2d lieutenant; Edward W. Johnson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Alexander B. Ferguson, captain; Upton Wilson, captain; William H. H. Ayars, captain; Charles J. Cook, 1st lieutenant; A. Sidney Smith, 1st lieutenant; Wilson J. Green, 2d lieutenant; Henry R. Willett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John D. Brent, captain; John P. Hurley, captain; Michael Zoller, captain; Geo. W. Richardson, 1st lieutenant; John D. Sheppard, 1st lieutenant; Morgan Piper, 1st lieutenant; George W. Wyatt, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifth Kentucky Infantry was organized in the summer of 1861 under Lovell H. Rousseau, as colonel, and was mustered into the United States service on the 9th day of September, 1861, at Camp Joe Holt, Ind., by W. H. Sidell, major Fifteenth United States Infantry, and mustering officer.

At the alarm of an invasion of Kentucky by Buckner, this gallant command was thrown out in defense of Louisville by General, then Col. Rousseau, and held them in check until re-enforcements arrived from Ohio and Indiana, and forever refuted the idea of a State standing in a neutral position when the integrity or unity of the nation was assailed.

INFANTRY—SIXTH REGIMENT.

Walter C. Whitaker, colonel; promoted brigadier-general June 30, 1863.

George T. Shackelford, colonel; promoted to colonel July 27, 1863; wounded at battle of Chickamauga.

George T. Cotton, lieutenant-colonel; killed at battle of Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.

Richard C. Dawkins, lieutentant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel May 25, 1864.

William N. Hailman, major; appointed Dec, 10, 1861; honorably discharged March 14, 1862.

Alfred Martin, major; promoted major March 28, 1862.

Richard T. Whitaker, major; appointed major March 12, 1863; resigned May 11, 1864.

Ferdinand Evans, adjutant; promoted; resigned Nov, 15, 1862.

William H. Middleton, adjutant; appointed from civil life; died of disease March 1, 1863.

William Jones, adjutant; promoted to captain Company A May 22, 1864.

Lewis M. Perry, adjutant; promoted adjutant June 7, 1864.

Michael Billings, quartermaster; appointed Dec. 10, 1861; resigned March 10, 1862.

Harvey R. Wolfe, quartermaster; appointed from private Company H, March 28, 1862.

Joseph S. Drane, surgeon; appointed Dec. 12, 1861.

Abner B. Coons, asst. surgeon; appointed Dec. 10, 1861; died of disease March 4, 1862.

Edmund S. Long, asst. surgeon; appointed May 15, 1862, from civil life.

James J. Johnston, chaplain; appointed from civil life Aug. 15, 1862; resigned Sept. 24, 1863.

COMPANY A.

Alfred Martin, captain; John McGraw, captain; William Jones, captain; Richard Rockingham, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Bates, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Richard Lee, captain; Richard C. Dawkins, captain; Joseph H. Dawkins, captain; Lundsford D. Carrington, 1st lieutenant; Martin L. Boner, 1st lieutenant; John L. Lee, 2d lieutenant; Thomas Eubanks, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Joseph J. Hauphoff, captain; Charles S. Todd, captain; Henry C. Schmidt, captain; German Dettweiler, 1st lieutenant; Thomas R. Danks, 1st lieutenant; Gustavus Bohn, 2d lieutenant; Frederiek V. Lockman, 2d lieutentant.

COMPANY D.

Elisha Hedden, captain; Bluford N. Sampson, 1st lieutenant; Harrison Choate, 1st lieutenant; James W. Briscoe, 1st lieutenant; James H. Howard, 2d lieutenant; James H. McCampbell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Bernhard Hund, captain; William Frank, captain; John Sensbach, 1st lieutenant; Lorenzo Ammon, 1st lieutenant; Anton Hund, 2d lieutenant; Valentine Melcher, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

William S. Long, captain; Robert H. Armstrong, captain; John P. Mason, 1st lieutenant; William B. Dunlap, 2d lieutenant; Charles Clark, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Peter Emge, captain; Peter Marker, captain; Gottfried Rentschler, captain; George Marker, 1st lieutenant; Henry Canning, 2d lieutenant; Nicholas Sehr, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Isaac N. Johnston, captain; John L. Chilton, 1st lieutenant; Harrison Roberts, 2d lieutenant; Richard T. Whitaker, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

August Stein, captain; Friedrich Nierhoff, captain; Deitrich Hesselbein, captain; William Frank, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Henry C. McLeod, captain; Daniel W. Owens, captain; Thomas W. Robertson; 1st lieutenant; Thomas C. Campbell, 2d lieutenant; William W. Furr, 2d lieutenant.

The Sixth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Camp Sigel, Jefferson County, Ky., in December, 1861, under Col. Walter C. Whitaker, and was mustered into the United States service on the 24th December, 1861, by Maj. W. H. Sidell, United States Mustering Officer.

INFANTRY—SEVENTH REGIMENT.

T. T. Garrard, colonel; promoted to brigadier-general Nov. 24, 1862.

Reuben May, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel 8th Kentucky Infantry May 12, 1863.

J. W. Ridgell, lieutenant-colonel; resigned Jan. 23, 1863.

John Lucas, lieutenant-colonel; appointed lieutenant-colonel Apr. 23, 1863; resigned Jan. 30, 1864.

T. J. Daniel, lieutenant-colonel; appointed lieutenant-colonel May 9, 1864; resigned Sept. 24, 1864.

I. N. Cardwell, major; resigned Feb. 15, 1863.

H. W. Adams, major; promoted to major Feb. 16, 1863; resigned Aug. 5, 1863.

E. B. Treadway, major; promoted major Jan. 1, 1864; resigned Sept. 24, 1864.

Henry Brennan, adjutant; promoted to captain in 20th Infantry Nov. 1, 1862.

J. C. Culton, adjutant; promoted adjutant July 4, 1864.

J. C. Horton, quartermaster; resigned March 27, 1862.

W. W. Watkins, quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster March 27, 1862.

W. H. Jackson, quartermaster; promoted from quarter-master sergeant Jan. 1, 1863.

William Berry, surgeon; resigned Apr. 30, 1864.

A. B. Conant, surgeon; promoted surgeon from assistant surgeon May 10, 1864.

Henry Tammage, assistant surgeon; resigned Apr. 13, 1862.

C. L. C. Herndon, assistant surgeon; promoted assistant surgeon May 10, 1864.

T. S. Paul, chaplain; appointed chaplain Aug. 15, 1863.

COMPANY A.

Elisha B. Treadway, captain; James M. Beatty, captain; William J. Smallwood, 1st lieutenant; George W. Daniel, 1st lieutenant; Jesse H. Cole, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Daniel, 2d lieutenant; Thomas J. Greer, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

John Lucas, captain; Daniel G. Williams, captain; Larkin A. Byron, 1st lieutenant; Henderson Eversole, 1st lieutenant; James W. Smith, 2d lieutenant; Benjamin L. Allen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

James H. McNeill, captain; Levi Pennington, captain; David Stillings, captain; Alex. H. Stephens, captain; Melville Phelps, 1st lieutenant; William R. Robinson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

A. H. Clark, captain; Thomas H. Wilson, captain; Henry J. Clark, captain; Andrew Hurd, 1st lieutenant; Hampton Flanery, 1st lieutenant; James N. Culton, 1st lieutenant; G. Isaacs, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

E. W. Murphy, captain; Beverly P. White, captain; John T. Bates, 1st lieutenant; John B. Stivers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

William Sears, captain; Larkin A. Byron, captain; William J. Eaton, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Buchanan, 1st lieutenant; George W. Harman, 1st lieutenant; Simeon J. Brummitt, 1st lieutenant; John Q. Early, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Granville L. Maret, captain; Martin V. Sutton, 1st lieutenant; Samuel Sutton, 2d lieutenant; Mathias C. Roach, 2d lieutenant; John W. Burch, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George M. Adams, captain; Adam Reeder, captain; Joseph H. Davis, 1st lieutenant; Stephen T. S. Cook, 1st lieutenant; James H. Tinsley, 2d lieutenant; Lawson Reeder, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

William A. Dozier, captain; Peter Hinkle, captain; Gale S. Dowis, captain; Stephen Dowis, 1st lieutenant; Isaac Deane, 2d lieutenant; Joseph Frisbee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Philos Stratton, captain; Thomas P. Caldwell, captain; S. H. Thompson, 1st lieutenant; Joseph F. Baugh, 1st lieutenant; Elhanon M. Botkin, 2d lieutenant; Jesse C. Speak, 2d lieutenant.

The Seventh Kentucky Infantry was organized at Camp Dick Robinson, Ky., under Col. T. T. Garrard, and mustered into the United States service on the 22d day of September, 1861, by Brig. Gen. George H. Thomas. As soon as organized it was ordered to Wild Cat, Ky., to repel the invasion of Gen. Zollicoffer, and participated in an engagement with the enemy at that point, which was the first general engagement fought on Kentucky soil. In this battle the Seventh won distinction for the gallant manner in which it repelled the repeated attacks of the enemy.

INFANTRY—EIGHTH REGIMENT.

Sidney M. Barnes, colonel; resigned Jan. 11, 1864.

Reuben May, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to colonel 7th Kentucky Infantry May 8, 1863.

James D. Mayhew, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from captain, Company A, May 8, 1863.

Green B. Broaddus, major; resigned April 26, 1863.

John S. Clark, major; promoted from adjutant April 27, 1863.

Thomas E. Park, adjutant; promoted from sergeant-major April 28, 1863.

Joseph H. Gardner, quartermaster; resigned Nov. 20, 1861.

Thompson Burnham, Jr., quartermaster; resigned March 15, 1863.

James M. Kindred, quartermaster; promoted from quartermaster-sergeant May 28, 1863.

John R. Pirtle, surgeon; resigned Dec. 23, 1862.

John Mills, surgeon; promoted from assistant surgeon Dec. 24, 1862.

William Robinson, assistant surgeon; dismissed Aug. 4, 1863.

C. H. Morton, assistant surgeon; resigned Dec. 2, 1862.
Timothy S. Paul, chaplain.
James W. Kindred, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

James D. Mayhew, captain; Wm. H. Catching, captain; Jacob P. Phipps, 1st lieutenant; James A. McCullah, 2d lieutenant; John S. Tye, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Ansil D. Powell, captain; Jordan Neal, 1st lieutenant; Joseph Blackwell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John Wilson, captain; W. W. Park, 1st lieutenant; C. M. Park, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Robert B. Jamison, captain; John P. Gum, captain; Henry C. Thomas, captain; Wm. G. Smallwood, captain; Thomas H. Carson, 1st lieutenant; James W. Stewart, 1st lieutenant; Bowles H. Sale, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Murrell, 2d lieutenant; Joseph McGuire, 2d lieutenant; John S. Tye, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Robert B. Hickman, captain; Coleman D. Benton, captain; Perry A. Nickell, 1st lieutenant; George W. Jacobs, 1st lieutenant; John M. Puckett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John B. Banton, captain; Barton S. Dixon, captain; Christopher C. Jackson, 1st lieutenant; James Harkleroad, 1st lieutenant; Nimrod C. Jones, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Landon C. Minter, captain; Chas. L. Burleigh, captain; Newton J. Hughes, 1st lieutenant; W. Scott Spencer, 2d lieutenant; Caleb S. Hughes, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Rhodes Winburn, captain; Thos. J. Wright, captain; Wade B. Cox, 1st lieutenant; James R. Williams, 1st lieutenant; Geo. W. Lewis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

William McDaniel, captain; Brown Martin, captain; Wiley J. Crook, 1st lieutenant; Nathan Elliott, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Amis, 2d lieutenant; Jesse McDaniel, 2d lieutenant; George C. Watson, 2d lieutenant.

NOTE.—Company K was consolidated with Company D, by order of the War Department.

The Eighth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Estill Springs, Ky., under Col. S. M. Barnes, and was mustered into the United States service on the 15th day of January, 1862, at Lebanon, Ky., by Capt. C. C. Gilbert, First United States Infantry. This regiment was raised chiefly in the mountain counties of Kentucky, and was composed of men who were distinguished for their unflinching bravery and patriotism.

INFANTRY—NINTH REGIMENT.

Benjamin C. Grider, colonel; resigned Feb. 3, 1863.
George H. Cram, colonel; promoted to colonel March 10, 1863.
Allen J. Roark, lieutenant-colonel; died Apr. 17, 1862, at Nashville, Tenn.
John H. Grider, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel March 18, 1863.
Chesley D. Bailey, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant colonel May 18, 1863.
William J. Henson, major; resigned Apr. 17, 1862.
William Starling, major; promoted major from captain, Company C, May 18, 1863.
John H. Shepherd, adjutant; wounded and captured at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Benjamin S. Coffey, regimental quartermaster; resigned June 9, 1862.
Francis M. Cummings, regimental quartermaster; resigned Feb. 17, 1863.
Frank White, regimental quartermaster; appointed from 59th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, March 2, 1863.
James R. Duncan, surgeon; resigned Jan. 11, 1862.
Thomas R. W. Jeffray, surgeon.
John A. Lindsay, assistant surgeon.
John Chamberlain, assistant surgeon; resigned April 16, 1863.
James C. Rush, chaplain; resigned Nov. 7, 1862.

COMPANY A.

John R. Wheat, captain; Henry F. Leggitt, captain; Francis M. Stone, 1st lieutenant; John W. Lucas, 1st lieutenant; Rufus Somerby, 1st lieutenant; William H. Pitkin, 1st lieutenant; R. R. W. Gillenwaters, 1st lieutenant; Dr. H. Roark, 2d lieutenant; Andrew J. Pipkin, 2d lieutenant; William T. Barton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William T. Bryan, captain; Silas Clark, captain; Warner Underwood, 1st lieutenant; Benjamin M. Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Turner Hestand, 1st lieutenant; Wm. M. Woodcock, 1st lieutenant; Anderson Smith, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Gilbert M. Mulligan, captain; William Starling, captain; Theodore F. Heeter, captain; Jesse Howell, 1st lieutenant; Charles R. Tate, 1st lieutenant; Ancil B. Mayhew, 1st lieutenant; Toliver Moore, 2d lieutenant; David W. Pope, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Lafayette Harling, captain; Wiley A. Whitley, 1st lieutenant; Algernon S. Leggitt, 1st lieutenant; James Goad, 1st lieutenant; William H. Morrow, 1st lieutenant; William M. Gregory, 2d lieutenant; Pleasant Chitwood, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Archibald S. Chenoweth, captain; Toliver Moore, captain; Moses L. Norvell, 1st lieutenant; Isaac N. Chenoweth, 1st lieutenant; John P. Grinstead, 1st lieutenant; Jasper N. Butram, 1st lieutenant; Samuel C. Stout, 2d lieutenant; Daniel J. Stout, 2d lieutenant; David Witty, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Henry C. Martin, captain; John M. Vetter, captain; Riley A. Read, captain; Robert T. Patton, 1st lieutenant; William Moore, 2d lieutenant; Fred. F. Carpenter, 2d lieutenant; Emery H. Read, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Isaac Dickerson, captain; Demetrius B. Coyle, captain; Jas. M. Simmons, captain; Henry W. Mayes, 1st lieutenant; Henry W. Jenkins, 1st lieutenant; Thos. W. Batdorf, 1st lieutenant; Charles A. McCue, 2d lieutenant; Elijah A. Purcell, 2d lieutenant; Chas. J. Coyle, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George H. Cram, captain; Samuel A. Lodge, captain; Wellington J. Cram, captain; John P. Grinstead, captain; John W. Combs, 1st lieutenant; Chesly D. Bailey, 1st lieutenant; Smith Pipkins, 1st lieutenant, William O. Boyle, 1st lieutenant; William D. Page, 2d lieutenant; Turner Bartley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Jonathan W. Roark, captain; Chesley D. Bailey, captain; John H. Wheat, captain; James Rhody, 1st lieutenant; Dewitt C. Downing, 1st lieutenant; John B. Austin, 2d lieutenant; Henry H. Townsend, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Wm. F. Austin, captain; Rufus Somerby, captain; Boyle O. Rodes, captain; Demetrius B. Coyle, 1st lieutenant; George Faulkner, 1st lieutenant; James Lane, 2d lieutenant; James M. Simmons, 2d lieutenant; Maj. B. McDuffee, 2d lieutenant.

The Ninth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Columbia, Ky., under Col. Benjamin C. Grider, and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Boyle, Adair Co., Ky., on the 26th day of Nov., 1861, by Maj. W. H. Sidell, Fifteenth United States Infantry, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—TENTH REGIMENT.

John M. Harlan, colonel; resigned March 6, 1863.

William H. Hays, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel to colonel, March 11, 1863.

Gabriel C. Wharton, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major to lieutenant-colonel March 11, 1863.

Henry G. Davidson, major; promoted from captain, Company A, to major March 11, 1863.

William J. Lisle, adjutant; was adjutant to March 11, 1863.

Austin P. McGuire, adjutant; promoted to 1st lieutenant and adjutant March 11, 1863.

Samuel Matlock, quartermaster; on detached service March 6, 1863, to Nov. 21, 1864.

William Atkisson, surgeon; died April 14, 1862.

James G. Hatchitt, surgeon; promoted brigade surgeon June 26, 1862.

Jabez Perkins, surgeon; Nov. 18, 1863, commissioned as surgeon United States Volunteers.

Charles H. Stocking, surgeon; promoted from assistant surgeon to surgeon April 4, 1864.

Thomas M. Knott, asst. surgeon; died April 5, 1862.

Charles Hardesty, asst. surgeon; appointed assistant surgeon April 5, 1862.

Richard C. Nash, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Henry G. Davidson, captain; William J. Lisle, captain; Charles W. McKay, captain; James Reynolds, 1st lieutenant; Henry H. Warren, 1st lieutenant; John Estes, 2d lieutenant; Austin P. McGuire, 2d lieutenant; Richard Grace, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

John T. Milburn, captain; Robert S. Short, 1st lieutenant; William F. O'Bryan, 1st lieutenant; James M. Davenport, 2d lieutenant; John T. McCauley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Edward Hilpp, captain; William L. Musson, 1st lieutenant; James E. Sallee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

George W. Riley, captain; William Hupp, 1st lieutenant; James J. Mills, 1st ieutenant; Stephen N. Dorsey, 2d lieutenant; Edward Y. Penick, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Seth P. Bevill, captain; Andrew Thompson, captain; Clem. Funk, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Franklin S. Hill, captain; Charles W. McKay, 1st lieutenant; Benjamin R. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Joseph T. Adcock, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

William R. Hunter, captain; James M. Davenport, captain; James M. Fiddler, 1st lieutenant; Charles E. Spalding, 1st lieutenant; Edward O. Blemford, 1st lieutenant; Edward C. Ferrill, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Buford R. Pendleton, captain; William T. Shively, captain; Henry W. Barry, 1st lieutenant; Henry C. Dunn, 1st lieutenant; William F. Beglow, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Israel B. Webster, captain; William E. Kelley, 1st lieutenant; John H. Myers 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William Tweddle, captain; Henry Waller, captain; John H. Denton, captain; James R. Watts, 1st lieutenant.

The Tenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry was organized at Lebanon, Ky., under Col. John M. Harlan, and mustered into the United States service Nov. 21, 1861, by Maj. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

Pierce B. Hawkins, colonel.

S. P. Love, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel to colonel June 26, 1863.

Erasmus L. Mottley, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major to lieutenant-colonel June 26, 1863.

Woodford M. Houchin, major; promoted from captain, Company E, to major Feb. 1, 1864.

Eugene F. Kinnaird, major.

John T. Kinnaird, adjutant.

J. H. Reno, quartermaster.

Vincent S. Hay, quartermaster.

Joseph Kerby, quartermaster; promoted from private Company G.

John F. Kimbley, surgeon.

James T. Higgins, assistant surgeon; promoted from hospital steward.

Samuel Simpson, assistant surgeon.

Porter H. Calvert, chaplain; promoted from private, Company K, to chaplain Sept. 25, 1863.

Lewis P. Arnold, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Eugene F. Kinnaird, captain; James M. Elms, captain; John G. Daniels, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Cherry, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Edward R. Weir, captain; William F. Ward, captain; James W. Patteson, 1st lieutenant; Hudson Brown, 2d lieutenant; Templeton P. Martin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John B. Tyler, captain; Curren G. Neel, captain; John B. Graves, captain; James M. Tyler, 1st lieutenant; William B. Neel, 1st lieutenant; Jesse C. Atkinson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Newman M. Peay, captain; Charles W. Hanway, captain; John J. Washer, captain; Daniel M. Stahl, captain; George Fortner, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Woodford M. Houchin, captain; Noah Morris, captain; Seldon R. Sanders, 1st lieutenant; Francis Houchin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Joseph S. Willis, captain; David Poole, captain; Boyd Mercer, 1st lieutenant; James R. Wise, 1st lieutenant; Thomas M. Bobbett, 1st lieutenant; William J. Long, 1st lieutenant; Preston P. Doughty, 2d lieutenant; Columbus Neel, 2d lieutenant; Fred G. Price, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Elijah C. Phelps, captain; Oliver P. Johnson, captain; William R. Willis, captain; William Smith, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Isaac R. Sketo, captain; Jesse K. Freeman, captain; Addison Turner, 1st lieutenant; Joseph D. Youtz, 1st lieutenant; Jesse S. Hill, 2d lieutenant; John C. Ham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Joseph Fox, captain; James R. Wise, captain; Jonathan Simmons, captain; Thomas Bobbett, 1st lieutenant; David Pool, 1st lieutenant; Robert T. Kennedy, 1st lieutenant; William H. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Boyd Mercer, 1st lieutenant; Preston P. Doughty, 2d lieutenant; William J. Long, 2d lieutenant; Columbus Neel, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Martin Jefferson Roark, captain; Columbus H. Martin, captain; Wash. C. Shannon, captain; James L. Roark, 1st lieutenant; Green B. Eades, 2d lieutenant.

The Eleventh Kentucky Infantry was organized in December, 1861, at Calhoon, Ky., under Col. P. B. Hawkins, and was mustered into the United States service by Maj. W. H. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—TWELFTH REGIMENT.

William A. Hoskins, colonel.

Laurence H. Rosseau, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from captain of Company C to lieutenant-colonel August 11, 1862; commissioned colonel April 21, 1864, but never mustered as such; transferred to 12th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Montgomery Howard, lieutenant-colonel.

William M. Worsham, major.

Joseph M. Owens, major; promoted from captain, Company B, July 15, 1862.

John M. Hail, adjutant.

James F. McKee, adjutant.

Ephraim F. Hay, adjutant.

G. K. Noland, regimental quartermaster.

Snowden P. Worsham, regimental quartermaster; transferred to the 12th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Edward Richardson, surgeon.

Wm. H. Mullins, surgeon; promoted from assistant surgeon June 6, 1862; transferred to 12th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Americus V. Winfrey, assistant surgeon.

W. Morgan Pollitt, assistant surgeon; promoted from hospital steward of the 16th Kentucky Infantry April 9, 1863.

Lewis Parker, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Cornelius C. Ham, captain; Ephraim F. Hays, 1st lieutenant; John W. Lewis, 1st lieutenant; Tho. Speed, 1st lieutenant; Saml. F. Tomlinson, 2d lieutenant; L. C. Waddle, 2d lieutenant; Nathaniel B. Dobbs, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Joseph M. Owens, captain; John Travis, captain; Wm. R. Smith, 1st lieutenant; John W. Vanderpool, 2d lieutenant; Jasper H. Johnson, 2d lieutenant; James T. W. Barnett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Laurence H. Rosseau, captain; Wm. J. Henson, captain; Wm. C. Crozier, captain; Israel C. Winfrey, 1st lieutenant; Robert H. Mullins, 1st lieutenant; Moses Higgenbottom, 2d lieutenant; Jno. R. McClure, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Martin Van Buren Duvall, captain; John H. Brown, captain; Reuben Hurt, 1st lieutenant; Joseph Hurt, 1st lieutenant; Lewis W. Duvall, 2d lieutenant; James Duvall, 2d lieutenant; Thomas Davison, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Andrew J. Veatch, captain; Geo. W. Hill, captain; Alzy C. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Granville C. Brassfield, 1st lieutenant; Milton A. Sivey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Wm. A. Collier, captain; William Williams, captain; Green C. Freeman, 1st lieutenant; Benj. Martin, 2d lieutenant; Wm. C. Crozier, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Wm. P. Payne, captain; Samuel M. Letcher, captain; Wm. W. Bradley, 1st lieutenant; Fountain J. Wolford, 1st lieutenant; Lewis Irvine, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Elisha Simpson, captain; James L. Burch, captain; Peter J. Hiatt, captain; Jno. L. Warden, captain; E. G. Jacobs, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Ballow, 2d lieutenant; Snowden P. Worsham, 2d lieutenant; Chas. Orman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John Johnson, captain; John R. McClure, captain; Nathan Jacobs, 1st lieutenant; Snowden P. Worsham, 1st lieutenant; Jno. B. Francis, 1st lieutenant; David Gray, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Joseph Ballow, captain; Thomas J. Mercer, 1st lieutenant; Watson Ballow, 1st lieutenant; Francis R. Winfrey, 1st lieutenant; Edward Dolen, 2d lieutenant.

The Twelfth Kentucky Infantry was organized in October, 1861, at Camp Clio, Pulaski County, Ky., under Col. W. A. Hoskins, and was mustered into the United States service on the 30th of January, 1862, by Capt. J. M. Kellogg, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—THIRTEENTH REGIMENT.

Edward H. Hobson, colonel.

William E. Hobson, colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Feb. 15, 1863, to colonel March 13, 1863.

John B. Carlisle, lieutenant-colonel.

Benjamin P. Estes, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel May 15, 1863.

John P. Duncan, major; promoted to major March 25, 1863.

Wm. W. Woodruff, adjutant.

John S. Butler, adjutant; promoted to captain and asst. adjutant-general Dec. 5, 1863.

George W. Flowers, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Aug. 15, 1864.

Wm. B. Craddock, regimental quartermaster.

Gann M. Smith, regimental quartermaster; promoted to regimental quartermaster March 12, 1862.

Charles D. Moore, surgeon.

Isaac G. Ingram, asst. surgeon.

Edward S. Cooper, asst. surgeon.

Flavu J. Taylor, asst. surgeon; promoted to asst. surgeon Jan. 10, 1863.

Isaac W. Emmerson, chaplain.
Wm. C. Johnston, chaplain.
John R. Barbee, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

David T. Towles, captain; George W. Thompson, captain; Newbury G. Forbis, 1st lieutenant; Berry M. Webb, 2d lieutenant; William L. Despain, 2d lieutenant; Abraham Chapline, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Thos. T. Alexander, captain; Harrison Q. Hughes, captain; Oliver B. Patterson, captain; Nathan G. Butler, 1st lieutenant; William J. Atkins, 1st lieutenant; James R. Hindman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Rodophil E. Jeter, captain; Benjamin V. Banks, captain; Christopher C. Christie, 1st lieutenant; Samuel H. Murrell, 2d lieutenant; Charles M. Sallee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Benjamin P. Estes, captain; William W. Woodruff, captain; William P. Oldham, 1st lieutenant; John R. Price, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. Hall, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Thomas O. Moore, captain; James W. Woodward, captain; Samuel Bottom, captain; Nathaniel F. Twyman, captain; Edward P. Allen, 1st lieutenant; Elisha B. Gardner, 1st lieutenant; Richard Henderson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John P. Duncan, captain; Champness D. Butler, captain; John H. Hazard, captain; Robert H. Turner, 1st lieutenant; Luther Morris, 1st lieutenant; Holland Jones, 2d lieutenant; Samuel A. Jones, 2d lieutenant; William T. Martin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Isaac R. H. Caldwell, captain; Samuel W. Moore, captain; Elija F. Tucker, captain; Isaac T. Hizer, 1st lieutenant; Samuel J. Cabbell, 1st lieutenant; Jacob D. Bradford, 1st lieutenant; Thomas A. Low, 2d lieutenant; Tucker W. Sullivan, 2d lieutenant; William H. Stearman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Edward W. Graham, captain; Wallace Victor, captain; James R. Hindman, captain; Elijah J. Graham, 1st lieutenant; George W. Flowers; 1st lieutenant; Jesse Despain, 1st lieutenant; James H. Hagan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Charles Stewart, captain; Giles A. Gallup, captain; William H. Stratton, captain; James M. Bradley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Peter S. Rush, captain; Patrick G. Fisher, captain; Albert N. Jett, captain; Wm. L. Lee, 1st lieutenant; Joel S. Veluzat, 1st lieutenant; Charles McCracken, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirteenth Kentucky Infantry was organized in December, 1861, at Camp Hobson, Kentucky, under Col. Edward H. Hobson, and was mustered in December 30, 1861, by Capt. S. M. Kellogg, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—FOURTEENTH REGIMENT.

Laban T. Moore, colonel.
John C. Cochran, colonel.
George W. Gallup, colonel; promoted to colonel Jan. 13, 1863.
Joseph R. Brown, lieutenant-colonel.
Orlando Brown, Jr., lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutanant-colonel Jan. 13, 1863.
Rhys M. Thomas, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Sept. 29, 1864.
Wm. B. Burke, major.
Drury J. Burchett, major; promoted to major Sept. 29, 1864.
John F. Babbitt, adjutant.
Edward J. Roberts, adjutant; promoted from sergeant-major March 1, 1862.
James D. Foster, regimental quartermaster; promoted to regimental quartermaster June 3, 1862.
S. J. Yates, surgeon.
Akin C. Miller, surgeon.
Strother J. Yates, surgeon.
Franklin M. Meacham, assistant surgeon.
Samuel D. Richards, assistant surgeon.
Benj. A. Stubbins, assistant surgeon.
Cyrus L. Mobley, assistant surgeon; promoted from hospital steward Dec. 15, 1862.
A. J. McMillan, chaplain.
Robert B. Herron, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

James C. Whitten, captain; Rhys M. Thomas, captain; William C. Brown, 1st lieutenant; Henry B. Brodess, 1st lieutenant; John M. Lowthere, 2d lieutenant; George W. Hopkins, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Walter O. Woods, captain; James H. Davidson, captain; George W. Green, captain; Chilton A. Osburn, 1st lieutenant; James W. Chafin, 1st lieutenant; Ralph W. Wolbrook, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

David A. Mims, captain; Oliver M. Frasher, captain; William Killgore, 1st lieutenant; David H. McGhee, 1st lieutenant; Geo.. B. Patton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Thomas McKinster, captain; Charles A. Wood, captain; John C. Henderson, 1st lieutenant; Henry A. Borders, 1st lieutenant; Russell T. Thompson, 1st lieutenant; Samuel T. Moore, 2d lieutenant; Bluford F. Hale, 2d lieutenant; John S. Thompson, 2d lieutenant; Henry H. Hill, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Archibald Means, captain; Dwight A. Leffingwell, captain; William Price, 1st lieutenant; James T. Womack, 1st lieutenant; Jacob M. Poage, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Solomon Davis, captain; David L. Worthington, captain; John Cochran, Jr., captain; Patrick O. Hawes, captain; Henry G. Gardner, captain; Dwight A. Leffingwell, 1st lieutenant; Thomas H. Stewart, 1st lieutenant; James H. Sperry, 1st lieutenant; John Murphy, 2d lieutenant; Henry H. Gallup, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John C. Collins, captain; Oliver D. Botner, captain; Daniel H. Brown, 1st lieutenant; George H. Roberts, 2d lieutenant; Lawrence P. Davenport, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Isaac Hollingsworth, captain; John F. Babbitt, captain; Wm. H. Bartram, Captain; Geo. R. B. Chapman, 1st lieutenant; Geo. F. Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Francis M. Burgess, 2d lieutenant; James H. Carey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John Powers, captain; Wiley C. Patrick, captain; John M. Atkinson, captain; Henry G. Gardner, 1st lieutenant; Mason H. Power, 1st lieuten ant; Richard M. Elam, 2d lieutenant; Andrew B. Fitch, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John M. Smith, captain; Drury J. Burchett, captain; Tho. D. Marcum, captain; Andrew J. Fox, 1st lieutenant; James W. Shannon, 2d lieutenant.

The Fourteenth Kentucky Infantry was organized in October, 1861, at Louisa, Ky., under Col. Laban T. Moore, and mustered into the United States service December 10, 1861, by Lt. C. B. Throckmorton, Fourth United States Artillery, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

Curran Pope, colonel; died Nov. 5, 1862, of wounds received at battle of Chaplin Hills Oct. 8, 1862.

James B. Forman, colonel; killed at battle of Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862.

Marion C. Taylor, colonel; promoted from captain, Company A, to colonel Jan. 1, 1863.

George P. Jouett, lieutenant-colonel; killed at battle of Chaplin Hills Oct. 8, 1862.

Joseph R. Snider, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from captain, Company B, Oct. 9, 1862.

Noah Cartwright, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel July 13, 1863.

William G. Halpin, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Jan. 26, 1864.

William P. Campbell, major; killed in battle of Chaplin Hills, Ky., Oct. 8, 1862.

Henry F. Kalfus major; promoted major Oct. 9, 1862.

James S. Allen, major; promoted to major March 1, 1864.

Ahimaaz H. Chambers, major; promoted to major April 11, 1864.

William P. McDowell, adjutant; major in adjutant-general's department.

David N. Sharp, adjutant; promoted to adjutant April 15, 1863.

John W. Clarke, regimental quartermaster; resigned Feb. 10, 1863.

Woodford Hall, regimental quartermaster; promoted to 1st lieutenant and quartermaster March 15,1863.

Luther P. Weatherby, surgeon; resigned July 16, 1862.

Richard F. Logan, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon July 16, 1862.

Edward H. Dunn, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon Nov. 28, 1862.

Eli D. Whitaker, asst. surgeon.

Ezra Woodruff, asst. surgeon.

Jeremiah J. Talbott, chaplain; resigned Nov. 18, 1863.

William C. Atmore, chaplain. resigned Aug. 7, 1862.

Samuel T. Poinier, chaplain; resigned April 5, 1863.

COMPANY A.

Marion C. Taylor, captain; John S. Churchill, captain; James A. T. McGrath, 1st lieutenant; Coleman S. Daniel, 1st lieutenant; Henry M. Lyle, 1st lieutenant: Joseph W. Lyle, 1st lieutenant; Francis A. Winlock, 2d lieutenant; Joseph L. Atherton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Joseph R. Snider, captain; Wm. H. Harrison, captain; Abraham Rothchild, captain; Benjamin H. Howser, 1st lieutenant; James W. Gray, 1st lieutenant; Richard Foster, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

William T. McClure, captain; James B. Forman, captain; Ahimaaz H. Chambers, captain; Henry Wilson, captain; L. Frank Todd, 1st lieutenant; Ezekiel S. Forman, 1st lieutenant; Joseph L. McClure, 2d lieutenant; Robert H. Roberts, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Henry F. Kalfus, captain; John B. McDowell, captain; John L. Foster, captain; John V. Thompson, 1st lieutenant; William H. Brooks, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Noah Cartwright, captain; Charles L. Easum, captain; John B. Wood, 1st lieutenant; Richard F. Shafar, 1st lieutenant; Harrison Hikes, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Aaron S. Bayne, captain; John C. Carroll, captain; William V. Wolfe, 1st lieutenant; Judson Bayne, 1st lieutenant; James P. Carroll, 1st lieutenant; William H. Booker, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John Spalding, captain; John B. Wood, captain; John D. Lenahan, 1st lieutenant, Frank D. Gerrety, 1st lieutenant; John Gormly, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Joshua P. Prather, captain; Richard H. M. Crupper, captain; Joseph L. Atherton, captain; William H. Thomas, 1st lieutenant; Jefferson Dickerson, 1st lieutenant; Edward Clemmons, 1st lieutenant; Edward S. Runnell, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

George T. Limberg, captain; James S. Allen, captain; E. Irvine McDowell, captain; Joseph Weyman, 1st lieutenant; John H. Crockett, 1st lieutenant; Frederick D. Walker, 2d lieutenant; Louis Constans, 2d lieutenant; William Giesman, 2d lieutenant; John M. McGrath, 2d lieutenant; Henry Koch, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William G. Halpin, captain; Daniel O'Leary, captain; George Wilson, 1st lieutenant; Nelson C. Boyd, 1st lieutenant; Peter Kaps, 1st lieutenant.

The Fifteenth Kentucky Infantry was organized in the fall of 1861, at Camp Pope, near New Haven, Ky., under Col. Curran Pope, and was mustered into the United States service on the 14th day of December, 1861, at Camp Pope, by Capt. C. C. Gilbert, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—SIXTEENTH REGIMENT.

Charles A. Marshall, colonel; resigned May 1, 1862.

James W. Craddock, colonel; died June 2, 1863.

James W. Gault, colonel; promoted to colonel June 3, 1863.

Joseph Doniphan, lieutenant-colonel; resigned March 13, 1862.

Joseph B. Harris, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major to lieutenant-colonel March 15, 1862.

Tho. E. Burns, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel June 3, 1863.

Jno. S. White, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from 1st lieutenant, Company A.

James P. Harbeson, major; promoted from captain, Company H, to major, July 20, 1862.

Ralph Robinson Maltby, adjutant; resigned July 29, 1862.

Joseph Dudley, adjutant; promoted to adjutant July 29, 1862.

Chas. A. Love, adjutant; promoted to adjutant July 14, 1864.

Samuel B. Patterson, quartermaster; dismissed March 25, 1863.

Wiley T. Poynter, quartermaster.

James A. Andrews, quartermaster; promoted from quartermaster sergeant.

Simon M. Cartmell, surgeon.

Frederick M. Taylor, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon to surgeon Dec. 4, 1864.

William C. R. Harrison, asst. surgeon; resigned Jan. 9, 1862.

Lewis J. Jones, asst. surgeon; transferred to 16th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

John S. Bayless, chaplain; transferred to 16th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

COMPANY A.

James W. Gault, captain; Jno. S. White, captain; Samuel D. Pumpelly, captain; Geo. M. DeGarmo, 1st lieutenant; Marcus A. D. L. Allen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Job F. Lewman, captain; Luther F. Warder, captain; Jno. W. Knight, captain; John S. Hammer, captain; Oliver B. Doyle, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Jacob Miller, captain; John W. Wallace, 1st lieutenant; Joseph C. Hiser, 1st lieutenant; James Lawrie, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Thomas N. Wiley, captain; Theodore C. Bratton, captain; Henry C. Weaver, 1st lieutenant; Richard C. Nugent, 2d lieutenant; James B. Shane, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Abraham Murphy, captain; Joseph B. Morris, 1st lieutenant; Tho. C. Dickey, 1st lieutenant; Nathaniel S. Wood, 2d lieutenant; Martin V. Markley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Embassy F. King, captain; Tho. E. Burns, captain; Nathaniel S. Wood, captain; Henry L. Gillis, 1st lieutenant; Wm. E. Ellis, 1st lieutenant; Leonidas A. King, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thomas A. Curran, captain; David L. Wells, captain; Jno. E. Wells, captain; Thos. H. Manning, 1st lieutenant; John T. Gault, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Galbraith, 2d lieutenant; Chas. A. Love, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

James P. Harbeson, captain; Henry D. Palmer, captain; Geo. H. Taylor, captain; Thomas E. Burns, 1st lieutenant; Tho. J. Wood, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Carr B. White, captain; Morris C. Hutchins, captain; Thaddeus P. Bullock, 1st lieutenant; Otho W. Estell, 1st lieutenant; Salathiel Brown, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

James A. Lee, Jr., captain; John M. Freeman, 1st lieutenant; Lewis M. Clarke, 2d lieutenant; John C. Sanders, 2d lieutenant.

The Sixteenth Kentucky Infantry was organized in December, 1861, at Camp Lee, near Maysville, Ky., under Col. Charles A. Marshall, and was mustered into the United States service on the 27th day of January, 1862, by Lieut. George H. Burns, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.

James M. Shackelford, colonel; resigned March 23, 1862, as colonel 25th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

John H. McHenry, Jr., colonel; organized 17th Regiment.

Alexander M. Stout, colonel; promoted colonel Jan. 27, 1863; was wounded severely at Shiloh.

Benj. H. Bristow, lieutenant-colonel; resigned April 15, 1862, as lieutenant-colonel 25th Kentucky Volunteers.

Robert Vaughan, lieutenant-colonel; wounded Sept. 20, 1863, at Chickamauga, Ga.

William B. Wall, major; resigned April 15, 1862, as major 25th Kentucky Volunteers.

Isaac Calhoon, major; promoted major Dec. 31, 1861.

David M. Claggett, major; was captain Company C, 25th Kentucky Volunteers, to April 13, 1862.

John P. Ritter, adjutant; resigned April 16, 1862, as adjutant 25th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

Edmund L. Starling, adjutant; resigned April 16, 1862, as adjutant 17th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

George W. Gist, adjutant; promoted captain Company D, April 23, 1863.

John M. Williams, adjutant; promoted adjutant June 15, 1863; died Aug. 9, 1863.

George Deering, adjutant; promoted adjutant Oct. 14, 1863.

Benjamin T. Perkins, regimental quartermaster; resigned April 16, 1862.

Richeson W. Allen, regimental quartermaster; resigned July 3, 1862.

John T. Jackson, regimental quartermaster; resigned March 11, 1863.

Richard C. Gill, regimental quartermaster.

Burkett Cloak, surgeon; resigned April 16, 1862, as surgeon 25th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

Warren J. Burgess, surgeon.

Addison P. Shackelford, asst. surgeon; resigned March 4, 1862, as asst. surgeon 25th Kentucky Volunteers.

Albert D. Cosby, asst. surgeon; resigned Dec. 13, 1862.

George W. Warmoth, asst. surgeon; resigned April 16, 1862, as asst. surgeon 25th Kentucky Volunteers.

Stuart Hubbard, asst. surgeon.

Jno. W. Compton, asst. surgeon; resigned March 24, 1863.

George W. Kinsoloing, chaplain; resigned April 3, 1862.

COMPANY A.

Preston Morton, captain; William Keith, captain; Samuel K. Cox, captain; Thomas R. Brown, 1st lieutenant; John D. Millman, 1st lieutenant; Isaac Ferry, 1st lieutenant; Wm. J. White, 1st lieutenant; James B. Harrison, 2d lieutenant; John W. Howard, 2d lieutenant; John H. Frost, 2d lieutenant; Wm. J. Littell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William H. Davison, captain; William W. Briggs, captain; Isaac Ferry, captain; Barney M. Harwood, 1st lieutenant; Avery Byers, 2d lieutenant; Alexander B. Sandefur, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Isaac Calhoon, captain; Robert L. Beckham, captain; David Duncan, captain; Finis H. Little, 1st lieutenant; William J. Lendrum, 1st lieutenant; Linus Fuller, 1st lieutenant; Marcus D. Bandy, 2d lieutenant; Barney M. Harwood, 2d lieutenant; Robert J. Allen, 2d lieutenant; Curtis A. Brasher, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James Hudson, captain; David M. Claggett, captain; Elisha B. Edwards, captain; Frank H.

Bristow, captain; George W. Gist, captain; Jesse W. Griffin, 1st lieutenant; Richard F. Taylor, 1st lieutenant; Edward S. Campbell, 1st lieutenant; Robert M. Davis, 1st lieutenant; Aaron S. Hicks, 1st lieutenant; Walter Evans, 2d lieutenant; Seymore H. Perkins, 2d lieutenant; Jno. D. Millman, 2d lieutenant; Isaac Ferry, 2d lieutenant; James M. Rogers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Wesley Garey, captain; Thomas W. Campbell, captain; James W. Anthony, captain; Wm. J. Lendrum, captain; John H. Frost, captain; Perry Campbell, 1st lieutenant; Albert R. Shackelford, 1st lieutenant; George L. Sullivan, 1st lieutenant; Wm. S. Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Samuel K. Cox, 1st lieutenant; Boanerges V. Tyler, 1st lieutenant; Richard L. Peyton, 2d lieutenant; Benjamin T. Hobbs, 2d lieutenant; James M. Wilson, 2d lieutenant; Charles Bratcher, 2d lieutenant; Campbell H. Johnson, 2d lieutenant; Michael Mulvey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Henry S. Barnett, captain; Ion Nall, captain; William T. King, 1st lieutenant; Jefferson H. Jennings, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Alverson, 1st lieutenant; John G. Ferguson, 2d lieutenant; Oscar D. Kress, 2d lieutenant; Thomas D. Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Benjamin T. Underwood, captain; Hugh C. Cooper, captain; Thomas J. Kirby, captain; John V. Boyd, captain; Samuel T. Fruit, captain; William Ashby, 1st lieutenant; Rich. W. Williams, 1st lieutenant; John H. Frost, 1st lieutenant; Alexander B. Sandefur, 1st lieutenant; Thomas B. Boyd, 2d lieutenant; Isaac Condett, 2d lieutenant; Albert E. Brown, 2d lieutenant; David Cartright, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. Meglemery, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George A. Little, captain; Robt. M. Davis, captain; Richard F. Taylor, 1st lieutenant; William S. Dillahay, 1st lieutenant; Henry M. West, 1st lieutenant; Garton C. Pruett, 2d lieutenant; H. Clay Marlow, 2d lieutenant; George C. Merritt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Robert Vaughan, captain; Thomas R. Brown, captain; Silas Heston, 1st lieutenant; H. Clay Marlow, 1st lieutenant; Jefferson H. Jennings, 2d lieutenant; Boanerges V. Tyler, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

James H. Holloway, captain; Putnam B. Trible, captain; Robert C. Sturgis, captain; George C. Merritt, captain; Newton M. Miller, 1st lieutenant; Pius Clarke, 1st lieutenant; Samuel Mitchell, 1st lieutenant; Samuel W. Pruett, 1st lieutenant; John J. Holloway, 2d lieutenant; William A. Fitts, 2d lieutenant; Aaron S. Hicks, 2d lieutenant; Thomas J. Alverson, 2d lieutenant; Noah C. Dean, 2d lieutenant.

The Seventeenth Kentucky Infantry was organized in December, 1861, at Calhoon, Ky., under Col. John H. McHenry, Jr., and was mustered into the United States service on the 4th day of January, 1862, at Calhoon, Ky., by Capt. John E. Edwards, Third United States Artillery, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT.

William A. Warner, colonel; wounded at Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30, 1862.

John J. Landrum, lieutenant-colonel; wounded at Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30, 1862.

H. K. Milward, lieutenant-colonel; commissioned colonel Dec. 19, 1863, but never mustered.

Fred'k G. Bracht, major; resigned Jan. 14, 1863.

Abram G. Wileman, major; killed by guerrillas Oct. 5, 1863, in Pendleton County, Ky.

John W. Robbins, major; commissioned lieutenant-colonel Dec. 19, 1863, but never mustered.

John J. Hall, major; promoted from 2d lieutenant, Company H, to 1st lieutenant, August 2, 1862; to captain August 30, 1862; to major November 10, 1864; transferred to 18th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Alvin B. Clark, adjutant; promoted adjutant Jan. 15, 1863.

John W. Hamilton, adjutant; transferred to 18th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

James T. Clark, regimental quartermaster; promoted to captain and assistant quartermaster Dec. 15, 1863.

John Moss, regimental quartermaster; transferred to field and staff as regimental quartermaster Dec. 25, 1863.

Joseph Fithian, surgeon; resigned March 30, 1865.

J. C. Elliott, ass't surgeon; surgeon of the 100th United States Colored Infantry.

Asa Drury, chaplain; resigned Oct. 4, 1863.

L. D. Parker, chaplain; transferred to 18th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

COMPANY A.

Mathew Mullins, captain; John W. Robbins, captain; J. M. Wilson, captain; James T. Applegate, 1st lieutenant; H. F. Monroe, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Wm. C. Johnson, captain; Chas. S. Williams, captain; Jas. T. Chrisman, 1st lieutenant; Wm. McPherson, 1st lieutenant; Saml. J. Kuhn, 1st lieutenant; John W. Puthuff, 2d lieutenant; Junius B. Bracht, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Wm. R. Fisk, captain; Wm. C. Reeder, captain; Andrew B. Clark, 1st lieutenant; Hiram M. Bryson, 1st lieutenant; James D. Oldham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Abram G. Wileman, captain; J. L. Dougherty, captain; William McPherson, captain; Henry F. Monroe, captain; Saml. S. Patterson, 1st lieutenant; James A. Simpson, 1st lieutenant; L. H. Sanders, 1st lieutenant; James H. Johns, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

David E. Pugsley, captain; James C. Bacon, captain; Henry P. Ritchey, captain; Weeden C. Sleet, 1st lieutenant; Silas Howe, 1st lieutenant; Elijah Regan, 1st lieutenant; John C. Richards, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Wm. H. Littlejohn, captain; Jas. F. Miller, captain; John M. Poston, captain; Augustus G. Hatry, 1st lieutenant; John R. Miller, 1st lieutenant; John W. Washburn, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Hiram W. Egelston, captain; Benj. T. Riggs, captain; David Boys, 1st lieutenant; Kemp G. Carter, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Wm. M. Oden, captain; Orrin M. Lewis, captain; John J. Hall, captain; Jos. C. Pritchard, captain; John W. Grose, 1st lieutenant; Alfred S. Lewis, 1st lieutenant; James E. Bell, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Sam'l G. Rogers, captain; John W. Grose, captain; Joseph M. Shaw, captain; James Dunlap, 1st lieutenant; Wm. M. Dayton, 1st lieutenant; David H. Goyen, 1st lieutenant; Thos. Clements, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Wm. W. Culbertson, captain; John B. Heltemus, captain; John Moss, 1st lieutenant; A. B. Clark, 1st lieutenant; Junius B. Bracht, 1st lieutenant; Wm. A. Ridenour, 2d lieutenant.

The Eighteenth Kentucky Infantry was recruited during the winter of 1861-62, and was mustered into the United States service on the 8th day of February, 1862. During its organization, and until August 20, 1862, the command was on duty guarding the Covington & Lexington R. R., with its headquarters at Falmouth, Ky., until April 16, 1862, and then at Lexington, Ky. On the 16th day of June, 1862, a detachment of the regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. Landram, participated in the defense of Cynthiana, Ky., against Gen. John H. Morgan, where it sustained a loss of two killed.

INFANTRY—NINETEENTH REGIMENT.

William J. Landrum, colonel.

John Cowan, lieutenant-colonel.

John R. Duncan, major; resigned Feb. 14, 1863.

Morgan V. Evans, major; killed in battle of Vicksburg, Miss., May 22, 1863.

Josiah J. Mann, major; promoted from captain, Co. F, to major May 23, 1863.

Richard L. Cochran, adjutant; resigned Feb. 14, 1863.

George C. Rue, adjutant; promoted to adjutant April 2, 1863.

George H. McKinney, regimental quartermaster.

James B. Sparks, surgeon; resigned Jan. 21, 1863.

William K. Sadler, surgeon; killed Dec. 2, 1864, at Baton Rouge, La.

Pleasant W. Logan, asst. surgeon; resigned July 15, 1862.

James F. Peyton, asst. surgeon; promoted to assistant surgeon Nov. 20, 1862.

Anthony H. Semlire, asst. surgeon; resigned June 30, 1864.

William N. Forbes, asst. surgeon; resigned July 19, 1864.

James Matthews, chaplain; resigned Aug. 25, 1864.

COMPANY A.

William B. Kelly, captain; William H. Cundiff, captain; Ansel L. Wood, 1st lieutenant; Reid Leslie McMurtry, 1st lieutenant; Vincent L. Lester, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Aaron Blakeman, captain; John J. Goodnight, captain; Henry L. Whitehouse, captain; Abraham Whitenack, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

James O. Norris, captain; William H. Bolar, captain; John Landrum, 1st lieutenant; Elihu H. Moles, 2d lieutenant; George W. Graham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Alexander E. Adams, captain; Henry C. Hogg, captain; Edwin F. Hogg, 1st lieutenant; Elijah C. Baker, 1st lieutenant; John D. Mitchell, 2d lieutenant; Zachariah Morgan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Hanibal Downey, captain; John Barnett, captain; Willis O. Egerton, 1st lieutenant; John Walls, 1st lieutenant; Charles H. Talbot, 1st lieutenant; Luther Hale, 2d lieutenant; Squire Pinkston, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Josiah J. Mann, captain; Harbert K. Forbis, captain; George Rose, 1st lieutenant; William D. James, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Merideth G. Richardson, captain; Joshua W. Hansford, captain; Lincoln A. Hamblin, captain; Thomas A. Warren, 1st lieutenant; Thomas H. Cundiff, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Morgan V. Evans, captain; Alexander Logan, captain; Thomas A. Elkin, 1st lieutenant; Stephen W. Hedger, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Henry Hicks, captain; William T. Cummins, captain; William G. Bowen, 1st lieutenant; George H. Vandevere, 1st lieutenant; Harrison S. Poulter, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William F. McKinny, captain; Isaac Singleton, 1st lieutenant; James F. Peyton, 1st lieutenant; Eberle Wilson, 1st lieutenant; George C. Rue, 2d lieutenant; James J. McKinney, 2d lieutenant.

The Nineteenth Kentucky Infantry was recruited and organized at Harrodsburg, Ky., in the fall of 1861 by Col. William J. Landrum and Lieut.-Col. John Cowan, and was mustered into the United States service on the 2d day of January, 1862, by Capt. H. C. Bankhead, United States mustering officer. From Harrodsburg the regiment marched to Somerset, Ky., in January, 1862, and was engaged for some time in destroying the intrenchments of Gen. Zollicoffer, and collecting property captured at the battle of Mill Spring.

INFANTRY—TWENTIETH REGIMENT.

Sanders D. Bruce, colonel; resigned June 24, 1864.

Charles S. Hanson, lieutenant-colonel; transferred to 37th Kentucky Mounted Infantry as colonel Dec. 31, 1863.

Thomas B. Waller, lieutenant-colonel; commissioned colonel Oct. 5, 1864, but never mustered as such.

Benjamin F. Buckner, major; resigned April 17, 1863.

Frank E. Wolcott, major; commissioned lieutenant-colonel October 14, 1864, but never mustered as such.

John Brennan, adjutant; transferred to 3d Kentucky Infantry as Captain Company F, Sept. 29, 1862.

James A. McCampbell, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Sept. 29, 1862.

James W. Swing, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Oct. 13, 1864.

Alonzo Jackson, quartermaster; died Jan. 15, 1863, at Claysville, Ky.

Abner Crane, quartermaster; promoted to quartermaster Oct. 10, 1863.

John C. Welch, surgeon.

W. H. Curran, assistant surgeon; resigned Aug. 2, 1862.

Prior N. Norton, assistant surgeon; promoted from hospital steward to assistant surgeon Aug. 2, 1862.

Daniel W. Axline, chaplain; resigned Nov. 6, 1862.

COMPANY A.

James W. Craddock, captain; Henry S. Parrish, captain; Daniel T. Buckner, captain; Benjamin M. Chiles, 1st lieutenant; William A. Attersall, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Abram G. Smith, captain; Adam W. Trebein, captain; Lawson Gray, 1st lieutenant; John Glenn, 1st lieutenant; Leonidas Denny, 1st lieutenant; Joseph N. Reid, 1st lieutenant; James R. B. Cole, 1st lieutenant; William N. Rice, 2d lieutenant; Elijah Yates, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Clinton J. True, captain; Francis E. Wolcott, captain; Lucius A. Bachus, captain; Benjamin R. Waller, 1st lieutenant; Cassander Hall, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Theodore B. Rushing, captain; James C. Morris, captain; Wm. C. Musselman, captain; Samuel Corum, 1st lieutenant; Hugh M. Hiatt, 1st lieutenant; John W. Hale, 1st lieutenant; James R. B. Cole, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Robert F. Haynes, captain; Franklin Gipson, captain; Henry C. Brennan, captain; Walter M. Asher, 1st lieutenant; James C. Guess, 1st lieutenant; Saunders A. Crowell, 2d lieutenant; Robert B. McNary, 2d lieutenant; James D. Young, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

William B. Dunn, captain; William C. Musselman, 1st lieutenant; John C. Northcutt, 1st lieutenant; James C. Morris, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thomas B. Waller, captain: John P. Gapen, captain; Thomas J. Gregory, 1st lieutenant; Francis C. Sternberg, 1st lieutenant; Benjamin R. Waller, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Thomas M. Duvall, captain; John Glenn, captain; John R. Flemming, 1st lieutenant; Franklin S. Loyd, 1st lieutenant; Orlean B. Herring, 2d lieutenant; Wickliffe Cooper, 2d lieutenant; Bartholomew J. Scott, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Cornelius McLeod, captain; Henry Kimbrough, 1st lieutenant; Henry C. Oots, 1st lieutenant; Winder Kinney, 1st lieutenant; Robert Becket, 2d lieutenant; Joseph M. Wilson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Andrew McCampbell, captain; Charles R. West, captain; George W. Baker, 1st lieutenant; Benj. F. Thornbrough, 1st lieutenant; Allen A. Burton, 1st lieutenant; S. Thompson Corn, 2d lieutenant; Jas. A. McCampbell, 2d lieutenant; Samuel M. Anderson, 2d lieutenant.

The Twentieth Kentucky Infantry was organized in the fall and winter of 1861, by Col. Sanders D. Bruce, and was mustered into the United States service on the 6th day of January, 1862, at Smithland, Ky., by Lieut.-Col. Chetlain, United States mustering officer. Soon after organization, it was ordered to Louisville, Ky., and from there to Bardstown, Ky., where it was assigned to a brigade commanded by Col. Bruce and marched to Nashville, Tenn.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

Ethelbert L. Dudley, colonel; died February 20, 1862.

Saml. W. Price, colonel; transferred to 21st Kentucky Veteran Infantry; wounded at Kenesaw Mountain.

Basil A. Wheat, lieutenant-colonel; resigned October 26, 1862.

James C. Evans, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major to lieutenant-colonel October 27, 1862.

Wm. W. Dowden, major; wounded at Stone River, January 1, 1863; resigned April 19, 1863.

Jesse E. Hoskins, major; promoted from captain, Company G, to major April 20, 1863.

M. Scott Dudley, adjutant; resigned May 16, 1863.

Chas. F. Spillman, adjutant; promoted from private of Company E to adjutant June 14, 1863.

John T. Gunn, adjutant; promoted from 1st lieutenant Company E to adjutant Feb. 28, 1864.

Albert H. Bohannon, adjutant; promoted adjutant Nov. 21, 1864; transferred to 21st Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Samuel P. Taylor, regimental quartermaster; resigned Nov. 14, 1862.

Thomas Iles, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster March 1, 1863.

Claiborne J. Walton, surgeon.

Jas. O. Wheat, asst. surgeon; resigned Feb. 12, 1862.

T. C. Fitzhugh, asst. surgeon; resigned Jan. 8, 1865.

Wm. L. Morrison, chaplain; resigned March 15, 1862.

Thos. M. Gunn, chaplain, never mustered.

M. H. B. Burkett, chaplain; acted as such from Sept. 4, 1863, until July 30, 1864.

COMPANY A.

Wm. W. Dowden, captain; Wm. R. Milward, captain; Edward Knoble, 1st lieutenant; John D. Carpenter, 2d lieutenant; Wm. D. Vanpelt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James P. Sandidge, captain; Jonathan Williams, 1st lieutenant; John H. Hayes, 1st lieutenant; James L. Sublett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Matt. M. Clay, captain; Sam'l R. Sharrard, captain; Edmund B. Davidson, captain; John B. Buckner, 1st lieutenant; Lucien W. Dunnington, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

David Russell, captain; Henry F. Temple, captain; George T. Stagg, 1st lieutenant; Nathaniel C. Brown, 1st lieutenant; Elijah Logan, 2d lieutenant; Wm. F. Ware, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Williamson Irvin, captain; James Dudley, captain; Dudley M. Craig, captain; William Bright, captain; John T. Gunn, 1st lieutenant; Charles F. Spillman, 1st lieutenant; Job S. Bailey, 1st lieutenant; Jackson W. Reynolds, 2d lieutenant; Hugh Lonney, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Zachariah S. Taylor, captain; John G. Evans, captain; Jasper F. Morton, captain; Robert L. Bullock, 1st lieutenant; William Spencer, 1st lieutenant; Thos. P. Dudley, Jr., 2d lieutenant; John H. Bevell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Jesse E. Hoskins, captain; John D. Nash, captain; Sebastian Stone, 1st lieutenant; Hugh A. Hedger, 1st lieutenant; George Y. O'Neal, 1st lieutenant; Jeremiah R. Dean, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Wm. C. Edwards, captain; Jno. R. Jameson, captain; George W. Twyman, captain; William Prewitt, 1st lieutenant; Michael B. Gratz, 1st lieutenant; William Ritter, 1st lieutenant; Benj. Fansler, 1st lieutenant; Holman F. Hardy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Newton M. Hutchens, captain; George T. Stagg, captain; Langston P. Bryant, 1st lieutenant; Thos. M. Gunn, 1st lieutenant; Wm. A. Bryant, 2d lieutenant; George S. Nunn, 2d lieutenant; Newton Scearce, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Memory J. Thompson, captain; Thomas A. Conyer, 1st lieutenant; Daniel R. Gray, 1st lieutenant;

Joseph A. Fagg, 2d lieutenant; Herbert G. W. Bradley, 2d lieutenant.

The Twenty-first Kentucky Infantry was formed by the consolidation of the troops recruited by E. L. Dudley and B. A. Wheat, and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Ward, Ky., Dec. 30, 1861.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

Daniel W. Lindsey, colonel; resigned Oct. 14, 1863.

George W. Monroe, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel to colonel Oct. 15, 1863.

William J. Worthington, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Oct. 15, 1863.

Wesley Cook, major; resigned Oct. 20, 1862.

John Hughes, major; promoted to major Oct. 15, 1863.

Orlando Brown, Jr., adjutant; promoted to major 14th Ky. Vol. Inf. April 15, 1862.

Joseph W. Roberts, adjutant; promoted adjutant April 15, 1862.

Francis C. Robb, adjutant; promoted to adjutant June 21, 1863.

E. F. Dulin, quartermaster; resigned Jan. 10, 1862.

John Paul Jones, quartermaster; resigned June 5, 1862.

James F. Tureman, quartermaster; resigned March 24, 1863.

Shadrack L. Mitchell, quartermaster; promoted to quartermaster March 25, 1863.

James W. Barbee, quartermaster; promoted to quartermaster Dec. 14, 1863.

Benj. F. Stevenson, surgeon; resigned Feb. 16, 1864.

Henry Manfred, surgeon; promoted to surgeon Feb. 16, 1864.

William R Davidson, assistant surgeon; transferred to 7th Ky. Vet. Vol. Inf.

Samuel S. Sumner, chaplain; resigned March 15, 1864.

COMPANY A.

John Hughes, captain; Arthur J. Harrington, 1st lieutenant; James W. Barbee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William J. Worthington, captain; John L. Godman, captain; Henry E. Evans, 1st lieutenant; Daniel W. Steele, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John F. Lacy, captain; Francis C. Robb, 1st lieutenant; Robert Montgomery, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James W. Scott, captain; James G. Milligan, captain; James W. Barbee, 1st lieutenant; John A. Gilbert, 2d lieutenant; James A. Watson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Lewis P. Ellis, captain; Alexander Bruce, captain; David C. Thoroman, 1st lieutenant; Elijah Scott, 2d lieutenant; William B. Hegan, 2d lieutenant; Jabez Truett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Daniel Garrard, Jr., captain; Williamson W. Bacon, captain; James Morton, 1st lieutenant; William H. Sneed, 2d lieutenant; Richard J. Frayne, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John Paul Jones, captain; William B. Hegan, captain; Evan D. Thomas, captain; Jacob Swigert, Jr., captain; Charles L. Nevius, 1st lieutenant; Harry B. Litteral, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Edwin Cook, captain; John T. Gathright, captain; Stephen Nethercutt, captain; Thomas P. Harper, 1st lieutenant; John Everman, Sr., 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Jordon Nethercutt, captain; Frank A. Estep, captain; William K. Gray, captain; Jeremiah Noland, 1st lieutenant; Charles G. Shanks, 1st lieutenant; William Nethercutt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Louis Schweizer, captain; Charles Gutig, captain; Gustav Wehrle, 1st lieutenant.

The Twenty-second Kentucky Infantry was organized at Camp Swigert, Greenup County, Ky., on the 12th day of December, 1861, under D. W. Lindsey, as colonel; George W. Monroe, lieutenant-colonel; and Wesley Cook, major, by which officers the regiment was principally recruited.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-THIRD REGIMENT.

Marcellus Mundy, colonel; resigned Dec. 31, 1863.

John P. Jackson, lieutenant-colonel; resigned Nov. 24, 1862.

James C. Foy, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel April 18, 1863.

Geo. W. Northup, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel July 27, 1864.

Thomas H. Hamrick, major; resigned Feb. 26, 1863.

William Boden, major; promoted to major Aug. 8, 1864.

Wm. H. Mundy, adjutant; resigned Jan. 17, 1864.

Jephson P. Puke, adjutant; promoted adjutant from 1st lieutenant, Company K.

Wm. N. Air, regimental quartermaster; dismissed the service June 20, 1862.

Leroy R. Hawthorn, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster June 20, 1862.

Alvin Tarvin, regimental quartermaster; promoted to regimental quartermaster; July 28, 1864.

Arnold Strothotte, surgeon; resigned Nov. 28, 1862.

Alonzo M. Morrison, surgeon; promoted to surgeon Nov. 28, 1862.

Benj. F. Stevenson, asst. surgeon; promoted surgeon of 22d Kentucky Infantry Jan. 10, 1862.

Wm. L. Hashbrook, asst. surgeon; promoted to asst. surgeon Nov. 28, 1862.

Wm. H. Black, chaplain; transferred to 23d Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

COMPANY A.

James C. Foy, captain; William A. Seiter, captain; Asaph A. Quigley, captain; Joseph Greene, 1st lieutenant; Joseph C. Hoffman, 1st lieutenant; John B. Korman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

George W. Northup, captain; Thomas W. Hardiman, captain; Levi S. Peters, captain; Claudius Tifft, 1st lieutenant; Henry G. Shiner, 1st lieutenant; William Hudson, 2d lieutenant; Robert Townsend, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

William G. Holden, captain; William Hudson, captain; Ryland Willett, 1st lieutenant; John Squiers, 1st lieutenant; Eldridge G. Holden, 2d lieutenant. Asaph A. Quigley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Henry Speier, captain; William Boden, captain; Charles Theis, 1st lieutenant; Reuben Hamer, 1st lieutenant; Thos. M. Barton, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. Spencer, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

William P. Egan, captain; John Barnes, captain; William A. Morgan, 1st lieutenant; Thomas S. Lukens, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Charles R. Cotton, captain; Benjamin A. Thompson, captain; Frank Jukes, captain; Alvin O. Pattee, 1st lieutenant; Patrick S. Reeves, 1st lieutenant; Jephson P. Duke, 2d lieutenant: Jacob S. Fox, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thomas J. Williams, captain; Thomas W. Hardiman, 1st lieutenant; Martin T. Hennessy, 1st lieutenant; James Barker, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Lewis Voight, captain; Claudius Tifft, captain; William A. Seiter, 1st lieutenant; Frank A. Black, 1st lieutenant; Henry G. Shiner, 2d lieutenant; Martin T. Hennessy, 2d lieutenant; William H. Whitney, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Augustus C. Paul, captain; Frank A. Black, captain; Henry G. Shiner, captain; Douglas Pritchard, 1st lieutenant; Green Clay Goodloe, 1st lieutenant; Alonzo W. Tarvin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Joseph W. Cottingham, captain; Kavanaugh O. Bullock, captain; Ephraim P. Mavity, captain; Jephson P. Duke, 1st lieutenant; William H. Tyree, 2d lieutenant; Wm. A. Morgan, 2d lieutenant; John Atkinson, 2d lieutenant.

The Twenty-third Kentucky Infantry was organized in December, 1861, at Camp King, Ky., by Col. Marcellus Mundy, and was mustered into the United States service by Maj. Jno. R. Edie, 15th United States Infantry.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

Lewis B. Grigsby, colonel; resigned July 16, 1863.

John S. Hurt, colonel; promoted colonel July 17, 1863.

Lafayette North, lieutenant colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel October 24, 1863.

William H. Smith, major; resigned March 4, 1863.

James H. Turner, adjutant; resigned Aug. 30, 1862.

John A. Joyce, adjutant; discharged on account of wounds received in action June 27, 1864.

Cornelius E. Mastin, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Nov. 4, 1864.

David S. Trumbo, quartermaster.

James Sympson, surgeon.

William L. White, asst. surgeon; resigned March 27, 1862.

Marcus E. Poynter, asst. surgeon; resigned Jan. 1, 1863.

W. H. T. Moss, asst. surgeon.

Joseph Gardner, asst. surgeon; wounded in action Aug. 5, 1864.

COMPANY A.

Hector H. Scoville, captain; Wiley Jones, 1st lieutenant; William B. Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Daniel O. Morin, 2d lieutenant; George W. Freeman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James Carey, captain; Washington J. McIntire, 1st lieutenant; John Henry, 2d lieutenant; Daniel F. Winchester, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Green V. Hall, captain; Joseph L. Judy, 1st lieutenant; John Kinney, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Bush, 1st lieutenant; Stephen G. Lewis, 1st lieutenant; James McChristy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

George R. Barber, captain; Mathias T. S. Lee, 1st lieutenant; Lander Barber, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Lafayette North, captain; John M. Gill, 1st lieutenant; Wilkins Warren, 2d lieutenant; Jesse P. Nelson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

James A. Hawkins, captain; James Blue, captain; Thomas J. Bush, captain; John N. McIntire, captain; William H. Norris, 1st lieutenant; Thomas M. Likes, 1st lieutenant; Cornelius E. Martin, 1st lieutenant; Dillion White, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Peter T. Hedges, captain; John J. Sewell, 1st lieutenant; John C. Padgett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Edmund Jones, captain; Robert G. Potter, captain; Reuben Langford, captain; James H. Wilson, 1st lieutenant; Richard L. Ewell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Roy D. Davidson, captain; Fountain Goodpaster, captain; William G. Howard, 1st lieutenant; John A. Joyce, 1st lieutenant; Daniel Wilson, 2d lieutenant; Julius C. Miller, 2d lieutenant; Benjamin P. DeSilve, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John J. Evans, captain; James M. Anderson, captain; James Caughlin, 1st lieutenant; T. D. Moss, 2d lieutenant; David G. Howell, 2d lieutenant.

The Twenty-fourth Kentucky Infantry was organized in the fall and winter of 1861 under Col. Lewis B. Grigsby, and was mustered into the United States service on the 31st of December, 1861, at Lexington, Ky., by Capt. Bankhead, United States mustering officer.

The Twenty-fifth Kentucky Infantry was consolidated with the Seventeenth Kentucky Infantry April 13, 1862.

INFANTRTY—TWENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT.

Stephen G. Burbridge, colonel; promoted brigadier-general June 12, 1862.

Cicero Maxwell, colonel; promoted to colonel June 12, 1862.

Thos. B. Fairleigh, colonel; promoted to colonel Jan. 3, 1865.

James F. Lauck, lieutenant-colonel; was lieutenant-colonel of 33d Kentucky Infantry.

John L. Davidson, major; killed in action at Shiloh, Tenn., April 10, 1862.

Jos. L. Frost, major; promoted from adjutant to major April 10, 1862.

Ignatius Mattingly, major; promoted from captain Company C to major June 12, 1862.

Cyrus J. Wilson, major; resigned May 14, 1864.

Francis M. Page, major; promoted from captain of Company E to Major Nov. 15, 1864.

A. J. Wells, adjutant; promoted to adjutant April 10, 1862.

James A. Dawson, adjutant; was adjutant of 33d Kentucky Infantry.

Richard Vance, adjutant; promoted adjutant Jan. 1, 1863.

John H. Morton, regimental quartermaster; discharged April 1, 1864, by reason of consolidation of 33d with 26th Kentucky Infantry.

Robert W. Compton, regimental quartermaster; was regimental quartermaster of 33d Kentucky Infantry.

Densil P. Walling, regimental quartermaster; was adjutant of 33d Kentucky Infantry from May 4, 1863, to consolidation.

Jonathan Baily, surgeon; resigned April 10, 1862.

James M. Baily, surgeon; promoted from ass't surgeon to surgeon April 10, 1862.

L. Bennett, ass't surgeon; promoted to surgeon of 8th Kentucky Cavalry June 10, 1863.

James Walshe, ass't surgeon; discharged April 1, 1864, by reason of consolidation.

E. O. Brown, ass't surgeon; honorably discharged May 10, 1865, per order of War Department.

W. H. Jett, ass't surgeon; was ass't surgeon of 33d Kentucky Infantry prior to consolidation.

Wm. M. Grubbs, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

John W. Belt, captain; Rowland E. Hackett, captain; Wm. W. Ranney, 1st lieutenant; Stephen Woodward, 1st lieutenant; Tho. B. Bayne, 1st lieutenant; Richard Shockley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Gabriel Netter, captain; D. H. Butler, captain; Robert Earnest, captain; Woodford M. Taylor, captain; Abram B. Stanley, captain; John T. Higdon, 1st lieutenant; James M. Holland, 1st lieutenant; Francis M. Gillstrap, 1st lieutenant; Jeremiah O'Brien, 2d lieutenant; Richard Vance, 2d lieutenant; John C. West, 2d lieutenant; Seth Rupard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Ignatius Mattingly, captain; Henry Smallhouse, captain; James W. Overstreet, captain; Joseph Fisher, 1st lieutenant; John A. Hendrix, 2d lieutenant; Wm. T. Hansford, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Albert N. Keigwin, captain; Fred Guy, captain; James McConnell, 1st lieutenant; Joseph B. Harris, 1st lieutenant; Andrew J. Wells, 2d lieutenant; Thos. J. Mershon, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Francis M. Page, captain; Wm. C. Burgher, 1st lieutenant; Jeremiah Redfearn, 1st lieutenant; Henry C. Morgan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Michael T. Hall, captain; Wm. M. Claypool, 1st lieutenant; David W. Thomas, 1st lieutenant; Samuel H. Haden, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thos. B. Fairleigh, captain; James H. Ashcraft, captain; Samuel D. Brown, 1st lieutenant; George T. Elder, 2d lieutenant; Reuben C. Powell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Lafayette S. Beck, captain; Thomas G. Laird, 1st lieutenant; Thomas M. Sherrall, 2d lieutenant; Pleasant P. Collier, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Wm. Knight, Jr., captain; James M. Adams, captain; John M. Wilkins, 1st lieutenant; Densil P. Walling, 2d lieutenant; Wm. K. Walters, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Cyrus J. Wilson, captain; Wm. F. Gorin, captain; Jacob M. Sallee, 1st lieutenant; William L. Macey, 2d lieutenant.

The Twenty-sixth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Calhoon, Ky., under Col. S. G. Burbridge, n the fall of 1861, and mustered into the United States service March, 1862, at Nashville, Tenn., by H. C. Bankhead, captain 5th United States Infantry, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.

Charles D. Pennebaker, colonel; resigned April 10, 1864.

John H. Ward, lieutenant-colonel; commissioned colonel April 14, 1864, but never mustered as such.

James Carlile, major; died Feb. 25, 1862.

Samuel J. Coyne, major; promoted major April 15, 1862.

Alexander Magruder, major; promoted from adjutant to major Feb. 6, 1863.

Daniel B. Waggener, adjutant; promoted to adjutant Jan. 21, 1862; resigned May 1, 1862.

James B. Speed, adjutant.

Thomas R. McBeath, quartermaster; promoted to regimental quartermaster Jan. 21, 1862.

Robert L. Heston, surgeon.

Thomas Sanders, asst. surgeon; resigned March 29, 1863.

Robert Dinwiddie, asst. surgeon.

Robert G. Gardner, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Anderson Gray, captain; William W. Brady, captain; Thomas R. McBeath, 1st lieutenant; Benj. W. Cleaver, 1st lieutenant; Robert V. Sands, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B

Lucian K. Cox, captain; Thomas S. Hiner, captain; Alanson M. Pulliam, captain; Aaron Norton, 1st lieutenant; Obediah Bassham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Andrew J. Bailey, captain; John W. McWharter, 1st lieutenant; James W. Defevers, 1st lieutenant; Edmund R. Goode, 2d lieutenant; James A. Figgett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Samuel J. Coyne, captain; George Hammers, captain; Peterson Roff, 1st lieutenant; John W. S. Smith, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

John R. Robinson, captain; John R. Fisher, captain; Thomas T. Fisher, captain; Benjamin A. Rice, 1st lieutenant; Robert D. Willian, 1st lieutenant; Daniel B. Waggener, 2d lieutenant; Alexander Shiveley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Henry B. Grant, captain; John H. Adams, 1st lieutenant; Riley Wilson, 1st lieutenant; Daniel B. Goode, 1st lieutenant; John W. Taylor, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Harvey W. Sutton, captain; James Giffin, captain; William Wilson, 1st lieutenant; Henry H. Didway, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Albert B. Ragsdale, captain; Beckwith Bealmear, captain; John W. Jennings, 1st lieutenant; George W. Williams, 2d lieutenant; Basil B. Summers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

William H. Hervey, captain; Benjamin F. Pumphrey, captain; E. W. Frank, captain; Samuel H. Haynes, 1st lieutenant, William B. White; 2d lieutenant; Joseph S. Higdon, 2d lieutenant.

Company K never organized.

The Twenty-seventh Kentucky Infantry organized at Grayson Springs, Ky., under Col. C.

D. Pennebaker, was mustered into the United States service (627 strong) on the 21st of March, 1862, by Major W. H. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

INFANTRY—TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

William P. Boone, colonel; resigned June 28, 1864.

J. Rowan Boone, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Dec. 18, 1863.

Absalom Y. Johnson, major; commissioned lieutenant-colonel, to take rank from Nov. 6, 1861.

John Gault, Jr., major; resigned March 30, 1864.

George W. Barth, major; promoted from captain, Company C, to major March 30, 1864.

Edward Winkler, adjutant; was 1st lieutenant Company B; promoted adjutant Dec. 18, 1863.

Theodore B. Hays, regimental quartermaster; promoted to captain Company C, April 30, 1864.

Albert M. Healy, regimental quartermaster; transferred to field and staff as regimental quartermaster.

Alfred W. Hynes, surgeon; resigned October 28, 1864.

James A. Post, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon to surgeon Dec. 22, 1864.

Joseph Habermeal, asst. surgeon; resigned Nov. 23, 1862.

William V. Marquis, asst. surgeon; resigned September 17, 1864.

Charles H. Stocking, asst. surgeon; transferred to 28th Kentucky Veteran Infantry.

Hiram A. Hunter, chaplain; resigned March 1, 1864.

COMPANY A.

William E. Benson, captain; Paul Byerly, captain; John W. Hogue, 1st lieutenant; Martin Enright, 1st lieutenant; John A. Weatherford, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Jas. H. White, captain; Thos. J. Randolph, captain; Jno. W. Tydings, 1st lieutenant; Edward Winkler, 1st lieutenant; Wm. T. Applegate, 2d lieutenant; Nathan B. Skinner, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Geo. W. Barth, captain; Theodore B. Hays, captain; Robert W. Catlin, 1st lieutenant; Joseph F. Hawley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Henry J. O'Neill, captain; John Martin, captain; Henry Monohan, 1st lieutenant; Patrick O'Malia, 1st lieutenant; Anthony Hartman, 2d lieutenant; James B. True, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Franklin M. Hughes, captain; George W. Conaway, captain; Wm. C. Irvine, captain; Andrew B. Norwood, captain; Granville J. Sinkhorn, 1st lieutenant; Joseph H. Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

James R. Noble, captain; Wm. C. McDowell, captain; Wm. G. Shane, 1st lieutenant; Henry Hooker, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John W. Wilson, captain; Frederick Brooks, captain; James E. Loyal, captain; Albert M. Healy, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

John W. Tydings, captain; Robert Cairns, captain; Daniel C. Collins, captain; Nathaniel Wolfe, Jr., 1st lieutenant; William R. Cox, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Geo. W. Conoway, captain; John Schmidt, captain; Charles Obst, 1st lieutenant; Frederick Buckner, 1st lieutenant; Anthony P. Hefner, 1st lieutenant; Wm. T. Morrow, 1st lieutenant; William Troxler, 2d lieutenant; Isaac Everett, Jr., 2d lieutenant.

Company K never organized.

The Twenty-eighth Kentucky Infantry was organized in the fall of 1861 at New Haven, Ky., under Col. Wm. P. Boone, and was mustered into the United States service October 8, 1861, at New Haven, Ky., by Capt. C. C. Gilbert, 1st United States Infantry, mustering officer.

INFANTRY—THIRTIETH REGIMENT.

Francis N. Alexander, colonel; promoted colonel 30th Kentucky Infantry, April 19, 1864.

Wm. B. Craddock, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel March 31, 1864.

Thomas Mahoney, major; wounded in action at Cynthiana, Ky., June 10, 1864.

Thomas J. Hardin, adjutant; detailed as A. A. Ins. Gen. of 4th Brig., 1st Div. Mil. Dep't of Ky., April 28, 1864.

George T. Finnell, regimental quartermaster; detailed as brigade quartermaster of 2d Brig., 1st Div., Mil. Dep't of Ky., November 5, 1864.

Wm. H. Gardner, surgeon; captured at Saltville, Va., October 3, 1864.

Columbus A. Cox, asst. surgeon.

COMPANY A.

Milton P. Hodges, captain; Wm. B. Craddock, 1st lieutenant; Ambrose L. King, 1st lieutenant; Berrie C. Craddock, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Robert J. Dyas, captain; John T. Ford, 1st lieutenant; James Ranton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Fleming Bates, captain; Joseph Miller, 1st lieutenant; Jenkins J. Vickery, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James S. Burk, captain; Gains L. Burk, 1st lieutenant; William Burk, 1st lieutenant; William H. Gregory, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

William P. Bacon, captain; George W. Young, 1st lieutenant; Jesse A. Suter, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John B. Brownlee, captain; John W. S. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Andrew H. Brownlee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Wiley Searcy, captain; James L. Curtsinger, 1st lieutenant; James S. Searcy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Leander J. Stephenson, captain; John W. S. Brooks, 1st lieutenant; Ephraim B. Guffey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Gains L. Burk, captain; Calvin Bell, 1st lieutenant; James Phipps, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Richard Reynolds, captain; Nathan Buchanan, 1st lieutenant; George A. Muse, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirtieth Kentucky Mounted Infantry was organized under the 20,000 call, and was mustered into the United States service for one year. Companies A, B, E and F were mustered in at Frankfort, Ky., February 19, 1864, and Company G March 29, 1864, by Capt. Charles H. Fletcher, 1st United States Infantry.

INFANTRY—THIRTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

Thos. Z. Morrow, lieutenant-colonel.
John A. Morrison, major.
Wm. J. Hume, adjutant.
R. H. Kinney, adjutant.
J. C. Sayers, regimental quartermaster,
Wm. Woodcock, regimental quartermaster.
John Carnes, regimental quartermaster.
John J. Matthews, surgeon.
Wm. F. Scott, surgeon.
Benj. F. Davidson, assistant surgeon.

COMPANY A.

Robert J. Dyas, captain; Isaac N. Slade, 1st lieutenant; George W. Drinkard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Ben. T. Nix, captain; John W. Zinn, 1st lieutenant; Thomas E. Rhodes, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Harrison M. Hurt, captain; Rolly W. Chapman, 1st lieutenant; William D. Lowe, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Parish G. Buster, captain; Benjamin D. Owens, 1st lieutenant; Wm. M. Northrup, 1st lieutenant; James L. Francis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

William B. White, captain; Cyrenius W. Smith, 1st lieutenant; William Patrick, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Bourne G. Tate, captain; Speed S. Farris, 1st lieutenant; Thomas S. Hamilton, 1st lieutenant; John M. Neal, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Alexander C. Surber, captain; Nelson S. Gooch, 1st lieutenant; James M. Nunnelly, 2d lieutenant; Edwin Sadler, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Robert B. Taylor, captain; Wm. K. Gray, 1st lieutenant; Thos. J. Hutchinson, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirty-second Kentucky Infantry was organized from various detachments, and mustered into service with Thos. Z. Morrow, colonel, on the 15th day of April, 1863, at Camp Burnside, Ky.

INFANTRY—THIRTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

Henry Dent, colonel; was lieutenant-colonel from Sept. 23, 1861, to Oct. 2, 1862; then colonel.

Selby Harney, colonel; was major from March 10, 1862, to February 6,1863; then lieutenant-colonel to June 2, 1863; then colonel.

William Y. Dillard, colonel; was major to June 2, 1863; then lieutenant-colonel to Dec. 24, 1863; then colonel.

Lewis H. Ferrell, lieutenant-colonel; was captain of Company D to Oct. 2, 1862; then lieutenant-colonel.

Milton T. Callahan, major; was captain of Company I to June 2, 1863; then major.

Joseph B. Watkins, major; was captain of Company F to January 4, 1865; then major.

Charles A. Gruber, adjutant; promoted to captain of Company A Feb. 7, 1863.

Edward G. Parmele, adjutant; dismissed April 4, 1865.

David A. Harvey, regimental quartermaster; resigned Oct. 23, 1863.

Christopher B. Tharp, regimental quartermaster; was private to Nov., 1862; then regimental quartermaster sergeant to Dec. 1, 1863; then regimental quartermaster.

George W. Ronald, surgeon; resigned April 12, 1863.

Henry Tammadge, surgeon; was assistant surgeon from Nov. 12, 1862, to April 13, 1863; then surgeon.

Hugh Ryan, assistant surgeon; commissioned surgeon April 13, 1863, but declined accepting.

Joseph Foreman, assistant surgeon.

COMPANY A.

William Y. Dillard, captain; Charles A. Gruber, captain; John C. Slater, 1st lieutenant; Jacob S. Pearce, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Francis M. Looney, captain; Rodolph H. Whitmer, captain; Thomas M. Alexander, 1st lieutenant; Joseph W. Adams, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

William H. Fagan, captain; Simeon S. Leatherman, captain; Jas. M. Leatherman, 1st lieutenant;

COMPANY D.

Lewis H. Ferrell, captain; James P. Tapp, captain; Joel M. Coward, captain; Alfred V. D. Abbett, captain; George W. Coward, 1st lieutenant; Alfred M. Hoagland, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

John O. Daly, captain; Thomas H. Tindell, captain; Eugene O. Daly, captain; John B. Smith, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Jos. B. Watkins, captain; Wm. F. Stars, captain; John Wood, 1st lieutenant; Jas. W. Fowler, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Christopher C. Hare, captain; Henry Watson, 1st lieutenant; James R. Farmer, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Francis A. McHarry, captain; Henry Sutton, captain; Alpha R. Sharp, 1st lieutenant; Benjamin D. Strange, 1st lieutenant; John M. Williams, 2d lieutenant; John O. Beard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Milton T. Callahan, captain; Joseph Pickering, captain; James M. Callahan, captain; R. M. Mosby, captain; John M. Richardson, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Eli P. Farmer, captain; James Boultinghouse, captain; William Duberry, captain; John Armstrong, 1st lieutenant; Foster A. Wheeler, 1st lieutenant.

The Thirty-fourth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 26, 1861, under Lieut-Col. Henry Dent, and was then designated as the "First Battalion Louisville Provost Guards." On the 2d of Oct., 1862, the Provost Guard ceased, and the organization of the 34th Kentucky Infantry commenced.

INFANTRY—THIRTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

Edmund A. Starling, colonel.
Edward R. Weir, Jr., lieutenant-colonel.
Frank H. Bristow, major.
Theodore W. Wing, adjutant.
Finnis H. Little, quartermaster.
Albert D. Cosby, surgeon.
William B. Stage, assistant surgeon.
Benjamin Letcher, assistant surgeon.
William O. Smith, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Robert Brodie, captain; David C. Goad, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Y. Hampton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Hendrick D. Baker, captain; Ransom C. Hayslip, 1st lieutenant; Alfred Harrell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Volney Baker, captain; Wesley Cole, 1st lieutenant; John L. Bennett, 1st lieutenant; John H. Vertrees, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Charles W. D. Prange, captain; George W. Moseley, 1st lieutenant; James T. Goode, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Edward Campbell, captain; Thomas J. Trice, 1st lieutenant; Charles D. King, 1st lieutenant; Tyberius M. Anthony, 2d lieutenant; Charles F. Post, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Hutson Brown, captain; Edwin M. Randolph, 1st lieutenant; James H. Martin, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Hartford M. Meredith, captain; Golson Phelps, 1st lieutenant; James R. McGrew, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Avery Byers, captain; Anderson R. Byers, 1st lieutenant; John R. Reno, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John Alsop, captain; William A. Roberts, 1st lieutenant; Robert L. Samuel, 1st lieutenant; Moses Long, 2d lieutenant; Samuel W. Trible, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William A. Sasseen, captain; Nathan H. Graves, 1st lieutenant; Richard F. Crawford, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirty-fifth Kentucky Mounted Infantry was organized September 26, 1863, at Owensboro, Ky., under Col. E. A. Starling, and was mustered into the United States service October 2, 1863, by Capt. Knight, United States mustering officer. This regiment was recruited under the most difficult circumstances, the State, at that time being overrun with guerrillas, making it exceedingly hazardous for officers to recruit and retain their men in camp. From Owensboro it marched to Henderson, on the 10th of October; and from thence to Hopkinsville, Ky. During the latter part of the year 1863 it was constantly on the march, guarding the country between the Green and Cumberland Rivers, which was infested with many predatory bands of guerrillas. The arduous duties performed by this regiment, during its early existence, did not afford much time for drill; still, through the indefatigable exertions of its officers, it arrived at a point of excellence in drill and discipline which was the admiration of all who were connected with the regiment and the division to which it was attached.

During the month of August, 1864, this regiment, with others, under command of Gen. E. H. Hobson, marched from Elizabethtown in pursuit of the rebel Gen. Adam Johnson, who held possession of the country between the Green and Cumberland Rivers. After a long and tedious march, with various skirmishes, they succeeded in driving him out of Kentucky into Tennessee in the direction of Cadiz. It then returned, via Hopkinsville, to Lexington, and, on the 15th of September, moved in Gen. Burbridge's command in the first expedition on Saltville, Va. It returned to Lexington on the 5th of November, and from there was ordered to Louisville, Ky., where it was mustered out December 29, 1864. It participated in the battle of Saltville, Va., and in numerous skirmishes with guerrillas, in various portions of Kentucky.

INFANTRY—THIRTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.

Charles S. Hanson, colonel.
Benj. Spaulding, lieutenant-colonel.
Samuel Martin, major.
Caswell B. Watts, adjutant.
William O. Watts, regimental quartermaster.
James M. Mattingly, regimental quartermaster.
James R. Duncan, surgeon.
Richard W. Hazelwood, asst. surgeon.
Ira Henderson, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Isaac A. Chinowth, captain; Oscar H. M. Heusted, 1st lieutenant; William H. Low, 2d lieutenant; Alonzo H. Chism, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Jonathan W. Roark, captain; Anderson W. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Ira A. Holland, 2d lieutenant; James W. King, 1st sergeant.

COMPANY C.

George P. Stone, captain; Charles A. McCue, 1st lieutenant; William J. Stone, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James A. Middleton, captain; John W. Kerrick, 1st lieutenant; Charles McBeath, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Wilkins, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

William O. Watts, captain; Robert Purdy, 1st lieutenant; David A. Ray, 2d lieutenant; John R. Watts, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

James H. White, captain. James H. Spalding, 1st lieutenant; Wayne Furgason, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

James L. Strange, captain; Abraham A. Spears, 1st lieutenant; Joseph D. Borden, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Zacheus S. Stroube, captain; Beale Hale, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Youtsey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

James W. Read, captain; Archibald C. Wade, 1st lieutenant; Thomas B. Youtsey, 1st lieutenant; Silas E. Duckworth, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Joseph J. Borrell, captain; Thomas M. Morris, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirty-seventh Kentucky Volunteer Infantry was organized under Col. Chas. S. Hanson, in the summer of 1863, and Companies A, B and C were mustered into the United States service at Glasgow, Ky., September 17, 1863. Companies D, E, F and G were mustered in October 24, 1863, at Glasgow, Ky. Capt. Stroube's Company, originally raised for the Fifty-first Kentucky Infantry, was mustered in September 4, 1863, at Covington, Ky., and consolidated with the Thirty-seventh, forming Company H. Companies I and K were mustered in at Glasgow, Ky., Dec. 21 and 22, 1863. Charles S. Hanson was mustered in as colonel Dec. 29, 1863, and commanded the regiment until the battle of Saltville, Va., on the 2d day of Oct., 1864, when he was severely wounded, and made prisoner of war. It was composed of the best material, and though a one-year regiment, bore as honorable a part in the war as many three years' regiments, and was engaged in the battles occurring in the locality in which it served, though the records of the regiment only show it to have been engaged in the battles of Glasgow, Ky.; Jackson County, Tenn.; Saltville, Va.; and Mt. Sterling, Ky. The regiment was mustered out Dec. 29, 1864, at Louisville, Ky., the re-enlisted men being transferred to the Fifty-fifth Kentucky Infantry, and the Fourth Kentucky Mounted Infantry.

INFANTRY—THIRTY-NINTH REGIMENT.

John Dils, Jr., colonel.
David A. Mims, colonel.
Stephen M. Ferguson, lieutenant-colonel.
John B. Auxier, major.
Martin Thornbury, major.
Levi J. Hampton, adjutant.
John F. Stewart, adjutant.
Robert S. Huey, adjutant.
Martin Fulkerson, quartermaster.
Lindsey Layne, quartermaster.
James H. Hereford, surgeon.
Wm. E. Phillips, surgeon.
James N. Draper, ass't surgeon.
James H. Phillips, ass't surgeon.
Marcus L. King, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

John B. Auxier, captain; David V. Auxier, captain; Henry R. Brown, captain; Isaac Goble, 1st lieutenant; Richard L. Burchett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William Ford, captain; Jacob S. Eberman, captain; Ellington Kilgore, 1st lieutenant; John Breeding, 1st lieutenant; John F. Stewart, 2d lieutenant; Andrew J. Adkins, 2d lieutenant; John Harkens, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Thomas J. Sowards, captain; Andrew J. Sowards, 1st lieutenant; James W. Allison, 1st lieutenant; Jacob Helvey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Martin Thornbury, captain; Isaac E. Gray, captain; Alfred C. Hailey, 1st lieutenant; Hughy Plymale, 1st lieutenant; Walter Thornbury, 2d lieutenant; William Waddington, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Lewis Sowards, captain; Alfred C. Hailey, captain; Dillard Parsons, 1st lieutenant; James M. Sowards, 1st lieutenant; William T. Berry, 1st lieutenant; Paris L. Reed, 2d lieutenant; Shadle R. Pauley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Hezekiah Webb, captain; George J. Allen, 1st lieutenant; Augustus E. Kendrick, 1st lieutenant; Calvin Preston, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Allen P. Haws, captain; John B. Vanhoose, 1st lieutenant; James M. Rice, 1st lieutenant; Addison Miller, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

William King, captain; Richard D. Coleman, 1st lieutenant; James M. Thornbury, 1st lieutenant; James H. Stump, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Joseph M. Kirk, captain; Benjamin A. Rodgers, captain; William Hagerman, 1st lieutenant; John D. Reinhart, 1st lieutenant; Charles Helton, 2d lieutenant; Simeon L. Payne, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Harrison Ford, captain; Nathaniel Collins, captain; Joseph D. Powers, 1st lieutenant, Samuel Keel, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirty-ninth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Peach Orchard, Ky., under Col. John Dils, and was mustered into the United States service February 16, 1863, by Capt. W. B. Royall, United States mustering officer. This command was raised entirely in the Sandy Valley and the counties adjoining, and, being thoroughly acquainted with the country, was stationed in that section of the State for its protection against the frequent incursions of rebels from Virginia. In April, 1863, the regiment had a fight near Pikeville, Ky., and captured Col. French and his command, and in June engaged the enemy again at Pond Creek, some thirty miles from Pikeville. The regiment being divided, a portion of it proceeded with other troops to Gladeville, Va., and succeeded in capturing Col. Condil and his command, who were brought back as prisoners of war. Through the constant and vigilant service of this regiment, the eastern portion of Kentucky remained uninterrupted from any invasion of the rebels for many months.

The regiment participated in many battles and skirmishes, in which loss was sustained, among which the following are mentioned, viz.: Pond Creek, Pike Co., Ky., May 16, 1864; boat fight in Johnson County, December 4, 1862; Beaver Creek, Floyd County, June 27, 1863; Marrowbone, Pike County, September 22, 1863; Clark's Neck, Lawrence County, August 27, 1863; Paintsville, Johnson County, April 13, 1864; Half Mount, Magoffin County, April 14, 1864; Mount Sterling, Ky., June 9, 1864, Cynthiana, Ky., June 12, 1864; Saltville, Va., October 2, 1864. It was mustered out September 15, 1865, at Louisville, Ky.

INFANTRY—FORTIETH REGIMENT.

Clinton J. True, colonel.
Mathew Mullins, lieutenant-colonel.
Thomas H. Mannen, major.
Fred'k H. Bierbower, major.
Edward C. Barlow, adjutant.
James B. True, adjutant.
A. L. Burke, quartermaster.
John C. Ball, quartermaster.
George W. Littlejohn, quartermaster.
Joseph G. Roberts, surgeon.
William B. Bland, surgeon.
James H. Phillips, asst. surgeon.
Oscar E. Holloway, asst. surgeon.
James A. Snead, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Frederick H. Bierbower, captain; Charles R. Curtis, captain; Charles Roberts, 1st lieutenant; Alex. W. Lawwill, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Simon Rice, captain; Edward C. Barlow, captain John S. Reed, 1st lieutenant; Noah Johnson, 2d lieutenant; Raphael J. Tomlinson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

James B. Nipp, captain; Robert D. Adams, 1st lieutenant; Warren H. Devore, 1st lieutenant; Robert C. Snead, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John McGuire, captain; Elias P. Davis, captain; Middleton McGuire, 1st lieutenant; Alexander Johnson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Harrison B. Literal, captain; George W. Littlejohn, 1st lieutenant; John Foster, 1st lieutenant; James Garvin, 2d lieutenant; John M. Tyree, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

James H. Johns, captain; William E. Arnold, 1st lieutenant; Zachariah H. Mullins, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thomas R. Rorer, captain; Christ'er C. McGinety, 1st lieutenant; Isaac A. Whitaker, 2d lieutenant; Lloyd McGill, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Greenberry Reid, captain; Cornelius B. Pettet, 1st lieutenant; John W. Evans, 2d lieutenant; William S. Waugh, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Isaac Kelly, captain; Thomas H. Larimore, 1st lieutenant; Mark Wallace, 1st lieutenant; Marshal W. Stubblefield, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Stephen H. Young, captain; William Frisby, 1st lieutenant; Henry E. Evans; 1st lieutenant; James McGuire, 2d lieutenant; John W. Frazer, 2d lieutenant.

The Fortieth Kentucky Infantry was recruited under the 20,000 call, by Col. C. J. True, and was mustered in at Grayson, Carter Co., Ky,, in September, 1863. Being raised for twelve months' service, and during a time when the State was overrun with guerillas, and all troops were ordered into active service immediately after, and sometimes before they were thoroughly organized, it had no time for drill and discipline. Being mounted, it was constantly employed in defending different portions of eastern Kentucky, and rendered good service. It was with Gen. Burbridge in his expedition against Saltville, Virginia, and participated in all the battles in Kentucky during the frequent raids of Morgan. It was mustered out at Catlettsburg, Ky., December 30, 1864.

INFANTRY—FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

John Mason Brown, colonel.
Lewis M. Clark, lieutenant-colonel.
Nathan A. Brown, major.
John C. Henderson, major.
James Seaton, adjutant.
John C. Ball, quartermaster.
Harman Conley, quartermaster.
Samuel Maguire, surgeon.
William E. Scobey, asst. surgeon.
Joseph L. Rowland, asst. surgeon.
Elisha Thacker, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Joseph W. Cottingham, captain; Daniel Hendrickson, 1st lieutenant; Pleasant M. Stricklett, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Benjamin R. Haley, captain; William B. Shockley, captain; James H. Loh, 1st lieutenant; John W. Thornton, 1st lieutenant; William A. Haley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

George W. Brown, captain; Frank Mott, captain; Edwin S. Turner, 1st lieutenant; David W. German, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

W. S. Adams, captain; J. J. Matney, 1st lieutenant; William P. Cooper, 1st lieutenant; Calvin F. Vaughn, 2d lieutenant; George F. Ratliff, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Thomas Damron, captain; Daniel H. Walker, 1st lieutenant; Jasper Hatten, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Thomas Russell, captain; Richard Williamson, 1st lieutenant; Mordecai McClure, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

William B. Jones, captain; William B. Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Erastus M. Gates, 2d lieutenant; Coburn D. Outten, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Jackson J. Matney, captain; Calvin F. Vaughn, 1st lieutenant; Horace January, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

James H. O'Brien, captain; Robert H. Wilson, 1st lieutenant; Milton J. Smith, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Jacob L. Ross, captain; Edward W. Brown, 1st lieutenant; John Thompson, 2d lieutenant.

The Forty-fifth Regiment Kentucky Mounted Infantry Volunteers was at first designed as a battalion for local service on the Virginia front and in the eastern counties of Kentucky. The recruiting and organization of the command was intrusted to Maj. Lewis M. Clark, formerly lieutenant Sixteenth Kentucky Infantry, and captain Tenth Kentucky Cavalry. For some months in the summer of 1863 the recruits of four companies were employed as above indicated; but it was determined to increase the command to a regiment and muster it into the United States service. Although the requisite number of recruits were rapidly collected, and the regiment put on active duty in October, 1863, and the organization effected at Ashland, Ky., the formal muster-in of the two companies was unavoidably delayed until the beginning of the following January, when Col. John Mason Brown was assigned to the command, and Maj. L. M. Clark promoted to lieutenant-colonel. In May it rendezvoused at Lexington, Ky., and under the immediate command of Lieut.-Col. Clark (Col. Brown commanding brigade) was attached to Hobson's Cavalry Division, and marched to the Virginia line, near Pound Gap. It led the pursuit after Morgan in June, 1864, and was the leading regiment of an assaulting column at the battle of Mt. Sterling, 9th June, 1864. It participated in the battle of Cynthiana June 12, 1864, in which Morgan's force was finally destroyed, having up to that engagement been continuously on duty for twenty-six days and nights, with no halt of as much as four hours.

During the months of July and August, 1864, a part of the regiment, under Lieut.-Col. Clark, was detailed by Gen. Burbridge to pursue guerrillas and scattered Confederate troops in Owen, Trimble, and the adjacent counties of Kentucky. In October, 1864, the Forty-fifth Kentucky formed part of Burbridge's command in the unsuccessful attack on Saltville, Va., and covered the retreat thence. In November and December, 1864, it was in Stoneman's column, at the capture of Bristol, east Tennessee, Marion, Abingdon, and Saltville, Va., and participated in all the engagements of that campaign.

Besides a great number of skirmishes of greater or less note, the Forty-fifth Kentucky took part in the engagements of Mt. Sterling, Cynthiana, Marion, Bristol, Laurel Gap, and Saltville. From its constant duty in most inclement weather the regiment suffered even more seriously than from the bullets of the enemy, and a large proportion of the men were mustered out much injured by frostbites.

INFANTRY—FORTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.

Andrew H. Clark, colonel.
Alfred C. Wilson, lieutenant-colonel.
Thos. H. Barnes, major.
George A. Hanaford, adjutant.
Peter D. Scholl, quartermaster.
John M. Daniel, surgeon.
Wilson H. Glass, assistant surgeon.
Geo. Sumner, assistant surgeon.
Mordecai J. W. Ambrose, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

John Penington, captain; Godfrey Isaacs, 1st lieutenant; Andrew Isaacs, 2d lieutenant; Isaac S. Jones, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Jackson Roberts, captain; David V. Roberts, 1st lieutenant; Francis M. Herd, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John C. Wilson, captain; Wm. J. Morris, 1st lieutenant; William Baker, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

David W. Clark, captain; Edward Clark, 1st lieutenant; Edward Chestnut, 1st lieutenant; Daniel G. Allen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Henry J. Clark, captain; Hiram Metcalf, 1st lieutenant; Henry Smith, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Henry Skidmore, captain; Nathan Noe, 1st lieutenant; Acles Winn, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thomas J. Engle, captain; Joseph Herd, captain; Robert M. Green, 1st lieutenant; Henry H. Gabbard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Benj. F. Blankenship, captain; George W. Morgan, 1st lieutenant; Wm. G. Dixon, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Simon Cockrill, captain; James P. Smallwood, 1st lieutenant; Hiram Rogers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John McQueen, captain; John McCracken, 1st lieutenant; Charles H. Mosley, 2d lieutenant.

This regiment, raised under the call for 20,000 men, was recruited chiefly from the mountain counties of the State, and the greater portion of the men were mustered in at Irvine, Ky., October 5, 1863, and at Camp Nelson, Ky., December, 1863, and January, 1864.. The officers of this regiment failed to furnish any data from which to make up a statement of its operations, marches, etc., which is to be regretted, as it was due to the gallant men of this command that their record should be as complete as possible. It did most excellent service in the central and eastern portions of the State. Company I, commanded by Capt. Cockrill, after being mounted, scouted the country thoroughly, sending terror to the hearts of guerrillas and all lawless bands.

INFANTRY—FORTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

Hartwell T. Burge, colonel.
William W. Hester, lieutenant-colonel.
William H. Hoyt, major.
John W. Lockhead, adjutant.
William Shuler, adjutant.
James M. Courtney, quartermaster.
William Randolph, surgeon,
R. R. Bush, asst. surgeon.
John D. Mott, asst. surgeon.
John W. Ricks, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Fountain P. Hawkins, captain; John M. Gregory, 1st lieutenant; Jasper N. Scott, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Hugh M. Hiett, captain; William H. Rushing, 1st lieutenant; John T. Rushing, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John J. Wright, captain; John F. Lay, 1st lieutenant; Willis S. McNeely, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Hiram J. Belt, captain; John Tyer, 1st lieutenant; Logan Belt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Richard F. Minner, captain; William Hoyt, 1st lieutenant; William J. Small, 1st lieutenant; William J. Wilson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Charles E. VanPelt, captain; William B. Rogers, 1st lieutenant; Charles Adams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John W. Bush, captain; William B. Wallington, 1st lieutenant; John R. Sedberry, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

James M. Wilson, captain; George L. Lovier, 1st lieutenant; William S. Lovier, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Joseph Mitchell, captain; William Porter, captain; Turney G. Driskill, 1st lieutenant; Louis C. Chatham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Samuel Jarrett, captain; Jeremiah S. Garner, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Lynch, 2d lieutenant.

The Forty-Eighth Kentucky Volunteers was enlisted principally from the counties of Trigg, Lyon, Livingston, Crittenden, Union, Christian, Caldwell, Muhlenburgh, Breckinridge and Grayson, and was organized and mustered into service at Princeton, Ky., by Charles H. Fletcher, captain Thirteenth United States Infantry, on the 26th day of October, 1863, for the period of one year, with Hartwell T. Burge, of Louisville, as colonel.

This regiment was raised for especial service in Kentucky to serve as a mounted force to aid in preventing raids, and to clear the State of guerrillas. Immediately upon muster it was assigned to First Brigade, Second Division, Department of Kentucky, and remained on duty at Princeton until the 1st of December, 1863, when it was ordered and marched to Russellville, Ky. Here it was ordered in detail on December 5, viz.: Companies A, D, I and K to Bowling Green, with Col. Burge as post commandant; companies B, F, G and H remaining at Russellville, with Lieut.-Col. Hester as post commandant. It remained on duty at these stations until April 6, 1864, when, by direction of Bvt. Maj.-Gen. Burbridge, it was removed, with exception of one company, and distributed along the line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, garrisoning that line from Cave City to Louisville, headquarters at Munfordsville, with Col. Burge as post commandant, and Lieut.-Col. Hester in command of regiment and supervision of the railway line guarded by his force.

INFANTRY—FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT.

John G. Eve, colonel.
Philos Stratton, lieutenant-colonel.
James H. Davidson, major.
James H. Tinsley, adjutant.
George Smith, quartermaster.
Walter M. Prentice, surgeon.
Henry C. Miller, surgeon.
William B. Swisher, ass't surgeon.
Hugh W. Hogan, ass't surgeon.
Ebenezer Ingram, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Stephen Golden, captain; Hugh H. York, 1st lieutenant; Moses F. Ingram, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Francis Catron, captain; Henry L. Vinsant, 1st lieutenant; John P. Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Wm. T. Bryant, captain; Marion Bryant, 1st lieutenant; John W. Siler, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John M. Cook, captain; Wm. Carson, 1st lieutenant; Henry S. Branaman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

James G. Howard, captain; Benj. F. Howard, captain; James C. Howard, 1st lieutenant; John W. Forrester, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John A. Ward, captain; Augustus B. Culton, 1st lieutenant; William G. Bingham, 1st lieutenant; Thomas S. Ward, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Lee Leforce, captain; Isaac J. Black, 1st lieutenant; John A. Hayden, 1st lieutenant; Francis A. Creekmore, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Isaac J. Black, captain; Jesse Mattingly, 1st lieutenant; Wm. B. Eve, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Isaac L. Hardgrove, captain; Joshua S. Taylor, 1st lieutenant; Hardin Simpson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John Goodin, captain; Henry Blendowski, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Ingram, 2d lieutenant.

The Forty-ninth Kentucky Infantry was organized at Camp Nelson, Ky., under Col. John G. Eve. This regiment was originally recruited for the cavalry service, but prior to muster in, viz., on December 14, 1863, the various detachments were consolidated into ten companies, and the officers were duly commissioned from that date. All the companies and detachments were mustered into the United States service on the 19th day of September, 1863, except two, one of which was mustered in October 7, 1863, and the other November 3, 1863.

INFANTRY—FIFTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

John H. Grider, colonel.
Samuel F. Johnson, lieutenant-colonel.
John B. Tyler, major.
Wm. H. Murrell, adjutant.
Wm. H. Johnson, quartermaster.
James H. Lile, quartermaster.
George W. Wyer, surgeon.
Robert D. Hawthorn, asst. surgeon.
Henry H. Alter, asst. surgeon.
George Mitchell, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Samuel J. Richards, captain; Wm. H. Walker, 1st lieutenant; Daniel Huntsman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

John D. Gilliam, captain; George D. Read, 1st lieutenant; James A. Carter, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Jno. M. Billingsley, captain; Tho. W. Mitchell, 1st lieutenant; Isaac T. Lee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

George W. Hoy, captain; Wm. M. Beson, 1st lieutenant; Jno. W. Arnett, 2d lieutenant; William Jackson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Henry C. Watkins, captain; John W. Underhill, 1st lieutenant; James M. Atwood, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John B. Tyler, captain; William P. King, captain; Jasper Forrest, 1st lieutenant; James A. Caldwell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Edward Hartie, captain; Hugh L. Scott, 1st lieutenant; James H. Lile, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Francis Houchin, captain; S. W. Willis, 1st lieutenant; Daniel C. Parrish, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

James M. Childress, captain; Lewis P. Arnold, 1st lieutenant; Alexander Dockery, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Lewis Buckner, captain; Romulus N. Taylor, 1st lieutenant; Richard W. Hayes, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifty-second Kentucky Mounted Infantry was organized under the authority of an act of Congress, dated February 7, 1863, authorizing the governor to raise 20,000 troops for the better defense of Kentucky. Companies A, B, C and E were mustered in at Scottsville, Ky., October 16, 1863, and Company D on the 17th of October. Company F was mustered in November 12, 1863, and Company G December 21, 1863, at Franklin, Ky. Companies H, I and K were mustered in March 3, 1864, at Franklin, Ky.

This regiment was raised for twelve months' service, and, under provisions of the act, was to be employed within the limits of the State of Kentucky in repelling invasions, suppressing insurrection, and guarding and protecting the public property. For the purpose of enabling it to cope more readily with the guerrillas that infested the State, it was mounted and stationed in the lower and central portions of the State, and rendered efficient aid to the government in protecting its line of communication with the army at the front. In the many fights and skirmishes in which it engaged, the bearing of both officers and men sustained the gallant record so bravely won by all Kentucky troops during the Rebellion. It was mustered out at Bowling Green, Ky., in January and March, 1865.

INFANTRY—FIFTY-THIRD REGIMENT.

Clinton J. True, colonel.
W. C. Johnson, lieutenant-colonel.
James G. Francis, major.
Frank D. Tunis, adjutant.
S. J. Housh, quartermaster.
William B. Bland, surgeon.
Henry C. Miller, asst. surgeon.
James M. Montmollin, asst. surgeon.

COMPANY A.

John A. Thompson, captain; James F. Thompson, 1st lieutenant; John Mullens, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Henry F. Falls, captain; John J. Creighton, 1st lieutenant; Wm. H. Robinson, 2d lieutenant; Ferdinand Burch, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Henry Hagerty, captain; Richard S. Robson, 1st lieutenant; Chas. T. Chambers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Benj. T. Nix, captain; James T. Chrisman, 1st lieutenant; Alfred Bickers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

James G. Francis, captain; Albert C. Breith, captain; Jno. W. West, 1st lieutenant; Wm. H. Crout, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

J. H. Lennin, captain; Alfred T. Morin, 1st lieutenant; Adam Weaver, 1st lieutenant; J. Hazard Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Robert H. Wilson, captain; Jesse J. Dennis, 1st lieutenant; Ed'n N. Vallandingham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

James W. Read, captain; David Berry, 1st lieutenant; Joseph M. Hukel, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

James H. Carey, captain; John W. Thornton, 1st lieutenant; Henry C. Ball, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Samuel A. Crawford, captain; Riley Richards, 1st lieutenant; Charles W. Russell, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifty-third Kentucky Infantry was organized at Paris, Ky., in the winter of 1864 and spring of 1865, and the exigencies of the service demanding all the available forces about that time, this regiment was called on to perform arduous duty which retarded its speedy organization. Being mounted, it was constantly employed in scouting the counties in the central portion of the State and along the Kentucky Central Railroad. In the second expedition of Gen. Burbridge against Saltville, Va., this regiment suffered much from the excessive cold, and the long and fatiguing marches. It participated in many skirmishes and in the battles of Clinch River, Marion and Saltville, Va., in all of which it performed its duty to the entire satisfation of the commanding general. It was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., September 15, 1865.

INFANTRY—FIFTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

Harvey M. Buckley, colonel.
John G. Rogers, lieutenant-colonel.
John D. Russell, major.
Edward Mitchell, adjutant.
Thomas J. Owens, quartermaster.
Lewis B. Brasher, quartermaster.
Frederick C. Leber, surgeon.
James H. McMahon, assistant surgeon.
Thomas B. Hunt, assistant sugeon.

COMPANY A.

Greenup Nickell, captain; George W. Herron, 1st lieutenant; Benj. C. Lockwood, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Robert H. Young, captain; Mastin Campbell, 1st lieutenant; Robert A. Hancock, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Dexter B. Gray, captain; James W. Stewart, 1st lieutenant; Robert W. Sanders, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

L. D. Brown, captain; W. T. Moore, 1st lieutenant; John Searcy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

William Carroll, captain; George T. Buckley, captain; John W. Ridgway, 1st lieutenant; Posey Buckley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Robert D. Barr, captain; John Moran, 1st lieutenant; Benj. F. Meadows, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Emzy W. Easley, captain; Nelson Parish, 1st lieutenant; Lewis W. Sewell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

David E. Roberts, Jr., captain; Joseph G. Cooper, 1st lieutenant; Archibald L. Scudder, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Robert P. Crupper, captain; John N. Shane, 1st lieutenant; Dudley O. Bravard, 2d lieutenant.

Company I was never organized.

The Fifty-fourth Kentucky Mounted Infantry was organized at New Castle, Ky., in September, 1864, under special authority from the War Department. The difficulties attending the recruiting and organization of this regiment were great, owing to the frequent raids by guerrillas, and the constant presence of predatory bands in the vicinity of its camp. It was mounted and performed duty in various portions of Kentucky, and by the energy displayed by its officers soon dispelled the guerrillas from the section of country in which it was stationed. On the second Saltville expedition the Fifty-fourth lost many men by exposure to the extreme cold weather. It participated in the battles of Clinch River, Marion and Saltville, Va., beside various skirmishes and minor engagements. It was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., September 1, 1865.

INFANTRY—FIFTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

Weden O'Neal, colonel.
Tho. J. Williams, lieutenant-colonel.
Silas Howe, major.
John E. Calvert, adjutant.
Robert C. Snead, adjutant.
Geo. L. Huey, quartermaster.
Benj. F. Slaughter, surgeon.
E. R. Palmer, assistant surgeon.
John R. Reasoner, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

James M. Riddell, captain; Wm. E. Arnold, captain; Wm. S. Butts, 1st lieutenant; Washington Craven, 1st lieutenant; George B. Clore, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

John C. Richards, captain; Gary Longfellow, 1st lieutenant; George W. Story, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

James P. Robinson, captain; Calvin Griffin, 1st lieutenant; Nehemiah Spradling, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John E. Calvert, captain; Wm. H. Drinkard, 1st lieutenant; Dennis W. Haley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Charles McBeath, captain; James H. White, 1st lieutenant; Geo. W. White, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Thos. W. Hardiman, captain; Thomas J. McHatton, 1st lieutenant; Cincinnatus Murphy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Peter S. Jones, captain; George M. Harper, 1st lieutenant; John N. Buchanan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George Welker, captain; Gottleib Jennerich, 1st lieutenant; John C. Bishop, 2d lieutenant; Robert C. Snead, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Alex. W. Lawwill, captain; James S. Hise, 1st lieutenant; Frank Blanchard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Wm. E. Gillaspie, captain; Jonathan R. Ward, 1st lieutenant; Jacob P. Phipps, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifty-fifth Kentucky Infantry was raised under special authority from the War Department, and was organized at Covington, Ky., in November, 1864. It was mounted, and performed duty in the counties bordering on the Kentucky Central Railroad, until ordered on the Saltville expedition under Gen. Burbridge. On this expedition it performed good and efficient service, and was favorably mentioned by the commanding general, among other troops of his division, for gallant bearing in face of the enemy. After the return from Virginia the regiment was by detail posted in various counties to protect the citizens from the depredations of guerrillas, upon which duty it remained until mustered out at Louisville, Ky., September 19, 1865.

PATTERSON'S COMPANY OF MECHANICS AND ENGINEERS.

William F. Patterson, captain; Andrew Patterson, 2d lieutenant.

Patterson's company of Mechanics and Engineers was organized at Somerset, Ky., under Capt. W. F. Patterson, and mustered into the United States service by Charles S. Medary, lieutenant, United States mustering officer, and has marched as follows:

This company, as enlisted, was employed in the construction of defenses for Camp Hoskins, Ky., then under command of Col. Hoskins, up to the 2d of December, 1861, when Brig.-Gen. Shoepff assumed command, and continued the work of defense in the vicinity of Somerset, Ky., until the battle of Mill Springs, on the 19th of January, 1862. On the 16th of January this company, together with seven companies from the command, were employed in the repair of the road from Somerset to Stanford, Ky. On the 8th of February the seven companies were relieved, and the work continued by this company under orders of Gen. Thomas. On the 12th of April it was ordered to report to headquarters Seventh Division, Army of Ohio, Cumberland Ford, Ky., by Gen. George W. Morgan, where it arrived on the 20th, repairing roads on the way. From the 25th of April to May 1 engaged, with large detailed force added, in the repair of the road for supplies. From the 1st of May this company constructed roads and bridges forty miles for a flank movement upon Cumberland Gap, through Cumberland Mountains, which was accomplished successfully on the 18th of June. From this date a new detail was added of 230 men, and engaged in the construction of building roads, etc., up to the 18th of September, when all was destroyed by order of Gen. Morgan, together with nine siege guns. Marched with the advance of Morgan's division to the Ohio River, and accompanied it to Memphis, where, in December, it embarked with the division for an attack upon Vicksburg. From the 26th to the 1st of January, 1863, this company was constantly engaged, night and day, in preparing earthworks, and on the 28th was greatly exposed in an effort to throw a pontoon bridge across Chickasaw Bayou under a destructive fire from the enemy. Sergt. Welsh, in charge of the party, relinquished the effort only when the boats were so damaged as to be useless. On the 1st of January, 1863, embarked on transports for Arkansas Post, arriving on the 10th. After the battle and surrender the demolition of the fort and siege guns was assigned to this company, with a large detail from the command.

From this time until the date of its return to Kentucky, November 23, 1864, the company was constantly on duty, adding to the courage and discipline of true soldiers the skill and intelligence of competent engineers and mechanics.

CAVALRY—FIRST REGIMENT.

Frank Wolford, colonel; entered service at organization.

Silas Adams, colonel; promoted colonel June 16, 1864.

John W. Letcher, lieutenant-colonel; resigned Nov. 28, 1862.

Francis N. Helveti, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel June 16, 1864.

John A. Brents, major; resigned July 2, 1862.

William A. Coffee, major; resigned Oct., 1863.

William N. Owens, major; promoted major July 31, 1862.

Thomas Rowland, major; wounded at Dutton Hill, Ky.

Alverson T. Keen, major; promoted major July 16, 1864.

Fountain T. Fox, major; promoted to major June 27, 1864.

George W. Drye, major; wounded at Rockford, Tenn., Nov. 14, 1862.

Francis M. Wolford, adjutant; promoted captain Company A Nov. 14.

William D. Carpenter, adjutant; wounded in siege of Knoxville, Tenn.

Matthew H. Blackford, regimental quartermaster.

Elijah Cox, regimental commissary subsistence; promoted regimental commissary subsistence June 3, 1863.

John A. Brady, surgeon; resigned Dec. 26, 1862.

Hawkins Brown, surgeon; promoted surgeon Dec. 26, 1862.

James C. Riffe, assistant surgeon; resigned June 11, 1862.

Andrew A. Campbell, assistant surgeon.

Albert G. Huffman, assistant surgeon; resigned June 9, 1864.

Wm. H. Honnell, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

George W. Sweeney, captain; Silas G. Adams, captain; Francis M. Wolford, captain; James Humphrey, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Watson, 2d lieutenant; William Adams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William Rains, captain; George W. Drye, captain; Samuel Belden, captain; Wm. B. Carter, 1st lieutenant; Stephen H. Coppage, 1st lieutenant; Vincent Peyton, 1st lieutenant; Stephen G. Averitt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John A. Brents, captain; Jno. A. Morrison, captain; Wm. Perkins, captain; Dulany R. Carr, captain; James E. Chilton, 1st lieutenant; Wm. C. Roots, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

George Coppage, captain; Samuel H. Boone, captain; Daniel A. Kelley, captain; Richard H. Vandyke, 1st lieutenant; Henry H. Thornton, 1st lieutenant; Warren Lamme, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Boston Dillion, captain; Franklin W. Dillion, captain: John Kimbrell, 1st lieutenant; William P. Ballard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Jarrard W. Jenkins, captain; Robert C. Blain, captain; George C. Jenkins, 1st lieutenant; Oliver M. Dodson, 1st lieutenant; Wm. B. Kelley, 2d lieutenant; Richard E. Huffman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Thornton K. Hackley, captain; Irvine Burton, captain; Wm. D. Carpenter, 1st lieutenant; Henry S. Robson, 2d lieutenant; Daniel Murphy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

F. N. Alexander, captain; James G. Dick, captain; Chas. W. Huffaker, 1st lieutenant; Samuel Duncan, 1st lieutenant; Wm. M. Hadley, 2d lieutenant; Abraham Grubb, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John Smith, captain; Alexander Smith, captain; James L. Pankey, captain; James M. Mayes, 1st lieutenant; Buford Scott, 1st lieutenant; Thomas J. Graves, 1st lieutenant; Alexander Thompson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY J.

M. H. Owsley, captain; Jesse M. Carter, captain; Anderson T. Keen, captain; John T. McLain, captain, Alexander C. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Meredith Martin, 2d lieutenant; Sandusky Braton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Nelson B. Burris, captain; Thomas Rowland, captain; Philip Roberts, captain; Tilford N. Bruner, 1st lieutenant; Jno. F. N. Hill, 1st lieutenant; F. T. Fox, 1st lieutenant; A. J. Alexander, 1st lieutenant; Stephen Sully, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

Wm. N. Owens, captain; John B. Fishback, captain; Joe D. Beatie, captain; Robert M. Griffin, 1st lieutenant; Matthew H. Blackford, 1st lieutenant; Benj. H. Milton, 2d lieutenant; Wm. A. Lockett, 2d lieutenant; Geo. K. Speed, 2d lieutenant; Granville J. Vaught, 2d lieutenant.

CAVALRY—SECOND REGIMENT.

Buckner Board, colonel; resigned Dec. 25, 1862.

Thomas P. Nicholas, colonel; promoted colonel Dec. 26, 1862.

Thos. B. Cochoran, lieutenant-colonel; resigned Nov. 24, 1862.

Elijah S. Watts, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Nov. 25, 1862.

W. H. Eifort, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel June 22, 1864; killed in action.

Owen Starr, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Oct. 18, 1864.

Henry E. Collins, major; promoted major Dec. 26, 1862; resigned June 2, 1864.

Jesse J. Craddock, major; promoted major Nov. 25, 1862; resigned Jan. 26, 1864.

Joseph T. Foreman, major; promoted to major May 1, 1865.

R. M. Gilmore, major; promoted major May 12, 1865.

Wm. H. Lower, major; promoted to major July 10, 1865.

John M. Hewitt, adjutant.

Geo. W. Griffith, adjutant; promoted captain Company A, April 30, 1864.

Garrard S. Morgan, adjutant.

Elias Thomasson, regimental quartermaster.

William G. Rogers, regimental quartermaster.

Edward B. Ayres, regimental commissary; resigned Dec. 29, 1864.

John F. Finley, surgeon.

David J. Griffith, assistant surgeon; resigned Feb. 6, 1862.

Robert Stewart, assistant surgeon; resigned June 18, 1863.

J. H. Layman, assistant surgeon.

George J. Reed, chaplain; resigned Oct. 17, 1862.

COMPANY A.

Elijah S. Watts, captain; John D. Wickliffe, captain; George W. Griffith, captain; George A. Hosmer, 1st lieutenant; Edward B. Curran, 1st lieutenant; Robert E. Pogue, 2d lieutenant; William Bradney, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Henry E. Collins, captain; William Arthur, captain; William Higgins, 1st lieutenant; Thomas H. Soward, 1st lieutenant; Henry C. Carr, 2d lieutenant; Charles J. Norton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Henry G. Thomas, captain; Owen Starr, captain; James A. Warder, captain; William H. Lower, captain; Wm. H. Eifort, 1st lieutenant; Bird P. Brooks, 1st lieutenant; Lewis H. Little, 1st lieutenant; George A. Hosmer, 2d lieutenant; William G. Jenkins, 2d lieutenant; Edward B. Curran, 2d lieutenant: Wm. A. McCammon, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Jesse J. Craddock, captain; Charles D. Armstrong, captain; John E. Stillwell, 1st lieutenant; Bird P. Brooks, 2d lieutenant; John L. Bomar, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Oliver T. Booth, captain: Owen Starr, 1st lieutenant; Robt. E. Pogue, 1st lieutenant; John Calder, 1st lieutenant; Richard W. Davis, 2d lieutenant; Wm. C. Adams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Edward J. Mitchell, captain; Charles A. Zachary, captain; James M. Patterson, 1st lieutenant; Wm. T. Jenkins, 1st lieutenant; Wm. Bradney, 1st lieutenant; Sylvanus C. Runyon, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Miller R. McCulloch, captain; Harvey S. Parke, captain; John Baker, captain; Cornelius Nall, 1st lieutenant; Sanford H. Thurman, 1st lieutenant; Granville J. Hastings, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Tho. C. Wiley, captain; Wm. H. Eifort, captain; Samuel Lyon, captain; Wm. T. Hoblitzell, 1st lieutenant: Augustus T. Gulitz, 1st lieutenant; Geo. S. Coyle, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Augustus C. Van Dyke, captain; Wm. T. Hoblitzell, captain; Lovell H. Thrixton, captain; Oscar O. Gregg, 1st lieutenant; George W. L. Batman, 1st lieutenant; John L. Bomar, 1st lieutenant; Chas. Corum, 2d lieutenant; Wm. H. Lower, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

J. Griswold, 1st lieutenant; Stephen E. Jones, 1st lieutenant; Lovell H. Thrixton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

Monroe Bateman, captain; Jos. T. Foreman, captain; Jas. A. Warder, 1st lieutenant; Thomas H. Soward, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Robert M. Gillmore, captain.

The Second Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Camp Joe Holt, under Col. Buckner Board, mustered into the United States service on the 9th day of September, 1861, by Maj. W. H. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—THIRD REGIMENT.

James S. Jackson, colonel; promoted brigadier-general of Volunteers Aug. 13, 1862.

Eli H. Murray, colonel; commissioned and entered service as major Nov. 26, 1861; promoted colonel Aug. 13, 1862.

Alvin C. Gillen, lieutenant-colonel; promoted colonel of —— Regiment, Tennessee Volunteers.

James M. Holmes, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel Aug. 13, 1862; resigned May 27, 1863.

Robert H. King, lieutenant-colonel; promoted to lieutenant-colonel May 27, 1863.

Green Clay, major; resigned Jan. 11, 1862.

W. S. D. Megowan, major; resigned Dec. 17, 1862.

Aaron C. Shacklett, major; promoted major Aug. 13, 1862.

Lewis H. Wolfley, major; promoted major Dec. 18, 1862.

Geo. F. White, major; promoted major April 13, 1863.

John W. Breathitt, major; promoted major May 27, 1863.

Zachary L. Taylor, adjutant; resigned April 16, 1862.

Jesse S. Gray, adjutant.

John Feland, regimental quartermaster.

A. J. Gillett, regimental quartermaster; promoted from 2d lieutenant Company G, June 20, 1862.

Jos. F. Anderson, regimental commissary; promoted from commissary sergeant March 8, 1864.

Wm. Singleton, surgeon; resigned June 16, 1862.

Robert M. Fairleigh, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon June 19, 1862.

Robert B. McNairy, asst. surgeon; promoted from hospital steward April 10, 1863.

Hartwell T. Burge, chaplain; resigned June 23, 1863.

John H. McRae, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Jno. W. Breathitt, captain; Chas. L. White, captain; Thomas H. Ashford, 1st lieutenant; Milton J. Coleman, 1st lieutenant; N. C. Petree, 2d lieutenant; Alex. C. Lakin, 2d lieutenant; Edward Kelly, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James M. Holmes, captain; Mathew H. Jouett, captain; John L. Waters, 1st lieutenant; Drury C. Mitcherson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Albert G. Bacon, captain; Robert H. King, captain; Lewis M. Buford, captain; John J. Roberts, 1st lieutenant; Edward H. Morin, 1st lieutenant; Charles Smock, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Arthur N. Davis, captain; Tho. J. Lovelace, captain; M. J. Davis, 1st lieutenant; Robert O. Gaines, 2d lieutenant; Calvin N. Jarrell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Oliver N. Spencer, captain; Robert Bogle, captain; Percival P. Oldershaw, 1st lieutenant; David M. Oglesby, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Newton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Isaac Miller, captain; Elisha Baker, captain; W. H. Burghardt, 1st lieutenant; Leonard Pearler, 2d lieutenant; Wm. T. Buckner, 2d lieutenant; John C. Corey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

J. Speed Peay, captain; Tho. C. Foreman, captain; L. L. Drown, captain; Edward W. Ward, captain; William Starling, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Coyle, 1st lieutenant; John Weist, 1st lieutenant; A. J. Gillett, 2d lieutenant; Garnett Duncan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Lewis Wolfley, captain; James Beggs, captain; Frederick Overbury, 1st lieutenant; Edward H. Morin, 2d lieutenant; James T. Leavy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

George F. Mercer, captain; John M. Thomas, captain; Lewis R. Dunn, 1st lieutenant; Peter S. Bruner, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Aaron C. Shacklett, captain; Francis H. Crosby, captain; Horace Scott, captain; Frank M. Jolly, 1st lieutenant; William Waters, 1st lieutenant; Samuel C. Chalfant, 2d lieutenant; Charles Blanford, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

John P. Cummings, captain; W. W. Hester, 1st lieutenant; W. W. Weatherholt, 1st lieutenant; Wm. R. Gardner, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Geo. F. White, captain; A. G. Sloo, captain; Benjamin Johnson, 1st lieutenant.

The Third Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Calhoon, Ky., under Col. James S. Jackson; mustered into the United States service on the 13th day of December, 1861, by Maj. W. H. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—FOURTH REGIMENT.

Jesse Bayles, colonel; resigned April 14, 1863.

G. Glay Smith, colonel; promoted brigadier-general Volunteers, June 11, 1862.

Wickliffe Cooper, colonel; promoted colonel April 5, 1863.

Jacob Ruckstuhl, lieutenant-colonel; resigned May 8, 1863.

Llewllyn Gwynne, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major Aug. 10, 1863.

John F. Gunkel, major; resigned Feb. 3, 1863.

Sidney S. Lyon, major; promoted from captain, Company F, Aug. 13, 1863.

Moses C. Bayles, adjutant; mustered out April 14, 1862.

George K. Speed, adjutant; promoted captain Company G Nov. 7, 1863.

Chas. Kurfiss, regimental quartermaster; mustered out of service.

Chas. H. Swift, regimental quartermaster; transferred to Fourth Kentucky Veteran Cavalry.

Saml. L. Adams, surgeon; resigned Sept. 20, 1862.

Henry Mallory, surgeon; resigned July 10, 1863.

Chas. H. Butler, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon Oct. 1, 1863.

David P. Middleton, asst. surgeon; resigned April 10, 1862.

J. P. Bachman, asst. surgeon; transferred to Fourth Kentucky Veteran Cavalry.

Mathew N. Lasley, chaplain; resigned April 9, 1862.

COMPANY A.

Levi Chilson; captain; William D. Hooker, captain; Joseph A. Cowell, captain; William J. Hunter, 1st lieutenant; James Barnes, 2d lieutenant: Basil N. Hobbs, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

John Kurfiss, captain; Adam Rogers, captain; Henry Tanner, 1st lieutenant; John Feitsch, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Charles L. Unthank, captain; Sylvester W. Raplee, captain; John M. Bacon, captain; James O'Donnell, 1st lieutenant; William J. Killmore, 1st lieutenant; William M. Nichols, 2d lieutenant; A. G. Rosengarten, 2d lieutenant; James Hines, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

George Welling, captain; William J. Barnett, captain; Frank N. Sheets, 1st lieutenant; John B.

Lee, 1st lieutenant; James A. Kemp, 2d lieutenant; John P. Brown, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Nelson B. Church, captain; Sidney Lyons, captain; Basil N. Hobbs, captain; Spencer Cooper, captain; John D. Bird, 1st lieutenant; Thomas P. Harnot, 1st lieutenant; Wm. G. Milton, 1st lieutenant; Abel R. Church, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Henry A. Schaeffer, captain; Leopold Preuss, captain; James O'Donnell, captain; Max Cohu, 1st lieutenant; Henry G. Waller, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Casper Blume, captain; John Sailer, captain; George K. Speed, captain; William Shriver, 1st lieutenant; William H. McKinney, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Hoffman, 2d lieutenant; Rodolph Curtis, 2d lieutenant; George Rothchild, 1st sergeant.

COMPANY H.

Patrick W. McGowan, captain; John F. Weston, captain; Isaac Burch, 1st lieutenant: Lewis Ryan, 1st lieutenant; John Burke, 2d lieutenant.

The Fourth Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Louisville, Ky., under Col. Jesse Bayles, mustered into the United States service on the 24th day of Dec. 1861, by Capt. Bankhead, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—FIFTH REGIMENT.

David R. Haggard, colonel; mustered out March 24, 1863, on account of disability.

Wm. P. Sanders, colonel; died of wounds received in action at Campbell's Station, Tenn., November 20, 1863.

Oliver L. Baldwin, colonel; promoted from major 2d Kentucky Infantry; resigned March 24, 1865.

Isaac Scott, lieutenant-colonel; resigned March 9, 1863.

William T. Hoblitzell, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from captain, Company I, 2d Kentucky Cavalry, March 10, 1863.

Michael H. Owsley, major; resigned Sept. 5, 1862.

Thomas C. Winfrey, major; promoted major December 4, 1861.

John Q. Owsley, major; promoted major; resigned Aug, 12, 1863.

Christopher T. Cheek, major; promoted from captain Company B.

James L. Wharton, major; promoted from captain Company A.

Hugh Mulholland, surgeon; resigned April 11, 1863.

William Forrester, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon April 12, 1863.

Marcellus Baugh, chaplain; resigned Dec. 22, 1862.

William B. Chrisler, chaplain; transferred to 3d Kentucky Cavalry January, 1865.

Jacob B. Mitchell, asst. surgeon; promoted surgeon 12th Tennessee Cavalry.

William T. Owsley, asst surgeon; mustered out June, 1862.

John H. C. Sandridge, adjutant; killed in action March 10, 1865, at Monroe's Cross Roads, N. C.

William D. Mitchell, adjutant; detached from regiment before muster in.

John T. Farris, regimental quartermaster, promoted from sergeant 125th Illinois Infantry.

James H. McKee, regimental quartermaster; promoted from sergeant Company D.

Andrew T. Vincent, regimental quartermaster; promoted from private Company A.

Patrick M. Conly, regimental commissary; promoted from sergeant Company A.

George E. Willett, regimental commissary.

COMPANY A.

Hal. Palmer, captain; James L. Wharton, captain; Thomas A. Elkin, captain; James V. Conrad, 1st lieutenant; James Funk, 2d lieutenant; Francis B. McAllister, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James T. A. J. Duncan, captain; Christopher T. Cheek, captain; Andrew Offutt, captain; Jonathan S. Harlen, 1st lieutenant; Henry D. Gorham, 1st lieutenant; John Right, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

John Q. Owsley, captain; Samuel Martin, captain; John D. Smith, captain; Leonidas S. Sullivan, 1st lieutenant; Wily S. Holland, 1st lieutenant; Granville B. McGee, 2d lieutenant; George M. Vandever, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

William W. Bradshaw, captain; Robert Higginbottom, captain; Edwin Vincent, 1st lieutenant; Andrew J. Jones, 1st lieutenant; Edward Hughes, 2d lieutenant; Edward Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

John A. P. Glore, captain; Robert Story, 1st lieutenant; Abijah C. Riddle, 2d lieutenant; Isaac S. Bow, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Daniel W. Claywell, captain; Joseph C. Hill, captain; James W. Lawless, captain; Christopher T. Cheek, 1st lieutenant; Robert Higginbottom, 1st lieutenant; John W. Baker, 1st lieutenant; William D. Baugh, 2d lieutenant; Rufus F. Thorn, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John R. Poindexter, captain; John B. Riggs, captain; Elias C. Keen, 1st lieutenant; John Brown, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Michael B. Freeman, captain; Fleming Farris, captain; Richard B. Freeman, 1st lieutenant; John A. Burk, 1st lieutenant; Jas. W. Lawless, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John L. Carter, captain; Asa C. Wells, captain; Doctor G. Shepherd, 1st lieutenant; Hiram Campbell, 2d lieutenant; William H. Bryan, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John B. Page, captain; John W. Forrester, captain; James W. Strode, 1st lieutenant; Fleming Farris, 1st lieutenant; Andrew Offutt, 1st lieutenant; James W. Lawless, 1st lieutenant; Charles Gill, 1st lieutenant; Joseph G. Hardin, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifth Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Camp Sandidge, Gallatin, Tenn., under Col. David R. Haggard, and mustered into the service March 31, 1862, by Maj. W. H. Sidell, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—SIXTH REGIMENT.

Dennis J. Halisy, colonel; killed in action near Newmarket, Ky., Dec. 31, 1862.

Lewis D. Watkins, colonel; promoted to brevet brigadier-general June 24, 1864.

Reuben Munday, lieutenant-colonel; promoted lieutenant-colonel Dec. 11, 1861.

Wm. P. Roper, lieutenant-colonel; promoted major, then lieutenant-colonel.

Lewis A. Gratz, major.

Wm. H. Fidler, major; perished on steamer Sultana April 28, 1865, near Memphis, Tenn.

Walter F. Stafford, major; promoted major March 25, 1863.

Hugh B. Kelly, adjutant.

Jas. R. Meagher, adjutant; promoted from 1st lieutenant Company K.

Geo. W. McMillan, surgeon.

Wm. H. Newman, surgeon; honorably discharged May 1, 1863.

Levan J. Keeler, surgeon; promoted from asst. surgeon June 13, 1863.

John Drye, surgeon; promoted from captain Company G.

Chas. B. Chapman, asst. surgeon.

Milton C. Clark, chaplain; discharged on account of wounds received in action July 8, 1864.

Geo. Sambrock, regimental quartermaster.

Lee R. Yates, regimental commissary, resigned March 1, 1864.

COMPANY A.

Edwin K. Stephens, captain; Walter F. Stafford, captain; David L. Cook, captain; Robert A. Kerr, 1st lieutenant; Jerome S. Hale, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

William P. Roper, captain; James H. Coffman, captain; Archie P. McLeod, 1st lieutenant; Samuel Kenbrough, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Chas. Milward, captain; Jas. C. Martin, captain; Scott H. Robinson, captain; Benj. F. Sheets, 1st lieutenant; James Robinson, 2d lieutenant; Wm. C. Hunter, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John B. Buchanan, captain; Isaac Taylor, captain; Owen W. Ballew, 1st lieutenant; Andrew J. Henderson, 2d lieutenant; Allen K. Collins, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

James C. Dunham, 1st lieutenant; Stephen H. Shiplar, 1st lieutenant; Philip N. Heath, 1st lieutenant; Henry Tachua, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Perry G. Lanham, captain; Warren H. Mead, 1st lieutenant; Daniel Cheatham, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John Drye, captain; Levin M. Drye, captain; Henry S. Robson, 1st lieutenant; James J. Surber, 1st lieutenant; John T. Belden, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George W. Craven, captain; G. J. Brothers, 1st lieutenant; William Murphy, 1st lieutenant; Isaac Graham, 2d lieutenant; Frank M. Vowels, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Edward Penn, captain; Samuel W. Crandell, 1st lieutenant; Elijah Bright, 1st lieutenant; Daniel M. Richmond, 2d lieutenant; James G. McAdams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

James M. McCown, captain; James R. Meagher, 1st lieutenant; James D. Wilson, 1st lieutenant; James P. Conley, 1st sergeant.

COMPANY L.

Otto Ernst, captain; Albert M. Green, captain; Edwin R. Phillips, captain; Christopher C. Bybee, 1st lieutenant; Lemuel W. Gee, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Robert H. Brentlinger, captain; George Williams, 1st lieutenant; George W. Richardson, 2d lieutenant; Samuel R. Hartman, 2d lieutenant; John Fowler, 2d lieutenant.

The First Battalion of the Sixth Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Camp Irvine, Jefferson Co., Ky., under Maj. Reuben Munday, and was mustered into the United States service December 23, 1861, by Maj. W. H. Sidell.

CAVALRY—SEVENTH REGIMENT.

Leonidas Metcalfe, colonel; never mustered into United States service.

John K. Faulkner, colonel; was major till Feb. 9, 1863; then lieutenant-colonel April 2d, 1863.

Thomas T. Vimont, lieutenant-colonel; killed in a quarrel Jan. 16, 1864, at Dandridge, Tenn.

William W. Bradley, lieutenant-colonel; major to Sept. 17, 1864.

William O. Smith, major; resigned Feb. 5, 1863.

Robert Collier, major; was captain Company H to May 29, 1863; resigned Feb. 21, 1865.

Andrew S. Bloom, major.

Charles C. McNeeley, major; was captain of Company B to March 11, 1865; not mustered as major.

William S. Sharp, surgeon; resigned May 8th, 1863.

Charles T. Spillman, surgeon; was asst. surgeon to May 9th, 1863.

Solomon S. Wolff, asst. surgeon; resigned Dec. 14, 1864.

Andrew J. Burnam, asst. surgeon.

John B. Campbell, adjutant; appointed captain and A. Q. M. April 30, 1864.

Felix G. McCrea, adjutant; was quartermaster-sergeant to Dec. 11, 1862; promoted to captain Company G Nov. 14, 1864.

Detmer P. Watson, adjutant; was sergeant-major to Nov. 14, 1864.

John W. Campbell, regimental quartermaster, resigned Feb. 3, 1863.

H. O. Newman, regimental quartermaster; resigned Sept. 22, 1864.

Arthur B. Masoner, regimental quartermaster; resigned May 25, 1865.

Joseph C. Masoner, regimental commissary; promoted from commissary sergeant Feb. 19, 1863.

M. J. W. Ambrose, chaplain; resigned Sept. 6, 1863.

Coleman W. York, chaplain; resigned Feb. 3, 1865.

COMPANY A.

Barnabas T. Hayden, captain; Aaron Lee, 1st lieutenant; Sanford D. Vanpelt, 1st lieutenant; Samuel H. Royce, 2d lieutenant; William Ingram, 2d lieutenant; Henry H. Talbott, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Chas. C. McNeely, captain; Jesse H. Berry, captain; Jno. S. Stodghill, 1st lieutenant; Tho. M. Oden, 1st lieutenant; Wallace W. Gruelle, 1st lieutenant; Jno. T. Hopkins, 1st lieutenant; Geo. M. Sisson, 2d lieutenant; Jas. H. Oden, 2d lieutenant; Dennis Nichols, 1st lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Thomas T. Vimont, captain; James P. Ashley, captain; Augustus H. Trotter, 1st lieutenant; Thomas L. Scott, 1st lieutenant; John H. Sims, 2d lieutenant; Lewis B. Vimont, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

W. W. Bradley, captain; Jesse Bryant, captain; Andrew J. Jones, 1st lieutenant; James P. Roberson, 2d lieutenant; James H. Robey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Benjamin F. Robbins, captain; William A. McGinety, captain; William Hamilton, 1st lieutenant Sidney M. Goshhorn, 1st lieutenant; John P. McGinety, 1st lieutenant; Silas Gohagen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Robert Scott, captain; Felix G. McCrea, captain; James W. Brewer, 1st lieutenant; Robert Chaney, 2d lieutenant; Richard Brewer, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Robert Collier, captain; Jephtha D. Thornton, captain; Edwin H. Walker, 1st lieutenant; William M. Kerby, 1st lieutenant; James L. Baird, 2d lieutenant; Thomas Dunn, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Elihu Price, captain; Seneca Goulding, captain; Mathew R. McDowell, 1st lieutenant; Charles G. Ogden, 1st lieutenant; Thomas E. Willett, 1st lieutenant; Alfred Mitchell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

John E. Burns, captain; Simeon Crane, captain; Curtis R. Beedle, 1st lieutenant; Wilkins Warren, 2d lieutenant: H. McCalla McGee, 2d lieutenant.

Company F, originally recruited by Capt. John E. Burns, was consolidated with Company M.

Company I, originally recruited by Capt. Jesse H. Berry, was consolidated with Company B.

This regiment was organized at Paris, Ky., in August, 1862, under Col. Leonidas Metcalfe, and was mustered into service by Maj. Sitgraves, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—EIGHTH REGIMENT.

Benjamin H. Bristow, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel Apr. 1, 1863.

James H. Holloway, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from major May 1, 1863.

Joseph M. Kennedy, major.

James W. Weatherford, major.

Samuel M. Starling, major; promoted from captain Company M June 1, 1863.

L. Bennett, surgeon.

R. W. Whittington, assistant surgeon.

George F. Penticost, chaplain.

Edward Campbell, quartermaster.

E. C. Spiceland, commissary; promoted from 2d lieutenant Company L June 9, 1863.

Joel. E. Huffman, adjutant.

William A. Speed, sergeant major; appointed from Company H August 4, 1862.

Thomas E. White, quartermaster-sergeant; appointed August 15, 1862.

Henry D. Belden, commissary-sergeant.

John Black, steward; appointed from Company A.

Isaac B. Schoolfield, steward; appointed from Company M Dec. 8, 1862.

Cyrus W. Faulkland, saddler, appointed from Company E Sept. 13, 1862.

Paul A. Neff, bugler; appointed bugler Sept. 13, 1862.

George N. Masks, veterinary surgeon; appointed from Company E May 10, 1863.

James M. Shackelford (transferred), colonel; promoted brigadier-general Jan. 2, 1863.

Wm. S. Ross (transferred), surgeon; resigned May 21, 1863.

John Feland (transferred), quartermaster; resigned March 24, 1863.

John Belden (transferred), commissary; promoted captain Company M June 9, 1862.

James Lunathian (transferred), veterinary surgeon; discharged for disability Apr. 13, 1863.

COMPANY A.

George W. McCullough, captain; Wm. H. Poindexter, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Hardy, 2d lieutenant; James T. Donaldson, Jr., brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Isaac Singleton, captain; Robert F. Yantis, 1st lieutenant; Archibald Carson, 2d lieutenant; James H. Richmond, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Charles M. Whipp, captain; John E. Sharp, 1st lieutenant; Daniel W. Coleman, 2d lieutenant; Royall B. Wilkinson, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Samuel F. Johnson, captain; Presley L. Morehead, 1st lieutenant; Clark E. Ritter, 2d lieutenant; Thomas B. Boyd, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

John A. Arthur, captain; John J. Hollaway, 1st lieutenant; James R. Morin, 1st lieutenant; David R. Lock, 2d lieutenant; George S. Fawkner, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

William F. Hunter, captain; James B. Carson, captain; James M. Combest, 1st lieutenant; John T. Richards, 2d lieutenant; Elijah A. Coppage, 2d lieutenant; Newton J. Smith, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

James M. Morrow, captain; Samuel M. Crandell, 1st lieutenant; Lewis Buckner, 2d lieutenant; Fielding W. Starling, 2d lieutenant; S. B. Reed, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Samuel Allen, captain; Peter P. Brown, 1st lieutenant; Mathew H. Owens, 2d lieutenant; Samuel N. Melton, 2d lieutenant; John Farmer, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

John Dever, captain; John F. Cunningham, 1st lieutenant; William Penn, 2d lieutenant; Felland P. Bland, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

James H. Hudspeth, captain; William A. Sasseen, 1st lieutenant; Richard L. Boulware, 2d lieutenant; William D. Crain, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

Elisha Owens, captain; Robert V. Gunter, captain; Samuel Talley, 1st lieutenant; Joseph S. Richards, 2d lieutenant; Edward C. Spiceland, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

John D. Belden, captain; Daniel S. Parker, captain; John R. Curry, 1st lieutenant; Moses Kinnett, 1st lieutenant; Logan S. McWhorton, 2d lieutenant; Philip T. Hardwick, 2d lieutenant; George Dameron, 2d lieutenant; John B. Brown, sup. 2d lieutenant.

CAVALRY—NINTH REGIMENT.

Richard T. Jacob, colonel.

John Boyle, lieutenant-colonel.

John T. Farris, major; resigned Nov. 10, 1862.

William C. Moreau, major.

George W. Rue, major.

James R. Page, major; resigned Feb. 14, 1863.

John C. Brent, major; promoted from 1st lieutenant Company B Feb. 15, 1863.

Uriah W. Oldham, adjutant; promoted to captain Company F Aug. 18, 1862.

Frank H. Pope, adjutant; resigned May 23, 1863.

Andrew J. Hyter, adjutant; promoted from sergeant-major June 4, 1863.

Charles A. Clarke, regimental quartermaster; resigned Aug. 17, 1862.

W. Rector Gist, regimental quartermaster; promoted from sup. 2d lieutenant Company K Aug. 18, 1862.

Edwin J. Clark, regimental commissary, resigned.

William A. Craig, regimental commissary; promoted from sup. 2d lieutenant Company L.

William Bailey, surgeon.

William H. Botts, assistant surgeon.

B. F. Hungerford, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

Ben. M. Harney, captain; Thos. P. Shanks, 1st lieutenant; Frank H. Pope, 1st lieutenant; Alfred C. Morris, 2d lieutenant; C. Harrison Somerville, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Milton P. Hodges, captain; William A. Smyth, captain; Charles S. Brent, 1st lieutenant; John C. Brent, 1st lieutenant; Green. M. C. Self, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Thomas J. Hardin, captain; Theodric J. Macey, 1st lieutenant; Edward S. Stewart, 2d lieutenant; John C. Jackson, 2d lieutenant; W. Ashton Craig, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

John L. Neal, captain; Thomas M. Dear, 1st lieutenant; Moses A. Dear, 1st lieutenant; John W. Jenkins, 2d lieutenant; Gideon J. Stivers, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Henry J. Sheets, captain; James R. Page, captain; Thomas Mahoney, 1st lieutenant; Thomas M. Page, 2d lieutenant; Richard H. Parrant, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Uriah W. Oldham, captain; John G. Gillipsie, 1st lieutenant; Samuel D. McMeekin, 1st lieutenant; Jackson Armstrong, 2d lieutenant; Lilburn A. Black, 2d lieutenant; Edwin J. Clark, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John D. Gore, captain; Charles W. Quiggins, 1st lieutenant; Dennis W. Gore, 2d lieutenant; Frank Hewitt, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Joseph N. Luckett, captain; Samuel Porter, 1st lieutenant; S. B. Colgrave, 2d lieutenant; John A. Mobley, 2d lieutenant; Francis Steadman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Harvey J. Burns, captain; Cincinnatus Hendren, 1st lieutenant; Turner W. Bottom, 1st lieutenant; John W. Edwards, 2d lieutenant; John D. Hale, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William Edwards, captain; James P. Sharp, 1st lieutenant; William Craig, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

William M. Searcy, captain; Benjamin L. Boston, captain; Charles K. Elder, 1st lieutenant; Wiley Searcy, 2d lieutenant; W. Rector Gist, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

William G. Connor, captain; Wm. W. Edwards, 1st lieutenant; H. C. Rodenbaugh, 1st lieutenant; Samuel E. Bratton, 2d lieutenant.

This regiment was organized at Eminence, under Col. Richard T. Jacob, and mustered into the United States service on the 22d day of August, 1862, by Maj. L. Sitgraves, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—TENTH REGIMENT.

Joshua Tevis, colonel; resigned Nov. 17, 1862.

Charles J. Walker, colonel; resigned Sept. 1, 1863.

R. R. Maltby, lieutenant-colonel; commissioned Aug. 22, 1862.

James L. Foley, major; commissioned Sept. 9, 1862.

William A. Doniphan, major; resigned March 17, 1863.

John Mason Brown, major; commissioned Oct. 27, 1862.

James M. Taylor, major; promoted to major March 18, 1863.

Ridgly Wilson, adjutant; resigned June 28, 1863.

John N. Wallingford, adjutant; promoted adjutant June 29, 1863.

George G. Fetter, quartermaster.

John F. Moore, commissary; commissioned Aug. 15, 1862.

Washington Fithian, surgeon; commissioned Aug. 12, 1862.

J. F. Fleming, surgeon; commissioned Sept. 20, 1862.

Samuel Maguire, asst. surgeon.

James P. Hendrick, chaplain; commissioned Sept. 5, 1862.

COMPANY A.

Newton S. Dudley, captain; Robert G. Ringo, captain; James M. Taylor, captain; Charles H. Burns, 1st lieutenant; Thomas A. Jones, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Charles S. Rogers, captain; Henry W. Caldwell, 1st lieutenant; Burton W. Darnall, 2nd lieutenant, George A. Trumbo, sup. 2d lieut.

COMPANY C.

William E. Rice, captain; Andrew T. Wood, 1st lieutenant; William T. Berry, 2d lieutenant; Jno. N. Wallingford, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Jno. G. Rogers, captain; George H. Wheeler, 1st lieutenant; Wm. B. Shockley, 2d lieutenant; John F. Moore, 2d lieutenant; C. J. McClelland, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Wm. D. Ratcliffe, captain; Joseph T. Lokey, 1st lieutenant; Henry E. Ware, 1st lieutenant; Theodore B. Harlan, 2d lieutenant; Newton Devore, sup. 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Frank Mott, captain; Simeon Sumpter, 1st lieutenant; Casper Castner, 1st lieutenant; James M. Burk, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Milton Evans, captain; Andrew J. Farow, 1st lieutenant; James B. Brewer, 2d lieutenant; Daniel Hendrickson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Charles Nute, captain; James C. Bierbower, 1st lieutenant; Samuel B. Kelley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Henry C. White, captain; Lewis M. Clarke, captain; George L. McCord, 1st lieutenant; James W. Steward, 2d lieutenant; Joseph T. Cottingham, brevet 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John D. Russell, captain; Jacob Nelson, captain; David L. Evans, 1st lieutenant; George F. Hertel, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

John M. Gray, captain; Thomas Barber, 1st lieutenant; John R. Taber, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Francis M. Rathburn, captain; John A. Thompson, 1st lieutenant; James M. Blackburn, 2d lieutenant.

CAVALRY—ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

Alexander W. Holeman, colonel; resigned Sept. 26, 1864.

William E. Riley, lieutenant-colonel; resigned July 18, 1863.

Archibald J. Alexander, lieutenant-colonel; resigned June 9, 1864.

Milton Graham, lieutenant-colonel.

William O. Boyle, major; killed in action Dec. 18, 1864, at Marion, Va.

Duvall English, major.

Frederick Slater, major; promoted to major from captain Company E.

L. L. Pinkerton, surgeon; resigned March 22, 1863.

James H. Peyton, surgeon; resigned March 8, 1864.

James F. Peyton, surgeon; promoted surgeon March 9, 1864.

John F. Rodgers, asst. surgeon; discharged to date from appointment.

Thomas W. Hewitt, asst. surgeon.

Wm. P. Pierce, adjutant; discharged Aug. 6, 1864.

Harry Gee, adjutant; promoted from sergeant-major to adjutant June 23, 1864.

Stephen Stone, quartermaster; resigned March 27, 1863.

Wm. M. Simpson, quartermaster; promoted quartermaster June 7, 1863.

Munroe B. Pulliam, commissary; captured at Philadelphia, Tenn., Oct. 20, 1863.

Louis Bien Kamp, commissary; promoted commissary Jan 23, 1865.

John Taffe, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

John G. Pond, captain; Wm. P. Pierce, captain; Reuben F. Scott, 1st lieutenant; John M. Cotton, 2d lieutenant; Howard Warren, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James A. Johnson, captain; Presly F. Hansbrough, captain; George J. Burgess, 2d lieutenant; Wm. M. Simpson, sup. 2d lieutenant; Abraham W. Stone, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Jacob Cozatt, captain; Samuel P. Debaun, 1st lieutenant; Charles H. Edwards, 1st lieutenant; Wm. H. Norton, 2d lieutenant; John J. Rose, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

W. H. Bell, captain; James W. Robinson, 1st lieutenant; John W. Burton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Frederick Slater, captain; Edward H. Green, captain; Robert Q. Terrill, 1st lieutenant; Solomon Huffman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Robert S. Curd, captain; Benjamin W. Blincoe, 1st lieutenant; John H. Dickerson, 1st lieutenant; John J. Curtis, 1st lieutenant; Harrison F. Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Joseph Lawson, captain; Allen Purdy, 1st lieutenant; Joseph M. Willerman, 1st lieutenant; John H. Skinner, brevted 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

George H. Wheeler, captain; Daniel E. W. Smith, 1st lieutenant; George W. Taylor, 2d lieutenant; B. H. Niemeyer, 2d lieutenant.

Companies I, K, L, M of this regiment, were transferred to the Twelth Kentucky Cavalry, per S. O. No. 70, headquarters Department of Cumberland, dated June 23, 1865.

The Eleventh Kentucky Cavalry was mustered into the United States service on the 22d day of September, at Louisville, Ky., by Capt. V. N. Smith, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—TWELFTH REGIMENT.

Quintus C. Shanks, colonel; commissioned Oct. 11, 1862.

Eugene W. Critttenden, colonel; promoted from captain 4th United States Cavalry.

Alexander W. Holeman, lieutenant-colonel; promoted colonel 11th Kentucky Cavalry Nov. 2, 1863.

James T. Bramlette, lieutenant-colonel; commissioned Nov. 9, 1863.

Nathaniel L. Lightfoot, major; commissioned Oct. 11, 1862.

Wm. R. Kinney, major; commissioned Oct. 11, 1862.

Ira Hart Stout, major; promoted Oct. 11, 1862.

Julius N. Delfosse, major; killed in action at Philadelphia, Tenn,, Oct. 20, 1863.

James B. Harrison, major; promoted from captain of Company B Nov. 17, 1863.

George F. Barnes, major; transferred to 12th Kentucky Cavalry.

Garland J. Blewitt, adjutant; was commissioned Aug. 16, 1862.

Zeno B. Freeman, adjutant; resigned Dec. 23, 1863.

William Noland, adjutant; promoted from commissary sergeant.

Thomas E. Tyler, adjutant; promoted from 1st sergeant July 30, 1865.

James A. Thomas, regimental quartermaster; commissioned Aug. 19, 1862.

John T. Feaman, regimental quartermaster, promoted regimental quartermaster April 11, 1863.

Daniel J. King, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster June 17, 1865.

Charles S. Clary, commissary; commissioned Oct. 11, 1862.

Erasmus O. Brown, surgeon; mustered in to date Sept. 12, 1862.

Thomas J. Swan, surgeon; resigned May 11, 1865.

Samuel B. Littlepage, asst. surgeon; hospital steward from August 10, 1862, to Jan. 30, 1863.

Horace Fletcher, asst. surgeon; commissioned Oct. 25, 1862.

A. T. Bennett, asst. surgeon; commissioned March 6, 1865.

John Pell, chaplain; commissioned Oct. 11,1862.

COMPANY A.

Andrew G. Hamilton, captain; Thomas J. Cherry, captain; James B. Harrison, captain; James L. Hix, captain; Moses P. Gott, 1st lieutenant; Edgar M. Gwynn, 1st lieutenant; Hiram D. Roberts, 1st lieutenant; John H. Stone, 2d lieutenant; David J. Block, 2d lieutenant; Cincinnatus Condit, 2d lieutenant; William F. Denton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Wm. P, Pierce, captain; Wm. H. Ritchey, 1st lieutenant; Benj. F. Lewis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

George W. Webb, captain; Henry A. Denton, captain; Robert Karnes, captain; Thomas S. Coleman, 1st lieutenant; Isaac T. Montgomery, 1st lieutenant; Samuel R. Jones, 2d lieutenant; Louis Bergman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Mason Hedrick, captain; Jno. L. Woodward, captain; Stephen D. Dial, captain; Robert Karnes, captain; Felix G. Bannon, 1st lieutenant; Obediah B. Chapman, 1st lieutenant; Europe F. Littlepage, 1st lieutenant; Thomas B. Perrigo, 1st lieutenant; Wm. K. Wallace, 1st lieutenant; Porter A. Hudson, 2d lieutenant; Thomas Lloyd, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Henry M. Bennett, captain; Henry F. Samuels, captain; Newton Smock, 1st lieutenant; Nathaniel M. Priest, 1st lieutenant; Charles B. Mitchell, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Silvinas B. Johnson, captain; Adam Elms, captain; Samuel Baker, captain; Simon P. Morgan, 1st lieutenant; Hiram D. Roberts, 1st lieutenant; Sidney C. Swift, 1st lieutenant; David H. Baker, 1st lieutenant; James A. Anderson, 2d lieutenant; William T. Flora, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

John W. Hill, captain; Samuel E. Hill, captain; John H. Quisenberry, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Cullen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

W. L Payne, captain; Benjamin Duvall, captain; Geo. W. Bullitt, captain; Guy D. Howe, 1st lieutenant; Amos Lippincott, 1st lieutenant; William H. Hines, 2d lieutenant; James Butler, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Charles Bachmann, captain; Merrit M. Peirce, 1st lieutenant; William H. Bunting, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

John E. Williamson, captain; Wm. Mangan, captain; Elias J. Pendick, 1st lieutenant; Samuel B. McAfee, 1st lieutenant; Henry H. Hamilton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

John H. Starks, captain; William G. Hurt, captain; Benj. K. Stephenson, 1st lieutenant; William D. James, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Thomas P. Carter, captain; Levi Linn, 1st lieutenant; Charles H. Turner, 1st lieutenant; William D. Lee, 2d lieutenant.

The Twelfth Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry was organized in the winter of 1862–63. A portion of the regiment was mustered into the United States service on the 17th day of November, 1862, at Owensboro, Ky., by W. B. Royall, captain 5th United States Cavalry; the remainder of the regiment was mustered in at Munfordsville, Ky., February 12, 1863, by Capt. T. E. Noell.

CAVALRY—THIRTEENTH REGIMENT.

James W. Weatherford, colonel; promoted from lieutenant-colonel Dec. 23, 1863.

John A. Morrison, lieutenant-colonel.

Harrison M. Hurt, major; promoted from captain Company E December 23, 1863.

Ferdinand D. Rigney, major.

George W. Sweeney, major; on duty as major from Oct. 28, 1863.

Daniel S. Parker adjutant.

Fielding P. Bland, regimental quartermaster.

George F. Cunningham, commissary; cashiered by order No. 90, Department of the Ohio, dated Oct. 28, 1864.

Lafayette Bennett, surgeon.

Wm. D. Stone, assistant surgeon; absent, sick, since Dec. 1, 1864.

Joseph S. Harper, assistant surgeon.

Robert F. Mills, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

James M. Giboney, captain; Benj. F. Bransom, 1st lieutenant; Joseph W. Cartwright, 2d lieutenant; David Murphy, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Asa Bryant, captain; Napoleon B. Portman, 1st lieutenant; Strother Bowman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Thomas Wood, captain; Richard H. McWhorter, 1st lieutenant; Mathew H. Turner, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Thomas Watson, captain; Jesse C. Newell, 1st lieutenant; George T. Rigney, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Harrison M. Hurt, captain; William D. Lowe, captain; James M. Stephenson, 1st lieutenant; R. W. Chapman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

James R. Howard, captain; Elza C. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Martin Hurt, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Samuel M. Crandall, captain; James H. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Jesse A. Skeen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

William M. Northrip, captain; John E. Murrah, 1st lieutenant; William G. Gabbart, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Edmund Wilkerson, captain; John A. Stone, 1st lieutenant; Reuben Ard, 2d lieutenant; Moses Sweeney, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Nathan G. Wells, captain; George S. Hughes, 1st lieutenant; William D. Wolford, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

John R. Curry, captain; Black Hughs, 1st lieutenant, Francis Montgomery, 1st lieutenant; James M. Williams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

George W. Penn, captain; John Ellis, 1st lieutenant; Franklin L. Shipman, 2d lieutenant.

The Thirteenth Kentucky Cavalry was organized at Columbia, Ky., under Col. J. W. Weatherford, and mustered into the United States service on the 23d day of December, 1863, by Capt. S. M. Letcher, United States mustering officer.

CAVALRY—FOURTEENTH REGIMENT.

Henry C. Lilly, colonel; promoted from private Company B Feb. 13, 1863.

Andrew Herd, lieutenant-colonel; promoted from captain Company E Feb. 20, 1863.

Joseph W. Stivers, major; promoted from 2d lieutenant to major August 21, 1862.

Alfred Smith, major.

John C. Eversole, major.

R. T. Williams, major.

Frank B. Tucker, adjutant; resigned August 28, 1862.

John H. Massie, adjutant; resigned April 23, 1863.

Tho. C. Reed, adjutant; was commissary to August 24, 1863.

Alex. M. Barnes, regimental quartermaster; resigned August 28, 1862.

Lewis M. Ricketts, regimental quartermaster.

Saml. W. Hatten, commissary; promoted from sergeant major Oct. 2, 1863.

Washington Fithian, surgeon; resigned March 21, 1863.
James P. Turner, surgeon.
James W. Hensley, assistant surgeon.
Mathew G. Jones, assistant surgeon.
Wm. F. Cole, sergeant-major; promoted from sergeant Company E Sept. 1, 1863.
A. C. Lanehart, quartermaster sergeant; promoted from sergeant Company F Jan. 1, 1864.
Hezekiah Creech, commissary sergeant.
Stephen P. Wallace, saddler sergeant.
Elias Smith, hospital steward.
Robert Pendley, hospital steward; promoted from private Company E January 1, 1864.

COMPANY A.

Fountain Finnell, captain; John W. Ogden, 1st lieutenant; Joseph T. Smart, 1st lieutenant; William P. Schooler, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Wm. D. Craig, captain; Mason C. Miller, 1st lieutenant; Robert A. Thomas, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Seldon F. Bowman, captain; Clayton C. Bell, 1st lieutenant; Zachariah W. Owen, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Samuel McKee, captain; Allen H. Rupard, 1st lieutenant; James Kinnard, 2d lieutenant; Henry C. Rainey, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Sylvester Isaacs, captain; Andrew Herd, captain; William A. Smith, 1st lieutenant; Abraham H. Wilder, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Jefferson Hall, captain; Abraham W. Baker, 1st lieutenant; David W. Gentry, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

Jackson H. Jacobs, captain; Jones A. Crawford, 1st lieutenant; Pleasant Gillum, 2d lieutenant; James H. Armstrong, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Hiram Shons, captain; Moses P. Daniel, 1st lieutenant; James M. Williams, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Thomas Amis, captain; John Amis, 1st lieutenant; Wiley Amis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

William Strong, captain; Edward Marcum, 1st lieutenant; Nimrod McIntosh, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

William B. Eversole, captain; Thomas Johnson, 1st lieutenant; Abner Eversole, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

Harrison Fields, captain; James Eversole, 1st lieutenant; Shadrach Stacey, Jr., 2d lieutenant.

The Fourteenth Kentucky Cavalry was organized in the fall of 1862, under Col. H. C. Lilly. Companies A, B, C, and D were mustered in on the 6th day of November, 1862, at Mt. Sterling, Ky., by Capt. S. E. Noell. Companies E, F, G, H, I, K, L, and M were mustered in at Irvine, Ky., on the 13th of February, 1863.

CAVALRY—FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

Gabriel Netter, lieutenant-colonel; killed in action at Owensboro, Ky., Sept. 19, 1862.
Albert P. Henry, lieutenant-colonel; captured June 29, 1863, at Spring Creek, Tenn.
Willia Waller, major.
John W. Lockhead, adjutant; promoted adjutant Dec. 16, 1862.
Thomas Alexander, regimental quartermaster; promoted regimental quartermaster Dec. 4, 1862.
Patrick H. Darby, regimental commissary; promoted sergeant-major May 1, 1863; promoted 1st lieutenant and regimental commissary June 15th, 1863.
Selathiel Medaris, assistant surgeon; discharged April 25, 1863.
James O. Castilow, quartermaster-sergeant.
Eugene Dodd, commissary-sergeant.

COMPANY A.

Samuel Duncan, captain; Henry W. Rose, 1st lieutenant; George F. Barnes, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

Samuel M. Purcell, captain; Isham S. Mallory, 1st lieutenant; Thomas Alexander, 1st lieutenant; Francis M. Gilliland, 1st lieutenant; James Clement, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Jonathan Belt, captain; Fountain P. Hawkins, 1st lieutenant; William B. Bush, 2d lieutenant; Houston L. Keesee, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

Wm. C. Frizzell, captain; Axel Nyberg, captain; Morgan T. Williams, 1st lieutenant; Robert L. Lockhead, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Lewis A. Hanson, captain; John B. Key, 1st lieutenant; Joseph F. Peck, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

Edward L. Maxwell, captain; Chas. J. Akerstrom, 1st lieutenant; Joseph A. Gates, 2d lieutenant.

The Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry was organized in the fall of 1862, and mustered into the United States service at Paducah, Ky., by Capt. Noell, United States army, on the 6th day of October, 1862. Gabriel Netter was commissioned lieutenant-colonel, July 25, 1862, and was killed at Owensboro, Ky. A. P. Henry was afterward, on February 14, 1863, commissioned lieutenant-colonel, and entered on duty as such March 5, 1863, remaining in command until his capture at Spring Creek, Tenn., June 29th, 1863, when Maj. Willia Waller became the senior officer with the regiment, and commanded it on its muster out of service at Paducah, Ky., October 6, 1863. Company C, of this regiment, was not mustered out until Oct. 29, 1863.

The Fifteenth Cavalry was chiefly engaged in scouting through the First District and western portion of the State of Kentucky, and was for some time the only protection afforded to the loyal citizens of that section. It sustained losses in numerous skirmishes, and at Owensboro, Ky., and the battle of Spring Creek, Tenn.

CAVALRY—SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.

Samuel F. Johnson, colonel.
Thomas W. Campbell, lieutenant-colonel.
John B. Tyler, major.
Nelson C. Lawrence, major.
Thomas J. Lovelace, major.
David R. Murray, adjutant.
Virgil A. Jones, regimental quartermaster.
Robert Brodie, regimental quartermaster.
Thomas J. Buchanan, regimental commissary.
William Randolph, surgeon.
Charles F. Hart, surgeon.
Joseph T. Harper, assistant surgeon.
Robert Y. Thomas, chaplain.

COMPANY A.

James C. Bacon, captain; Junius R. Clift, 1st lieutenant; Robert R. Davis, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY B.

James C. Wilson, captain; John M. Cranor, 1st lieutenant; Robert D. Chatman, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY C.

Stephen M. Overby, captain; John C. Young, 1st lieutenant; David Jackson, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY D.

James H. Lile, captain; Thomas Blythe, 1st lieutenant; Jack S. Bradley, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY E.

Ed. Hartee, captain; James M. Young, 1st lieutenant; George W. Tatum, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY F.

John Alsop, captain; B. V. Tyler, 1st lieutenant; Wm. F. Richards, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY G.

J. H. Sturdivant, captain; Wm. J. McGhee, 1st lieutenant; Alfred V. Townes, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY H.

Wm. H. Lawrence, captain; Thomas M. Lewis, 1st lieutenant; George W. Shelton, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY I.

Charles E. Van Pelt, captain; Finis H. Little, 1st lieutenant; Uriah M. Brown, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY K.

Washington C. Shannon, captain; William L. Travis, 1st lieutenant; A. Wood Pollard, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY L.

Elisha F. Lemen, captain; John G. Daniel, 1st lieutenant; Wm. C. Bourland, 2d lieutenant.

COMPANY M.

John R. Reno, captain; David C. Goad, 1st lieutenant; Wm. H. Roark, 2d lieutenant.

The following is taken from the official records on file in the adjutant-general's office:

The Seventeenth Kentucky Cavalry was organized in the winter of 1864–65. A portion of the regiment was mustered into the United States service by Lieut. Russell, in December, 1864, at Russellville, Ky.; a portion by Capt. Smith, at Owensboro, Ky., in April, 1865; the remainder was mustered in at Louisville, Ky., in the months of January, February and March. Thos. W. Campbell, was commissioned lieutenant-colonel, March 22, 1865. Saml. F. Johnson was commissioned colonel, April 25, 1865. The regiment did good service in the southern portion of the State and along the line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, guarding that great military thoroughfare. It was finally mustered out at Louisville, Ky., on the 20th day of September, 1865. It was engaged in numerous skirmishes, in which loss was sustained, beside the battles at Hopkinsville, Bunker Hill, and in Lyon County, Ky.

The officers of this command having failed to furnish any memorandum or official history of its marches and the battles and skirmishes in which it was engaged, a more extended notice of the same cannot be given.

KENTUCKY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—BATTERY A.

David C. Stone, captain; dismissed May 4, 1863, disability, removed by the President.

Theodore S. Thomasson, captain; promoted captain May 26, 1863, mustered out Nov. 15, 1865.

Alphonso W. Roath, 1st lieutenant; resigned Nov. 29, 1861.

John H. Mellen, 1st lieutenant; honorably discharged for disability Oct. 22, 1864.

Robert A. Moffett, 1st lieutenant; resigned May 2, 1864.

John D. Irwin, 1st lieutenant; resigned March 1, 1865.

William H. Sinclare, 1st lieutenant; dismissed July 3, 1865.

John H. Landwehr, 1st lieutenant; mustered out Nov. 14, 1865.

George W. Clark, 2d lieutenant; resigned Feb. 6, 1862.

William R. Irwin, 2d lieutenant; died in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 15, 1864.

Frederick R. Sanger, 2d lieutenant; mustered out Nov 15, 1865.

FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—BATTERY B.

John W. Hewett, captain; mustered out with battery, Nov. 15, 1864.

George W. Nell, 1st lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 15, 1864.

Albion A. Ellsworth, 1st lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 15, 1864.

William H. Spence, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 15, 1864.

William N. Snail, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 15, 1864.

Mathew H. Turner, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 15, 1864.

FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—BATTERY C.

John W. Neville, captain; mustered out with battery Nov. 14, 1864.

Charles Bradley, 1st lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 14, 1864.

Hugh S. Rawle, 1st lieutenant.

Richard W. McReynolds, 2d lieutenant; veteran on detached service.

Thomas J. Walters, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery Nov. 14, 1864.

FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—BATTERY E.

John J. Hawes, captain; mustered out Jan. 20, 1865.

L. E. P. Bush, captain; resigned June 12, 1865.

Samuel A. Miller, captain; mustered out with battery Aug. 1, 1865.

Frank G. Clark, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery Aug. 1, 1865.

LIGHT ARTILLERY—FIRST INDEPENDENT BATTERY.

Daniel W. Glassie, captain; mustered out with battery July 10, 1865.

Seth J. Simmonds, captain; cashiered.

James W. Kerr, 1st lieutenant; mustered out July 10, 1865, with battery.

George Hattersley, 1st lieutenant; mustered out March 17, 1865.

Robert C. Steele, 1st lieutenant; discharged for disability, Sept. 5, 1864.

Arthur Erenburg, 1st lieutenant; mustered out May 15, 1865; wounded at Antietam.

James W. Conine, 1st lieutenant; promoted colonel 5th U. S. C. T., Nov. 23, 1863.

Leonard Magnos, 1st lieutenant; dropped from rolls June 6, 1861.

Frederick A. Danie, 2d lieutenant; dismissed Nov. 17, 1862.

Hamilton B. White, 2d lieutenant; promoted captain 10th Ohio Battery, January 10, 1862.

Robert Johnson, 2d lieutenant; mustered out with battery July 10, 1865.

Battery A was organized in July, 1861, at Camp Joe Holt, Ind., by Capt. David C. Stone, and mustered into the United States service Sept. 27,1861. After three years of active and distinguished service in the Army of the Cumberland, this battery veteranized at Nashville, Tenn., in February, 1864. After the defeat of Gen. Hood in December, 1864, the battery was ordered to Texas, where it remained until October, when it returned to Louisville, and was mustered out of service Nov. 15, 1865.

Battery B was organized at Camp Dick Robinson, Ky., in August, 1861, by Capt. J. W. Hewitt, and was mustered into service Oct. 8, 1861. This battery took an active part in the early engagements in Kentucky and Tennessee, and was distinguished for soldierly bearing and excellent discipline. It was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., Nov. 16, 1864, the recruits and veterans being transferred to Battery A.

Battery C was organized for one year's service at Louisville, Ky., in September, 1863, by Capt. John W. Neville, and was mustered into service on the 10th of the same month. After serving one year in the Department of Kentucky, the battery reenlisted for three years, and was ordered to Arkansas, where it participated in several severe engagements.

Battery E was organized at Louisville, Ky., by Capt. John J. Hawes, in September, 1863, and was mustered into the service at Camp Nelson, Ky., October 6, 1863. It re-enlisted for three years in February, 1864. The service performed by this battery in Kentucky and east Tennessee was peculiarly arduous, and the gallant behavior of its members won the repeated commendation of superior officers.

The First Independent Battery was organized as Company E, 1st Kentucky Infantry, and detached as artillery at the instance of Gen. Rosecrans, then commanding in Western Virginia, Oct. 31, 1861. The battery served with distinction in the campaigns in West Virginia, participating in the engagements at Tylus Mountain, Horse Shoe Bend, Cotton Mountain and Greeley Bridge, Va., Frederick City and Antietam, Md., Cloyrd Mountain, New River Bridge, Lynchburg and Salem, Va. After four years of honorable service, the battery was mustered out July 10, 1865, at Louisville, Ky.

BATTLE LIST OF KENTUCKY TROOPS.

Following is a list of engagements during the Rebellion in which Kentucky troops were engaged:

1861.

Wild Cat, Ky., Oct. 21—Seventh Infantry, First Cavalry.

1862.

Mill Springs, Jan. 19—Fourth, Tenth, Twelfth Infantry, First Cavalry, Patterson's Engineers.

Middle Creek, Ky., Jan. 10—Fourteenth Infantry.

Fort Donelson, Feb. 16—Seventeenth, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Shiloh, Tenn., April 6, 7—First, Second, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth Infantry.

Murfreesboro, Tenn., July 13—Battery B.

Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30—Seventh, Fourteenth, Eighteenth Infantry, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth Cavalry.

South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14—Simmonds' Independent Kentucky Battery.

Antietam Mountain, Md., Sept. 17—Simmonds' Independent Kentucky Battery.

Perryville, Ky., October 8—Fifth, Seventh, Fifteenth Infantry, First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth Cavalry, Battery A.

Dobbin's Ferry, Tenn., Dec. 9—Eighth, Twenty-first Infantry.

Chickasaw Bluffs, Dec. 29, 30—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

1863.

Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862, Jan. 3, 1863—First, Second, Third, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Eleventh, Fifteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third Infantry, Second, Third Cavalry, Battery A.

Arkansas Post, Ark., Jan. 11—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Thompson's Hill, Miss., May 1—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Champion's Hill, Miss., May 16—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Big Black River Bridge, Miss., May 17—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Horseshoe Bend, Cumberland River, May 9, 10—Ninth, Twelfth Cavalry.

Vicksburg, Miss., May 19, July 4—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Jackson, Miss., July 10, 16—Seventh, Nineteenth, Twenty-second Infantry, Patterson's Engineers.

Lebanon, Ky., July 7—Twentieth Infantry.

Tullahoma Campaign, June 24, July 4—First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-Third Infantry, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Cavalry.

Chickamauga Campaign, Ga., Sept. 19, 20—First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-Third Infantry, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh Cavalry.

Marrowbone, Ky., Sept. 22—Thirty-ninth Infantry.

Philadelphia, Tenn., Oct. 20—Twenty-seventh Infantry, First, Eleventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Brown's Ferry, Tenn., Oct. 27—Fifth, Sixth, Twenty-third Infantry.

Campbell Station, Tenn., Nov. 16—Thirteenth, Twenty-seventh Infantry, Fifth Cavalry.

Kingston, Tenn., Nov. 24—Sixteenth Infantry.

Siege of Knoxville, Nov.—Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh Infantry, First, Eleventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Lookout Mountain, Nov. 23—Eighth Infantry.

Missionary Ridge, Nov. 23, 25—Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third Infantry.

Bean's Station, Tenn., Dec. 14—Eleventh, Twenty-seventh Infantry, First, Twelfth Cavalry.

Mossy Creek, Tenn., Dec. 29—Sixteenth Infantry, Seventh Cavalry.

1864.

Dandridge, Tenn., Jan. 20—Seventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Dalton, Ga., Feb. 25—Eighth Infantry.

Sabine Cross Roads, La., April 8—Nineteenth Infantry.

Rockyface Ridge, May 9—First, Second, Third, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Fifteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-eighth Infantry.

Resaca, Ga., May 15—First, Second, Third, Fifth, Sixth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-First, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-eighth Infantry.

Dallas, Ga., May 25, June 2—Third, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth Infantry, First, Second, Third, Fourth Cavalry.

Lost Mountain, Ga., June 10—First, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., June 9—Thirty-seventh, Fortieth, Forty-fifth Infantry, Seventeenth Cavalry, Battery C.

Cynthiana, Ky., June 12—Thirtieth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-fifth, Forty-seventh Infantry.

Kenesaw Mountain, June 20, 27—Third, Fifth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth Infantry, Second Cavalry.

Lafayette, Ga., June 24—Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh Cavalry.

Near Marietta, Ga., July 4—Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Fifteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first Infantry.

Adairsville, Ga., July 7—Third, Fifth Cavalry.

Peach Tree Creek, July 20—Third, Ninth, Tenth, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-eighth Infantry.

Siege of Atlanta, Ga., July 22, Sept. 1—Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth Infantry, First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eleventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Newnan's, Ga., July 30—Fourth Infantry, Second, Seventh Cavalry.

Hillsboro, Ga., July 31—First, Eleventh, Twelfth Cavalry.

Lovejoy Station, Aug. 20—Fourth, Ninth, Twenty-eighth Infantry, Third, Fifth Cavalry.

Jonesboro, Ga., Sept. 2—Tenth, Thirteenth, Twenty-first Infantry.

Saltville, Va., Oct. 2—Twenty-Sixth, Thirtieth, Thirty-fifth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-fifth Infantry.

Sherman's March to the Sea—Tenth, Eighteenth Infantry, Second, Third, Fifth Cavalry.

Columbia, Tenn., Nov. 28—Eleventh, Twelfth, Sixteenth Infantry.

Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30—Twelfth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-eighth Infantry.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15, 16—Twelfth, Sixteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-eighth Infantry, Fourth Mounted Infantry, Battery A.

Marian, Va., and Stoneman's (Va.) Raid, Dec. 16, 1864, Jan., 1865—Thirtieth, Fifty-third Infantry, Eleventh, Twelfth Cavalry, Battery C.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 16—Sixth, Seventh Cavalry.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 21—Eighteenth Infantry, Battery C.

Saltville, Va., Dec. 20—Thirtieth, Forty-fifth, Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth Infantry.

Wilson's Raid in Alabama, Georgia, Dec. 20, April 20, 1865—Fourth, Sixty-seventh Cavalry, Fourth Mounted Infantry.

1865.

Town Creek, N. C., Feb. 20—Twelfth Infantry.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 1—Fourth Infantry.

Near Raleigh, N. C., April 12—Eighteenth Infantry.

ROLL OF HONOR.

A list of officers of Kentucky regiments, who were killed in action or died of wounds received there during their service in the United States Volunteer Army.

Auxier, Capt. David V., 39th Inf.; died Oct. 4, 1864, of wounds received at the battle of Saltville, Va.

Anthony, Capt. James W., 17th Inf.; died Oct. 10, 1863, of wounds received at the battle of Chickamauga.

Barton, Lieut. Wm. S., 9th Inf.; killed in action at Missionary Ridge, Tenn., Nov. 25, 1863.

Bacon, Capt. Albert G., 3d Cav.; killed in action at Sacramento, Ky., Dec. 28, 1861.

Bayne, Capt. Aaron S., 15th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 3, 1862.

Benton, Capt. John B., 8th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.

Bevill, Capt. Seth P., 10th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept, 21, 1863.

Bevill, 2d Lieut. John H., 21st Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Tenn., Jan. 2, 1863.

Butler, Capt. Champness D., 13th Inf.; killed in action at Kennesaw Mountain, Ga., Jan. 27, 1864.

Burgess, 2d Lieut. Francis M., 14th Inf.; died of wounds, Aug. 10, 1864, received in action on Atlanta Campaign.

Brown, 2d Lieut. Albert E., 17th Inf.; died May 18, 1862, of wounds received in action at Shiloh.

Burgher, Lieut. Wm. C., 26th Inf.; killed in action near Russellville, Ky., July 29, 1862.

Bradford, Lieut. Jacob D., 13th Inf.; killed in action at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864.

Bodine, Capt. James M., 2d Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 21, 1863.

Bryan, Capt. William T., 9th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.

Boyle, Maj. William O., 11th Cav.; killed in action at Marion, Va., Dec. 18, 1864.

Bradshaw, Lieut. Alban D., 3d Inf.; died Oct. 8, 1863, of wounds received at Chickamauga.

Bradney, Lieut. William, 2d Cav.; killed in action on Atlanta Campaign, July 30, 1864.

Carter, Capt. Jesse M., 1st Kentucky Cav.; killed at Columbus, Ky., July 3, 1863.

Carpenter, Lieut. Frederick F., 9th Inf.; killed at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.

Cabell, Lieut. Samuel J., 13th Inf.; died March 6, 1864, of wounds received in action at Huff's Ferry, Tenn., March 6, 1864.

Cartsinger, Lieut. James L., 30th Inf.; killed in action at Saltville, Va., Oct. 2, 1864.

Campbell, Maj. Wm. P., 15th Inf.; killed in action at Perryville, Oct. 8, 1864.

Coughlin, Lieut. James, 24th Inf.; killed in action at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864.

Coyle, Capt. Demetrius B., 9th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.

Cox, Lieut. Wade B., 8th Inf.; died July 12, 1863, of wounds received at Stone River.

Cotton, Lieut.-Col. George T., 6th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.

Coleman, Lieut. Richard D., 39th Inf.; killed in action, Jan. 9, 1864.

Cullen, Lieut. Mathew, 3d Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.

Culbertson, Capt. W. W., 18th Inf.; died Sept. 22, 1862, of wounds received in action at Richmond, Ky.

Davidson, Maj. John L., 26th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, Apr. 7, 1862.

Delfosse, Maj. J. Napoleon, 12th Cav.; killed in action at Philadelphia, Tenn., Oct. 20, 1863.

Dissell, Lieut. Frank, 5th Inf.; died May 12, 1864, of wounds received at Stone River.

Dunlap, Lieut. James, 18th Inf.; killed in action at Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30, 1862.

Eubanks, Lieut. Thomas, 6th Inf.; killed at Chickamauga Sept. 19, 1863.

Elam, Lieut. Richard M., 14th Inf.; killed in action at Salyersville, Ky., Nov. 30, 1863.

Eifort, Maj. William H., 2d Cav.; killed in action Atlanta Campaign, Sept. 3, 1864.
Evans, Maj. Morgan V., 19th Inf.; killed in action before Vicksburg, Miss., May 22, 1863.
Ferguson, Capt. Alex B., 5th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.
Forrester, Capt. John W., 5th Cav.; died Nov. 29, 1864, of wounds received on Atlanta campaign.
Foy, Lieut.-Col. James C., 23d Inf.; died July 24, 1864, of wounds received in action near Vining's Station, Ga.
Forman, Col. James B., 15th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.
Fisher, Capt. John R., 27th Inf.; killed in action near Atlanta, Ga., July 20, 1864.
Furr, 2d Lieut. William W., 6th Inf.; killed in action near Dallas, Ga., May 27, 1864.
Garrard, Capt. Daniel, Jr., 22d Inf.; killed in action at Chickasaw Bluffs, Miss., Dec. 29, 1862.
Gallup, Capt. Giles A., 13th Inf.; killed in action at Jonesboro, Ga., Sept. 2, 1864.
Goulding, Capt. Seneca P., 7th Cav.; drowned while in action at Benton, Ala., Apr. 10, 1865.
Griffin, Lieut. Jesse W., 25th Inf.; killed in action at Fort Donelson, Tenn., Feb. 15, 1862.
Griffin, Lieut. Amos M., 5th Cav.; killed in action March —, 1865.
Hampton, Adjt. Levi J., 39th Inf.; killed in action Dec. 4, 1862.
Hund, Lieut. Anton, 6th Inf.; died May 23, 1862, of wounds received at Shiloh, Tenn.
Hayes, 2d Lieut. James M., 4th Inf.; killed in action at Logan's Cross Roads, Jan. 19, 1862.
Halisey, Col. Dennis I., 6th Cav.; killed in action near New Market, Ky., Dec. 31, 1862.
Hestand, Lieut. Turner, 9th Inf.; killed in action at Lovejoy's Station, Ga., Sept. 2, 1864.
Hegan, Capt. Wm. B., 22d Inf.; killed in action at Chickasaw Bluffs, Miss., Dec. 29, 1862.
Hedger, Lieut. Hugh A., 21st Inf.; killed in action at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15, 1864.
Higdon, Lieut. John T., 26th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, Apr. 7, 1862.
Hill, Capt. John W., 12th Cav.; killed in action, Nov. 18, 1863.
Hickman, Capt. Robert B., 8th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.
Hill, Capt. George W., 12th Inf.; killed in action before Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 6, 1864.
Hoffman, Lieut. Joseph C., 23d Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Hurley, Capt. John P., 5th Inf.; killed in action at Missionary Ridge, Nov. 25, 1863.
Humphrey, Lieut. James, 1st Cav.; died Sept. —, 1864, of wounds received in action.
Huston, Lieut. John W., 5th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
Hunt, Lieut. Garvine D., 3d Inf.; died Nov. 30, 1863, of wounds received at Missionary Ridge.
Jenkins, Lieut. Wm. G., 2d Cav.; killed in action, June 29, 1863.
Jenkins, Capt. Jarrett W., 1st Cav.; killed in action at Perryville, Ky., Oct. 8, 1862.
Jones, 2d Lieut. Samuel R., 12th Cav.; killed in action near Brandenburg, Ky., July 12, 1864.
Jouett, Lieut.-Col. George P., 15th Inf.; killed in action at Chaplin Hills, Ky., Oct. 8, 1862.
Korman, 2d Lieut. John B., 23d Inf.; died July 26, 1864, of wounds received in action before Chattanooga, Tenn.
Laurie, 2d Lieut. James, 16th Inf.; died May 14, 1864, of wounds received in action at Resaca, Ga.
Landrum, Capt. Wm. J., 17th Inf.; killed in action at Cassville, Ga., May 19, 1864.
Lee, Lieut. Matthias Z. S., 24th Inf.; died Feb. 14, 1864, of wounds received in action at Knoxville, Tenn.
Leggett, Lieut. Algernon S., 9th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.
Lewis, Capt. Orrin M., 18th Inf.; killed in action at Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30, 1862.
Lochman, 2d Lieut. Frederick V., 6th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Lowe, 2d Lieut. Thomas A., 13th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, April 7, 1862.
Lee, Lieut. Wm. L., 13th Inf.; died April 16, 1862, of wounds received at Shiloh.
Mavity, Capt. Ephraim P., 23d Inf.; died Sept. 17, 1864, of wounds received in action at Chattanooga, Tenn.
Marker, Capt. Peter, 6th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Martin, Capt. Columbus H., 11th Inf.; died Dec. 18, 1863, of wounds received in action at Philadelphia, Tenn.
McGraw, Capt. John, 6th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
McKee, Col. Samuel, 3d Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862.
McDowell, Capt. E. Irwine, 15th Inf.; killed in action at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864.
McGrath, Lieut. James A. T., 15th Inf.; killed in action at Chaplin Hills, Ky., Oct. 8, 1862.
McCulloch, Capt. Miller R., 2d Cav.; killed in action at Stone River, Dec. 30, 1862.
McClure, Lieut. Joseph L., 15th Inf.; died Oct. 18, 1862, of wounds received in action at Perryville, Ky.
Miller, Lieut. Jonathan P., 1st Ky. Cav.; killed in action at Mill Springs, Jan. 19, 1862.
Minter, Capt. Landon C., 8th Inf.; died Feb. 15, 1863, of wounds received at Stone River, Tenn.
Miller, 2d Lieut. James A., 2d Inf.; killed in action at Pittsburg Landing, April 7, 1862.
Miller, Capt. Joseph E., 5th Inf.; killed in action at Resaca, Ga., May 16, 1864.
Mitchell, Lieut. Wm. D., 5th Cav.; killed in action March 10, 1865.
Millman, Lieut. John D., 17th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Morton, Capt. Preston, 17th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, April 6, 1862.
Murphy, Lieut. William, 6th Cav.; killed in action, July 4, 1863.
Myers, 2d Lieut. John H. 10th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
Nierhoff, Capt. Frederick, 6th Inf.; killed in action at Kenesaw Mt., Ga., June 23, 1864.
Osborne, Lieut. Chilson A., 14th Inf.; died Nov. 30, 1864, of wounds received in action at Charleston, S. C.
Overburg, Lieut. Frederick, 3d Cav.; killed in action near Marietta, Ga., Oct. 3, 1864.
Owens, Capt. Elisha, 8th Cav.; killed at Pilot Knob, Ky., Feb. 28, 1863.
Palmer, Capt. Henry D., 16th Inf.; killed in action at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864.
Patrick, Capt. Wiley C., 14th Inf.; killed in action near Alatoona, Ga., June 2, 1864.
Pennington, Capt. Levi, 7th Inf.; killed in action at Chickasaw Bluffs, Miss., December 28, 1862.
Pope, Col. Curran, 15th Inf.; died Nov. 5, 1862, of wounds received in action at Chaplin Hills, Ky.
Robinson, Lieut. William H., 53d Inf.; killed in action at Marion, Va., Dec. 18, 1864.
Rockingham, Lieut. Richard, 6th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
Ryan, 2d Lieut. John, 5th Inf.; died Sept. 25, 1863, of wounds received at Chickamauga.
Royce, 2d Lieut. Samuel H., 7th Cav.; killed in action at Big Hill, near Richmond, Ky., Aug. 23, 1862.
Scott, Lieut. Hugh L., 52d Inf.; died Dec. 3, 1864, of wounds received in action.

Sheets, Lieut. Frank N., 4th Cav.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
Sketoe, Capt. Isaac W., 11th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, April 7, 1862.
Smith, Lieut. Elza C., 13th Cav.; killed in hospital at Saltville, Va., Oct. 7, 1864.
Sinkhorn, Lieut. Granville J., 28th Inf.; killed in action at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864.
Spellmeyer, Capt. John H., 2d Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, April 7, 1862.
Stone, Lieut. Sebastian, 21st Inf.; killed in action at Stone River, Jan. 2, 1863.
Sturgis, Capt. Robert C., 17th Inf.; died Aug. 9, 1864, of wounds received in action before Atlanta, Ga.
Stewart, Lieut. Thomas, 14th Inf.; killed in action before Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 4, 1864.
Stearman, 2d Lieut. Wm. H., 13th Inf.; died Nov. 17, 1863, of wounds received in action at Huff's Ferry, east Tenn.
Taylor, Capt. Henry S., 3d Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.
Thomasson, Maj. Charles M., 5th Inf.; killed in action at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.
Truett, 2d Lieut. Jabez, 22d Inf.; killed in action at Chickasaw Bluffs, Dec. 29, 1862.
Tate, Lieut. Charles R., 9th Inf.; killed in action at Shiloh, Tenn., April 7, 1862.
Thornburg, 2d Lieut. Walter, 39th Inf.; killed in action Sept. 22, 1863.
Todd, Capt. Charles S., 6th Inf.; killed in action at Stone River Dec. 31, 1862.
Todd, Lieut. L. Frank, 15th Inf.; died Jan. 20, 1863, of wounds received in action.
Vickary, 2d Lieut. Jenkins J., 30th Inf.; killed in action at Saltville, Va., Oct. 2, 1864.
Victor, Capt. Wallace, 13th Inf.; died July 13, 1864, of wounds received at Chickamauga.
Washburn, 2d Lieut. John W., 18th Inf.; killed in action at Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30, 1863.
White, Capt. Charles L., 3d Cav.; died Dec. 7, 1864, of wounds received in action.
Wileman, Maj. Abram G., 18th Inf.; killed in skirmish in Pendleton County, Ky., Oct. 5, 1863.
Wilson, Capt. Thomas, 7th Inf.; killed in action at Champion's Hill, Miss., May 16, 1863.
Wilson, Capt. Upton, 5th Inf.; killed in action at Missionary Ridge Nov. 25, 1863.
Wolford, Capt. Francis M., 1st Cav.; killed in action at Hillsboro, Ga., July 31, 1864.

DEATHS IN KENTUCKY UNION TROOPS.

1861–65.

Killed in action, 95 officers, 1,390 enlisted men; died of wounds, 39 officers, 954 enlisted men; died of disease, 121 officers, 7,122 enlisted men; accidentally killed, 1 officer, 219 enlisted men; drowned, 6 officers, 228 enlisted men; murdered, 14 enlisted men; suicide, 1 officer, 7 enlisted men; executed (G. C. M.), 12 enlisted men; sunstroke, 2 enlisted men; other known causes, 7 officers, 165 enlisted men; causes not stated, 1 officer, 390 enlisted men. Total 271 officers and 10,503 enlisted men, of which number 3 officers and 1,017 enlisted men died while prisoners of war.

DEATHS IN ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES.*

1861–65.

Killed in action, 4,142 officers, 62,916 enlisted men; died of wounds, 2,223 officers, 40,789 enlisted men; died of disease, 2,795 officers, 221,791 enlisted men; accidentally killed, 142 officers, 3,972 enlisted men; drowned, 106 officers, 4,838 enlisted men; murdered, 37 officers, 483 enlisted men; suicide, 26 officers, 365 enlisted men; executed (G. C. M.), 267 enlisted men; sunstroke, 5 officers, 308 enlisted men; other known causes, 80 officers, 2,122 enlisted men; causes not stated, 28 officers, 12,093 enlisted men. Total 9,584 officers and 349,944 enlisted men, of which number 219 officers and 29,279 enlisted men died while prisoners of war.

*From the office of the adjutant-general of the United States, and never before published.

CONFEDERATE STATES ARMY.

GENERAL OFFICERS IN THE CONFEDERATE ARMY APPOINTED FROM KENTUCKY. *

Jno. C. Breckinridge, brig.-gen., Nov. 2, 1861; maj.-gen. Apr. 11, 1862; acting secretary of war, 1865.
Simon B. Buckner, brig.-gen., Sept. 14, 1861; maj.-gen., Aug. 16, 1862; lieut.-gen. Sept. 20, 1864.
Abe Buford, brig.-gen., Sept. 2, 1862.
George B. Cosby, brig.-gen., Jan. 20, 1863.
George B. Crittenden, brig.-gen., March 16, 1861; maj.-gen., Nov. 9, 1861; resigned Oct. 23, 1862.
Basil W. Duke, brig.-gen., Sept. 15, 1864.
Charles W. Field, brig.-gen., May, 9, 1862; maj.-gen. Sept. 12, 1864.
Roger W. Hanson, brig.-gen., Dec. 13, 1862.
J. M. Hawes, brig.-gen., March 5, 1862.
B. H. Helm, brig.-gen., March 14, 1862.
George B. Hodge, brig.-gen., Aug. 2, 1864.
Joseph H. Lewis, brig -gen., Sept. 30, 1863.
H. B. Lyon, brig.-gen., June 14, 1864.
Humphrey Marshall, brig.-gen., Oct. 30, 1861; resigned June 16, 1862; reappointed June 20, 1862; with rank from Oct. 1, 1861.
Jno. H. Meagan, brig.-gen., Dec. 11, 1862.
William Preston, brig.-gen., April 14, 1862; maj.-gen., Jan. 1, 1865.
Gustavus W. Smith, maj.-gen., Sept. 9, 1861; resigned Sept. 11, 1863.
Lloyd Tilghman, brig.-gen., Oct. 18, 1861.
Jno. S. Williams, brig.-gen., April 16, 1862.

LIST OF NAMES OF COMMANDING OFFICERS OF THE FIRST KENTUCKY BRIGADE IN THE ORDER OF THEIR DATES OF COMMAND.

Brig.-Gen. Jno. C. Breckinridge.
Brig.-Gen. Roger W. Hanson.
Col. R. P. Trabue.
Brig.-Gen. Marcus J. Wright.
Brig.-Gen. B. H. Helm.
Brig.-Gen. Joseph H. Lewis.

GENERAL AND STAFF OFFICERS APPOINTED FROM KENTUCKY.†

Gen. John C. Breckinridge.—Staff: Ament, B. W., medical director, relieved Aug. 29, 1862; Addison, ——, volunteer aid-de-camp, Aug., 1862; Benham, Calhoun, major, acting inspector-general, Oct. 28, 1862; Breckinridge, J. Cabell, lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Nov. 17, 1861, Sept. 30, Oct. 28, 1862; Buckner, Jno. A., captain, assistant adjutant-general, July 18, 1862, lieutenant-colonel, Oct. 28, 1862; Brown, ——, major, chief commissary subsistence, Oct. 12, 1862; Bradford, J. W., captain, assistant quartermaster, paymaster, June, 4, 1863; Bird, ——, captain, volunteer aid-de-camp, Aug., 1862; Brewer, ——, lieutenant-colonel, volunteer aid-de-camp, Aug., 1862; Bertus, Wm. E., lieutenant, Twelfth Louisiana, acting inspector-general,

* From the war office at Washington, D. C.

†This list is from the war office at Washington, and was sent to Col. John B. Castleman, adjutant-general of Kentucky, who had it corrected and revised for this work.

Sept., 1863; Cobb, Robertson, captain, chief of artillery,—— Division, Nov. 1, 1863, Nov. 6,1863, assigned as chief of artillery of corps; Coleman, ——, captain, volunteer aid-de-camp, Jan. 1, 1863; Daragh, Thos. B., lieutenant, volunteer aid-de-camp, Jan. 1, 1863; Ewing, E. H., captain, assistant quartermaster, June 27, 1863; Ershine, Jno. H., surgeon, medical director, March 6, 1862; Evans, Alex., major and chief commissary, —— 7, 1863; Foote, Henry S., aid-de-camp; Granes, R. E., major, chief of artillery, Oct. 28, 1862; Hawes, Carey N., announced as chief surgeon of division, Sept. 6, 1862; Hawkins, Thomas T., first lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Nov. 17, 1861; Capo, ——, aid-de-camp, captain, assistant adjutant-general, Oct., 1862, Oct. 28, 1862; Helm, Geo. M., 1st lieutenant, engineer officer, Aug. 18, 1862; Hamilton, Wm. B., volunteer aid-de-camp, Aug., 1862; Huestis, Dr., ——, medical inspector, chief surgeon, Jan., Sept., 1863; Hope, John, captain, acting inspector-general, Sept. 30, 1862, announced as acting inspector-general of reserve corps, April 25, 1862; Johnson, J.P., assistant adjutant-general, July, 1863; Kratz, Dr. ——, assistant surgeon, Sept., 1863; Little, George, captain, ordnance officer, May 2, 1863; Legare, J. C., surgeon, medical inspector, March 6, 1862; Morgan, R. C., acting assistant adjutant-general, Jan. 19, 1862; Mastin, Chas. J., captain, acting inspector-general, Feb. 26, 1863, lieutenant-colonel, acting inspector-general, Sept., 1863; Nocquet, Jas. W., captain, chief of engineers, Sept. 30, 1862; O'Hara, Theodore, colonel, acting assistant adjutant-general, Dec., 1862, Jan., 1863; Pickett, Geo. B., captain, engineer officer, March 6, 1862; Pickett, Jno. T., colonel, assistant adjutant-general, ——, 1862; Pinckney, ——, lieutenant-colonel, volunteer aid-de-camp, Aug., 1862; Pendleton, J. E., Dr., medical director, Sept. 30, 1862, Oct. 29, 1862; Pendleton, John E., volunteer aid-de-camp, Jan. 1, 1863; Robentson, J. S., captain, assistant adjutant-general, Sept. 8, 1862; Richards, A. Keene, aid-de-camp, June 23, 1862; Sullins, ——,major, chief quartermaster, Oct. 12, 1862; Schenck, Isaac, major, acting commissary subsistence, Dec. 13, 1862; Slocum, ——, captain, chief artillery, Nov. 6, 1863; Semple, Chas. captain, ordnance officer, Jan. 1, 1863, acting inspector-general, Jan. 24, 1864; Von Zinken, Leon, colonel, Twentieth Louisiana Regiment, acting assistant inspector-general, Sept., 1863; Triplett, ——, major, chief quartermaster, on march Oct. 12, 1862; Wilson, J T., acting inspector-general, Oct. 28, 1862, Dec. 31, 1862; Wilson, James, major, assistant adjutant-general, Dec. 11, 1862, Sept., 1863, Nov. 11, 1863, acting chief of artillery, Sept. 30, 1862, ordnance officer of division, April 21, 1862; Weatherby, surgeon, acting medical director, Sept. 30, 1862; Weeden, acting chief surgeon, Oct. 29, 1863; Young, J. F., surgeon, medical purveyor, March 6, 1862.

Gen. S.B. Buckner.—Staff: Ament, B. W., surgeon, Aug., 1862; Buckner, D. P., volunteer aid-de-camp, Sept., 1861, Feb., 1862; Casly, Geo. B., major, assistant adjutant-general, Sept., 1861, Feb., 1862; Clay, T. J., acting aid-de-camp, Feb., 1862; Cassiday, Alex., captain, assistant inspector-general, Sept., 1861, major, assistant inspector-general, Feb., 1862; Chambliss, N.P., lieutenant, ordnance officer, Sept. 18, 1861; Carrington, L.F., aid-de-camp, Nov. 26. 1861; Davidson, ——, major, chief of artillery, Feb., 1862; Gallagher, J. N., acting aid-de-camp, Feb., 1862; Hays, S. K., major, assistant quartermaster, Feb., 1862; Haines, J. M., major, assistant inspector-general, Sept. 18, 1861; Johnston, Chas. F., lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Sept., 1861, Feb., 1862; Moore, ——, engineer officer, Feb., 1862; Nocquet, J., captain, engineer officer, Sept. 18, 1861; Sheliba, Victor, major lieutenant-colonel, chief of staff, June, 1863; Wintersmith, Richard C., major, acting commissary of subsistence, Feb., 1862; Watts, G. O., lieutenant, acting aid-de-camp, Sept. 18, 1861.

Brig.-Gen. A. Buford.—Staff: Crowder, Thos. M., captain, assistant adjutant-general, Oct., 1862, May, 1863; Nicholson, Hunter, major, assistant adjutant-general, Dec., 1862; Given, D. A., 1st lieutenant, acting aid-de-camp; Myers, D. E., 1st lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Aug. 1, 1863 (captain Company E, 9th Kentucky Cavalry), captain, acting inspector-general; Lea, James L., captain, assistant quartermaster, 1862, transferred to staff of Gen. T. H. Bell, Feb., 1865; Finch, J. R., major, acting commissary of subsistence; Gardner, Jno. D., 1st lieutenant, ordnance officer, May 20, 1862, transferred from 7th Kentucky Regiment; Clardy, Thos. F., surgeon (7th Kentucky); Cargill, W. M., major, quartermaster.

Col. Edward Crossland, Commanding Brigade. —Staff: Buford's Division, Forrest's Cavalry, May, 1864; Randle, C. S., captain, acting assistant adjutant-general (7th Kentucky Regiment); Matthewson, J. P., 1st lieutenant, acting assistant inspector-general; Lindsey, Wm., captain, assistant quartermaster (7th Kentucky Regiment), July, 1862; Smith, J. R., major, acting commissary of subsistence, July 22, 1863; Galbraith, Robert A., captain, acting aid-de-camp; Terry, F. G., captain, acting ordnance officer, Sept. 22, 1862 (8th Kentucky Regiment).

Maj.-Gen. Geo. B. Crittenden.—Staff: Brewer, Jas. B., volunteer aid-de-camp, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862; Cunningham, A. S., major, assistant adjutant-general, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862, Dec. 4, 1861; Hillyer, Giles M., major, assistant commissary of subsistence, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862; Porter, W. W., lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862, captain, assistant adjutant-general, April 6–7, 1862: Ramsay, F. A., surgeon, medical director, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862; Thornton, H. I. (J?), aid-de-camp, Dec. 7, 1862, Jan., 1862, Feb., 1862.

Brig.-Gen. Basil W. Duke.—Staff: Cameron, ——, captain, chaplain, Sept. 15, 1864, transferred to special service in Canada, Nov., 1864; Davis, William J., captain; assistant adjutant-general, April, 1863, major, aid-de-camp, Dec., 1864; Elliott, R.F., major, acting commissary of subsistence, Sept. 15, 1864, previously commissary Morgan's staff; Gassette, C. W., major; acting quartermaster, Sept. 15, 1864, previously acting quartermaster on Morgan's staff; Gwyn, Hugh G., captain, assistant inspector-general, Sept. 15, 1864, major, assistant inspector-general, Dec. 1, 1864, previously adjutant Keeble's Tennessee regiment, infantry; Morgan, Calvin C., 1st lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Sept. 15, 1864, captain, aid-de-camp, Dec. 1, 1864; Thorpe, P. H., adjutant (?) June, 1862; Williams, Robert, major, brigade-surgeon, Sept. 15, 1864.

Brig.-Gen. Chas. W. Field.—Staff: Corbin, Richard, volunteer aid-de-camp of division, April, 1864; Deshields, H. C. captain quartermaster, April, 1861 (from 40th Virginia), major quartermaster of division subsequently; Harrison, George F., captain adjutant-general, April, 1861, assistant adjutant-general, June, July, 1862 (formerly adjutant 9th Va. Cav., resigned Sept., 1862; Hudson, medical director of division, January, 1864; Mason, Julien J., major, assistant commissary subsistance, April, 1861, (assigned from 9th Va. Cav. private, afterward commissary of division); Jones, Willis F. major, assistant adjutant-general, January, 1864 (killed in battle August, 1864); Mason, W. R. lieutenant, aid-de-camp, June, July, 1862, assigned to conscript bureau July, 1863; Masters, L., captain, assistant inspector general, April, 1861, assigned from heavy artillery, major, assistant adjutant-general, Nov. 4, 1864, major, inspector-general of division, January, 1864 (April, 1865, killed in battle); Pleasants, James, captain, orderly officer of division; Rabb, R. L., lieutenant, aid-de-camp, first lieutenant, aid-de-camp, January, 1864 (resigned August, 1864); Spence, surgeon, medical director, April, 1861; Stephenson, John, first lieutenant aid-de-camp of division, Aug., 1864.

Brig.-Gen. Roger W. Hanson.—Staff: Hope, John S., captain, acting assistant adjutant general, Dec. 4, 1862; Chipley, S. F., acting assistant adjutant-general, December 20, 1862; Benedict, Joseph, lieutenant 9th Ky., ordered to act as aid-de-camp to Col. Hanson, commanding first Kentucky Brigade, Nov. 10, 1862.

Brig.-Gen. J. M. Hawes.—Staff: Barbour, E. P., aid-de-camp, acting assistant adjutant-general, April 29, 1862; Dyer, H. R. major, assistant quartermaster; Hawes, S. N., lieutenant, aid-de-camp; Hove, J. A. P., captain, aid-de-camp; Leman ——, captain, acting commissary subsistence; McClarty, Clinton, major, assistant adjutant-general; Robertson, James M., captain, assistant inspector-general; Sanders Reid, major, assistant commissary subsistence; Scott, John S., captain, assistant adjutant general; Walker, A. J., captain, ordnance officer; Marshall, Benjamin T., chief surgeon, April 29, 1862; Lester, H. F., lieutenant (2d Kentucky) ordnance officer, April 29, 1862; Robertson, J. S., assistant adjutant-general, May 14, 1862.

Brig.-Gen. George B. Hodge.—Staff: Bullock, Wallie, first lieutenant, aid-de-camp, April, 1863; Davis, Hugh L., first lieutenant, aid-de-camp, Aug., 1864; McAffee, John, captain, assistant adjutant-general (Ind. Confederate Battalion); Miller, W., major, quartermaster (from 27th Virginia P. Rangers), April, 1862; Ogden, John, captain, aid-de-camp; West, Douglas, major, acting ordnance officer; Hope, John, captain, assistant inspector-general.

Brig.-Gen. Joseph H. Lewis.—Staff: Hewitt, Fayette, captain, assistant adjutant-general, Dec. 2, 1861–64; McKay, Henry Clay, lieutenant, aid-de-camp, October, 1863; John R. major, assistant quartermaster, Dec., 1863; Phillips, W. S., captain, assistant quartermaster, 1862, major, Dec., 1863; Holmes, Chas. W., major, assistant commissary subsistence, July 17, 1863; Payne, Lewis E., lieutenant, ordnance officer, December, 1863; Buchanan, Samuel H., assistant adjutant-general, Sept. 15, 1864, assistant inspector-general, Dec. 20, 1863; Helm, Chas. W., captain and assistant commissary subsistence, June 16, 1864; Vertrees, J. S., assistant surgeon, 1863.

Brig.-Gen. Humphrey Marshall.—Staff: Fisher Thos. H., major, chief quartermaster, May, 1862; Guerrant, Edward O., assistant adjutant-general, Dec. 30, 1862; Jenkins, B. W., captain, Jan., 1863; Marshall, Chas. E., captain, assistant adjutant-general, April, 1862; resigned Dec., 1862.

Col. and Brig.-Gen. Jno. H. Morgan.—Staff: Alston, R. A., captain, assistant adjutant-general, June, 1862; Grenfell, St. Leger, colonel, assistant adjutant-general, Aug. 22, 1862; Llewellen, D. H., captain, assistant quartermaster, Aug. 22, 1862; major, Dec. 9, 1862; Morgan, Charlton, captain, aid-de-camp, Dec. 9, 1862; Roberts, Green, captain, assistant aid-de-camp, Oct., 1862; Tyler, Robt., lieutenant, assistant aid-de-camp, Dec. 9, 1862; Williams, R. H., acting aid-de-camp, Dec. 9, 1862.

Col. R. T. Trabue Commanding Hanson's Brigade Dec. 31, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863.—Staff: Benedict, Joseph, Dec. 31, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863; Chipley, S. F., captain, Dec. 31, 1862 and Jan. 1, 1863; Semple, Charles, captain, acting ordnance officer, Dec. 21, 1862, and Jan, 1, 1863; Stake, T. E., lieutenant, assistant inspector-general, Dec. 31, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863; Trabue, Presley, lieutenant, acting ordnance officer, Dec. 31, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863; Williams, Robt. H., adjutant 4th Kentucky, acting assistant adjutant-general, Dec. 31, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863; Darrah, Thomas B., acting assistant adjutant-general, Oct. 13, 1862; Robertson, J. S., acting assistant adjutant-general, April 20, 1862; Hewitt, J. W., acting assistant adjutant-general, June 16, 1862; Shaw, G. T., captain, acting commissary subsistence, June 16, 1862.

Brig.-Gen. Jno. S. Williams.—Staff: Duke, Basil C., surgeon, Sept., 1862; Marye, Lawrence, captain, ordnance officer, Sept. 1862; Morris, John, colonel, volunteer aid-de-camp, Sept., 1862; Peyton, Wm. M., captain, aid-de-camp, Sept., 1862; Poor, R. L., captain, chief engineer, department West Virginia, Sept. 20, 1862; temporarily on staff of Gen. Williams; Stanton, Richard, captain, assistant adjutant-general, Sept., 1862.

NAMES OF FIELD OFFICERS, KENTUCKY REGIMENTS.*

First Infantry.—Colonel, Thos. H. Taylor; lieutenant-colonels, Wm. Preston Johnston, Ed. Crossland; major, Ed. Crossland.

Second Infantry.—Colonels, J. M. Hawes, R. W. Hanson, R. A. Johnson, James W. Moss; lieutenant-colonels, Robert A. Johnston, James W. Hewitt, Phil. Lee; majors, James W. Hewitt, James W. Moss, H. McDowell; adjutant, T. E. Moss.

Third Infantry.—Colonels, Lloyd Tilghman, A. P. Thompson; lieutenant-colonels, Benj. Anderson, Alfred M. Johnston; majors, Alfred M. Johnston, J. H. Bowman.

Fourth Infantry.—Colonels, Robert P. Trabue, Joseph P. Nuckols, Jr., Thos. W. Thompson; lieutenant-colonels, Andrew R. Hynes, Jno. A. Adair, Jos. P. Nuckols, Thos. W. Thompson; majors, Thos. B. Munroe, Jr., Thos. W. Preston, Thos. W. Thompson, Jno. B. Rogers.

Fifth Infantry.—Colonels, Jno. S. Williams, Andrew J. May, H. Hawkins, lieutenant-colonels, Andrew J. May, Hiram Hawkins, Jno. W. Caldwell; majors, J. C. Wickliffe, Jno. W. Caldwell, Geo. W. Conner, William Moynhier.

Sixth Infantry.—Colonels, Joseph H. Lewis, Martin H. Cofer; lieutenant-colonel, Martin H. Cofer; majors, Thos. H. Hayes, W. L. Clarke.

Seventh Infantry.—Colonels, C. Wickliffe, Ed. Crossland, W. D. Lannom; lieutenant-colonels, W. D. Lannom, H. L. Shorneill; majors, W. J. N. Welborn, H. S. Hale.

Eighth Infantry.—Colonel, H. B. Lyon; lieutenant-colonels, H. B. Lyon, A. R. Shacklett; major, R. W. Henry.

Ninth Infantry.—Colonels, T. H. Hunt, J. W. Caldwell; lieutenant-colonels, J. W. Caldwell, J. C. Wickliffe; majors, J. C. Wickliffe, Benj. Desha.

Tenth Infantry.—Colonels, R. W. Martin, A. R. Johnston; lieutenant-colonel, R. M. Martin; major, W. G. Owen.

Eleventh Infantry.—Colonel, B. E. Candill; major, J. T. Chenowith.

First Cavalry.—Colonel, J. R. Butler; lieutenant-colonel, Thos. W. Woodward; majors, J. W. Caldwell, N. R. Chambliss, I. L. Chenowith.

Second Cavalry.—Colonel, T. G. Woodward; lieutenant-colonels, Thos. G. Woodward, Thos. T. Johnson; majors, T. R. Webber, T. W. Lewis.

Third Cavalry.—Colonel, J. R. Butler.

Fourth Cavalry.—Colonel, H. L. Giltner; lieutenant-colonel, M. P. Pryor.

Fifth Cavalry.—Colonel, D. H. Smith; lieutenant-colonel, Preston Thompson.

Sixth Cavalry.—Colonel, J. Warren Grogsby; lieutenant-colonel, Thos. W. Napier.

Seventh Cavalry—Colonel, Ed. Crossland; major, Thos. Steele.

Eighth Cavalry.—Colonel, R. S. Cluke.

Ninth Cavalry.—Colonels, W. C. P. Breckinridge, T. H. Hunt; lieutenant-colonel, R. G. Stoner; major, J. C. Wickliffe.

Tenth Cavalry.—Colonels, A. R. Johnson, A. J. May, E. Trimble.

*From the war office at Washington.

Eleventh Cavalry.—Colonel, D. W. Chenault.

Faulkner's Cavalry.—Major, T. S. Tate.

First Battalion Volunteers.—Major, Thos. H. Hays.

First Battalion Mounted Rifles.—Majors, B. F. Bradley, O. G. Camron.

Second Battalion Mounted Rifles.—Major, Thomas Johnson.

Third Battalion Mounted Rifles.—Major, Jno. B. Halladay.

Morgan's Cavalry.—Colonel, Jno. H. Morgan; lieutenant-colonel, J. W. Bowler; majors, G. M. Morgan, J. T. Cassell.

The following roster of Confederate troops exhibits the various organizations with which Kentucky troops served during the years 1863-64:

Brig.-Gen. John S. Williams' Brigade, 1863: First Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Second Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Ninth Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Second Kentucky Battalion Cavalry, Hamilton's Battalion Cavalry, Allison's Squadron Cavalry.

Brig.-Gen. Joseph H. Lewis' Brigade: Second Kentucky Infantry, Fourth Kentucky Infantry, Fifth Kentucky Infantry, Sixth Kentucky Infantry, Ninth Kentucky Infantry.

Brig. Gen. A. Buford's Cavalry Brigade, Nov. 20, 1863: Eighth Kentucky, Col. H. B. Lyon; Seventh Kentucky, Col. Edward Crossland; Third Kentucky, Col. A. P. Thompson.

With Wharton's Division, August 15, 1863; Second Brigade, Col. Thomas Harrison: First Kentucky Cavalry, Col. J. R. Butler.

Morgan's Division, First Brigade, Cavalry, Col. B. W. Duke: Second Kentucky, Maj. T. B. Webber; Fifth Kentucky, Col. D. H. Smith; Ninth Kentucky, Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge; Sixth Kentucky, Col. J. Warren Grogsby; Ward's Kentucky Regiment, Col. Ward.

Second Brigade, Cavalry, Col. R. S. Cluke: Eighth Kentucky, Col. R. S. Cluke; Eleventh Kentucky, Col. D. W. Chenault; Tenth Kentucky, Lt.-Col. J. M. Huffman.

Chickamauga, Sept. 19-20, 1863; Breckinridge's Division, Helm's Brigade Infantry: Second Kentucky, Col. J. W. Hewitt, and Lieut.-Col. J. W. Moss; Fourth Kentucky, Col. Jos. P. Nuckols, Jr., and Maj. T. W. Thompson; Sixth Kentucky, Col. J. H. Lewis and Lieut.-Col. M. H. Cofer; Ninth Kentucky, Col. J. W. Caldwell and Lieut.-Col. J. C. Wickliffe; Cobb's Battery, Capt. Robert Cobb.

Missionary Ridge, Nov. 25, 1863; Breckinridge's Division, Lewis' Brigade, Infantry: Second Kentucky Regiment, Lieut.-Col. James W. Moss; Fourth Kentucky Regiment, Maj. T. W. Thompson; Sixth Kentucky Regiment, Lieut.-Col. W. L. Clarke; Ninth Kentucky Regiment, Lieut.-Col. Jno. C. Wickliffe; Fifth Kentucky Regiment, Col. H. Hawkins.

With Wheeler's Cavalry Corps, Oct. 31, 1863; Fourth Division, Brig.-Gen. Kelly; 1st Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Col. J. R. Butler; Second Kentucky Mounted Infantry; Ninth Kentucky Mounted Infantry.

Second Brigade of Brig.-Gen. Kelly's Division, Wheeler's Cavalry Corps, Nov. 20, 1863, Col. J. Warren Grogsby, commanding: First Kentucky Mounted Infantry Regiment, Col. J. R. Butler; Second Kentucky Mounted Infantry Regiment, Col. Thos. G. Woodnard.; Ninth Kentucky Mounted Infantry Regiment; Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge.

Wheeler's Cavalry Corps, Nov. 23, 1863, Kelly's Division, Second Brigade: First (Third) Kentucky Regiment, Col. J. R. Butler; Second Kentucky Regiment, Col. Thos. Woodward; Ninth Kentucky Regiment, Col. W. P. C. Breckinridge.

With Bates' Division, June 30, 1864; Lewis' Brigade Infantry: Second Kentucky Regiment, Col. J. Moss; Fourth Kentucky Regiment, Lieut.-Col. T. W. Thompson; Fifth Kentucky Regiment, Lieut. Col. H. Hawkins; Sixth Kentucky Regiment, Col. M. H. Cofer; Ninth Kentucky Regiment, Col. J. W. Caldwell.

Wheeler's Cavalry Corps, Army of the Tennessee, June 30, 1864, Brig.-Gen. Jno. S. Williams' Cavalry Brigade: First Kentucky Regiment, Lieut.-Col. J. W. Griffith; Second Kentucky Regiment, Maj. T. W. Lewis; Ninth Kentucky Regiment, Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge; Second Kentucky Battalion, Capt. J. B. Douch; Allison's Squadron, Capt. J. S. Reese; Detachment Hamilton's Battery, Maj. James Shaw.

FORREST'S CAVALRY COMMAND, AUGUST 30, 1864.

BUFORD'S DIVISION.

Lyon's Brigade.—Third Kentucky Infantry Regiment (mounted) Col. G. A. C. Holt; Seventh Kentucky Infantry Regiment (mounted) Col. Ed. Crossland; Eighth Kentucky Infantry Regiment, Lieut-Col. A. R. Shacklett; Twelfth Kentucky Infantry Regiment; Col. W. W. Faulkner.

FORREST'S COMMAND, MARCH 20, 1864.

CHALMERS' DIVISION.

Third Brigade.—Col. A. P. Thompson; Third Kentucky Infantry, Lieut.-Col. G. A. C. Holt; Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Col. Ed. Crossland; Eighth Kentucky Infantry, Lieut-Col. A. R. Shacklett; Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, Col. W. W. Faulkner.

Byrnes' Battery.—Edward P. Byrne, captain, 1861; Elias D. Lawrence, lieutenant; Thos. Hinds, 1st lieutenant, Oct. 1861; Jno. Joyes, Jr., lieutenant, 1861; Guignard Scott, 2d lieutenant; Joseph Bell, 2d lieutenant; B. P. Shelly, 2d lieutenant, Aug., 1861; Frank P. Peak, 2d lieutenant. B. T. Shelly, 2d lieutenant, 1861.

Cobb's Battery.—Robert Cobb, capt. March, 1862; E. P. Gracey, lieutenant July, 1861; R. B. Matthews, lieutenant March, 1862; B. H. Gaines, 2d lieutenant, July, 1861; A. B. Danes, 2d lieutenant, Oct., 1861.

It has not been possible, in compiling the foregoing list, to obtain all the names, or even a satisfactory list of the killed and wounded in the Confederate army, either among commissioned officers or privates, from 1861-65. Records of such statistics are not easily, if at all attainable, and this interesting feature, so far as regards Confederate officers and soldiers, has been reluctantly omitted.

DEATHS IN KENTUCKY UNION TROOPS DURING THE CIVIL WAR.

ORGANIZATION.	Killed and died of wounds.		Of disease and other causes.		Prisoners of war died.		Discharged for Disability.	Aggregate Deaths, Officers and Men.	Total No. Mustered.
	Offic'rs.	Enlisted Men.	Offic'rs.	Enlisted Men.	Offic'rs	Enlisted. Men.
First Cavalry	5	51	1	172	.....	119	142	348	1413
Second Cavalry	5	47	1	113	.....	14	289	180	997
Third Cavalry	3	50	3	161	.....	8	104	215	1200
Fourth Cavalry	1	30	1	101	.....	55	168	188	826
Fifth Cavalry	4	31	5	154	.....	16	117	210	879
Sixth Cavalry	2	29	4	200	.....	58	170	293	1350
Seventh Cavalry	1	21	6	115	.....	10	153	153	1142
Eighth Cavalry	1	7	4	109	.....	.....	63	121	1288
Ninth Cavalry	.....	5	1	103	.....	.....	85	109	1258
Tenth Cavalry	.....	11	1	61	.....	2	30	75	1235
Eleventh Cavalry	1	16	1	100	1	145	152	264	1280
Twelfth Cavalry	3	18	4	146	.....	68	252	239	1690
Thirteenth Cavalry	.....	9	1	86	1	.....	8	97	1241
Fourteenth Cavalry	.....	13	2	69	.....	.....	11	84	1296
Fifteenth Cavalry	1	1	1	62	.....	.....	30	65	631
Sixteenth Cavalry	.....	3	1	55	.....	3	23	62	.....
Seventeenth Cavalry	.....	6	2	68	.....	.....	47	76	1266
Artillery	.....	14	1	78	.....	.....	175	93	1285
First Infantry	.....	61	1	52	.....	30	182	144	1105
Second Infantry	3	76	1	82	.....	9	216	171	1158
Third Infantry	6	94	.....	186	.....	19	214	305	1076
Fourth Infantry	1	114	4	244	.....	92	320	455	1858
Fifth Infantry	8	143	4	125	.....	31	190	311	1050
Sixth Infantry	10	99	5	83	.....	17	221	214	975
Seventh Infantry	3	38	2	287	.....	.....	189	330	1169
Eighth Infantry	4	53	1	128	.....	21	85	207	1033
Ninth Infantry	7	95	3	236	.....	14	251	355	1135
Tenth Infantry	2	68	5	138	.....	10	156	223	969
Eleventh Infantry	2	45	2	185	1	35	186	270	979
Twelfth Infantry	1	38	5	177	.....	20	41	241	994
Thirteenth Infantry	8	47	6	164	.....	17	185	242	982
Fourteenth Infantry	5	49	5	145	.....	6	107	210	1325
Fifteenth Infantry	9	106	1	103	.....	10	245	249	969
Sixteenth Infantry	2	50	5	129	.....	3	35	189	895
Seventeenth Infantry	8	122	5	141	.....	17	316	293	1499
Eighteenth Infantry	5	83	1	136	.....	23	45	248	929
Nineteenth Infantry	1	40	3	154	.....	3	187	201	962
Twentieth Infantry	.....	38	3	193	.....	5	193	239	991
Twenty-first Infantry	3	58	6	151	.....	5	209	223	939
Twenty-second Infantry	3	50	3	144	.....	7	198	207	1013
Twenty-third Infantry	4	81	.....	98	.....	9	266	192	1018
Twenty-fourth Infantry	2	27	3	175	.....	6	119	213	1064
Twenty-sixth Infantry	2	35	2	143	.....	6	156	188	1160
Twenty-seventh Infantry	1	35	1	163	.....	20	135	220	826
Twenty-eighth Infantry	1	36	1	67	.....	9	174	114	842
Thirtieth Infantry	2	23	.....	70	.....	3	16	98	882
Thirty-second Infantry	.....	.....	1	42	.....	5	17	48	923
Thirty-third Infantry	.....	.....	.....	22	.....	.....	.....	22	.....
Thirty-fourth Infantry	.....	3	2	62	.....	2	145	69	894
Thirty-fifth Infantry	.....	8	.....	51	.....	.....	8	59	962
Thirty-seventh Infantry	.....	8	.....	103	.....	.....	11	111	876
Thirty-ninth Infantry	3	23	3	178	.....	23	64	230	1358
Fortieth Infantry	.....	8	2	81	.....	13	18	104	1036
Forty-fifth Infantry	.....	10	1	95	.....	15	12	121	1000
Forty-seventh Infantry	.....	1	4	72	.....	1	4	78	946
Forty-eighth Infantry	.....	7	1	103	.....	.....	3	111	882
Forty-ninth Infantry	.....	1	1	78	.....	.....	9	80	946
Fifty-second Infantry	.....	11	1	50	.....	3	5	65	889
Fifty-third Infantry	1	8	.....	39	.....	2	62	50	1058
Fifty-fourth Infantry	.....	1	.....	29	.....	.....	58	30	854
Fifty-fifth Infantry	.....	7	2	29	.....	.....	79	38	873
Engineers	.....	.....	.....	8	.....	.....	7	8	43
Unassigned	.....	19	.....	96	.....	8	.....	123	407
Totals	134	2291	136	7190	3	1017	7358	10771	64190
Veteran Cavalry	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	233	.....	2655
Veteran Infantry	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1100	.....	5430
Total casualties computed in original organizations	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	8691	.....	72275

PART II.

J. Corbett Sr

Elizabeth E. Corbett

THE JACKSON PURCHASE.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.*

JACKSON'S PURCHASE, The Purchase and the Purchase District are various titles applied to an important region of country, which the general historian has hitherto largely ignored. This district, full of interest on account of what both nature and man have done for it, lies between the Tennessee River and the great Mississippi, east and west, and stretches from the Ohio River to the northern limit of Mississippi, embracing what are usually known as Western Kentucky and West Tennessee. In Western Kentucky it includes seven counties, viz.: Ballard, Hickman, Fulton, Graves, McCracken, Marshall and Calloway, embracing something over 2,100 square miles, or 1,344,000 acres.

West Tennessee includes, in whole or in part, twenty counties, viz.: Lake, Obion, Weakley, Henry, Benton, Carroll, Gibson, Dyer, Lauderdale, Tipton, Haywood, Crockett, Madison, Henderson, Decatur, Hardin, McNairy, Hardeman, Fayette and Shelby, probably 6,000 square miles, or 3,840,000 acres.

This history has to do with only that portion of the Purchase found within the limits of Kentucky. The general facts are taken largely from public records, while special and personal items are gathered from miscellaneous sources, and will be found in the sketches of the several counties embraced.

In 1779–80 Dr. Thomas Walker, at the head of a commission appointed for the purpose, surveyed and established a line between Virginia and North Carolina, which was extended to the Tennessee River, and thence to the Mississippi, on the line of 36° 30′. It was finally ascertained that the line as run and marked by Walker was north of latitude 36° 30′. After the Indian title to the land west of the Tennesee River was extinguished by the treaty of 1819, the legislature of Kentucky appointed Robert Alexander and Luke Munsell to ascertain the true point of latitude 36° 30′ on the Mississippi River, and to run and mark a line east upon that parallel. This was done as far east as the Tennessee River.

February 2, 1820, John J. Crittenden and Robert Trimble, commissioners appointed for Kentucky, and Felix Grundy and William L. Brown, commissioners for Tennessee, signed, in Frankfort, Ky., articles of agreement, substantially as follows:

ARTICLE 1. Walker's line of 1779–80 from the southeast part of the State to the Tennessee River, and then up and with the river to the point where Alexander and Munsell's line strikes it, shall be acknowledged as the true one.

ART. 2. Provides that between the two points in the river, as mentioned in the foregoing article, the Tennessee River shall be a common boundary, subject to conjoint use, but that the islands in the river shall belong to Kentucky.

ART. 3. Provides for marking the line between the two States more specifically, whenever the two States, by their governors, shall desire the same.

February 11, 1820, the legislature of Kentucky approved the report of the commissioners, and specially designated the boundary of the State. As referring to the Purchase District, it was agreed to be the "line run by Alexander and Munsell on the parallel of latitude 36° 30′ to the middle of the channel of the Mississippi River, opposite the point on the Mississippi below New Madrid, fixed, marked and ascertained by them as the point of intersection of said parallel of latitude and said river; thence up said river to the mouth of the Ohio River, including within the boundary of Kentucky the islands in said Mississippi River, known by the numbers one, two, three, five (or Wolf Island) and eight; thence across the Ohio River to the northwest bank at low water mark; thence up the northwestern bank of said river at low water mark." Each county along the Mississippi and the Ohio to have the same boundaries as the State, and to have the control of the islands in the river opposite its territory. The boundary along the Ohio is the same as that fixed by Virginia when she ceded to the general government the Northwest Territory, embracing Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, viz.: low water mark on the north side.

*Chapters Nos. 1, 4, 7, 8, 9, of Part II, by J. Fraise Richards, and chapters Nos. 2, 3, 5, 6, by G. N. Berry.

In 1859, Austin P. Cox and Charles Briggs, commissioners from Kentucky, met two commissioners from Tennessee, and, commencing on the Mississippi River below New Madrid, ascertained the true line and fixed every mile stones of demarcation, thus complying with the articles of agreement of 1820, and permanently adjusting the boundary.

"To settle all territorial controversies, and to remove all ground of complaint or dissatisfaction that might arise to interrupt the peace and harmony which have so long and so happily existed between the United States of America and the Chickasaw Nation of Indians, James Monroe, President of the United States, by Isaac Shelby and Andrew Jackson, of the one part, and the whole Chickasaw Nation, by their chiefs, head men, and warriors, in full council assembled, of the other part, have agreed on the following articles which, when ratified by the President and Senate of the United States of America, shall form a treaty binding on all parties:"

ARTICLE 1. Peace and friendship are hereby firmly established and made perpetual between the United States of America and the Chickasaw Nation of Indians.

ART. 2. To obtain the object of the foregoing article, the Chickasaw Nation of Indians cede to the United States of America (with the exception of such reservation as shall be hereafter mentioned), all claim or title which the said nation has to the land lying north of the south boundary of the State of Tennessee, which is bounded south by the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude, and which lands, hereby ceded, lie within the following boundaries, viz.: Beginning on the Tennessee River, about thirty-five miles, by water, below Col. George Colbert's ferry, where the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude strikes the same; thence due west, with said degree of north latitude, to where it cuts the Mississippi River at or near the Chickasaw Bluffs; thence up the said Mississippi River to the mouth of the Ohio; thence up the Ohio River to the mouth of Tennessee River; thence up the Tennessee to the place of beginning.

ART. 3. In consideration of relinquishment of claim and cession of lands in the preceding article and to perpetuate the happiness of the Chickasaw Nation of Indians, the commissioners of the United States, before named, agree to allow the said Nation the sum of twenty thousand dollars per annum, for fifteen successive years, to be paid annually; and, as a further consideration for the objects aforesaid, and at the request of the chiefs of the said Nation, the commissioners agree to pay Capt. John Gordon of Tennessee, the sum of one thousand one hundred and fifteen dollars, it being a debt due by Gen. William Colbert, of said Nation, to the aforesaid Gordon; and the further sum of two thousand dollars, due by said Nation of Indians, to Capt. David Smith, now of Kentucky, for that sum by him expended, in supplying himself and forty-five soldiers from Tennessee, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, when assisting them (at their request and invitation) in defending their towns against the invasion of the Creek Indians; both which sums (on the application of the said Nation) are to be paid within sixty days after the ratification of this treaty, to the aforesaid Gordon and Smith.

ART. 4. The commissioners agree on the further and particular application of the chiefs, and for the benefit of the poor and warriors of the said Nation, that a tract of land, containing four miles square, to include a salt lick, or springs, on or near the river Sandy, a branch of the Tennessee River, and within the land hereby ceded, be reserved, and to be laid off in a square or oblong, so as to include the best timber, at the option of their beloved chief, Levi Colbert, and Maj. James Brown, or either of them; who are hereby made agents and trustees for the Nation, to lease the said salt lick, or springs, on the following express conditions, viz.: For the benefit of this reservation, as before recited, the trustees or agents are bound to lease the said reservation to some citizen or citizens of the United States, for a reasonable quantity of salt to be paid annually to the said Nation, for the use thereof; and that, from and after two years after the ratification of this treaty, no salt, made at the works to be erected on this reservation, shall be sold within the limits of the same for a higher price than one dollar per bushel of fifty pounds weight; on failure of which the lease shall be forfeited, and the reservation revert to the United States.

ART. 5. The commissioners agree that there shall be paid to Oppassantubby, a principal chief of the Chickasaw Nation, within sixty days after the ratification of this treaty, the sum of five hundred dollars as a full compensation for the reservation of two miles square, on the north side of Tennessee River, secured to him and his heirs by the treaty held with the said Chickasaw Nation on the 20th day of September, 1816; and the further sum of twenty-five dollars to John Lewis, a half breed, for a saddle lost while in the service of the United States; and to show the regard the President of the United States has for the said Chickasaw Nation, at the request of the chiefs of the said Nation the commissioners agree that the sum of one thousand and eighty-nine dollars shall be paid to Maj. James Colbert, interpreter, within the period stated in the first part of this article, it being the amount of a sum of money taken from his pocket in the month of June, 1816, at the theater in Baltimore. And the said commissioners, as a further regard for said Nation, do agree that the reservations made to George Colbert and Levi Colbert in the treaty held at the council house of said Nation on the twenty-sixth day of September, 1816, the first to Col. George Colbert, on the north side of Tennessee River, and those to Maj. Levi Colbert, on the east side of Tombigbee River, shall inure to the sole use of said Col. George Colbert and Maj. Levi Colbert, their heirs and assigns, forever, with their butts and bounds, as defined by said treaty, and agreeable to the marks and boundaries as laid off and marked by the surveyor of the United States where that is the case; and where the reservations have not been laid off and marked by the surveyor of the United States the same shall be so done as soon after the ratification of this treaty as practicable on the application of the reserves or their legally appointed agent under them, and agreeably to the definition in the before recited treaty. This agreement is made on the following express conditions: That the said land and those living on it shall be subject to the laws of the United States, and all legal taxation that may be imposed on the land or citizens of the United States inhabiting the territory where the said land is situate. The commissioners further agree that the reservation secured to John McCleish, on the north side of Tennessee River, by the before recited treaty, in consequence of his having been raised in the State of Tennessee and marrying a white woman, shall inure to the sole use of the said John McCleish, his heirs and assigns, forever, on the same conditions attached to the lands of Col. George Colbert and Maj. Levi Colbert in this article.

ART. 6. The two contracting parties covenant and agree that the line of the south boundary of the State of Tennessee, as described in the second article of this treaty, shall be ascertained and marked by commissioners appointed by the President of the United States; that the marks shall be bold, the trees to be blazed on both sides of the line, and the fore and aft trees marked U. S.; and that the commissioners shall be attended by two persons to be designated by the Chickasaw Nation; and the said Nation shall have due and seasonable notice when said operation is to be commenced. It is further agreed by the commissioners that all improvements actually made by individuals of the Chickasaw Nation, which shall be found within the lands ceded by this treaty, that a fair and reasonable compensation shall be paid therefor to the respective individuals having made or owned the same.

ART. 7. In consideration of the friendly and conciliatory disposition evinced during the negotiation of this treaty by the Chickasaw chiefs and warriors, but more particularly as a manifestation of the friendship and liberality of the President of the United States, the commissioners agree to give, on the ratification of this treaty, to Chinnubby, king of the Chickasaw Nation, to Teshuamingo, William McGilvery, Anpassantubby, Samuel Seeley, James Brown, Levi Colbert, Ickaryoucuttaha, George Pettygrove, Immartarharmicco, Chickasaw chiefs, and to Malcolm McGee, interpreter to this treaty, each one hundred and fifty dollars in cash; and to Maj. William Glover, Col. George Colbert, Hopoyeahaummar, Immauklusharhopoyea, Tushkarhopoye, Hopoyeahaummar, Jr., James Colbert, Coweamarthlar, Illachouwarhopoyea, military leaders, one hundred dollars each; and do farther agree that any annuity heretofore secured to the Chickasaw Nation of Indians by treaty to be paid in goods shall hereafter be paid in cash.

In testimony whereof the said commissioners and undersigned chiefs and warriors have set their hands and seals. Done at the treaty ground east of Old Town, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen.

ISAAC SHELBY,
ANDREW JACKSON,

And the aforesaid chiefs and others.

Says Redford, in his History of Methodism in Kentucky: "The stipulations of this treaty were made in Monroe County, Miss., on the banks of the Tombigbee, on the road between Aberdeen and Cotton Gin, about ten miles from the former place. The magnificent oak under whose branches Gen. Jackson and his staff stood, side by side with Chinnubby and his chiefs, on that occasion, like those whom it sheltered, is fast fading away; but the results of that interview are found in the beautiful cities, villages and country-seats, that now dot the territory that was thus wrested from savage hands, and in the school-houses and churches, those bulwarks of liberty, everywhere to be seen."

The foregoing treaty was approved January 7, 1819, by the National Government.

Gen. George Rogers Clark, for his valuable services during the Revolutionary war, and particularly for his operations against Vincennes, Kaskaskia, and other points under control of the enemy, received from the government two tracts of land by patents, bearing date September 15, 1795. One tract containing 36,962 acres and the other 37,000, aggregating when surveyed between 90,000 and 100,000 acres.

This land was located in the Purchase, the 37,000 acre tract being in McCracken County and embracing the present site of Paducah. Its bounds are thus defined: "Beginning at three maples, two ashes and a hackberry on the bank of the Ohio, at the mouth of the Tennessee River, running thence south sixteen degrees; west, 1,280 poles, crossing a creek to two white oaks and three maples standing on the bank of the creek that empties into the Ohio, at the lower end of the island, at the mouth of the Tennessee; thence north, seventy-four degrees; west, 5,598 poles, crossing a fork of Massac Creek, at 1,830 poles, another at 2,340 poles, a branch at 3,000 poles, and another at 3,396 poles, passing a corner five black-jack sapplings in the head of a hollow at 3,840 poles to a white oak and hickory by a small drain, corner to George Smith, running thence with his line north fifty-eight degrees west, 2,166 poles, to two maples and a cottonwood tree standing on the Ohio River, at the lower side of a small creek, and the fifth below Massac, running thence up the Ohio, binding thereon, 8,640 poles to the beginning."

This land, which was mortgaged to pay the debts of Gen. Clark, was finally sold by order of the Jefferson County Court, and bought in by George Woolfolk, in January, 1825, in the city of Louisville. Subsequently it was sold by him for $5.00 to William Clark, who afterward divided it among his heirs.

In the January term, 1844, of the Supreme Court of the United States, an important decision was rendered in the celebrated case, Porterfield vs. Clark. The opinion of the court was rendered on their behalf by J. Catron, one of the judges, on an "appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the district of Kentucky, in a suit in equity, by Robert Porterfield, the testator of the plaintiffs in error, against the defendants. The bill set forth the title to Porterfield, as founded on three patents issued in 1824, 1825 and 1826 respectively, upon entries under the authority of two military warrants, the first issued in 1782, and the second in 1783, under the acts of Virginia of November, 1781, and May, 1782. The title of the defendants rested upon a patent and survey founded upon entries made by Col. George Rogers Clark, on May 18, 1780, by virtue of treasury warrants of Virginia."

The plaintiffs claimed "Clark's title to be invalid, because made on lands reserved by resolution of the General Assembly, for officers and soldiers of that State, then in the service of the United States; also because made on lands reserved by law for the Chickasaw Indians, and also on lands reserved by the act aforesaid, as being within the country and limits of the Cherokee Indians." After tracing the history of the case carefully, and thoroughly weighing the evidence, the Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Circuit Court, and thus quieted forever the title of Clark, his heirs and assigns to this important tract of land.

The Jackson Purchase is substantially an annex to the State of Kentucky. Many of its people feel that they are placed at a serious disadvantage in respect to their proper rights and privileges under the State government. With this feeling strongly implanted in their hearts, they have hoped for years that they might join with the remainder of the Purchase in Tennessee, and thus form a State whose government would be more immediately identified with their interests. So strong had this feeling become during the late civil war, that in May, 1861, a convention was held in Mayfield, at which the proposition to secede from Kentucky, was earnestly discussed and recommeded. The great support given the Confederate cause during the civil war, is a strong proof of the growth of this sentiment.

The name "Jackson Purchase," is attributable to the prominence of the leading agent on the part of the United States Government. It is said that the Indians had some ill-will against Gov. Shelby of Kentucky, and were loth to treat with him, hence the prominence of Gen. Jackson, his associate, whom they had learned both to fear and respect.

The Indians never used the Purchase for any other purpose than that of hunting grounds. No evidences remain of permanent settlement by them, though many old citizens may be met who remember the presence of the Chickasaws in various portions of the district as late as 1830. They removed from their lands very readily however, soon after the signing of the treaty.

During the Rebellion, the Purchase was called the "South Carolina of Kentucky," and Paducah, the "Charleston of Kentucky."

Wadesboro, familiarly called "Old Wadesboro," was in consequence of its being the first land office, the capital of the Purchase. From it emanated most of the business, legal and moral influences of the new country.

The similarity of soil, productions, climate and the characteristics of the people of the Purchase has resulted in a wonderful unity of sentiment and action on their part, extending to their methods of farming, styles of architecture, forms of expression and modes of living. Wisely directed, this unity can not fail to develop the highest and best condition of civilization.

The country is at present, undergoing a transformation from the condition of dependence upon slave labor to that of voluntary labor directed by self-intelligence. To do this in the face of the heavy losses imposed by a war which not only swept away the value locked up in human chattels, but inflicted other severe losses upon real estate, is a task of no ordinary magnitude; and yet, the great masses of the population are addressing themselves heroically to its accomplishment.

The remarkable growth of a temperance sentiment in this district cannot fail to arrest the attention of an intelligent observer. Under the permission of local option laws the people of the various localities are deciding to abolish the traffic in and use of all forms of intoxicants. They address themselves to the problem with no half and half spirit, but throw into it the most intense earnestness. This portends a better order of thing.

A growing feeling in favor of elevating the public school system and making it more efficient is manifest. The strong hold that private and denominational schools have had in the past, is gradually sharing with the rational conception that free public schools are the great defense and safe-guard of a republic like ours. In some cases, hitherto, public schools have been looked upon simply as charitable institutions. This idea is yielding to the truer one that they are the people's colleges, and that to the extent that these are fostered and made efficient will ignorance and crime, with all their evils, be decreased. Schoolhouses are cheaper and better than jails and penitentiaries, and more salutary in their influences. Properly regulated families, good public schools, a pure free press, a holy church and efficient civil government, these are the landmarks of an exalted Christian civilization.

CHAPTER II.

BALLARD COUNTY.

BALLARD COUNTY embraces an area of 393 square miles of territory in the extreme western part of the State and is bounded by the Ohio River on the north; Graves and McCracken Counties on the east; Hickman on the south; and the Mississippi River on the west. It is the ninety-third county in order of formation, and dates its history as a distinct division from the year 1842, at which time it was created out of parts of Hickman and McCracken Counties, and named in honor of Capt. Bland Ballard, one of the bravest and most daring spirits mentioned in the early history of Kentucky. The following sketch of this celebrated character is from Collins' history:

"Capt. Ballard was born near Fredericksburgh, Va., October 16, 1761, and died in Shelby County, Ky., September 15, 1853, aged ninety-two. He came to Kentucky in 1779, when eighteen years old, joined the militia, served in Capt. Bowman's expedition in May, 1779; in Gen. Clark's expedition against the Piqua towns, July, 1780, where he was dangerously wounded in the hip, and suffered from it until his death; in Gen. Clark's expedition, November, 1782, against the same towns; in 1786, was a spy for Gen. Clark, in the Wabash expedition, rendered abortive by mutiny of the soldiers; in 1791 was a guide under Gens. Scott and Wilkinson, and August 20, 1794, was with Gen. Wayne, at the battle of the "Fallen Timbers." When not engaged in regular campaigns, he served as hunter and spy for Gen. Clark, who was stationed at Louisville, and in this service he continued for two years and a half. During this time he had several rencounters with the Indians, one of which occurred just below Louisville. He had been sent in his character of spy to explore the Ohio River from the mouth of Salt River to the falls, and thence up to what is now the town of Westport. On his way down the river, when six or eight miles below the falls, he heard, one morning, a noise on the Indiana shore. He immediately concealed himself in the bushes, and when the fog had scattered sufficiently to permit him to see, he discovered a canoe filled with three Indians approaching the Kenucky shore. When they approached within range, he fired and killed one. The others jumped overboard and endeavored to get their canoe into deep water, but before they succeeded, he killed a second and a third. For this service Gen. Clark gave him a linen shirt and several other small presents. While a scout to the Saline Licks, on one occasion, Ballard, with a companion. came suddenly upon a large body of Indians, just as they were in the act of encamping. They immediately charged, firing their guns and raising the yell. This induced the Indians, as they had anticipated, to disperse for the moment, until the strength of the assailing party could be ascertained. During this period of alarm, Ballard and his companion mounted two of the best horses they could find and retreated for two days and nights until they reached the Ohio, which they crossed upon a raft, making their horses swim. As they ascended the Kentucky bank, the Indians reached the opposite shore.

At the time of the defeat on Long Run, Ballard was living at Linn Station on Beargrass, and came up to assist some families in moving from Squire Boone's Station, near the present town of Shelbyville. They proceeded safely until they arrived near Long Run, when they were attacked in front and rear by the Indians, who fired their rifles and then rushed on them with their tomahawks. Some few of the men ran at the first fire, of the others, some succeeded in saving part of their families, or died with them after a brave resistance. Capt. Ballard, after assisting several of the women on horseback, who had been thrown at the first onset, during which he had one or two single-handed combats with the Indians, and seeing the party about to be defeated, he succeeded in getting outside the Indian line, when he used his rifle with some effect, until he saw they were totally defeated. He then started for the station pursued by the Indians, and on stopping at Floyd's Fork in the bushes, on the bank he saw an Indian on horseback, pursuing the fugitives, ride into the creek, and as he ascended the bank near where Ballard stood, he shot the Indian, caught the horse and made good his escape to the station. The news or the defeat induced Col. Floyd to raise a company of thirty-seven men for the purpose of chastising the savages. Floyd commanded one division and Capt. Holden the other, Ballard being with the latter. They proceeded with great caution, but did not discover the Indians until they received their fire, which killed or mortally wounded sixteen of their men. Notwithstanding the loss, the party under Floyd maintained their ground and fought bravely until overpowered by three times their number, who appealed to the tomahawk. The retreat, however, was completed without much further loss.

Samuel, H. Jenkins

During the period he was a spy for Gen. Clark, he was taken prisoner by five Indians on the other side of the Ohio, a few miles above Louisville, and conducted to an encampment twenty-five miles from the river. The Indians treated him comparatively well, for though they kept him with a guard, they did not tie him. On the next day after his arrival at the encampment, the Indians were engaged in horse-racing. In the evening two very old warriors were to have a race which attracted the attention of all the Indians, and his guard left him a few steps to see how the race would terminate. Near him stood a fine black horse, which the Indians had stolen recently from Beargrass, and while the attention of the crowd was attracted in a different direction, he mounted this horse, and had a race indeed. They pursued him nearly to the river, but he escaped, though the horse died soon after he reached the station. This was the only instance, with the exception of that at the River Raisin, that he was a prisoner.

In after life, Capt. Ballard repeatedly represented the people of Shelby County in the legislature, and commanded a company in Col. Allen's regiment under Gen. Harrison, in the campaign of 1812–13. He led the advance of the detachment which fought the first battle of River Raisin, was wounded slightly on that day, and severely by a spent ball on the 22d of January. This wound also continued to annoy his old age. On this disastrous occasion he was taken prisoner, and suffered severely by the march through snow and ice from Malden to Fort George.

Perhaps no county in the Purchase has a greater variety of natural features than Ballard. Mayfield Creek, the largest water-course, flows through the county from east to west, dividing it into nearly two equal parts. The northern half is a high open country, sufficiently undulating for natural drainage, and characterized by a light clay soil, which produces the usual crops of corn, wheat, rye, oats, sorghum, potatoes, fruits, and the finest quality of tobacco in the United States. Collins says that tobacco from this section has sold in several instances as high as $410 per hundred pounds, while $1.60 per pound is no extraordinary price for the finer varieties. The country lying south of Mayfield Creek is considerably undulating, and hilly with an alluvial soil, as rich and productive as any in the western part of the State. Sand, gravel, sandstone, potter's clay, pipe clay and small deposits of coal are found in the bluffs along the Illinois Central Railroad, while mineral and other springs are to be seen in various parts of the county. The mixed soil of South Ballard yields a satisfactory return to the agriculturist; tobacco, corn, oats and wheat being the principal crops. Considerable attention is given to stock-raising, which promises to become the leading industry at no distant day.

The county is well drained by a number of streams, which flow in various directions, the principal being Mayfield Creek, which enters the county through Section 36, Town 6 north, Range 2 west, and empties into the Mississippi River about one and a half miles south of Wickliffe. West Fork, one of the tributaries of Mayfield Creek, enters the latter stream in Section 9, Town 5 north, Range 3 west, its general direction being southwest. Another tributary is Wilcox Creek, a stream of some importance, which empties into Mayfield Creek in Section 5, Town 5 north, Range 2 west. Stovall's Creek, named for one of the earliest families, flows through the southern part of the county, while the north and nothwestern portions are watered and drained by Clanton and Humphrey's Creeks, along which some of the first comers to the county located.

When first seen by the white men, North Ballard presented the appearance of a vast prairie, being covered with a rank growth of grass, which on the uplands did not reach its normal height, while on the lower levels its growth was of astonishing proportions, frequently reaching a height which would tend to create the illusion of a perfectly level plain. The forests of young growth, underbrush and saplings did not exist sixty years ago. Then the timber, save along the streams, was marked only by scattered groves, which favored localities preserved from the ravages of the annual fires which swept over the country. These were started by accident from the fires of the hunters, or by Indians to keep the timber in check, and to clear the country of the rank grass stubble. This practice, when continued from year to year, produced two results, it killed off the forest growth more rapidly than it would have been removed by the ordinary agents by burning and crisping the outer bark, and exposing the body of the tree to dampness, decay and the ravages of worms; and it destroyed every spring or fall the bushes, which had grown up since the preceding spring, and which had not attained sufficient size to withstand the heat. Evidently if the process had been kept up long enough, the old forest would have passed away entirely, and no new one would have grown in its place. One of the most important results to be reached from a study of the burnt districts of the purchase is the almost entire disappearance of the white oak timber. There is a strip of country partially surrounded by vast forests of white oak such as once evidently occupied the district, which is suddenly stripped of its forest growth, except that part immediately along the streams. In the new forest, which succeeded this destruction, scarcely any white oak timber is to be found. In the southern part of the county the old forest growth comprises considerable white oak, laurel oak, black oak, Spanish oak, black jack and hickory on the higher grounds. A change of fifteen feet is sufficient to produce change in timber.*

Skirting Mayfield and other creeks, the timber is very valuable, consisting of white oak, poplar, sweet gum, shag and white hickory, black ash, cypress, bartram oak, winged elm, swamp laurel oak, and a dense undergrowth of grape vine, paw paw, etc. On the low lands, bordering the Mississippi, once grew some of the finest timber in western Kentucky.

There are several lakes in the western part of the county, the largest of which, Fish Lake, is two miles long and about one-half mile wide. It is well stocked with the finest variety of the finny tribe, and is a favorite resort of the pleasure seekers, while professional fishermen ply their vocation in its waters the greater part of the year. The other lakes are Straight, Forked, Indian Camp, Crooked, No. 4, Black Lake and Goose Pond, all small bodies of water.

*Geological Report.

It is a well known and conceded fact, that a greater part of Kentucky was once inhabited by a semi-barbarous people, known as Mound-Builders. "In Town 5, Range 4 west, on Gray's branch is a remarkable mound, an oblong about thirty feet wide, sixty or seventy feet long and fifteen or twenty feet high. Its sides are nearly perpendicular. On the Ohio River bottoms, opposite Mound City, Ill., is one of the most remarkable and extensive mounds in the West, five or six feet high, and spread over about fifteen acres, remarkable for having upon one end of it a mound, oval in shape and about forty feet high, containing half an acre, with trees upon it two feet or more in diameter, while from the center of the big mound arises a third mound twelve feet high. Many relics have been found near these mounds."*

On the bluffs near Wickliffe are a number of well defined ancient earthworks, many of them being circular in form and varying in diameter from fifteen to sixty feet. Large trees, centuries old, are growing on these mounds, which attest their great antiquity. They have been opened from time to time, and a number of curiously shaped vessels bearing rude likenesses of the human face, pipes, stone axes and other relics, taken from their long hiding places. Other mounds are found in various parts of the county, chiefly along the water-courses.

The first appearance of white men in what is now Ballard County, dates from the summer of 1780, at which time Gen. George Rogers Clark, with about 200 soldiers dropped down the Mississippi to a point known as the Iron Banks, five miles below the mouth of the Ohio, where he established a military outpost, which he named Fort Jefferson. He constructed a log fort and several block-houses, his "object being to fortify the claim of the United States to the Mississippi River, as its western boundry, south of the Ohio." Clark was instructed to select a strong position near that point, and establish there a fort and garrison; thence "extend his conquests northward to the lakes, erecting forts at different points, which might serve as monuments of actual possession, besides affording protection to that portion of the country." The Chickasaw Indians, the undisputed owners of the territory west of the Tennessee River, at that time viewed the encroachments upon their rights in any but a friendly spirit, and at once began organizing a force to expel the garrison. A full account of the desperate struggles which the brave little band of defenders maintained, for several days, against their savage foes, will be found in the general history of the State comprising Part I. of this Volume. The old fort stood about a mile and a half south of Wickliffe near the mouth of Mayfield Creek, but all vestiges of it have long since disappeared.

*Collins.

Shortly after the construction of the fort, a few daring spirits, lured by a love of adventure and a desire to secure homes in the fertile region of western Kentucky, came down the river in canoes and made temporary settlements in the vicinity of the fortifications. Some of these intrepid frontiersmen brought their families with them, and in the attack which the Indians made on the fort, they seem to have been the first victims. One of these settlers was a Mr. Music, whose entire family, consisting of a wife and several children, were butchered in cold blood by the savages, and their little cabin burned to the ground over their remains. Mr. Music himself escaped, and during the siege did valiant service in helping to defend the fort. William Tipton, afterward the first settler at the town of Columbus, Hickman County, made a temporary improvement near the river, and was in the fortifications during the attack. He, with other pioneers whose names have long since faded from the memory of man, left the country about the time the fort was abandoned. This was as early as 1784, and from that date until the purchase of the country in 1819, no permanent settlements were attempted in that part of Kentucky west of the Tennessee River. Early in 1818, one John Humphrey moved his family into what is now Ballard County, and settled on the creek which bears his name, about three miles from its mouth. He is supposed to have been the first permanent resident. Solomon Redferrin, Robert Crafton and William Crafton came the same year, and located farms near the same water-course, from three to five miles southeast of the Ohio River. Daniel Doolin settled near the site of Barlow City in 1818 or 1819, and contemporary with him were John Weaver and James Talbott, both residents of the same locality. William Rush made a settlement on the Ohio River opposite Cairo in 1819, and one year later William Holman and Samuel Wilson, with their families, were living about eight miles southeast of Blandville. Wilson made the first land entry in the county in 1825, receiving a patent for 160 acres in Section 13, Town 5 north, Range 2 west, for which he paid the Government the sum of $1 per acre.

Andrew Lovelace settled in the vicinity of Lovelaceville in 1820, and laid the foundation for a flourishing settlement, which sprang up a few years later, when was added to it the Ewell family, the Newman family, Benjamin Kimmell, Samuel Caruthers, Penuel Billington (father-in-law of Caruthers), James Ashley, Israel Linn, William Linn and Samuel Wilson. Prominent among the early members of this settlement was Richard Goldston, who settled on Humphrey's Creek. He represented the county in the State legislature, was governor of Washington Territory during the administration of President Polk, and a member of the convention which formed the present constitution of Kentucky. His brother, James Goldston, was an early settler in the same part of the county.

Among the early residents of the Blandville settlement were the Stovall family, consisting of several members of the same Christian name, but designated by different appellations, such as "Hardin" John Stovall, because he came from Hardin County; "Nigger" John, the only one of the name who ever owned a slave, and "Buttermilk" John, so called on account of his fondness for that "beverage." They were all good citizens, and did much in a quiet way to advance the interests of their respective communities. The Unsells, Abe, James, David and Henry, settled near Blandville, as did also Henry Clingman, Richard Weaver, John Allerton, William Watson, John Watson, James Watson, William Elliott, Adam Hall, David Hall and others. As early as 1821–22, there were living near Barlow City, John Crise (who afterward became the first sheriff of the county), "Squire" Watson, the Webb family, John Staton and family, William Weaver (brother of John Weaver), the Russell family, the Childs family, Freeland Tharpe, George Adams, Matthew Adams, John Ross and John Hughes. The settlements along Humphrey's Creek were increased from time to time by the following citizens: "Squire" Darnall, one of the earliest magistrates, John and Caleb Terrell, and William Leaville.

The settlement at Milburn was an early one, and among the first families gathered there were Joseph Young, Reuben George, J. B. Quigly, James Ashbrook, "Cad" Young, Moses Thompson, Mr. Reddick and others, who will be appropriately mentioned in the history of the village. John Marshall settled on Shawnee Creek ten miles south of Blandville, as early as 1822, and James Curry, a hunter and trapper, made a few improvements on the bluffs below Barlow City, about the same time. Nicholas Smith, Joe Puntney and William Cook, were early settlers on the Ohio River, the two former keeping wood-yards for a number of years. Dr. J. D. Martin, one of the first physicians of Ballard, and afterward county surveyor, was an early comer. John Stone, John L. Henderson, the Mahan family (near the Graves county line), John Hardin, Henry Hudson and Daniel Mosby, were early settlers.

The following early residents additional to those enumerated, came in from time to time, namely: William Dunnaway, James Burrow, Samuel Hawes, Sr., James Bone, William Gilson, Howard Atherton, C. H. Underwood, W. H. Reeves, Curtis Reeves, Ephraim Garner, Henry Garner, Dr. Jesse Dodson, Newton Helm, Thomas Helm, Peter Campbell, Robert Campbell, David Sams, Andrew Newman, William Morrow, Samuel Nunsaker, Isaac Buckler, Henry Buckler, Elijah Woodall, Benjamin Meshew, Henry Dewese, James Dewese, Joseph Jackson, Hayden Edwards, James Edwards, Elijah H. Edwards, Thomas Woolfork, Henry Myers, John Myers, Elijah Hammett, George Reeves, Jarrett Willingham, William Camp, Thomas Willingham, Elijah Scarborough, Elisha Boyd, G. W. McClure, John C. Rude, Joseph Ashworth, Abner Davis, John Davis, Benjamin Bowland, Dr. Reece Bowland, Thomas Morgan, Joseph Bishop, father of Judge Bishop, G. W. Howle, James B. Johnson, William Goode, Abraham Welding, D. G. Stokes, John S. Stokes, Owen S. Jackson, William Cowling, William Short, Moses Lockridge, Hugh D. Smith, Richard Wyatt, Benjamin F. Cochran, Stephen Wray, James Armstrong, M. S. Preston, Freeman Belcher, John Flint, Edmund Rogers, James Pryor, Enos Sutherland, William H. Murphy, Lewis Hughes, Luke Sweatman, Averitt Harper, J. Hayes, Daniel J. Harkless, Henry Fulgham, Joseph Evans, Henry Clingman, Adam Clingman, James T. Graham, Benjamin Enlow, John, Enlow, Martin Dougherty, Robert Fletcher, Edward Freeman, Thomas Dugan, David Menser, John Lamb, Abraham Shelton, Silas Rhodes, D. S. Green, Benjamin Mason, T. B. Martin, Samuel Culbertson, the Hawthorne family, Col. John Ogden, the Rudolph family, Anderson Vaughan, S. C. Vaughan, John Moore, Hon. Oscar Turner, Alfred M. Shelby, James Blythe, N. Ballard, Rev. Willis White, John M. Bookout, Charles Swain, Isaac Swain, Morgan D. Sprouse and Gladeen G. Sprouse, the majority of whom purchased lands from the Government prior to 1845.

The country which these early pioneers had chosen was indeed a hunter's paradise. The prairie and timber were crowded with game of all kinds, and the streams with fish. Without this it is doubtful if this region would have been settled for a score of years later. Far removed from the natural sources of supply, the pioneer was forced to depend upon the resources of the country alone, which, even with the abundance of game, provided but an indifferent support for the family. Deer were found in unlimited numbers, and the early settler had no trouble in killing more than the needs of the family required, right at his own door. Droves to the number of a hundred were often seen, and settlers were in the habit of carrying their guns on almost all occasions, and seldom returned from any expedition without an evidence of the abundance of these animals in the shape of a haunch, or a ham of venison. Bears were also found, and it was a test of the hunter's skill to bring down one of these animals. Wild hogs served to vary the frontier fare. These were animals that had escaped from the settlements and had subsisted upon the nuts and roots of the woodland, and had gone wild in the course of nature. They were of a long-legged gaunt species, and kept within the timber pretty closely. Wild geese, cranes, herons, ducks and other water fowl were found by thousands, while Mayfield Creek, the lakes in the western part of the county, and the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers contributed their inexhaustible supply of the finny tribe to the luxuries of the pioneer's bill of fare. "Wild bees and honey were so plentiful that a man could climb many of the trees and drink metheglin out of the first knot hole he reached."* With this abundance of what are even now considered luxuries, it would seem at a casual glance that the pioneer's life was one of ease rather than hardship, but when it is considered that these were the sum of their luxuries, and what we deem common necessities, and find so cheap, as to pass almost unnoticed, in our estimate of family supplies and expenses, were to the early settlers almost inaccessible and the most expensive, a great change is wrought in our estimate. Salt was very expensive and difficult to procure; flour for a time could not be procured at any price, and even meal, such as we have to-day, was unknown on the frontier. And even the variety of game the country afforded, soon failed to answer the purposes of beef and pork. The system exposed to the ravages of disease, and subject to the trying experience of early farm labor, demanded something other than fresh meat, nor could all give their attention to hunting. The prime reason for the presence of most of the pioneers in the county was to build up homes and lay the foundation for future competence, and to accomplish this the larger part of the community centered here had only their hands with which to accomplish their mission.

C. R. Pile.

It is difficult at this day to imagine a state of society where even the commonest means of social progress must be invented and set in motion, but the pioneer found this fact a very prominent and practical one in his early experience. The supplies brought into the country by the immigrant were occasionally, by the closest economy, made to last until the growing crop or garden could supply the necessities of the family. For years, in some settlements here, the people were thrown entirely upon their own resources. A temporary supply of corn was occasionally secured from some older settler, who had harvested a crop, which sufficed until the growing corn came into roasting ears. As soon as the kernel was sufficiently firm, the grater was brought into requisition, and a sort of bread or porridge was made. When the grain became hard and the grater no longer effective, the mortar was resorted to. This consisted of a large block of wood or stump, in which a kettle-shaped excavation had been chiseled or burned. A pestle was made of a heavy pole to the end of which was often fixed an iron wedge. This was suspended to a sweep, such as is still seen at wells, the lower end of which was fixed to the ground by stakes, converting it into a spring pole. Every cabin had its hominy block, and among earlier sounds about the house was the monotonous pounding of these frontier mills. Some of the better provided settlers possessed hand-mills, which were made of "nigger head buhrs." Others on special occasions, resorted to the coffee-mill for meal to furnish the material for the entertainment of some guest. Although the streams afforded good sites for the construction of water-mills, the necessary machinery and mechanical skill were for a long time wanting. Horse-mills came in to supply the need, and while they were called corn-crackers, they did much more effective work, than the name would imply. These consisted of a small set of home-made buhrs propelled by a large cog-wheel set upon a perpendicular axis. In the lower part of this axis horizontal levers were attached, so that two teams might be attached to give motion to the machinery. They moved very slowly, and the patron was obliged not only to furnish his own team, but was often compelled to wait several days for an opportunity to use it. The first mill of this character was erected prior to 1830 by Mr. Ewell, and stood near the McCracken County line. Mr. Ewell operated it several years, and afterward sold it to Richard Goldston, who moved the machinery about a mile from the original location. David Unsell in 1838, constructed a small mill on Stovall's Creek, about three miles from Blandville. It was a primitive affair, and furnished breadstuffs for the neighborhood several years. In 1839 Thomas Reeves erected a "stump-mill," so called on account of the machinery resting upon a large stump, three miles north of Blandville. It was in operation six or seven years. The last proprietor was William Ashley. Several water-mills were attempted in an early day. The first of these was constructed by John Garner on Mayfield Creek, about three miles east of Blandville. It has been remodeled several times and is still in operation. Mills were constructed in several places in the county at different dates, and at the present time there are a number of good ones in successful operation.

*Collins.

The first distillery in the county was operated by James Blythe, in North Ballard, many years ago. Several tanneries were started at different places in an early day, and in later years the manufacturing and shipping of lumber became an important and lucrative industry.

When the first permanent settlements were made in the present county of Ballard, it formed a part of the counties of Hickman and McCracken, the southern half belonging to the former, and that part lying north of Mayfield Creek to the latter. The legislative act under which the county was created, was approved in 1842, and on the fourth Monday in May of the same year, the justices appointed to effect the organization met at the tobacco barn of Daniel Mosby, near Blandville, and put the county machinery in motion. The justices were twelve in number, one-half of them representing the northern part of the county, and one-half the southern. Those from North Ballard were Rev. Willis White, Penuel Billington, John Ross, James Waters, Thomas Terrel and Noah Turk. South Ballard was represented by Cad Young, Reuben George, Daniel Mosby, Samuel Wilson, Squire Cochran and Thomas Sanford. After taking the several oaths required by law, and organizing for business, the court proceeded to appoint Samuel Upshaw clerk pro tem., and a Mr. Crise, sheriff. Several matters of minor importance were disposed of, after which the court adjourned to meet for the following term at Blandville, which had been selected as the seat of justice for the newly created county. The second session was held at the residence of Jackson Stovall, near Blandville, and among the first business transacted was the appointing of commissioners to contract for and superintend the building of a court house. The names of but two of these commissioners are now remembered, to-wit: Rev. Willis White, and O. P. Miller. Among the other official acts were the following, viz: The division of the county into districts, and the appointing of constables for the same; providing for the support of certain paupers; the appointment of viewers to lay out and locate highways, in various parts of the county, and the election of a permanent clerk of the court. The last matter was attended with considerable difficulty on account of a spirited rivalry springing up between the justices from the northern part of the county, and those representing the southern part, each faction pressing the claims of a favorite candidate. James Waters, of Paducah, was supported by the six justices of North Ballard, while his competitor, Jacob Corbett, received an equal number of votes from the representatives of South Ballard. After a number of ineffectual attempts had been made to adjust the matter, it was finally agreed that the judge of the circuit court should choose between the two men, which he did, selecting Mr. Waters. Instead of proving mutually satisfactory, this action of the judge produced the contrary effect, as the friends of Mr. Corbett were so intent upon electing him, that they refused to abide by the decision. The fight was continued with renewed vigor by both factions, and out of it grew another contest almost as spirited, viz.: the appointment of a surveyor, the representatives of either section supporting their respective candidates for the position. Thomas Terrell, of North Ballard, was supported by the friends of Mr. Waters, and Henry Black, of South Ballard, received the support of Mr. Corbett's friends, the vote being equally divided. After several ballots had been taken, the matter was finally settled by an exchange of one of Black's votes for one of Corbett's, resulting in the election of both those gentlemen. Owing to the unfortunate destruction of the records in 1880, but little could be learned respecting the early county legislation. The first circuit court of Ballard was held June, 1842, at the residence of John Stovall, about one and a half miles northwest of Blandville, Hon. W. P. Fowler, judge, presiding. James Waters was appointed clerk, after which a grand jury was impaneled, and other business of minor importance transacted.

The early judiciary of Kentucky was marked as furnishing men of a high order of talent. Among the most noted attorneys who practiced at the Ballard bar, in an early day were the following, viz.: J. W. Crockett, R. L. Mayes, James Campbell, Sr., father of Hon. James Campbell, present judge of the first judicial district, J. B. Husbands, E. I. Bullock, J. B. Lewis, O. H. P. Miller, Wesley Cole and C. S. Marshall.

The following gentlemen comprise the present bar of the county, viz: Hon J. D. White, Hon. Samuel H. Jenkins, Z.W. Bugg, J. D. Wilds, A. J. Warden, Sr., A. J. Warden, Jr., W. F. Haws, J. B. Wickliffe, T. P. Hayes, I. E. Conley, M. T. Shelburn, W. T. Reeves, W. F. White, W. C. Puckett, B. F. Bailey and R. D. Bugg.

Official dignity in the early days was of a homespun character, and required no great expense to provide appropriate surroundings. The first building in which the justices met, or in other words, the first court house, if the term is not too dignified to be applicable, was the tobacco barn of Mr. Mosby, near Blandville. The next house, was Mr. Stovall's residence, in which was held the second session of the county court. An order for a court house to be erected on the public square at Blandville was made at the second term in 1842, and a short time afterward the commissioners appointed to superintend its erection awarded the contract to one Mr. Coats, who agreed to complete the work according to plans and specifications, and have it ready for occupancy some time in 1844. The cost of the building was something over $6,000. It was built of brick, and contained a court room on the ground floor, and three jury rooms above. It stood until the year 1880, at which time it was completely destroyed by fire, with all the records, entailing an irreparable loss upon the county.

The county was supplied with a jail sometime before the completion of the court house. The first prison pen was a hewed log structure, substantially made, and admirably constructed for the accomodation of offenders. It was erected in 1843 and stood for a number of years. The second jail was a brick building, erected about the year 1867. It served its purpose until the removal of the county seat to Wickliffe, and is still standing, being used as a residence at the present time.

For the better execution of the laws in the different departments, and the more convenient dispatch of business, the county was laid off into districts. These districts contained voting precincts, but under the old constitution of the state, the voters were not confined to any particular precinct but could cast their ballots at any voting place in the county. As the elections were then continued three days in succession, the majority combined business with pleasure, and repaired to the county seat for the purpose of exercising their right of franchise. Under the present constitution adopted in 1850, this way of holding election was changed, each voter being required to cast his ballot in the precinct to which he belongs. The county was redistricted to suit the convenience of the people, and as population increased new divisions have from time to time been created. With numerous changes in boundaries, the districts of the county at the present time are as follows, viz: No. 1, North Humphrey's; No. 2, Hinkleville; No. 3, Wickliffe, formerly Barlow; No. 4, Blandville; No. 5, Breaks; No. 6, Milburn; No. 7, Bardwell, formerly Pickett's; No. 8, Arlington, and Gray's Springs; No. 9, Holder's.

As will be readily seen by consulting a map of Ballard, Blandville, the original seat of justice, is situated very near the center of the county, and it is located there no doubt for the reason that the population at that time was pretty generally distributed. The location seems to have met with general approval at first, but before the lapse of many years a feeling of discontent became manifest in remote parts of the country, some of the citizens favoring a division of the county, with Mayfield Creek as the dividing line, while others were outspoken in favor of removing the seat of justice to some point on the Mississippi River. The feeling in favor of a change continued to increase, until finally the leaders of the movement procured the passage of an act of the Legislature granting the citizens the right to test the matter by ballot, Blandville and Fort Jefferson competing for the honor. The vote showed a large majority in favor of Blandville, which served to settle the matter for some years, although a second unsuccessful attempt was made some time prior to 1880. The destruction of the court house in February of the latter year was the occasion for reopening the contest, and immediately thereafter the friends of division began a spirited canvass throughout the northern part of the county, while those in favor of removing the seat of justice petitioned the legislature to again grant the privilege of voting on the question. It is quite probable that the matter would not have come up so soon had it not been for the fact that efforts were at once made for the erection of a new court house at Blandville, and those favoring a removal saw that if it was not made before this work was done it must be postponed for a number of years, if in fact it could ever be accomplished. The town of Wickliffe had been located in the meantime for the especial purpose of securing the county seat, and to further its claims, Judge Samuel H. Jenkins agreed to build a court house in the village at his own expense, and entered into bond for the satisfactory completion of the work. This had a tendency to create a strong following for the new town, and its friends made a thorough canvass of the county in its behalf. The division faction, seeing that it was impossible to accomplish their object, united with these in favor of removal, and through their combined efforts the passage of a bill was procured, providing for an election to be held on the 6th day of May, 1880, to decide between the towns of Wickliffe and Blandville. The bill further provided that a majority of all the votes in the county should be necessary for removal, and to place the matter beyond doubt the votes cast for Wickliffe were to be deducted from the number of legal voters as returned by the assessors' books, the remainder to be counted for Blandville. The books showed the names of 2,950 voters for the year 1880, and against this were cast 1,760 for Wickliffe, making its majority as per provisions of the bill 570. When the result of the election was announced, the friends of Blandville claimed that the way in which the vote was taken was not a fair test, and they at once procured an injunction to prevent the removal of the records. This gave rise to spirited litigation, and by mutual consent the case was transferred to the Common Pleas Court of McCracken County, and tried before Judge Jesse Gilbert, who decided in favor of Wickliffe. From this decision the plaintiffs took an appeal to the Court of Appeals, after which a careful investigation sustained the decision of the lower court. Immediately after the rendering of this decision, February, 1882, the records were removed to the new county seat, where they have since remained. In 1884, the question was again revived, and gave rise to the most exciting contest ever witnessed in the county. The friends of Blandville, loth to relinquish the honor which their town had maintained for a period of forty years, procured the passage of an act of the legislature submitting the question to a direct vote of the people. Both sides made a vigorous canvass, and the excitement became intense in every neighborhood and hamlet in the county. Mass meetings and barbacues became the order of the day, and at these gatherings would meet the leaders of the two factions, and publicly discuss the superior merits of their respective towns. Wickliffe was represented by Hon. S. H. Jenkins, whose strong arguments in favor of removal gained many adherents, while Blandville was ably represented by Hon. J. M. Nichols, who proved no weak adversary in joint discussion. These two champions visited almost every village in the county, and in the election which followed a full vote was cast with a majority of 291 in favor of Wickliffe, thus definitely settling a question which engendered no small degree of animosity.

Charles Wirsche

The court house at Wickliffe, as stated, was built by Judge S. H. Jenkins, as an inducement to secure the seat of justice. The building is a commodious brick structure, 40x60 feet, two stories high, contains the three county offices and grand jury room on the first floor, and court room and two jury rooms above. The house stands on a plat of ground 100 yards square, donated to the county by Mr. Jenkins, and was erected at an expenditure of $10,000.

An order for a new jail, to be built in Wickliffe, was made in 1883, and the contract awarded to Cosby & Landrum, of Mayfield, for the sum of $9,100. The building was completed and formally received August 20, 1883. It is a substantial brick edifice, two stories high, contains five cells and jailer's residence. It is the best jail in the Purchase outside of Paducah.

Owing to the unfortunate destruction of the records, it is almost impossible to give the names of the different county offices.

County Clerks.—Jacob Corbett was county clerk from 1842 until about the year 1861–62. Since then the following gentlemen have held the position, namely: A. J. Warden, after whom Corbett served another term; T. L. Glenn and James Fisher, present incumbent.

Circuit Clerks.—James Waters, Jacob Corbett, A. J. Warden, Henry Ashworth and W. W. Jenkins.

County Judges.—Samuel H. Jenkins, C. S. Marshall, W. S. Watson, Mr. Gates, J. B. Ross, J. B. Wilds, F. M. Jenkins and T. C. Marshall. The present incumbent is Hon. S. H. Jenkins.

Sheriffs.—John Crise, Thomas Terrell, Henry Brice, L. S. Lee, Barnett Russ, L. F. Marshall, J. H. Davis, W. H. Davis, P. H. Gupton and G. O. Stone.

Jailers.—D. Menser, Wes. Garrett, Elisha Morgan, Howard T. Jennings and R. L. Billington.

County Attorneys. — Charles Wickliffe, Charles Marshall, Z. W. Bugg, T. P. Hayes, Robert Lowry, William Haywood and M. T. Shelburn.

Representatives.—John H. Terrell, 1844; William Thomas, 1845; Reece Bowland, 1847; Thomas F. Terrell, 1848; Charles Wickliffe, 1849; William M. Coffee, 1853–55; Thomas H. Corbett, 1855–57; J. D. White, 1857–59; W. M. Coffee, 1861, resigned in 1861, and was succeeded by William Mercer, 1862–63; Thomas P. Hayes, 1863–65; T. H. Corbett, 1865–75; W. J. Edrington, 1875–77; Thomas L. Gardner, 1877–79, and W. J. Puckett, present incumbent.

Senators.—Samuel H. Jenkins, 1859–63–75–79; Oscar Turner, 1866–71.

To D. P. Jouett belongs the honor of establishing the first paper in Ballard County. The name of his sheet was the Ballard County News, and its first number appeared some time during the year 1865. It was published at Blandville for a period of twelve or fifteen years, passing through the hands of several parties in the meantime; the last editor was J. R. Skaggs. The Wickliffe Tribune was established in 1883, by F. H. Thurman, who published it one year, when he moved the office to Columbus, where it was issued for a period of six months. At the end of that time, Mr. Thurman returned to Wikcliffe, but soon afterward he sold the office to Hall & Co., who moved it to Arlington, where the paper was published for a short time. Jacob White, of Clinton, then purchased the office, and ran the paper in the latter place under the name of the Hickman County Times from 1884 until 1885. The office was then purchased by Wimbish Henderson, who moved it to Columbus. The Tribune was a well edited, seven column folio, and reached a very good circulation.

The Wickliffe Journal made its first appearance in 1884, and is still being published. It was established by F. France, and is a weekly sheet, Democratic in politics, and has already reached a fair circulation.

In the early settlement of the county, the Baptists and Methodists were the most numerous denominations here, and under the ministry of such preachers as the Revs. James P. Edwards, Willis White, Lewis Gourd, Henry Richardson, Finley Bynum and others were important factors in shaping the character of the early community. Ballard County owes a debt of gratitude to the these pioneer preachers, who, at their own expense, labored for the spiritual advancement of its people at a time when "no other help was nigh."

The Baptists built the first house of worship, known as Old Mayfield Creek church, about five miles south of Blandville as early as 1828. The first building was a log structure, which served for a meeting place a num- of years. The organization was afterward removed a short distance from the original site and a new frame building erected, which is still in use. This society has maintained an unbroken existence, and is in a flourishing condition at the present time.

The first Methodist societies in the county are the Old Harmony and Palestine churches, the former about seven miles northwest of Blandville and the latter a few miles southeast. These were good congregations in early days and have been the means of accomplishing much good in their respective communities. Finly Bynum, who is still living in Fulton county, was one of the first pastors. Other denominations came from time to time, and established churches in various parts of the county, chief among which were the Christians and Presbyterians. Almost every neighborhood and village now has its place of worship, and the deep interest manifested in religious matters, attests the high moral character of the citizens of the county. The value of church property in the county in 1883 is as follows: Baptists $3.150; Christians, $5.100; Methodists, $3.550; Presbyterians, $4.250.

Schools were e stablished in Ballard County at a very early date. From the most reliable information, William Hazzard appears to have been the first teacher. He taught a session in a little cabin on Mr. Redferrin's farm, near Humphrey's Creek, as far back as the year 1823. But little is known of Mr. Hazzard, save that he was a man of only ordinary accomplishments, and taught after the primitive manner of sixty years ago. The early schools were supported by private subscription, and lasted from two and a half to four months—the teacher's salary averaging about $20 per term. The first schoolhouses were rude log dwellings, which had been deserted by some family that had found the hardships of settling in the new country too hard to be borne. Ability to read, write and cipher constituted the sum total of a teacher's qualifications. Schools were established in the most thickly populated sections, no districts having been formed, nor any school money from any source except private subscription having been provided. Several terms were taught in the county as early as 1830, and a number of men prominent in subsequent affairs of the county were among the instructors. Like all early teachers they were very severe in their discipline, owing to the size and roughness of the young men who attended, and more than one middle-aged man in the county can to-day tell of the hard "lickings" they received.

The present public school system, though still in a very imperfect condition, has done much for the intellectual advancement of the county. There are at the present time seventy-six districts, sixty-four of which are for white pupils and twelve for colored. In 1883 there were 1,143 white pupils in the county and 476 colored. Total expenditures for school purposes that year, $7,452.27. The amount paid teachers for the school year 1884–5, was $7,265.70. Value of school property $5,940. In addition to the public schools there are two colleges in the county, one at Milburn, under the auspices of the Methodist Church, and one at Blandville. A good school is maintained at the former place, but the large beautiful building at Blandville is standing idle.

Ballard County being one of the youngest in the State, has no military history prior to the war with Mexico. When a call for troops for the Mexican war was made, a number of the early citizens responded, and joined the company of Capt. C. A. Wickliffe, made up from Ballard, Graves and Calloway Counties. This company numbered about 100 men, and before going to the front was in camp some time at Blandville (see Military History of Graves County). Another company, recruited by Capt. Hiram Chism, was made up largely from Ballard, but their services were not required.

During the late civil war the citizens of the county were divided in sentiment, the feeling in favor of the South predominating. Fully 400 men from the county joined the army of the Confederacy, while about one-fourth that number enlisted under the Stars and Stripes, and did battle for the National Union. One of the first companies raised for the Confederate service was commanded by Charles A. Wickliffe, and belonged to the Seventh Kentucky Regiment. Wickliffe was afterward promoted to the colonelcy of the regiment, and Joseph Logan became captain. The company served in the southwestern campaigns under Corps-Commanders Polk, Buford and Forrest. Company C, of the same regiment, was recruited in Ballard County, and went to the front early in 1862. It was first commanded by Capt. Joseph Blake, and numbered 100 men. Company A, same regiment, commanded by Capt. C. L. Randle, of Hickman, was made up partly from Ballard and partly from Fulton and Hickman Counties. Company E, same regiment, was largely made up from Ballard County, and was a full company. The first captain was C. P. Ray. Another company, commanded by Capt. Lee Sherrell, numbering about eighty men, was also recruited in the county. In addition to the above, quite a number of men from the county enlisted in different regiments, and the county was represented in many of the bloodiest battles of the war. A company of about 100 men, commanded by Elisha Owens, was made up in the county for the Union Army. It was attached to Gen. Shackleford's command, and served for a period of one year. With the exception of a few skirmishes between small bodies of irregular soldiers, the county was the scene of no active military operations. Fort Holt, opposite Cairo, was thrown up early in the war, and garrisoned by a detachment of Federal troops, for the purpose of commanding the river. No engagement ever took place there, and the garrison was afterward withdrawn.

Ballard County enjoys the advantages of two railroads, namely, the Mobile & Ohio and the Illinois Central, formerly the Mississippi Central. The latter was completed in 1874, and passes through the western part of the county from north to south. It is one of the leading roads of the country, and has been of great benefit to the county. The Mobile & Ohio was completed to Columbus in 1854, but was not extended to Cairo until several years later. There are three stations in the county, to-wit: Wickliffe, Laketon and Berkely.

The population of the county in 1850 was 5,496; 1860, 8,692; 1870, 12,576. The following was the population in 1880, by districts and towns:

Lovelaceville, including the Villages of Lovelaceville and Hinkleville	1,866
Blandville District	1,540
Blandville Village	476
Humphries	2,021
Barlow	2,363
Breaks	1,272
Milburn District	1,195
Village of Milburn	309
Pickett's	1,130
Arlington Disirict	1,342

Arlington Village	337
Holder's	531
Total value of taxable property in 1846	$ 632,131
Total value in 1870	2,190,588
Value of land in 1883	1,398,004
Value of town lots	119,425
Value of stores	99,680
Total property exempt from taxation	18,370

Blandville, so called after the christian name of Capt. Bland Ballard, is a remarkably neat and beautiful little country town, situated near the center of the county, in Section 3, Town 5 north, Range 3 west, and Section 36, Town 6 north, Range 3 west. It was located in 1842, as the seat of justice for Ballard County, and laid out on the land of J. H. Stovall, one of the early pioneers of the purchase. The several public buildings, erected in 1843–44, gave the place considerable prominence, and as early as 1845, there were several business houses in successful operation, besides the usual number of artisans, physicians and attorneys found in villages of similar character. Among the first accessions were Dr. G. A. Thompson, S. Halsey and William Rutter, all of whom became permanently identified with the town in their several capacities. Thompson was the first medical man, and for several years practiced his profession in the village and surrounding country. Rutter opened a hotel in one of the first buildings erected on the town site, and appears to have been a very popular landlord. Another hotel was opened a little later by Jacob Clusterman, whose house, a small log building, stood near the central part of the town, facing the public square. Charles Swain was an early hotel keeper also, and seems to have done a good business. Among the early buildings of the town were the law offices of O. H. P. Miller and C. S. Marshall, erected as early as 1844, and the private residence of S. H. Jenkins, built about the same year. Charles Blake and William Jackson were the first merchants. They brought goods to the town early in 1845, and erected business houses, which are still standing. Other early merchants were Mr. Hendricks, Stephen Stratton, W. M. Coffee & Bro., C. P. Ray, George Cite, Taylor & Shelton, and Warden & Campbell. The first mechanic was S. Halsey, who opened a blacksmith shop soon after the town was located. G. B. Strawn was an early blacksmith and wagon-maker, and Daniel Bodkin kept a gun shop for a number of years, the latter became very wealthy in after years. The first frame house in the village was erected by Capt. Blake several years after the organization of the town. Blandville College was established in 1876, at which time the large two-story brick building 40x84 feet was erected at an expenditure of $7,000. This is the finest school edifice in the county, but, unfortunately, is not being used for educational purposes at the present time.

The first Church building in the town was erected about the year 1876, by the Christian denomination. It is a neat brick structure, and is used as a meeting-place by several religious organizations. Blandville remained the county-seat of Ballard for a period of forty-two years, but in 1882, the records were removed to Wickliffe, and since that time the business of the town has been somewhat retarded. Its favorable situation, however, in the midst of a good agricultural region, will insure it a permanent future as the chief commercial center of a large area of territory. The following is the present business register of the town: Horr & Utterback, G. W. Mantle & Co., and G. B. Wilds, general stores; W. C. Hendricks family groceries; W. M. Coffee & Son and J. W. Boyd, drug stores; R. M. Shelton, D. P. Jouett, J. S. Seay, H. S. Smith and J. D. Terrell, physicians. There is one blacksmith shop, one gunsmith and one barber shop. Population in 1880, 476.

Milburn, situated in South Ballard, near the Hickman County line, is the seat of a very old settlement. The town was located about the year 1830, on Sections 20 and 29, Town 4 north, Range 2 west, and named in honor of William Milburn one of the first pioneers in the southern part of the county. The following sketch of the village is from the pen of Rev. Willis White: "The place where Milburn now stands was first settled by William Milburn, about the year 1822. He was a man of intelligence and refinement, courteous, kind, and possessed a large degree of Kentucky hospitality. The town is situated in the midst of a fine farming region, and was settled originally by emigrants from east Kentucky and Virginia. Among those from Kentucky were Joseph Grundy, Cad Young, John Wolfolk, Mr. Reddick, Mr. Cummins and Reuben George. Those from Virginia, Rev. Joseph Ashbrook, father of J. Ashbrook of Paducah, Thomas Rudd, Moody Hobbs and B. McGary came in an early day, broke the bush, cleared the land, and laid the foundation of the present prosperity of Milburn and vicinity. Other early settlers at or near the town were: Abraham Stephens, father of Isaac Stephens; Rev. Mr. Chenault, Jesse Burkhead, the Hughes family, William Piles, George Hobbs, Moses Thompson and Frank Thomas.

C. N. B. Rollings

"Milburn soon grew to be a town of considerable note by reason of the enterprise and liberal inducements offered by her wide-awake merchants and business men to the citizens, in the purchase and sale of goods. Mr. J. B. Quigley was one of the first merchants of the town, and for many years occupied a leading position in the community, as an honorable, upright citizen and business man. Richard Milburn, J. N. Sanford and Turner Horn were early merchants, and Dr. Reed was one of the first physicians. Milburn was one of the leading business points in the county until the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad in 1874, at which time the growing towns of Arlington and Bardwell absorbed a great deal of its trade. There are at the present time three general stores, one drug store, three blacksmith shops, one shoe shop and one hotel. A large seminary building, 60x40 feet, and two stories high, was erected in the village about the year 1869, at a cost of $5,000. It was built by a joint stock company, but afterward transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, under whose auspices it still continues. The present population of Milburn is estimated at 400."

Lovelaceville is a beautiful little village situated in Sections 25 and 26, of Town 6 north, Range 2 west, and dates its history from a very early day, being the nucleus of one of the first permanent settlements in the county. It was named in honor of Andrew Lovelace, who came to the country in 1820, and located near the town site. The Ewells, Newmans, Goldstons and several other pioneer families settled near the village, when Ballard County was on the outskirts of civilization. The history of the village proper dates from about the year 1834–35, at which time a man by the name of Enos Russ kept a small grocery and whisky shop, which was the favorite resort of all the worthless characters in the county. A little later Richard Goldston brought a stock of goods to the place, and did a fair business for some years. Freeman Belcher was an early merchant; he built a carding machine on Humphrey's Creek, which he operated very successfully for several years, receiving a good patronage from the sections lying on both sides of the creek. I. Kimball and Benjamin Kimball sold goods in an early day, as did also Virgil Lovelace, William McGee and others. Joshua White, brother of Rev. Willis White, of Clinton, and uncle of Judge White, of Blandville, settled near the village in 1843, and erected a steam flouring and lumbering-mill on Sugar Creek, which he operated until about the year 1857–58. He kept a store also, and was among the successful business men of the place. In an early day Lovelaceville was a very important trading point, but like other interior towns its business interests have been absorbed by places having superior advantages. There are several stores at the present time, and about the usual number of mechanics and artisans. The Methodists and Baptists have good organizations in the village, and the neighborhood has ever been noted for the high moral tone of its citizens.

Barlow City, situated about seven miles northeast of Wickliffe, is a small hamlet, which took its name from Thomas Barlow, who opened a hotel in the vicinity of the village in an early day. Dr. Tharpe and William Harris were the first business men of the place, the former having kept a drug store in the village, and practiced the healing art. Various parties have sold goods in the village from time to time, and it has always sustained the reputation of being a good local trading point. There are two stores at the present time kept by John Brown and Mrs. Wooten, respectively.

Hinkleville, named for Maj. Jesse Hinkle, occupies a part of Section 36, Town 7, Range 3 west, in the northeastern part of the county, and dates its history from about the year 1858. It was for several years a mere country trading point, but afterward it was regularly incorporated, and became a village of considerable importance. The first store was opened by Maj. Hinkle, who carried on a thriving business for several years. After him came the Dalton Brothers, W. W. Jenkins, the Truwaller brothers and others. Its business at the present time is a couple of stores, a tobacco rehandling house, and a blacksmith shop. The Methodist and Christian Churches have societies near the village.

Wickliffe, the present county seat of Ballard, is situated in the western part of the county on the Illinois Central and Mobile & Ohio Railroads, and occupies a part of Section 34, Town 6 north, Range 4 west. The plat was surveyed in January, 1880, and consists of sixty-three blocks, of twelve lots each, a public square, and eighteen streets, ten of which run east and west, and eight north and south. The town was named for Hon. Charles Wickliffe, and officially declared the seat of justice immediately after the May election of 1880. The first trustees were S. H. Jenkins, S. B. Caldwell, Daniel Bodkin, J. C. Dupoyster and W. F. Haws. At the time of the survey, there was but one house on the town site, a small building, which had been used by the section hands of the Illinois Central Railroad. The court house was built in the latter part of 1880, and immediately thereafter a number of lots were sold and business soon began to flow toward the place. The first store was opened by James H. Myers, who erected a small business house on the principal street. Next came W. M. Sparks, W. A. Sparks, Boyd & Wall, W. J. Barlow, and others. The superior shipping advantages of the place soon attracted the attention of manufacturers, and in 1881, the Buffington Wheel Company established a large factory, which gives employment to about thirty men. The establishment is controlled by Buffington, Forney & Co., and manufacturers' spokes, felloes and other wood work. In 1884, Messrs. Rothrock & Murphey established a large planing-mill, which is still in successful operation. The growth of Wickliffe, since its organization, has been all its friends could desire. Its present population is about 800. As a business point it enjoys superior advantages, being in direct communication by both water and rail, with all the principal cities north and south. The present business register shows thirteen grocery stores, two dry goods stores, two drug stores, one millinery store, four livery stables, three hotels, one newspaper, one flouring and saw-mill, and four physicians. The present board of trustees is composed of the following gentlemen: J. A. Rich, A. L. Watwood, F. France, J. R. Skaggs and P. C. Rothrock. There are three religious organizations, viz.: Methodist, Baptist and Christian, all of which meet for worship at the court house.

Arlington, originally known as Nevill, is situated on the Illinois Central Railroad, in Section 29, Town 4, Range 3. It was laid out on land belonging to Robert B. Nevill, about the time of the completion of the road, and soon afterward became a prominent shipping point for lumber, grain and live stock. Among the first business men of the place were W. D. Read, R. A. and H. J. Bayles, M. R. Patterson, Boswell & Holt and Mr. Cunningham. It soon became a flourishing village, and is now the second largest town in the county, having a population of about 450. The following is a summary of its business at the present time: Bean & Co., dry goods and general merchandise; Mrs. A. Ulrich & Co., dry goods; McConnell & Bowers, dry goods, groceries and furniture; Megary & Son, groceries; W. J. Layton, groceries; Wells & Stewart, general merchandise and furniture; Sturdivant & McIntire, general store; Sullenger & Co., groceries; J. J. Martin & Bro., groceries: P. D. Read, druggist; Hocker & Peck, drugs; William Rogers & Co., tin and hardware; Mrs. Bettie Mulvoy, millinery; Miss Abbie P. McGnider, millinery; Bean & Hobbs, tobacco handlers; J. W. Martwell, livery stable; W. E. Hall, undertaker; W. S. Harris and W. S. Jackson blacksmiths and wagon-makers; McConnell Bros., stock dealers; Nevill Bros., saw and grist-mill; Mrs. S. A. Wiley, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel; A. B. Hayes, proprietor of the Duprew House, and J. W. Gaddie, postmaster. The Haclan flouring-mill was erected in 1885, and is the largest mill in the county. It is four stories high, and has a capacity of seventy-five barrels of flour per day. Physicians, J. R. Owen, A. T. Hobbs, R. T. Hocker, J. M. Peck, and W. H. Porter, dentist.

There are several churches in the village, all of which are well supported. The Methodist Episcopal Church South, was organized about the year 1876, with a good membership, which has been constantly increasing. A neat frame house of worship was erected, in 1878 or 1879, at an expenditure of several hundred dollars. The society is in a flourishing condition, and under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Hart is doing much good in the community.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is a small organization established shortly after the village was located. The society meets for worship in a frame edifice, the first church building erected in the village, and is ministered to at the present time by Rev. Mr. Powers. The Baptist Church of Arlington was established in 1876, and has a membership at the present time numbering about 200. Their house of worship was erected in 1879, and is one of the finest church edifices in the county. Present pastor, Rev. T. H. Pettitt. There is a large society of colored Methodists in the village, ministered to by Revs. W. E. Watts and A. Parrott. The Masons and Knights of the Golden Rule have lodges, which are well supported.

Bardwell is a thriving little town situated on the Illinois Central Railroad, about midway between Wickliffe and Arlington, and is the center of one of the finest agricultural districts of Ballard County. The plat was surveyed in 1879, for A. W. Violet and Alonzo Shanklin, proprietors, and embraces an area of one square mile. The town was originally called Crittenden, in honor of one of the road officials, but the name was afterward changed to Bardwell, on account of there being two towns of the former name in the State. J. W. & W. R. Turk came to the village shortly after the completion of the railroad, and embarked in the mercantile business, which they have since successfully continued. Commencing with a capital of $200, their business has increased to such an extent that they now have the largest mercanile establishment in the county. Among the business men of the village during the first two or three years of its history, were J. H. Elsey, J. M. Martin, Mr. Dupoyster, Dudley, Nealy and others. Present business register is as follows: J. W. Turk, general merchandise; W. R. Turk, general stock; John S. Davis, dry goods and groceries; Daniel Bodkin, Jr., general stock; Turney Brothers, druggists; John Ray & Co., drugs; John Elsey, drugs; James T. Bullard, stock importer and trader; J. F. Roberts, proprietor of the Ballard House. In addition to the above, there are three blacksmith shops, two saw-mills, one grist-mill, one tobacco house, one millinery store and one butcher shop. The physicians are George A. Thomas, Dr. Turney and William Mosby. Bardwell is one of the best local shipping points on the Central Road, and the seat of a very extensive grain and live stock trade. Its population is about 400. The Methodists and Baptists have good societies in the village, and fair houses of worship.

Fillmore is about two and a half miles north of Wickliffe. It was originally the northern terminus of the Illinois Central Railroad, and at one time consisted of about one dozen houses, one small store, a livery stable and hotel. With the extension of the road to East Cairo, the village disappeared, and at the present time there is but one house standing to mark the place it occupied.

Laketon, seven miles south of Wickliffe, on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, is a small village of about fifty inhaqitants. Its business is represented by one general store kept by James Campbell, one saw-mill, one hotel and one shingle machine. It took its name from the several lakes which lie between it and the river.

Berkeley, five miles south of Laketon, in the southern part of the county, is a small village, the outgrowth of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. It has one general store kept by J. E. Jackson, and one hotel.

Badana, is a small country town of recent growth, in the northern part of the county. It is a good local trading point, and supports one general store and a blacksmith shop.

CHAPTER III.

CALLOWAY COUNTY.

CALLOWAY, the seventy-second county in order of formation, lies in the southeast corner of the Purchase district, and embraces an era of 395 square miles, or 252, 800 acres, bounded as follows, to-wit: Marshall County on the north, Tennesse River on the east, the State of Tennessee on the south, and Graves County on the west. Its topographical features are considerably varied. The country bordering the Tennessee River is broken and hilly, with rich valleys intervening, while the central and western portions are comparatively level, and characterized by a light gray soil, well adapted to general farming. The northwest corner of the county is broken in places and considerably cut up by ravines, which renders the farmer's occupation in that locality a very laborious one.

The northern and eastern parts of the county are heavily timbered, and though much of it has been cut away there still remains sufficient for all practical purposes. The principal varieties of the old forest growth are the different kinds of oak, maple, beech, sweet gum, hickory, ash, cypress, along the Tennessee River, and birch and swamp willow skirting the various water courses.

The timber of the barrens consist of hickory, post oak, white oak, red oak, and such other hard woods as have grown up since the fires have been kept off by the settlement of the country. These barrens which comprise fully one-half of the county were originally devoid of timber, and when first seen by the early settlers presented all the barrenness, without the monotony, which is broken by their rolling surface of the prairies of the West. Along the streams, even in the barrens, grow forests of the very best timbers hickory and oak predominating.

The principal streams of the county are the east and west forks of Clark's River and Blood River. East fork heads in the southwestern part of the county, and flows a northeasterly course through a well cultivated district. It is a stream of considerable importance, and receives a number of small tributaries, all of which play an important part in the drainage of the country. West fork rises about twelve miles west of Murray, flows a northerly direction through a rather flat and very heavily timbered region. These streams frequently overflow their banks, and flood the country for several miles on either side. Blood River, in the eastern part of the county, is a very sluggish stream. It receives several small tributaries, flows an easterly course, and empties into the Tennessee River.

In the early history of the country it appears the first influx of settlers came principally from Virginia and the Carolinas, and located by preference in the northern part of the county. This preference grew out of the fact that there only were to be had both timber and water in rich abundance. The barren or prarie part of the county, which afforded fine pasturage for their stock was not settled till a much later period. Corn was par excellence the most important crop grown by the early settlers. It was, in the highest sense, the staff of life, and for many years constituted the only material for bread. Wheat, though one of the early productions, was not grown to any great extent till after the larger tracts of barrens came into cultivation. After the timbered districts had come under more general cultivation, and the facilities for making flour increased, the crop became more general in the northern part of the county. The other cereals indigenous to this latitude are profitably raised. The farmers pay the greatest attention to tobacco, which is the most important crop grown in the county. The soil seems peculiarly adapted to the growth of fine varieties, and the weed from Calloway is sure to command a superior price in all the markets of the State. The crop grown in this county in the year 1880 was 3,477,563 pounds.

Col. G. A. C. Holt

Speaker of the Senate and Lieut Gov.

In 1846 the total value of taxable property in Calloway County, which at that time included the present county of Marshall, was $860,004. The number of acres of land in 1870 was 238,918; assessed value of taxable property for that year, $1,976,765. The following are the figures for 1884, as prepared by the county clerk: Number of farms, 1,976; number of acres of land, 217,488; value of lands, $1,230,555; number of town lots, 183; value of town lots, $58,640; number of stores, 54; value of stores, $127,445; total assessed value of taxable property, $1,230,555; bushels of wheat, 60,000; bushels of corn, 513,-680; pounds of tobacco, 2,847,000.

In 1830 the county had a population of 5,164; in 1840 there were 9,794; 1850, 8,096; 1860, 9,915; 1870, 9,410. The following is the population of the county by districts from the census of 1880: Murray, including the town of Murray, 3,914; New Concord, 2,161; Liberty and Shiloh, 1,806; Brinkley, 1,883; Swan, 1,938; Wadesboro, 1,595.

The county was named in honor of Col. Richard Calloway, who removed with his family to Kentucky, in 1776. He speedily became an efficient actor in the affairs of the infant settlements, and his services were numerous and valuable. As early as 1777 he and John Todd were elected the first burgesses to the General Assembly of Virginia, while in the spring of the same year he was appointed justice of the peace. In 1779 he, with others, under an act of the Virginia Legislature, was appointed a trustee to lay off the town of Boonesborough. The trustees declined to act, and others were appointed. Mr. Morehead, in his eloquent Boonesborough address, classes Col. Calloway among the lawgivers and defenders of the frontier. His career in the new settlements, however, was short. Like a great many other daring spirits of the times, he was killed before he had an opportnnity to greatly distinguish himself.*

According to the historian, Collins, James Stewart and David Jones were the first white men to locate within the present limits of Calloway County. They came here, he says, as early as 1818, from Caldwell County, and opened farms about one mile east of the town of Wadesboro. Others, well versed in the early history of the country, locate Stewart's settlement about one mile north of Wadesboro, which would place him in Marshall County, but there is no doubt of his having made a temporary settlement in Calloway as early as the year mentioned. Mr. Stewart died at an early day, leaving a number of descendants, several of whom reside in the county at the present time. Of Mr. Jones but little is known, save that he was a true type of the pioneer, and a man of many excellent parts. A number of hunters and trappers came to the county as early as 1819 or 1820, and erected temporary habitations along the Tennessee and Clark Rivers. They spent their time hunting the game with which the country at that time abounded, and made no improvements beyond clearing small patches of ground around their little cabins. Their stay was transient, and their names have long since faded from the memories of the oldest inhabitants.

Among the first settlers deserving of special mention was Banester Wade, who first visited the county in quest of adventure as early as 1817–18. He was a daring hunter, and a noble specimen of the frontiersman of sixty years ago. He made a permanent settlement on West Fork, about the year 1820, and reared a large family, several members of which are among the substantial citizens of the county at the present time. Cotemporary with Wade was Samuel Watson, who settled near the river in the same locality. A little later, came William Smith and William Derrington, both of whom opened farms in the northern part of the county not far from West Fork. The Duncan family, consisting of Asel Duncan and his sons, William, Thomas, John, Crawford, Samuel and Lewis, were among the early pioneers of northern Calloway. William Chester settled on the creek, which bears his name, in an early day, and opened one of the largest distilleries ever operated in the county. William Sutherland and family made a settlement in the northern part of the county prior to 1822, and about the same time or perhaps a year earlier, came William Jones, who settled in the same locality. Jones raised a large family and claimed the honor of having been the first school-teacher in the county. John Harp was a resident of the county as early as 1821, and one year later, there were living on Duncan's Creek, John Swift, Luke Langston and a number of other families, whose names could not be learned. The first settlers in the vicinity of Wadesboro were the Joneses, Stewarts, Sperrys and Wades. The Taylor family settled in the southeastern part of the county, and the Wyatt family were among the earliest residents of northwest Calloway. The early settlers in the interior of the county, near Murray, were Charles Linn, a man by name of Crow, who made some improvements on an island in the Clark River; Mr. Ferrar about two miles northeast of the town, the Saunders family, Seth Pool, Robert Pool, William Melton, Peter Boggess, Coleman Wicker, Mr. Merriman, Henry R. Bailey, Thomas Garrett, Mr. Dunn, Mr. Skaggs and others, all of whom located within a radius of six miles.

*Collins.

In addition to the settlers enumerated, the following persons were residents of the county prior to 1830, viz.: Joab Lassiter, Vincent A. Wade, Lewis Wells, James Ingram, James Clayton, Luke Dees, William McElrath, Jacob Sanders, Harrison Walston, William Curd, Spencer Milliken, Dennison Dees, William Edwards, John Keys, Moza Grisham, Bailey Anderson, Edmund Taylor, John Hodge, David Shelton, Charles Curd, John Allen, Bins Derrington, Reuben Nelson, William McWade, James Bell, John McGrew, George Goodwin, Chapman Miller, Gibson Gray, William Easley, Robert Whitnell, A. D. Jackson, John Hodges and a number of others. The following non-residents purchased government lands in the county between the years 1825 and 1830, viz.: John Eaker, Nathan G. Hale, John Strow, John Elliott, John M. Gardner, Lewis Wells, William Anderderson, William Clayton, George Owings, John Byrne and James Witherspoon.

"In June, 1822, the Legislature passed an act authorizing the opening of a land office at Wadesboro, and appointed Edmund Curd receiver. The act required him to offer for sale to the highest bidder each alternate section of land lying west of the Tennessee River. The law required the land to bring $1 per acre. The first lands entered at the above price in Calloway County, was in the year 1825. In 1827 the price was reduced to 50 cents per acre. Then it was that the tide of immigration set in, in largely increased proportion, and three years later, the county boasted a population of 5,164 souls. The highest price paid for government land in the county was $1.25 per acre, and the lowest price 12½ cents per acre."*

The original boundaries of Calloway County, which included the present county of Marshall, were created by an act of the General Assembly, approved December 15, 1821, the territory at that time being a part of Caldwell and Livingston Counties. In 1822, the Legislature passed an act establishing the county, and January 16th, of the following year, the commissioners appointed met in the town of Wadesboro, and effected a permanent organization. The following are the names of the commissioners, who constituted the first County Court viz.: Andrew Bell, Arthur H. Davis, Thomas Hill, Nicholas Copeland, William Short, Banester Wade, William Rowlett, Lindsay Martin, John Hodges and George Tucker. They organized for business, and appointed William Curd, clerk, who produced a certificate from the Court of Appeals, as to his qualifications for the position. William Duncan produced a commission from the governor, appointing him sheriff of the county, after which he took the several oaths and gave the bond required by law. The second session of the court was held January 17, 1823, and the first business transacted, was the appointing of William Jones and Eli Cochran, commissioners to draft plans and specifications for a court house to be erected in the town of Wadesboro. The second entry on the record, reads as follows: "It appearing that there are not a sufficient number of ministers of the gospel in the county to solemize the rites of matrimony, it is ordered that license be granted Arthur H. Davis, Thomas Hill, Jacob Rowland and William Rowlett to perform the ceremony of marriage." The third order provides for the division of the county into six constable's districts, and the appointment of the following persons as constables, viz.: Merrill Ethkin, Joseph Staton, J. Gilbert, Eli Cochran, Ransom Rowland and Alexander Tucker.

*Rev. Willis White's sketches.

At the March term of 1823, John Canady, Nicholas Pyle, Anderson Jones, Merrill Uttey and John Reynolds were appointed to establish a road from Heath's Ferry on the Tennessee River, to Wadesboro, and Eli Cochran, William McElrath, Banester Wade, Bins Derrington and John Dodge were appointed viewers to lay out a highway from Wadesboro to the county seat of Graves County. The first tavern license was granted this term to Reuben E. Rowland, who entered into, and gave bond in the sum of £100 that he would keep a public house according to the strict letter of the law. An order for a county jail was duly entered and the following Commissioners appointed to contract for and superintend the building of the same, viz.: William Jones, Eli Cochran and Henry Darnell. Following the foregoing entry appears an order for a clerk's office to be composed of hewed logs, 20x14 feet, ten feet high, with clapboard roof, two doors, and one window, the same to be completed at the ensuing July term. The contract was let to Dennis Derrington, who reported the work done according to plans and specifications at the designated time. At the April term, 1823, a ferry was established at Davis Ford on the east fork of Clark's River, and in July following, Andrew Carson, Jesse Sampson and Grayson Cloud were granted license to establish ferries at different points on the Tennessee River. The county levy for 1823, amounted to $591.13, to raise which the sum of $1 was assessed to each tithable. The levy for the succeeding year was $345, at 50 cents per tithable. In 1825, the justices of the peace were George Tucker, William Jones, Edward Curd, Nicholas Copeland, Stephen Howard, A. H. Davis, William Rowlett, John Hodge, Philip Henson and James Watson. The justices for the year 1830, were John W. Lindsay, William Craddock, James B. Husbands, Samuel Watson, John McCain, William Jones, Jesse Milliken, John Hodges, R. E. Rowland, John Irvin and W. Mallory. The following are the names of the justices for the year 1840, viz.: J. P. McElrath, Enos Faughn, H. P. Utterback, S. S. Wray, M. Barnett, Richard Nichols, Joseph Staton, Jesse Gilbert, Samuel Yandell, William Craddock and Edward Curd.

On February 13, 1823, was held at the court house in Wadesboro, the first circuit court of Calloway County, present the Hon. Benjamin Shackelford, judge; John Bearden and Reuben E. Rowland, associate judges. William Curd and James W. Callaway, were applicants for the position of circuit clerk, both producing certificates from the court of appeals as to their qualifications to act in that capacity. The matter was left to a ballot, which resulted in the election of Mr. Callaway. Mr. Curd was appointed deputy clerk and at the May term 1825, he succeeded Mr. Callaway as clerk, the latter having resigned that year. Benjamin Patton and James Breathitt were the first lawyers admitted to the bar of Calloway County, both having been duly "sworn in," immediately after the organization of the court. The second term was held May 15, 1823, present the Hons. John Bearden and Reuben Rowland, associate judges. The grand jury for the court was composed of the following gentlemen, viz.: William Brown, William Wade, William Clayton, Timothy Taylor, Nicholas Pyle, James Bell, John McGrew, George Goodwin, James Stewart, Chapman Miller, Dillon Ford, Boath Maloan, McGilbra Wyatt, Hezekiah Williams, Benjamin Perkins and Gibson Gray, who being impaneled and sworn, and having received their charge, withdrew from the bar to make up their presentments. The parties to the first suit tried before this court were Elijah Goodman, plaintiff, and William Bilyan, defendant. A jury, composed of the following citizens of the county was impaneled to try the case, viz.: John Ford, John Henson, J. Anderson, Elijah Veatch, Aaron Hyatt, John Irvin, Joseph Rives, Thomas Grubbs, William Chambers, William Rodman and William McWade. The jury found for plaintiff in the sum of $1,000. The grand jury returned indictments against Samuel Ramsey, Henry Duncan, Thomas Duncan, John Farmer, John Staton, Jacob Doon, Joseph Staton, and William Staton for rioting. The following gentlemen composed the second grand jury of the county, viz.: Lewis Wells, Jesse Condrin, Hiram Rowland, H. T. Penton, William Reeder, James Baker, Miles Phillery, George Miller, Bins Derrington, David Gardner, Benjamin French, Reuben Nelson, Merrill Utley, Thomas Grubbs, Samuel Watson, James Clayton, John Merrill and John Nutts. The second pettit jury was composed of B. G. Cartwright, Harmon Watson, John Henson, Samuel Yandell J. G. Clayton, Young Hogan, Jesse Ruder, Robert Draffin, H. M. Hicks, Rowland Ginnings and William Easly, before whom were tried John Staton, William Staton, Jacob Doon and Joseph Staton, on charge of rioting as returned by the grand jury. The verdict of the jury was a fine of $1, and twenty-four hours imprisonment to each offender, which was duly enforced. Richard L. Mayes was admitted to the bar of Calloway County, in 1831. Edward Jones was admitted a few years previous to that time.

Circuit Clerks.—James Callaway, from 1823 to 1825; Edmund Curd, 1825 to 1833; Jeremiah C. Wilkins, appointed October, 1833, resigned November, 1836; Edmund Curd, 1836, until his death in 1848; Paris M. Ellison, from November, 1849, until the adoption of the new constitution in 1851. Since 1851, the following gentlemen have filled the office, viz: A. W. Wadlington, R. L. Ellison, Nathan Bowman, P. M. Ellison, J. M. Hutchens and George W. Craig, present incumbent, elected in August, 1880.

County Clerks:—William Curd, Jeremiah C. Wilkins, Edmund H. Curd, P. M. Ellison, John B. England, R. E. Beckham, L. Boyd, J. N. Williams, and R. T. Hamlin, present incumbent.

Sheriffs:—W. B. Duncan, Isaiah Kirby, N. D. Gore, Arthur H. Davis, Andrew Bell, J. Hodges, N. Copeland, John A. Martin, B. Wells, George Tucker, William Jones, John Copeland, Reuben E. Rowland, Samuel Watson, William Craddock, Asaph Jetton, all of whom served prior to the adoption of the present constitution. Since 1851, the office has been held by the following, viz: George P. Linn, C. A. Duncan, Richard Nuckolls, H. P. Utterback, R. F. Mix, N. C. Ryan, J. H. Swift, William Ryan, Isaac Keys, J. W. Fergeson, L. C. Linn, W. S. Bourland, W. B. Keys, R. B. Holland and S. H. Dees.

Surveyors.—Daniel Rowlett, N. Bowman, John Bearden, Charles Curd, James Stone, A. J. Wells, S. T. Coleman, J. W. Stewart, J. B. Dodd, and T. P. Oglevie, present incumbent.

Assessors.—F. N. Gardner, James R. Gordon, I. N. Albritton, James Martin, J. N. Williams, T. W. Lamb, H. H. Miller, J. H. Langston, and J. P. Fisher.

County Judges.—Elisha Hardy, T. M. Jones, James McKnight, P. M. Ellison, G. G. Oury, and W. B. Keys, present incumbent, elected in September, 1882.

Wm. H. Baker, 1850

Coroners.—John Irvin, Reuben Nelson, G. P. Linn, V. A. Wade, John M. Bourland, Willis Strow, John P. McElrath, James M. Shelley, W. P. Guthrie, Nathaniel Miller, Camillus Atkinson, Alexander Holsapple, J. Z. Sledd, Boswell Harding, Moses Padgett, A. J. Beale, J. I. Miller, and W. S. Bourland.

Jailers.—Stephen Jones, James Ingram, Thomas H. Grubbs, James Peters, R. K. Williams, ex-chief justice of Kentucky, Charles McDonald, Thomas W. Pitt, James H. Curd, William H. Diuguid, Camillus Atkinson, Joseph Hart, W. H. Dailey, J. E. Churchill, Matthew Allen, and N. Daniel.

Representatives.—Arthur H. Davis, 1824; Linn Boyd, 1827–29; John L. Murray, 1830–32; Cornelius Burnett, 1831; John Irvin, 1836; Vincent A. Wade, 1837–38; James Brien, 1839–41; Thomas M. Jones, 1842–43; Richard Nuckolls, 1844; Francis W. Dodds, 1848–49–51–53; Daniel Matthewson, 1860–61–63; John L. Irvin, 1853–55–57; Elisha Hardy, 1857–59; Virgil Coleman, 1859–63; Leroy Brinkley, 1862–63; John Whitnell, 1863–65, died in 1865, and was succeeded by W. H. Covington, 1865–67; Francis W. Dodds, 1867–69; William M. Hamlin, 1869–71; W. W. Ayers, 1871–75; John D. Gardner, 1875–79; T. A. Miller, 1879–81; B. C. Keys, 1881–83; G. N. Cutchen, 1883, present incumbent.

Senators.—James Brien, 1846–50; Daniel Matthewson, 1855–59; John L. Irvin, 1859–63; Col. G. A. C. Holt, 1867–75, elected speaker of the senate, February 16, 1871, and acting lieutenant-governor until September of the same year.

Judges of Equity and Criminal Court.—The Equity and Criminal Court of Calloway County was established September 1, 1856, with Lawrence S. Trimble as judge. He served until March, 1860, at which time he was succeeded by Hon. J. M. Bigger, who served until the court was abolished, August, 1861.

Common Pleas Judge.—The Common Pleas Court of Calloway County was established in September, 1867; Hon. Ed. Crossand, judge. He served until September 12, 1868, at which time the court was abolished.

We have already in this chapter alluded to the order of the court for the erection of public buildings in the town of Wadesboro. Soon after the order was made, the commissioners appointed to superintend the erection of the court house awarded the contract to Reuben E. Rowland, who agreed, for the sum of $100, to have the buildings ready for occupancy at the ensuing February term. The specifications for the house were as follows: To be twenty feet square, a story and a half high, covered with clapboards. The floor to be made of undressed plank, the whole to be constructed of hewed logs, "notched down close." The furniture was in keeping with the building, and consisted of a judge's bench three feet high, three feet wide, and twelve feet long; one large bench for the jury and one "good seat" for the use of the "council." The building was completed according to contract, and formally received March 13, 1823. Rude, as it must have been, it served the infant county until the increase of population, and the accumulation of wealth engendered sufficient local pride to demand a more pretentious temple of justice. In 1830, an order for a new building was made, the structure to be of brick, thirty-six feet square, two stories high, with the court room and the usual county offices. John Irvin, David Smith, George Denney, William Curd, and Thomas H. Grubbs, were appointed commissioners to let the contract and superintend the construction of the house. The building was completed in 1831, and the first court held therein was the January term of that year. This house served the people as a temple of justice, and often as a tabernacle of worship, until the division of the county in 1842.

At the second session of the county court, held March 13, 1823, William Jones, Eli Cochran and Henry Darnall were appointed commissioners to let the building of a public jail in Wadesboro, the structure to be twelve feet square, and to be constructed of hewed logs, and covered with "cabin roof." Bins Derrington was the contractor. He completed the jail according to plans and specifications.

for the sum of $177. It was in use until 1827, at which time a new building was ordered erected. The second jail was a log structure, also, and was built by Samuel Peter for the sum of $496.88. It was two stories high, contained one strong cell into which a large trap door opened from above. The door was afterward destroyed by a negro prisoner, who contrived to escape by burning off the large hinges. The jail was abandoned in 1835, and one year later, a more substantial prison pen was erected at a cost of $1,633. This building was constructed of heavy oak blocks, securely spiked together and inclosed by a brick wall twenty by twenty feet in size. It was burned prior to 1841, the fire having been kindled by a negro prisoner, who perished with the building. A fourth jail was ordered built at Wadesboro in 1841, but the division of the county one year later, prevented the completion of the building.

As already stated the original boundaries of Calloway, including the present county of Marshall, but as early as 1837, a movement, favoring a division was inaugurated its principal leader being Hon. James Brien, who was defeated for the Legislature upon that issue, in 1838-39. The movement grew in favor very rapidly, however, and at the ensuing election, Mr. Brien was successful, carrying the county by a decided majority. In February, 1842, he procured the passage of a bill for the establishment of Marshall County, and on the 7th of June following, the division was effected and the latter county organized. Immediately after the division, commissioners were appointed to re-locate the seat of justice for Calloway County, several sites having been proposed for their consideration. After viewing the different places, and carefully considering their advantages and disadvantages, the commissioners finally selected a site near the geographical center of the county, adjoining the village of Pleasant Hill, in section 26, town 2 north, range 4 east, which they named Murray, in honor of Hon. Thomas L. Murray, one of the leading lawyers of western Kentucky.

Orders for a court house and jail to be erected in the new town, were made in 1843-44, and shortly thereafter, work on the buildings commenced. The court house stands on the public square and is a substantial brick structure fifty feet square, two stories high, and contains a large court room on the first floor, and the four county offices on the second floor. The commissioners, who superintended its erection were Jesse P. Stephens, B. G. Imes, G. D. McDonald and D. C. Lynch. The first jail in Murray was completed in 1847. It was a brick building and cost the sum of $2,376.50. The present jail was completed in 1866. It is a two-story brick building, substantially constructed and contains three strong cells.

The first poor farm in Calloway County was established about the year 1849. The land was purchased for a nominal sum, and a one-story double hewed log-house erected the latter part of the above year. It served its purpose for a period of twenty years, at the end of which time it was sold, and a smaller farm two and a half miles north of the county seat purchased. The present building was erected in 1871.

When the present constitution went into effect, the county was laid off into a certain number of election districts, with a voting precinct in the most central part, and in some of the larger districts, for the greater convenience of the people, there were two voting precincts. With the numerous changes in boundaries, and the establishing of new districts at intervals, the county is at present time divided into six districts as follows: Number 1, Murray; No. 2, New Concord; No. 3, Liberty and Shiloh; No. 4, Brinkley; No. 5, Swans; No. 6, Wadesboro.

The first paper in Calloway County was The General Baptist Banner, a religious sheet established at Murray, in 1857, by John Elliott, whose aim was to make it the organ of the Freewill Baptist Church of Kentucky. It had a small circulation, and at the end of a year the office was moved to Princeton, Ind. Mr. Elliott also published the Independent Circular, a small religious paper; during his stay in Murray, the editorial work having been under charge of George T. Sherman. It was discontinued at the end of one year. In 1868, the Murray Gazette was established by J. N. Bolen, who edited it for a period of four years, when Messrs. Hutchins & Holsapple purchased the office. They continued the paper five months and then moved it to Paris, Tenn. The Gazette was a local political sheet, and at one time reached a circulation of 1,200.

The Murray Journal was established in 1877, by W. R. Sinclair. It enjoyed a brief existence of about five months, failing for want of patronage.

The Calloway News was the next paper launched upon the community. It was established by a stock company in 1879, with W. O. Wear, as editor, who had charge of the office until 1882, at which time Dean Babbitt became editor. Babbitt was succeeded by Logan Curd, and he by O. H. Williams. The office was burned in 1884, Mr. Williams being editor in charge at the time. The News was a seven column folio, and was Democratic in politics.

The Murray Weekly News was established in February, 1885, by a stock company, with Logan Curd as editor. It is Democratic in politics, is a large eight column folio, and presents an attractive appearance, with every indication of being in a flourishing condition. Its mechanical execution is good, and its editorial and local departments are equal to any country paper in western Kentucky.

There were among the pioneers of Calloway County, many zealous members of different religious denominations. Scarcely was the nucleus of a settlement formed ere steps were taken to counteract in some way the influence of the lawless and evil-minded. This early led to efforts at religious organization and instruction, and often hymns of praise were mingled with the sound of the pioneer's ax. The Baptists are about the strongest church, numerically in Calloway County. Elder Henry Darnall, of the Old School Baptist Church, is supposed to have been the first minister of any denomination to proclaim the gospel to the early residents of Calloway. He held religious services at various places throughout western Kentucky, and in an early day organized a church at Soldier's Creek, now in Marshall County, which was one of the first religious societies west of the Tennessee River. Another early preacher was Elder Absalom Copeland, whose arrival antedates the county's organization. He founded the Old Salem Church, about two miles southeast of Murray, as early as 1832, and preached for the society at intervals for a number of years. This church still maintains its existence, and is one of the most flourishing societies of the county at the present time. The first house of worship was a common log-cabin, which afterward gave place to a more pretentious edifice. The Baptists organized a church at Wadesboro in an early day, and among the pastors are remembered Elders Copeland, Ephraim Owens and Edmund Curd. This society is still kept up, and is now know as a Missionary Baptist Church.

The Methodists followed closely in the wake of the Baptists, and as early as 1821 or 1822 a small class was organized at a place called Sutherland's Camp Ground, in the northwestern part of the county, where services were regularly held for a number of years. A log-house of worship was erected in the vicinity a few years later. Among the early circuit riders that visited this, and other points in the county, were Revs. Whitnell, A. C. Waterfield and Morgan Williams.

Presbyterian ministers visited the county soon after its organization, and established two societies, one at a place known as Kennedy's Camp Ground, near the Marshall County line, and one on Damon Creek, in the western part of the county; the latter place was known as the McElrath Camp Ground. Revs. John Smith, Charles E. Hay, John McKinney and Samuel Johnson were among the earliest, if not the earliest Presbyterian preachers of Calloway County.

An effort was made by the Mormons to establish a church in Calloway County, and Elder Sydney Rigdon, one of their most talented ministers, was sent here for the purpose of making proselytes. Through his efforts a society of about fifty or sixty members was built up in the southwest corner of the county, the majority of whom moved to Nauvoo, Ill., shortly before the Saints abandoned that city.

The first Christian Church in the county was established at Concord Village some time prior to 1845, and among the early preachers was Elder Biggs, later came Elders H. T. Anderson, Gist and Holmes.

At the present time there are in the county eighteen Methodist Churches, fourteen Missionary Baptist, nine Christian, four or five Presbyterian and four churches of the Old School or Primitive Baptists.

The value of church property from the auditor's report of 1883, is as follows: Baptists, $4,575; Methodists, $2,775; Christian, $3,915; Presbyterian, $500.

An early law of Kentucky, pertaining to the subject of education, was that certain lands in the State should be reserved for the endowment and use of seminaries of learning throughout the commonwealth. The county courts of the several counties were ordered to have surveyed and patented within their respective counties, the requisite number of acres, all of which was exempt from taxation. The seminary land of Calloway County was sold about the year 1842 or 1843, and from the proceeds were erected two buildings, one at Murray and one at New Concord. The Murray building was a two-story brick structure, and contained four schoolrooms. It was completed in 1851 and stood until 1870, at which time it was sold by an act of the State Legislature. The house at Concord was a two-story frame building, completed in 1856. It was destroyed by fire ten years later.

The Murray Institute was established in 1871 by a stock company, the proceeds arising from the sale of the old seminary building, serving as a financial basis for the enterprise. The company was incorporated with a capital of $5,000, which was found inadequate for the erection of the proposed building, whereupon the school district proposed to pay the additional amount required in six years by local taxation. As security for the district, the county issued bonds to the amount of $6,000, which were purchased by private individuals; these bonds were all paid by the district, when they became due. The Institute building is the handsomest school structure west of the Tennessee River. It is two stories high, contains seven large school rooms and was completed at a cost of $17,500. It stands in the midst of a beautiful plat of four acres, and is an ornament to the town of Murray. The school was organized in 1872, by Prof. Henry Nold. The principal at the present time is Prof. H. E. Holton. By a special act of the Legislature, this school is authorized to grant State certificates to its graduates. There are at the present time seventy-one school districts in the county, sixty-two for white pupils and nine for colored. The number of white children of school age by the enumeration of 1884–85, is 4,453; colored, 403. Amount paid teachers for the above school year, $8,000. The superintendent of schools at the present time is Prof. N. B. Barnett.

Quite a goodly number of Calloway's early citizens served in the war of 1812, among whom were the following; William Hutchens, Mr. Marshall, Joseph Washam, A. D. Jackson and Peter Waterfield.

A company was recruited in Calloway, Graves and Ballard Counties for the Mexican War, with Charles A. Wickliffe of Ballard, captain; Edward Curd, first lieutenant, and B. B. Irvan, second lieutenant. The company consisted of about one hundred men fully half of whom were residents of Calloway. Among the living members of this company are P. M. Ellison, William Hutchens, Samuel Hart, W. D. Padgit and John Curd, all citizens of the county.

The people of Calloway County during the late civil war, sympathized with the South. As the county did not lie along the immediate track of either army, and was altogether unimportant from a strategic point of view, it was not made the theatre of any important military operations during the war. Only a few slight skirmishes occurred on its soil, and these were between small parties of the opposing forces, that from time to time passed through various parts of the county. During the latter half of the war, the country was overrun by bands of guerrillas, who plundered hundreds of citizens of their horses, money and other valuables, and murdered innocent persons in cold blood. The town of Murray was burned during one of these raids, and much property destroyed. In the spring of 1862, Gen. Smith, commander of the Federal forces stationed at Paducah, made a raid to the Tennessee River, and did a great deal of damage to the citizens of Murray and surrounding country. The detachment became disorganized, on account of the bad condition of the roads, and the soldiers went unrerestrained through the country, taking whatever property they saw fit. A number of citizens were arrested, and incarcerated in northern prisons, where they were kept several months. "Fort Heiman, on the Tennessee River, in the southeast corner of the county, was occupied for some time by confederate forces under Gen. Abram Buford with one brigade, of cavalry, one (Third Kentucky) Regiment, mounted infantry under Col. G. A. C. Holt, and a battery of light artillery. These constituted the left wing of the Confederate Army under Gen. N. B. Forrest, when he made his successful assault on Johnsonville, Tenn., on the east bank of the Tennessee River, November 4 and 5, 1864. In the latter part of 1863 a small detachment of Federals, numbering about 300, took possession of Murray, and threw up earth-works near the town, which they occupied for a short time. This was the only force of regular troops stationed in the town during the war."*

Wm. Hollands

About eight hundred men from Calloway County joined the southern army, many of them going in sqauds, and enlisting in different regiments at different places. Several companies were recruited in the county, the first of which was raised early in 1861, by Capt. C. C. Bowman. The other officers were C. P. Duncan, first lieutenant; C. G. T. Manning second lieutenant; Elias Hopkins, third lieutenant. They numbered at the time of organization about eighty of the very flower of the youth of Calloway County. This company served one year in Virginia, under Gen. Dick Taylor, but participated in no engagements of any note.

Company H, of the Third Kentucky Infantry, was organized shortly after the breaking out of the war, and left for the front in April, 1861. It was officered as follows: captain, G. A. C. Holt, afterward promoted colonel of the regiment; first lieutenant; T. A. Miller, afterward captain; second lieutenant, John P. Matthewson, and third lieutenant Abner Duncan. The company numbered eighty-seven men, only about twenty-five of whom returned home uninjured, at the close of the war, the rest having fallen at Shiloh, Baton Rouge, Vicksburg, Oxford, Fort Pillow, Selma, Macon, Tishimingo Creek, and other bloody battles, in which the celebrated Kentucky Confederate Brigade participated. This gallant company took part in the campaigns of Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, and Kentucky, and served from the beginning until the close of the war. Company G, Seventh Kentucky Infantry was recruited in 1862, and numbered about sixty-five men. The officers were J. M. Chambers, captain; David Nowlen, first lieutenant; and James Walston, second lieutenant. This company formed part of the Kentucky brigade, and took part in the campaigns and engagements mentioned above. Another company belonging to the Seventh Regiment was organized in 1862, and commanded by Manoah Swan. The original membership was only about forty, over half of whom were killed during the period of their service. Company C, of Col. Faulkner's celebrated cavalry regiment was made up wholly from Calloway County, in 1863. It numbered about eighty men, and took part in the western campaign during the latter part of the war. Captain James Melton raised a company for the same regiment, the greater number of his men being residents of Calloway County. This was a full company and the majority of the men were under eighteen years of age.

Simultaneous with the breaking out of the war, and while the Confederates were organizing at Camp Boone, and elsewhere, the friends of the Union also rushed to arms. T. P. Carter recruited a company of cavalry in the county for the first Kentucky Battalion U. S. A. while a large number enlisted in the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry, and other regiments. Fully 200 men from Calloway fought under the Stars and Stripes and did valiant service in defending the cause of the National Union.

*Collins, Vol. II. p. 110.

Wadesboro, the second oldest town of the Purchase and Calloway County's first seat of justice, was located about the year 1821–22, and named in honor of Banester Wade, one of the earliest pioneers of western Kentucky. The locating of the government land office at the village in 1822, and the erection of the county buildings one year later, gave the place considerable prominence, and it was much frequented by emigrants and land speculators for the purpose of entering the the public lands. The land sales at stated intervals attracted large crowds, and were occasions of great interest and excitement. The survey of the town into lots did not take place until several years after its settlement. The original plat contains eighty-six lots of various sizes, eight streets, four running east and west and three north and south, the whole embracing an area of 160 acres, in Section 10, Town 3 north, Range 4 east.

Among the earliest residents of the village were William Curd, first county clerk; Edmund Curd, commissioner of the land office; Dr. John Burns, the first physician, and Andrew Smith, the first merchant. Mr. Smith opened his store about the year 1823–24. He was a very successful business man, and remained in the village until his death in 1840. David Smith was probably the second merchant. Other early business men were Edmund Curd, George Ingram, Edward Curd, Mr. Hand, B. P. and J. P. Elliott, Mr. Lock, H. D. Irvin, Willis Strow, Mr. Overshiner, Mr. Waddy and Mr. McLeod. Dr. Richard Nuckolls, Hon. John L. Murray, P. H. Beckham and James Husbands were prominent residents of the town during the early years of its history. Wadesboro was for a number of years the most important business point in Kentucky, west of the Tennessee River, there being at one time fourteen large stores in successful operation. After the public lands had been entered and sold, the town lost much of its prosperity, and the removal of the county seat to Murray, in 1842, proved its death blow. The majority of the citizens moved to other places, the public buildings fell into ruins, and a general decay fastened itself upon the once flourishing village. The population at the present time is about seventy-five. The business of the town is represented by three general stores, one large tobacco warehouse, one tannery, a flouring and lumbering-mill, one hotel and two blacksmith shops. There is one church and a good frame school-house in the village.

Murray was located for the county seat in 1843. The original town plat is situated in Section 26, Town 2 north, Range 4 east, and embraces an area of eighty acres, divided into twenty-nine blocks and 137 lots, with eight streets, four of which run north and south, and four east and west. The town was laid out upon the land of Charles Curd and James Price. Among the first residents were A. H. Wear and D. C. Carleton. The first house was built by H. D. Blanton, and stood upon ground now occupied by Dale & Martin's drug store, on the corner of Main and Main Cross streets. It was a small cabin, and served for the first store building in the town. Other early buildings were erected by E. H. Curd, Daniel Matthewson and A. H. Wear. H. D. Blanton and Charles Curd were the first merchants. The first hotel was kept by John Saunders, and A. H. Wear opened the first saddlery shop the same year in which the town was organized. The early physicians were Drs. Holt, Purnell, Tetrington, Eaker, Boggs, Bryant and Penner. The first mechanics were Andrew Vance and A. H. Dettery, both blacksmiths. The following firms did business in the town during its early history, viz: Curd & Matthewson, Curd & Smith, John W. Cobb, D. C. Carleton, McElrath & Sledd, Brown & Elliott, Nathan Bowman, Shelley & Curd and A. H. Wear, the last named being in business at the present time.

The growth of Murray has been steady and substantial, and although a comparatively small town it is one of the most thriving business points in the Purchase. There are at present five large dry goods stores, ten grocery stores, two drug stores, two millinery stores, one jewelry store, one livery stable, one saw-mill, one flouring-mill, one wagon and buggy shop, two blacksmith shops, one tin shop, one undertaker's establishment, two tanneries, one tobacco factory, three dealers in leaf tobacco, and one picture gallery. The following physicians are located in the town, viz.: T. M. Graves, R. S. Coleman, J. G. Hart and J. R. Coleman.

The Baptist Church of Murray was established as early as 1848, and is a strong organization. The society meets in a handsome frame house of worship, and is ministered to by Rev. W. B. Dye. The membership is about ninety.

The Christian Church was organized about the year 1848 or 1849. Their first house of worship stood in the southwest part of the town, and was in use until 1866, at which time it was sold, and the present substantial brick building erected. The present membership is about two hundred. Elder E. C. L. Denton is pastor in charge.

The Murray Methodist Church was established in 1882, and one year later their beautiful frame house of worship was built. The society is in good condition, and numbers about one hundred communicants. Rev. G. W. Evans is pastor.

A masonic lodge, No. 105, was chartered in 1832, at Wadesboro, and afterward moved to Murray. Present membership about fifty.

Murray Lodge No. 105, I. O. O. F., was established in the year 1850, and has a membership of twenty-five at the present time.

The Knights of Honor have a flourishing organization, which numbers among its members many of the substantial citizens of the village.

The present bar of Calloway County is composed of the following gentlemen, viz.: G. A. C. Holt, Oscar Holt, J. G. Miller, T. P. Cook, G. G. Oury, L. C. Linn, W. F. Peterson, J. R. Schroader, James H. Coleman, W. W. Weathers, W. B. Keys and G. C. Diuguid, all residents of Murray.

The population of Murray at the present time is 1,000.

New Concord, ten miles east of the county seat, on Blood River was the nucleus of a very old settlement. The village was the outgrowth of the neighborhood's demand for a trading point, and early became a place of considerable local importance. It was incorporated as Concord in 1835, and as New Concord in 1868. It has lost much of its former prosperity, and has about 100 inhabitants at the present time. There are three business houses, one blacksmith shop, a tobacco warehouse, Masonic lodge and a Methodist Church.

Pleasant Hill, familiarly known as "Pool Town," was located prior to 1830, near the central part of the county, adjoining the plat of Murray. Charles Curd and H. D. Blanton sold goods in the village as early as 1840. The first house on the town site was erected by R. P. Pool, who keep hotel for a number of years. It was afterward used by John Saunders, who opened a house for the traveling public and such guests as saw fit to accept his hospitality. U. P. Pool operated a tannery near the village for some time. Drs. Holt, Purnell and Tetrington were early physicians. The town plat was made January, 1840, and consists of 111 lots, a public square and ten streets, five running east and west and five running north and south. The first trustees were John C. Wilcox, D. Holeman, Henry B. Bailey and Charles Linn. The village was a place of some importance, until the laying out of Murray in 1842, at which time the latter town absorbed its business interests. It is now a suburb of Murray.

Calloway Town, on the Tennessee River, was laid out at an early day. Mr. Dees was one of the first business men, and later came Isaac Wells, and Nugget & Co., who opened stores and carried on a successful shipping business. There is nothing but a landing at the present time, the town having disappeared long since.

Crossland, ten miles southwest of Murray, on the State line, named for Hon. Ed Crossland, dates its history from about the year 1865. It is a mere hamlet, but a very good local business point. The business of the place is represented by three business stores, two blacksmith shops, one tobacco warehouse, one cotton gin, and two physicians. The Methodists have a good church and a fair house of worship in the village.

Shiloh, in the northeastern part of the county, eight miles from Murray, is a beautiful village of about twelve years' growth, situated in the midst of a very fine agricultural region. It was named for Shiloh Church, one of the oldest Baptist societies in the county. The following is the business register of the town: one general store, one drug store, one tobacco house, one blacksmith shop, and two physicians. The Baptists and Presbyterians have good congregations, and fair temples of worship in the village.

New Providence, about eight miles southeast of Murray, is one of the oldest villages in the county. It is a flourishing little town of about one hundred inhabitants, and the principal trading point for a large neighborhood. There are two stores and one tobacco house, one blacksmith shop, three physicians and two church organizations—Methodist and Presbyterian.

Cold Water, near the Graves County line, is a village of recent growth, and dates its origin from about the year 1867 or 1868. It is situated in the midst of a fine farming district and is one of the best trading points in the county; one large dry goods store, two grocery stores, one tobacco rehandling house and one blacksmith shop represent its business interests. The Methodists have a church in the vicinity, and about a half mile off the village has one of the finest schoolhouses in the county.

Bachusburg, is situated in the northern part of the county, about fifteen miles from Murray. It sprang up shortly after the war, and received its name from a Mr. Bachus, who erected a flouring and saw-mill in the vicinity. It is a small village and supports one general store.

Newburgh, sixteen miles east of Murray, is the principal shipping point of Calloway County, on the Tennessee River. There is one large tobacco house, one general store, and one warehouse.

CHAPTER IV.

FULTON COUNTY.

FULTON County, the ninety-ninth in order of formation, is situated in the southwestern part of the Purchase, and is bounded on the north by the Mississipi River and Hickman County, on the east by Hickman County, on the south by Tennessee, and on the west by the Mississippi River, which separates it from Missouri.

The county is divided by the river into two parts—the western, known as the "Madrid Bend," being separated from the eastern by eight miles of Tennessee territory. The land consists of Mississippi bottoms, subject for twenty-five miles to periodical overflows, and uplands which are very productive. It is well situated for drainage, having no mountains, and but a small portion of hill country.

The soil generally is good, some portions being exceedingly productive. Fulton County has the best farming land in the Purchase, and needs only careful cultivation to teem with agricultural wealth. The principal productions are corn, tobacco, wheat, hay, stock and lumber. The bottoms abound with a most prolific growth of timber, consisting of the finest quality of oak, walnut, poplar, gum, ash, hickory, cottonwood and cypress.

The Mississippi, with its deep, swift current and changing bed, affords a rich alluvial deposit to the country it overflows, as well as an outlet for the tributaries that drain the land. The Little Obion, Bayou du Chien, Mud, Rush and Dixon Creeks are the principal streams of the county. It is thought by some that prior to the forming of Reel Foot Lake, both the Bayou du Chien and the Little Obion, instead of flowing into the Mississippi, ran through Reel Foot Creek and Lake, and that the encroachments of the Father of Waters finally cut into those streams and compelled them to empty their waters directly into the main channel.

C. H. Hubbard, M. D.

Reel Foot Lake, a renowned and favorite fishing and hunting resort, is a body of water about forty miles long, and from one to eight miles wide, and occupies a portion of the southwestern part of the county, extending also into Tennessee. Its origin is traced to the earthquake of 1811, as may be inferred from the appearance of the timber contained within it. "It was formed by sand blown out of a chasm opened by the earthquake, and deposited near the mouth of Reel Foot Creek, causing a sudden damming of its waters which spread over the adjacent low grounds, forming the lake and deadening all the timber growing along the banks of the creek. It is a great resort for all kinds of water-fowl, lizards, cotton-mouth and other snakes and mosquitoes, and is full of excellent fish." * Sportsmen in great numbers, from far and near, visit it every season.

"Earth-cracks," varying in width from ten to seventy feet, may be seen in the bluffs on the Kentucky side of the Mississippi. These cracks are bounded by parallel sides rising from one to five feet above the sunken ground between them, and have trees of considerable size growing along them to testify to their ancient origin. They are supposed to have been caused by some sudden and powerful convulsion of nature. In Missouri, near New Madrid, these cracks are still more remarkable.

In the bluffs adjoining Reel Foot Lake, as well as in other parts of the county along the river, are found divers stone implements, carved images, human bones, utensils of earthen ware, devices, etc., giving evidence of the presence of an ancient race of people.

The region of Reel Foot is subject to violent tornadoes that often do great damage to property. It is thought that some of these violent storms have their origin in the region of the lake. "One of these, which can not be traced further south, took place March 20, 1834, between 9 and 10 A. M., passing by Feliciana, on the edge of Graves County, and within four miles, destroying six or seven houses, and carrying clothing a distance, some say, of twenty miles." On Christmas day, 1875, another destructive tornado passed over the county from southwest to northeast, inflicting heavy losses of property upon people in its track. The house of Andrew Shuck was struck about 1 P. M., and completely demolished, inflicting a loss of some $2,500, and severely injuring Mr. W. M. Bacon, his son-in-law. A large trunk standing in the sitting-room was forced open, and the contents scattered far and near. A contract between two neighbors, and left in the house for safe keeping, was carried to Mayfield, and afterward returned. Bank notes, amounting to $180, were carried through fields and woods, and but half of them recovered from limbs and weeds around which they had been wrapped. One negro woman was killed by the storm.

Earthquakes along the Mississippi River are not unfrequent. Beginning about 2 o'clock in the morning of December 16, 1811, occurred one of the most remarkable of these "shakes," as the people are disposed to term them. Convulsing the whole valley of the Mississippi and its tributaries, it expended a large part of its force in Fulton County, and the adjacent territory. During the remainder of the night above mentioned, some twenty-seven shocks, distinct and violent, occurred, rending the earth and thoroughly terrifying the French fishing crews that were plying their vocation along the river. These shocks continued with decreased frequency and violence up to February, 1812.

An eloquent writer, Dr. Lewis F. Linn, United States senator from Missouri, thus described it: "During the continuence of this apalling phenomenon, which commenced by distant rumbling sounds, succeeded by discharges as if a thousand pieces of artillery were suddenly exploded, the earth rocked to and fro; vast chasms opened, whence issued columns of water, sand and coal, accompanied by hissing sounds, caused, perhaps, by the escape of pent-up steam; while ever and anon flashes of electricity gleamed through the troubled clouds of night, rendering the darkness doubly horrible. The current of the Mississippi was driven back upon its source with the greatest velocity for several hours, in consequence of an elevation of of its bed. But this noble river was not thus to be stayed. Its accumulated waters come booming on and over-topping the barrier thus suddenly raised, carried everything before them with resistless power. Boats, then floating on the surface, shot down the declivity like an arrow from a bow, amid roaring billows and the wildest commotion."

* Collins

Four miles southwest of Hickman is Nick Comb's Spring, from which issues a valuable chalybeate water, containing free carbonic acid and various saline matters. With the expenditure of some money upon it, this spring might be made the nucleus of a profitable health resort.

Fulton County, named in honor of the great inventor, Robert Fulton, was formed out of the southwestern part of Hickman County, in 1845. The establishing of the new county was caused by the desire of Moscow to become the county seat of Hickman instead of Clinton. The people of Clinton, and notably Judge James, were determined, at all hazards, to defeat the aspirations of Moscow, and for that purpose united with the citizens of Hickman, who were ambitious of having a county seat. Thus Fulton County, with her 184 square miles of territory, the garden spot of the Purchase, was formed. The records of the county clerk's office contain the following: "Be it remembered, that at the Tavern House of Greenbury Watson, in the town of Hickman, on Tuesday, the 1st day of April, in the year 1845, pursuant to an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, entitled 'An act to establish the County of Fulton,' approved January 15, 1845, Robert Brown, James P. Tyler, Jesse Edmonston, Ralph McFaddin, Shedrick Boaz, Asa W. Clark, Hugh B. French and Thomas M. Smith, severally produced commissions from his excellency, the governor of this commonwealth, appointing them justices of the peace in and for Fulton County, and Thomas James a justice of the peace for Hickman County, having administered to said Brown, et al., all the oaths required by law to be taken by justices of the peace, a county court was begun and held for the said county of Fulton."

The first court was held in the southeast corner of the building owned by the Planters' Bank, of Tennessee, which stood on the site now occupied by Gardner's furniture store. The first transaction recorded is the transfer of 160 acres of land, being the northwest quarter of Section 18, Town 1, Range 5 west, by Goodrich and others to Greenbury Watson, dated February 13, 1845, the consideration being $500. The first mortgage, dated March, 1845, was made by Bruce M. Hughes to Matthew Watson, and transferred 160 acres of land in county, and one town lot in Hickman, the consideration being $2,000.

Sheriffs.—The first man to hold this important trust was Jacob White, whose commission bore date of January 30, 1845. Objection to his qualifying was raised by Lewis Scearce, but was overruled by the court. His oath embraced loyalty to the United States and to Kentucky, and to refrain from dueling. His first bond was fixed at $3,000, and the second at $2,000. He was succeeded in regular order by Robert Brown, James P. Tyler, R. C. Prather, B. F. Easley, Shedrick Boaz, Thomas E. Reed, who filled Boaz's unexpired time, William Heron, R. E. Millet, William H. Roper, John F. Tyler, B. R. Walker, W. C. Johnson and W. A. Shuck, the present efficient incumbent.

County Clerks.—The first county clerk was L. D. Stephens, chosen pro tem., April 1, 1845, with bond of $10,000. Following him were Dick Givens, J. W. Gibson, George S. Morris, John T. Trent, John A. Wilson, A.

M. DeBow and W. P. Taylor, present incumbent.

Circuit Clerks.—Dickson Givens, 1845-51; B. G. Dudley, one term of court; L. D. Stephens, 1851-54; George S. Morris, 1854-60; John C. Gardner, 1860-62; W. A Brevard, 1862-70; J. T. Bynum, 1870-75; T. M. French, 1875, the present incumbent.

County Surveyors.—A. S. Tyler, Thomas W. McMurray, A. E. Brevard and W. A. McConnell.

Coroners.—Robert Powell held a commission from the governor, dated April 1, 1845. Succeeding him were Natham Scearce, H. C. Bailey, Thaddeus W. Thomas, Julian Nail, M. L. McJilton and Peter George. The last qualified in 1874. Others have been elected, but, owing to the failure of the office to pay for the trouble involved, have not taken the oath of office.

County Judges.—Prior to the adoption of the present constitution, the senior magistrate of the county, with his associates, constituted the court. Under the present constitution Lewis Scearce was first judge, and held his position till 1854, when he was succeeded by Josiah Parker, who served without interruption till 1862, and again from September, 1866, to his death in August, 1867. His death occurred Friday morning, August 23, 1867, he being 55 years of age. Concerning him the Hickman Courier of the following day said: "Judge Parker was one of the best men that ever breathed the breath of life. Possessed of all those rare qualities of heart which of necessity win the love of his fellow men, he used it throughout life in the worthy pride of doing good. We doubt if the deceased ever performed an act through selfish considerations. His conduct to all was kind, disinterested, affectionate, generous, charitable, Christian-like."

During the period of the war not filled by Judge Parker, magistrates held court. In October, 1867, B. R. Walker began and held till September, 1870; John W. Wingate, 1870-74; J. H. Montgomery, 1874-78; H. C. Bailey, 1878-82; R. S. Murrell, present incumbent, began his labors in 1882.

Jailers.—John Betts, Julian Nail, George W. Stubblefield,* W. D. Taylor, R. F. Thomasson and T. V. Wallace, the present incumbent, have discharged the duties of the office in succession since 1870.

County School Commissioners.—The duties of this important educational office were begun by A. D. Kingman in 1847, and continued till 1854. During this period the organization of public schools was pushed by him vigorously against a spirited opposition. At first only three schools existed in the county, but the number has gradually increased until every boy and girl with aspirations for a rudimentary education may have their laudable desires gratified. The people have never refused to vote in favor of school tax, a just compliment to the founder of the public school system, and an index to the future prosperity of the people of the county. The work so grandly inaugurated by Judge Kingman was afterward pushed forward by W. S. McConnell, William Owens, Jr., Dr. J. B. Nichols, A. S. Tyler, R. T. Tyler, B. C. Caldwell, and A. D. Kingman a second time from 1881 to 1884. In 1884, the law having been changed, a county superintendent was chosen by the people. J. H. Saunders has the honor to fill the office at present.

County Attorneys.—This office has been honored by such men as E. I. Bullock, 1845-51; A. D. Kingman, 1851-58; W. M. McConnell, 1858-60; J. F. Gardner, 1860-62; George C. Hallet, 1862-64; C. P. Buck, 1864-66; J. H. Roulhac, 1866, only a short time when he removed from the county; H. A. Tyler, 1866-70; T. O. Goalder, 1870-73; George P. Prather, 1873-78; A. D. Kingman, 1878-85, being the present incumbent.

Senators.—Henry A. Tyler, 1869-71, 1875-79.

Representatives.—Winfrey B. McConnell, 1848-49; Guy S. Miles, 1867-69; B. R. Walker, 1873-75; Henry S. Campbell, 1877-78; J. R. Luten, 1881-82.

*Concerning Mr. Stubblefield a little incident is related. A prisoner under his charge seemed to have a pistol in his possession. Drawing it upon the jailer, he compelled his own release, and escaped. This being noised abroad, the court asked the jailer the next morning to bring in his prisoner for trial, when Mr. Stubblefield said: "God bless you, judge, the prisoner has done escaped."

At the May term of court, 1845, the site of the present court house was selected, and the sum of $4,000 authorized to be expended in the erection of a suitable building. The structure, a two-story brick, was not raised, however, till 1847–48. The location of the court house can not be excelled for picturesque beauty. The yard is thoroughly supplied with rich shade, and the outlook along and across the majestic Mississippi is perfectly enchanting.

The first jail, a double log structure, was erected and received in 1846. It was torn down and replaced by a second in 1860. Falling down, it was supplanted by the third and present brick structure in 1872, at a cost of several thousand dollars.

To the credit of Fulton County, be it said, no necessity has existed for the purchase of a poor farm or the erection of a house for the indigent. The public pauper is unknown; should such necessity arise, the generosity of the county will readily supply the requisite buildings.

The first permanent settlement of the county was undoubtly made at Hickman, then called Mills' Point, in 1819, by Mr. Mills. Daniel Baldredge, was born on a boat at Mills' Point (Rev. Willis White says, near Cayce) about the same time, and is supposed to have been the first child born in this county. He subsequently lived on Mud Creek, from which place he removed to Arkansas about 1882.

Between the time of the settlement of Mills' Point (1819) and 1830, quite a number of families located in various parts of the county. In 1824, the following families were settled: Robert and Samuel McKinney lived on the Bayou du Chien, about twelve miles from Hickman; A. M. Rush lived on Rush Creek, named after him, between Hickman and Moscow, near where Parson Finley Bynum now resides; in the vicinity of Cayce Station lived John Meneese, Ben Meneese, Hugh Sparkman, and a man named Drummond. One night, the last three called at the house of William Bailey with the view of plundering him. He endeavored to have them depart in peace, as did also the wife. Failing is his purpose, he shot with a rifle and sent a ball through the body of Ben Meneese, killing him. Bailey gave himself up to the nearest magistrate, Dempsey White, father of Rev. Willis White, who was then a new resident of the county. No conviction followed, Bailey having acted in self-defense. White ordered the arrest of the gang. Sparkman was afterward sent to the penitentiary.

Silas Clark, now of Hickman, lived at Wesley; Abraham Farmer lived on the old Murchison place, about five miles from Water Valley; near him lived Seburn Wheeler and Ben Hamby; near Jordon Station lived Parson Reuben Owen, a Baptist preacher, Mr. Creed and John Huffman.

In about 1824, Duncan Campbell, Martin Oliver, Jerry Mitchel, William Bynum, the father of Rev. Finley Bynum, and others, settled in the neighborhood of Cayce. David Browder was also one of the pioneers of the county.

In 1825, Bill Conley came to the county and entered 320 acres of land near what is now Matson's Switch, at $1 per acre. With him was Mary J. Conley, now known as Aunt Polly Hoffman, who has lived in the county continuously ever since, practicing midwifery. Her first case was that of Mrs. James Alexander, now living in Missouri. This occured in 1828. Since that time she has been present at over 2,300 births.

Of those living in the county when Aunt Polly arrived (1825) Bluford and Wilford Gore, now residing near Cayce, are said to be the only representatives. In 1827, Isaac Barnett, now living five miles south of Hickman, came from Trigg County. About the same time came from Henry County, Ky., Andrew Shuck, still living on his farm some two or three miles from Matson's Switch, the oldest man in the county, being in his eighty-seventh year.

Other old settlers were: Simeon Ramey, Robert Tyler, Mr. Maddox, Billy Morris, Samuel Lamar, Billy Lamar, Mr. Weston, Samuel Hodges, Cornelius Grider, Henry A. Bush and others.

Game was exceedingly abundant, embracing bears, deer, wolves, panthers, foxes, raccoons

HENRY T. NORMAN.

NOAH NORMAN.

and squirrels. Panthers and black wolves killed hogs,thus compelling the closest guard ing of these animals. One day, in 1826, a colored woman, named Tilda Dooms, was down at a branch washing when she was attacked by a huge panther. Her screams attracted the attention of her husband, who came to her rescue with a large knife in his hand. He finally rescued his wife, but in the contest with the fierce animal received on his breast wounds which he bore to the day of his death.

Billy Morris, in 1825, taught the first school about a mile from Matson's Switch. He was a poor man, and his wife, to help establish a home, dug the well at their house, which stood where Luther Maddox now lives. John Pryne was the next to teach, near the present Sylvan Shade Seminary in what is known as Simmon's school house. Other teachers were Willis White (who performed pedagogical duties all told three weeks), George Fair, Finley Bynum, Mr. Singleterry, etc.

Some of the early Missionary Baptist preachers, resident and itinerant, were: Reuben Owen, J. P. Edwards, who built Poplar Grove Church, George White and Samuel Crider, who came over from Tennessee. The Regular or Hardside Baptists were represented by Fleming Cayce, Wesley Bowden, John Starks, Silas Cavender, Abram Cook, Conyer and McGowan. Methodists—Joshua Cole, Peter Sullivan, William Holifield, Finley Bynum. Cumberland Presbyterians—Collins Bradley, Dr. Bard, Hill, William Barnett and John Barnett.

The first society of the Methodist Church was organized, about 1825, at Martin Oliver's, about two miles east of Cayce Station. It is now called Ebenezer Church. The first church by the Missionary Baptists was the Poplar Grove Church, organized probably in 1828-29. Its organization has been continued to the present time. Another was established a little later near Reuben Owens', three miles south of Cayce Station; the first Hardside Baptist Church in the county, and by Aunt Polly Hoffman, said to be the first of any kind, was organized in 1826, on Mud Creek, and consisted of Elijah Creed, Mary J. Creed, Jesse Faley, Patsey Dunn and old Mr. Revel. Meetings were first held at Elijah Creed's. The Presbyterians organized about the same date at Mr. Samuel Hodge's. Worship is now conducted at Union Church, three miles east of Hodge's.

The census of 1880 gives Fulton County a total population of 7,977. The assessor's returns for 1883 show: Total number of acres in county, 104,358; valued at $975,100. Corn produced 498,600 bushels; wheat produced 91,465 bushels; hay produced 3,030 tons; tobacco produced 856,440 pounds. Mules 1,052, valued at $79,670; horses 1,630, valued at $102,955; sheep 2,210, valued at $4,565; hogs 7,520, valued at $17,445; cattle 2,531, valued at $21,000. Number of stores 87; pleasure carriages valued at $15,270; watches valued at $15,355.

In the presidential election of 1884, the vote stood: Cleveland, 987; Blaine, 307; St. John, 20.

The records show that Fulton County has been liberal in making appropriations for locating public roads and building suitable bridges. These have, in many cases, been kept in condition at heavy expense.

In 1853, the Hickman & Obion Railroad was projected, a charter secured in 1854, and the road completed in 1858 from Hickman to Union City. In 1856 the Nashville & North-Western road obtained possession of it, and changed its name about 1869-70 to the Nashville, Chattanooga & St Louis Railroad.

The Mobile & Ohio Railroad, passing through the county from north to south, was built about 1856.

The Southern Divison of the Illinois Central, passing through the eastern portion of the county and giving such superior transportation facilities between the North and the South, was built in 1873-74 from Jackson to Cairo, as the extension of the Mississippi Central Railroad.

The Chesapeake, Ohio and South-Western Railroad passes through the southeastern corner of the county, and was graded about 1860, reaching the town of Fulton in 1861.

It forms an important link in Huntington's Trans-Continental line.

Fulton County was, during the late Civil war, the scene of military activity by both the Confederates and Federals. In addition to the operations of the regular troops of the great armies, hordes of guerrillas swept over the country, destroying life and property indiscriminately.

The Confederate cause was represented by several organizations that did heroic service on many fields. Among these organizations the following are mentioned: The Alexander Guards, commanded by Capt. Edward Crossland, went to Virginia and participated in the first battle of Bull Run in 1861. Capt. John A. Lauderdale organized a company which went to Tennessee and joined the Fifth Tennessee Cavalry. He afterward became a Major and was assigned to the Quartermaster's department. Capt. Henry Campbell raised a company which went to Columbus, Ky., joined the Seventh Kentucky Infantry, and was subsequently mounted to operate with Forrest's Cavalry. Capt. Henry A. Tyler recruited a company that fought with Forrest's command through the war. Last but not least was a company of Home Militia organized in 1861 by Capt. Thomas R. McMahon to protect Hickman against the encroachments of the Federal gunboats. A Confederate flag floating from the banks of the river was supposed to be likely to provoke an attack from the gunboats passing up the river. McMahon's brave guards, armed with rifles, flint-lock muskets, pitchforks, battle axes, spears, spades and other hostile weapons, were ready to protect their flag or shed their last drop of blood, when lo! the boats steamed by without so much as even noticing the defiant banner supported by its valiant defenders.

The Union cause had few representatives in the county. If soldiers enlisted elsewhere no record of the same has been preserved, except in the Adjutant-General's report of the State and in the single case of Joseph Dougal, who served valiantly to preserve the National Union. His name deserves special mention.

Hickman, the county seat, is situated on the eastern bank of the Mississippi River, thirty-eight miles below its confluence with the Ohio, at Cairo, 200 feet above low-water level. It consists of three divisions: West Hickman, East Hickman and Hickman. The main residence portion is high on the bluff, and is reached by a series of steps, the business part being found along the river front. "Prior to 1834," says Rev. Willis White, "the site where Hickman now stands was called Mills' Point, in honor of Mr. Mills, who settled there in 1819. The writer visited the place in the fall of 1824, and there was but one house in it. It stood near the Millet corner, and was occupied by John Doons, whose father Jake Doons lived about two miles on the bluff above Hickman near where the railroad now ascends the bluff. The river was about one half mile from the cabin where John Doons lived. The site on which Hickman stands was covered by a military survey, known and recognized as good. This was not questioned for several years after the first settlement of this country. Mr. G. W. L. Marr, who lived (it is said) in the Madrid Bend, and was quite a shrewd man, especially in land matters, became satisfied that the military title was not good; therefore, he entered the land as State land and then tested the military title by a suit of ejectment, and succeeded in getting possession of the land after a long and expensive lawsuit. The land in dispute embraced 3,000 or 4,000 acres, including the site whereon the town now stands."

The town of Hickman was laid out by A. S. Tyler, and by Mr. Marr called Hickman, in honor of his wife's maiden name. In 1837, the town was incorporated by an act of the legislature. Mr. Marr held his lots at high rates, and thus checked the growth of the new town. Several years later, he sold his possessions in and around Hickman to Samuel Wilson, which gave a new impetus to the village.

The first business house in the town is said to have been built by McIntosh and Drabblebreast about 1835, and was situated where the Hickman Lumber Manufacturing building now stands. By some it is said that the first store was kept by Robert White, in a hewed log house. Aunt Polly Hoffman says, however, that a Mr. Green, who clandestinely married a daughter of Jacob Doons, kept a grocery store at an earlier date.

The first mayor under the new charter was Jesse Edmonson. Present mayor, John W. Cowgill, and present council, John Witting, B. Moore, B. C. Ramage, T. M. French, E. Case and H. C. Beck; R. E. Millet, clerk.

The first church edifice was erected about 1840, and was a frame building 20x40, used for school purposes also. It stood on the ground now occupied by C. L. Randle's residence.

The Baptists organized a church May 15, 1846, by John B. Rose, L. D. Stephens, Paul S. Jones, W. C. Drury, their wives and others. Rev. George White and Samuel J. Crider were the evangelists. Rev. Willis White, now living at Clinton, Ky., was the first pastor, and W. C. Drury the first clerk. The first edifice, a brick one, 38x52, was built in 1856, at a cost of $3,600, but was destroyed by fire January 27, 1879. Rebuilding began at once, and has continued to the present time, involving an expense of $1,700. The membership at present is some thirty-six, with E. Case, deacon, and Mrs. Lizzie Ellison, clerk.

The Methodist Church South was organized in 1846 by Gideon G. Bransford, circuit rider, and Jesse Edmonson, J. W. Edmonston, Robert Powell and others as charter members. The first meetings were held in the schoolhouse. The first edifice, a frame, was erected in 1848 by Jesse Edmonson, contractor, at an expense of $2,800. It was torn down in 1882, and replaced by the present brick structure, at a cost of $3,000. Present membership, 174, under the pastoral charge of Rev. W. G. Hopley.

The Episcopal Church was organized in 1843 by Rev. N. N. Cowgill, rector, and Mrs. Sarah Heron, Mrs. Susan Atwood, William Harper as charter members. The first house was a frame. It was torn down after the war, and the present brick structure was erected in 1872–73 at a cost of $3,500. The membership at present is thirty-five, and is under the charge of Rev. C. L. Pindar, rector. Rev. Cowgill died in 1876, and was buried under the chancel.

The Catholic Church was organized about 1850, and the house of worship built in 1856 at a cost of $1,500.

For years a Christian Church existed, but the property becoming involved in debt during the war, the organization was finally suspended, which is the present condition. Several colored churches are found in the outskirts of the town.

The Commercial Herald, neutral in politics, and the first newspaper in Hickman, was established May 6, 1841. It was published by Smith & Talbott, and edited by Mr. Dutemosier. After an existence of several years it suspended, and was succeeded by The Hunter of Kentucky, a Democratic sheet, managed by F. T. Keisacker. After a time, he was succeeded by J. W. Wingate in the control of the paper. In 1845 the Commercial Herald was revived, and the Hunter of Kentucky merged into it under the management and editorship of H. O. Beatty and J. W. Wingate. In 1846 the Herald was sold to Jesse Leigh, and the Commercial Standard (Democratic) established by him. In 1848, The News Letter (Independent), under the firm of Bullock, Kingman, Wingate & Washburne, made its appearance. The Standard suspended shortly after the appearance of the News Letter. In 1850 the Argus (Democratic) was published by C. W. Hutchins. The offices of the News Letter and the Argus were purchased by a Mr. Ford. The publication of the latter paper, under different managements, continued until 1860, when the office was destroyed by fire.

In 1854 The Times, Whig in politics, was established by Thad. W. Thomas, and after passing through one or two changes, suspended in 1858.

In 1860 The Courier, under the firm of Ed. K. Warren, George Warren & Tim Willis, begun its career. Its life was short, the office being destroyed by fire in 1861. George Warren purchased an office and resumed the publication but, in a short time, was forced to suspend on account of the civil war. In 1865 he resumed the publication a second time, and is its present publisher and editor.

Hickman has always been disposed to foster both private and public schools. The present public school building is a frame structure, one story in height, 20x120 feet, and was erected, about 1870, at a cost of $1,500. The board of trustees consists of B. 'C. Caldwell, H. C. Beckman, and S. W. Lauderdale. The Hickman High School, under the control of Prof. B. C. Caldwell, continues during ten months of the year, and has an average enrollment of about sixty pupils of both sexes. It gives a good training in the higher branches.

The first postoffice was known as Mills' Point. The change was made with the change of the name of the village. The successive postmasters were H. A. Bush, James Gilson, Dr. H. C. Catlett, A. M. Ellison, W. G. Payne, J. H. Davis, H. H. Hardin, E. Case and J. T. Stephens, the present incumbent.

Owing to the absence of a bank in the town, the money-order business is very heavy. The records for 1884 show as follows:

Number of orders issued	$2,679
Value of " "	$66,276.56
Commissions on same	$425.68

The village has, at present, a population of about 2,000, although the census of 1880, owing to a mistake in the returns, indicates only about 1,200. There are three hotels, four dry goods stores, four drug stores, eight grocery stores, two hardware stores, one book store, two millinery stores, two barber shops, one bakery, two saloons, one livery stable, one marble yard, four saw-mills, one box factory, one plow and wagon factory, one pump factory, one flouring-mill, three meat markets, three fisheries and a lodge each of I. O. O. F., K. of H., Royal Templars of Temperance, four physicians and four lawyers.

Hickman is specially noted for its manufacturing facilities and enterprise. Hickman Lumber & Manufacturing Company, R. T. Tyler, president, and W. C. Johnson, secretary and treasurer, was organized in 1880; engaged in handling rough lumber and making rough boxes; employs fifty hands regularly; consumes 2,000,000 feet of lumber annually, in making boxes, netting about $35,000, and ships 6,000,000 feet annually, mainly to the northwest. Tributary to Hickman are eighteen saw-mills cutting an average of 12,000 feet per day, or about 40,000,000 feet annually.

Hickman Wagon Manufacturing Company, consisting of Hertwick, Baltzer and H. A. Tyler, was organized in 1858, now employs eighty-five men, and manufactured, during 1884, 2,500 wagons, which were sold mainly in the southern States.

Hickman Pump Factory, A. P. Smith, superintendent, has a capacity for making 300 pumps daily. The trade of 1884 was 8,000 wooden pumps. A general business is also done in making flooring, ceiling and weather-boarding material.

The fish trade has become an important industry of the place, representing in its shipments about seven-eighths of the express business of the station. Below are given a few statistics of the trade of several dealers during the year from July 1883 to July 1884:

		lbs.
R. M. Metheney,	Shipped	240,352
	Home Sales	10,000
	Total		250,352
J. C. Burdick,	Shipped	232,160
	Home trade	51,485
	Total		283,645
F. E. Case,	Shipped	102,000
	Home trade	31,000
	Total		133 000
N. Powell,	Shipped	114,960
	Home trade	27,350
	Total		142,310

Yellow fever prevailed with great malignancy along the Mississippi, in 1878, from its mouth to its union with the Ohio at Cairo. Hickman was severely attacked, the first cases, Charley and Louisa Hendricks, occurring August 12th. Both died four days later. The epidemic continued to rage during the remainder of August, through September and October to November 3d, with these results:

Total number of cases among whites	262
Total number of deaths among whites	132
Total number of cases among blacks	200
Total number of deaths among blacks	18
Percentage of deaths among whites	50
Percentage of deaths among blacks	9

Dr. Luke P. Blackburn, afterward governor of the state, came to the village and rendered heroic service in caring for the sick. Other physicians likewise came from abroad and labored with Samaritan spirit in ministering to the afflicted. Of the home physicians all died excepting Dr. A. A. Faris, who is still living in Hickman and practicing his profession. Capt. H. A. Tyler, E. Case and others remained in town throughout the dark days and ministered to the wants of the sick and dying.

About 1833 the cholera visited Hickman, resulting in some seventeen or eighteen deaths. About 1854 another epidemic, supposed by some to have been milk sickness, swept away quite a number of its citizens.

Fires have not been strangers to the town. In April 1861, December 14, 1872, and in September and November, 1884, conflagrations swept over the lower parts of the town, destroying untold thousands of dollars of valuable business, residence and manufacturing structures. About 3 o'clock P. M. of August 7, 1882, one of the boilers of the Gold Dust, a fine vessel of the Anchor Line, exploded and sank the boat about a mile above Hickman. The loss in killed, wounded and missing was upward of forty. The unfortunate victims were cared for by the hospitable people of the town.

Fulton is the second town in size and importance in the county.* The land upon which it is built was owned by B. F. Carr and Dr. G. W. Pascall, when the first survey for the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Road was made in 1850. The first house, a box dry-goods store, was built in 1861 by W. F. Wooldridge. F. M. Thomas built the first house on the Tennessee side, in January, 1861. The town was incorporated in 1872, and the following men were elected members of the first council: A. D. Collins, Dr. G. W. Pascall, T. C. Parker, John A. Wyatt, and R. M. Bullock.

The business interests are in good condition, being represented by two railroads, Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern, and the southern division of the Illinois Central; one bank, with stock of $50,000; one tobacco factory; one distillery; two wholesale saddlery establishments; two flouring-mills, with capacity of 100 to 200 barrels per day; two furniture factories; three planing-mills; one wagon factory; two cotton gins; one buggy factory; three saw-mills; one foundry and machine shop; ten dry goods stores; fifteen grocery stores; two hardware stores; one bakery; four hotels; three restaurants; five drug stores; one boot and shoe store; five barber shops; two butcher shops; one book store; two tinshops; two billiard halls; four furniture stores; one jewelry store; four milliners; one opera house; ten physicians; three brick yards; four blacksmiths; one photographer; three attorneys; two dentists; one lodge each of K. H. F. & A. M., and I. O. O. F.

The Fultonian, four-page, eight-column weekly paper, with more than average circulation, was established in 1879 by C. N. Walker. In March, 1882, it passed under the management of its present owner and editor, Alex N. Taylor, by whom it has been pushed to its present popular standing. It is Democratic in politics.

Baptist Gleaner, an eight-page monthly, was established in 1880, by Hall & Moody. It has a circulation of probably 5,000 and is Baptist in tendency.

There are five churches, viz.: Methodist Episcopal South, organized in 1873; it has a house costing about $2,000 and a membership of 160; Presbyterian, organized about 1882; it has a brick house costing about $1,500; Episcopalian, organized about 1879–80, with a frame house, costing about $1,500; Christian, organized about 1874, with brick house costing $3,600; Baptist, organized in 1874, with a brick house costing probably $2,000.

*It is proper to state, perhaps, that Fulton is partly in Kentucky and partly in Tennessee, nearly equally divided by the State line.

The schools of the place are said to be in good condition, and embrace one free school with three teachers, a female school and two mixed (white) schools. At present there is in process of erection a fine structure known as the Carr Institute and named in honor of Frank Carr, deceased. The building will cost about $11,000. The board of trustees consists of representative men as follows: A. B. Whayne, president; J. W. Boyd, secretary; E. B. Eddings, treasurer; William H. Beasley, J. E. Morris, J. N. Smoot, A. A. Haynes, A. J. Kirkland and J. M. Harpool. The beautiful site for the institute was donated by William Carr, of Fulton. The postoffice was established in 1862, the commission of F. M. Thomas, the first postmaster, bearing date November 15, 1862, and signed by Montgomery Blair, postmaster-general. After eighteen months Mr. Thomas was succeeded by E. B. Eddings. Since his time, Andrew Hall, W. F. Faygan and J. F. Hall, the present incumbent, have served.

Fulton has had but one mayor, Ed. Starks, the present incumbent, who has served from the time of incorporation. The present council consists of A. A. Haynes, E. B. Eddings, W. W. Meadows, J. M. Anderson, H. D. Murphy and J. T. Stubblefield. The population of the Kentucky and Tennessee divisions is about 1,500.

Jordan Station is a thriving little village on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad.

CHAPTER V.

GRAVES COUNTY.

GRAVES is the largest county of Kentucky west of the Tennessee River, and occupies the central part of the Purchase District, with the following boundaries: McCracken County on the north, Marshall and Calloway Counties on the east, Tennessee on the south, and the counties of Hickman and Ballard on the west. It is thirty miles long from north to south, eighteen miles from east to west, and embraces a geographical area of 540 square miles, or a fraction over fifteen full congressional townships.

Mayfield Creek is the largest and most important water-course. It rises in Calloway County and enters Graves in District No. 9; flows in a northwesterly course and crosses the northern boundary of the county from Section 6, Town 5 north, Range 1 east. The stream took its name from a Mr. Mayfield, one of the first settlers of the Purchase, who was drowned in its waters about the year 1820.

Little Obion Creek rises in Cuba District and flows in a northwesterly direction through Rozell's precinct into Hickman County. Clark's River flows through the northeast corner of the county in a northwesterly direction and forms the dividing line between Symsonia and Housman's districts. Brush Creek, Little Mayfield and Barn Creeks all rise near the central part of the county and flow in a westerly course. Blakeman, Terrapin and Knob Creeks are small streams in the southern part.

Graves County is marked by no striking topographical features, the general surface being slightly undulating, with a few ridges and hills in the northern and southern portions. The forest growth consists of the different varieties of oak, hickory and sassafras on what is known as the "barren" lands, while white oak, poplar, sweet gum, shag and white hickory, black and winged elm, laurel oak and a dense undergrowth of small bushes, vines, etc., are found skirting the water-courses. Fifty years ago the greater part of the county was almost entirely devoid of timber, the face of the country being covered with a tall grass in which but few shrubs of any kind were to be seen, except along the streams. Cultivation has wrought marked changes since the land has been settled, and what appeared to the early residents a dead expanse of prairie is now mostly thrifty farms. The transformation has been brought about, not by physical changes alone, but by the natural effects of the farmer's occupation. In the timber, the change has been still more marked. The forest growth of hickory, oak, underbrush, etc., by which the uncultivated portions of the uplands are now covered, did not exist forty years ago. Then the timber, save along the streams, was marked only by a few scattered bushes and small trees, preserved by favored localities from the annual fires which swept over the country. The county is supplied with sufficient timber for fuel and other purposes, and while much of it is small or of a scrubby character, it has increased in quantity since the fires have ceased to run, and is rapidly growing into timber valuable for manufacturing purposes.

Graves is pre-eminently an agricultural county, and although the soil is not so well adapted for general farming as some portions of the Purchase district, yet for the cultivation of the tobacco plant it is unsurpassed by any other county in the State. The crop of this staple in 1880 was 8,901,434 pounds, which, by the census of that year, shows Graves to have been the second largest tobacco-producing county in the State—Christian County alone outranking it. In 1883 there were raised 6,553,475 pounds, a slight falling-off from the two previous years. In 1884 was the largest acreage ever planted in the county, and the crop for that year is estimated at not less than 12,000,000 pounds.

The principal products, aside from tobacco, are wheat, oats, rye, corn and the usual varieties of fruits and vegetables common to this latitude. But few attempts have been made to enrich the soil with commercial fertilizers, but where such have been made, very encouraging results have followed. The greater part of the county is found to grow clover successfully, and some are turning it under to give strength to a naturally weak soil, although these attempts can hardly be said to be expended in a systematic way by the farmers in general.

Maj. Benjamin Graves, in honor of whom this county received its name, was a native of Virginia, and emigrated to Kentucky when quite young. He resided in Fayette County and was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was an amiable, shrewd and intelligent man, and represented Fayette County for several years in the legislature of the State. In 1812, when war was declared by the United States against Great Britain, he was among the first to volunteer his services in defense of his country's rights. He received the appointment of major in Col. Lewis' regiment, and proved himself an active, vigilant and gallant officer. He was killed in the ever memorable battle of Raisin, where his blood mingled with much of the best blood of Kentucky.*

The first settlements within the present limits of Graves were made a few years before the county was created. Michael Eaker and William Armstrong located on Terrapin Creek, in what is now Lynnville Precinct, about 1820, and are supposed to have been the first permanent settlers in the southern part of the county. They moved here from Trigg County, and were both members of the first justice's court. Mr. Eaker died in 1858. His son, Hon. John Eaker, came with his father to the Purchase, and was an honored citizen of the county until his death, which occurred at Mayfield, April 14, 1885. Another son, Dr. Eaker, was one of the earliest physicians of Calloway County, where he still resides.

Among the few settlers who came to the Purchase in 1820 was the Washam family, consisting of Peyton Washam, wife and eight children. The father and one son, Peter Washam, now a resident of Marshall County, came in the spring of 1820 to the banks of Panther Creek, in the eastern part of the county, leaving the family at their home near Princeton, their object being to erect a cabin and plant a small crop. The following incident is given illustrative of frontier life at that time. While Peyton Washam, with his son, Peter, and another man, whose name could not be learned, were thus forming the nucleus of a new settlement, their stock of provisions became exhausted, and before their expected supply could reach them, they were compelled to subsist for six days on boiled corn, making a levy each day on the single half-bushel which had been reserved for seed. Peyton Washam did not live to see his family installed in their new home. He suddenly fell a victim to disease, and sent for his wife, who came with true wifely devotion to minister to his wants. Arriving in the vicinity late at night, she became lost in the cane-brakes, with which the country at that time abounded, and was compelled to remain at the base of an old tree until morning. We can only imagine her sorrow, when, on arriving at her destination, she found that her husband had passed beyond the reach of human aid, having died during the night. Mrs. Washam died in Graves County about the year 1825.

* Collins.

In Lynnville Precinct, near the State line, was an early settlement, and among those living there in 1822 were Col. J. C. Dodge and his son, Ulysses Dodge. Campbell Duncan came a little later, and cotemporary with him was Moses Oliver, who afterward moved to Hickman County. John and James Boyd were early comers to the Eaker settlement, and about the same time John Cook located near the present site of Boydsville, where he opened one of the first stores in the county. Others who settled in the southern part of the county from time to time were Elijah Bennett, Benjamin McGee, Benjamin and David Lewellin; John Adair, whose widow still resides on the home place; Capt. Samuel Story, a prominent citizen and leading business man; Joel Grammer, one of the first teachers; Dr. John Parkhill, an early physician; John Kelso, David Shultz, Henry Wheeler, James Andrus, John Lawrence; W. A. Bowden, a minister of the Baptist Church; Charles E. Hay, George Boozer; John and Jacob McEwan, who settled the land on which the village of Lynnville is situated; Thomas and Robert Binford and Joab Lassiter.

Later came Amos Chambers, Asel Jetton, Chesterfield Wilkins, John Clapp, Alfred Loyd, Mr. Guthrie, John Wilford, the Steele family, the Wade family, Wade Barton, Jesse Davidson, Samuel Hyatt, Littleberry Starks, the Gore family, William Brush, John Parks, Mr. White and Isaac Gray, the most of whom became residents of what is now Lynnville District. The Feliciana settlement, in the southwestern part of the county, was located in an early day, and among the first residents there were George Pirtle, Bryant Boone (father of Judge A. R. Boone, of Mayfield), Dr. Jonathan Wyatt, Obadiah Morse and sons (Nathaniel M., Thomas L., Samuel F.; Marcus and Ebenezer Morse), Dr. R. D. Lockridge, Hardy Jackson, James Duprew, James Reed, Henry Scofield, or, as he was commonly known, "Hurricane" Scofield, John Starks, Silas Cavender and Fleming Cayce (early Baptist preachers), John Frost, Jonathan Frost, Thomas Binford, John Fanville, John Roberts and others.

The earliest settlers in Mayfield and Mayfield District were John Anderson, Crawford Anderson, William Anderson, Ervin Anderson, John Cunningham, Col. R. L. Mayes, Jonathan Pryor, Oliver Perry, David Orr, James Dunbar, William Yandell, Joshua Shelton, Mr. Stephens, Arthur Jenkins, the Leach family, Henry Williams, Matthew Travis, John Galloway, William Fleming, Henry Coulter, Riley Anderson, Benjamin Stokes, Mr. Dodson, John Gardner, Joshua Gough, Joseph Hamilton, William Edwards, Bluford Gore and others.

Among the early comers to the northwestern part of the county were Samuel Mahan, the Fulgham family, Joab Keelan, Samuel Willett, John Peoples, Harvey Stephens, A. A. Atkinson, Zedekiah Adams and his sons "Jerry" and Benjamin.

Ezekiel Edens was one of the first pioneers in that part of the county known as Symsonia District, and after him came a number of families and located in various parts of the county. The following settlers located in what is known as Wingo District in an early day: Fletcher Sullivan, William Hibbs, Levi Calvert and father, Thomas Copeland, Joshua Copeland, William Holifield, Jonathan Pryor near Pryorsburg Village, Thomas Watson, William Green and son Hezekiah, Lewis Odam, Willis Odam, James Goad, L. Y. Beadles, father of J. N. Beadles, James Chaney, Tolbert Wallace and Mr. Bleakley, all of whom, with many others, became residents of the county prior to 1840. Since that period the influx of population has been constantly increasing, and many of the old landmarks have forever disappeared.

The boundaries of Graves County were established by virtue of an act of the General Assembly, approved December 19, 1821, the territory at that time forming a part of the counties of Livingston and Caldwell. The same act designates the town of Mayfield as the seat of justice and appoints commissioners to lay off the same, but leaves the organization of the county to future legislation.

The permanent organization was effected by an act bearing date of December 17, 1823, the material part of which is as follows: "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky, that the county of Graves, bounded as described in the eighth section of an act forming the counties of Hickman, Graves, Calloway and McCracken, on the southwest of the Tennessee River, approved December 19, 1821, be, from and after the 15th day of January next, one distinct county known by name aforesaid. There shall be commissioned for said county ten justices of the peace, a sheriff and coroner, and the said justices of the peace shall meet at the town of Mayfield, laid off by commissioners appointed by before recited act, on Thursday succeeding the second Monday in January next; and after taking the oaths of office, which may be administered by any acting justice of the peace for Calloway County, shall proceed to appoint a clerk to whose permanent appointment a majority of all the justices in commission in said county shall be necessary, and the County Courts of said county thereafter shall commence on Thursday succeeding the second Monday in every month, except the month in which the courts are directed to be held. The said county shall form a part of the Seventh Judicial District, and the judge of the said district shall himself, or in conjunction with assistant judges, to be appointed by this act, hold Circuit Courts for this county on Thursday succeeding the second Mondays in February, May and November in each year, and continued three judicial days at each term if the business shall require it." The act further provides that the town of Mayfield shall be the permanent seat of justice, and that the county court shall, at its earliest convenience, cause to be erected on the public grounds in said town the necessary buildings according to law.

The duties of the sheriff, in regard to making certain collections of taxes and tithables listed for the year 1823, are defined, and Sections "6 and 8" provide for the appointment of two assistant judges, and designate the time for holding the general annual election.

The first court met at the residence of William Edwards, near the town of Mayfield, February 2, 1824. The following is a brief outline of its deliberations:

"Whereas, by virtue of an act, etc., etc., it was among other things provided that the justices of said county should meet at the town of Mayfield, in said county, on the 15th day of January, 1824; and whereas the said justices did meet on said 15th day of January, and the commissions of said county had not arrived; and whereas, subsequently the commissions have arrived, when in pursuance of the above entitled act, at the town of Mayfield on Monday, February 2, 1824, Ebenezer Killough, Ezekiel Edens, Joshua Shelton, William Armstrong, Crawford Anderson, Isaac Darnall, William Holifield and Michael Eaker, severally produced commissions from his excellency, John Adair, governor, etc., appointing them justices of the peace for said county, and thereupon Arthur H. Davis, a justice for Calloway County, administered to them the several oaths required by law."

John Anderson was appointed clerk pro tempore of the court and, with William Burk-low and Ebenezer Killough sureties, entered into and gave a bond of $10,000 for the faithful discharge of his official duties.

Elijah Cravens produced a commission from the governor appointing him sheriff of the county for two years, and gave as sureties John Samples, Bennett G. Cartwright and Samuel Mason. The county was divided into four constabulary districts and the following constables appointed to wit: Aaron Roberts, John Edwards and John Killough; the name of the fourth not given.

The minor business of the court consisted principally in recommending to the governor certain persons for justices of the peace, for coroner and for trustees of the town of Mayfield.

The second county court was held at the residence of William Edwards, March 11, 1824, and the following justices of the peace were present, viz: Ezekiel Edens, Joshua Shelton, Frederick Farmer, Ebenezer Killough, Isaac Darnall, Matthew Travis, Alexander Anderson, William Armstrong and Michael Eaker. Henry Williams produced commission from the governor appointing him coroner, and Lewis Wood and B. G. Cartwright, William Edwards and Thomas Williams were appointed commissioners to locate a road from Mayfield to the Calloway County line. At this court one John Roberts produced credentials of ordination as a minister of the gospel, and, entering into a bond of £500, was granted license to solemnize the rites of matrimony.

The third term of the county court was held in Mayfield, April 15, 1824. Beyond appointing several road-viewers and a commissioner to obtain the list of taxables, no business of importance was transacted. Crawford Anderson was appointed treasurer of Mayfield at the June term, 1824, and at the July session of the same year John Anderson received his appointment as permanent clerk of the court, a position he held until his death in 1824.

The first tavern license was granted July 15, 1824, to William Edwards, and the first allowance by the court, amounting to $46.50 for supplies for clerk's office, bears date of September of the above year.

The first trial before the county court was on a charge of vagrancy against one John Julian, preferred by Benjamin McGee. A jury consisting of the following persons was made up to decide the case, to wit: George Hopkins, S. Carter, Drury Hodges, Spencer Standley, Rice Cobb, Henry Piercefield, Thomas Stokes, Samuel B. Larkin and Ervin Anderson. The charge not being sustained, Mr. Julian was allowed to go free.

John Anderson was granted license to keep tavern at his house in Mayfield at the April term, 1825, and at the same time Aaron Roberts was appointed tax-commissioner of the county. Ezekiel Edens was the second sheriff of the county, receiving his commission January, 1826, in which year Samuel Cravens was re-appointed surveyor. The levy for 1824 was 75 cents per tithable, and the delinquent list for the previous year contains the names of twenty-three persons. In 1826, the levy was 93 3-5 cents on each tithable, and the delinquents of the previous year numbered thirty-two. Joshua Gough was appointed sheriff in 1828, and one year later was succeeded by Joshua Shelton.

At the August term, 1844, the county was divided into twelve magisterial districts, but upon the adoption of the present constitution in 1851, which provided for the redistricting of the different counties, the number was reduced to eight. Subsequent changes have been made at intervals to suit the convenience of the people, and at the present time there are twelve districts and seventeen voting precincts. The following are their names in regular order, to wit: No. 1 Water Valley, No. 2 Cuba, No. 3 Lynnville, No. 4 Panther Creek, No. 5 Housmans, No. 6 Haynes, No. 7 Rozells, No. 8 Mayfield, No. 9 Farmington, No. 10 Boswells, No. 11 Symsonia, No. 12 Pilot Oak.

The first deed recorded after the organization of the county was by John Anderson, Joshua Shelton, Richard Reigar, Isaac Darnall and Crawford Anderson, trustees of the town of Mayfield, to Vincent Anderson and John D. Anderson, conveying a part of Lot No. 1, in said town, for the sum of $18. This indenture bears date of June 17, 1824. The second deed is a conveyance of personal property by Martin Oliver to his children, dated August 19, 1824. The first will was made by Roland Hughes, bequeathing to his wife, as long as she remained his widow, the whole of his estate, which in case of second marriage was to revert to his children, and dated June 30, 1824. The first marriage in the county, after its organization, was solemnized April 15, 1824, the contracting parties being Burrell Williams and Stacy Pryor.

The first session of the circuit court was held on the 12th day of February, 1824, at the residence of William Edwards, and was attended by the Hon. John C. Dodds and John Sample, associates judges. John Anderson was appointed clerk pro tempore and gave the required bond, signed by Alexander Anderson, William Burklow and Jonathan Pryor as sureties. Benjamin Patton, James Breathitt, W. B. Fowler and James Calloway severally produced certificates of their qualifications as attorneys and counselors at law, and were regularly admitted to practice their profession in the courts of Graves County. The above being the whole proceedings of the term, court adjourned until May 13, 1824. At the second session, there were present the Hon. Benjamin Shackelford, judge of the Seventh Judicial District, John C. Dodd and John Sample, associates. John Anderson produced a certificate from the judges of the court of appeals, that he had been examined by their clerk, in their presence, and that they had judged him well qualified for the office of clerk. He was, therefore, appointed permanent clerk, a position he filled, with credit to himself and satisfaction to all concerned, for a period of eighteen years. At this session, a grand jury of inquest, consisting of nineteen men, was made up of the following citizens of the county: Bennett G. Cartwright, Justinian Cartwright, Zadok Adams, Dillon Ford, Thomas Gow, James Goad, Spencer Standly, Jeremiah Adams, Ralph Shelton, John Woods, George Hopkins, Robert Williams, Elias Edens, William Neal, Nehemiah Williams, James Pryor, Henry Edwards, William Burklow and Henry Jones.

The first cause on the civil docket was Thomas Griffey, plaintiff in case, versus William Green, defendant. At that early day tobacco was used as a circulating medium, and by reference to the old records we learn that the defendant in the above suit was awarded a judgment of 150 pounds of tobacco, at one penny per pound. The second cause was a case of debt—Jonathan Pryor vs. Henry Williams—continued until the next court.

At the November term, 1824, there were present the two associate judges already named. A number of cases were continued until future sessions and several indictments returned by the grand jury, the majority of them being for profane swearing, Sabbath breaking, affray and trespass. At the February term, 1825, James W. Calloway, was allowed $10 for engraving a seal for the use of the court. David McGoodwin and James A. Cartwright were admitted to the bar. The first trial by jury was a case in covenant, Jonathan Wyatt vs. Armstrong Noel, which was heard at the May term, 1824. The following is a list of the jurymen, to wit: Benjamin Stokes, William Holifield, Michael Atterberry, Henry Ford, John Cook, William Cook, Jonathan Pryor, Boswell Williams, Jeremiah Adams, S. H. Johnson, Abel Copeland and Thomas Copeland.

The second petit jury was impaneled for the November term of 1825 and consisted of the following gentlemen, namely: John C. Dodds, Joseph Downs, Rice Cobb, Maybery Chambers, Aaron Roberts, Nehemiah Williams, Jeremiah Adams, Thomas Stokes, Jonathan Pryor, Francis Dyson, William Bird and Miles H. Burklow.

A number of prominent attorneys have practiced in the Graves County courts from time to time, and the members of the local bar have ever been noted for their ability. The following list comprises the leading lawyers, resident and non-resident, who have practiced here since the organization of the county: Benjamin Patton, W. P. Fowler, James Breathitt, James Calloway, R. L. Mayes,

James Campbell, Rezin Davidge, R. K. Williams, W. R. Bradley, John M. Crockett, William Allen, Matthew Markland, David S. Patton, James W. Gibson, W. B. Jenkins, B. G. Dudley, John L. Murray, A. A. Kimball, P. H.Beckham, Lucian Anderson and A. R. Boone. The present bar consists of A. R. Boone, Lucian Anderson, W. W. Tice, B. A. Neal, D. G. Park, D. B. Stanfield, J. E. Robbins, C. C. Coulter, John A. Mayes, S. H. Crossland, J. T. Webb and H. J. Moorman. Lucian Anderson, A. R. Boone and Edward Crossland, residents of Graves County, have at different times represented the First Congressional District of Kentucky in the lower house of the national legislature, and R. K. Williams was for some time a judge of the court of appeals.

Among the first transactions of the county court was the appointment of William Burklow and John Cunningham commissioners, with full powers to contract for and superintend the erection of a building for court purposes in the town of Mayfield. In the meantime, the residence of William Edwards had been secured and courts were held at intervals therein until the November term of 1824, at which time the new temple of justice was reported complete and ready for occupancy. The building was a rude log structure, with but few conveniences, and cost the nominal sum of $139.

In the year 1832, Richard L. Mayes, Stephen M. Jenkins, John Anderson and Jesse Wells were appointed a committee to draft plans for a new house, more in keeping with the dignity of the growing county, which they did, reporting the same at the June term of 1833. These plans were not adopted, but a subsequent committee, appointed the same year, drew up satisfactory plans and specifications, which were let to Michael Eaker and Benjamin McGee for the sum of $5,400. The building was erected in 1834 on the public square. It was a brick structure, forty feet square, two stories high, and contained a large court room, two jury rooms and one grand jury room. In the year 1864, it was occupied by a detachment of Confederate troops, who burned it to the ground when they were compelled to evacuate the city.

At the April term of 1865 it was decided to erect a new building, and a committee was appointed to draw up the necessary plans and specifications. The following commissioners were appointed at the ensuing June term to adopt plans and let the contract, namely: John Eaker, Joshua Boaz, T. J. Puryear, L. B. Holifield, J. S. Thomas, C. H. Greer and A. Williams. The draft prepared by J. K. Frick, an archictect of Cairo, Ill., was unanimously adopted, and the contract let for $32,000, a sum which proved inadequate for the completion of the building. For the purpose of creating a building fund, an ad valorem tax of 15 cents on each hundred dollars worth of property was levied for the years 1865, 1866 and 1867. The house was completed and formally received by the building committee November, 1866. It is a two-story brick structure, contains a commodious court room, jury room, three county offices, and is a substantial and imposing temple of justice.

Graves County has had several jails, the earliest being rough log structures, with no definite architectural plans. They served well their purposes, however, and as time went by were replaced by a more substantial frame edifice, which was in use until the year 1875. At the October term, that year, the county court ordered that $15,000 be appropriated for the purpose of erecting a new jail, and Hon. G. W. Barton was appointed commissioner to obtain legislative enactments for the purpose of providing means for payment of the necessary expenses. Bonds to the amount of $9,000 were issued October, 1876, and the contract was let in the same year to Backus & Cosby, of Mayfield, for the sum of $7,950. The building was completed in 1877, and stands on ground donated for jail purposes by the town of Mayfield.

The first poor farm in Graves County was established in 1855. Up to that time the paupers were farmed out to the lowest bidder, and the records bear the frequent and somewhat startling statement of persons being "sold" at various prices. In April, 1855, a tract of land was purchased for the sum of $250. On this was erected a frame building, which served the purposes of the county until 1870, at which time the entire property was sold. Since then, the paupers have been "let" at public outcry to the lowest bidder, the average price at the present time being $7 per head per month.

In 1884 the county purchased a tract of fifteen acres of land one mile west of Mayfield for a poor farm, and at the present time steps are being taken to erect the necessary buildings thereon.

The following is a list of the officers of Graves County as far as obtainable:

County Clerks.—John Anderson, from organization of the county until 1842; Ervin Anderson, from 1842 to 1851; William Beadles, from 1851 to 1858; J. M. Coulter, until 1862; John F. Bolinger, until 1865; J. H. Robbins, 1865 to 1866; L. F. Anderson, 1866 to 1868. James Austin, a few months by appointment; C. J. Whittemore, 1869 to 1878. The present incumbent is D. P. Coulter, elected in 1878.

Circuit Clerks.—John Anderson, Ervin Anderson, W. A. Turner, J. T. Wingo, D. B. Stanfield, James Austin and C. J. Whittemore, present incumbent.

County Judges.—S. F. Morse, A. R. Boone, W. W. Robertson, W. G. Blount, G. W. Barton, D. B. Stanfield, R. H. Williams and J. W. Hocker.

Circuit Judges.—Benjamin Shackelford, Rezin Davidge, J. Campbell, W. P. Fowler, R. K. Williams, C. S. Marshall, E. J. Bullock by appointment, A. R. Boone, W. W. Robertson, Edward Crossland, W. G. Bullitt by appointment and James Campbell, Jr.

Common Pleas Judges.—Edward Crossland and L. S. Trimble.

State Senators.—John Eaker, 1848-51; J. D. Landrum, 1863-67; H. S. Hale, 1871-75.

Representatives.—Richard R. L. Mayes, 1836–45; John Worthan, 1840-41; Joseph R. E. Wilkinson, 1842-43; John Eaker, 1844–47; John A. Board, 1846; W. M. Cargill, 1848; Alexander H. Willingham, 1849-51–53–55–66; John W. Cook, 1850–59–61; Lucian Anderson, 1855–57; S. F. Morse, 1857-59; A. R. Boone, 1861–63, expelled December, 1861, because directly or indirectly connected with and giving aid to the Confederate Army; succeeded by Richard Neal, 1862–63; E. W. Smith, 1863–65; William Beadles, 1865–67, resigned in 1866; W. C. Clark, 1868-69; Ervin Anderson, 1869–71; T. J. Jones, 1871–73; James D. Watson, 1873–75; J. H. Emerson, 1875–77.

Sheriffs.—The early sheriffs were Elijah Cravens, Ezekiel Edens, Joshua Gough and Joshua Shelton, all of whom served prior to 1830. Since 1851, the office has been held by the following persons, viz.: Samuel M. Lemon, P. B. Adams W. W. Galloway, T. J. Jones, T. J. Puryear, D. M. Galloway, H. S. Hale, R. T. Albritton, R. T. Davis, W. A. Yarbrough and J. T. Wilson.

School Commissioners.—One of the earliest school commissioners was Henry W. Coulter, who served prior to 1851. Since that time the following gentlemen have held the office: L. B. Holifield, J. S. Thomas, James M. Cosby, W. J. Gregory and M. T. Hargrove.

Surveyors since 1851.—John B. Allcock, A. L. Jenkins, L. Overby, D. S. Tartt, R. J. Grace, P. S. Tartt and J. E. Robbins.

Jailers since 1854.—Thomas C. Taylor, C. H. Greer, W. M. Cargill, D. M. Galloway, E. L. Browning, J. S. Thomas, H. S. Summerville, S. A. Walker, A. D. Cosby and Andrew Hamlet.

The honor of establishing the first newspaper in Graves County belongs to C. C. Coulter, who on July 7, 1860, issued the first number of the Southern Yeoman. This was an eight-column folio, intensely Democratic in politics, and within a short time acquired an immense circulation. It was regularly issued until some time during the war, when, not being able to procure the necessary office supplies, the enterprise had to be abandoned.

The Jackson Purchase was established February, 1869, by A. C. Caperton, who issued it until 1870, at which time E. K. Warren assumed editorial charge and changed the name to the Mayfield Democrat. R. J. Beaumont succeeded Mr. Warren in 1872 and ran the paper until 1876, at which time his sons, E. S. and M. F. Beaumont, became editors and proprietors. In January, 1885, E. S. Beaumont assumed control, and is editor at the present time. The Democrat is an eight-column folio, and has a circulation of over 1,200. It is printed on the only steam press in the Purchase outside of Paducah.

The Banner of Temperance was established in 1873 by B. F. Briggs. It was a six-column quarto devoted to the temperance cause, and reached a circulation of 800. In 1875 it was merged into the Mayfield Monitor. This paper was started by Messrs. Briggs and Watson, who ran it seven months, at the end of which time the former purchased the entire interest, which he still owns. The Monitor is Democratic in politics and is quite a flourishing paper.

In 1880 Elders C. J. Kimball and W. L. Butler established the Apostolic Church, a religious paper devoted to the interests of the Christian Church of Kentucky. It was ably edited and became very popular, and at the time of its removal to Louisville, in 1884, it had 1,500 subscribers.

The Mayfield Leader was established in 1878, by R. S. Murrell and Ed. Watson. It was an eight-column weekly, democratic in politics, and reached a fair circulation. The enterprise did not prove a financial success, however, and died an easy death in 1880.

The Rip Saw, an independent but very personal sheet, was established in 1878, by J. W. Leech. It was a four-column folio and had for a motto the following terse sentence: "Saw to the line and let the dust fall where it may." But few numbers of the "Rip" were issued, the enterprise failing for want of patronage.

At the time of the formation of Graves County, and for a number of years afterward, the State of Kentucky was not blessed with the common-school system of to-day. Children were mainly educated at the expense of their parents in the old subscription schools, which were of a very inferior grade. The first schools were taught as early as 1828, or 1830, and, as already stated, were supported by private subscription. The heaviest expense then fell on the families containing the greatest number of children, and these were usually the families least able to sustain such expense; and, as a necessary consequence, in that early day the children grew up without the advantages of education. The first schoolhouses of the county were rude log dwellings, which had been deserted by some family that had found the hardships of settling the new country too great to be borne, or log dwellings, in which the family still lived, one corner of the room being fitted up with rude clapboard seats and desks. Testaments were frequently the first readers, and the ability to read, write and cipher constituted the sum and substance of a teacher's qualifications. Several schools were taught early in the thirties, although no substantial progress was made in the cause of education until many years later. The organization of the public schools dates from about the year 1850–51, at which time the county was laid off into districts to accommodate the greatest number. Prominently connected with the work was Henry Coulter, one of the early school commissioners, to whose efforts the county is largely indebted for the present success of the schools.

There are in the county, at this time (1885), 108 districts, 91 of which are for white children, and 17 for colored. There was received and disbursed among the white schools for tuition, for the school year of 1884 and 1885, the sum of $11,046. The tuition for colored schools for the same year amounted to $1,491.

There is in addition to the public schools a number of excellent private institutions of learning in various parts of the county, and at the present time a movement is on foot to establish a college, which is to be under the auspices of the Christian Church of Mayfield. A substantial building will be erected, and the institution, when completed, will be the largest school in the Purchase district.

The population of Graves County in 1860 was 16,233; in 1870, 19,398; 1880, 24,138; colored population, 2,851. The following is the population for 1880, by districts:

Water Valley and Wingo	2,375
Wingo Village	212
Cuba	1,761
Lynnville and Village	1,579
Panther Creek	1,419
Pryorsburg and Rozells	2,168
Symsonia	916
Housemans	1,520
Haynes	2,918
Mayfield District	3,578
Mayfield City	1,839
Farmington	1,692
Boswells	1,294
Dukedom	1,076

The following is a summary of the county for the year 1884:

Number of acres of land returned for taxation	311,308
Value of lands	$2,225,324
Number of town lots	698
Value of lots	$375,860
Number of horses	5,300
Value	$308,397
Mules	4,110
Value	$270,190
Sheep	5,371
Value	$7,098
Hogs	17,615
Value	$20,588
Cattle	7,921
Value	$26,905
Stores	133
Value of stores	$184,878
Tons of hay	427
Bushels of corn	1,022,851
Bushels of wheat	164,796
Pounds of tobacco for 1883	6,553,475

At the presidential election of 1884 there were 3,900 votes cast, divided among the four candidates as follows: Cleveland, 2,752; Blaine, 1,082; Butler, 18, and St. John 48.

During the early history of Graves County and prior to the war of 1861–65, the old military system, which had done such excellent service in all the Indian border wars, was in force throughout Kentucky. From the Indian tribes, depleted by protracted and periodical contests, no danger was apprehended, though the habits induced by a life spent amid the alarms of the frontier forbade the total relinquishment of organized bodies of militia, or the obliteration of that grateful sense of public security which their presence afforded.

But the wonderful strides of the State in population, and the absence of anything requiring the interference of arms, soon gave satisfactory assurance of general safety, and the old serviceable system was permitted to die out. It is true a partial organization was maintained and arms were obtained from the government of the State, but these organizations were little better than assemblages of young men for sport and frolic and had no feature in common with the rigid discipline that prevailed in the regular army. Among the early captains of these companies are remembered Crawford Anderson, Henry Piercefield, John Eaker and Daniel T. Cargill.

As far as known, but two of the early settlers of Graves County served in the Revolution. Willis Odam, one of the first residents of Wingo Precinct, served during that struggle, and at the time of his death was drawing a pension for such services. In January, 1829, one James Ross appeared in open court and applied for a pension, stating that he had served in the Continental Army from 1776 until 1779, having belonged to a North Carolina regiment. Quite a goodly number of the early residents were soldiers in the war of 1812, and in the war with Mexico Graves County furnished three companies, numbering in all about 207 men. John A. Board and J. N. Beadles raised a company of ninety men, which served for a period of six months, but participated in no engagements. A company of ninety-seven men, commanded by Capt. Charles Wickliffe, was recruited from Graves, Ballard and Calloway Counties, and Capt. Reed's company of thirty men was made up from Graves and Ballard Counties.

During the great civil war, Graves County was considered neutral ground, although the majority of her citizens sympathized with the Confederacy. The occupation of the Purchase by Federals prevented the active organization of troops for the Southern Army, although nine companies went from Graves County at different times, besides a number of individuals who enlisted at Union City, Camp Boone, and other places in Tennessee. The following is a list of Graves County Confederate companies, with the names of officers as far as obtainable: Company E, Seventh Kentucky Regiment, commanded by Capt. Joel Cochran, David Hicks, E. W. Anderson and William Cochran, lieutenants. This company numbered about 100 men and served throughout the war. Company A, same regiment, James G. Pirtle, captain; Thomas Burnett, J. A. Collins and George T. Wilson, lieutenants. This company went to the front with about 120 men, and participated in many of the hardest engagements of the war. Company H, of the same regiment, was recruited in this county, Capt. H. S. Hale commanding. The lieutenants at the time of organization were C. W. Jetton, F. E. Dodd and Joel Rucker. This was a full company of about 100 men when it first entered the service. Company E, Third Kentucky Regiment, numbered 120 men, almost all of whom were residents of Graves County. The officers were J. M. Emerson, captain; W. M. Cargill, first lieutenant; S. P. Ridgeway, second lieutenant; and M. D. Emerson, third lieutenant. Company B, same regiment, consisting of 100 men, was raised by Capt. James G. Bowman. The lieutenants were Charles Machew and W. Stevenson. Company G, same regiment, commanded by Capt. C. C. Edwards; lieutenants were Staten and Bryant. These companies served during the war and took part in all the Western campaigns. A company of about 100 men was raised in this county by Capt. R. H. Fristow and attached to the Eighth Kentucky Infantry. The names of under officers were not learned.

One of the first companies organized in the county, if not the first, was raised by Capt. Lou Slayden. It numbered about ninety men and formed part of the Second Kentucky Regiment. Harry Rogers and J. A. Pryor were lieutenants.

One company of the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry was recruited in Graves County. It contained the full quota and was commanded by Capt. George W. Clanton.

About 300 men from Graves entered the federal service; not all of them regular troops, however, some acting in the capacity of home-guards. Capt. L. A. Hanson raised a company for the Sixteenth Kentucky Regiment, while two companies, commanded by Capts. Purcell and Keyes respectively, were recruited for the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry.

A company of about sixty men, under Capt. Jones Gregory, was recruited for the federal service about the beginning of the war, and served for a period of three years, being attached to no particular regiment a great part of that time.

While Graves County was not the scene of any active military operations, the county was overrun from time to time by guerrillas and so-called home-guards to the great annoyance of the peaceable citizens, many of whom were mercilessly plundered of all they possessed, while not a few met with more cruel treatment.

Mayfield was occupied at different times during the war by the federals and confederates, a detachment of the latter burning the court house in 1864. In that year Gen. Payne assumed command of the Union forces of western Kentucky, with headquarters at Paducah. He caused a fortification to be thrown up around the public square of Mayfield, in which work the citizens, irrespective of class or sentiment, were compelled to assist. Such was the rigor with which he exercised his authority, that sixty-one persons in the Purchase, many of them entirely innocent, are said to have been executed during his short "reign of terror." His removal, in the latter part of the above year, was hailed with delight by the citizens of the town and surrounding country, many of whom had been subjected to the greatest cruelty on account of their suspected friendship for the Southern cause.

Payne's successor was Gen. Meredith, an officer of dignity and a true gentleman. His conduct was such as to win the confidence and esteem of the people, whom he treated with fairness and courtesy, and his occupancy of Mayfield was the beginning of an era of friendly feeling among all classes. He abandoned the fortifications constructed by his predecessor as useless in case of an attack, and in their stead threw up earthworks on an eminence in the southwest part of the town, which commanded a wide range of country. He planted several batteries on these fortifications, but no enemy appeared to dispute his possession of the place.

Mayfield is situated a little north of the geographical center of Graves County, and next to Paducah is the largest town in the Purchase. Its history is coeval with that of the county, as the act of 1821 fixing the boundaries of Graves designates Mayfield as the seat of justice, although no survey of the place was made until after the county was organized in 1824. On the 27th of March, that year, the original plat, embracing an area of 160 acres, lying in Section 10, Town 3 north, Range 1 east, was duly recorded and signed by the first board of trustees, consisting of John Anderson, Richard Reigar, Isaac Darnall, Joshua Shelton and Crawford Anderson. The survey was made by John Anderson, and the plat shows thirty-five blocks, seventy-two lots and a public square, with nine streets crossing each other at right angles, five running east and west, and four north and south. Several additions have been made from time to time, the most important of which are West Mayfield, consisting of twenty-two lots, recorded May 24, 1867, and Williams' addition of fifty-six lots, July 26, 1878.

It is difficult to determine who the first settlers of Mayfield were, but among the early comers are remembered John Anderson, William Edwards, John Killough, John Tolbert, John M. Gardner, Frank Tolbert, Reuben Tolbert, Mr. Cravens, C. Smith, Jesse Wells, Dr. Wilkinson and James Edens, all of whom became identified with the village during the early years of its history.

The first stock of goods was brought to the place by John Anderson, who with his sons, Vincent and Davenport, soon established a fair trade in the sparsely settled county. Jesse Wells, Dr. Wilkinson and Paul Tolbert were among the early business men, and later came Joe Wilkinson, Lewis Wilkinson, Edmund Rogers, L. B. Holifield, Charles Smith, Michael Eaker, William Beadles and John Bolinger, all of whom sold goods prior to 1848.

The first hotel was kept by William Edwards, whose house stood a little east of the town limits, and in 1825, John Anderson was granted license to keep a tavern in the village. James Edens opened a public house very soon after the organization of the county and was one of the early merchants of the town, and perhaps its first manufacturer, carrying on the hatter's trade in connection with his other business. Bluford Gore kept a hotel a few years later, which was a favorite stopping-place for the traveling public.

The growth of the town, during the first dozen years of its history was rather slow, but as the settlement of the country increased, its importance as a business center became fully established, and as early as 1845 it had a population of several hundred, and was recognized as the most important inland town of the Purchase. At that time there were several substantial business firms in successful operation, besides blacksmiths, carpenters and the usual number of mechanics, artisans and idlers. The town had a school, and various religious organizations had been represented by pioneer preachers; lawyers and doctors had begun to cut a figure, and the portly figure and imposing dignity of a judge of the circuit court had become a periodical and expected sight. The town early became a tobacco market, and the handling of this staple was one of the first important industries of the place.

The completion of the Memphis, New Orleans & Northern Railroad, in 1854, gave new life and increased impetus to the town, and since that time its development has been substantial and satisfactory in every respect. New interests have been developed, manufactures have been established, and the general business has increased to such an extent that Mayfield is now the recognized commercial center of the largest and most fertile agricultural region of western Kentucky. The population, according to the census of 1880, was 1,839, but its very rapid increase since that period justifies us in saying that at least 3,000 persons live within the limits of the city at the present time.

The commercial interests of the town are represented by ten dry goods-stores, thirteen grocery stores, four drug stores, three confectioneries, three hardware stores, one book-store, two newspapers, one queensware store, two agricultural warehouses, two jewelry establishments, one saddlery and leather store, besides several stores, where general merchandise is handled. There is one large tobacco warehouse and a number of rehandling houses. There are three hotels, six livery stables, two large flouring-mills, one marble shop, a couple of furniture stores, besides a number of blacksmiths and wagon makers' shops.

In 1859 a branch of the Ashland bank was established at Mayfield, and continued here until 1864, doing a very successful business in the meantime. In the latter year it was removed to Paducah and reorganized as the First National Bank of that city.

The First National Bank of Mayfield was established May, 1875, with a capital of $100,000, which was increased two years later to $150,000. The officers of this bank are H. S. Hale, president; S. P. Ridgeway, cashier; W. W. Tice, D. B. Stanfield Thomas Ligon and S. B. Wright, directors. The net earnings of the bank since its organization, have been $112,916.

The Bank of Mayfield was established in 1883 by a stock company, with a capital of $100,000. The officers are Lucian Anderson, president; and J. N. Beadles, cashier. The following gentlemen are directors: L. Anderson, R. A. Mayes, R. M. Beadles, R. M. Rion and J. N. Beadles.

In 1865, a stock company, known as the Mayfield Manufacturing Company, was organized, and immediately thereafter a tobacco factory was started, which did not prove a success. It was afterward abandoned and the building used for a woolen-mill, which has been in operation ever since. The company finally disbanded, and the enterprise was purchased by private parties, who from time to time built additions to the main building, until now it is one of the largest and most successful factories of its kind in western Kentucky. It is operated at the present by Messrs. Hudspeth & Smith, who became sole owners in 1879.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Mayfield is the oldest religious organization in the city, its history dating from about the year 1832. The first services were held in private dwellings, and later in the court house, which was used as a meeting place for a number of years. The first ordained elders were John Anderson, Jesse Wells, John Cunningham and Henry M. Coulter. The following pastors have ministered to the church from time to time: Collins J. Bradley, C. E. Hay, Levi Calvert, John Ward, Finis E. Roberts, R. L. Calvert, W. D. Wear, J. G. Webb, I. B. Self, J. M. Herbert, R. G. McClesky, W. G. Dillon, H. D. Wiley and G. H. Sheldrake, present incumbent. The present house of worship is a brick structure, erected in 1868, and represents a capital of $4,000. There are 125 communicants at the present time.

First Baptist Church, of Mayfield, was organized July, 1844, by Revs. Milton S. Wyman and Henry Richardson, with a membership of fourteen persons, namely: John Boyd and wife, Thomas J. Puryear and wife, Thomas Ligon, Sr., and wife; J. B. Hurt and wife, Mrs. William Puryear, J. N. Beadles, William Beadles and Mrs J. B. New. The court house was used for a meeting place until 1858, at which time a brick house of worship was built. Nine years later the house was destroyed by fire. It was immediately rebuilt, and at the present time is valued at $3,500. The following are the names of the different pastors of the church, viz.: Thomas L. Garrett, H. G. Puryear, Willis White, D. B. Ray, John M. Harrington, E. W. Benson, A. C. Carpenter, T. H. Pettit, F. L. Dupont, R. S. Fleming and Ezra Smith. The present incumbent is Rev. W. C. Taylor.

The first services by ministers of the Christian Church were held about the year 1853, in the court house, and private dwellings, but it was not until 1857, that a permanent organization was effected. The first elders of the congregation were J. H. Robbins and Dr. J. D. Landrum. The society increased in number very rapidly, and eleven years after organizing the present handsome temple of worship was erected at an expenditure of $8,000. Subsequent improvements have been made at a cost of $3,000, and the building is now the largest church edifice in the city. The following pastors have had charge of the society from time to time, Elders Trimble, Miles, Kibby, Butler, Howard, Kimball and Orvis. Present pastor, J. B. Briney. The church is in a flourishing condition, numbering 190 members.

The Mayfield Methodist Church was established some time between the years 1840 and 1845, the first services being held in the court house, which was used for public worship until 1853. In the latter year, a frame building was erected where the present structure stands, and at that time was the only church edifice in the city. It was in use until 1875, at which time the present handsome brick building was erected, which with the parsonage is valued at $5,000. The early pastors, who from time to time served the church, were the following, viz: J. R. Walker, Finley Bynum, Thomas Smith, Joshua Cole, Meredith M. Neal, Dr. Richmond, William H. Leigh, John Moss, Christenberry Lee, J. J. Brooks, Mr. Culpepper, Mr. Reid, J. H. Brooks, Elias Jackson and J. G. Acton. The pastor in charge at the present time is Rev. G. T. Sullivan. Present membership, 176. The colored people of Mayfield have two churches, Methodist and Baptist, both of which are largely attended and well supported.

One of the earliest settlements of Graves was made in the southern part of the county near the State line, and an outgrowth of that neighborhood was the village of Feliciana, at one time the most important trading point in the county. The Moss Brothers were the first business men of the place. They kept a good store and also opened the first hotel in the southern part of the county, which for many years was a favorite stopping place for such travelers as passed that way.

E. H. Gordon kept an early store, as did also Dr. Lockridge, the first medical man of the place. John Scofield sold goods for a number of years, and later came Dr. and William Alexander, who for some time carried on a very successful mercantile business. Among other early merchants were Edmund Rodgers, Mr. Gordon, Mr. January, Mr. Renfrow and W. C. Rodgers. William Patterson was one of the first mechanics, and W. C. Stovall and John H. Nichols were early physicians. From 1845 until 1850, the place enjoyed an unusual degree of prosperity, there being at one time seven large general stores in successful operation, besides smaller establishments, and a number of shops of different kinds. The completion of the railroad in 1854, within a few miles of the village, proved its death blow, and no great time elapsed until its business interests were absorbed by new towns along the road. At the present time two old buildings are all that remain to show where this once flourishing village stood.

The village of Wingo is situated on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad in Water Valley and Wingo precinct, and occupies a part of Section 14, Town 2 north, Range 1 west. It is an outgrowth of the railroad, and dates its history from the year 1854, at which time German Wingo laid off several lots on his land, and brought a stock of goods to the place. A station was established and ere long other business men came in and opened stores, among whom were Wesley Stimson, Bird Gregory, James Frost and John Frost.

Wingo, next to Mayfield, is the largest place in the county. It has an energetic population and is a fine business point, its commercial interest being represented at the present time by nine stores. There are three churches, viz., Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist, all of which have good organizations and fair buildings. The Masonic fraternity and Odd Fellows have strong lodges, and the village school building is the finest in the county. It is a two-story brick structure, erected in 1882, at a cost of $7,000. The village has about 350 inhabitants.

Lynnville is situated in Lynnville precinct, Sections 8, 9, 16 and 17, Town 1 north, Range 2 east. It is the center of a fine agricultural region, which was settled in an early day by a class of thrifty farmers from Tennessee and the Carolinas. The village has been incorporated by an act of the Legislature. There are four general stores, two physicians and a Masonic lodge. There is a large Union Church building, in which the Christians and Methodists hold services, both having strong organizations.

Farmington is situated in Farmington precinct, on Section 3, Town 2 north, Range 2 east. It was laid out December 24, 1841, and consists of 100 lots and a public square. There are eight streets crossing each other at right angles, four of which, North, Main, Johnson and South, run northwest and southeast, and West, Franklin, Washington and East Streets run northeast and southwest. The first trustees of the town were James Cochran, William Yandel, F. B. Brown, Robert Walker and Jesse Stokes. The village is surrounded by a fine agricultural region, and is a flourishing business point. There is one general store, one grocery store, one drug store, several shops, two church buildings and a fine school edifice.

Hickory Grove was laid out November 5, 1867, for J. W. Kemble, Jo. Johns and R. K. Williams, proprietors. It is situated in Sections 15 and 16, Town 4 north, Range 1 east, and is an outgrowth of the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad. The original plat consists of twenty-five blocks, and 160 lots traversed by the following streets: Shady, Railroad, Sophia and Hickory, running east and west, and Kemble, Price, Woodland and Sellars Streets, running north and south. The first trustees of the town were A. Kemble, O. M. Price and O. G. Sellars. There are several small stores in the town, but its close proximity to Mayfield prevents it becoming a trading point of any importance.

Water Valley is a railroad town situated south of Wingo village and Water Valley and Wingo district. The plat lies in Section 7, Town 1 north, Range 1 west, and consists of twenty-five lots of different sizes. The business of the place is represented by seven stores, one saw and flouring-mill, a tobacco rehandling house and several shops. The Baptists have a congregation and a good house of worship, in which other denominations hold service at intervals.

Boydsville is a small village situated on the State line, the northern half lying in Lynnville precinct, and the southern half in Tennessee. It early achieved considerable notoriety as the rendezvous of a set of hard characters, who gave the place an unenviable reputation, from which it has never entirely recovered. There are two general stores at the present time, which do a good business.

Symsonia, in Symsonia district, is a small country town, with a history dating from July 21, 1860, at which time it was surveyed for M. Lyles, proprietor. It is situated on Section 11, Township 5 north, Range 2 east, and consists of thirty-six lots, but few of which have been improved. It is a good trading place and supports four stores.

Dukedom is a small hamlet on the State line, part of it lying in Tennessee and part in Pilot Oak district. Its business is represented by a general store and blacksmith shop.

Pryorsburgh is situated in Rozells precinct, Section 36, Township 3 north, Range 1 west. It is an outgrowth of the railroad, and a place of some local importance. One general store, two grocery stores and one drug store is the extent of its business.

CHAPTER VI.

HICKMAN COUNTY.

HICKMAN COUNTY lies in the southwestern part of the State, and embraces a geographical area of 226 square miles. It is the seventy-first in the order of formation, and is bounded as follows: Ballard County on the north, Graves County on the east, Fulton County and Tennessee on the south, and the Mississippi River on the west.

The topographical features are varied, the general face of the country being gently undulating, with a few abrupt hills and deep ravines in certain localities. That part of the county bordering on the Mississippi River is considerably broken, the bluffs in some places being from 80 to 120 feet high, and of romantic boldness. From the summits of these majestic uplands, far above the water, a general view of the historical old river and the beautiful scenery for many miles along its banks can be obtained. On account of their peculiar brown appearance, the bluffs were early known as the "Iron Banks," so called by the early explorers, who supposed the country contained rich deposits of that useful mineral; the name proved a misnomer, however, as there is no vestige of iron to be found along the river, or in any part of the county so far as known.

A few miles below Columbus are the Chalk Banks, so called on account of their brilliant white surface, which greatly resembles chalk. They are composed of a fine white clay, much of which has been utilized in the manufacture of a superior kind of earthenware. The interior of the county is sufficiently undulating to afford ample drainage, without any, or but little, waste lands. The soil is generally a brown loam, but in some places sand or clay predominate, while the bottoms skirting the water courses are characterized by a porous black mould of great depth and fertility. All of these soils are rich in tree food, and the county was originally covered with a dense forest growth, oak, hickory, ash, poplar, maple, walnut and other large trees predominating on the uplands, while gum and elms of gigantic sizes grew along the various streams.

Hickman is an agricultural region, and there is scarcely a section of land that cannot be rendered capable of almost unlimited production. All the fruits and cereals indigenous to this latitude are raised in abundance, the staple crops, however, being corn and tobacco, for which the soil seems peculiarly adapted. Among the fertile portions of the county, deserving of special mention, is the region of country lying between Clinton and Columbus, and also a tract south of Moscow village, in both of which can be seen some of the best and most highly cultivated farms in the Purchase.

The water courses of Hickman County are Bayou du Chien, and Little Obion Creek, with their several tributaries. The former has its source in Graves County, and is a stream of considerable importance, affording ample drainage for a large scope of country. It flows through Hickman County in a semicircle, and enters Fulton County not far from the city of Hickman. Little Obion Creek rises in the southeastern part of Graves County, and flows in an irregular channel through the northern part of Hickman, describing a bend similar to the Bayou du Chien. Beside the above streams there are a number of smaller water courses in various parts of the county, but few of which are designated by any particular names.

Capt. Paschal Hickman, in honor of whom the county was named, was a native of Virginia, and emigrated to Kentucky when very young with his father, Rev. William Hickman, and settled in Franklin County; served in most of the campaigns against the Indians, and was distinguished for his activity, efficiency and bravery. In 1812, he was commissioned captain, raised a company and joined Col. John Allen, who commanded the First Regiment of Kentucky Riflemen. He was in the memorable battle of River Raisin, where he was severely wounded, and, like many kindred Kentucky spirits, was butchered in cold blood by the savage allies of his Britannic Majesty.

It is impossible to determine at this remote period the exact year in which white men first visited the present territory of Hickman County, but from the most reliable information accessible, it appears to have been as early as the summer of 1780, the same year that witnessed the construction of Fort Jefferson on the Mississippi River, in what is now Ballard County. The soldiers stationed at the fort made several incursions throughout the surrounding country, and at one time a small detachment penetrated as far south as the present site of Columbus. It will be remembered that before the admission of Kentucky as a State, its territory formed a part of Virginia, although the country at that time was the undisputed possession of Indian tribes, who used it for a hunting ground. As early as 1783–84, the Legislature of Virginia authorized the "laying of land warrants" along the Mississippi, Ohio and other rivers for the benefit of the soldiers of that State who served in the Revolutionary war, and immediately thereafter surveyors visited the country for the purpose of "locating" said warrants; but owing to the hostility of the Indians they carried their operations no further than "establishing corners" at various points along the river. The first of these warrants was laid on the Mississippi River, in what is now Hickman County, and embraced an area of 4,000 acres, which served as a basis for all warrants subsequently located in this part of the State. A subsequent act provided for the division of this tract into town lots and the appointing of trustees to control and sell the same, and it was the cherished dream of the projectors of the enterprise to found here a large city, which should not only become the commercial center of the United States, but eventually the seat of national government as well. At the suggestion of the governor of Virginia, the new city was named Columbus, but no attempts were made to settle it for many years, on account of its remote location and the hostility of the Indians, who looked upon the encroachments of the whites in anything but a friendly spirit. The first building on the town site was a block-house, erected in 1804, and used as a fort by United States troops during Aaron Burr's conspiracy against the government. In the same house eighteen years later were held the first county and circuit courts in Kentucky west of the Tennessee River. A few hunters and other daring spirits, impelled by a love of adventure and a desire to secure some of the rich lands bordering on the Mississippi River, visited this remote outpost early in the present century, and "laid their land warrants," but the idea of a permanent settlement was never entertained until after the purchase of the country from the Indians in 1818. About that time, or perhaps a little earlier, William Tipton came to Columbus and purchased the old block-house, which he fitted up for a residence, and in which he lived until 1828. He was a true type of the pioneer, an intelligent man withal, and took an active part in the county organization. Other early settlers of Columbus were Samuel Lucas, Mr. Taylor, whose son William is still living in the town; Edmund Taylor, the Cook family, Pembroke Walker and his sons Jeff, Robert and Burns, and several others. An early settlement was made a short distance below the town near the chalk banks by Jasper Kerr, who came to the county prior to its organization; and about the same time came Rev. Samuel Gibson, who made improvements in the same neighborhood. A man by the name of Bowles was among the first settlers, as was also the Edrington family, consisting of Price, John and Henry L. Edrington and their father, whose name was not learned.

The Moscow settlement, so called from Moscow village, is perhaps the next oldest community in the county. Among the first to secure homes in that locality was a widow lady, by name of Griffey, whose arrival antedates the year 1822. John and Adam Haynes came about that time, and the same year witnessed the arrival of Samuel McFall, on whose land the village was afterward laid out. Among those who came later were Thomas Griffey, Dr. Luten, one of the earliest medical men of the county; a man by name of Elliott, whose reputation was not above reproach; Anthony and Lycurgus Bartlett and their father, whose death occurred shortly after their arrival; James Webb, father-in-law of Thomas Griffey; Dr. Outlaw, Solomon Nevill, Col. Webb, whose widow is still living, Dennis Stubbs and Moses Morrow.

An early settlement was made in what is known as the Rock Springs neighborhood, Alexander precinct, and among the first comers there was Dempsey White, father of Rev. Willis White, who settled the place now owned by the Murkeson heirs, in 1823. Mr. White was a native of North Carolina, but moved here from Caldwell County, this State. He was a prominent citizen of the county, and died in 1841. His son, Rev. Willis White, has been an honored resident of Hickman County for a period of sixty-one years, and is as widely and favorably known as any other man in Western Kentucky. Absalom Farmer moved to the Rock Springs neighborhood in the winter of 1823, and a little later came Lawrence Everett, S. Wheeler, Nathan Jackson, and his son-in-law, Silas Clark, who is still living at an advanced age. Otho Hardin, Lewis Hardin, Jesse Walker, the Weatherspoon family, John Byrd, Benjamin Hamby, Elder Fleming Cayce, a Baptist preacher, and John Everts, were residents of the county prior to 1830. The Oakland neighborhood, north of Moscow, was settled in an early day, among the first arrivals being Thomas Davis, who is still living; William Cromwell located there as early as 1824, and about the same time a man by name of Scott settled in the vicinity. Others who came in, from time to time, were the McQuary family, Elkanah Fawlks, "Dink" Fawlks, William Blair and Dr. Caldwell.

Early settlements were made in the southeast part of the county by John Latta, Taylor Bards, the Bennett family, Benjamin Stokes, Sennett Laffoon, the McFadden family, Stephen Parker and son Ed. and the Ray brothers, Samuel, Stephen and Dennison Ray. A son of the last named, Dr. D. B. Ray, editor of the Battle Flag, of St. Louis, is one of the leading Baptist clergyman of the South. Near the Graves County line, in the east part of the county, there settled in an early day the Wilson family, Judge Cartwright, E. Sherfield, the Hayden family, William and John Tharp, Lewis Courtney, Watt Courtney, and a family of Woolseys.

Among the earliest residents in the vicinity of Clinton were Dr. J. S. Ringo, Coleman Ringo, who is still living in the city, Thomas Owsley, Jesse Hale, William Hale, the Spicer family, and on Cane Creek, a few miles from the town, were George and Pleasant Vincent, Joel Wren, Mr. Riley, father of Matt Riley, the Floyds, Van Pools and a number of others who came in later.

The death of Samuel Lucas at Columbus was the first event of the kind that occurred in Hickman County; he died about the year 1825. The honor of building the first mill in Hickman County belongs to David Menser, who erected a small structure on the Bayou du Chien about the year 1826. This mill was a very primitive affair, supplied with indifferent machinery, and was operated by horse power. It stood until the year 1827, at which time it was replaced by a water-mill, one of the first mills of the kind west of the Tennessee River. Among the first industries of the county was a tannery, operated by Willis White and Merritt Stephenson, six miles south of Clinton, in the year 1826. Conrad Huss started a tannery in the same locality a short time afterward, and operated it very successfully for a number of years.

"In 1827 occurred the great plague of squirrels, which swarmed over the country like the locusts of Egypt, utterly destroying the corn, and doing serious damage generally. They came from the West, swam the Mississippi, and remained in the country several months. There was a lady washing clothes on the banks of the river at Mills' Point, now Hickman, on the day the little pests crossed, and with her clothes paddle she killed over seventy of them."*

The cause of Christianity was not tardy of introduction into the new country, though preachers were not so numerous then as now. The first church house built in the county was at Mount Pleasant, erected as early as 1826, by the Methodists. Among the first preachers were Revs. William Holifield, Fletcher Sullivan and Joshua Cole, all of whom came to the county about the year 1824. These old pioneers were earnest and faithful ministers, particularly Mr. Cole. "Through the efforts and influence of these grand pioneers of the cross, the Mobley Camp Ground near Water Valley was established, where hundreds of persons were converted to God. They also established Oliver's Camp Ground, in Fulton County, and one near Clinton Station, on the Mobile road, in this county, called Scott's Camp Ground. These stations were instrumental in doing much good in toning the morals of the people, the beneficial effects of which are still felt upon the community at large."

The Presbyterians followed the Methodists, and in a very early day Rev. Collins J. Bradley, of that denomination, held religious services in various parts of the country, preaching at the houses of the settlers, there being no church edifices in the country at that time. Elder Fleming Cayce, of the Old School Baptist Church, was a pioneer preacher also. He assisted in the organization of the Rock Springs Church in Alexander Precinct as early as 1828, and ministered to the congregation several years thereafter. Elder Silas Cavender, of Graves County, preached for this society during the early years of its history. This church is still kept up, and is one of the active religious organizations of the county. Other early societies are Scott's Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, the Baptist and Methodist Churches of Clinton and the various congregations of Columbus.

*Rev. Willis White's Reminiscences.

The early roads of Hickman County were mere by-ways, or Indian traces, which being traveled for a number of years were afterward regularly established. In 1824 there was but one public road in the county, and that ran from Columbus to where the town of Milburn now stands. There was not a bridge of any kind in the county, and it will be readily seen that travel was exceedingly difficult, in fact impassable, during high water.

In February, 1822, Hickman County was established by a special act of the Legislature with jurisdiction over the entire Purchase. The town of Columbus on the Mississippi River was selected as the seat of justice, and it was there, on February 25, 1822, that the magistrates met, and effected a permanent organization. There being no court house, the justices occupied the private residence of William Tipton, near the ferry landing, known as the Block-House, it having been used as a fort, when Columbus was a remote military outpost.

The justices of the peace were John Anderson, of Mayfield; Andrew Bell, Arthur H. Davis of Marshall County; William Titsworth, who lived near Paducah, and Samuel Wilson, who resided near the village of Lovelaceville in the present county of Ballard. The oath of office was administered by Dickson Givens, of Livingston County, after which Culbert Anderson was appointed clerk; William Danks, coroner; C. A. Wilson, surveyor; and William Duncan, sheriff. Among the first deliberations of this court were the division of the county into four constable districts, and the recommending of several parties to the governor as fit persons for the office of justice of the peace. At the second session, February 26, 1822, William Tipton was granted license to keep tavern at his house in Columbus. Viewers were appointed to lay out and locate three roads, one from Columbus to the mouth of Clark's River; one from Reynolds' ferry on the Tennessee to Copeland's ford on Clark's River, and one from Copeland's ford to intersect the Love's ferry road.

The third session of the county court was held May 6, 1822, at which time Jacob Rown d, Joseph Edrington and William Cook were the justices. At that time Samuel Gibson and Jacob Rowland were granted licenses to solemnize the rite of matrimony, and William Tipton, William Cook, Thomas Barner and William Titsworth were appointed judges of the election held that year. Thomas Barner, William Tipton, William Cook, Samuel Wilson, and Joseph Edrington composed the court at the July term, 1822, and a part of the business then transacted was the tax levy of $347.58, to meet which the sum of 37½ cents was assessed to each tithable.

W C Blair

At the spring term of 1823, the following justices were present, to wit: Thomas James, Joseph Edrington, William Cook, Michael McQuary, Wiley Barner, Ebenezer Killough, William Armstrong, Ezekiel Edens, Joshua Shelton and Richard Reiger. The levy that year was $1.50 per tithable, and the records show that there were 499 tax payers then living in the county.

"The court appointed Richard Taylor, Samuel Gibson and William Edwards commissioners to contract for and superintend the erection of a court house, to be constructed of logs. A site for the building was fixed on a bluff, a little south of the fortifications built during the late war. The house was built of hewn logs, and was to be 22x18 feet, one story and a half high, with an upper room divided by a partition so as to form two jury rooms. The order appointing the commissioners did not authorize them to prosecute the work further than to erect the building and have it covered, but after the house was erected there was an order of the March term appointing the same committee as commissioners to have it chinked and daubed." *

"At the October term of 1823, the court appointed J. B. Gibson, Samuel Lucas and Benjamin Barner commissioners, to superintend the building of a jail in Columbus. The jail was to be built of hewed logs, fifteen inches square, and the structure was to be sixteen feet square and eight feet high, with three windows, each 10x10 inches. The door was to be made of two oak planks, well nailed together, and hung with iron hinges, with a bar extending across the door. The commissioners respectively reported the cost of the jail $294, and the cost of the court house $265."* These buildings answered the purposes until the removal of the county seat to Clinton in 1829. In 1826 the county let a contract for the building of a bridge across Obion Creek, on the road leading from Columbus to Moscow, near where the present bridge now stands. This was the first bridge built in the county by order of the court.

The first deed recorded after the county organization was made by Samuel Gibson and wife to John Clark, conveying fifty-two acres of land, lying on the north side of the Cumberland River, for the sum of $400, bearing date of March 14, 1822.

The first will probated was that of Frederick Skaggs, giving to his wife and children all of his personal and real estate. The date of this instrument is October, 1822.

The first marriage license was granted March 4, 1822, to Samuel Lancaster and Nancy McClendon. The second couple who applied for license were Benjamin Owens and Winifred Shields. One of the first instruments recorded in the county clerk's office is a bill of sale, bearing date of February, 1822, the material part of which is as follows: "Bill of sale—Wiley Barner to Edward Curd for $900, paid in Russellville branch bank, the following described negro slaves, to wit: One negro man, named Elijah, aged about forty-seven years, one negro woman, named Polly, and her child, a boy named George, aged about two years, and their increase, which said negro slaves for life are warranted, and forever defended against the claims of all persons whatsoever, the same slaves to be found sensible and healthy."†

The first circuit court in Hickman County was held at the house of William Tipton, in Columbus, March 12, 1822, by Richard Taylor and John Anderson, associate justices. John E. Taylor was appointed clerk of the court, and a grand jury composed of the following citizens was impaneled: Ebenezer Killough, Samuel Mahan, Zadock Adams, Henry Williams, Spencer Standley, James Pryor, Francis Taylor, John C. Gray, William Neal, Richard Cromwell, Caleb C. Irvine, Frederick Miller, James Bailey, Thomas Phillips and William Lamins. This jury returned indictments against Owen Thompson for manslaughter, and Charles Taylor and H. Gibson for various offenses.

*White's Reminiscence.

*White. †Ibid.

The first trial by jury was for slander—Isaac Darnall vs. Peter Dozier. The following are the names of the jurors: William Rogers, James Garrison, Isaac Crowson, John Pryor, Charles Taylor, John Russell, W. B. Cook, Jesse Meshew, Sterling Vaughan, Benjamin McIntosh, William Brown and Moses Thompson. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,112.50. At the second day of court the grand jury returned bills against L. Williams, William Williams and Matthew McLean for felony, an indictment against John and Elizabeth Vandiver for murder, and a presentment against Matthew McLean for drunkenness.

In February, 1824, Thomas James and Peter Mahan were appointed associate judges. They both resigned, and Moses Thompson and Mr. Edrington were appointed. Edrington dying shortly afterward, John Miliner was chosen to fill the vacancy.

In about the year 1829 or 1830, the Legislature formed a new judicial district, which was composed of Caldwell and Livingston, and all the counties west of the Tennessee River. Rezin Davidge, who lived at Princeton, was appointed judge in 1830.

Judge James Campbell was appointed in 1838 to fill the office of judge. He soon resigned, and W. P. Fowler was chosen in his place; he presided until 1850. Since then the following judges have presided, to wit: R. K. Williams, C. S. Marshall, A. R. Boone, W. W. Robertson, Edward Crossland, W. G. Bullitt and James Campbell, Jr., present incumbent.

The county seat remained at Columbus from 1822 until 1829. The Legislature, at its session in the winter of 1827–28, passed an act granting the citizens the right to open a poll and take the vote in favor of a removal of the seat of justice from Columbus to the center of the county. Dr. J. D. Martin, of McCracken County, Joseph Gough and Henry Wheeler, of Graves County, were appointed commissioners to select the site for the county seat as near the center as practicable, in the event that a majority voted for a removal. The vote was taken and a majority favored the change; the commissioners were notified; they came, and after mature deliberation chose Clinton as the proper place. The land which was selected belonged to Stephen Ray, and was at that time covered with a dense forest of large trees. Ray donated the public square to the county, and certain proceeds arising from the sale of lots in the newly laid out seat of justice.

In moving the county seat, the commissioners did their duty faithfully, and without partiality, yet it did not give satisfaction. Moscow, by this time, had become a village of considerable note in the country on account of its trade and commerce. The friends of Moscow claimed that it was the proper place for a county seat, and when the commissioners met for the purpose of fixing upon a site, the claims of Moscow were urged. Columbus still entertained the hope that the advantage of the Mississippi River would induce the people to move the county seat back to that place. Thus there were three parties contending for the county town. The Moscow party was headed by Samuel McFall, who was the proprietor of that town. Drs. Luten and Ashburn also wielded a powerful influence in favor of that place. There were a good many in favor of the center of the county, as that would be just and fair to all citizens. The Clinton party was headed by Judge James, aided by such men as Col. Robert Moore, William Walker and other prominent citizens living in the village. The contest was carried on with unabated interest for a number of years, Clinton maintaining her supremacy in the meantime. The controversy led to the formation of Ballard County in 1842, and the county of Fulton two years later.

The first court house in Clinton was a rude log structure erected on the public square the year after the county seat was relocated. It served its purpose until 1832, at which time an order for a new building more in keeping with the increasing wealth and dignity of the county was made, and work on the new house commenced at once. The commissioners appointed to superintend its erection were Owen Glatz, Stephen Ray, H. L. Edrington, Thomas L. Owsley and William Jordan. The building was of brick, forty-five feet square, two stories high, with the court room below and three jury rooms on the second floor. At the time of its completion, it was the only brick house in Kentucky west of the Tennessee River. It was used for court purposes until 1883, at which time it was condemned as unsafe, and a new one ordered built. At the August term, 1883, the following commissioners were appointed to examine plans and contract for the new building: N. P. Moss, John T. Moore and R. H. Nancy. The contract was awarded W. L. & T. J. Landrum of Mayfield, for $20,845, and under the efficient management of John A. Scott, superintendent, the work has been pushed rapidly forward. The building is brick, and when completed will be one of the finest and most imposing temples of justice in the Purchase. It is 92x78 feet, contains four offices and a library room, two petit jury rooms, one grand jury room and a circuit court room 46x74 feet, with a seating capacity of 700 persons outside the bar. The building is finely finished, and with its beautiful tower, 112 feet high, is an object of which the citizens of both city and county may be justly proud.

The first jail in Clinton was ordered built in 1832. It was an indifferent log structure, but answered the purpose for which it was intended, for a number of years. The present jail was built in 1878 at a cost of $6,500. It is a substantial brick structure, strongly made and sufficiently capacious for the criminals of the county for years to come.

Prior to 1873, the paupers of Hickman were supported by certain allowances made by the county, but in December of that year a poor farm of 100 acres was established four miles southeast of Clinton. This was not a successful venture, the farm not proving self-supporting, and at the present time steps are being taken to dispose of the farm and purchase a smaller place nearer the city.

The first newspaper published in Hickman County was the Columbus Enterprise, established about the year 1852–53, by W. D. Lannom. It was a small sheet, had a limited circulation and ran its course in four years. It was succeeded by the Columbus Crescent, a weekly paper, established by Messrs. Bullock & Elliott, a short time before the breaking out of the war. This paper was issued but a short time, the war proving its deathblow. The next paper was started, in 1866, by Robert Summers, and was known as the Columbus Messenger. This was a seven-column folio sheet and was regularly issued until 1876.

The Columbus Sentinel was established, in 1877, by Charles R. Cravens of Anderson, Ind., who published it for about one year when the office was purchased by Messrs. Gray & Walker, who changed the name of the paper to the Columbus Times. The Times was issued by Gray & Walker about six months, at the end of which time, the office was purchased by Ed B. Walker and Luther S. Taylor, who ran it for one and a half years. Later E. B. Walker established the Columbus Beacon, a small paper which enjoyed an existence of about nine months.

In December, 1882, Luther S. Taylor established the Columbus Herald, which he published at Columbus until May, 1883, at which time the office was moved to Union City, Tenn. In 1883, F. H. Thurman moved the Wickliffe Tribune from Wickliffe, Ballard County, to Columbus, where he issued it for a part of one year. He afterward returned to Wickliffe, where the paper has since been published.

The Clinton Democrat was established in Clinton, in 1876, by John Shields who still edits it. The paper is a seven-column folio, Democratic in politics, and has a large circulation.

The Hickman County Times was established at Clinton, January, 1884, by Jacob White, who published it until the winter of 1885, at which time he sold out to Wimbish Henderson. Henderson moved the office to Columbus, where the paper has since been issued.

The early schools of Hickman County, like those of other parts of Kentucky, were of a very primitive character, and supported by private subscription. Among the first teachers are remembered James Fair, Mr. Singleberry and a man by the name of Kimball, all of whom wielded the birch prior to 1830. The first schoolhouse in the county was a small log structure built in 1825. It stood near John's Bridge on the Bayou du Chien Creek and was first used by Mr. Fair, who taught a six months' term the winter after its erection.

In 1846, the first high school in Kentucky, west of the Tennessee River, was established at Clinton, and a frame building erected on the ground now occupied by the Clinton Academy. The school was liberally patronized and under the efficient management of Prof. G. W. Ray of Owensboro it did much toward awakening an interest in behalf of education throughout Hickman County. The building was destroyed by fire in 1852. In 1851 the present public school system went into effect, at which time the county was divided into districts, and a commissioner of schools appointed. The first man to fill the office was Douglas Zimmerman. The people manifested but little interest in the free schools, in fact some of the most influential citizens of the county were pronounced enemies to the system, and a number of years elapsed before the schools obtained a substantial footing. Richard Moss was the second school commissioner. He was succeeded by Rev. Willis White, who has filled the office for thirteen years, doing much during that time to advance the cause of education in the county. There are fifty districts in the county at the present time, forty-one of which are for white schools and nine for colored.

In 1854 the legislature authorized the sale of certain lands in Hickman County belonging to the State, the proceeds to be devoted to the building of a female college in Clinton. The sale was effected, and there being nothing in the charter prohibiting the attendance of male pupils, the institution was established as a mixed school under the name of Clinton Academy. A frame building was erected in 1854, and the first session taught the latter part of the same year by Prof. G. W. Ray. The school is still in progress and is well patronized.

Clinton College is a superior institution of learning, and was established in 1873 under the auspices of the West Union Association of the Baptist Church. The movement originated with the Rev. Willis White, whose untiring industry in its behalf culminated in the above year by securing a charter, and steps were at once taken to erect a building. Donations were made by the brethren and friends about Clinton and throughout the West Union District, and a building fund amounting to several thousand dollars was soon obtained. The main part of the present building was erected in 1874 at an expenditure of $12,000. It is a two-story brick structure, and stands in the midst of a beautifully shaded lot of five acres, in the eastern part of the town. The first session was taught the winter of 1873, in the Baptist Church of Clinton, by Prof. T. N. Wells. Prof. Wells served until 1880, at which time he resigned and was succeeded by Miss A. M. Hicks, who has since remained in control. Under her efficient management the school has continued to increase in interest, and the course of instruction, the discipline, and thoroughness of teaching have been the subject of frequent commendation. The patronage of the college has been young ladies and gentlemen representing the best families in the county and the surrounding country of the Purchase. The attendance for the year 1884–85 was 220. Seven teachers are employed and the school is continually growing in interest.

The Marvin College building was erected in 1884 under the auspices of Paducah District of the Methodist Church South, and is the finest school edifice in Hickman County. It is a beautiful two-story brick structure, situated on a commanding eminence in the northern part of Clinton, and cost the sum of $12,000. The school will be opened with a full corps of instructors, September, 1885.

Hopes of securing railroad facilities were entertained by the citizens of Hickman as early as 1848, but it was not until several years after that date, that any definite plan was urged. About that time the line of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad was surveyed through the northern part of the county, and later the citizens were called upon to assist the enterprise, which they did by voting a tax of $50,000 in its behalf.

The Illinois Central Railroad was built in 1873, the county contributing nothing towards its construction through her territory. It passed through the county from north to south and has been of incalculable benefit in developing the county's resources and building up the town of Clinton.

When the great civil war of 1861 was precipitated on the country, the sympathies of Hickman County were found to be largely with the South, and during that bloody struggle over seven hundred of her citizens fought in the army of the Confederacy. The town of Columbus was the scene of active military operations, and being a prominent point on the river, was early in the war taken possession of by the Confederate forces, under Gen. Polk, who threw up strong fortifications and garrisoned the city with about 20,000 troops. Opposite Columbus, at the town of Belmont, Mo., was fought, on the 7th of November, 1861, a bloody battle between the Federal forces, under Gen. Grant, and a detachment of Polk's army, commanded by Gens. Pillow and Cheatham, resulting in the retreat of the former to his transports about seven miles up the river. The loss on both sides was considerable, the Union forces suffering greatly while boarding the fleet. With the fall of Fort Donelson in 1862 all western Kentucky fell into the hands of the Federals. Immediately after the evacuation of Columbus, the Union forces marched into the city. They held it until the close of the war, making one of the chief depots of flotilla supplies on the Mississippi River. The fortifications were strengthened, heavy batteries were planted on the bluffs, so as to command the river, and at no time did the garrison number less than 2,500 men.

Clinton remained an unimportant outpost during the war, although it was occupied by Federal troops at intervals, the first force taking possession of the town early in 1863, and remaining for a period of ten months. Near the town in 1864 occurred the only skirmish that took place in the county during the war, resulting in the death of three Confederates out of a detachment of eighteen or twenty that rode into an ambush of New Jersey troops, then in possession of the town.

The following is a list of the companies recruited in Hickman County for the Confederate Army: Company A, First Kentucky, consisting of about one hundred men. This company was organized at the breaking out of the war, and served in Virginia for a period of one year. Company A, Second Kentucky Regiment, was organized in 1861 and left for the front in July of that year with 114 men. Officers: James W. Moss, captain; T. M. Horn, first lieutenant; Fountain Lester, second lieutenant, and L. C. Moss, third lieutenant. This was the first company sworn into the Confederate service for three years or during the war. It formed a part of the First Kentucky Brigade, which participated in all the bloody battles of the southwestern campaigns, and of the 115 men that first went out, only three or four returned uninjured at the close of the war. Company B, of the Seventh Kentucky Regiment, was recruited early in the war, and numbered about sixty or seventy men. This company served in the western campaign under Corps Commander Forrest, and took part in a number of hard-fought engagements. W. D. Lannom was captain; C. J. Rinford, first lieutenant; H. C. Watson, second lieutenant; and H. Henderson, third lieutenant. Besides the above, several hundred persons entered the service in different regiments, the majority of them enlisting at Camp Boone and Union City, Tenn. A few irregular soldiers were raised in the county for the Federal Army, but they were attached to no particular regiment, their operations being confined to a kind of guerrilla warfare, which made them very unpopular with all classes of citizens. Such was their conduct, that on one occasion Gen. Payne, commander of the Federal forces in the Purchase district, caused an entire company of them to be put in the guard house for their depredations and outrages.

County Clerks.—Culbert Anderson, first clerk, pro tempore. The first one regularly appointed was Benjamin Barner, then follows in regular order Henry Edrington, John Shaw, W. H. H. Taylor, G. W. Rennick, E. R. Ray, Thomas M. Kemp, Thomas G. Poore, Smith R. Taylor and James L. Moss.

Circuit Clerks—Richard Taylor, Jr., W. H. H. Taylor, G. W. Rennick, Thomas G. Poore, S. W. Rennick and John R. Kemp.

County Judges—William S. Jordan, William F. Boone, Willis White, G. J. Binford and E. C. Hodges.

Sheriffs—William Duncan, Isaac B. Gibson, Mr. McQuary, Joseph Edrington, Richard Reiger, Francis T. Taylor, Samuel Gibson, Jarrett Willingham, Dempsey White, A. S. Tyler, William Holeman, E. T. Wright, L. Scarce, W. E. Wright, William Robinson, W. S. Jordan, Wiley Weatherford, E. Crossland, L. M. Lee, S. W. Rennick, William Cromwell, C. C. Bowman, elected but did not serve; W. M. Samuels, A. S. Arnold, J. F. Rennick, C. M. Vaughn, W. R. Johnson, R. H. Johnson and Thomas B. Johnson.

Representatives.—Hugh McCracken, Samuel P. McFall, R. N. Lewis, Edward George, John Shaw, B. G. Dudley, N. E. Wright, G. W. Silverstooth, expelled December, 1861, for giving aid to the Southern Confederacy, re-elected in 1669; Edward Crossland, W. D. Lannom, Elisha Beazly, F. M. Ray, W. R. Bradley, A. S. Arnold, W. M. Jones, Henry Campbell, C. M. Vaughn, Jos. R. Luten and G. J. Binford. Price Edrington represented Hickman and Fulton Counties in 1851–53. Richard Alexander represented them in 1855–57.

County Attorneys since 1851.—Robert D. Bowman, George W. Oldham, R. W. Walker, William Lindsy, R. A. Galbraith, N. P. Moss, T. J. Hess, E. C. Hodges and W. G. Ray.

Surveyors.—Constant A. Wilson, James W. Gibson, Jessie Cook, F. M. Ray, C. R. Iliff, H. C. Brown and T. L. Atwood.

Assessors since 1851.—D. H. Harry, I. N. Lawrence, F. M. Ray, J. G. Kennedy, C. D. Davis, H. A. Tarver and John W. Gore.

Jailers.—John Salmon, Samuel Williams, Price Edrington, B. F. Edrington, Tucker Williams, William Ward, B. F. Chambers, A. P. Hall, William Woodward, G. W. Miller, F. M. Woodward, J. J. Clark, James Zimmerman, J. H. Field, H. C. Watson and H. H. Winter. The present incumbent is H. C. Watson.

The population of Hickman County in 1830 was 5,198. In 1840, 8,968; 1850, 4,791; 1860, 7,008; 1870, 8,453. The following is the census of 1880 by districts and towns.

District No. 1, including Columbus	3,042
Columbus City	1,338
No. 2, including Clinton	2,519
Clinton City	506
Hayes district, No. 3	1,460
McCalister, No. 4	1,460
Moscow district, including Moscow Village	1,828
Moscow Village	288
Spring Hill, No. 6	622

The present site of Columbus, as stated, formed a part of the first land warrant located in western Kentucky. The history of the town, however, dates from the spring of 1821, at which time the tract alluded to was surveyed into lots and deeded by the Legislature of Virginia to trustees appointed to control and sell the same. The natural advantages of the site, and its superior geographical location, induced the projectors to lay out the town upon a very extensive scale, and original survey shows a plat of 894 lots, varying in size from 100x200 feet to over forty acres. A public square, a lot for a college building, and a tract for a public cemetery, the whole embracing an area of 4,000 acres. The survey was made by Richard Taylor, who was also a member of the first board of trustees; the other members of the board were Joseph Underwood, William Montgomery and a Mr. McKee. The first sale of lots took place early in 1822, and among the first purchasers was William Tipton, who bought Lot No. 1, on which the old block-house previously referred to had been erected. In this building Mr. Tipton kept the first tavern in Hickman County, and it was also used as a court house during the year 1822. The first stock of goods was brought to the town by Mr. Cook early in 1822, and shortly after his arrival, Baker Woodruff engaged in the mercantile business, which he continued for several years.

Other early residents of the town were William Robertson (who kept a hotel near the river), Samuel Lucas, Henry Edrington (the first county clerk), Frank Taylor, Edmund Taylor, Dr. Hugh Nelson (one of the first physicians), John Edrington, Owen G. Cates (attorney), and others. Among the early business men were John E. Taylor, W. J. and J. P. Walker, W. Cook and R. E. Cook, all of whom sold goods prior to 1840. Later came Rector & Brown, John Cressap, Hanson Cressap and A. F. Flournoy, the last named having been one of the most prominent business men of the city. The early medical men of the town were Drs. Nelson, Fowler, Swain, Young and Dorsey.

A serious obstacle to the early development of Columbus was the old land warrant system, the lands immediately around the town having been located and held by non-residents, who refused to sell or dispose of them, thus driving the early settlers to the interior of the county. In the face of this hindrance, however, the town continued to grow apace, and as early as 1845 it was one of the prominent trading points on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and Memphis, and the chief source of supplies for the greater part of the Purchase district. The completion of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad to the town in 1854 marked a new era in the history of the place, and from that time until the breaking out of the war its growth was substantial and rapid. The war interfered with its prosperity to a considerable degree. Early in 1861 the town was occupied by the Confederate Army under Gen. Polk, who caused it to be strongly fortified. It was evacuated by the Confederates after the surrender of Fort Donelson, and from that time until the close of the war, the Federal forces remained in undisputed possession, making it one of the principal depots of army and flotilla supplies on the river.

In 1860 the town had a population of 963, and ten years later that number had increased to 1,574. The population in 1873 was estimated at something over 2,000, and the business interests that year were represented by eighty mercantile establishments, whose annual sales exceeded $800,000. From 1873 until 1884, the city seems to have experienced a general decline, but with the advent of the latter year, its business interests began to revive, and at the present time the town is making rapid strides toward regaining its former prosperity. Three railroads and the Mississippi River afford easy communication with all the principal cities of the south and southwest. The railroads are the Mobile & Ohio, which connects by transfer ferry across the river to Belmont with the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern, and the Nashville & Chattanooga, which runs daily trains from Union City, Tenn., to Columbus, over the Mobile & Ohio track.

The following is a list of the business for the year 1885: 3 dry goods stores, 6 grocery stores, 2 furniture stores, 3 confectioneries, 2 boot and shoe stores, 2 millinery stores, 1 gents' furnishing store, 2 hotels, 2 blacksmith shops, 2 large wood working and manufacturing establishments, 2 potteries, 1 flouring-mill, 1 livery stable and several dram shops.

There are six church organizations, with as many houses of worship, viz.: Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, Catholic, colored Methodist and colored Baptist. There are two schools in the town, one supported from the public fund and the other, Columbus College, receiving its support from private subscription. The population at this time is estimated about 2,000.

The town of Clinton is situated near the geographical center of the county, in Section 4, Town 2 north, Range 3 west, and dates its history from the year 1828, at which time the site was selected by the commissioners appointed to relocate the seat of justice.

The original plat was laid out on land owned by Stephen Ray, who donated the public square for county purposes. The records were moved from Columbus in 1829, in which year several small buildings were erected, among them being a couple of temporary structures used for the different county offices. Lots were at once placed upon the market, and as early as 1830 there were several families located in the new town, among whom are remembered Mr. Oliver, Mr. Chambers, William Walker, who built the court house, J. Sublitt and his sons, W. E. Taylor and John Sublitt. The first stock of goods was brought to the place by William Walker, who carried on a very successful business until the time of his death in 1835 or 1836. Other early merchants were I. R. Dodge, who sold goods until 1850; Samuel Moore, Robert Moore, and the Sublitts, all of whom were identified with the business interests of the town for a number of years. The agitation of the county seat question operated very injuriously to Clinton for several years, and until the matter was finally settled, in 1845, no permanent growth took place. The first frame house in the village limits was erected by O. G. Gates, about the year 1834, and twenty years later the second frame house was built by Rev. Willis White, the buildings erected in the meantime being log and board structures. In 1860 there were 264 people living within the town limits, and during the ten years following, that number was increased by the addition of only eight persons, the census of 1870 showing a population of 272.

The year 1873 witnessed the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad through the county, and from that time the growth of the town has been steady and substantial. The road gave new life and impetus to the business interests, which have increased to such an extent that Clinton is now the most important trading and shipping point in the county. Several additions have been made to the original plat, and at the present time the town claims a population of about 1,200. Its business is represented by 6 dry goods houses, 12 grocery stores, 2 drug stores, 2 large flouring mills, 2 cabinet shops, 1 stove and tin store, 1 agricultural store, 1 harness shop, 1 chair factory, 1 bakery, 1 restaurant, 2 blacksmith shops, 1 saw-mill, 1 hotel, 1 boarding house, 1 gents' furnishing store, 2 butcher shops, 1 jewelry store, 2 barber shops, and 1 tobacco stemmery. There are 7 resident physicians, 5 of whom are in the active practice of their profession.

"Clinton has always had a good class of citizens, from the early settlers to the present inhabitants. They have ever been men of energy, industry and enterprise; when a measure was proposed, having for its object the furtherance of a common weal, they lent a helping hand, and gave it cordial support."*

Among the prominent residents of the town from time to time can be named J. S. Ringo. W. S. Jordan, Allen Caldwell, James Sublitt, Hiram Egbert, Coleman Ringo, Charles Ashley, Willis White, I. R. Dodge, Robert Moore, Michael Ward, Hudson Johnson, William Bugg, and others, all of whom have stamped the impress of their characters on the town and country. "These great and good men, at an early day, turned their attention to the cause of education. They founded in Clinton the first high school that was opened in the Purchase, and from this small beginning, in 1846, Clinton owes its present character of being the 'Athens' of west Kentucky, as regards educational interests." In addition to the seminary, there was built, in 1874, a large, commodious brick building, known as Clinton College, and in 1884 Marvin College was erected under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church. (For accounts of these institutions, see general history of the county.)

Clinton has several church organizations, the oldest of which is the Baptist Church, established in 1833. Their house of worship was erected in 1854. The congregation is ministered to at the present time by Rev. T. B. Johnson. The Methodist Episcopal Church of Clinton was organized as early as 1833. Their first temple of worship was built in 1857, and stood until 1876, at which time it gave place to the present brick edifice.

* White.

L. D. HUSBANDS.

J. M. BIGGER.

C. S. MARSHALL.

P. D. YEISER.

J. W. BLOOMFIELD.

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE BAR, PADUCAH.

The membership of the church numbers about 125; pastor, W. C. Sellers. The Christian Church was organized about the year 1852. This society has a beautiful house of worship erected in 1877, and is ministered to at the present time by Elder D. M. Breaker. The Presbyterians have a good congregation and a comfortable house of worship. There are also three colored churches, namely: Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian, all of which have frame meeting houses.

The Moscow settlement, which was early formed on the Bayou du Chien about six miles south of Clinton, developed into a well defined village in 1830, and one year later the town was incorporated by an act of the General Assembly. The original plat, consisting of 128 lots and public square, was surveyed in 1834, and embraces parts of Sections 25 and 36, of Town 2 north, Range 4 west. The proprietor of the town was Samuel McFall, who opened the first hotel in the place, and who was also one of the earliest merchants. The Dunlaps were among the first business men, and contemporary with them was William Griffey, who sold goods for a number of years. Solomon Nevill came to the village in an early day, and erected the first brick business house. He was a successful man, and accumulated a handsome fortune by merchandising and general trading. Another early merchant was James Patton, who was identified with the business interests of the place for several years.

Moscow early disputed the leading place in county influence with the towns of Clinton and Columbus; and for several years maintained a determined and successful struggle to secure the seat of justice. Failing in this endeavor, the village remained comparatively obscure until the construction of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad in 1854, which improvement opened up new possibilities, and the town became a good trading and shipping point. It is surrounded by a fine agricultural region, and with a population of some 400, and its complement of good stores, churches and private residences, is a pleasant village, but has no great probability of large growth.

Baltimore, situated about fourteen miles east of Clinton, was incorporated in 1856. It is a mere hamlet, containing one store and a few small residences. Obion, four miles northeast of Clinton, Oakville, a station on the railroad, and Wesley, twenty miles southeast of the county seat, are small villages.

CHAPTER VII.

McCRACKEN COUNTY.

McCRACKEN COUNTY, named in honor of Capt. Virgil McCracken, a brave officer in the war of 1812, was authorized to be established by an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved December 17, 1824, with bounds described in an act approved December 19, 1821. It was formed from Hickman County with an area of 237 square miles. The act of December 17, 1824, had a number of sections providing as follows: Section 2—for the selection of nine justices, a sheriff and a coroner; the justices to meet at the house of Isaac Lovelace on the third Monday of January, 1825, to choose a county clerk; Section 3—for the appointment of Jonathan Shelton, James Ashby, W. Titsworth, George Lovelace and Charles Plummer as commissioners to locate the county seat in Town 6 north, Range 2 west; Section 4—for the laying out of a town on said site; Section 5—for granting $2 per day for such services, and Section 6—for the Hickman courts to continue jurisdiction for the present.

In pursuance of the foregoing authority we learn from the county records that "a-

Isaac Lovelace's, in the county of McCracken, in the year of our Lord, 1825, Isaac Lovelace, Jacob King, Philip Williams, Arthur P. Thompson, George Adams, Joseph Daniel, Samuel Hunsaker, William Hazard and Jesse Doolin severally produced commissions from his Excellency Joseph Jesha, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, appointing them justices of the peace for the county of McCracken, agreeable to the provisions of an act of the assembly establishing the county of McCracken on the southwest of the Tennessee River, approved December 17, 1824. Whereupon Ebenezer Kellough, Esq., justice of the peace, in and for the county of Graves, administered to said Isaac Lovelace, et al., the several oaths required by law, whereupon a county court was held for the county at the place and on the times aforesaid."

Braxton Small was appointed clerk, Isaac Lovelace administering the several oaths of office, and gave a bond for $10,000, with Ebenezer Kellough, Philip Williams, Hiram Hall, John Hunsaker, Elial Henson, William Hazard and John Hill as securities.

The further business of the first court consisted of: (1) The swearing in of James Martin as sheriff; (2) the appointment of Hiram Hall as deputy clerk; (3) the recommending to the governor of William S. Davis and Andrew Lovelace as suitable persons for county surveyor; (4) the laying off of certain constable districts and the appointing of John McElya, Andrew Newman and John Field to fill said places; (5) the recording of certain ear marks; (6) the ordering of future courts to be held at Luke Swetman's, in Wilmington.

The township aforesaid (No. 6), not containing a suitable site for a county-seat, an act of the assembly, approved December 9, 1825, appointed a new board of commissioners with instructions to fix same in Town 7, Range 1 west, or elsewhere, if their judgment so indicated. This board consisted of James Martin, Joseph Daniel, Isaac Lovelace, Jonathan D. Martin and Jesse Doolin.

McCracken County has the Ohio and Tennessee Rivers as parts of its boundary and a source of drainage. In addition, its soil is drained by Clark's River and Island Creek, tributaries of the Tennessee; Mayfield Creek, which flows into the Mississippi, and Massac, Willow, Newton's and Perkin's Creeks, and Spring Bayou, which run into the Ohio.

The land of this county is not so fertile as that of some of its neighbors of the Purchase. On the hills, the soil is washed away by the rains and snows, leaving deep gulches. In the river and creek bottoms, a richer soil is found that yields abundantly. Much of the land might be made more productive by giving attention to under drainage, deeper plowing and proper fertilization.

The timber along the streams is good in quality and abundant, embracing such varieties as may be found in other counties, viz.: oak, gum, poplar, ash, hickory, cypress, birch, elm, maple, etc.

In various parts of the county are to be found Indian mounds of considerable interest. One of these near Paducah has a residence placed on top of it, with an excavation from it for a cellar. On the bank of Massac Creek, on the property of Mr. Robb, is a chalybeate spring containing chloride of magnesium and probably some chloride of sodium. The water is said to have some medicinal virtues. In the absence of limestone and other forms of rock of dense character, a "Cement Rock" or conglomerate is found in immense quantities and serves a superior purpose for paving streets and roads. It is used also for walling wells, underpinning houses, etc. Its general use throughout the county for road purposes deserves to be encouraged.

Opposite McCracken County, on the Illinois bank of the Ohio River, is Fort Massac. It is thus described in Collin's History of Kentucky: "The late Gov. John Reynolds, in his Life and Times, says that Fort Massacre (usually known and styled Fort Massac) was established by the French about 1711. It was also a missionary station. Until 1756, when it was greatly enlarged and strengthened, it was only a small fortress.

In 1855 its outside walls were 135 feet square, and at each angle strong bastions were erected. The walls were palisades, with earth between the wood. Three or four acres of walks, in exact angles, and beautifully graveled with the pebbles from the river, were made on the north of the fort, on which the soldiers paraded. A large well was sunk within the fortress, and the whole appeared to have been strong and substantial in its day. It was here that the Christian (Roman Catholic) missionaries instructed the southern Indians in the gospel precepts; and it was here, also, that the French soldiers made a resolute stand against the enemy. In 1800 it was the only white settlement between the mouths of the Wabash and Mississippi. A few families resided near the fort and were dependent on it, and two companies of the United States Army were stationed there.

"Soon after its establishment, probably before 1720, a military road was opened by the French, when they had dominion over the country, from Massacre to Kaskaskia. The numbers of the miles were cut in cyphers, on trees, with an iron, and painted red; and were still plainly visible in 1800. The road made a great curve to the north, to avoid the swamps and rough country on the sources of Cache River, and also to attain the prairie country as soon as possible. Another road extended from Fort Massac to Cape Girardeau, in the then Spanish country."

County Clerk.—This position was held and its duties were faithfully performed by Braxton Small, from the organization of the county, January 17, 1825, to September, 1858, a period of more than thirty-three years. It is a matter of happy fortune that so experienced a hand began the official records of the county. He was followed in regular succession by Philip H. Wallace, 1858–62; Thomas D. Grundy, appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Wallace (only a few months); James Spence, October, 1862, to September, 1863; J. K. Leeman, September, 1863, to September, 1866; James Spence, 1866 to 1878; W. P. Nichols, the present incumbent, aided by Mr. Spence, who has so thoroughly mastered the details of the office.

Circuit Clerks.—February 7, 1825, Henry L. Edrington qualified, giving a bond for $10,000, with John E. Taylor and Thomas James as sureties. On Monday, February 6, 1826, Robert Fletcher was appointed his deputy. November 6, 1826, Edrington resigned and was succeeded by Braxton Small, the county clerk, who was appointed "during good behavior." He discharged the duties of the office faithfully up to the time of his death, in March, 1868, when J. Q. A. King was appointed to serve till October of the same year. October 6, 1868, E. B. Jones qualified and served till September 5, 1874, when D. C. Wilcox, the present incumbent, assumed the duties of the office.

The first grand jury was impaneled February 7, 1825, with Charles H. Plummer, foreman, to try the case, Commonwealth vs. Melinda McIntosh, for "Forfeited Recognizance."

Sheriff.—This responsible position was held in succession by James Martin, 1825–27; Isaac Lovelace, 1827–29; Archibald W. Naylor, 1829–33; Epps Allen, 1833–36; Philip Williams was commissioned during this period, but failed to qualify, and Allen took his place; Robert Fletcher, 1837–39; Philip Williams, 1839–41; James Ashley, 1841–42; James C. Calhoun, 1842–47; during this period John McElya was in office about a month, when he resigned and Calhoun filled out the term; George Smedley also held about a month; Samuel Rice, 1849–51; Joseph Cannada and George H. Morrow both served in succession from January, 1851, to September, 1851; James C. Calhoun, 1851–53; George H. Morrow, 1853–55; H. S. Lewis, 1855–59; George B. Grundy, 1859–63; George W. Ratcliff, 1863–64; R. A. Bacon was elected but never qualified; James C. Calhoun, 1865–71; Thomas D. Grundy, 1871–74; Wood Morrow, 1874–75; A. J. Ogilvie, 1875–79; J. W. Sauner, 1879–82; T. C. Finley, 1882, died 1883, John P. Zelner, appointed to fill out time from January to September; George W. Ratcliff, 1883, is the present incumbent.

County Treasurer.—By special act of the legislature, a county treasurer is chosen.

Dr. A. B. Kinkead qualified March 27, 1871, and held till January 22, 1885. His successor, W. F. Bradshaw, is the present incumbent.

Coroners.—William Glover, the first officer, qualified October 17, 1825, and held till 1828; John Smith, 1828–1851; John R. Pidgeon, 1851–54; David C. Peters, 1854–57; George Dunn, 1857–58; David S. Lovelace, 1858–60; T. L. Jacobs, 1861–67; R. H. Shanklin, 1867–73; W. M. Sheppard, 1873–79; R. H. Shanklin, 1879–82; M. Nance, 1882, is the present incumbent.

Trustee Jury Fund.—The County has had but two incumbents for this office, the first the faithful Braxton Small, appointed March 20, 1838, and holding till his death in 1868; the second a worthy successor, James Spence, appointed August, 1868, and the present custodian of these funds.

Jailers.—Jonathan D. Martin, appointed May 10, 1830 and resigned September, 1831; James B. Husbands, 1831–34; George Dunn, 1834–54; B. R. Harris, 1854–58; P. C. Smedley, 1858–62; A. S. Jones, 1862–70; John Ewell, 1870–74; Thomas E. Ashbrook, 1874–75; Henry C. Ewell, to fill out time from death of Ashbrook in May to September; T. C. Edwards, 1875–82; J. W. Sauner, 1882, the present incumbent.

Surveyors.—William S. Davis, qualified July 18, 1825 and served till 1827; Jonathan D. Martin, 1827–34; James B. Husbands, 1834–36; John Hardin, 1836 till the time of his death in 1847; Ezekiel E. Calhoun, 1847–51; Samuel B. Caldwell, first under present constitution, from June 2, 1851, to resignation December 12, 1853; Samuel B. Rice, 1853–62; M. W. Holland, 1862–69; W. P. Nichols, 1869–78; S. B. Caldwell, 1878–82; J. B. Williams, 1882 to time of his death in 1884. No successor has been appointed, the duties being performed by W. P. Nichols, county clerk.

County Attorneys.—James W. Gibson, 1825–27; James B. Husbands, 1829–31; John L. Murray, 1831–33; Joseph Young, 1833–34; James B. Husbands, 1834–35; James O'Bannon, 1835–36; James B. Husbands, 1836–40; Horatio T. Harris, 1840, and served only six months; Lafayette Flournoy, 1841–46; W. M. Lambdin, 1846–47; Matthew Markland, 1847–49; L. S. Trimble, 1849–50; L. D. Husbands, first attorney under present constitution, 1851–54; W. H. Jones, 1854–58; Ward Boyd, 1858–60; A. F. Williams, 1860–62; George H. Morrow, 1862–70; S. C. Bryce, 1870–78; W. F. Bradshaw, 1878–82; J. W. Eden, 1882, the present incumbent.

County Judges.—Under the old constitution the following justices held court: Isaac Lovelace, Philip Williams, Samuel Hunsaker, Thomas J. Flournoy, Robert Fletcher, John McElya, John Hardin, James Ashley, A. Morgan, J. Daniels, Samuel Rice, John Crice, John B. Hicks, George Smedley, John F. Harris, William Jones, Joseph Cannada, J. D. Martin, Robert Buckler, Kirby Jones and Hiram Hall.

Under the present constitution, the following judges: John Milliken, 1851–53, was killed at Mayfield in 1861; R. S. Ratcliffe, 1853–54; G. A. Flournoy, 1854–70; George H. Morrow, 1870–77; W. R. Reed, 1877, about one month; D. A. McGonagil, 1877–82; J. L. Bethshares, 1882, is the present incumbent.

County School Commissioners.—March 11, 1850, Alexander McClure, David Morrow and George Dunn were appointed commissioners. Their bond was fixed at $1,000. The amount received from the state superintendent, December 9, 1851, for school purposes was $1,677; Alexander McClure, and Charles A. Campbell, appointed March 9, 1852. The amount received for school purposes in 1852, was $561; in 1853, $709.10; John Ewell, appointed December 12, 1853, vice McClure resigned. Having refused to act, G. A. Flournoy, was appointed January 10, 1854, to fill vacancy. Amount of school fund, in 1854, was $653.10, in 1855, $1,080.80.

July 14, 1856, Charles A. Campbell was reappointed for two years, with compensation of $1 per day the first year, and $2 the second. Amount of funds in 1856 was $904.60; 1857, $1,957.74; 1858, $1,789.38. Campbell was paid for his service afterward as follows, for 1861, $10; 1862, $12; 1864, $12; 1865, $8; 1866, $25. The tax for school purposes in 1865 was $1,192.60.

S. B. Caldwell qualified November 15, 1866. Amount of school funds in his hands June 10, 1867 was $2,538.16. At the court session November 9, 1868, he was allowed for service $44.67.

D. D. Thomson was elected November 11, 1868. The school fund in his hands, May 11, 1869, was $2,819.52; in 1870, $2,473.73; 1871, $6,614.35. Served till 1872.

George C. Thompson, 1872-74; W. R. Reed, 1874–76; J. W. Eden, 1876-78; D. C. Hogan, 1878–82; F. M. Houser, 1882 to 1884, when he was chosen the first superintendent under the revised law. This position he holds at the present time.

Circuit Judges.—Under the old constitution James Campbell, Sr., was the only judge from McCracken County. Under the new constitution the following gentlemen served: W. G. Bullitt and James Campbell, the present incumbent.

Commonwealth Attorneys.—J. B. Husbands, L. D. Husbands, A. P. Thompson, Thomas H. Corbett, P. D. Yeiser and Charles Thomas have at various times performed its responsible duties.

Members of Senate.—James Campbell, 1829–32; John Q. A. King, 1855–59; Dr. John M. Mason, 1859–63, expelled February 15, 1862, "for leaving his seat and taking position in the rebel army"; W. T. Chiles, 1863–67, resigned 1866, and succeeded by J. M. Bigger, 1866–67; John W. Ogilvie, 1882–86, present incumbent.

Representatives.—Gustavus A. Flournoy, 1835; Charles C. Russell, 1839; Robert Fletcher, 1841; James Campbell, 1842–43; John W. Crockett, 1846; George H. Morrow, 1850; Lawrence S. Trimble, 1851–53; L. D. Husbands, 1859–61; John Q. A. King, 1861–63, expelled December 21, 1861, for "giving aid and comfort to the Confederate Army"; J. W. Boone, 1862–63; T. J. Birchett, 1863–65; John W. Ogilvie, 1865–69, 1871–73; Thomas E. Moss, 1869–71; B. G. Bidwell, 1873–77; J. M. Bigger (speaker), 1877–81: Thomas H. Corbett, 1881–83; Josiah Harris, Jr., 1883–85.

Members of Congress.—Linn Boyd; Lawrence S. Trimble.

Pioneer life is fraught with peculiar hardships. The effort to rescue a region of country from the depredations and fear of the untutored savage is scarcely less arduous than the earnest, patient industry required to sweep away gigantic forests, to build bridges, to establish roads, churches and schoolhouses, and to inaugurate social and civil institutions. No ordinary spirit is sufficient for these things. Intelligence must combine with an indomitable will and self-sacrificing spirit.

About 1820–21 Charles Ferguson, John Rollins (father of Capt. W. H. Rollins, now of Paducah) and James Davis, with his sons, Isaac, Robert S., James and Jacob, settled near the present site of Paducah, and became the progenitors of large and influential families. Between this date and 1826, settlements were made in or near old Wilmington by Luke Swetman, Dr. J. D. Martin, James Martin (father-in-law of the preceding), Braxton Small, Frederick Harper, William Titsworth, Greenup Titsworth, John McElya, John Webb and others.

A little later there lived south of Paducah Jesse Yandel, near Eden's Hill; Robin Wilkins and family, near Florence Station; in the vicinity of the Wilkins' lived Kirley Jones, William Tanner, James Houser, Edmund Forrester, Jerry Elrod, Tom Johnson, Thomas Harris, Rev. Samuel Johnson, William Dent, John and James Potter, Jeremiah Morrow, Duncan Moore, Benjamin Bourland and others.

At a very early date, somewhere between 1820 and 1830, Lovelaceville had a group of settlers consisting of Isaac, Thomas, Andrew and Archibald Lovelace.

The early settlers in and around Paducah embrace such well known families as the Davises already mentioned, Francis Harrison, John T. Harris, Thomas J. Flournoy, Rodney Case, James B. Husbands, James S. Long, James Walters, Abel Sullivan, James C. Calhoun, George F. Hendren, the Enders, Valentine Owens, Robert Buckler, the Ogilvies, the Pells and others mentioned in the poll book of 1834, and in other connections.

Wilmington, the first seat of justice in the county, was laid out in January, 1827, into 108 lots, embracing 102 acres, one rood and twenty-four perches. It had four streets running north and south, viz.: East, Water, Main Cross and West; also four running east and west, viz.: Clark, Main, Jefferson and South. It had, also, a public square centrally located.

On the first Monday in January, 1827, there were sold forty-two lots ranging in value from $2, the lowest, to $23, the highest, and aggregating $458.62½. The following men were purchasers: Gordon & Wells, and Samuel Smedley, of Smithland; John Field, William Jones, John M. Dinkin, Luke Swetman, Braxton Small, Philip Williams, Isaac Lovelace, William S. Davis, David Brown, J. D. Martin, James Ashley, Andrew Newman, Thomas Davis and Charles Ewell. On May 10, 1828, additional lots were sold to Jonathan Parker, John Smith, Martin J. Fletcher, A. W. Naylor, Valentine Owen, John McElya and others. Of the foregoing, Thomas Davis was the father of Dr. F. T. Davis, of Paducah, and James Martin was the father-in-law of Col. James B. Husbands, so well known to the people of the county.

October 12, 1829, a plan for a court house was reported; Frederick Harper was employed to construct the same. March 8, 1830, a committee was appointed to inspect the court house, and reported, May 10th, as follows: "Said court house is finished and completed in manner and form as by the plan thereof designated." The report was accepted, and future sessions of the court ordered to be held in it.

The jail near by consisted of two rooms of different sizes, the west one being about 16x18, the east one about fourteen feet square. Between the two was a hall about sixteen feet wide. The walls were made of hewed logs twelve inches square, thoroughly notched and fitted at the ends to give strength and security. It, too, was a story and a half in height. These structures are both standing at this date (1885) in an open corn-field, belonging to Henry Quarles.

First court was held at Isaac Lovelace's about four miles from Wilmington. The next session was held March 21, 1825, at the house of Luke Swetman, in Wilmington, and subsequent ones were held there till October 15, 1827, the rent for a session being $2.00. The session of December, 1827, was held in the new court house, and future ones also, till February 13, 1832, when the county records were ordered to be removed to Paducah.* Isaac Lovelace signed the first record at Wilmington, and John Hardin the last.

By an act of the General Assembly, approved December 10, 1831, as follows:

WHEREAS, It is represented to this general assembly that it would be greatly to the interest of the people of the county of McCracken to remove their seat of justice from Wilmington to the town of Paducah, therefore,

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That so soon as the people of Paduca shall, by subscription or otherwise, raise and secure to the county court of said county the sum of six hundred dollars, which shall be appropriated in aid of building the necessary public buildings in said town of Paduca, and provide a house to hold court in; it shall then be the duty of the county and circuit court clerks, to cause all the public papers and records belonging to said courts to be removed to the said town of Paduca, within twenty days thereafter; which shall be and remain the permanent seat of justice for said county, and the county and circuit courts shall be held in said town.

The destiny of Wilmington was sealed. The public property was sold by Braxton Small, commissioner for the purpose, January 1, 1833, realizing together with lots in Paducah donated by William Clark, the sum of $945.

At the March term of court, 1825, it was ordered that the tavern keepers in this county be allowed the following rates and no more, to-wit:

For Breakfast, Dinner and Supper, each...	25 cts.
" Lodging, per night,.....	12½ cts.
" Whisky, per half-pint, ...	12½ cts.
" Rum and French Brandy, per half pint	25 cts.
" Wine (Medeira) per half pint,.....	25 cts.
" Peach Brandy, per half pint,.....	18¾ cts.
" Horse, per night,.....	25 cts.
" Horse feed,.....	12½ cts.

* The records were brought from Wilmington to Paducah by Braxton Small in a skiff, owing to the high water of the great flood of 1832.

The first deed recorded in the county was made June 18, 1825, by Andrew Frazer, of Livingston County, to W. M. Darby, the consideration being $100 in cash for lot number 59, in the town of Pekin, McCracken County. The first mortgage was executed August 12, 1830, by Francis A. Harrison to Thomas J. Flournoy, for $689.66, on lots 5, 43 and 44, in the town of Paducah.

Some of the early constables appointed at Wilmington for the county were John McElya, Andrew Newman, John Field, William Doolin, William Price, David Dial, John L. Henderson, Timothy Blocker, Alexander S. Henderson and Elial Henson.

Owing to the scarcity of ordained ministers in those days, the court ordered that Samuel Hunsaker, Philip Williams, Isaac Lovelace, William Hazard, H. L. Edrington and others at a later date be authorized to solemnize marriages. The first marriage in the county was solemnized by Philip Williams, March 24, 1825, the parties being Duncan Henderson and Sarah Glenon, a widow, the license bearing date March 21, 1825.

Some of the early attorneys who practiced in the Wilmington court were James W. Calloway, John Miller, James W. Gibson, James B. Husbands, who seemed to be ready and qualified to discharge the duties of any office assigned to him by the new county; William Piles and John L. Murray, of Wadesboro, who represented the district in Congress.

It is said that during those primitive days farmers would ride their mares to the county seat, but leave the colts at home. Then local option permitted the honest yeomanry to indulge quite freely in the various drinks sold at low rates by the tavern keeper. When evening came, the intoxicated farmer's only safe plan to reach home through the tall cane was to mount his mare and give her free rein. The animal's desire to return to her colt would lead her master safely home, and thus open a path for future traveling. This novel way of establishing trails, let it be remarked, was not wholly uncongenial to the frontiersman.

The early settlers were fortunate in finding the dense forests well supplied with game, such as deer, turkeys, squirrels for subsistence. In addition, however, wolves, bear, and panthers were found, a terror to flocks and herds.

The first settlers were not content to go into the new country and devote themselves exclusively to secular pursuits. Religious interests were not forgotten. "The groves were God's first temples," and they were brought into requisition for such purpose by the faithful pioneers. Private dwellings, barns, and, when bad, schoolhouses, served to afford the early Christians suitable temples in which to pour forth praise and supplication to the Infinite One.

In 1835, Wiatt's Camp Ground (Methodist), near what is now Florence Station, was organized by Rev. Achilles Wright. The ground included some five acres, and belonged to James Wiatt, who located in 1831. On those grounds were held annual meetings for a series of years under the direction of James Wiatt, John Bird, Hymen Richardson, Kirby Jones and others. Some of the early preachers were: Revs. George Cayce, Finley Bynum, Joshua Cole, Thomas Joiner, John Futrell, Thomas Smith, John Witt and James McCutchen. The house used was a hewed-log structure about 30x40 feet. Out of the Camp Ground Church has sprung the Lebanon Church, whose house of worship, a frame building 40x60 with a Masonic hall above, was erected in 1869 by W. C. Clark at a cost of $2,000. Its preachers were: Revs. Lane Fawcett, R. L. West, Edward Stewart, Charles Hilyard, Josephus Evans, Graves and J. W. Naylor.

The regular (Hardside) Baptists had, according to reliable testimony, a congregation about four miles southwest of Paducah as early as 1828. A Mr. John Webb was a prominent member of it. This was the first organization in the county. The next was the Island Creek Baptist Church, organized about half a mile from Florence Station in about 1832 by Rev. Isaiah King, and Mrs. Tims, Mr. Humphreys, Mr. Bolin and others. The first place of worship was a log schoolhouse. The organization is still in existence and has a box frame—one of the best in the county, with a membership of twelve members. It has James Houser and C. S. Houser as deacons; J. T. Jones, clerk; Rev. T. F. Harrison, pastor.

The names of some of the early Baptist (regular) preachers are: Durin Allcock, Isaiah King, Philip Austin and Young.

Presbyterianism was advocated by Rev. Samuel Johnson; as Cumberland Presbyterian by Revs. Collins Bradley, Winslow, David Morrow, John Bonds, John Ward, Parson Russell and R. G. McClusky.

The Christian Church occupied the field at a much later date. Its preachers were Elders John R. Mecoy, James Jones, Joshua Shelton, Jonathan Shelton and his son, Jessie.

The schools at first were sustained by subscription. Some of the early teachers were John Cunningham, James McFaddin, John B. Hicks, James Mefford.

Among the early physicians of the county were Robert Fletcher, J. D. Martin, Seybold, a German refugee, John Heisler, W. W. Lay, K. Brownell, Samuel Withers, Williams, Newton Lane, O. G. Bullitt, H. L. Jones, W. W. Phillips and Reuben Saunders.

The description of the Wilmington buildings has already been given. It remains to describe those at Paducah. On March 12, 1832, G. A. Flournoy, Milton Perry and Braxton Small were appointed commissioners to draft plan for building on the public square a brick court house two stories high and not to exceed thirty-six feet square. June 11th the contract was let to Jesse Yandel for $3,049. It served its purpose for about twenty-five years.

On July 13, 1857, L. D. Husbands and J. C. Calhoun, commissioners of the court, reported the sale of the lots formerly used for public purposes, the amount being $30,501.86. The lots sold for from $83 to $153 per foot front. These same commissioners, with John H. Terrell added, contracted, September 15, 1857, for the site and structure of the present court house as follows:

Block No. 28, the present site, was bought of Braxton Small for $6,000. The building, as per contract with John F. Hendren of Louisville, cost $27,830.

The first jail in Paducah was erected about 1834, and was a log structure standing about thirty yards from the old court house. The second was built in the south corner of the present court house square, in 1857, at a cost of $5,400. It was regarded unsafe and was torn down. The third structure was built of brick in 1868 on the same site, but being considered unsafe, it was replaced in 1882 by the fourth and present building at an aggregate cost of $19,900, George G. Davis superintending the construction. It is regarded a safe and convenient structure, well adapted to its purpose.

On August 1, 1855, John Mott sold to the county twenty acres in Town 6, the consideration being $600. This was used for county purposes till February 11, 1879, when a new site was bought of Charles H. Adams living near Paducah. This tract, consisting of forty-four acres and ninety poles, cost $1,000. It, with the buildings upon it, is now used as a home for the indigent of the county.

Various efforts have been made to secure railroads to Paducah and McCracken County. March 1, 1853, the board of trustees of Paducah, William Nolen, chairman, and William Grief, clerk, passed an ordinance authorizing the subscribing of $200,000 worth of stock to the New Orleans & Ohio Railroad Company, to be constructed from Paducah to a point near Union City, Tenn., sixty-two miles distant. The company was organized under the name of the New Orleans & Ohio Railroad. In the following year the board of trustees subscribed $200,000 and the county $100,000. To procure the money they both issued bonds, which were sold in the Eastern money markets. The building of this road was the commencement of a new era in the material prosperity of the city.

In 1872 the Paducah & Elizabethtown Railroad was completed. It at once opened up a valuable territory to the business men of this city, a fact that they were not slow to take advantage of. In 1881 both the Paducah & Elizabethtown and Paducah & Memphis (formerly New Orleans & Ohio) fell into the hands of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad

Saml. B. Caldwell

Company, and was made a part of the Huntington system under the title of the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railway. Before the close of the present year the line controlled by this company will reach from Newport News, on the Atlantic, through Louisville, Paducah, Memphis, Vicksburg, New Orleans, thence west to the shores of the Golden Gate and the Pacific.

In 1884 were established at Paducah the railway repair shops to refit the rolling stock of the entire line from Louisville to Memphis. These shops, together with the old ones, require about 200 employes, and have a monthly pay roll of $15,000. Value of buildings, $45,000; value of machinery, $47,000; During 1884, the number of cars repaired was 2,665; locomotives 26.

On January 15, 1884, the Chesapeake, Ohio & South-Western Railway Hospital was established in the King property on Southwest Broadway, with the following organization: Dr. Joseph W. Thompson, president and chief surgeon; J. A. Dew, secretary; S. Young, treasurer; Dr. E. D. Scrugham, druggist; F. L. Hoover, assistant secretary. During 1884, it received and treated 200 indoor and over 800 outdoor patients. It has charge of the whole line from Louisville to Memphis, along which it employs forty-one local surgeons.

McCracken County, in common with its sisters of the Purchase, was not uninterested in the military operations which have affected the country.

Lieut. Easton, of the regular army, formed a company of about ninety men for the Mexican war, who, during their period of recruiting, boarded at the Fisher Hotel in Paducah. Many of the men finally became teamsters under Capt. Gholsom, of Ballard County, and belonged to various counties. Of those thus enlisted from McCracken County, and who are still living in it, the names are M. M. Connor, proprietor American Hotel, Paducah, and Richard Laughlin and T. B. Davidson, farmers, living near Florence Station.

The following men enlisted from other counties but are living in McCracken at present: Capt. T. C. Edwards, who was also a veteran in the Texan Revolution; Maj. E. T. Woolfolk, First Infantry; O. M. Calkins, Third Indiana Infantry; Jefferson Tyer, Third Tennessee; H. A. Kane, sergeant-major, Fourth Kentucky; Fayette Schroeder.

The troops went from Paducah to Little Rock, then via San Antonio, Laredo and Monclova to Mexico.

The anomalous position of armed netrality taken by Kentucky during the civil war did not save Paducah and the Purchase from the conflict of arms and its consequences.

Says R. B. J. Twyman: "When the telegraph announced that South Carolina had seceded from the Union, there were not half a dozen out-spoken secessionists in Paducah, but as State after State went out and took their stand by the side of South Carolina, the secession element gained strength, and one by one the people turned over to the side of the Southern Confederacy.

"The Union party, however, maintained the ascendancy in Paducah until the military forces of South Carolina fired upon Fort Sumter, on April 14, 1861. As soon as the wires flashed the news of the surrender of this fortification throughout the country, the war was considered as having commenced, and all were wild with excitement. Men and women seemed really to go mad. The proclamation of President Lincoln, issued soon after, calling upon the States for 75,000 troops to defend the Federal capital and enforce the laws, increased the excitement and madness of the hour; and calm, sober discussions were no longer tolerated. 'Are you for the South, or are you for the North?' was the test question speciously put to all, thus appealing directly to the strongest passions of the heart, and at the same time attacking the weakest points of man's nature.

"Few, very few, were able to withstand the tempest of excited public sentiment. The weak and wavering were irresistibly borne down and along with the great flood of secession fanaticism, scarcely knowing how or wherefore, and, taking advantage of the trepidation they had strategically produced in the public mind, the leaders and managers of the Revolution pressed on the issue of resistance to the Federal Government. Men who were wildly declamatory about vindicating their rights against the government, in moments of calmness acknowledged that the government had never assailed their rights." The result was the sending of many young men into the Confederate service—an effect greatly increased by the reverse which the Federal arms sustained July 21, 1861, in the battle of Bull Run.

On the 4th of September, the Confederate Gen. Leonidas Polk took possession of Columbus. To checkmate this movement, Gen. Grant came from Cairo and took possession of Paducah on the 6th of September, bringing with him the Ninth Illinois, Col. E. A. Paine; Twelfth Illinois, Col. J. McArthur; Eighth Missouri, Col. M. L. Smith; also four pieces of Smith's Battery, Lieut. Millard.

Arriving at Paducah, Gen. Grant found great consternation among the people. Men and women fled wildly to the country, fearing great harm from the Federal soldiers. Sending for J. W. Sauner, mayor of the city, he gave him for publication a proclamation as follows:

PADUCAH, KY., September 6, 1861.

To the Citizens of Paducah:—I have come among you not as an enemy, but as your fellow-citizen; not to maltreat or annoy you, but to respect and enforce the rights of all loyal citizens. An enemy, in rebellion against our common government, has taken possession of and planted its guns on the soil of Kentucky, and fired upon you. Columbus and Hickman are in its hands. He is moving upon your city. I am here to defend you against this enemy, to assist the authority and sovereignty of your government. I have nothing to do with opinions, and shall deal only with armed rebellion and its aiders and abettors. You can pursue your usual avocations without fear. The strong arm of the government is here to protect its friends and punish its enemies. Whenever it is manifest that you are able to defend yourselves and maintain the authority of the government and protect the rights of citizens. I shall withdraw the forces under my command.

U. S. GRANT,
Brigadier-General Commanding.

On the same day, Gen. Grant issued the following order:

BRIG. GEN. E. A. PAINE, Commanding Ninth Illinois Volunteers.

Upon my departure, you will assume command of the troops at this post, and make such disposal of the forces as will best enable you to obtain possession and control of the city. A portion of the troops can be quartered at the Marine Hospital. You are charged to take special care and precaution that no harm is done to inoffensive citizens; that the soldiers shall not enter any private dwelling, nor make any searches unless by your orders, and then a detail shall be made for that purpose. Exercise the strictest discipline against any soldier who shall insult citizens, or engage in plundering private property. * * * * *

By order of Brig.-Gen. Grant,

WILLIAM S. HILLYER,
Capt. & A. D. C.

The following dispatch sent to Maj. Gen., John C. Fremont, St. Louis, Mo., is self-explanatory:

CAIRO, Sept. 6, 1861.

Have just returned from Paducah; found secession flags in different parts of the city, in expectation of greeting the arrival of Southern Army, said to be sixteen miles off, 3,800 strong; took possession of telegraph office, railroad depot and Marine Hospital; found a large quantity of complete rations and leather for the Southern Army,

U. S. GRANT,
Brigadier-General.

The command assigned to Paine was but a temporary one. On September 14, 1861, Gen. C. F. Smith, a regular army officer, was in command of the United States forces at Paducah. Gen. Paine was given command of the First Brigade, and Col. W. L. Sanderson, Twenty-third Indiana Volunteers, of the Second Brigade. Gen. Smith sent these two brigade commanders with their forces on an expedition to threaten Columbus. In this moment, Gen. Paine transcended his authority, and was severely censured for his course by Gen. Smith. Gen. Smith's administration of affairs is favorably spoken of by people generally. A few spirits, however, who assumed to control military affairs, succeeded in making such representations at Washington, as secured his removal. Gen. Smith was ordered to the front and injured at Fort Donelson; died subsequently at Savannah, Tenn.

The next movement of any importance was the arrival of thirty-six transports of soldiers and of seven gunboats, all under the direction of Gen. U. S. Grant, preparatory to the capture of Forts Henry and Donelson on the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers respectively. These forces, together with troops collected at Paducah, ascended the Tennessee and took the forts mentioned, thus breaking the strong line of Confederates extending from Columbus to Bowling Green.

Following the battle of Pittsburg Landing (Shiloh), Paducah became a vast hospital for sick and wounded soldiers. The Presbyterian, Baptist, Episcopal, Christian and Methodist Churches, the Female Seminary, the court house and other public and private buildings were taken possession of for such purposes, and some of them continued to be used thus till the close of the war.

Paducah was a military station during all of the war subsequent to Grant's first occupation. Nothing out of the regular routine occurred, however, until the spring of 1864. Grant's campaign in the East was decided upon. Gen. W. T. Sherman, having been assigned to the command of the military division of the Mississippi, was gathering his forces for the great Atlanta campaign. On March 25, 1864, to create a diversion, Gen. N. B. Forrest, the dashing cavalry officer of the West, with a command consisting of the Third Kentucky, Lieut.-Col. G. A. C. Holt, Seventh Kentucky, Col. Ed. Crossland, Col. Wilson's Tennessee regiment and two pieces of twelve-pound artillery, made his appearance in Paducah. By a forced march from Dukedom, Tenn., with a command numbering from 1,500 to 1,900 men, Forrest reached the picket line about 3, P. M.

The Federal force at the time consisted of some 800 or 900 men as follows: First Battalion, Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry, Maj. George F. Barnes commanding; probably one or two independent companies, and several companies of the Eighth United States Colored Artillery under command of Col. R. D. Cunningham. They were all under the command of Col. S. G. Hicks of Illinois, and were quartered in Fort Anderson.

Gen. Forrest sent in a flag of truce and demanded a surrender of the fort. Col. Hicks replied that he was placed by the government in the fort to defend it, and was determined to heed his instructions. The Union officers in the fort, fearing the fate that befell Fort Pillow, warmly supported Col. Hicks in his refusal to surrender.

The attack was made by the Third and Seventh Kentucky Regiments under the command of Col. A. P. Thompson, who gallantly led his forces, numbering about 1,000 men, against the fort, with the evident intention of capturing it, though Gen. Forrest subsequently claimed that he had ordered Thompson simply to threaten the fort while his other forces destroyed government stores and captured supplies. Under the galling fire of the Federal gunboats, and the constant discharges of the troops in the fort, Col. Thompson was leading his men to the final assault, when a thirty-two pound cannon ball, carefully aimed by Sergt. Tom Hayes of the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry, tore the brave commander's body to pieces within 100 yards of the coveted prize. Col. Crossland, the senior officer, took command only to receive a severe wound. He was succeeded by Lieut. Col. Holt, who ordered a retreat. This was done none too soon. The assaulting force had lost many excellent men in killed and wounded. The garrison, too, had suffered severely in killed and wounded, many of the gunners having been picked off by sharpshooters in the adjoining houses. The loss in killed was eleven; wounded thirty-nine; total fifty.

During the progress of the fight Gen. Forrest destroyed the depot, containing an extensive supply of whisky and commissary stores; also several buildings at the foot of Broadway with their quarter-master stores. While this was going on, as well as during the night, the gunboats patrolled the river, shelling the city violently. Many buildings were penetrated by shells, marks of which may yet be seen along the streets.

On the morning of the 26th, all the houses within a radius of several hundred yards of the fort, except two or three that were almost miraculously saved from the flames, were destroyed by the garrison. The reason and the authority for this action are given in a personal letter from Col. Hicks, dated Salem, Ill., June 25, 1868, and addressed to Peck & Mattison, attorneys at Evansville. Here it is: "The way I came to burn, or rather order the property around the fort burned, was: the enemy, headed by Maj. Gen. N. B. Forrest of the Confederate forces at that place, attacked me March 25, 1864, with an overwhelming force, and they took possession of all the houses in gunshot of the fort. We repulsed the enemy, and beat them back all day. I saw I must be attacked again, and the better to protect myself against their sharpshooters, I issued special order No. 53:

'HEADQUARTERS, POST PADUCAH, }
PADUCAH, March 26, 1864. }

Maj. George F. Barnes, Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry, will take a portion of his command and burn all the houses in musket range of the fort from which the sharpshooters of the enemy fired upon us yesterday.

By order of Col. S. G. Hicks.

A. F. TAYLOR,
Post Adjutant.

Instead of renewing the attack the next morning, Forrest retired during the night, taking with him his wounded, consisting of Col. Crossland, Lieut. Const. Roulhac and others. His loss in killed included Col. Thompson, Lieut. Lewis, Private Edward Moss and others, whose names were not secured. The Union loss probably exceeded that of the Confederates.

The following letter from Maj. Gen. W. T. Sherman, dated Nashville, April 3, 1864, needs no comment:

COL. S. G. HICKS, Paducah: Your defense of Paducah was exactly right. Keep cool, and give the enemy a second edition if he comes again. I want Forrest to stay just where he is, and the longer the better. Don't credit any of the foolish and exaggerated reports that are put afloat by design. I know what Forrest has, and will attend to him in time. Whenever you get a chance strike any small detachments.

But a few weeks had elapsed before Paducah was visited a second time by the Confederate forces, then under the leadership of Gen. Abe Buford, the object being to capture a number of government horses kept in the upper part of the city. With a force of about 600 to 800 men, he caused a panicky feeling among the citizens of the place, and a collecting of the feeble Federal force in the garrison, while he carried off the coveted horses.

The commanders of the Federal forces were Gen. Smith, of whom mention has already been made; Cols. Olney, Ransom, Martin, Dougherty and Hicks. Following these came the administration of Brig.-Gen. E. A. Paine, who, actuated by a vindictive spirit and influenced by some unscrupulous advisers, inaugurated a reign of terror in the district. Unnecessarily harsh in his methods, he made enemies of those who, under judicious treatment, would have been warm supporters of the government, and engendered life-long prejudices in citizens who might long ago have recovered their love for the general government, instead of nursing a hatred for that government in its maladministered forms. The period from September, 1864, to February, 1865, is lacking in pleasant memories to the people of the Purchase.

Gen. Paine was succeeded by Gen. Sol. Meredith, who was mild and just in his government, and made friends for his government quite as rapidly as his predecessor had sacrificed them. "By his generosity and merciful treatment during his command of the district, he brought back to their allegiance more Confederates and Confederate sympathizers than all his predecessors."

As already intimated, McCracken County, like her sister counties of the Purchase, furnished a good number of soldiers for the Confederate service. Among these was Gen. Lloyd Tilghman, born in Maryland in 1817, and a graduate of West Point in 1836; a soldier in the Mexican war; a civil engineer upon the Panama Railroad in 1849, and subsequently upon the Baltimore & Ohio, Cumberland Valley, Pennsylvania Central, East Tennessee & Virginia, and New Orleans & Ohio Railroads; commander of the Kentucky "State Guards" in 1861, most of whom he took into the Confederate service, having established a camp for recruits at Clarksville, Tenn., and formed the Third Kentucky Regiment; promoted from colonel of this regiment to be a brigadier-general, in which capacity, after a vigorous defense, he surrendered Fort Henry, February 6, 1862, to Admiral Foote; a prisoner for a year at Fort Warren, Boston; a gallant commander afterward in the campaigns around Vicksburg, and finally killed, May 16, 1863, at Champion's Hill, near the Big Black River. He was a brave and vigilant officer.

In addition to the forces under the command of Tilghman, Capts. Bob G. Grundy and James Pell organized a company each, which were recruited from Paducah and McCracken Counties. They were made part of a battalion under command of Maj. H. C. King, and of which John C. Noble was quartermaster, after its union with its regiment. This battalion united with several Tennessee companies, and formed a regiment, of which Thomas Cleburne was made colonel, King having resigned.

Most of the troops for the Confederate service operated at Shiloh, around Vicksburg, and in the raids made into Kentucky. Some of the prominent business men of Paducah at present were in these commands. Among them may be mentioned Mayor Charles Reed, Dr. J. W. Thompson, W. H. Brian, J. M. Ezell, F. W. Thomas and others whose names do not now occur.

The Union service had also some valuable representatives. In the autumn of 1863, Maj. George F. Barnes recruited several companies for the Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry. Of this battalion, Company A, commanded by Capt. Charles. Bachman, with Lieuts. M. M. Pierce and Henry Bunting, was made up largely of McCracken men. Company B, Capt. John E. Williamson, with Lieuts. E. J. Pendrick, H. H. Hamilton and S. B. McAfee, consisted at first of 115 men. Rejections and other causes depleted the ranks to eighty-one men at the time of muster in 1864. These two companies, together with Companies C and D, commanded by Capts. W. C. Hurt and Thomas P. Carter, respectively, formed the First Battalion, Sixteenth Kentucky, which was subsequently consolidated with the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry. Its first actual service was performed in defending Fort Anderson, Paducah, against Forrest's attack, it occupying one-half the fort. It served next at Cynthiana, Ky., where it resisted the attack of Gen. John H. Morgan's forces, June 12, 1864, and where the present representative in Congress, W. J. Stone, lost his leg in Morgan's command while making the attack. The battalion served in the Atlanta campaign, and subsequently with Gen. Gillem in East Tennessee, being present when Gen. Morgan came to his death. Its term of service expired in August, 1865, when the survivors returned to their homes to engage with their opponents in the pursuits of civil life, realizing that "Peace hath its victories no less renowned than war."

Between these old soldiers, Union and Confederate, the most amicable feelings exist. True men always admire bravery even in an opponent whom they consider the champion of an unjust cause. The writer has not met a single Confederate soldier who would have restored the ante-bellum condition of things in the South which induced the late Rebellion. The past is to be forgotten, and the problems of the future are to be solved under the Stars and Stripes of the old government.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE CITY OF PADUCAH.

PADUCAH, the capital of the county, and the metropolis of the Jackson Purchase, is pleasantly situated on the south bank of the Ohio River, at the mouth of the Tennessee, and twelve miles from the mouth of the Cumberland. It is 167 miles from Memphis and 225 miles from Louisville by the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad. Its location is such by nature as to indicate that it was intended to be a commercial and manufacturing center. Its close proximity to the Ohio, the Tennessee, the Cumberland, the Mississippi, the Wabash and other small streams with their tributaries, so richly supplied with timber, ores, mineral and grains, unmistakably indicates this.

Concerning the origin of the name Paducah (spelled Paduca in the act of the General Assembly fixing it as county seat), several theories are advanced; but the one which, owing to its romantic character, seems to have commended itself most thoroughly to popular credence, is the doctrine that in the olden time an Indian chief was buried on the banks of the Tennessee, near the present Jersey, a suburb, and that his name was given to the beautiful town. The romance which surrounds this hypothesis will not be willingly sacrificed by the average Paducahian.

According to the testimony of Robert S. Davis, who came to the county with his father from Harrison County, Ky., in 1821, and is still a resident of the city, the first house on the present site of Paducah was a round-log cabin, about sixteen feet square erected by James and William Pore, brothers, in April, 1821, at the foot of Broadway Street. At that time there were only four families in the place, viz.: the two Pores, J. D. Martin and one other whose name is not recalled.

The father of Davis came down the river, bringing on the flat-boat a year's supply of provisions, together with cattle, hogs and horses. He built near the site of the present Richmond House a shanty, which he occupied a few months and then erected a cabin near the old barracks.

The first hotel was a log building kept by Francis A. Harrison on the site of the present Richmond House. The lot, 47x173, was bought by John Fields, in 1831, for $12.00. About the same time a Mr. Goldstein built a cabin, and shortly afterward Joe Daniel another.

The first frame house was erected about 1826 by a Mr. Mays, and was usually called the Fox House. The first business house was a frame store and ware-room, erected about 1826 by Harris & Flournoy, on the site now occupied by Capt. Fowler's store-room, corner of Main and Broadway. Including the basement, it was a two-story structure and was used for dry goods and commission purposes. The first brick structure was a little hotel, called the "Indian Queen," on Main Street just below the present Richmond House. It was erected about 1826 by Enders & Hinds, and kept by them for several years.

Paducah was laid out and platted May 26, 1827, and the plan recorded by Robert Fletcher, as agent for William Clark, of St. Louis, Mo., June 18, 1830. On January 11, 1830, it was regularly incorporated. The plan of the original town embraced 12 blocks of 12 lots each, the size of the lots being 57½ feet front by 173 feet deep, together with 24 lots of smaller dimensions lying along the river. The town embraced from the river to Oak Street, including the following: Water, Main, Locust and Oak; and from Clark to Jefferson, including Clark, Washington, Court, Broadway and Jefferson. The streets were laid out sixty-six feet wide. Additions have been made as follows: (1) First Addition, (2) Upper Town, (3) Lower Town, (4) First Addition to Upper Town, (5) Given's, (6) Harris, Flournoy, Trimble and Norton's, (7) Enders', (8) Woolfolk's, (9) Jersey City, (10) Marouse's, (11) Norton, Ware and Jones', (12) Pool's, (13) Bowman & Williams', (14) Robertson's, (15) Watt, Given and Campbell's and (16) Woodward's.

On May 2, 1831, the first election for trustees was held at the house of George Dunn, resulting as follows: F. A. Harrison, chairman; George Dunn, Robert Enders, Dr. Robert Fletcher and Thomas J. Flournoy. Organizing, they appointed these officers: Reuben Laughlin, clerk and assessor; James C. Calhoun, collector; and Valentine Owen, overseer of streets.

The minutes of the council session of May 5, 1831, contain these items; "All persons be required to move their fences and houses out of the streets, and keel boats to be prohibited from landing in front of the town." "Gen. Clark, having given the town several lots, was exempted from taxation." "Value of taxable property, real and personal, including slaves, for the year 1831, $29,270; tax levied for all purposes, 18¾ cents on the $100; poll tax, 50 cents. The assessor was allowed for services as clerk and assessor for the year $2.50; the collector for his services $3.80. Total expenses for assessor, clerk and collector, $6.30. Total tax, $45.50." Henry Burnett's report: "The value of lots at this time was very low. The lot on which the Richmond House now stands was sold for $40, and the one on the southeast side of Broadway, opposite the Richmond House, brought $24."

As showing the jealousy with which the early citizens of Paducah watched the actions of their officials, the following memorial in 1833, when the entire revenue of the town was but $113.48, is inserted:

To the honorable Board of Trustees of the Town of Paducah:—It is with feelings of regret that your memorialists approach the character and standing of any public officer; but being compelled by the highest obligations which can operate upon freemen, by daring usurpations and strides of power of your supervisor, in withholding the public revenue and property of your citizens from the treasurer, their lawful place of deposit, and placing the same in local banks or private mercantile houses, the solvency or insolvency of which the good people of the town of Paducah cannot from the nature of those private institutions ascertain, thereby endangering the liberty and property of your memorialists; assuming power and authority not delegated by the board of trustees, and trampling upon the rights and sovereignty of your citizens; breaking down all corporate powers and capacities, and concentrating in the hands of one man the power of supervisor and treasurer, contrary to all precedent in the history of town corporations, and adopting the rules of the administration of our present government,* and extending it down through every avenue of constitution and law, down to town corporations and bodies politic; and further your memorialists would recommend an investigation into the conduct and acts of your supervisor, and inquire of your president whether the public monies were placed in local receptacles or banks upon the president's own responsibility, making use of the supervisor as the sure agent by which it was done, thereby violating all law and precedent, and transmitting down to posterity precedents of a dangerous character and destructive to the best interests of a free, high-minded and patriotic people; and further your memorialists would recommend the public monies to be withdrawn from these private banks and placed in the hands of the treasurer, the only lawful depository of the same, and your memorialists will ever pray." Signed:

G. A. Flournoy,	P. B. Moseley,
Samuel A. Withers.	Thomas A. Flournoy.
J. M. Harshaw,	Charles Pell,
J. C. Calhoun,	J. B. Husbands,
John S. Gaulden,	John C. Enders,
John A. Harper,	A. Burnam,
John Armistead,	George Smedley,
Joseph Farant,	J. G. Cole, and

K. Brownell.

June 2, 1834, an election for trustees was held at the court house, at which Alexander Burnam, G. A. Flournoy, John Hynes, Braxton Small, George Dunn, James Walters, Bradford Barbee, John Moseley, James McPherson, George Smedley and A. W. Naylor, were candidates. The first five were elected. At this date the poll book shows eighty-three names of persons having voted, most of whom are dead:

*Andrew Jackson.

William Piles, Joseph Merrell, Jesse K. Bell, S. W. Henson, Isaac Davis, James R. Turner, Thomas Wozencraft, E. R. Dillingham, Henry Enders, William Enders, Demarcus Enders, A. D. Coffield, John W. Wilson, William J. Flournoy, James Young, James C. Calhoun, J. S. Gaulden, James T. Long, James Owens, W. B. Padget, C. C. Russell, A. P. Stewart, D. O. Thrift, Hugh McCrary, J. H. Adkins, James Walters, William Southers, Robert Enders, B. W. Thomas, George Dunn, Peter B. Moseley, Randolph Thompson, George W. Ingram, Caleb Smith, Reuben Laughlin, John Moseley, James Howe, H. B. Walters, Bradford Barbee, J. G. Cole, Adam McPherson, G. A. Flournoy, John Hynes, Joseph Pickering, John Betts, David McFarland, G. F. Hendren, J. C. Heath, Alexander Burnam, John M. Harshaw, Isaac A. Massey, Thomas Hynes, F. A. Harrison, James McPherson, Joseph Y. Jordan, Augustus Garrett, Edward Holly, Levi Chapman, George Smedley, Levi Stewart, Simon Haywood, Randolph Lewis, Samuel A. Withers, Joseph Daniel, Larkin Spradlin, Elias McWorthy, Robert Elkins, Valentine Owen, Abel Sullivan, John Baker, William Talbert, Benjamin Carter, John W. Rogers, William Creason, John Edwards, Peter Jordan, Thomas R. Gorham, Lilburn Ramage, Harvey Worthington, Alfred Edwards, John F. Harris, David Smith and W. W. Lay. Many of these citizens became the public men and fashioning spirits of Paducah.

Paducah was incorporated as a city March 10, 1856. On the 25th of the ensuing August, an election was held to adopt the new charter making it a city, with the following result, For, 209 votes; against, thirty-five. At the first election under the new charter J. H. Gardner was chosen its mayor, and the several gentlemen mentioned hereafter were selected as councilmen: First Ward—A. G. Lee and D. A. Given; Second Ward—J. C. Walden and George A. Allen; Third Ward—William Enders and Gabriel Kay; Fourth Ward—O. G. Bullitt and Daniel Fourshee; Fifth Ward—T. J. Atkins and J. K. Leman; Sixth Ward—George Langstaff and W. H. Slack; George Smedley, police judge; W. L. McGary, assistant judge; John W. Sauner, marshal; W. L. Fuqua, deputy marshal; Q. Q. Quigley, attorney; Charles H. Bonnin, clerk; William F. Swift, assessor; M. W. Cole, treasurer; D. A. Maxwell, physician.

At the first meeting of the city council, held May 11, 1857, the following officers were chosen: Henry S. Lewis, railroad tax collector; J. W. Sauner, city tax collector; George Dunn, market-master; Henry Adams, wharf-master; J. S. Long, sexton.

By an act of the General Assembly, approved February 11, 1871, the charter of the city was materially revised. This with subsequent legislative acts modifying certain features of the same is still in force.

The city has had five different mayors, as follows: J. H. Gardner, 1857-59, two years; J. W. Sauner, 1859-63; 1867-71, eight years; J. G. Fisher, 1863-67, 1875-77, six years; M. Weil, 1871-75, 1877-81, eight years. Charles Reed, 1881, is the present incumbent.

The present city government embraces the following officials: Mayor, Charles Reed; clerk, Henry H. Houston; treasurer, Henry W. Rankin; auditor, William H. Patterson; judge of city court, James C. Calhoun; attorney Emmet W. Bagby; civil engineer, John W. Hopkins; street inspector, William Wheelis; collector of taxes, A .Sidney Terrell; market-master, James Collins; wharf-master, Given Fowler; weigher, Charles Pell; superintendent of schools, D. C. Culley; licnese inspector, Frank H. Harlan; physician, J. H. Wheelis; sexton, John Porteous.

Councilmen.—First Ward—John E. Williamson and S. C. Vaughan; Second Ward—J. G. Brooks and J. M. Bigger; Third Ward—T. F. Terrell and J. N. Fisher; Fourth Ward—J. R. Smith and F. Kamliter; Fifth Ward—J. M. Ezell and C. S. Marshall; Sixth Ward—W. E. Augustus and J. S. Smedley.

Chief of Police.—Charles Reed; assistant, James Geary.

Patrolmen.—James Collins, Frank H. Harlam, D. C. Wallace, F. W. Schroeder; William Ferrell, F. H. Smedley, W. Mount, T. J. Patter and Alex McCune.

D. A. MAXWELL.

J. W. THOMPSON.

R. SAUNDERS.

J. W. BECKER

F. T. DAVIS.

PROMINENT PHYSICIANS OF PADUCAH

Keeper City Prison.—W. P. Venable.

Chief Fire Department.—C. C. Etten.

Like other towns Paducah has had her fiery ordeals through which to pass. In 1838, while yet in her infancy, the fire fiend swept away all the houses on Front Row, between Broadway and Jefferson Streets. Phœnix-like, from ashes sprang substantial three-story bricks, which stood until they were bombarded by the Federal gun-boats in 1864, the occasion of General Forrest's visit to the city. The Chicago conflagration of Paducah occurred, however, on April 2, 1852. The fire originated in J. G. Cole's livery stable on the corner of Main and Court Streets, and crossing Main, spread along the northern half of the entire square, consuming nearly every store and house that was at that time in the village. The two houses saved were Radcliffe's corner and a store belonging to Judge Campbell.

On the 9th of August, 1851, a tornado from the west destroyed the boats Dover and Caledonia, and badly crippled the Cherokee, America, Nashville, Globe, Elk, and the John Simpson. It tore the roof from the wharf boat belonging to Watts & Given, blew away the belfry and roof of the Methodist Church and removed the roof of the Marshall (now Richmond) House, and threw in one of its gables. Nothing so destructive has since occurred.

On the 2d of April, 1862, another storm struck the city, blowing the roof from A. R. Lang's tobacco stemmery, the St. Francis, (now Richmond) House and other buildings, and throwing in the gable of the Methodist Church. It destroyed no inconsiderable amount of property.

Education in Paducah has not been neglected. At a very early date, the people established subscription schools. Some of the pioneer instructors were Rev. John Shear, Presbyterian minister, who taught in the seminary as also in his own residence between Court and Washington; Rev. William Knox, a Baptist preacher, who taught in the seminary; William Curtis, James Brown, William J. Flournoy, now living several miles in the country; James Roscoe, J. H. Harvey, Lucian C. Graves, Rev. A. Wheeler Campbell, said to have been a cousin to the distinguished Alexander Campbell, and a brother of Judge Campbell; Rev. Robert Ball, Baptist minister, who taught in the old seminary; Rev. Caleb Dow, Episcopal clergyman; Timbrel, an Englishman, who added dancing to his course of study; John B. Hicks, who inflicted corporal punishment quite freely; William Graham, and Rev. R. M. Ford, who conducted the seminary and gave it a deserved popularity as an institution of learning. Many of the ladies of Paducah look back with pleasure to their training and graduation from this school.

About the year 1836, special interest was manifested in educational matters. By act of the legislature, the people of Paducah were authorized to establish a lottery by which to raise a fund of $100,000 for general purposes, which was to be distributed as follows: One-half for establishing and maintaining a male seminary; one-fourth for a female seminary, and one-fourth for a public wharf. About $60,000 was realized from the scheme.

John W. Jones donated, for the male seminary, about four acres, and a building was erected on the same, on the corner of Contest (now Churchill Avenue) and Broadway Streets. It was under the direction of a special board of trustees, but seems never to have been permanently successful. During the war, the building was accidentally destroyed. In the year 1871, its successor appeared on a new site bought on Broadway beyond the railroad, as Paducah University, the structure costing some $28,000. For several years this building was used for public school purposes, but was finally given up because of its distance from the center of population. Private schools have at various times been conducted in it by Profs. Thomas, Norton and others.

The female seminary, though not so bountifully endowed, has had a more successful career. Its site was donated by Gen. William Clark. Its board of trustees not only kept it running successfully, but assisted by loan to protect the university, and built the public school in the First Ward at an expense of $10,000. It was run as a seminary till 1871, since which time it has been used for public school purposes. By act of the General Assembly, approved March 9, 1882, it was declared "that hereafter the trustees of the public schools of the city of Paducah shall be trustees of the male university and female seminary of said city, and all acts or parts of acts in conflict with this section of this act are hereby repealed."

Paducah grants to white and colored children equal primary instruction in separate schools conducted during an equal length of time. The board of education is erecting, for colored children, a new brick edifice of good dimensions and suitable equipments. If colored youth are not educated, the fault lies not with the city authorities.

In 1881, a case of much legal and educational interest occurred in Paducah. Suit was brought by the sheriff of McCracken County, in the name of the commonwealth, against Jesse Ellis (colored) to recover of the defendant a capitation tax of $1, assessed against him by virtue of an act of the Kentucky Legislature, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of common schools for colored children in this commonwealth." E. W. Bagby, attorney for defendant, having secured the transfer of the case from the county court to the United States circuit court, argued the case on constitutional grounds. The decision at the spring term of 1882, by Judge Baxter of the circuit court and Judge Burr of the district court, was favorable to the defendant, and became the basis of all subsequent school legislation in the State, equalizing school taxation and privileges between white and colored youth.

The thorough training of colored teachers, so that they may properly instruct their own children, seems to be a crying necessity. Training schools for colored teachers will do more for their mental, moral and physical elevation than any other agency that can be set on foot.

The influence of the press as a factor in the development of society cannot be too highly appreciated. As an agency in imparting instruction to the masses and forming their sentiments and correcting their tastes, it transcends in importance all forms of oral communication. A reading community is always a thinking community, and consequently easily governed. Paducah has been prolific in this means of public enlightenment. Newspapers have appeared as "thick as autumnal leaves in the valley of Vallambrosa."

The pioneer paper of the town was The Express, published in about 1834–35, by R. R. Wills, editor and proprietor. It was a Whig weekly, but failed for want of patronage. In its office William Grief learned his trade as a printer.

In 1844, McKay Lambdin started another Whig journal, the West Kentuckian, but, after a short time, sold it to William Grief, publisher, and L. M. Flournoy and John W. Crockett, editors. When the latter, a nephew of the celebrated pioneer David Crockett, retired from the editorship, his place was filled by J. R. Alexander. In 1849 this paper was sold to H. M. McCarty and R. W. Perry, who changed its name to the Paducah Journal. In 1855, they sold the new paper to J. Stoddart Byers and Rev. W. W. Dodd, who, after continuing it a short time, leased it to D. W. McCarty and F. W. Thomas. They continued it a year longer and allowed it to depart to the "sweet by and by."

In 1851, the Paducah Democrat was launched by C. C. Riley, to advocate the principles of genuine Democracy, at $2 per year. Finally, R. B. J. Twyman became its sole editor, and prolonged its existence for several years. The Democrat, however, was not permitted to monopolize journalistic honors. In 1853, a vigorous competitor arose in The Pennant, a Whig paper published by Samuel Pike, and held on in the even tenor of its way till 1854, when it passed into the hands of George H. Morrow. After a short time he transferred his right to Perry & McGoodwin, who changed its name to the Paducah American, and made it the exponent of Know-nothingism.

About the same time John D. McGoodwin bought the outfit of the Journal office and published the Paducah Sentinel as a Whig paper for a year or two. Contemporary with these secular papers, Elder J. R. Howard, of the Christian Church, published The Christian Banner for about ten months, when he concluded that his subscribers had obtained "value received," and proclaimed its valedictory.

The Paducah Herald was started in 1857, by the Nestor of the Kentucky press, John C. Noble, and as a stanch advocate of Democratic principles continued it till 1861, when he entered the Confederate service. The material was largely destroyed during the war. In 1865, the paper was revived by him as a daily, tri-weekly and weekly, and continued till 1871, when the news department was sold to the Kentuckian started by Saunders and Martin, and the job department to Ballard and Thompson, of the News. About 1874, Col. Noble bought a new outfit and again revived the Herald, but ran it only a few months.

About 1859 The Commercial, an exponent of Whig principles, was published by William Rollsten for about two years, and suspended.

Probably about 1857, W. L. Geary published The Dollar Times a year or so and then sold it.

During the war The Federal Union, a patriotic paper, was published for several years, first by Howard and then by Howard & Pickett. By the latter was published also, The Gazette, The Commercial and The Sun.

For several years succeeding 1873, The Paducah Tobacco Plant was published by E. K. Warren, but was finally destroyed by fire and never revived.

The Paducah Enterprise, by John B. Gaines, struggled successfully for about two years following 1880. The Baptist Herald, edited by Rev. G. W. Dupee, "battled with its evil star" about three years, and then submitted.

In 1883, H. M. McCarty, now assistant secretary of State of Kentucky, and one of the oldest editors living in the State, returned to Paducah and revived The Sunday Journal and continued it one year, when it was bought by the Leigh Brothers.

The only representatives of the press in Puducah, to-day, are the Paducah News and Paducah Standard. The News is a seven-column quarto, daily and weekly, Democratic in politics, established in February, 1871, by Ballard & Thompson. The daily has a circulation of 1,350; the weekly about 3,200. Connected with the News are an extensive job office supplied with all modern improvements and a book-bindery, fully equipped. Steam power and good presses make it an efficient newspaper office.

In February, 1881, the firm of Leigh Brothers, now editors and proprietors of the daily and weekly Standard, was established as a third-story job office. Hard labor and pluck enabled the firm to absorb, in process of time, the Paducah Beacon, Daily Enterprise, Daily Times and Martin's job office. The Paducah Daily Standard was launched April 6, 1884, as a small five-column folio. Shortly afterward the outfit and good-will of the Sunday Journal, established in 1884, was purchased and the name changed to Paducah Weekly. Both editions have gained a wide circulation throughout western Kentucky and west Tennessee.

The four great factors of modern civilization are the family, the school, the church and the press, important in the order of their enumeration. Of these we have to do, at present, with the church in its various forms, commencing with the veteran pioneer organization, the Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church South, corner of Broadway and Poplar Streets. It was organized in the year 1834, in a schoolhouse on the corner of Broadway and Locust Streets, on the lot now occupied by the First National Bank, the Revs. George W. Martin and George W. Cayce officiating. The first board of trustees consisted of Joseph G. Cole, S. S. Givens, Henry L. Jones, James B. Husbands, James Browne, David C. Peters and M. Markland. The present board consists of James B. Husbands, A. G. Lee, George C. Crumbaugh, D. J. Fraser, A. H. Nunnemacher, W. R. Reid, James L. Bethshares and H. F. Lyon. The stewards are George C. Crumbaugh (superintendent Sunday-school), J. W.

McKnight, V. O. Sweatman, J. L. Bethshares, P. G. Reed and A. R. Lang.

The congregation has been served by the following preachers: Revs. G. W. Martin, G. W. Cayce, J. Custer, Finley Bynum, G. W. Kelso, J. D. Henning, J. W. Jones, E. W. Williams, E. W. Yancey, J. P. Stanfield, George E. Young, E. L. Raglin, James Young, David J. Allen, Joseph H. Brooks, H. H. Montgomery, E. M. Nichol, W. C. Robb, J. W. Knott, John Moss, A. H. Thomas, J. F. Walsh, William H. Leigh, J. G. Acton, Lewis Davis, Amos Kendall, James M. Scott, Guilford Jones, E. C. Slater, Isaac Ebbert, William T. Harris, J. H. Evans, Robert H. Mahon, S. W. Moore, N. P. Ramsey, S. B. Surratt and J. C. Hooks.

The old edifice was built in 1842, the first church in town, and the new one in 1875, at a cost of $10,000. Of the first building Kirby Jones was contractor; of the second, George G. Davis. The present membership is 484.

The Presbyterian Church, now worshiping near the corner of Locust and Court Streets, was organized October 29, 1842, at the residence of James Campbell, by the Rev. A. W. Campbell aided by William Allen, Mrs. E. B. Allen, Mrs. E. B. Calhoun, James Campbell, Mrs. Mary Campbell, George A. Flournoy and Mrs. Margaret Flournoy.

The original officers were: pastor, Rev. A. W. Campbell; elders, James Campbell and G. A. Flournoy. The present corps embraces: pastor, Rev. W. E. Cave; elders, T. A. Baker, E. T. Jones, H. L. Jones, C. H. Reike, Jr., George Seibert and D. A. Yeiser; deacons, A. A. Trimble, George O. Hart, L. M. Reike and W. H. Reike.

The pastorate has been filled, in succession, by the Revs. A. W. Campbell, J. D. Matthews, F. Senour, L. H. Vandoren, J. T. Hendricks and W. E. Cave. The congregation has had but one house of worship, which was built in 1846. Beneath its floor was buried its builder, Rev. A. W. Campbell, who died January 9, 1848, in his forty-sixth year. The membership at present is reported as being 398.

The Cumberland Presbyterians had a congregation which, for years, maintained worship in a house on Locust Street, between Washington and Clark. The congregation, unable to continue the support of a pastor, sold its house in 1883, its members seeking homes in other congregations.

The Protestant Episcopal Church was organized in 1846 by Rev. W. M. Cowgill, who died and was buried at Hickman, Ky., aided by Adam Rankin, P. Marouse, L. M. Flournoy, A. Slee, Jacob Baker, Dr. O. G. Bullitt and John W. Jones, the first vestry.

The congregation has used three different places of worship: The old court house on Court Street; then a one-story frame, 30x60, on Market Street, between Washington and Clark, erected in 1848, at a cost of $2,000. It was torn down in 1872, and the present brick structure, 60x100, with a seating capacity of 600, was built in 1873-74, at a cost of $30,000.

Since its organization, this congregation has been served by the following rectors: Revs. Daniel Deacon, Nash, C. N. Dow, Presbury, Frederick Boyd, T. J. Pickett, F. A. Jury, W. M. Pettiss, Andrew Drummond, R. E. McDuff and George Rogers. The present vestry consists of Q. Q. Quigley, T. B. Leonard, Dr. J. W. Becker, W. H. Slack and George Langstaff, Jr.

The Christian Church was organized in the spring of 1849 by Elder Robert Rice, with the following charter members: Dr. S. F. Singleton, John F. Allard and wife, John Milligan and wife, Mrs. Kittie Wolfolk and Mrs. Fannie Jones.

For about a year the congregation met in the Enders' building on Water Street. A frame house was then built on Market between Washington and Clark, Mrs. Wolfolk furnishing the lot and Dr. Singleton, by subscriptions taken, erecting the house at a cost of about $600. In 1859, the present brick structure was erected at a cost of about $5,000.

The following preachers have served the congregation as pastors: Elders John Waldren, I. B. Grubbs, John B. McGinn, James Cook, Joseph Brown, T. W. Caskey, George E. Flower and George B. Peak.

Of this number, I. B. Grubbs is now professor in the Bible College, at Lexington, Ky.; George E. Flower served from 1872, with little interruption, till the time of his death, September 5, 1884. During his pastorate, which was universally acceptable, the best development of the congregation occurred. The present official board consists of Elders William Robertson, J. K. Bondurant and J. Pettus; Deacons Samuel Murrell, R. C. Utterback, E. W. Vaughan, S. M. Huston, Thomas Chalk and Henry Smith. Elder George B. Peak is Sunday-school Superintendent. The present membership is about 385.

The German Evanglical Church was organized in August, 1874, by Jacob Karsh, president; Henry Hueby, secretary; and P. Mattill, treasurer, and Charles Smith and William Nagel, members. These also constituted the first board of trustees.

The pastors have been Revs. D. Eshenbrenner, N. Kies, and J. E. Digel.

The present edifice is a school building erected by the German School Association at a cost of $5,000, and afterwards sold to the church for $2,500. The membership consists of thirty families, numbers being counted thus rather than as individuals. The present church board embraces G. W. Oehlschlaeger, J. H. Bayer, P. Mattill, George Rock and Charles Smith.

Methodist Episcopal Church North was organized about 1866 by Rev. J. H. Bristow with the assistance of such charter members as T. J. Birchett, J. W. Allen and wife, William Howe and wife, Mary Merritt, C. C. Etter, Rebecca Ray, Abraham Harris and others to the number of thirty all told. For a time meetings were held in the engine house and then in St. Clair's Hall. Finally a brick house, 45x60, and costing about $2,500, was erected by T. J. Birchett. The following named preachers have labored for the congregation; Revs. J. H. Bristow, Dodson, Brown, Pender, Kilgore, Orr, Gill and Martin L. Center.

In 1863 a Hebrew organization for cemetery purposes was formed, consisting of A. Goldsmith, Jacob Weil, L. Harris, M. Leiber, I. Bodenheimer, D. Wolff and others. In 1867 the same members were organized, for purposes of worship, into a congregation known as K. K. Yeshuron. In 1871, after some litigation as to the propriety of appropriating money raised for cemetery purposes to congregational uses, the present synagogue was built at a cost of $2,500. The rabbis have been: Wolff, L. Leopold, David Eigenbrun, M. Tupenhaus, and Gustave Ensel. The present membership is some thirty-five. Several benevolent associations, two male and one female, are connected with the congregation.

The Locust Street Methodist Episcopal Church South was organized October 11, 1883, by Rev. W. H. Leigh, with trustees J. W. McKnight, D. J. Fraser, G. C. Crumbaugh, A. R. Lang, and A. L. Robertson; stewards J. A. Greer, L. B. Breedlove, W. H. Qualls, W. H. Beard, J. B. Patrick, J. H. S. McMellon and J. W. Orr; Sunday-school Superintendent, D. C. Culley. At present the trustees are J. A. Grier, W. H. Qualls, T. M. Simmons, R. J. Wilkins and C. H. Schwanecker; stewards, Greer, Qualls, Beard, Patrick, Styers and Schwanecker. Rev. W. H. Leigh has been the only pastor of the congregation.

August 22, 1883, the edifice now used was purchased from George Langstaff for $750, and was repaired at an additional outlay of $250. The present membership is eighty-six.

The Catholic Church was organized by the Rev. Elisha Durbin, of Uniontown, Union County, the following persons associating for that purpose: Adrian Grief and wife, Frank, John and William Grief, sons of the foregoing, Mrs. Mary F. Fisher, Sebastian Glauber, Mark Lydden and Benjamin Austin.

The first meetings were held at John Grief's residence. The first building was a brick, now the rear of the present structure, erected about 1848-49. The present front was added in 1869.

Baptist Church was organized in 1839 by Rev. James P. Edwards, with S. M. Purcell and John McElya as deacons. The first services were held in the old county court house at the crossing of Market and Court Streets. The first house for worship was built in 1842 on Broadway between Oak and Locust Streets at a cost of about $8,000. It was erected by J. D. Wainscott and John Smedley, and was used for worship until October, 1861. After the war, in 1866, worship began in the present house corner Jefferson and Chestnut Streets.

The following pastors have served the congregation in succession: James P. Edwards, W. R. King, James P. Edwards, A. W. Meacham, Thomas L. Garrett, Willis White, Colin Hodge, Joel E. Grace, D. E. Burns, R. J. Ash, D. Butler, W. B. Walker, George C. Lorimer, A. B. Miller, R. W. Norton, C. C. Chaplin, K. B. Tupper, J. B. Moody, Dr. L. H. Shuck, present pastor.

The deacons at present are Wilson, Thompson, V. A. McCutchen, R. H. Briggs and J. R. Puryear, The membership is 309.

German Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized in 1871-72 by F. Hummel and others. The house of worship was erected about the same time at a cost of some $3,000. The pastors have been Revs. Daily, Sigel, John Ansorge and A. Knappe, the present incumbent.

There are several churches for the colored people; one Methodist Episcopal, two under the control of the Missionary Baptists, and one belonging to the Christian Church. They are all doing efficient work.

The ground for Oak Grove Cemetery, some thirty-six acres, was purchased April 19, 1847, at $3 per acre, Hiram Smedley, J. Campbell and W. McKay Lambdin being a committee of the council appointed for that purpose. It was surveyed and platted by Adolph Miller. The lots were valued at $5 each. Ornamentation of the grounds began about five years ago. The first grave on the ground was dug prior to its purchase for cemetery purposes, it being that of Pierce Jones, who was killed in 1837 by a man named Cooksey. The people of the living city feel justly proud of their "city of the dead."

The City Hall was erected in 1882–83 at a cost of $20,000, with $4,000 additional for furnishing, the city issuing bonds for the same. D. A. McKinnon was the architect and George G. Davis the contractor.

In 1849–51 the General Government built on the right side and near the foot of Oak Street a marine hospital, 88x110 feet, four stories above the basement, at a cost of $76,000. The superintendent of construction was W. J. Dinwiddie; and the assistant, G. G. Davis, at present a contractor and prominent citizen of Paducah. Its purpose was to supply a temporary home and requisite attention to boatmen and others living on the Ohio River and its tributaries. In the fall of 1862 it caught fire and was destroyed. The basement at the time was filled with ammunition, which was successfully removed by the soldiers in the fort.

In 1882 began the erection of the United States Custom House; it was completed in May, 1885, at a total cost to the government of $145,000. The architect was Hon. James E. Hill, Washington, D. C., and the superintendent of work, Maj. George Garfield, cousin to President Garfield. It contains a number of excellent offices and business rooms: postoffice under the management of James H. Ashcraft, postmaster; customs directed by John W. Cobbs, surveyor; revenue Robert D. Happy, deputy collector; United States Circuit and District Court, John W. Burr, judge, and John R. Puryear, clerk.

The postoffice has been filled by the following gentlemen: Francis A. Harrison, who kept it in his hotel back of the Richmond House; G. A. Flournoy, who used his storeroom; John Millikan; John C. Noble; Charles T. Bronson; Captain T. J. Pickett; Dr. J. M. Best, who from the roof of his residence signaled Federal gunboats where to fire during the Confederate attack on Fort Anderson, sharpshooters at the time occupying the lower part of his building; and Major J. H. Ashcraft, the present incumbent. The money order business from January 1, 1884, to January 1, 1885, was as follows:

Number of orders issued, 4,423; value, $132,352.84; commissions, $547.30; value of orders paid, $170,152.84, being $37,800 in excess of receipts.

The city hospital was established in March, 1872, and a building erected at a cost of $3,317.63. The first steward was R. B. Williams, who held his position for eight years, and was succeeded by the present superintendent, J. N. Flowers, who was appointed in May, 1880. The institution has done an excellent work, having had an average of about sixty patients annually.

The Ohio has been subject to annual rises, being wholly dependent on the floods supplying its tributaries. The following years are memorable: 1815, 1822, 1828, 1832, 1867, 1883 and 1884. The two periods of greatest height were 1815 and 1884, the water being of about same height. During the latter year, the flood, occurring in February, swept over a large part of the city, the water rising as high as Chestnut Street. The flood of 1867 was next in extent.

Paducah has been visited several times by the cholera, but never by yellow fever as an epidemic. The first appearance of cholera was in 1832, when the steamboat "Freedom" landed with seventeen dead bodies. Fortunately the disease did not spread. In 1840 there was another mild attack. In May, 1851, Mrs. Belcher, of Lovelaceville, got off a steamboat, and, going to Fisher's Hotel, died of cholera. The father and mother of J. G. Fisher both died. All told, there were some ten cases. Drs. Jones, Bullitt and Brownell were active in its treatment. The latter lost a daughter. Mr. Buckler and daughter also died. On May 18, 1873, the steamboat, "John Kilgore," came up from New Orleans. Though it was denied by the officers, the boat had several cases of cholera. William G. Baldwin, a tobacco clerk, went on board and mingled with the hands. He was taken sick and died. Following him was E. P. Calhoun, who recovered. Then Mrs. Mary W. Bechtold, R. S. Cobb and Henry Fletcher took it in succession and died. The disease raged through May, June and July, and resulted in some sixty deaths. The physicians of the city were all active, but none of them died. Dr. R. Sanders introduced a new mode of treatment, which became very popular.

Small-pox and scarlet-fever have raged at times, but never in epidemic form, and have been easily controlled.

Paducah had, prior to the war, some extensive banking institutions. Among them were the Branch Bank of Louisville, with James Campbell, president, and Adam Rankin, cashier, which was established about 1845 with a capital stock of $200,000, and continued till the forming of the national banking system; the Commercial Bank of Kentucky, with L. M. Flournoy, president, and James M. Dallam, cashier, was founded about 1852 with a capital stock of $2,000,000, and closed about 1867. In addition to these, William F. Norton and Watts, Given & Co. began about 1850 to discount paper. The latter firm failed in 1867 with heavy liabilities.

At present three national banks represent the commercial interests of the city, viz.: First National Bank of Paducah, with J. N. Beadles, president, and S. P. Cope, cashier; incorporated October 25, 1865, with a capital stock of $125,000.

American German National Bank, with Henry M. Gilson, president, and George C. Thompson, cashier; was incorporated in 1872 with a capital stock of $100,000.

City National Bank, S. B. Hughes, president, and Elbridge Palmer, cashier; was incorporated in 1873 with a capital stock of $200,000.

Paducah is the center of a very extensive business in tobacco. In fact, tobacco being king in the Purchase, this trade represents the heaviest industry of the city. The following statistics are only approximate: number of hogsheads sold in 1884, in the market, about 12,000; average weight about 1,600 pounds each, total being 19,200,000 pounds. Of this amount about 3,000 hogsheads were packed in Paducah by eighteen tobacco packers or rehandlers. The remaining 9,000 hogsheads were handled by commission merchants. One man packs 500 hogsheads of strips anually to be shipped to foreign countries.

The average price of tobacco may be fixed at 8 cents, showing the value of tobacco handled to be $1,536,000 per year. The number of hands employed in the city is 200 to 300. Many additional ones are needed in producing the crops.

The natural advantages for manufacturing are not to be excelled anywhere. The Ohio, with its tributaries, the Tennessee, the Cumberland, the Wabash, the White, and others of less size, together with the great Mississippi, afford superior facilities for transferring the raw and manufactured material. In addition to this water communication, the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railway reaches points of distribution east and west, north and south. Hitherto too much reliance has been placed on natural advantages. Competing towns and cities have improved their opportunities and taken much of the trade that rightfully belonged to Paducah, and would have been enjoyed by her, had all possible means for pushing her interests been improved. "The mill never grinds with water that has passed." The present, however, remains and may be wisely improved.

In October, 1843, a contract was made between Paducah and Elijah Murray, of St. Louis, for the purchase of the right to use his patent, and to construct a marine railway in the town. The consideration was $1,000 for the patent, and $500 dollars for superintending the construction. Thus was established a permanent industry which gives employment to many hands. Its officers are John W. McKnight, president; S. B. Hughes, secretary, and George C. Hughes, manager.

Paducah Ship Yard Company was incorporated in April, 1882, by E. C. Murray, J. J. Hammer, D. A. Yeiser, L. D. Roberts, Charles Schotta, Joseph McKay and Samuel Fuller, in Mechanicsburg, adjoining Paducah. The original stock was $10,000, but has been increased to $25,000. The business is the outgrowth of a saw-mill and ship-yard formerly conducted at New Albany. The business embraces lumbering in its various forms, and the building of ships on contracts, employing about 100 hands. At present the company is employed in building thirteen barges for the government at a cost of $40,000.

Langstaff-Orm Manufacturing Company was established in 1855 by John Orm, Samuel H. Langstaff and George Langstaff, to manufacture sash, doors, blinds, etc., and to carry on a general lumbering business. In July, 1883, it was incorporated as a stock company with a capital of $200,000, and the following officers: John Orm, president; S. H. Langstaff, vice-president; George Langstaff, secretary; and H. W. Rankin, treasurer. The business of 1884 represented 7,000,000 feet of lumber manufactured and sold, amounting to $125,000.

Paducah Lumber Company was organized November 17, 1878, by the election of E. F. Byng, president; J. W. McKnight, secretary and treasurer, and H. H. Collier. The company was reorganized since that date, and has John Byng, president, and E. F. Byng, secretary and treasurer, and has a paid-up capital of $100,000. The extent of its business during 1884 was the purchasing of some 2,000,000 feet and the sawing of about 3,000,000 feet.

E. Rehkopf's Saddle, Collar and Harness Factory and Tanyard is an important industry that employs, on an average, 100 hands, has been built by energy and honest dealing. The harness factory existed before the war, but the collar factory and tanyard have been developed since. During 1884 there were manufactured 2,847 dozen collars, which, with other products, were sold by commercial men in Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana and Southern States.

City Flouring Mills Company was incorporated in 1884, with a capital stock of $125,000, Thomas J. Atkins, president, and George C. Wallace, secretary and treasurer. The mills have a capacity for making 500 barrels daily.

Paducah Furniture Manufacturing Company, with a capital stock of $35,000, was incorporated in 1870, Elbridge Palmer, president, and Charles H. Reike, Jr., manager. It employs about 100 hands, and keeps four salesmen in the field to sell its products.

J. R. Smith Mary E. Smith

Paducah Gas Light Company, representing a capital stock of $80,000, was incorporated in 1865, Thomas J. Flournoy, president, and George D. Linning, secretary.

Paducah Hub Works was incorporated in 1879, with a capital of $20,000. David Duncan is president, and Richard D. Morrow, secretary and treasurer.

Paducah Ice Company was incorporated in 1882, with a capital stock of $50,000, M. Bloom being president, and William Borneman, secretary. The machinery failing to work satisfactorily, the institution was reorganized in 1884 and placed under its present efficient management.

Phœnix Foundry and Machine Shops were established by Capt. J. H. Johnson, senior member of the present firm, in 1855, under the name of Plain City Iron Works. In 1868 the works were destroyed, and the present business, controlled by Capt. Johnson & Sons, became the successor.

Farley's Stave Works, located in Mechanicsburg in 1874, gives employment to about fifty men, and places upon the market about 5,000,000 staves annually. These are sold mainly in Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York and New Orleans.

Paducah Soap Works were established, in 1882, by D. M. Hersher and Morris Baer. They employ about a dozen men, and manufacture some 60,000 pounds per week.

The Industrial Iron Works were established in Paducah, in 1869, by G. D. Linning & Co. In 1873 the present firm of Linning & Jackson was organized, and continued business at their old stand on the Tennessee River. In 1881 they took possession of their new building, corner of Court and Market Streets. The firm employ about thirty hands, and send their products throughout the South.

Carriages and wagons are manufactured extensively by M. Iseman, Brower & Emery and Hill & Sloan.

The Marble and Granite Works of J.E. Williamson & Co. are doing an extensive and profitable business.

J. L. Friedman & Co. have extensive works for the manufacture of vinegar. Other interests, on a smaller scale, are carefully looked after by earnest workmen in their several fields.

For years the city has been engaged in wholesale business. This is the legitimate result of its position as the metropolis of the Purchase. At present the following firms exist: Grocers—Bogard & Hand, J. K. Bondurat & Co., J. R. Smith & Co. Dry Goods—S. Fels & Bro., C. H. Rieke & Sons. Drugs—Du Bois & Robertson, D. A. Yeiser, Gilson & Wilson, S. H. Winstead. Boot and Shoe Dealers—George Rock & Co. Whiskies—Loeb, Bloom & Co., Bernham Bros. & Uri, Thompson, Wilson & Co., Weil Bros. & Kahn. Beer—A. M. Laevison, W. H. Koennker, O. Haentzchel. Clothing—Hecht Bros. & Co. Hardware—George O. Hart & Son, Scott, Stevens & Co.

Retail trade is represented by the usual number of dry good, book and hardware stores, groceries, etc., and partakes of the thrift of the city. The representatives in these lines are enterprising firms.

Commission business is represented by M. Hersher & Sons, M. Livingston, Edward P. Noble & Co., and Singleton Bros.

The secret orders are well represented both as to numbers and the standing of their members. Masonic.—There are six organizations, four white and two colored, viz: Paducah Lodge, No. 127; Plain City Lodge, No. 449; Paducah Chapter, No. 30; Paducah Commandery, No. 11; Mt. Zion Lodge No. 6; Stone Square Lodge, No. 5.

Odd Fellows—There are five organizations, three white and two colored, as follows: Ingleside Lodge, No. 195; Mangum Lodge, No. 21; Union Encampment; Paducah Lodge, No. 1545; Young Men's Pride Lodge, No. 1783.

Knights of Honor are represented by four, viz.: Champion Lodge, No. 1320; Rapidan Lodge, No. 345; Washington Lodge, No. 455; Rachel Lodge, No. 14.

Knights of Golden Rule—Windsor Castle, No. 28.

Independent Order B'Nai Brith—Harmony Lodge, No. 149.

Order Kesher Shel Barzrl—Unity Lodge, No. 197.

Ancient Order United Workmen—Friendship Lodge, No. 62.

United Order Golden Cross—Hope Lodge, No. 129.

Independent Order Good Templars.

The City Directory of Paducah for 1885 has this statement: "The population of Paducah, according to our census, is 11,097 (males, 5,487; females, 5,610), divided as follows: white males, 3,553; white females, 3,556; colored males, 1,932; colored females, 2,054; Chinese males, 2. Total, 11,097."

From the assessor's returns for 1885: white males over twenty-one, 2,232; colored males over twenty-one, 973. Total 3,205. White voters, 2.015; colored voters, 952. Total, 2,967. School children, six to twenty, 3,528; increase on 1884, 300. Valuation of property belonging to whites, $3,300,741; colored, $69,870. Total $3.337,611.

At this time (May, 1885), water mains and stand-pipes are being planted, under a charter granted to an eastern company, for supplying the city with complete water power. An application has also been made to the city for a charter to build a street railway, the company having the matter in charge being located in St. Louis. A committee of the city council has in charge a proposition to supply the streets with electric light.

With these facilities supplied, and the securing of a north and south railroad; with the encouragement of the manufacturing enterprises already established, and the reaching out for additional ones, and with the developement of agricultural science in the adjoining country as well as the proper fostering of educational interest among the people, Paducah can not fail to double her population within the next fifteen years, and become a desirable city for people from both the North and the South to live in.

Woodville, in the western part of the county, is a village of several hundred inhabitants, and the usual number of stores, churches, shops, etc., for places of its size. It has a brisk trade, and exhibits evidences of thrift.

Mechanicsburg, a little village, is, by virtue of its position, a suburb of Paducah; but its inhabitants prefer to work out their destiny on their own responsibility. It is noted for having a number of important manufacturing establishments.

Florence Station and Bond's are active points on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad between Paducah and Mayfield.

In the history of the county there have been but six public criminal executions, as follows: Thomas Wilson, November 28, 1832; Harvey Reaves, November 28, 1834; John Graham, January 3, 1856, for the murder of his wife; Thomas J. Jenkins (Indian), October 3, 1856, for killing a little girl; George McMurray, (colored), June 22, 1866, for killing a man named Dunn, with an ax; Wash. Fletcher (colored), October 3, 1884, for killing his wife.

The following is the compilation of the assessor's work for 1884-85: There are 152,057 acres of land in the county, valued at $1,030,470, owned by the whites, and 1,391 acres, valued at $10,840, owned by colored people. There are 2,747 town lots, valued at $2,234,450, owned by the whites, and 243 lots, valued at $50,285, owned by colored people. The whites have 1,951 horses, valued at $76,935, and the blacks 148, valued at $4,375. The whites have 1,289 mules, valued at $54,140, and the blacks 109, valued at $3,555. There are 225 dry goods stores, groceries and saloons, valued at $445,550, owned by the whites. The black list but $50 under this head.

Under the equalization law the whites give in $143,000 and the blacks $100. The whites list 18,565 carriages and other vehicles, and the blacks $575 worth. The number of watches, clocks and pianos listed by the whites is 35,460, and the blacks list $150 worth. The total valuation of the possessions of the whites in the county is $4,023,-140, and those of the blacks $76,085.

There are 3,011 white voters and 1,686 colored, and 742 more white and 451 more colored polls than voters. There are 7,360 white school children, and 1,142 colored.

This compilation, compared with last year's, shows a small decrease in the valuation of county property, stores, etc., and horses, but an increase of $60,000 in town lots. The total assessment is about $30,000 over last year's listment.

Presidential vote, November, 1884: Cleveland, 1,984; Blaine, 1,256; St. John, 15. Number of legal voters in the county, white, 3,329; colored, 1,591. Total, 4,920.

The first male child born in Paducah was John F. Davis, son of Isaac Davis, the date being June 12, 1830. Mr. Davis is still living in the country, some four miles from the city.

The first marriage in the town was that of Braxton Small to Grace Walters, March 1, 1831, Rev. Lewis Good being the officiating minister.

The first female child born in the town was Addie Small, daughter of the foregoing, and now Mrs. Dr. Thornberry.

Dr. J. R. Alexander has some interesting and curious objects in his possession, viz.: one a picture of Benjamin Franklin, painted on ivory, in Paris, by Mrs. Jonathan Williams, in 1784; it represents Franklin in full court dress. Another a picture of Gen. Jonathan Williams, who was a member of the celebrated Boston Tea Party; lastly, a copy of the first map of Kentucky ever made, it being drawn from actual observations, in 1784, by John Filson, aided by Daniel Boone, Levi Todd, James Harrod, Christopher Greenup, John Cowan and William Kennedy. It is dedicated to Gen. Washington and the Congress of the United States, and embraces all of Kentucky south of the Cumberland River.

Charles Dickens, visiting Paducah, said that the object of greatest curiosity he found was a "one-story house with a two-story porch." The building may still be seen.

CHAPTER IX.

MARSHALL COUNTY.

MARSHALL COUNTY, named in honor of Chief Justice John Marshall, of the United States supreme court, and situated in the northeastern portion of the Jackson Purchase, is bounded on the north and east by the Tennessee River, which separates it from Livingston, Lyon and Trigg Counties; on the south by Calloway County, and on the west by Graves and McCracken Counties.

Prior to June 1, 1842, it constituted the northern part of Calloway County, from which it was separated by an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved February 12, 1842, the first section of which is as follows:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That, from and after the first day of June, 1842, all that part of Calloway County included in the following boundary, viz.: Beginning at a Section corner, in the Graves and Calloway line, seventeen miles north of the point where the said counties of Graves and Calloway corner in the Tennessee State line; thence east with said section line to the Tennessee River; thence down said river to the McCracken County line; thence south with the McCracken and Graves County lines to the beginning, shall be, and is hereby, erected into one separate and distinct county, to be known and called by the name of Marshall; and the seat of justice thereof shall be established at the most eligible point, as near the centre of said county as the face of the country will admit, in the opinion of the commissioners hereafter appointed." Section 2 provided that the Circuit and County Courts of Calloway County should have law and equity jurisdiction till the act became operative. Section 3 allowed nine justices of the peace to meet on the first Monday of June, 1842, at the house of James Clark, to appoint a clerk. Section 8 designated John Wortham, of Graves; Alfred Boyd, of Trigg; Hugh McCracken, of Caldwell, and Charles B. Davidson, of McCracken, to locate the county seat, and allowed them $3.00 per diem for their services.

The justices mentioned in Section 3, and consisting of James Brien, John T. McElrath, Joseph Staton, Enos Faughn, Joel Gilbert, Robert Elliott, James Stice, Absalom Smith and William Rice, met at the house of James Clark, about four miles east of north of the present site of Benton, on June 7, 1842, and formally organized the county court. The original records of their proceedings having been destroyed, by the burning of the county clerk's office at Benton, February 29, 1848, the details cannot be given. From the testimony of Henry Hand, first county clerk, taken before a board of commissioners, appointed by the court, March 6, 1848, to restore the lost records, and consisting of Robert O. Morgan, Joel Gilbert, Francis H. Clayton, Philander Palmer, and Thomas McElrath, we learn that the commissioners designated to locate the county seat "after careful and minute investigation and examination of circumstances, face of the country, etc.," selected a site for the public square of the county on the southeast quarter of Section 32, Town 5, Range 4 east, being the same now found in Benton. All the commissioners, except McCracken, agreed to this report. The land for the public square belonged to Francis Clayton.

Marshall County, embracing an area of 328 square miles, or 209,920 acres, has an undulating surface, the major portion being level. It is copiously supplied with beautiful streams of living water that both enrich the soil and add to the happiness of man.

Clark's River, with its three branches, East, West and Middle Fork, traverses the county from south to north, the bottoms along which are generally very productive and well adapted to corn and grass. Some of these bottom lands yield fine tobacco. The West Fork has the best quality of land, richly supplied with sand. The Middle Fork is a small stream and has, along its banks, some of the best farms in the county.

Jonathan's Creek, running across the southeast corner of the county, called Harlan's Creek till about 1818, is a beautiful stream, and has two mills on it. Bear Creek in the eastern part of the county has rich bottom land. It flows into the Tennessee River. Soldier Creek, in the west part of the county, empties into the west fork of Clark's River. Its bottoms are dry, and produce corn, wheat, oats, a fine quality of tobacco and excellent grass and clover.

On the hills the soil is from four to eight inches in depth, and is adapted to the raising of corn, wheat, oats, tobacco and the grasses. Much of the hill land has been abandoned, and consequently is covered with sassafras and persimmon bushes, and sedge-grass. The bottoms have a deep loam, which is very productive and well adapted to the production of corn and the various grasses. The drier parts yield a superior quality of shipping tobacco.

The county is well supplied with timber of all kinds. The following varieties may be mentioned: Hickory, black and sweet gum in abundance, oak in its diversified forms, poplar in good quality, white ash, thoroughly adapted to lumbering purposes, beech, red and slippery elm, sycamore, birch, mulberry, walnut, sugar maple, persimmon, horn bean, iron wood, wild cherry, paw paw, locust, willow and red bud. Along the streams the growth of timber is luxuriant, affording an abundance of cheap and valu able lumber.

Much difficulty is encountered in ascertaining when, where and by whom the first settlements were made. Those who were the principal actors in rescuing the country from the Indian and the no less powerful enemy of civilized life, dense forests, had little time, if they had the inclination, to preserve reliable records of their early struggles and hardships. From old citizens, and from a paper prepared by that prodigy of learning and patient research, Philander Palmer, Esq., and read at a citizens' meeting in the town of Benton, July 4, 1876, the following facts are gleaned: Mr. James Stewart made the first permanent settlement on Wade's Creek, about one mile north of Wadesboro, in 1818 or 1819. It is thought the creek received its name from Bannister Wade, who settled on its banks in 1819. In this year immigrants began to arrive in great numbers, so that the following persons were settled in what is now Marshall (then Calloway) County, viz.: In Town 4, Range 3 east, Mr. Daniel, Mr. Bibb, Benjamin and James Knox, Robert and Nehemiah Williams, Arthur H. Davis, James Greer, John Gray, Robert Carney, Stephen Williams, Edward Dillard, Mr. Davis, Samuel Dinwiddie, James Morgan, W. M. Cummins, Mr. Winfrey, Peter Agner, William Baker, Joseph Reaves, Jephthah Griffith, Levi Lamb, John Entrikan, Mr. Thrall and Henry Darnall. They had settled in the southwest part of Marshall County between 1818 and the spring of 1820. North of them in Town 5, Range 3, were William Gibson, James Smith, Henry Thompson and John Moore. North of them in Town 6, Range 3, were Stephen and Dr. John Howard. Between the Howards and the Tennessee River there were no inhabitants when the county was sectionized. In the township south of Benton were Merrill Utley, R. E. Rowland, James Bourland, Elijah Goodman, who owned a band horse-mill, James Jordan, Mr. Twitty, Mr. McDonald, Thomas Goodman, Mr. Benbrook, Mr. Williams, William Riley, Perry Lawrence, William Sneed, widow ——, Mr. Beech, Mr. Skaggs, James and William Brown, Elijah Veech and James Eaton. In the Benton Township, Mr. Scott, Moses Clayton, Jesse, Thomas and Daniel Ford, Samuel Watson, Mr. Tisdale, Hezekiah Williams, Jesse Jones, John Shumaker, Mr. Dunn and Mr. Lawson. North of the Benton Township were: Mr. Scott and Mr. Woods, Thomas Hill, Squire Jonathan Hill, Mr. McKinney, Stratton and M. Doon, and James Brank. North of this township and the Tennessee River there were no inhabitants. In the Jonathan Creek Country were Mr. Jones, Bartlett Henson, Isaac Condrum, John Kennedy, John and James Faughn. East of Benton Township were James Ashworth, Daniel Nance, Raden Gray, William Early, Michael Campbell, John Campbell, who probably settled Birmingham; Joel Yeats and William Short. North of them were Glover Baker, William Whiteside and John Brown. East of them on the Tennesse River were Jeremiah Murray, William Darnold and Benjamin Grindall. Many of these people have since migrated, and their stocks have become extinct.

L. H. Johnston

Concerning some of the early settlers and prominent residents of the county, a few facts may be stated: Isaac Johnston came from Eddyville, Lyon County, some time about 1818–20, and settled near the present home of his son, Squire J. H. Johnston, at Oakland. His father, Absalom Johnston, came in the early history of Kentucky from South Carolina, and erected at Oakland the first horse-mill in Marshall County. Patronized by people for a distance of twenty miles, it continued to be for more than twenty years an indispensable institution of the region. A man of strong constitution and great energy, Absalom opened up a farm. He was a Hardside Baptist, and gave a great impetus to the work of establishing churches in the new country. The home organization had ultimately 120 members. He finally removed to Smithland, Livingston County, where he died in 1844 or 1845, leaving a family of nine children, including eight sons, all of whom became permanent settlers of Marshall County and leading spirits among the pioneers. Contemporary with these Johnstons were the families of Jack Dooms and James Baker. Where Dooms came from is not known, and none of his descendants are now here. Baker came from Caldwell County, and his sister became the wife of Isaac Johnston and mother of James H. Johnston. There were two other daughters, both of whom married sons of Absalom Johnston. Isaac Johnston and one brother were soldiers of the Seminole war. Another early family of the Johnston settlement was the Statons, consisting of Jack, Charles, and his son Joseph, who for many years was a magistrate. They also came from Caldwell County, and their descendants are now among the substantial citizens of the county.

Next came the Briens, Lyles and others. James Brien came from Logan County, Ky., about 1820, and was one of the first blacksmiths of the county. He was a man of great public spirit and benevolence, just such a one as the pioneer county most needed. He was for several years a justice of the peace, and was sent subsequently to represent his county in the State legislature. He was a member of that body when Marshall County was formed, and earnestly championed the movement. He served in both branches of the legislature. He was a soldier under Gen. Jackson in the war of 1812. He founded the village which still bears his name. He died some years ago at an advanced age.

Col. Alfred Johnston was a native of Kentucky, born in Caldwell County January 22, 1813. At the time of his death, in June, 1873, he was over sixty years of age. When about five years of age, his father moved to Calloway County, then comprehending what is now Marshall County, where he lived till the close of the late war, when he removed to Paducah, the place of his residence at the time of his death. In 1836 he married the daughter of 'Squire Howard, of Calloway County, and reared a family of eight children, three boys and five girls, all of whom, except one, together with his beloved wife, survived him. His eldest son, William Henry Johnston, was slain as a Confederate soldier on the battlefield of Shiloh. His early educational facilities were limited, and yet he was possessed of that large native intellect and inquiring mind which gave him command of a vast field of information, and made him a marked man in whatever position he occupied. The stirring political scenes of his early life, and the partiality of his friends, made him a public officer. He was elected a justice of the peace, then assessor of taxes, then county judge, and then a representative to the lower house of the legislature, and, finally, a State senator, all of which positions he filled acceptably. His first contest for the legislature was made in 1844, against Col. Dodd and P. H. Becham, of Calloway. In 1845 he made his second contest against Col. Dodd alone; and his third, in 1846, against William Wade, Esq. In all these he was successful.

In 1849 he made a contest for the senate against Col. James Brien, and was elected by 900 majority. This was for the session of the legislature preceding the revision of the constitution, and the term ended his official life. Withdrawing from politics in 1851, he formed a business partnership with Col. Linn Boyd, at Palma, where he continued till the breaking out of the war.

Early in 1861 he enlisted a company in the county and secured its enrollment in the Third Kentucky Regiment, which was attached to the army of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, and participated in the battle of Shiloh. By regular promotions he attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel of his regiment, A.P. Thompson being colonel, and served faithfully in the Confederate service for a number of months, when, his health failing, he resigned, returned home and took the oath of allegiance to the Federal government.

In January, 1819, William Owen, with Betsey his wife, and their family, came from East Tennessee and settled on the place now occupied by Alex Smith, on Soldier Creek. He was probably a Virginian by birth, and was the first white settler in the west half of the county. He and one of his sons were soldiers in the war of 1812, he taking the place of a younger son who was drafted. His daughter, Frances Owen, married Peter Washam, with whom she lived to the time of her death, January 2, 1883.

Rev. Henry Darnall, usually known as Harry Darnall, came from Caldwell County in 1819, and settled at the head of Soldier Creek, building a small cabin and opening a small farm. He was a Hardshell Baptist preacher, and organized the first church in the Purchase, known as the Soldier Creek Church. At first the members met at the house William Owen, then built a round log house, and finally a hewed log house. The organization is still in existence and now occupies a frame building, illustrating not only the doctrine of developement, but that of the perseverance of the saints. He was a man of fair attainments, and preached extensively, doing much for the advancement of morality, not only in his own locality, but throughout the Purchase. He died about 1860 at the age of eighty or more, and his wife in 1878, considerably older. He left a large number of descendants, among whom three of his sons Nicholas, William and Henry, became preachers. The first of these was at one time judge of Marshall County.

Robert Rose, born about 1798, in Edgecomb County, N. C., came to his present locality in 1821. At that time Henry and Benjamin Darnall, William Chambers and Parker Harold were also living in the neighborhood. He often heard of an older resident named Maldin, but never saw him. On Christmas day, 1823, he married Polly Darnall, daughter of Rev. Harry Darnall, with whom he is still living, a period of sixty-two years. This is probably the longest time during which any living representatives in the county have dwelt together as husband and wife. They are both living in good health and excellent spirits. From this union have sprung forty-seven grandchildren, seventy-two great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Peter Washam came with his father, Peyton Washam, from Hopkins County, Ky., in March, 1820, and settled on Panther Creek, in the eastern part of Graves County. Father and son came to make improvements on the farm, the wife and mother, Lucy Washam, having remained with the family in Hopkins County. In July she was sent for to visit her husband, who was sick, but became lost in the cane-brake on her way, and lay all night near her dying companion, failing to reach him until he was dead. She lived until 1825, and died in Graves County, after which Peter became a resident of Marshall County. Peter relates that he, his father, and one other man, were compelled to subsist for six days with nothing to eat but a little boiled corn. This was taken, too, from the half bushel of seed corn set aside for the season.

Gen. Arthur H. Davis came to the county about 1821–22. He was a prominent citizen, and represented the Purchase in the legislature. It is said that "on December 21, 1821, the State legislature of Kentucky passed an act creating the office of register of lands, and commissioning that officer to offer for sale to the highest bidder, in the town of Princeton, each alternate section belonging to the State west of the Tennessee River. The law required the register to offer the land as indicated, and if it failed to bring $1.25 per acre, there was to be no sale. Under this act only one quarter section was sold, Gen. Arthur H. Davis being the purchaser, and the land lying near the town of Benton, Marshall County."

John Free, now living with his son-in-law, Calvin Henson, came to the county February 1, 1824. He was a son-in-law of Rev. Henry Darnall. Has always been a good citizen, and actively employed in the development of the county.

Daniel Pace, the oldest man in Marshall County, was born February 3, 1792, in Pittsylvania County, Va. In 1806 he accompanied his father to Muhlenburgh County, and in November, 1825, he came to Calloway County, settling a mile and a half north of Wadesboro and entering eighty acres of government land at 50 cents per acre. After paying for his land, he had remaining only $5, with which to support himself, wife and five children. In 1828, he entered 160 acres more at 25 cents per acre, and lacked $11 of the amount. This he borrowed of Edmund Curd, the receiver of the land office at Wadesboro. He served in the war of 1812, having enlisted from Muhlenburgh County, at the call of Gov. Isaac Shelby, who accompanied the troops to Canada. Was a participant in the battle of the Thames, and saw the dead body of the Indian chief, Tecumseh. The Indian was a man of only ordinary stature. After the engagement, his body was badly mutilated, American soldiers scalping him and clipping skin from his back and thighs. One member of Pace's company brought a piece of said skin home as a relic.* He held several offices: First, that of road commissioner to expend public funds for bridging and building roads. This was about 1828–29. Received $1 per day for horse and self and paid his own expenses. He held also the position of magistrate, and later that of school commissioner. Only one appeal was taken from his decisions as a magistrate.

* For his services during his four months' absence, Mr. Pace received at one time $42; then forty acres of land; then 120 acres, and finally a pension of $8 per month since 1871.

Mrs. Pace, nee Lettis Hurt, was born March 16, 1798, in Robinson County, Tenn., and died September 7, 1865, in her sixty-eighth year. She was the mother of twelve children, six of whom are still living. Ten of these twelve children, six boys and four girls, reached the age of maturity and all became members of the Christian Church. None ever drank or gambled.

Mr. Pace has seen, as the fruit of his happy marriage, twelve children, one hundred grandchildren, fifty great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. He joined the Christian Church some forty years ago under the preaching of Elder William M. Starks. In politics he served with the Whig party during its existence, and then cast in his lot with the Republican party when it was organized. He was a firm friend of the Union during the late war, and, like many of his neighbors, suffered heavily from the depredations of guerrilla bands. He is living at present with his son, Hope Pace, about four miles from Wadesboro. His sight is very much impaired, but his general health is quite good.

With Daniel Pace settled J. L. Haynes, from Todd County, in 1825. His father was a brother to the mother of Daniel. He served in the Black Hawk war, and, returning, has, with the exception of two years in Illinois and one in Texas, lived near Mr. Pace's ever since his first location.

Hix Ray, now living on Panther Creek, in Graves County, formerly lived on Duncan's Creek, four miles south of the home of Maj. Wilia Waller. He came to the county some time during the decade between 1820 and 1830, and has lived the life of a plain, honest, Christian. In age he is probably next to Daniel Pace.

Mrs. Matilda Woodall, living near Stringtown, about ten miles northwest of Benton, is thought to be one hundred years old. She came from Tennesse and settled among the first inhabitants of the county.

In the main the offices of Marshall County have been filled by competent men. The records show that the administration of public affairs has been conducted as follows:

County Clerks.—Henry Hand held this important place from June, 1842, the date of organization, through the remaining period of the old constitution, and under the new up to August, 1853, when he resigned and was succeeded by Jesse C. Gilbert, who held the office till September, 1858. At this time John W. Dycus came into power and held it till September, 1870. September 5, 1870, T. L. Goheen, Jr., was sworn into office and held it till October 24, 1880. He was suddenly stricken down by an overdose of chloroform taken for medical purposes. He stood six feet seven inches in height, and was a popular man in the county. He died at the age of thirty-six, a member of the Knights of Honor, and his picture may yet be seen in the office he so worthily filled. J. L. Child was appointed to discharge the duties of the office until the ensuing August election, when William J. Wilson, the present efficient and obliging incumbent, was chosen.

Circuit Clerks.—Old citizens assert that the first clerk was Irvin Anderson. The records, however, commence with Henry Hand, the efficient county clerk who held till the new constitution came into operation. R. F. Stone held from June 11, 1851, to December 23, 1853, when he resigned and was succeeded by S. H. Starks, who was appointed to discharge its duties, which he did till his death in 1855. Moses Riley, appointed successor, held the place till 1861. J. H. Riley, his son, discharged the duties of the office from June, 1862, till June, 1863, and again from July, 1865, to February, 1867. W. D. Hunter held from June, 1863, to December, 1864. He was followed by G. S. Jones from December, 1864, to July, 1865. C. C. Coulter, now an attorney at Mayfield, held from February, 1867, till he resigned in June, 1871, when J. O. Johnston qualified and held till December, 1880. At this time T. F. Palmer, son of Philander Palmer, the first attorney of the county, began to discharge its duties, and is the present incumbent.

School Commissioners.—At first there were three, then six, and afterward but one commissioner. The successive incumbents were Hugh Gilbert, Sr., Daniel Pace, William H. Stone, J. M. Quarles, Rev. D. M. Green, J.

J. M. Wilson. M.D.

T. Stone, Joshua Barnhart, John Gilbert, J. O. Johnston, W. A. Holland, Elias Barry, Louis Fields, J. M. Fisher and C. H. Starkes. In 1884, the name was changed from commissioner to superintendent, and the present incumbent, M. B. Pace, was elected.

County Attorneys.—Pleasant H. Beckham was sworn at the organization of the county in June, 1842. On December 4, 1848, the court appointed Philander Palmer, and annually, thereafter, till June, 1851, when, under the new constitution, he presented a commission from Gov. Helm as the regularly elected officer. He held this office till April 5, 1856, when he resigned. Philander Palmer was born in New Hampshire December 8, 1817; graduated from Norwich University, Vt., and then came to the upper counties of Kentucky, where he read law with Judge Pryor, afterward a member of the supreme court of the State. Having taught school, he came to Benton about 1844, with all his earthly possessions tied up in a small valise. He opened the first law office in the county, and became the Gamaliel of the county. In 1849 or 1850 he married Susan A. Whittemore, with whom he lived till the date of his death, March 6, 1880. He was a leading spirit of Marshall County, and gave his best energies to its development.

R. F. Stone was appointed April 7, 1856, to fill out Palmer's term and again October 1857. The records next show J. C. Gilbert as appointed October, 1865, followed by Henry Dodd, who held till 1870, when W. A. Holland was installed. In 1874, he was succeeded by J. W. Dycus, who resigned in 1875, when W. M. Reed was appointed. He continued till November, 1879, when he resigned and was succeeded by Ed. Palmer, son of Philander Palmer, who served till 1882. At that time J. M. Fisher, the present incumbent, was elected.

County Judge.—Under the old constitution the duties of this office were performed by magistrates. The office began with the adoption of the new constitution in 1851. The first officer was James Stice, who was elected in June, 1851, and served till his death in 1852. Following him was Alfred Johnston, who served about one month. He was succeeded by T. L. Goheen, Sr., who continued from September, 1852, till September, 1858; J. M. Stephens, 1858 to 1866; W. A. Holland, 1866 to 1870; J. W. Dycus, 1870 to 1874.

In September, 1874, Rev. Nicholas Darnall, son of Philip Darnall, was qualified and held the position till March 4, 1878, when he resigned. In the canvass he promised to serve the people for $300 per year. This fact, combined with sympathy, resulted in his election. T. L. Goheen, Jr., county clerk, was de facto judge during the early part of the term, and W. L. Ely, J. P., during the latter part.

T. L. Goheen, Sr., was appointed by the magistrates March 4, 1878, and continued till the following September, when the present incumbent, W. P. Lee, came into office.

County Sheriffs.—Thomas Ford, Enos Faughn, Peter W. Gardner, Joel Gilbert, Henry B. Williams, Moses Riley, Samuel Duncan and Philip Darnall occupied this responsible position in regular succession from June 7, 1842, to January 1861. During the period of the war it was filled more or less irregularly by William N. Peterson, who resigned and went into the Confederate service; Philander Palmer, A. A. Nelson, jailer, who acted as sheriff, James Story assisting; W. B. Ely and G. S. Jones. Subsequently it was held by H. M. Wade, T. M. Freeman, M. C. Rowland, A. A. Nelson, W. W. English and C. H. Starkes, the latter being the present incumbent.

Jailers.—John J. Averitt, Robert Clark, R. O. Morgan, C. E. Miller, N. B. Roach, A. A. Nelson, H. Johnston, Henry L. Minter, Thomas E. Barnes, J. R. Troutt, John M. Stilley, J. Q. Thompson, J. F. Brandon and J. T. Ozment have in succession held this important trust. Mr. Nelson served twice, once during the opening of the war and again from 1870 to 1874.

Surveyors.—Marquis Barnett, L. T. Barnett, his son and deputy, A. W. Thomas, J. G. Haydock, Thomas F. Harrison and O. T. Williams have been the successive incumbents. The first began in 1842. The last died in August, 1884, and no successor has yet been appointed.

Assessors.—Hugh Gilbert, J. C. Miller, Hugh Arant, T. T. Grubbs, D. D. Thompson, W. M. Jones, J. H. Flower, J. M. Helm, W. B. Jones, A. J. Starkes, T. L. Goheen, Sr., J. A. Clark and J. B. Fletcher.

Trustee of Jury Fund.—This trust has been held by Henry Hand, R. F. Stone, S. H. Starks, Moses Riley, J. W. Dycus, C. C. Coulter, J. O. Johnston, N. R. Reed and W. J. Wilson, present county clerk.

Members of the State Senate. — James Brien, 1846–50; Jesse C. Gilbert, 1871–75. From Marshall, Calloway and Trigg, Alfred Boyd, 1842–46. From Marshall and Calloway, Alfred Johnston, 1850.

House of Representatives.—Robert O. Morgan, 1851–53; James Brien, 1853–55, 1865–67; Wilia Waller, 1855–57, 1863–65; Thomas L. Goheen, Sr., 1859–61; Jesse C. Gilbert, 1861–63, expelled "because connected with the Confederate Army," December 21, 1861, and succeeded by Wilia Waller, 1862–63; Basil Holland, 1867–1869. From Marshall and Calloway, Alfred Johnston, 1845, 1846, 1847; W. M. Reed, J. W. Dycus, W. C. Holland.

The majesty of the law has been asserted but twice in the punishment of capital crime, the first time in the hanging of Chills, alias Achilles, slave of William Peay, for killing a slave belonging to Philander Palmer. Execution June 16, 1854. The second in the hanging of Samuel Gaines (white), July 13, 1866, for killing B. F. McNabb in March, 1865. He was to have been executed September 15, 1865, but, escaping from jail, was recaptured and ordered by Gov. Bramlette to be executed as above stated. With him as an accomplice was tried McDonald Hamilton, who was ordered to be executed. A new trial, however, resulted in sending him to the penitentiary for ten years.

The first teacher of any note was Hugh McCracken. A man named Walters was an early pedagogue; and the first man buried in the north part of the county. Alfred Johnston, son of Isaac Johnston, also followed this responsible calling for a time. Among the prominent teachers in the southern part of the county was William Thompson, who came from Graves County and taught a number of terms at the Liberty Meeting-house; Jefferson Grace and Joseph Burnett taught also in the same place. The latter was said to have been a good primary instructor, but became intoxicated at times. Subscription schools prevailed till the organization of the public school system, under which prominent teachers were R. E. Roland, R. W. Starks, Perry S. Pace and others.

Justus Shinn, John Pinner, Dr. Dill, J. K. Wilson, G. W. Irvin, Walker Strow and others were some of the early physicians. Several of these were located in the county-seat.

No class of people appreciate more fully the preached word than the early settlers of a country. Among the early Baptist preachers who came into the county were Henry Darnall, Absalom Copeland, James Bell, Hugh and Ambrose Gilbert. The last two, nephew and uncle, were the first preachers in the northern part of the county. Methodist circuit-riders first dispensed the Truth to the people at stated intervals; Morgan Williams preached at Wadesboro and vicinity while Rev. John Johnson, also a physician, ministered to the people further north. Calvin Philley represented the Presbyterians in the new field. The ministers of the Christian Church came at a later date, viz.: James Lindsey, Sr., J. F. Mecoy, James R. Jones and others.

The first jail was a log structure on the public square, and was erected about 1843 by John Hyatt and Dillon Ford. The second was a brick structure erected by Nathan Bowman, contractor, and Thomas McElrath, surety, in 1853–54, at a cost of $1,600. It stood on the site of the present jail. It was torn down and some of its materials were used in the construction of the present edifice, which was built in 1883, by Cosby & Landrum of Mayfield, at a cost of $5,224. D. A. McKinnon was architect.

The first court house was a log structure erected by Francis Clayton about 1843. It was sold to him in 1848 for $26. The second or present one was built in 1847 by Thomas McElrath, principal contractor, and Lewis Henderson, chief wood workman. The aggregate cost was about $6,000.

The first clerk's office was simply a wooden building and was sold in 1848 for $9.12½. The present office was erected in 1860 at a cost of $1,500.

No poor-house has ever been built, the indigent being let out to private parties who will keep them on the lowest terms.

Daniel Pace is perhaps the only soldier of the war of 1812 still living in the county. His history is given elsewhere.

Only five or six representatives of the Mexican war live at present within the county, viz.: Walter C. Watson, a farmer three miles west of Benton, was wounded and draws a pension; Charles Littlejohn ten miles north of Benton, William Reeves about six miles west, John Kern near Wadesboro and John M. Green near Brewer's Mill survive, but having received no wounds, are satisfied with the gratitude of the people. J. T. Stone has removed to Arkansas.

Marshall County, like its sisters, furnished troops for both sides during the war of the Rebellion. For the Confederate service two companies were organized, the first by Alfred Johnston, who became its captain, and the second by Crittenden Edwards. These two companies were attached to the Third Kentucky Infantry and served with Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston's army in the battle of Shiloh, where it suffered severely. They continued through the war. In these companies were the following officers by appointment or promotion: Reason Ratcliffe, captain; R. F. Stone of Benton, captain, killed at Shiloh. He was succeeded by Felix Staton as captain; John Morgan became first lieutenent; William Owen second lieutenant, and Harrison Hall became third lieutenant. Others entered the Confedernate service by enlisting in companies organized in other counties.

In 1861, from the State militia and other sources, a company of men was organized for the Union Army by Thomas B. Waller, now living at Gilbertsville. It was attached to the Twentieth Kentucky Infantry. At the organization he became captain of the company, and was finally promoted to be major, and still later, lieutenant-colonel. This regiment was captured by Gen. John H. Morgan at Lebanon, Ky., in July, 1863, and its prisoners compelled to run to Springfield, a distance of eleven miles, where they were paroled. Benjamin Rush Waller was a lieutenant in the same regiment. Maj. Wilia Waller, of Exchange, Marshall County, organized the First Battalion, Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry, consisting of Company C, Capt. J. H. Starks, composed of men from Marshall, Calloway and McCracken Counties, and Company D, Capt. Thomas Carter, composed of men from same counties, together with Tennessee refugees. Attached to it was a battalion of the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry, consisting of five companies under the command of Lieut.-Col. Henry, of Princeton. He being detached to command Fort Heiman, on the Tennessee River, the battalion was assigned to Maj. Waller. It consisted of Company A, recruited from Marshall County by Capt. Samuel Duncan, of Benton; Company B, Capt. Samuel Purcell, of Graves County, formed mainly from McCracken and Graves; Company C, Capt. Belt, formed in Livingston and Caldwell; Company D, Capt. Maxwell, of Princeton; and Company E, Capt. Lewis A. Hanson, of Graves. This command was organized at Paducah, and served from October, 1862, to October, 1863. After the expiration of twelve months' service, many of the men re-enlisted under Maj. Barnes in the Sixteenth Kentucky, the history of which is given under McCracken County.

Benton, the county seat, named in honor of Senator Thomas H. Benton, of Missouri, was incorporated January 11, 1845. It is near the geographical center of the county, being twenty-four miles from Paducah, and thirteen from Calvert City on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad. The land for the town site was furnished by Francis Clayton and John H. Bearden; thirty acres by the former and fifty by the latter. The first house erected after the location of the county seat, was the hotel by J. J. Averitt, since known as the Marshall House. Aver-itt's was the first family to locate, and their daughter, Iway Averitt, afterward married to Jack Walpole, was the first child born in the village. Her birth occurred May 14, 1843, and her death in Benton, February 12, 1865.

Others families, the Fletchers, Henry Hand, the Strows, located shortly afterward. The first physician was Dr. John Maxwell, who came about 1845 from Livingston County.

About 1849 a masonic lodge was established in the old court house by Reuben Rowland, Peter W. Gardner, George Miller and others. Afterward the lodge room was in the second story of the Union Meeting-house, where sessions were held till the charter was surrendered in 1882.

The Knights of Honor organized June 30, 1877, with Elias Barry, G. W. Brandon, J. F. Brandon, T. L. Goheen, Jr., W. A. Holland. M. C. Rowland, J. M. Stilley, D. G. Smith and W. J. Wilson as charter members. The lodge still lives.

There are three churches, Baptist, Methodist and Christian. The first and last meet in a union house. The second has a house of its own.

The Baptists were organized October 4, 1860, by Rev. D. M. Green with Mrs. Geraldine H. Wilson, Elizabeth Finley, E. Crow, Nancy Crow, Martha Thompson, Rachel Green, Martha Green, M. C. Rowland, Elizabeth Hanks and Lucinda Bowland as charter members.

The Methodist Church South was organized about 1849 with twelve charter members, embracing James Green, Elizabeth Green, George Green and others. The first house was built in 1880, at a cost of $1,500. Prior to that date sessions were held in the union house.

The Christian Church was organized in 1860 by Elder William Marshall Starkes, evangelist, and these charter members: —Brewer and wife, Jackson Barry and wife, W. D. Hunter and wife, Joseph Myers and others. It has been served by the following preachers: Elders W. M. Starkes, James Lindsey, J. F. Mecoy, W. L. Butler and J. W. Holsapple.

The officers at present are Elder W. A. Holland; deacons, T. D. Brown and T. F. Palmer. The membership is thirty-six.

The Marshall County Seminary, the nucleus of educational work in the county, is situated at Benton, having been located there February 3, 1868, by a board of trustees consisting of T. L. Goheen, Sr., W. C. Holland, J. H. Johnston, Josiah Wood, Samuel Mathis, C. Parker and J. W. Whitnell. The land vested in them for seminary purposes embraced nine quarter-sections, 1,440 acres, in Graves County. The portions sold thus far have yielded about $7,000. The seminary building is a two-story brick structure, 40x60, with four rooms and was erected in 1869–70, at a cost of $5,800. Its first principal was Prof. A. Pomeroy and his assistant, W. T. Shelton.

Benton is pleasantly situated on small hills among hills. It had a population in 1880 of 277. Its business is represented by two drug stores, five dry-goods stores, three groceries, one hotel, three tobacco houses, one grist and saw-mill, four physicians, four lawyers, and the usual number of county officials. Its newspaper is printed outside of the county, no press having ever been established in the county.

Birmingham, on the Tennessee River, was platted in February, 1853, on land of Thomas A. Grubbs, and incorporated February 27, 1860. Love's addition was made in 1858. The village had, in 1880, 224 inhabitants as against 322 in 1870. It contains two churches, two hotels, seven general stores, and two resident physicians.

Briensburg, named in honor of James Brien, was incorporated September 18, 1861. The plat of the village was made by J. G. Haydock, county surveyor, and consisted of seventeen blocks and other territory not laid off. It has four stores, two churches, a Methodist and a Christian; a schoolhouse, and had, in 1880, a population of sixty-seven.

Calvert City, in the north part of the county, on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad, was incorporated March 18, 1871, and laid out in September, 1872, with nineteen blocks and 133 lots; six streets east and west, each sixty feet wide. It has a hotel and several stores, and does a thriving business.

Gilbertsville, on the Tennessee River and Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad, was laid out in 1874 and named in honor of G. Gilbert.

The population of Marshall County in 1880 was 9,647; number of acres of land, 100,962; number of town lots, 340; assessed value of land, $834,821; value of town lots, $53,337; value of personal property, $383,305; total, $1,271.43. Number of horses, 1,366, valued at $69,384; number of mules, 1,007, valued at $64,902; number of sheep 5,428, valued at $5,592; number of hogs 14,306; number of cattle 828, valued at $8,146; 45 stores, worth $33,817; number of votes, white and colored, 1,906; children, six to twenty, 3,064; number pounds tobacco, 2,300,170; number bushels corn, 476,144; number bushels wheat, 67,515; number tons hay, 1,300. These figures represent the returns as made by the assessor in 1884.

Antiquities.—"Near Brewer's mill, in the southwest part of the county, are the remains of an Indian town. On a hill at the Byrd Griffith place, four miles northwest of Benton, are a mound and Indian burying ground, where stone vessels and implements, human remains and shells are found in abundance."*

Curiosities.—"A sink-hole, or lake (for it is filled with water), about sixty yards in diameter, is on a high hill, three miles south of Benton; its depth is not known; the water neither rises nor falls, and stands some fifty feet above the bed of the creek below."

Three miles from Calvert City "there is a mineral spring whose waters contain sulphureted hydrogen, carbonic acid gas, sulphate and chloride of lime, magnesia and iron."*

Number of marriage licenses issued in the county from the organization to April 15, 1885, is 3,274.

The first regular court session was held September, 1842, under an arbor in the public square.

Musters were held, in the olden times, about six times a year; company, four times; battalion, one; regimental, one.

The first corn was raised by Jonathan Grear, at the mouth of Jonathan's Creek, in 1818.

In August, 1843, an unsuccessful election was held to change the county seat from Benton to Briensburg, and again in August, 1876, to Birmingham.

Marshall County received a beautiful banner in 185–, for giving the largest Democratic majority of any county in the congressional district.

Sometime 1844–45, the horse-stealing gang of Alonzo Pennington had its headquarters about two miles from Benton. They were afterward captured, and Pennington was tried and executed at Hopkinsville for murder, May, 1846.

*Collins.

*Collins.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

BALLARD COUNTY.

PROF. JOHN W. ADAMS was born February 7, 1845, in Robertson County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood, and in 1879 removed to Hopkins County, Ky., where he remained until 1883, when he came to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, William S. Adams, a Baptist minister, also a native of Robertson County, was born in 1822. He is the son of Reuben Adams, who was born in North Carolina and died in 1870, at the age of seventy years. William S. was twice married: first to Mary E. (born in 1827, died in 1869), daughter of Benjamin Batts. Their offspring are our subject, Gus. H., William C., Thomas B., Josiah V. and Mary E. To his second marriage were born William H. and Gracie. Subject procured a good English education and has taught school for about ten years. On July 25, 1872, he married Miss Laura, daughter of William and Harriet (Bourland) McLean, of Madisonville, Ky. (born March 31, 1853), and to them have been born Wayland W. and Wade L. Subject was formerly successfully engaged as a tobacco factor, but is at present farming. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, and in politics is a Democrat.

BENJAMIN S. BAILEY was born in Christian County, Ky., February 21, 1851, and is the eldest of six children born to F. D. and E. J. (Fraser) Bailey, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively, of Scotch descent on the father's side; his grandparents were Hawcum Bailey and Benjamin F. Fraser, both farmers. Benjamin S. Bailey was reared on a farm, and attended the common schools when not engaged in the duties incident to farm life. In 1855, he came with his parents to the north part of Ballard County, where they engaged in farming. He lived with his parents till married, November, 1872 to Mary A. Walsh, of McCracken County; she is the daughter of Hiram and May A. (Blanks) Walsh, natives of Christian County, Ky., and Charlotte County, Va., respectively. This union has been blessed with the birth of six children (four living), viz.: Lozo, Clint, Hiram E. and Claude V. After his marriage, Mr. Bailey engaged in farming for nine years. He commenced the study of law, in 1881, with Bugg & Wilds, at Blandville, was admitted to the bar in August, 1881, by W. S. Bishop, and has been police judge at Blandville. He is a member of the K. of H. and cast his first presidential vote for H. Greeley, and voted the Democratic ticket ever since. He is a Presbyterian and his wife is a Baptist.

R. L. BILLINGTON was born August 1, 1840, in Bedford County, Tenn., and is the youngest of six children (four boys) born to Jared and Farraby (Wageworth) Billington, natives of Tennessee and Virginia, respectively, and son and daughter of Ezekiel Billington and Jason Wageworth, of English and Scotch origin. He was reared on a farm and attended school about three months in his lifetime. His father died January, 1853, in McCracken County; his mother died in Texas, in 1866, aged sixty-nine years. The family moved to McCracken County, in 1840, and located twelve miles west of Paducah. In 1855 R. L., with his mother, moved to Graves County, Ky., and in 1856 moved to Robertson County, Tex., where he was engaged in herding cattle till March, 1859, when he came to Ballard County, Ky., in the vicinity of Blandville, where he was engaged in farming. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company E, Seventh Regiment Tennessee Cavalry, under Capt. Nealey, William Jackson, colonel commanding. He took part in the battles of Nashville, Murfreesboro, Tenn., Sukatonica Bridge, Miss., Fort Pillow, Britton's Lane, Tenn., Island No. 10 (here his company escaped after surrender), Shiloh, Harrisburg, Miss., Corinth, Mitchell's Cross Roads, Holly Springs, and was at Vicksburg when it surrended, but escaped again; was at the fight at Franklin, and was in Forrest's command. He surrendered and took the oath in May, 1865. He returned to Ballard, was accused of being a captain of a guerrilla company, was arrested and imprisoned at Paducah, till July 2, 1865, but proved his innocence and was released. He was married July 11, 1865, to Miss Carolina Crawford, of McCracken County, Ky., native of Henry County, Tenn., and daughter of John and Fannie (Aaron) Crawford, natives of Tennessee and Virginia respectively. He had born to him three children: Ella Lee (deceased), Emma A. and Bedford C., and after marriage he engaged in farming. Mr. Billington is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and the K. of H. and he and wife are members of the Baptist Church. In 1882 he was elected jailer of Ballard County, which office he still holds.

REV. ROBERT F. BIRKHEAD was born in Nelson County, Ky., August 27, 1828, and is one of three living children born to the Rev. Jesse and Abigail (Peak) Birkhead, both natives of Washington County, Ky., and of Irish and English descent, respectively. Jesse Birkhead was married in his native county, where, and in Nelson County, he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1833 he came with his family to what is now Ballard County, and subsequently improved a farm, on which he resided several years, when he sold, and again bought wild land in the same neighborhood. Here he improved another farm. He continued to reside in the vicinity of Milburn until his death, January 29, 1877, in his eightieth year. Both himself and wife were from early life devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Soon after he came to western Kentucky, he was licensed to preach, and was one of the very earliest pioneers of Methodism in Jackson's Purchase. Although he was only a local minister, he traveled and preached almost constantly for more than forty years, his field of labor including all of the Purchase District in Kentucky, and extending from Paducah to Mill's Point, or Hickman. Father Birkhead was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. Rev. Robert F. Birkhead was employed on his father's farm until he was sixteen years old, after which he lived with a Mr. William Pile until he was twenty-one years old. He then taught and attended school for some two years. He then engaged in agricultural pursuits, and has been so employed ever since. He now owns a well improved farm near Arlington. Mr. Birkhead was married in February, 1853, to Mrs. Susan M. Pile, a native of Washington County, Ky. To this union were born two children—one son and one daughter—both of whom are living. Mrs. Susan M. departed this life December 2, 1855; she was a devoted and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. October 23, 1856, Mr. Birkhead married Miss Eleanor P. Mix, a native of Henry County, Tenn. One daughter has blessed this union. Mr. Birkhead and wife are, and have been from youth, devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which church he has been a local minister for the past ten years, and has had charge of a mission for four years of that time. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for more than thirty years, having filled various offices in the order, and was W. M. of his lodge for one year.

JUDGE WILLIAM S. BISHOP was born July 18, 1839, in Trigg County, Ky., and is the youngest of seven children born to Joseph and Elizabeth (Howard) Bishop, who were married in Cumberland County, Ky. The father died, while in the Confederate Army, in March, 1862, at Columbia, Ky.; the mother died about one week later. William S. was reared on a farm and received a common school education, then attended Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky. He taught five terms of school in Ballard and McCracken Counties, and then commenced the study of law in 1859, in his twentieth year, with Oscar Turner, then living in north Ballard, and who is now representing his district for the third term in United States Congress. Mr. Bishop enlisted, November 7, 1861, in Company F, Seventh Kentucky Confederate Infantry, under Capt. Sherrell, Col. Wickliffe commanding, and was in the battle at Corinth, Miss., Brazos Cross Roads, Baton Rouge and the bombardment of Port Hudson. He was captured on Big Black River just before the general surrender, and received a final parole in the spring of 1865, when he returned home and engaged in teaching, and then to the practice of law. He was admitted to the bar, in 1861, by Judge R. K. Williams and Judge Joseph M. Bigges, of Paducah, and was very successful in his practice. He was elected common pleas judge of First Kentucky Judicial District in 1879, for a term of six years. He was married, June 29, 1867, to Miss Mollie A. Hart, of McCracken County, Ky., a native of Tennessee, and a daughter of Samuel and Emeline (Leigh) Hart. This union has been blessed with four children: Henry L., Emma E., Willie R., Lee and Joseph. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop are members of the Methodist Episcopal and Baptist Churches, respectively, and he is a member of the I. O. O. F. He is the possessor of a good farm, and also a house and lot in Blandville. He is a self-made man, having started in life in humble circumstances, but by energy and perseverance has attained an honorable and enviable position in life. The father of our subject was a slave-holder, but since the war submits with grace to the new order of things.

H. G. BLACK, Ballard County, was born in December, 1812, in Cannonsburg, Penn., where he grew to manhood. His father was a native of Ireland, and during the Revolutionary war, in attempting to come to America, he was captured and imprisoned on board a British man-of-war, where he was retained for five years. He finally escaped on the island of Cuba, where the vessel touched for supplies, and remained concealed until the ship sailed. He then made his way to America, landed in Virginia, where he afterward married and went to Cannonsburg, Penn., and some years later removed to Ohio. H. G. Black (subject) received a good common school education in Pennsylvania, went to Ohio with his father's family, and in the fall of 1840 came to Kentucky, locating in Ballard County. Here he engaged in teaching and surveying. In 1842 he surveyed the land on which the town of Blandville stands; he held the office of county surveyor for upward of twenty years, and until he would have it no longer. He owns a farm of eighty acres two-and-a-half miles northeast of Bardwell in Blandville Precinct. He was married, in 1843, to Elizabeth Jones, of Kentucky, who died about the year 1867. They had twelve children, five of whom are now living—four sons and one daughter.

ALLNE W. BLANKS was born September 8, 1831, in Charlotte County, Va., removed with his parents in 1845, to Christian County, Ky., and in 1850 came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Allne W. Blanks, Sr., a Virginian, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died about 1848, aged seventy years. His grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Allne W., Sr., married Harriet Morris, who died about 1874, at the age of seventy-five years, and their offspring are: Richard, Mary (McCutcheon and Welch), Martha, Elizabeth, William, Sarah (Lane), Harriet (Lane), subject, Lucy (Terrell), James and Emily (Tisdall). Subject was married January 18, 1855, to Miss Rebecca, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Howard) Bishop, of Ballard County (born August 4, 1835), and to them have been born F. I. (Howle), Joseph A. and Mary B. Subject is a successful farmer, raising chiefly tobacco and corn. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, also a member of the Baptist Church and a Democrat.

DANIEL BODKIN, Jr., was born August 27, 1861, in Ballard County. He is a son of Daniel Bodkin, Sr., and Elizabeth J. (Bodkin) Bodkin. The father was born in Henry County, Ky. In 1856 he came to Ballard County and has since been extensively engaged in farming, stock-raising, milling and contracting, in which last capacity he furnished the lumber for the trestle work of the Illinois Central Railroad in this vicinity. He now owns over 3,000 acres of land and employs from ten to thirty hands, and is the most extensive farmer in Ballard County. Our subject assisted his father on the farm and in other pursuits until 1883, when he came to Bardwell, where he has since been engaged in the grocery and hardware business. He was married in 1881 to Mary Young, of Cleveland, Ohio.

W. H. BRADLY is one of the best farmers in Ballard County, was born December 22, 1849, in Somerset County, Md., and is the eldest of five children, born to L. M. and Ellen (Lynch) Bradly, natives of Somerset County, Md., and Sussex County, Del., respectively, of Irish descent. The grandparents of our subject were Jesse, who married Mar Taylor, and is the son of James Bradly, who was over one hundred years old when he died; and on the mother's side they were James and Pheba (Surmon) Lynch. Both the grandfathers were soldiers in the war of 1812, and both were sailors. The father of our subject was a ship builder, but finally located on a farm in Maryland. W. H. Bradly lived with his parents till twenty years of age, when he went to Indiana and engaged in the jewelry business in Troy for three years; later he went to Hawksville, Ky., where he was engaged in the art business. In this business he traveled through the different States for nine years. In the fall of 1879 he located in Ballard County, three miles northwest of Blandville, where he owns 150 acres. He was married in May, 1876, to Bell Wingo, of Graves County, Ky., a daughter of German and Sarah (Beedles) Wingo, natives of Virginia and of Irish origin. There were born by this marriage three children: Pearl, Lucien E. and Alice. Mr. Bradly and wife are both members of the Baptist Church and he is a Mason. He cast his first presidential vote for Tilden and Hendricks, in 1876.

WILLIAM M. BRADSHAW was born March 22, 1829, in Christian County, Ky. He is the seventh child of nine children born to Benjamin and Mary E. (Bradshaw) Bradshaw, natives of Jessamine County, Ky. The father was a soldier in the war of 1812. He represented his county in the legislature for several years, and was justice for twenty-five years. He was son of Benjamin Bradshaw. William M. Bradshaw was reared on a farm, and received a fair common school education. He lived with his parents till he was twenty-five years of age, when he married Miss Louisa Rawlins, of Christian County, Ky., daughter of Franklin and Amelia A. (Campbell) Rawlins, natives of Maryland and Todd County, Ky., respectively, and of English and Scotch-Irish descent. To this union were born four children: Benjamin F., Mary W., Robert E. and Manie. In 1859 Mr. B. moved to Ballard County, where he engaged in farming on the place where he now resides, and which had been purchased by his father. Mr. Bradshaw is the possessor of 300 acres of land in good condition, which he has improved mostly by his own efforts. He was elected constable two terms and acted as deputy sheriff two terms in Christian County; he was also deputy clerk of Ballard County for about twenty years. He was formerly a Mason, and he and wife are members of the Baptist Church.

SAMUEL BRAME was born in Mecklenburg County, Va., March 13, 1820. He is the eldest of seven children born to Henry and Sally (Hooton) Brame, natives of Virginia and of English descent. The grandparents, Samuel Brame and Samuel Hooton, were natives of Virginia. The father of our subject was a soldier in the war of 1812. Samuel was reared on a farm; he received a common school education and lived with his parents till he was twenty-two years old, when he engaged in farming for himself. He moved with his parents to Kentucky in a very early day, and settled in Christian County. In 1851 he moved to McCracken County and located five miles west of Paducah. In 1871 he located where he now resides on 150 acres of land, which he has accumulated by his own industry. Mr. Brame was married September 24, 1843, to Myra J. Wyatt, of Christian County, Ky., a daughter of Richard N. and Mary (Harrison) Wyatt. They had born to them by this marriage eleven children: Martha A., William T., Mary (Mrs. Thompson), Zachariah, Callie (now Frazier), George, Kate E., Elizabeth (now Hall), Louella, Edward B. and Andrew J. Mr. Brame and wife are Baptists. He is a Mason and votes the Democratic ticket.

PRESTON S. BROWN, Jr., was born October 12, 1840, in Todd County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1860 removed to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Preston S. Brown, Sr., born near Richmond, Va., in 1800, removed to Todd County in 1805, was a courier in the war of 1812, and is still living. He is the son of John Brown, a soldier of the war of 1812, who died in Macoupin County, Ill., in 1854, aged over ninety years. Preston S., Sr., was twice married, and by his first wife had born to him one son, Albert H. He afterward married Rosina, daughter of Jesse Smith, of Todd County; she died in 1879, aged sixty-three years; her children are subject, Elijah C. and Virginia F. (Lawson). Subject was favored with a good education, and is a reading man. He was married April 24, 1863, to Miss Ophelia, daughter of James M. and Ann (Brown) Tisdall, of Harrison County, born in 1844, and to them have been born Mollie E. (deceased), Jessie W., Ella (deceased), James P., Thomas J., Jennie, Lute, Lillie and Sam Oscar. Subject is a farmer owning 200 acres of good land; 108 on the home place in a high state of cultivation. He is a Mason, a K. of H. and a Democrat.

JAMES H. BUCHANAN, Esq., was born March 23, 1833, in Warren County, N. C., and in 1847 removed with his parents to Montgomery County, Tenn., then in 1849 to Christian County, Ky., and in 1858 to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, James Buchanan, a native of North Carolina, died in 1873, at the age of sixty-five years. He was the son of James, a Revolutionary soldier. Subject's mother, Martha T., daughter of Jones and Nancy (Reeves) Mabry, of North Carolina, died in 1870, aged sixty-three years. To her and husband were born: subject, Emily D. (Gee), and Susan R. (O'Donley). Our subject was married, November 30, 1854, to Miss Martha A., born October 15, 1838, daughter of James and Mary R. (Lee) O'Donley, of Christian County, and from this union sprang James H. (deceased), Leonard A., William W., Althea M. (Jeter), Marion L., Thaddeus E., Susan M., John E., Nettie B., R. C., Ernest and Allie. Subject is a farmer, owning 337 acres of land, 160 of which are in a high state of cultivation. He is very successful in growing fine tobacco, having received $1.25 per pound for that article. He has long been an elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics a Democrat.

JOHN W. BUGG was born May 31, 1833, in Todd County, Ky., was removed in infancy by his parents to Christian County, and in 1850, with his mother, came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Richard C. Bugg, a native of Sumner County, Tenn., was born in 1810, and died about 1838. He was the son of Zachariah Bugg. Richard G. espoused Prudence M. Chappell, of Sumner County; she died in 1865, and their offspring are, Ann R. (Rollings), Zachariah, Mary C. (Penn), subject and Robert D. Our subject obtained a fair education and is a reading man. He was married February 6, 1862, to Miss Mary E., daughter of James and Nancy (Brown) Tisdall, of Ballard County, born in 1838, and to them have been born Annie M., Mary and Dick. Subject was formerly engaged in milling, but is now a farmer, owning 126 acres of fine lands in a high state of cultiva tion. He is a Royal Arch Mason, a member of the Christian Church, and in politics a Democrat.

Z. M. BUGG, attorney at law, Ballard County, was born January 16, 1830, in Sumner County, Tenn. His grandfather, Zachariah Bugg, was a native of Halifax County, Va. He left that State in 1796, immigrating to Sumner County, Tenn., where he died in 1854, at an advanced age. Subject's father was Richard F. Bugg, a native of Tennessee. He immigrated to Kentucky in 1839, settling in Trigg County, where he died one year later at the age of thirty-four or thirty-five years. The mother, P. M. (Chappell) Bugg, died in 1872, aged seventy-eight years. They were the parents of five children, whose names are as follows: Ann R., Mary C., Z. W., John W. and Richard D. Subject remained with his mother until twenty years of age, when he commenced teaching in the common schools of Christian County, reading law in the meantime under the instruction of Judge Marshall of Ballard County. He was admitted to the bar in Blandville in 1856, and since that time has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession in Ballard and adjoining counties. He was married, in 1856, to Mary A., daughter of William S. and Lucy (Upshur) Jackson. To this union have been born eight children, four of whom are living: Lucy P. (wife of Isaac N. Coffee), Richard I., Zachariah W. and Alice. Mr. Bugg is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the I. O. O. F., and he and his wife are members of the Christian Church.

EDMUND S. CHENAULT was born June 29, 1839, in Ballard County, Ky., where he still resides. He is a son of Charles B. Chenault, a native of Virginia, who was born in 1802, and removed to Nelson County, Ky., in childhood, and to Ballard County in 1827, where he died in 1877. For fifty two years he was a useful Methodist minister. He espoused Mildred Hughs, of Nelson County, who died in 1873, aged seventy-five years. Their offspring are Eliza (Burrow), Catherine (Piner), Mary A. (Wright), Nancy (McDonald), John W., Marcus L., Sarah E. (Porter), subject and Martha W. (Fisher). In youth E. S. Chenault obtained an English education and is still a diligent reader. On October 1, 1858, he married Miss Martha A., daughter of William W. and Fanny (Edmunson) Parrott, of Ballard County, and from this union sprang Mildred F. (Mott), Mary W. (Shelton), John W. and Thomas J. (deceased). Mr. Chenault is a successful farmer, owning 160 acres of well improved land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is also a member of the Methodist Church.

COL. W. M. COFFEE, one of the leading prominent farmers and stock-raisers of Ballard County, Ky., was born August 22, 1823, in Maury County, Tenn.; he is the twelfth of fourteen children, seven boys and seven girls, born to Nathan and Elizabeth (Gilbreath) Coffee; his paternal grandparents were Chesley and Mary (Baldwin) Coffee; on his mother's side there were Hugh and Nancy (Cleveland) Gilbreath. His parents hailed originally from North Carolina, at an early day moved to Adair County, Ky., and in 1803 moved to Maury County, Tenn. The subject of our sketch was reared on a farm, entered Jackson College at Columbia, Tenn., in 1841, and graduated in the year 1845; began the study of law the same year of his graduation, reading in the office of Judge Gilchrist Porter in Bowling Green, Mo., and was admitted to the bar in 1847. In February, 1849, he moved to Blandville, Ballard Co., Ky., farmed and practiced his profession till 1853, in which year he was elected to the State legislature from the counties of McCracken and Ballard, after which he devoted his time and energies to farming and the mercantile business, which he followed till the year 1861; and when Ballard County was entitled to a separate representative he was nominated in June, 1861, by a Democratic convention, and was elected to the legislature without opposition. He resigned in October, 1861, and joined the Southern Confederacy. After the war was over he returned to his home in Ballard County, Ky., and engaged in farming and stock-raising, and established the first drug store in the county, at Blandville, which he has run with success, and by his energies and business qualifications has accumulated quite a handsome amount, as well as educating and graduating three of his sons in fine professions. He was married in February, 1849, to Betty Ann Oakley, of Ballard County, Ky.; she was born in Lincoln County, Mo., and was a daughter of C. A. and Susan (Grimes) Oakley. To this union were born eight children: Eugene A. (now dead), Isaac N. (druggist in Cairo, Ill.), Dr. W. O., Luella (now Neal), Sallie D. (now Straughn), Sid J. (druggist in Blandville, Ky.), Jeff Davis (farmer), and Carrie S. Subject and wife are members of the Christian Church, and he has been a member of the Masonic fraternity and the I. O. O. F. since his maturity. He owns over 1,000 acres of good land and quite a number of thoroughbred cattle.

S. B. COIL, Ballard County, was born in Pendleton County (now West) Virginia, on February 18, 1842, and is a son of Adam and Dorcas (Morrow) Coil. The father was of German descent, the mother of Irish. In 1848 the parents came to Kentucky, and first settled in Blandville, where the father resided a short time, and subsequently removed to a farm five miles distant. In 1854 he came to Pickett's District and settled near where our subject now resides. He erected a mill which he ran until his death, February 22, 1864. The mother died in 1871. Our subtect was the fifth of seven children, of whom there are now living Elizabeth Mercer, wife of I. E. Mercer, now in Texas; Rebecca, wife of T. H. Corbett, of Frankfort, Ky.; Florence, wife of William L. Garnett, of Louisville, and Samuel B. The last named was educated in the schools of Blandville. At the age of nineteen he began reading law with J. D. White, at Blandville, but after two years' experience he retired from the profession. He next came to the old home farm, and ran a grist-mill and steam distillery for two years. He then farmed for two years and next went to Blandville, where he traded in stock for three years. He then purchased a farm one mile east of Blandville, and there resided twelve years. From there he came to his present farm, where he now owns 200 acres, of which about seventy-five are in cultivation. He also pays some attention to stock-raising, and in connection with William McCawley, is running a saw-mill. Mr. Coil was married on September 4, 1865, to Miss Margaret M. Thomas, a daughter of William and Catherine (Vallandingham) Thomas, natives of this State. Five children blessed this union, of whom three are now living: Kittie V., James W. and Charles E. This lady died in 1877. On December 8, 1878, Mr. Coil married Miss Susan M. Thomas, a sister of his first wife. This union has resulted in three living children, viz.: Mary E., Norton O. and Bruria L. Mr. Coil has been identified with the Masonic fraternity, and he is also a member of Eureka Lodge, No. 728, K. of H. He has served six years as a constable and two years as deputy sheriff.

ISAAC E. CONLEY, an enterprising young man of Ballard County, was born March 13, 1853, in Giles County, Va., and is the fourth of five children born to Russell F. and Charlotte T. (Lambert) Conley, natives of Giles County, Va., and of Irish and English origin, respectively. The father was a son of John and Cloa (French) Conley, of Irish and English descent, respectively; the mother was a daughter of Joseph G. and Susanna (Hutzel) Lambert, of English and German descent. Isaac E. Conley was reared on a farm and lived with his parents till seventeen years of age; his mother died in 1871, his father in 1875. Our subject attended Newbern Academy, taught school about ten years in Virginia and Kentucky, and located in Ballard County, Hinkleville, in 1872, where he taught four terms of school, his last school being at Milburn. In 1880 he commenced the study of law and was admitted to the bar in July, 1882, by Judges Bullitt and Thomas C. Marshall. He located in Wickliffe, in March, 1883; about six months edited the Wickliffe Tribune, established by T. H. Thurman in 1881; sold out in the fall of 1883, and was defeated for county clerk by one or two votes. He was married January 2, 1884, to Emma A. McKinney, of Milburn. Ky., daughter of Candour and Martha (McKinney) McKinney. Mr. Conley is a member of the Christian Church and of the K. of H. He cast his first presidential vote for Hancock and English in 1880, and still votes the Democratic ticket.

JACOB CORBETT, SR. For more than half a century the name which introduces this sketch has been a familiar one in western Kentucky; in fact but few, if any, are now living in the territiory known as the "Purchase," who are more extensively known than is "Uncle Jake Corbett," as he is familiarly called. He is the son of Joshua Corbett, formerly of Southampton County, Va., where Jacob was born, August 26, 1806. When he was a small boy his parents died, thus leaving the molding of his character to the hands of other and less sympathizing friends. At the age of thirteen, however, he was placed in a store at Murfreesboro, N. C., where he continued as store boy and salesman about nine years, thereby acquiring the fundamental ideas of practical business, which, in the absence of a thorough literary education was an important schooling, While there, and in the year 1825, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Sumner; who was a native of North Carolina, and whose portrait, together with the subject of this sketch, appears elsewhere in this work. In the month of March, 1828, Mr. Corbett, with his young wife, set out for the then wilds of western Kentucky, landing in what is now Hickman County, on the second day of the following month. For several months thereafter, Mr. Corbett turned his attention to the pursuit of farming. His public life began with his appointment to the office of deputy sheriff of Hickman County, which was terminated by his appointment to the office of deputy clerk of the county and circuit courts of Hickman County. Upon the organization of the county of Ballard, Mr. Corbett was made the clerk of the county court, serving in that capacity until the year 1872, with the exception of the interval from 1862 to 1866, this exception being the result of the civil war. It may be added that during twelve years of his long official career, he performed also the duties of clerk of the circuit court for Ballard County. However interesting it would be, space will not permit entering into the details that make up the life history of this gentleman. Suffice it to say, that he has been an important factor in the shaping of many important interests in the Jackson Purchase, and the molding of his hands will be seen long after those hands have been folded in death. His esteemed wife died in Blandville, Ky., on December 2, 1872, leaving a family of seven children, viz.: Thomas; Emily, wife of Charles Marshall; Mary, wife of R. Dudley; Nancy A., wife of Lafayette Rich; Frances, wife of Dr. James H. Terrell; William L., and Josephine, wife of James Ezell.

FREDERICK CRICE, farmer and stock-raiser, was born in Union County, Ill., March 29, 1827, and is the first of seven children, four (boys) born to William and Nancy (Boren) Crice, natives of Kentucky and Tennessee respectively, and of Dutch descent. The father was as on of Frederick and Catherine (Kimbel) Crice, who were reared in Pennsylvania. He was a farmer and fine horse dealer. The mother of Frederick is still living and is seventy-eight years old. The parents came to the Purchase in 1830, and settled within a mile of where Frederick now lives, in North Ballard. About 1833, the father moved his family to Arkansas, where he died in 1837, when the family returned to Ballard County, where they have lived ever since. August 5, 1850, Frederick Crice married Mary Ann Crice of Ballard County, a daughter of John and Nellie (McCrary) Crice, natives of Pennsylvania and North Carolina, and respectively of German and Scotch-Irish origin. He had born to him by this marriage four children. Two lived to be grown: Nancy E. (who married Jacob Keen and who died), and J. W., also deceased. Mrs. Crice died May 14, 1863, and on July 17, 1864, Mr. Crice married Melissa J. Garner, of Ballard County, daughter of Ephraim and Eunice (Crice) Garner, natives of Illinois and Kentucky respectively. To this union were born nine children, seven now living: Benjamin, Thomas L., James H., Frederick G., Sarah C., Charles D. and Butler P. After the family returned from Arkansas, in 1837, they purchased 200 acres of land (where Mr. Moore now lives) and added till they owned about 400 acres. Mr. Crice is now a possessor of 800 acres of land in good condition, earned by his own industry and perseverance, and was the owner of five negroes before the war. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Taylor; in 1856 he voted for James Buchanan, and has voted as a Democrat ever since. Mrs. Crice is a Baptist.

FREDERICK W. CRICE was born March 25, 1835, in Ballard County. He is the tenth of twelve children, born to John and Nellie (McCrary) Crice, natives of Pennsylvania and North Carolina. He was reared on a farm and remained with his parents, who were among the first settlers of the Purchase, till he became of age; then he engaged in farming for himself, at which he has continued ever since. He moved to where he now lives, in December, 1855, on 189 acres of land. He was married November 8, 1855, to Mary S. Swearingen, of Ballard County, a native of Shelby County, Ky., and daughter of Harmon and Ann (Coleman) Swearingen, natives of Pennsylvania and Virginia, and of Dutch and French descent respectively. To Mr. and Mrs. Crice were born fifteen children: John H., Van A., Benjamin F. (deceased), Nellie A., Mary F., Willie U., Sarah J., Robert F., Joseph P. (deceased), Charles S., Susan B., Thomas B., Mike, George W. and Clifton. Mr. Crice cast his first presidential vote for James Buchanan. He was appointed postmaster of Oscar postoffice in October, 1881.

J. F. CRICE was born January 24, 1829, in Ballard County, Ky., and is the second of seven children (four boys) born to William and Nancy (Boren) Crice, natives of Pennsylvania. His grandparents were Frederick and Catherine (Kimel) Crice, natives of Pennsylvania, and Stephen and Rebecca (Latham) Boren, German and English descent respectively. William Crice came to the Purchase about 1828; his widow is still living, aged seventy-seven years. The early advantages of J. F. Crice for an education were poor. His teachers for a while were his mother and Z. W. Bugg. At the age of twenty-two years, he engaged in farming on his own responsibilities and has been very successful. He turned his attention mostly to stock-raising, and now owns 500 acres of land in good condition. He was married August 15, 1850, to Sarah J. Stovall, of Ballard County, daughter of John and Patience (Sprouse) Stovall, of Irish and German descent. There have been born to this marriage five children: Ellen R. (now Kimbrough), Mary P. (now Brown), John C. B., Margaret J. and Bell. Mrs. Crice died January 7, 1873, a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Crice was next married in July, 1874, to Sarah L. Stovall, of Ballard County, Ky., born in Todd County, and daughter of George W. and Ruth (Penn) Stovall, natives of Virginia. To this marriage were born four children: William G., Anna Lee, Lucy P. and Thomas K. Mrs. Crice is a member of the Baptist Church and Mr. Crice is a Mason. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Scott, but now votes the Democratic ticket. Mr. Crice was the owner of three negroes and was dealing in horses and mules considerably, when the war broke out. He lost, by the army, fifteen head of horses and sold the Federals three.

DR. HUGH T. CROUCH, a rising young physician with a bright future before him, was born September 10, 1856, in Ballard County, Ky., where he has always resided. His father, Richard J. Crouch, a native of Christian County, Ky., came to Ballard County in 1842 and died in 1870, aged about forty-eight years. Richard J. espoused Martha, daughter of Hugh Massie, of Christian County, Ky., and to them were born Martha E. (Wray), subject, Richard B., Mary E., Susie F. and William H. Subject was favored in youth with a good English education. He was married May 27, 1884, to Miss Mollie U., daughter of George W. and Esther A. (Peck) Willingham, of Ballard County, Ky. She was born October 17, 1864. In 1879 subject commenced the study of medicine with Dr. D. P. Juett, of Blandville, Ky., and in 1880 attended lectures at the Missouri Medical College, St. Louis, where he graduated in 1882. He is now successfully engaged in the practice of his chosen profession in his native county.

STOKELEY R. CULVER, Esq., was born September 10, 1840, in Fentress County, Tenn., and in 1866 came to Ballard County, Ky., where he at present resides. His father, John Culver, a native of Bedford County, Tenn., was a volunteer in the war of 1812, served for many years as magistrate, and died in 1878 at the age of eighty-two years. He was twice married, and the offspring of his first union are Carroll, Salley (Stinson), Nancy (Hancock), John and Jesse. His second wife was Nancy, daughter of Christopher Choate, of Tennessee (born about 1806, now living), and from this union sprang subject, Sarah J. (Livingston), L. D., Thomas P. (killed in battle) and Jacob P. In youth subject received a common school education, and is a reading man. He was married October 31, 1867, to Miss Sarah E., daughter of John and Nancy (Brame) Cary, of McCracken County, and to them have been born Edna G., Albert S., John S., Joseph D., Kittie B. and Nannie J. Subject served eight years as magistrate. He is a farmer, owning 160 acres of good land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Baptist and a Democrat.

JOHN DAVIS was born January 8, 1835, in Graves County, Ky., and is the fourth of six children born to John F. and Pernicia (Perkins) Davis, natives of Livingston County, Ky., and of Irish and Dutch descent respectively. He was reared on a farm and attended the common school but very little; he was quite small when his mother died; his father was one of the first settlers of the Purchase and died in May, 1883, aged eighty-four. When our subject was but seven years old he went to Logan County, Ky., where he lived with his uncle (S. N. Davis) till he was nineteen years old. When he returned to Ballard County, he settled in the neighborhood of where he now resides and where he engaged in farming and trading. He has been very successful in life, having started with little or no means, but by his industry and perseverance has established a home of 1,400 acres of land, 600 or 700 of which are improved. He has always sought a quiet life, and never sought to obtain notoriety by dabbling in politics. He was married February 8, 1862, to Sarah Ashbrook, of Ballard County, a daughter of James and Margaret Ashbrook, of Irish origin. He has had born to him by this union nine children: James W., Silas M., Florence, Sallie B., John, Rob Lee, Fannie May, Clada E. and Mandy I.; the last two are twins. Subject and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is a Mason. He cast his first presidential vote for Stephen A. Douglas in 1860, and is still a Democrat.

L. M. DAVIS, farmer, was born June 1, 1830, in Rutherford County, Tenn., and is the third of eight children (three boys and five girls) born to Eaton and Deborah (Moore) Davis, natives of Grandville County, N. C., and Rutherford County, Tenn., respectively. His grandparents were Abel and Mary (Andrews) Davis, of Irish descent, and George and Sarah (Wright) Moore, of English descent. L. M. Davis was principally reared on a farm. He taught school one term and was married January 23, 1854, to Miss Sarah E. Gannaway, of Bedford County, Tenn., a daughter of John and Mary (Robertson) Gannaway, natives of Virginia. He had born to him by this union nine children: Robert A., Lucy E., Emerson E., Archibald S., Herbert R., Levander C., Christopher P., Sarah D. and Thomas E. He takes an interest in giving his children a good education. His wife died September 6, 1879, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Davis was next married on March 16, 1880, to Martha B. Magruder, of Ballard County, Ky., a daughter of Barrett D. and Emily (Burkhead) Magruder, of Scotch descent and a native of Kentucky. Mr. Davis, with his family, settled near Arlington in 1863; in 1878, he came to where he now resides on 140 acres of land in good condition, and is now engaged in raising blooded stock. He is a Mason, was a Granger and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Scott. He is now a Republican.

ISAAC T. DEAN, was born April 23, 1835, in Jessamine County, Ky., and in 1836 was brought by his parents to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, Jefferson H. Dean, was also a native of Jessamine County, born in 1810, and died in 1860. Jefferson H. married Catherine, daughter of Peter Nave, of Jessamine County (born in 1814, and died in 1848), and from this union sprang Marietta (Shelbourne), Martha J. (Goad), subject, William D., Sarah K. (Coon), George A. (Kelley), Eliza A. (Gill), and Mahala N. (Womble). By the second marriage were born John J., James H., George F. and Ida M. On May 11, 1859, subject was married to Miss Eudora T. A., daughter of Lee and Salley (Brumfield) Trice, of Ballard County, (born August 9, 1840), and to them have been born Lee Bell, William D. (deceased), and Jeff T. After arriving at man's estate, our subject followed for ten years the vocation of carpenter and builder, in which he was successful. He is now engaged in farming, having 160 acres of good land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member in good standing of the I. O. O. F., and also of the K. of H. In politics he is a Democrat.

DR. ELI J. DESHA was born October 13, 1838, in Madison County, Mo., where he was reared until 1858, when he came to Ballard County, Ky., where he now resides. His father, Eli D. Desha, a native of Louisiana, died in 1874 at the age of sixty-three years. He was the son of Robert C. Desha, a soldier in La Fayette's army, who remained in the United States after the American Revolution and died at St. Michael, leaving a wife, two sons and a daughter, the daughter marrying Sterling Smith, of New Madrid. Eli D. married Eva, daughter of Henry La Lee, of Virginia. She is now living at the age of ninety years. Their offspring are Elizabeth (Ravelle), Eliza (Ellison), subject and Eva J. Subject in youth obtained a good education at Fredericktown, and from choice pursued school-teaching as an occupation and medicine as a profession. He was married December 7, 1862, to Miss Angie, daughter of James M. and Elizabeth (Owen) Childress, of McCracken County, (born in 1844), and to them have been born Hillen G., Arthur T. (deceased), Owen L., Iona LeRoy, De La S., Angie E., Roxie V., Lucius C., Orville U. and Julia E. Arthur T., a bright youth of seventeen years, of unusual mental capacity and of great promise, died January 23, 1882, lamented by all who knew him. Our subject owns a farm at Weldon Park, on which he resides, and has devoted much of his time and means to agriculture as a science. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics affiliates with the Democratic party, which has ever been the political record of his ancestry.

JOSEPH C. DUPOYSTER, Ballard County, one of the leading citizens of Wickliffe, was born February 25, 1838, in Pulaski County, Ill., and is the first of seven children—two now living—born to Thomas and Elizabeth (Echols) Dupoyster, natives of Sumner County, Tenn., and Georgia, respectively. His father was a son of Thomas Dupoyster, a native of North Carolina, who settled in Johnson County, Ill., in 1832; he was a Methodist minister, and married a Miss Veech, also a native of North Carolina, of French and English, German and English extraction respectively. Subject's mother was a daughter of Jesse and Sally (Elliott) Echols, of Welsh and Irish origin, and natives of Virginia and Georgia, respectively. Our subject's grandfather Echols and brother were settlers of Union County, Ill., about 1812, when Illinois was a territory, and were sent to the first legislature ever held in the State. His parents settled in Illinois in 1833; his grandfather was a colonel in the Revolution, and after the war a part of his family were scalped by the Indians. The father of our subject was in the Black Hawk war, and was also a boatman on the Mississippi River. He was also a member of the Thirty-first Illinois Infantry. under Col. John A. Logan, during the late war. Joseph C., with his parents, in 1849 moved to Dyersburg, Tenn., thence to Hot Springs, Ark., where they remained one year; thence to Mississippi County, Mo., where subject's father was engaged in farming, merchandising and keeping wood yard. In 1858 they moved to Ballard County and settled at Fort Jefferson, where the father had purchased 1,000 acres of timber. He died in 1863, aged fifty-one years, his wife having met her death by drowning in the Ohio River, at Cairo, on her return from a visit to her son, who was a prisoner of war at Camp Douglas, Chicago, in 1862. Joseph C. Dupoyster has always been engaged in earning a living on a farm, and in the mercantile and milling business up to the present day. He and his brother, Benjamin S., are the only living members of the family, and are the possessors of 4,000 acres of land in Ballard County, nearly all timber and subject also owns an interest in a saw-mill; his possessions he has accumulated by his own industry. He is also the owner of Island No. 1. On this island he was first married, October 30, 1850, to Miss Maud J. Whitaker, of Ballard, native of Muhlenburg County, and this union was blessed with the birth of one child, now dead. His wife died January 22, 1862, and February 25, 1863, he married Rebecca S. Scott, a native of Scott County, Ky., and daughter of Noah and Lucy (Ford) Turk, natives of Kentucky, of Irish and English origin; had born to them three children, Dalva D., Ruelva A. (deceased), and Joseph B. Mr. Dupoyster is a Mason. and assisted in laying out Wickliffe. Mr. D.'s youngest brother, Thomas Carlin Dupoyster, was in the Confederate Army from May, 1861, until he was killed in September, 1864.

JAMES A. EARNHARDT was born January 9, 1836, in Davidson County, N. C., where he grew to manhood, and in 1876 removed to Ballard County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, William T. Earnhardt, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1815, and died in 1843. He was the son of George. William T. married Bithiah Reid, of North Carolina (born in 1815, and died in 1878), and to them were born, subject, Lucy E. G. (Huckibee), and Julia A. (Paimer). Subject's educational advantages were good, and for about ten years he was engaged in teaching school in North Carolina, South Carolina and Kentucky. On November 9, 1855, he married Miss Catherine, daughter of John R. and Elizabeth (Nash) Howell, of North Carolina, and from this union sprang William J., Adolphus (deceased), Carolina A. (Shebourne), James A. and George D. About ten years after the death of his first wife Mr. Earnhardt married, January 17, 1875, Miss Elvira, daughter of Alfred and Elvira (Reed) Shelby, of Ballard County (born in 1838). Mr. Earnhardt has for ten years been engaged in milling, both sawing and grinding, at which he has been successful. He also farms 120 acres of good land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Methodist and a Democrat.

HON. WILLIAM J. EDRINGTON, near Arlington, was born in what is now Ballard County, Ky., January 4, 1831, and is the only living child of Benjamin F. and Ann E. (Milburn) Edrington, the former a native of Woodford, and the latter of Jefferson County, Ky. They were of Welsh and English descent respectively. Benjamin F. Edrington, about the age of fifteen, in 1820, came with his parents to what is now Ballard County but then was a part of Hickman County. Here his father, Joseph Edrington, bought several hundred acres of military lands at Puntney's Bend, on the Mississippi River, where he commenced to improve a farm. After a few years he sold this place and bought military land near Columbus, in Hickman County, upon which he erected a rude log cabin and improved a farm. Soon after, he removed to Columbus, where he resided until his death. After attaining his majority, Benjamin F. Edrington bought wild land near the present site of Milburn, where he improved a farm. Some five or six years later he sold out and removed to Wolf Island, Hickman Co., Ky., where he again purchased wild land and improved a farm. In the spring of 1849, he removed to Mississippi County, Mo., where his death occurred in November of the same year, in his forty-fourth year. William J. Edrington was employed on his father's farm until the latter's death. He then farmed with his uncle in Mississippi County, Mo., and attended school for some three years. He then engaged in the saw and grist-mill business, in company with Mr. C. R. Pile, in Ballard County, Ky., continuing until the winter of 1857, when he sold the mill and bought a farm of 350 acres some three miles east of Arlington. Here Mr. Edrington has since been engaged extensively in agricultural pursuits, and in breeding fine stock—Shorthorn cattle, Cotswold sheep, and Chester-White hogs—and now owns one of the best herds of Shorthorns in the county. He represented Ballard County in the lower house of the State legislature for three terms, from 1875 to 1879 and from 1881 to 1883. He was married, July 7, 1854, to Miss Mary E. Grundy, a native of Ballard County, Ky. Twelve children have blessed their union, of whom four sons and seven daughters are yet living. Mrs. Edrington is a devoted and consistent member of the Christian Church. Mr. Edrington belongs to no church, but is a member of both the Blue Lodge and Chapter in the Masonic fraternity, and also of the K. of H. In politics he is a Democrat.

THOMAS EDWARD, farmer, was born June 8, 1833, in Graves County, Ky., and is the third of five children born to John and Sally (Nowell) Edwards, natives of North Carolina and Trigg County, Ky., respectively. The father was of German and Irish origin, was a soldier of 1812, and one of the first settlers of Graves County, having settled there about 1820, and having entered 160 acres of land which he improved, receiving his supplies at Hickman, on the Mississippi River. Thomas Edwards enlisted in Company A, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Gid Brinford, captain, Faulkner, colonel commanding, in 1862. He was wounded in the hip in the first skirmish, which disabled him from any further service. He returned home in about four months and engaged at farming. In March, 1869, he moved with his family to a farm three miles northwest of Blandville; later sold and moved on the adjoining place on which he now resides, and which contains 125 acres in good condition, embellished with good buildings. He was married in March, 1852, to Sarah Clapp, of Graves County, Ky., a daughter of William and Stacy (Pryor) Clapp. His wife died in November, 1852, and he was next married in October, 1856, to Mrs. Emily Oldham, of Hickman County, and born in Clinton; she was a daughter of A. P. and Susan Hall, of Irish descent. To this union were born three children, two living, Sallie A. (now Wotwood) and John P. Mr. Edwards and wife were formerly members of the Grange. He cast his first presidential vote for Buchanan in 1856, and is still a Democrat.

W. A. EDWARDS, Ballard County, was born June 4, 1853, in Green County, Ky.; he is a son of W. A. and Elizabeth (Minton) Edwards, both of whom were born in the same State and county. The father, at the age of eighteen, secured a position in Bowling Green as deputy county clerk, remaining in this capacity several years, after which he moved to Lewis County, Mo., where he was engaged in farming, and raising and dealing in live stock about fifteen years. He then returned to Green County, Ky., and was married to the mother of our subject. This lady died in 1857, aged forty-five. At the age of nineteen our subject went to Evansville, Ind.; he was clerk there a short time and then moved to Missouri, where he was employed at railroading and telegraphing about one year. He then removed to Kansas, remaining about eight months, after which he went to Mississippi and worked at various points on the Illinois Central Railroad till 1876, when he came to Bardwell, where he has since been agent of this road at this place. He was married October 28, 1880, to Miss Lena R., daughter of the late Dr. N. C. Thomas, of Ballard County; this union has been blessed with one daughter.

McD. FERGUSON was born May 16, 1858, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is the first of three children (two boys) born to John D. and Zilpha (Vaughan) Ferguson, natives of Massachusetts and Montgomery County, Tenn., respectively, and of Scotch and English origin. Zilpha Ferguson is the daughter of Granderson and Elizabeth (Nevel) Vaughan. They came to Ballard County in an early day, and settled on the farm, on part of which G. Northington now lives, and where they had purchased about 2,000 acres in all. The grandfather Vaughan came to this place in an early day, where he lived till his wife died about 1866, when he moved to Louisville, where he engaged in the tobacco business till his death, in January, 1879. The business is still run in the name of G. Vaughan & Co. He owned a number of negroes before the war, and was the architect of his own fortune. John D. Ferguson came to Ballard County about 1859, and settled on 550 acres in the north part, which he improved; a few years ago he moved to McCracken County, near Paducah. McD. Ferguson was reared on a farm, received a good common school education and taught one term of school. He commenced the study of law in 1879, attended a course of lectures at Louisville, Ky., and has studied with Judge Marshall since. He is now farming and living on about 600 acres owned by his mother. He cast his first presidential vote for Hancock and English.

MATTHIAS H. FISHER was born November 3, 1835, in White County, Tenn., and in 1844 was brought by his parents to Ballard County, Ky., where he still retains his residence. His father, John Fisher, a native of White County, Tenn., was born in 1811 and died in 1878. He was the son of William Fisher, of North Carolina. John espoused Narcissa, daughter of Matthias Hutson, of Tennessee (born in 1814 and still living), and from this union sprang William B., subject, John M., James, Myra A. (Jennings), George W., Thomas E., Alfred C., Norben T., Mary (Terry), Fountain P. and Reed. In youth subject received only a common school education, but has since greatly improved himself by reading standard books. He takes an active interest in the advancement of the country. On December 31, 1858, he was married to Miss Martha W., daughter of Rev. Charles B. and Mildred (Hughs) Chenault, of Ballard County, Ky., (born July 28, 1844), and to them have been born Mary C. (Mosby), Edna A. (Humphrey) and Mildred B. Mr. Fisher is a farmer, having 250 acres of good land well cultivated. He is an honored member of the A. F. & A. M., and also of the K. of H. In religion he adheres to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics affiliates with the Republican party.

WILLIAM B. FISHER, Ballard County, was born June 3, 1833, in White County, Tenn. He is the first of twelve children (ten boys) born to John and Narcissa (Hutson) Fisher, natives of White County, Tenn.; the father is a son of William and Nancy (Chisam) Fisher; the mother a daughter of Matthias and Sarah (Noles) Hutson, farmers. The elder Fisher is of German, and Noles of Irish descent. Matthias Hutson was in the battle of New Orleans. In 1812 the Fisher family came to and settled in South Ballard, where the father purchased and improved a farm, and here died July, 1878, aged sixty-six years. William B. Fisher lived with his parents, till married, December 2, 1852, to Sarah L. McDannel, of Ballard County, a native of Owen County, Ky., and daughter of Henry and Mary (Murphy) McDannel, natives of Virginia, and of Scotch-Irish descent. There were born to this union twelve children: John H., Enoch F., Elizabeth A. (now Jackson), William L., James D., Mary N., George L., Thomas G., Robert F., Susan B., Maudie and Lessa (dead). In 1867 Mr. Fisher moved to and settled in Wilson County, Kan., where he purchased 440 acres of land and farmed, but sold out and returned to Ballard County in 1875, and settled where he now resides, in South Ballard. He has been constable of his district for two terms. He is the possessor of 368 acres of land in good condition; is a Mason, and he and wife were charter members of the Grange. He cast his first presidential vote for Fillmore, in 1856, but has ever since been a Democrat.

JAMES FISHER, county clerk, Ballard County, is a native of White County, Tenn., and was born September 28, 1840. His parents, John and Narcissa (Hutson) Fisher, were Tennesseans also. They settled in the southern part of Ballard County, where the father died in 1878, aged sixty-six years. The mother is still living. They were the parents of twelve children: W. B., M. H., J. M. (deceased), James (subject), M. A. (deceased), G. W., T. E. (deceased), A. C., M. J., N. T., F. P. and Reed. James Fisher worked on the home farm until twenty-one years of age, when he entered the Confederate service, enlisting in the Twenty-second Regiment, Tennessee Infantry, with which he remained one year. He was then transferred to the Third Kentucky, and served with that regiment until the close of the war in 1865. Among the battles in which his regiment was engaged were the following: Belmont, Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, Parker's Cross Roads, Brice's Cross Roads, near Guntown, Miss., and Harrisburg, where he lost his left arm. At the close of the war he attended school one year, and then commenced teaching, in which profession he achieved very flattering success. He purchased a tract of woodland in Ballard County shortly after the war, and almost unaided has cleared a beautiful farm doing all the chopping and heavy work with his one arm. On the 18th of July, 1869, he was married to Nannie J., daughter of Eber and Clarissa (Jennings) Phillips, of Alabama. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher have four children: George, Dora, Ora B. and Idyl M. In 1870

Mr. Fisher was elected to the office of tax assessor, which position he filled for eight years. He was elected county clerk in August, 1882, and holds that office at the present time. He is a member of the K. of H., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and votes with the Democratic party.

J. R. FLACK was born May 5, 1837, in Marshall County, Miss., and is the sixth of the nine children (three boys and six girls) of James and Lucy (Jolly) Flack, natives of Todd County, Ky., and Weakley County, Tenn., respectively. His grandfather, Elisha Flack, was of Scotch-Irish descent, and his grandfather, on his mother's side, was Jesse Jolly. The grandparents were both farmers. James Flack was captain of a militia company, and died when subject was but six years old; his widow died about 1850. After his mother's death, J. R. Flack went to live with his brother-in-law, with whom he made his home till July, 1856, and then commenced life for himself by taking jobs and farming. In March, 1851, he moved to Prairie County, Ark. In 1856 he returned to Marshall County, Miss., and in September, 1859, moved back to Prairie County, Ark. He enlisted in August, 1861, in Company B, under Capt. Crarry and J. E. Glenn, colonel commanding—an Arkansas Confederate regiment. He was in the battles of Cotton Plant, Ark., Elkhorn, Pea Ridge, Helena, Ark., Little Rock, Springfield, Mo., and Duvall's Bluff. He went into service as an orderly, and was promoted to a captaincy before the war closed. He was under Gens. T. C. Hineman, Holmes and Price. He surrendered at Little Rock, in April, 1865, and was thrown into prison. While in confinement he became emaciated and very weak, and would have died but for the efforts of John McDonald, of the Third Michigan Cavalry, who procured his release. He was discharged and permitted to go home, and to this gentleman he is thankful for his existence to-day. He next went to Todd County, Ky., where he was engaged in farming one year; was one year engaged in distilling, and was also engaged one year in visiting distilleries and putting on yeast to make whisky. In December, 1868, he came to Ballard County, where he has been engaged in farming ever since. He acted as deputy sheriff three months in 1881. The past two years he has been land agent for non-residents, and is the owner of 128 acres of land in North Ballard. He was married January 8, 1858, to Beatrice Simms, of Marshall County, Miss., and a daughter of James Simms, a native of Virginia and of Irish descent. He had born to him by this union one child, Walter R. On October 4, 1866, our subject married Miss Mary F. Pollock, of Todd County, Ky., a daughter of S. P. and Mary J. (Addams) Pollock, natives of Todd County. The Addamses were of German descent, and among the first settlers of Todd County. To this union eight children were born: James S., Mary L., Nannie J., Rufus P., Wiley M., William D., Mattie A. and Thomas J. Mr. Flack and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Mason, and cast his first presidential vote for John C. Breckinridge in 1860. He still votes with the Democrats.

BEN FLINT was born March 1, 1854, in Milburn, Ballard County, Ky., and is the second and only child living born to Dr. John and Elizabeth A. (Young) Flint, natives of Kentucky, and of German descent, and was but two years old when his father died. Ben Flint, father of Dr. John Flint, came to the Purchase about the year 1828, and settled in Ballard County, where he purchased and improved about 300 acres of land. Our subject was reared on a farm and worked by the month when he became old enough, and on shares till 1882, when he was made deputy county clerk, which position he now holds. In the meantime, however, he was engaged as traveling salesman for Terrell, Reeves & Co., of Paducah, for one year, and was also deputy sheriff in 1874 and 1878. He takes great pride in his duties, and makes an efficient officer. He was married December 20, 1883, to Miss Mary O. Turk, of Ballard County, Ky., a daughter of Noah and Lucy (Ford) Turk. Our subject cast his first presidential vote for Samuel J. Tilden in 1876, and still votes the Democratic ticket.

FRANK FRANCE, Ballard County, was born March 15, 1842. He is the first of four children born to William H. and Lucinda (Richardson) France. His father was married four times, and had two children by his first wife, four by his second marriage, three by his third, but none by his fourth wife. Frank was reared in Evansville, Ind., and Henderson County, Ky. He received his education at Evansville, Ind., and at the age of fourteen years was engaged at painting; afterward he ran as fireman; afterward as engineer on the Evansville & Crawfordsville, Terre Haute, Alton & St. Louis and Missouri Pacific Railroads. He enlisted in July, 1861, in Company G, Twenty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, under Thomas Johnson, as captain, and A. P. Hovey, colonel commanding. He took part in the battle of Shiloh and was discharged in the winter of 1862-63; he returned to Evansville, Ind., where he engaged in running an engine on a railway; he re-enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Forty-third Indiana Infantry, was commissioned second, then as first lieutenant in the summer of 1865. In the winter of 1866–67 he went to Mobile, Ala., and thence to Memphis, Tenn., where he engaged as painter for the Memphis branch of the Louisville & Nashville Railway one year; thence he went on a farm in Graves and Ballard Counties four years; then engaged in mercantile business in Turner, Ballard County, for six years. In 1883 he moved to Wickliffe, where he engaged in the livery and undertaking business. In June, 1884, he established the Journal at Wickliffe, starting with a circulation of 800. He was married June 21, 1869, to O. E. Nance, of Graves County, native of Trigg County, and daughter of W. S. and D. A. Knight, natives of Virginia and Christian County, Ky., respectively. Had born six children: Fannie I., W. H. S. (deceased), Merrit W., Frank L., Nora E. and Hamer A. Mrs. France is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. France is a Master Mason.

CAPT. NICHOLAS FRECH, was born February 24, 1819, in Bavaria; came with his parents, in 1834, to the United States, and settled in Cincinnati, where he remained three years; then lived in Evansville eighteen months; then went to Memphis, where, in 1861, he entered the army, and served until 1863. In 1869 he came to Ballard County, where he at present resides. His father, George Frech, was born in 1796 and died at the residence of our subject in 1874. George married Mary Spoller (who died in 1858), and left as offspring: subject, Mary (Fox), Catherine (Glendkamp) and Mollie (Ringwald). Capt. Frech, like most Germans, received a good education. In 1847 he married Miss Dinah, daughter of William Oka, of Memphis, Tenn., and to them have been born Amelia (Riddicks), Josephine (Burgess), Louisa and August H. Subject is a successful farmer, owning 450 acres of valuable land in a high state of cultivation. He is an Odd Fellow, a member of the Christian Church, and a Democrat.

OLINTHUS M. GARRETT was born June 22, 1842, in Hardin County, Ky.; was taken in infancy by his parents to McCracken County, where he grew to manhood, and in 1876 came to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, Elder Thomas L. Garrett, a native of Prince Edward County, Va., died in 1856, aged fifty four years. His wife was Keturah B. Smith, of Virginia; she died in 1857, aged fifty-two years, and their offspring are Ann J. (Cook), James R., Leander S., Carrie B. (Mahony), Marietta H. (Cooksey), Alfonsa K., Rockwood G., subject, Thomas L., Jr., and Keturah (Green). On March 14, 1867, subject was married to Miss Florence, daughter of Capt. Robert and Elizabeth (Pell), McConnell, of Paducah, born in 1850, died in 1874, and from this union sprang Horace (deceased), Maxwell and Lida. Subject was next married October 25, 1876, to Mrs. Mary E. Rutherford, daughter of Thompson D. and Elizabeth Williams, of Christian County, and to them have been born Carrie L., Harry, Olinthus M., Jr., and James R. Mrs. Garrett's children by her first husband are Eddie M. and Joseph T. Mr. Garrett was for twenty years a mason and brickmaker, and is now a farmer, owning 160 acres of good land in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the Christian Church, also of the K. of H., and a Democrat.

W. M. GEORGE was born in Milburn, Ballard County, Ky., on December 5, 1836, and is a son of Reuben and Indiana (Gray) George. The father was born in Henry County, Ky., on March 6, 1802. His parents, Edward and Mary (Thomas) George, came from Orange County, Va., to Kentucky in a very early day. Edward George came to Ballard County, in March 1834, accompanied by his family and settled within one mile of the present village of Milburn. While a resident of Henry County he was a representative in the legislature from Henry and Owen Counties for many years. Soon after his arrival here, he was elected to the legislature from Ballard County, but died before taking his seat in December, 1836. The father of our subject inherited his father's farm and is yet living in this district at an advanced age. For upward of thirty years, he was one of the magistrates of the Milburn District, but was compelled finally to refuse a re-election on account of advancing years. The mother of our subject died in October, 1879. W. M. George was the third of five children, of whom two are still living, viz.: Thomas J. and William M. The latter's schooling was received in the village of Milburn. He worked on the home farm, until he was about twenty-five, and then learned the trade of brick-mason, which he followed until 1879. He was then elected magistrate of his district and is still serving in that position. He was a Federal soldier in the late war, having enlisted on December 12, 1863, in Company E, of the Thirtieth Kentucky Mounted Infantry, under Col. Alexander, and served until April, 1865.

JOHN F. GHOLSON, Ballard County, was born April 10, 1821, in Scott County, Ky., and came with his parents, in 1831, to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, James J. Gholson, a native of Garrard County, Ky., born in 1796, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1854. He was the son of William Gholson, and espoused Sarah, daughter of Hutchins Parker, of Scott County, and this union was favored with the birth of Ann P. (Piper), subject, Elvira (Earle), Marean M., James E., Thomas F., Delilah (Jett), Survilla J. (Atherton) and Richard. On December 16, 1847, John F. Gholson was married to Miss Rebecca, daughter of Jeremiah and Martha A. (Doyle) Hays, of McCracken County (born in 1824), and to them have been born William E., Lloyd T., Ferdinand F., John C. and Richard L. Our subject is a farmer, owning 850 acres of fine land in good condition and in a high state of cultivation. He is an active member of the Baptist Church, of which he has been for thirty years a deacon, and in politics affiliates with the Democratic party.

THOMAS L. GLENN was born February 2, 1847, in Ballard County, Ky., and is the fourth of six children born to Tyre and Barzilla J. (Lawrence) Glenn, natives of North Carolina. The father was a son of James and Jane Glenn, of Scotch-Irish origin, was a farmer, and died about 1850. Thomas L. lived on a farm till about five years old, when, with his mother, he moved to Evansville, Ind., where they lived about four years. Thence they moved to Cairo, Ill., where they remained till 1862. In February of the same year the mother died. Thomas then commenced the struggles of life for himself by selling papers in the Federal Army, making Cairo his headquarters. In February, 1863, he located at Holy Springs, Miss., where he enlisted in Company F, Second Kentucky Confederate Cavalry, under Capt. Nat Lee, Gen. John H. Morgan's command, and took part in the battles at Wytheville, Va., and Mount Sterling, Ky.; here our subject was wounded in the right shoulder, was captured and was imprisoned at Lexington, Ky. His wound did not heal for four years, and has crippled him for life. In September, 1864, he took the parole oath and returned to Ballard County. He attended school at Providence Church and Milburn till 1866, when he commenced teaching; he next sold goods at Columbus and Milburn when he again entered the schoolroom, taught for three years, and then entered a store as salesman for one year. In 1874, he was elected clerk of Ballard County, and in 1878, was re-elected; in 1883, he was engaged in running a trading car from New Orleans to Cairo, Ill., selling fruits, vegetables, etc., over three divisions of the Illinois Central Railway; in April, 1884, he engaged with Hamilton & Clarke, wholesale notion firm, as traveling salesman. He now owns two farms of 270 acres in Ballard County, about one-half improved, also a good house and lot in Blandville. He married L. I. Stephens, of Ballard County, March 17, 1870. She is the daughter of Isaac and Sarah (Wilson) Stephens, natives of Kentucky. This union has been blessed with the birth of four children: Thomas I., Ivy L., Francis J. and Willie T. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and he is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H., K. and L. of H. He cast his first presidential vote for Seymour and Blair, in 1868, and is still a Democrat.

T. B. GREENE (deceased) was born in Harrodsburg, Mercer County, Ky., May 6, 1809, and was a son of James and Sallie (Hart) Greene. The parents were both born near Richmond, Va., and came to Kentucky some time prior to the Revolution. The father was a soldier in that conflict, going out in a company that was raised in Kentucky. He fought in the regiment commanded by his redoubtable uncle, Nathaniel Greene. Subject was educated in Mercer County. There he was reared on a farm and subsequently turned his attention to stock raising and trading, driving herds from upper Kentucky to Charleston, S. C. About 1838, he was elected sheriff and served about eight years. In 1846 he moved to Barren County and farmed for eight years. He then went to Davis County and settled on a farm near Owensborough, resided there two years, and then moved to Columbus, Ky. In 1861, he came to Milburn and opened a hotel, which he managed until his death March 29, 1884. For eight years he was also mail contractor from Wadesborough to Columbus. He also farmed to some extent. At present his widow, assisted by her family, are carrying on the hotel. Subject was a lifelong member of the Christian Church, and for many years was an elder in that denomination. Mr. Greene was married in 1830 to Miss Nancy Higby. The result of this union was six children: Charles E., in Owensborough, Ky.; James R., in Hickman; Aria A., wife of Dr. G. W. Hevrin, of Missouri; Keziah A., wife of Thomas Winn of Hickman County, Ky., and Charity E., wife of Dr. F. M. Trevathan of Union City, Tenn. Mrs. Greene died in 1843, and subject was next married, in 1846, to Miss America N. Dickinson, daughter of William and Catherine (Hall) Dickinson, natives of Pennsylvania. The second Mrs. Greene was born in Barren County, Ky., in 1823, and is the mother of four children, two of whom are now living: W. H. and T. R.

W. H. GREENE was born February 18, 1847, in Barren County, Ky. His schooling was obtained mainly in the Milburn District. He began life by buying staves for the European market. He next railroaded in Texas for two years, and then began merchandising in Union City, Tenn. In 1879 he began handling and buying staves, and now makes annual trips to New Orleans. He was married February 1, 1879, to Miss Sallie B. Stone, daughter of George W. and Ellen Stone of this county.

P. H. GUPTON was born April 5, 1851, in Christian County, Ky., and is the eldest of six children born to Granville and Emily J. (Bondurant) Gupton, natives of Kentucky and Virginia, and of Irish and French descent respectively. The father is a son of Fenton Gupton, who was a farmer and boatman. P. H. Gupton was reared on a farm, and attended the common schools when not engaged in farm duties. He came with his parents in 1864 to South Ballard, where his father purchased 225 acres of land, which he improved. Our subject lived with his parents until he became of age, when he commenced life for himself at farming, and purchased 117 acres of land. He has since added till he now owns 340 acres, all in good condition. In 1880 he was elected sheriff of Ballard County, and in 1882 re-elected. He is a member of the K. of H., and the K. & L. of H. He has made life a success, having started with $100 only. He was married November 20, 1883, to Mattie D. Cooper, of Tazewell County, Ill., and daughter of Thomas Cooper.

G. W. C. HAGGARD was born in Robertson County, Tenn., August 19, 1833, and is the fifth of six children (three boys and three girls) born to Holman and Lucinda (McIntosh) Haggard, natives of Tennessee and of Irish descent. His grandfathers were James Haggard and Nimrod McIntosh, the latter a soldier of the Revolution and a farmer. Our subject was reared on a farm, and was about eight years old at the time of his mother's death. His father afterward married Mrs. Elizabeth Holman, and had two children by this marriage; his second wife had one child by her former husband. The subject of this sketch lived with his grandparents for four years after his mother's death, but returned to his father's house on his second marriage, and there lived till he became of age, when he started in life for himself at farming. He moved with his parents to Todd County, Ky., about 1842, and lived there till 1860, when he moved with D. Perkins to Ballard County; worked three years, returned to Todd and farmed till 1870, and then came back to Ballard County. In 1873 he purchased the farm on which he now resides. It first consisted of thirteen acres, to which he has added thirty-seven more. He also owns another farm of 175 acres, all in good condition. He has made what he has by his own industry and economy, having received about $30 only from his mother's estate, when he became of age. He was married, February 11, 1866, to Miss Olivia T. Miller, of Ballard County, a daughter of William A. and Eliza A. (Shrader) Miller, natives of Spencer County, Ky., and of Irish descent. To this union have been born three children: George W., Charles E. (deceased) and Lillie Maud. Mr. and Mrs. Haggard are Presbyterians, and he was formerly a Granger. He cast his first presidential vote for Buchanan, and still votes the Democratic ticket.

CHARLES M. HALL, an old settler and a leading farmer and fine stock-breeder, was born March 4, 1822, where Paducah now stands. His father was on his way to the Purchase from the Green River country, when a storm stopped them at Paducah. The father of our subject raised one crop near Paducah and then returned to Mulenburgh County, Ky., where he remained till about 1830; he then returned to the Purchase and settled in Ballard County. The grandfathers of our subject were William Hall and Charles Morgan, of English and Irish descent, and were both in the Revolution. The parents of our subject were Adam and Eda A. (Morgan) Hall, with whom he lived till he was twenty-five years old, when he commenced business for himself, running a wood-yard, three miles below Cairo for eighteen months: he afterward engaged in farming, cutting cord wood and piloting flat-boats down the river to New Orleans. He commenced in life without a dollar; about 1850, he purchased his first farm of 145 acres at $3 per acre, which he improved and has added to till he owns 700 acres, but giving to his children has reduced its area. He was the owner of three negroes when the war broke out. The father, Adam Hall, rented lands while in the Purchase, till he moved to Missouri, in 1837, where he purchased 366 acres of land and resided till his death, when Charles M.

A O Harkless

W H Harkless

brought his mother back to Ballard County, where they have since lived, Mr. Hall having had the care of the family after his father's death. C. M. Hall was married March 4, 1856, to Mrs. Mary Hall, widow of B. Hall; she is the daughter of Jerman J. and Ann T. Beadles, natives of Virginia, and of English descent. They came to Graves County in 1830. By this union Mr. and Mrs. Hall have had born to them eight children: Ann E. (now Elliott), Nettie (now Melton), Jerman A. (deceased), Theophilus A. (deceased), James K., Charles M., William A. and Lewis W. He and wife are members of the Baptist Church. He is a Mason and has been trustee of schools for twenty years. He cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk, and has voted the Democratic ticket ever since.

DAVID HALL was born December 20, 1832, in Ballard County, Ky., and is the son of Adam and Eda A. (Morgan) Hall, natives of Virginia and of English and Irish descent. The father was a keel and flat-boatman on the Mississippi River, trading in pork and salt, but when steamboats came into existence quit his boating. He was born October 27, 1792, and died in Missouri, January, 1849. Subject's mother was born January 5, 1801, and died February 25, 1874. David Hall enlisted in Company A, Seventh Kentucky Cavalry (Confederate), in the spring of 1864, under Joseph Logan as captain. He took part in the battles of Gun Town, Brazos Cross Roads or Oldtown, and returned home about September, 1864, and engaged in farming. He lost about $900 worth in stock, tobacco, etc., during the war, but is now the possessor of 254 acres of land in good condition, one-half mile north of Blandville. He started in life for himself when twenty-three years old, but had lived in Missouri four years prior to the death of his father. He was married February 15, 1872, to Martha W. Elsey, of Ballard County, a daughter of John M. and Virinda (McDonald) Elsey. She bore him five children: William W., Robert B. (deceased), Mary V., Jackson (deceased), and Mattie E., and died November 11, 1882, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Hall next married Mary E. Belt, on June 14, 1883. She is the daughter of Osborne and Louisa (Johnson) Belt, natives of Scott County, Ky., and of English descent. By this union one child has been born, David A. Mr. Hall and wife are members of the Baptist Church. He is a Mason, and was formerly a Granger.

WILLIAM E. HALL, Ballard County, was born June 20, 1823, in Henry County, Ky., and is a son of John and Altha (Porter) Hall, both born in Virginia. In 1827, they moved to Hickman County, Ky., and located at Mills' Point; two years later the mother died at this place, when subject was taken by his grandfather, Eli Porter, on horseback again to Henry County; they remained there until the spring of 1831, at which time the family came to Hickman, now Ballard County, and settled in the neighborhood of Arlington. Young Hall was reared on a farm, and at the age of eighteen, entered a store as clerk at Cape Girardeau, Mo., where he remained for three years. He then returned to this county and purchased 100 acres of land, and from time to time, as his means would permit, he added other lands owning at one time as high as 545 acres, part of which he has since disposed of; he now owns about 200 acres well improved, adjoining Arlington, also several houses and lots in town; he originally owned the land on which the town of Arlington is built. Mr. Hall has held the office of constable, also clerk and judge of election. He was married in 1848, in Henry County, to Elizabeth Hall of that county. This union has been blessed with seven children, five of whom are living: Rev. J. N. Hall, now residing in Fulton, Ky., is the eldest son; he has charge of four churches in that vicinity; he also assists in editing the Baptist Gleaner; Jo. G., the fourth son, also lives in Fulton, and is in the employ of the railroad company; Thomas P., now engaged in farming in Ballard County; George C., now attending school in Arlington; Mary A., now the wife of A. J. Bailey, engaged in farming in Arlington Precinct. Mr. Hall and family are consistent and exemplary members of the Baptist Church, and for the past thirty years he has been a deacon. There were but two improved farms in this vicinity at the time of Mr. Hall's first coming here in 1831.

JOHN O. HARKLESS was born September 17, 1832, in Ballard County, Ky., and is the fourth of five children (two boys), born to Daniel J. and Ann C. (Goldoon) Harkless, of Irish and English origin. The grandfather on the mother's side was William Goldoon. Subjects father was born in Ohio; his mother in Virginia. The father came to Ballard County in the fall of 1821, and settled five miles east of Milburn, where he entered four sections of land in different tracts, it being military land, but lost all in a suit to hold. In January, 1844, he settled one mile north of Blandville, where he died in 1848 with cholera. He was born in 1801. John O. Harkless continued to live with his mother till 1860, when he commenced the struggle of life for himself at farming. His education he procured by his own industry and perseverance at home; the schools being held in log cabins and the teachers of a very inferior grade. He had purchased, in 1858, 200 acres of land, where he now resides, one-half mile west of Blandville, where he and brother now own 1,400 acres in good condition. They also own 2,200 acres of land in other parts of the county. These brothers have made their fortunes by their own industry and perseverance, except about 260 acres left from their father's estate. The brothers were engaged in railroad construction for about five years on the Mississippi Central, Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railway, Memphis & Kansas City Railway. Their principal business through life, however, was raising all kinds of stock, mostly mules and cattle. They were the owners of several negroes before the war. The mother of our subject died in 1879, aged eighty-seven years, and both parents were Baptists. John O. Harkless was married October 2, 1860, to Miss Sarah Nichols of McCracken County, a daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Wadlington) Nichols, natives of Caldwell County, Ky., and had born to him by this union six children: Mary J. (now Shearin), Nannie B., Sarah B., Willie M., John R. and Jessie J. Mr. Harkless and wife are members of the Baptist Church and he is a member of the I. O. O. F. The brothers had the only mill in the Purchase that was not burned by troops during the war.

WILLIAM J. HARKLESS, a brother of the above, was born December 26, 1826, in Ballard County, and is the secondchild, and received a limited common school education. His father once raised a crop with the hoe, his last horse having been killed by buffalo gnats or flies. William J. lived with his parents till married in July, 1855, to Mrs. Mary Gholson, of Missouri, who bore him three children (deceased), and died in April, 1860. William Harkless was next married May 30, 1882, to Mrs. B. P. Ross, who was born in Grandville County, N. C., and is a daughter of W. R. and Mattie (Peoples) Haygood, natives of Grandville County, N. C. To this union was born one child, Nannie B. Mrs. Harkless had two children by her former husband, one living, Edwin Ross. Mr. and Mrs. Harkless are members of the Baptist and Christian Churches, respectively. Mr. Harkless is a member of the I. O. O. F. He began for himself at the age of twenty-one in partnership with his brother.

W. D. HARRISON was born October 9, 1844, in Christian County, Ky., and is the fourth of nine children, seven boys and two girls (two boys and one girl now living), born to Fayette and Harrie (Bradshaw) Harrison. The grandparents, Robert and Sarah (Davis) Harrison, were reared in Virginia and were of Scotch descent. The former was a farmer and miller, and came to Christian County about the year 1800. The father of our subject was born in Christian County about 1814. W. D. Harrison was reared on a farm and received a good English education. He had been in attendance at Russellville College about eight months when the war broke out, when he returned and attended school near home. In 1856 he moved with his parents to McCracken County, Ky., and settled in the southwestern part, where he lived till 1880, when he moved to where he now resides, in Ballard County, on 283 acres of land in North Ballard, where his father had purchased 1,000 acres before coming to the Purchase, with a view of settling on it. Our subject lived with his parents till he was about twenty-four years old, when he want to Paducah, where he was engaged for six years as salesman by W. T. Overstreet & Co.; he then returned to the home farm, where he remained till he came to his present place. He was married June 19, 1879, to Miss Mallie E. Hopson of Paducah, daughter of George and Nellie (Enders) Hopson. Her father was a native of Trigg County, Ky. Mr. Harrison had born to him by this union one child, Mary Harrison. He and wife are Presbyterians, and our subject cast his first presidential vote for H. Seymour in 1868.

DAVID HARP (deceased) was born on May 1, 1813, in Fayette County, Ky. He was a son of Conrad and Catherine (Bower) Harp. The parents were probably natives of Kentucky, but of Dutch descent. Subject was reared on a farm, and resided in Fayette County until 1860, when he came to the Purchase and settled in Ballard County, near Columbus. There he resided a short time and then came to Ballard County, and settled on the farm of about 160 acres, now occupied by his widow, with about eighty acres in cultivation. There he resided until his death, July 19, 1881. Mr. Harp was married on November 14, 1837, to Miss Nancy Stone, a daughter of Jacob and Patsey (Carson) Stone. The father was probably a native of Maryland, and came to Kentucky in a very early day. Mrs. Harp was born in Fayette County, on May 23, 1817, and bore her husband twelve children, of whom ten are now living, viz.: Ellen, wife of Samuel Todd, of Hickman County;

Henry, in Mt. Eden, Ky.; J. W., Nancy J., wife of John Curtsinger; Charles C.; Elizabeth, wife of Lee Summers; Addie, wife of James Wells, of Hickman County; Maggie; Jacob, and Mamie, wife, Samuel Wilson. At present Mrs. Harp, assisted by her son, is carrying on the home farm. She and her family are members of the Christian Church.

CHARLES C. HARP was born in Fayette County, Ky., June 22, 1848, is a son of David and Nancy (Stone) Harp, and is the sixth of a family of twelve children, of whom ten are now living. His schooling was obtained in Fayette and Woodford Counties. At the age of eighteen he began to learn the carpenter trade, serving an apprenticeship at Milburn and Paducah. He returned to Milburn, followed the trade until 1881, and then embarked in the milling business with R. G. Kirkpatrick. These gentlemen purchased the Milburn flour and saw-mill from Sanford & McKinney, and are still running it. The mill is at present valued at about $4,000 and is doing a good business. Mr. Harp was married April 4, 1870, to Miss Ella B. New, a daughter of Greenberry M., and Catherine (Wright) New. The father was born in Grant County, Ky. His father, William D. New, was also a native of that county, but the grandparents were natives of North Carolina, and were of English and Scotch descent. G. M. New came to the Purchase in an early day, and settled in Graves County. He subsequently moved to Ballard County, where he died in 1860. Mrs. Harp was born in this county, and became the mother of five children, four of whom are now living: Fred L., Clarence H., Minnie P. and Charlie B. Mr. Harp is a member of the Christian Church, Mrs. Harp of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Subject has been identified with the I. O. O. F. fraternity and is a member of the Milburn Lodge K. of H. He has also served as trustee of Milburn.

F. M. HAYS, Ballard County, was born in Gibson County, Tenn., January 1, 1853, and is a son of Jessee J. and Hepsy M. (Buller) Hays. The father was born in Wake County, N. C., November 11, 1822. The mother was born in Gibson County, Tenn., April 14, 1828. Both are still living near Bradford, Tenn. Subject was the fifth of twelve children, of whom ten, five sons and five daughters, are still living. He was brought up on a farm, until he was about twenty years of age. He went to Greene County, Ark., and worked on a farm. He remained there about twelve months. He did not have much chance for acquiring an education. He then came to Graves County, Ky., where he attended school; went to Hickman County, Ky., and attended school there, and then went to Milburn, Ballard County, and attended school there. About 1875 he began teaching school in Graves County; taught two terms, and subsequently taught in Hickman County, Ky., three terms, and near Trenton, Tenn., one term. In February, 1879, he began merchandising at Bradford, Tenn. He remained there for about eighteen months, and then came to Milburn, where he has since been in business, and now carries a stock of about $2,500. He was married, November 27, 1879, to Miss M. B. Courtney, a daughter of Walter H. and Julia A. (Gourd) Courtney. Two children, Minnie Pearl and William Walter, have blessed this union. He has served as school trustee of Milburn District, Ballard County, and is a member of the Milburn Masonic Lodge, No. 170, and Milburn Lodge, No. 1,989, K. of H., and Abe Lincoln Mutual Aid Society of Cairo. Mrs. Hays is a member of the Baptist Church.

JOHN C. HEARN was born June 23, 1836, in Todd County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1869 came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, William Hearn, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1808, served as sheriff of Todd County, Ky., and died in 1868. He was the son of Joseph Hearn, a soldier in the war of 1812. William married Elizabeth, daughter of Asher and Mary (Green) Shelton, of Todd County, and to them were born Cinthelia A. (Simons), Emerilice (Adams), Belretta J. (Shelton), subject, Mary E. and William G. In youth subject obtained a fair education, and is still fond of reading current literature. He was married, December 11, 1861, to Miss Maria F., daughter of Henry Harris, of Greenville, Ky. She was born November 14, 1840, and died July 14, 1865, in Greenville, Ill. To them one son, William Henry, was born October 5, 1863. Subject next married, December 18, 1876, Miss Mary J., daughter of Kemp Malory, of Todd County. She was born March 25, 1837, and died February 14, 1880. On September 11, 1881, he married Miss Lucy L., daughter of Rev. Mark Senter, of Ballard County. She was born November 15, 1850, and died December 15, 1882. Subject is a farmer having 350 acres of land in a high state of cultivation. In politics he is identified with the Democratic party.

WILLIAM H. HEATH was born June 29, 1842, in Crittenden County, Ky., and in 1849 was brought by his parents to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father, William D. Heath, a native of Georgia, was born in 1809, and is still living. He is the son of Riland Heath, of North Carolina, a soldier in the war of 1812, who died about 1862, nearly eighty years of age. William D. married Eliza Husbands, who is still living. Their offspring are Josephine (Etherton and Tankersley), Miranda (Alcock), Andrew J., subject, Sarah A. (Smith), James G., Robert R. and Lorenzo D. Subject obtained a fair education in youth, and is a constant reader of books and papers. He was married May 29, 1873, to Miss Mary J., daughter of Samuel and Nancy (Crenshaw) Senter, of Sumner County, Tenn. She was born July 2, 1848. This union has been blessed by the birth of two children, viz.: Susie and Drurie Jackson. Subject is a farmer owning 340 acres of good land in fine condition. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics a Democrat.

WILLIAM J. HENDERSON was born January 1, 1848, on the place where he now resides, in Ballard County, Ky. His father, Thomas Henderson, a native of Caroline County, Va., died in 1871, aged about seventy-two years. Thomas' widow, nee Martha Dillon, of Howard County, Va., was born in 1811 and is still living. Their offspring are: John E., Sallie F. (Bishop), Lucy A. (Petrie), Ellen (Penn), Josephine (Ousley), subject, Mary F. (Puckett), Franklin P and Laura B. Subject in youth procured a good English education and is a reading man. On the 25th of December, 1882, he was married to Miss Callie A., daughter of Jacob N. and Mary T. (Adams) Bondurant, of Ballard County, and the result of this union has been the birth of one daughter, Martha Thomas. Our subject is a farmer having 256 acres of good land in fine condition and in a high state of cultivation. He is an active member of the Methodist Church, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

THOMAS L. HILL was born October 21, 1847, in Bardstown, Nelson Co., Ky. He is the ninth of ten children born to James and Elizabeth (Medley) Hill, natives of Nelson County and Hardin County, Ky., respectively, and of Irish descent. The grandfather was Joseph Hill, a farmer, born and reared in Maryland. The grandfather on the mother's side was John Medley, a farmer, born in Virginia. They were among the early settlers of Kentucky. Thomas L. was reared on a farm and received a good common school education. He moved with his parents to Danville, Ind., in February, 1864, where his father died while engaged in the practice of medicine. Our subject returned to Nelson County, in the fall of 1865, where he engaged in farming. In 1868 he moved to Spencer County, Ky. In the fall of 1869 he returned to Danville, Ind. In 1869 he moved to Ballard County, Ky. He located where he now resides in 1881, on fifty acres of good land in good condition. He was elected justice in 1880 for three years. On November 21, 1872, he married Georgia Robinson, of McCracken County, Ky. She was born in Butler County, Ky., a daughter of William and Mary (Sublett) Robinson, natives of Virginia and Kentucky respectively. To this union were born six children: Ernest R., Frances P., Mary B., Bertha, Thomas M., Ella T. Mr. Hill and wife are members of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Hill cast his first presidential vote for Seymour and Blair in 1868, and still votes with the Democrats.

SAMUEL K. HINSHEY was born November 6, 1830, in Logan County, Ky., where he grew to manhood and in 1857 removed to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Jonas Hinshey, a native of Virginia, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1837, aged forty-one years. He was a son of Morris, an Englishman, who served in the American Revolution and died about 1835. Jonas married Mrs. Margaret Ford; she died in 1873, aged over eighty years, a daughter of Benjamin Smith, and from this union sprang: our subject, Benjamin S. and Granville. The Ford children are: John, Charles, Robert C., Henry M., Mary A. (Perrin) and Patience. On March 24, 1853, subject was married to Miss Jane A. (born in 1834, died in 1871), daughter of Samuel B. and Mary (Turner) Ragland, of Logan County, from which union sprang one child, James E. Subject was next married January 8, 1872, to Miss Jane A., daughter of Thomas and Minerva (Pertle) Ashbrook, of Ballard County (born in 1840), and to them were born Jennie, Samuel A., Miller and Ford. For twenty years subject has been successfully engaged in milling. He has been constable and city judge. He is also a licensed attorney. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.; of the K. of G. R., and of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

GEORGE W. HINES was born July 16, 1823, in Logan County, Ky., where he was reared, and in 1856 came to Ballard County, where he still retains his residence. His father, John Hines, a native of Halifax County, Va., died in 1879, at the age of eighty-three years. He was the son of Edwin Hines, of Virginia, a Revolutionary soldier, who died about 1835. Subject's mother, Ann Duncan, was born near Lexington, Ky. John Hines was twice married, and to him, by his first wife, were born Mary (Daniel), James D., John and Bersheba (Mills). His offspring resulting from his espousal of Miss Ann Duncan are: our subject, Preston A., Elizabeth (Duvall), Dr. Daniel C., Samuel G., Julia A. (Herrington), Jane (Riley), Lucy (Bailey), and Joseph U. On May 9, 1845, subject was married to Miss Frances K. (born in 1825), daughter of George and Patty (Rice) Bailey, of Logan County, Ky.; the former, a native of Virginia, died in 1846, at the age of sixty-three years, and the latter died in 1829, aged about thirty years. The offspring of George and Patty Bailey are: Cassandra (Peart), Presley A., Caroline (Peart), Martha A. (Townsend), and Frances K. By the second wife to George were born William T., Ann M. (Gunn) and Mary E. (Dalton). To our subject and wife no children were born, but many orphans have found a hospitable home with them, and have been reared with the most tender and affectionate care, and their education has been a subject of more than parental solicitude. Our subject is a successful farmer, the owner of 700 acres of valuable land, 400 of which are well improved, the chief products being grass and live stock. In religion he is an active Methodist and in politics independent.

G. W. Hines

GEORGE HINKLE was born December 23, 1827, in Shelby County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1859 came to Ballard County, where he still retains his residence. In 1864, he enlisted in the Seventh Regiment, Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Confederate States Army, and remained in service to the close of the war. On December 5, 1861, our subject was married to Miss Christina J., daughter of William and Martha (Smith) Clampett, of Summer County, Tenn. (born January 15, 1844), and this union has been blessed by the birth of the following children, viz.: Charles H., April 20, 1863; George T., April 18, 1866; Mattie M., March 25, 1868; Bettie J., July 29, 1870; Effie L., December 31, 1872; Ida C., December 23, 1876; Fannie E., December 13, 1883. Subject is a farmer, owning 129 acres of good land in a fine state of cultivation. In religion he is a Methodist.

DR. CHARLES HINKLE, Ballard County, a leading and successful physician of western Kentucky, was born March 13, 1838, in Shelby County, Ky., where he was reared; in 1857, he came to Ballard County. His father, Col. Casper Hinkle, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1800; was taken by his parents, in 1804, to Shelby County, Ky., participated in the war of 1812, and died in 1842. He was the son of Charles, a native of Germany, a soldier in the American Revolution, who died in 1845. Casper espoused in marriage Mildred, daughter of Jesse and Betsey (Head) Oglesby, of Virginia (born in 1802, and died in 1880), and from this union sprang George, Jesse, Susan (Scott), Elizabeth (Seay), subject, and Rachel (Rollings). Subject was married January 26, 1864, to Miss Mary A., daughter of William H. and Penelope (White) Reeves, of Ballard County; she was born in 1844; her children are, William R., Hallie W., Jesse C., James W., Katie and Freddie F. Subject commenced the study of medicine, in 1859, with Dr. D. W. Yandell, of Louisville, Ky., and graduated at the University of Louisville, in 1861. He then located at his present place, where he has been since successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. He is also engaged in farming, owning 550 acres of good land, well cultivated. He is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

DR. R. T. HOCKER, Ballard County, was born September 10, 1846, in Warren County, Ky. He is a son of Washington and Rebekah (Magill) Hocker, both natives of Lincoln County, Ky.; his father is now living on his farm in Graves County. Our subject commenced the study of medicine at the age of twenty, under the preceptorship of Drs. Thompson and Gilson at Paducah, where he remained one year. He then attended the medical department of the University of Nashville in the winter of 1867-68, and graduated February 24, 1870; he had commenced the practice of medicine September 11, 1868. The doctor located in Ballard County, and in 1873 returned to Graves County, and located at Lowe's; there he followed his chosen profession nine years. November 14, 1882, he moved to Clinton, followed his profession there till May 1, 1884, when he came to Arlington, and in company with Dr. Peck opened their present drug store and is also following his profession here. He is a member of the Kentucky State Medical Society. In 1873, Dr. Hocker was vice-president of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association. He has been president of the Graves County Medical Society, and also treasurer. His father served as magistrate, constable and deputy sheriff in central Kentucky for many years; also police judge of Lovelaceville, Ballard County. Dr. Hocker was married December 3, 1873, to Miss M. S. Peck, of Graves County; two children have blessed this union, one daughter and one son. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church; his wife is a member of the Baptist Church. The doctor is also a member of the Masonic order and I. O. O. F.; has filled the highest offices in the subordinate lodges of each, and was a member of the city council when in Clinton.

A. B. HOLT was born January 16, 1838, in Calloway County, Ky. He is the third of five boys born to John and Nancy (Ramay) Holt, natives of Tennessee. His grandfather was Peter Holt, who married Elizabeth Tibble. His grandparents on his mother's side were Elijah and Peggie (Perry) Ramay. A. B. Holt was reared on a farm, and received a common school education. He moved with his parents to Johnson County, Ill., in 1845. In 1868, he moved to where he now lives, near Ogden's Landing, and is the possessor of 800 acres of good land in several farms, all of which he has made by his own industry and perseverance. He was married September 22, 1859, to Susan I. Gillespie, of Johnson County, Ill., born in Tennessee, and a daughter of John and Mary A. (Hogg) Gillespie. This union was blessed with nine children: William Lafayette, Tabitha L., now Henley; Florence C., now Bain; John A., deceased; Lycurgus H., deceased; Laura, deceased; George D., Ella N. and Mary A. Mr. and Mrs. Holt are members of the Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal Churches respectively, and Mr. Holt is a Mason. He cast his first presidential vote for Buchanan in 1856, and is still a Democrat.

JOEL F. HOLT, one of the leading farmers and short horn breeders of Ballard County, Ky., was born June 7, 1835, in Calloway County, Ky. He is the third of five children, all boys, born to John and Nancy (Ramay) Holt, natives of Montgomery County, Tenn., and of Holland Dutch and Scotch descent, respectively. John Holt was a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Tibble) Holt, natives of Holland and England respectively. Subject's mother was the daughter of Elijah Ramay, who was born in Scotland. Subject's grandfather, Peter Holt, came to the United States about 1763, and settled in South Carolina; he was a soldier of the Revolution. Elijah Ramay came to the United States after the Revolution, and settled in North Carolina. John Holt was born January 6, 1803; he was a blacksmith and farmer, and moved to Calloway County in 1834, where he entered 160 acres of land, which he improved. In 1845, Joel F. moved with his parents to Johnson County, Ill., where his father entered and purchased 268 acres of land. In the spring of 1868, the family came to Ballard County, Ky., where the father died, September 23, 1878, and where the mother, who was born August 11, 1808, died July 10, 1877. Joel F. Holt lived with his parents till twenty-six years of age, engaged in trading and farming. In the spring of 1868, he located where he now resides, on 115 acres of land, which he improved. He now owns 300 acres in good condition, with substantial buildings. In 1874 he was elected justice of the peace; re-elected in 1878. He resigned before the expiration of his second term. Mr. Holt was married May 5, 1861, to Susan M. Hogg, of Johnson County, Ill., a native of Montgomery County, Ill., and daughter of John and Elizabeth (Wolf) Hogg, natives of Tennessee, of Scotch descent. This union was blessed by the birth of eight children: Ethie O., now Smith; Bertha G.; Cortney, John, Ralph, Maybell, Carl and Ora. Mr. Holt cast his first presidential vote for Stephen A. Douglas in 1860, and still votes the Democratic ticket. He and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

THOMAS N. HOLT, was born September 18, 1845 in Franklin County, Tenn. He is a son of Thomas N. and Rhoda (Robinson) Holt. The father was born in Amelia County, Va., the mother in Franklin County, Tenn.; they were of English and Scotch descent respectively. The former died in 1858, aged fifty-five; the latter died in 1878 aged sixty-five. They came to Ballard County, in 1848, and engaged in farming. Our subject was reared on his father's farm without the opportunities of attending school until the age of twenty, two, from which time he attended four years-after which he returned to the farm, also engaged in trading in live stock, four years; later with Mr. Boswell, he opened a general store in Arlington; after continuing this business about three years, they sold their stock to McConnell & Stanley. Mr. Holt still owns the store occupied by this firm, also several houses and lots in town; he also owns a farm of 200 acres, which adjoins Arlington on the west, and which is conceded to be one of the best improved farms in this county; he is a member of the firm of Holt Bros., dealers in grain and live stock. November 20, 1878, he was married to Miss Hettie, daughter of Hon. W. J. Edrington, and the December following started with his young wife on a trip to the Pacific coast, visiting California, Oregon, Washington Territory, and other places of interest. They returned to Arlington in 1880, where, September 23, 1882, their union was blessed with one son, Thomas Leland, an exceptionally bright child, who departed this life November 30, 1884. Since his return to Arlington in 1880, Mr. Holt has been actively engaged in farming and dealing in grain, live stock, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Holt are members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Holt commenced life without any assistance, but by close attention to business and good management he has secured a competency.

WILLIAM HOLMAN was born February 5, 1809, in Henry County, Ky., and is the fourth of ten children born to William and Polly (Foster) Holman, of English and Irish descent, and natives of Maryland and Virginia respectively. William Holman assisted in erecting the first cabin built in Cincinnati, Ohio. Shortly after, the grandfather of our subject and two of his sons were killed by the Indians, in surveying in the Ohio Purchase. William Holman was reared on a farm and lived with his parents until he became of age. In 1818, he with his parents moved to Ripley County, Ind., were his father entered 160 acres for each one of his children. Our subject lived in Indiana until 1853, when he moved to where he now resides on the Ohio River, in Ballard County, Ky. He purchased 1,000 acres of land, which he mostly improved, and now owns about 488 acres, 175 of which are cleared. He was married in October, 1829, to Sarah Hawthorn, of Henry County, Ky., daughter of James and Willie (Rollan) Hawthorn, natives of Ireland and England respectively. To this union were born thirteen children: James H., now in California; Henry F., Martha (now dead) married a Mr. Shook; William S. (deceased); George M.; Jesse C. (deceased), Amanda M. and Sarah C., both married to Duncans; Roseta M. (deceased), Joseph T. (deceased), Mildred R. (deceased), Polly A. (deceased), she was married to a Mr. Colvin; Eliza E., now Wyatt. Mrs. Holman was a member of the Baptist Church. On December 25, 1856, Mr. Holman married Cabriella D. Bates, of Ballard County, born in Garrard County, Ky., and a daughter of Gabriel and Elizabeth Bates. To them were born three children: Laura B., now Holt; Aura B. deceased, and Willie, deceased; the first two were twins. Mrs. Cabriella Holman died October, 1877; she was a Baptist. Mr. Holman next married, on October 10, 1880, Mrs. Mary E. Robinson, of Ballard County, daughter of William and Mary (Tyler) Sublett, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. Mrs. Holman had seven children by her former husband. Mr. and Mrs. Holman are members of the Baptist and Christian Churches, respectively. Mr. Holman was formerly connected with the Masonic fraternity. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Jackson, but voted the Whig ticket from 1840 to 1856; since 1860, he has voted the Democratic ticket.

GEORGE M. HOLMAN was born April 9, 1837, in Ripley County, Ind., and is the fifth of thirteen children, born to William and Sarah (Hawthorn) Holman. George M. was reared on a farm and received a common school education. He lived with his parents until his marriage on December 30, 1862, to Sarah J. Duncan of Ballard County, a daughter of Samuel and Hannah E. (Muffit) Duncan. To this union have been born eight children: Anna E., now Brockmon; Mollie B., Amanda M., Georgia M., James and Jesse (twins), William M., dead; and Mattie L., Mr. Holman and wife and three eldest children are members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Holman moved to Ballard County with his parents in 1853, and settled in the north part of the county. He owns 110 acres of land in good condition. He was appointed deputy clerk of Ballard County in 1876 for one term. He was formerly a member of the Grange.

JACOB HORN, Ballard County, was born April 15, 1831, in Hesse Darmstadt. In 1851, he came to the United States and worked ten years in a stove foundry in St. Louis, after which he engaged in the butchering business in Memphis, for five years, and in 1868, settled in Ballard County, Ky., at his present place of residence. His father, Anton, born in 1800, died in Germany in 1871. He married Catherine Winter (born in 1805, died in 1849), and their children are, Eugene, Frantz, Jacob and David. Jacob procured a good education in Germany. On February 8, 1857, he married Miss Kunigunda Ley (born in Baden, March 3, 1837), and the results of this union are John, Elizabeth (Kilgore), Emma, Pauline, Anton, and Nicholas. Mrs. Horn died March 18, 1885. Mr. Horn is a farmer, having 560 acres of productive land in a good state of cultivation. In religion he still adheres to the Catholic faith, in which he was reared, and in politics is a Democrat The members of his family belong to the Christian Church.

EDWARD W. HORR, a leading merchant of Blandville, was born in Baltimore, Ohio, October 3, 1842, and is the only boy of three children born to Asa and Eliza (Sherman) Horr, natives of Ohio, and of German and Irish origin respectively. His mother is the daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Coe) Sherman. The father is a surgeon and was an adjutant in an Ohio regiment in the Mexican war. In 1847 the family moved to Dubuque, Iowa, where the father still lives. Edward W. received a good English education, having attended the Western Military Institute, Nashville, Tenn.; in 1856-57, he returned to Iowa, where he received private instruction and studied medicine. During the war, from July, 1862, to June, 1865, he was private secretary of Assistant Surgeon-General R. C. Wood, United States Army. After the war, he returned to Dubuque, Iowa, and engaged in the hat business till September, 1869, when he came to Blandville, where he engaged in general merchandising and has been reasonably successful in his business. He has been school trustee and town trustee of Blandville for ten years or more. He was married January 29, 1867, to Miss Jane T. Rodman, of Oldham County, Ky., daughter of Judge Thomas A. and Jane E. (Talbott) Rodman, natives of Kentucky and Virginia, respectively, and of Irish origin. There were born by this union, two children, one living, Ellen Horr. Mrs. Horr is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Mr. Horr is a member of the Masonic fraternity and I. O. O. F.

HOTCHKISS & GADDIE. J. A. Hotchkiss was born December 31, 1853, in Fayette County, Ky. He is a son of Mark and Martha (Poisel) Hotchkiss. The father was born in New York; he came to Kentucky in 1850, and engaged in agricultural pursuits, also worked at the millwright business; he died in 1868, aged fifty-one. The mother was born in Nicholas County, Ky., and is now living with her son in Arlington. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, received a good common school education, and at the age of twenty entered a store as clerk, and since that time he has been engaged in merchandizing. In 1876 he came to Arlington and secured employment with P. Q. Read, and later with McConnell & Stanley, continuing in their employ until January, 1883, when the firm of Hotchkiss, Gaddie & Co., was established, which has since continued, and is doing a business of about $15,000 a year. Mr. Hotchkiss is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Knights of the Golden Rule and of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. J. W. Gaddie, of the above firm, was born April 19, 1851, in Hickman County. He is a son of J. L. and Nancy (Lamkin) Gaddie. The father was born in Hart County, Ky. In 1841 he moved to Hickman County, there engaged in farming, and is now a resident of Graves County. J. W. Gaddie was reared on his father's farm, received a good common school education, and at the age of twenty-one commenced farming for himself; this he continued until 1879, when he came to Arlington, and was employed as salesman for McConnell & Stanley, remaining with the firm until January 1, 1883, at which time the present firm was established. Mr. Gaddie was married, October 9, 1883, to Miss Fannie Turner, of Ballard County. Mr. and Mrs. Gaddie are members of the Baptist Church.

ELIJAH HUGHS, an early settler of Ballard County, and an enterprising farmer, was born November 13, 1825, in Muhlenburgh County, Ky., and is the eighth of ten children (six boys and four girls), born to John and Rebecca (Cross) Hughs, natives of Virginia, the father of Irish descent. His grandfathers were William Hughs, who was a teacher, and William Cross, a farmer. John Hughs was a trader on the Mississippi River. Elijah Hughs was educated in the early dirt-floor schoolhouses of the country, and was reared on a farm; he came with his parents to Ballard County in a very early day, and settled in the community where he now resides, and where his father purchased 350 acres of land, on which he resided till his death, in 1853; his widow died in 1867, aged eighty-seven years. Elijah, in early days, engaged in the carpentry business, and lived with his parents till twenty-one years of age; he then engaged in various lines of business, and during the war had several trials with the guerillas. In 1863 he purchased the farm of 120 acres, on which he now resides. He was elected constable two terms, was in the government service one session of Congress in the folding department. He was married October 29, 1853, to Sarah J. Purcell, of McCracken County, Ky., a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Barkley) Purcell. He had born by this union seven children: Mary (deceased), Ida (deceased), Ida May, John W., Louisa B., Samuel and Sarah J. Mrs. Hughs is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Hughs is a Mason and a Democrat.

T. L. HUGHES, of Wickliffe, was born November 25, 1825, in Muhlenburg County, and is the tenth of eleven children born to Ishmael and Susan Hughes, natives of Virginia, and of Irish and German descent, respectively; was reared and educated on a farm. At the age of nine years he came with his mother to Ballard County, where he has lived ever since. He has been engaged as a pilot on the Mississippi River nearly all his life, his first trip having been made when nineteen years old; he has also carried on a farm, but in 1881 moved to Wickliffe, where he has been engaged in general merchandising. He was married in May, 1860, to Catherine Stovall, of Blandville, a daughter of J. H. and Hannah (Smith) Stovall, natives of Muhlenburg and Christian Counties, Ky., respectively. Her parents came to Ballard County in 1828, and settled near Blandville, which village was located on their farm. Her father was born in Muhlenburg County, December 29, 1806, and died March, 1884. Mr. Hughes had born to him by this union nine children: Harrison, Jesse L., John H., Eugenia, Joseph W. (deceased), Rhuanna, Thomas L. (deceased), Katie (deceased), and one not named. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes are members of the Baptist Church, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and I. O. O. F.

DR. W. D. HUNT was born January 25, 1835, in Carter County, Tenn. He is the third of eight children born to John R. and Margaret (Holt) Hunt, natives of Tennessee, and of German and English descent. John R. Hunt was a son of Henson and Mary (Polk) Hunt. The grandfather, on the mother's side, was Jacob Holt, who married Elizabeth Petticord. They were born in Virginia. William D., was reared on a farm, and received at home a fair education. Learned the carpenter's trade with his father during his boyhood. At the age of nineteen, he commenced the study of medicine with Prof. Dake, of Jonesborough, Tenn. After emigrating to Kentucky (Jackson's Purchase), he studied medicine and taught school for five years; then, after practicing medicine seven years, before attending any lectures, he graduated at the University Medical College, of Louisville, Ky. In 1869 he located in Ballard County; in 1870, on the property where he now resides. In 1880 he moved to Paducah, where he practiced three years, and was city physician one year. In the spring of 1884, he returned to his farm, where he practices his profession and farms. He has a farm of 410 acres in good condition, also three houses and lots in Paducah, all of which he has acquired by his own efforts, having started in life with 50 cents. He was married December, 1859, to Miss Caroline Futrell, of McCracken County, daughter of Nathaniel and Nancy (Dean) Futrell; they were born and reared in North Carolina, and are of English and Irish descent, and among the first settlers of the Purchase. To Dr. and Mrs. Hunt were born six children, three living: Luella, now Hendricks; Robertie, now Ogden, and Forrest. Mrs. Hunt became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church when very young. Dr. Hunt is a member of the I. O. O. F. He cast his first presidential vote for Buchanan, and is still a Democrat.

SAMUEL W. JACKSON, Ballard County, was born in Hickman County, Ky., February 5, 1841, and is the second of nine children born to Ephraim and Mary E. (Wheeler) Jackson, both natives of Kentucky, and of English and Irish descent. Ephraim Jackson received such an education as could be obtained at the rude log schoolhouses of western Kentucky frontier during his youth. At the age of three years, he came with his parents to Hickman County, where he was employed on his father's farm until he attained his majority. In that county he was married, and soon after engaged in farming on his own account. In about 1845, he removed to the southeast corner of Ballard County, where he bought a farm and resided until 1858, when he sold out and removed to Texas. While there, Mrs. Mary E. Jackson departed this life on May 8, 1861. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. In 1867, Mr. Jackson returned and bought a farm in Ballard County, near Arlington, where he resided until his death, which occurred June 8, 1875, in his fifty-eight year. He was a life-long and devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. Samuel W. Jackson received a good common school education in youth, and was employed on his father's farm until he was nearly thirty years old. He then engaged in agricultural pursuits on his own account, and has been so employed ever since, now owning well improved farms in Ballard County amounting to 170 acres. In the spring of 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Third Texas Cavalry, and served with his regiment in all its marches and engagements until the close of the war, being under Gens. McCullach, Price, Van Dorn, Bragg, Johnston and Hood. He participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Iuka, Second Corinth and Jackson, Miss. In May, 1864, he was taken prisoner near Resaca, Ga., and was paroled in March, 1865. Mr. Jackson was married December 11, 1870, to Miss Anna I. Ramsey, a native of Ballard County, Ky. Five children have blessed this union, four of whom, two sons and two daughters, are living. Both Mr. Jackson and wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He is also an earnest advocate of the temperance cause. In politics he is a Democrat.

JUDGE SAMUEL H. JENKINS, one of the leading and influential citizens of Ballard County, was born March 28, 1821, in Henry County, Ky. He is the youngest of eight children, and is the only one living born to Samuel and Ann W. (Owens) Jenkins, who were born in Fairfax County, Va., of Welsh descent. The father died when our subject was but six years old, the mother when he was sixteen. Samuel H. Jenkins was reared on a farm, but received a fair English education; he attended St. Mary's College, Marion County, Ky., and at the age of nineteen commenced the study of law. He was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-one years, by Judges Prior and Marshall, of Louisville. In 1842 he located at Blandville, Ky., where he engaged in practice; in the same year he was elected county attorney for four years; in 1852 he was elected county judge for one term—the first judge under the new constitution. In 1859 he was elected State senator from the First District, and was in the senate during the contest for secession, to which he was opposed. In 1875 he was again elected, but refused a third election. In 1880 he was elected county judge, was re-elected in 1882, and holds the position with honor and credit. Our subject is the possessor of several good farms, aggregating about 200 acres. In 1880 he located in Wickliffe, where he now resides and has made his accumulations by his own industry and energy since he came to Ballard County. He was married February 26, 1846, to Ann L. Moore, of Ballard County, Ky.; she was born in Christian County, Ky., and is a daughter of John A. and Amelia W. (Elliott) Moore, of Irish and English descent, respectively. He has no children. He and wife are members of the Christian and Baptist Churches, respectively. Judge Jenkins cast his presidential vote for James K. Polk, and has voted with the Democrats ever since.

W. W. JENKINS, a native of Ballard County, Ky., and son of Dr. Thomas J. and Susan M. (Terrell) Jenkins, was born March 20, 1846. His paternal grandfather was Francis Jenkins, who was born July 14, 1774, and died in Pickens District, S. C., in 1860. John Terrell, subject's maternal grandfather, was born in Virginia, from which State he emigrated in an early day, settling at Port Royal, Tenn., where he died about the year 1838 or 1840. Thomas J. Jenkins, subject's father, was a physician of considerable note. He graduated at the Transylvania University, of Lexington, Ky., and commenced the practice of his profession in Ballard County in 1840. He died May 6, 1870, aged fifty-eight years; his wife died in March, 1863, at the age of forty-five years. At the age of twenty years our subject commenced teaching in the public schools of Ballard County, and later entered a store as clerk, in which capacity he served two years. He next entered the mercantile business at Hinkleville in partnership with his father, and sold goods until 1870. In 1872 he moved to Blandville and engaged in merchandising, which he continued until 1874, at which time he was elected clerk of the circuit court, was re-elected in 1880, and is still holding the office. He was married June 24, 1869, to Alice F., daughter of H. B. and Sophie Lacy, of Christian County, Ky. Five children bless this union: Oriana, Pearl N., Thomas B., Willie D. and Sophie Mildred. Mr. Jenkins is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H. and K. and L. of H., and votes the Democratic ticket; he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ROBERT Y. JERRELL was born November 11, 1830, in Spottsylvania County, Va., where he grew to manhood, and in 1848 removed to Christian County, Ky.; then in 1854 to Cameron, Tex., and in 1860 came to Ballard County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Bland Jerrell, a soldier in the war of 1812, died in 1855 aged fifty-seven years. He married Mary, daughter of Rev. Phillip and Mildred (Thomas) Pendleton, of Virginia, and their children are Joseph H., Mildred T. (Prichard), Mary E. (Garrott and Pitts), Lucy A. (Carnahan), Margaret H. (Pendleton), William J., Edmund W. and our subject as above. Mrs. Mary Jerrell died in 1844. On November 22, 1855, subject was married to Miss Tamasia A., daughter of Minor and Ann (Humphreys) Peyton, of Spottsylvania County, Va., born in 1833, and to this union were born Lee W., Otie E. (Ransdell), Robert M., Sallie P., Maud E., Tamasia A., Maggie P., Jefferson D., Lizzie B. and Mary Lena. Subject is a farmer owning 291 acres of fine land in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., also a Baptist and a Democrat.

JOHN JONES was born August 12, 1840, in Graves County, Ky.; was taken in infancy by his parents to Wayne County, Mo., and in 1852 brought to Ballard County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Gabriel Jones, was born in Tennessee, and died in 1880 at the age of sixty-two years. He was the son of John, a Virginian, a soldier with Jackson at the battle of New Orleans. He died about 1855. John was the son of Edward Jones, of Virginia. Gabriel married Elizabeth, daughter of Counsel Alcock, of Graves County, Ky., and this union resulted in the birth of the following children: Alfred, subject, Christiana E. (Hamilton) and Martin V. In youth our subject obtained a limited education, having been engaged in the late war, serving in the Eighth Kentucky Federal Cavalry. On December 19, 1859, he married Miss Maria A., daughter of Jacob and Lettie (Burrow) Hamilton, of Ballard County, which union resulted in the birth of Maria A. (Carter). Mrs. Jones died in 1860, and subject next married, December 26, 1865, Miss Mary C., daughter of William and Pamelia A. (Dewitt) Paul, of Ohio County, Ky., and to them have been born Lucy E. (Dejarnett), John S. and Gabriel H. C. Mr. Jones is a farmer, having 200 acres of well cultivated land.

JAMES M. JONES was born April 6, 1826, in Morgan County, Ga., and is the sixth of nine children; those who grew to man and womanhood are Oliver C., Harriet A., Nancy B., William H., James M. and Irene T. The parents were Timothy and Elizabeth (Avery) Jones, the father a son of Joel Jones, and the mother a daughter of Gabriel Avery, who was lieutenant in the war of 1812. The parents of our subject were born and reared in Georgia. The father was in the war of 1812, and died in 1850. aged fifty-seven years. The grandfather of our subject was a slave-owner in Georgia, and made provisions in his will to emancipate and settle them in Ohio, but the laws of Georgia would not permit them to be sent from that State. James M. Jones was reared on a farm until seventeen years old, when he engaged at printing, at which he continued more or less until 1869. In 1851 he established in Corinth, Miss., the Republican. In 1858 the name was changed to the True Democrat, and advocated the Douglas principles. In 1861 the citizens of Corinth passed resolutions not to board or furnish supplies to any person connected with the paper. Mr. Jones then went to Nashville, where he was engaged as compositor on the Press and American; then to Hamburg, Tenn., where he enlisted in May, 1862, in an independent company, called the Governor's Guards. At Nashville the company was organized as Company F, Tenth Tennessee Infantry (Federal). Our subject was first lieutenant in the original company, and was sent by Governor Johnson to west Tennessee to recruit for the Federal service. In October, 1862, he reported at Nashville, and was commissioned first lieutenant of Company G, Alvin C. Gillem colonel commanding. He did provost duty at Nashville. In the spring of 1863 he resigned, and was afterward sutler for the Sixty-fourth Illinois till they reached Atlanta. He returned to his family in Richfield, Ill., and thence moved to Cairo, where he engaged in the printing business in the spring of 1865. He was appointed, by Gen. Ord, registrar of Tippah County, Miss., under the Reconstruction laws, and was subsequently engaged at the printing business in Cairo, Paducah and Nashville, until the spring of 1869, when he moved to Ballard County, Ky., where he has been engaged at farming ever since with good success. He located where he now lives, on eighty-four acres of land, in 1880. Our subject was married, October 29, 1848, to Martha George, of Tishomingo County, Miss., a native of Dickinson County, Tenn., and daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Pollard) George, natives of North Carolina and of Irish descent. There were born by this union nine children: Emily K., now Bichou; William Thomas; Daniel T. (deceased), Paul, Nancy H. (now Haden), Mary E., Harriet M. (now Gourieux), Dennis D., Dennetta M. Our subject cast his first presidential vote for Pierce in 1852; in 1856 he voted for Fillmore; in 1860 he voted for Douglas, and since has voted the Republican ticket. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are members of the Christian Church.

DR. DAVID P. JUETT was born in Scott County, Ky., March 20, 1836. He is the fifth of six children born to John and Catharine (Kendrick) Juett. The mother of our subject was the third wife of his father. The first wife was a Miss Jenkins; the second and third were sisters. The first union was blessed with nine children, the second with two and the third with six. Our subject's father was born and reared in Delaware; he was born in 1765, and was eighty-four years of age at his death. D. P. Juett was reared on a farm, received a good English education and attended the Alleghany College, Penn., two terms. At the age of nineteen years he commenced the study of medicine and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in the spring of 1857. He located at Lovelaceville, Ballard County, where he formed a partnership with Dr. George Stovall. In 1859 he moved to Blandville. In 1864 he enlisted as surgeon of the Seventeenth Kentucky Confederate Cavalry, with which he remained till the close of the war, when he returned to Ballard County, where he has been engaged in the practice of medicine ever since. He was married November 6, 1859, to V. A. Cockrill, of McCracken County, Ky., a daughter of John W. and Clementine C. (Settle) Cockrill, natives of Christian County, Ky.; our subject was blessed by this union with five children: E. A. May (now Ashbrook), John P., Edwin H., George C. and Kate K. His wife died in May, 1879, a member of the Christian Church. In October, 1880, the Doctor married Kate Cockrill, sister of his former wife, and had two children born to him, both of whom died in infancy. The Doctor and wife are members of the Christian Church. Our subject is a Mason, a member of the K. of H., and was formerly an Odd Fellow. He cast his first presidential vote for John C. Breckinridge, and has voted the Democratic ticket ever since.

BENJAMIN A. LANE, an enterprising farmer of Ballard County, was born in Charlotte County, Va., December 11, 1832, and is the sixth of seven children born to James B. and Sarah (Harris) Lane, natives of Virginia. The father of subject was a son of William Lane, whose wife was a Bond, of English descent. Our subject's mother was the daughter of Claiborne and Sarah (Hudson) Harris. Benjamin A. Lane was reared on a farm; his father died about 1837; he continued to live with his mother till he became of age, but moved to Christian County, Ky., in the fall of 1851; in February, 1853, he moved to Ballard County; in 1857 he located where he now resides on 160 acres, to which he has continued to add till he now owns 350 acres of land, in three different tracts, in good condition; he started in life with about $500. He was married March 22, 1855, to Harriet L. Blanks, of Ballard County, born in Charlotte County, Va., and the daughter of Allen W. and Harriet (Hester) Blanks, who were born in Virginia and North Carolina respectively, and of Irish origin. To this union were born eight children: James B., W. R., J. R., Mary L. (deceased), Benjamin A., Kittie (deceased), Minnie Lee and Callie. His wife died in November, 1879, a member of the Baptist Church. Subject next married, on August 4, 1880, Mrs. D. E. Armstrong, a daughter of Frank and Rebecca (Cole) Moss; she had one child by Armstrong —(Frank). Mr. Lane and wife are Baptist, and he is a Mason and a member of the K. of H. fraternity.

JOHN B. LANE, farmer and stock-raiser, was born March 6, 1837, in Charlotte County, Va., and is the youngest of seven children—four boys and three girls—born to James B. and Sarah H. (Harris) Lane, natives of Charlotte County, Va. His grandfathers were William Lane and Claiborne Harris, both farmers. William Lane was a soldier of the Revolution and of English descent. Claiborne Harris was of Irish descent. John B. was reared on a farm, and his early education was limited. The father died before our subject's recollection, and the mother died in 1854. In 1851, with his mother, he moved to Christian County, Ky. In 1852 he came to Ballard County, where he has resided ever since with the exception of two years, when he was engaged in Christian County, Ky., in the grocery business and farming. He owned one negro when the war broke out, and is now the possessor of 139 acres of land, eighty acres cleared and in good condition. He was elected justice in 1879 for one term. He was married, June 6, 1861, to Jane E. McCutchen, of Ballard County, a native of Charlotte County, Va., and daughter of John and Mary (Blanks) McCutchen, natives of Virginia, and of Scotch-Irish descent. To this union were born nine children: Edward B. (deceased), Sarah A. (deceased), Mary E., John J., Martha L., Harriet B., William Benjamin, Oscar George, Allen C. Mr. Lane and wife and elder daughters are members of the Baptist Church. Subject was formerly a member of the Grange, and cast his first presidential vote for Breckinridge in 1860.

L. S. LEE, an old settler of Ballard County, was born February 17, 1810, in Davidson County, Tenn., and is the eleventh of twelve children born to John and Jennie (Tuggle) Lee, natives of Virginia, and of English descent; the father from Lightfoot Lee, of Revolutionary fame. The parents first moved to Tennessee about 1800, where they both died. L. S. Lee came to Ballard County about 1833, and settled, within one mile of where he now lives, in 1839. In 1865 he came to his present place of 330 acres, which he has improved. He has made his accumulations by his own integrity and perseverance, as he was but a small boy when his father died; his mother died before the war, aged about eighty years. His mother was born February 22, 1769; his father was born March 30, 1764; he was a soldier in the Revolution, and was married July 5, 1788. Subject had two brothers in the war of 1812, and both were in the battle of New Orleans. The only education Mr. Lee ever got is what he has procured at home by his own efforts. In 1855, he commenced riding as deputy sheriff; in 1858, was appointed to fill an unexpired term, caused by the death of the sheriff, and was subsequently elected two terms. In 1868, he was again elected and filled the office with honor and credit. He was married in September, 1829, to Nancy Watson of Montgomery County, Tenn., and had born to them seven children: Elizabeth (deceased), Robert (deceased), John, and Sarah (now Mabery), Polly Ann (deceased), Henry H. and Thirga Ann. Mrs. Lee died November, 1844, a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Lee is also a Baptist and was a Granger. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Jackson and still votes the Democratic ticket.

JOHN S. LINDERMAN, a prominent farmer of Ballard County, was born in Spencer County, Ky., October 8, 1836, and is the fifth of ten children born to Samuel and Margery (Goodwin) Linderman, natives of Kentucky, and of German and Irish descent respectively. Subject's father was the son of Abe Linderman, a farmer; his mother, a daughter of John Goodwin, also a farmer, who was eighty-one or eighty-two years old at his death. Our subject was reared on a farm and received an ordinary education: he came to Ballard County in 1865, and settled, where he now resides, on 350 acres of land, 175 of which are improved and in a good state of cultivation. He is the architect of his own fortunes, having started in life without a dollar. He was married in February, 1873, to Ellen Boland, of Ballard County, a native of Alabama and a daughter of John and Elizabeth Boland. There were born to this union two children: Eveleen and Rosco. Mrs. Linderman is a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Linderman cast his first presidential vote for Stephen A. Douglas and has always voted with the Democratic party.

THOMAS LINTHICUM was born in Nelson County, Ky., June 9, 1836, and is the second of seven children (three boys) born to Charles W. and M. E. (Slaughter) Linthicum, natives of Maryland and Virginia, respectively. His grandparents were Thomas P. Linthicum and Philip Slaughter, both farmers and of Irish descent. In the year of 1839, November 7th, Thomas was brought to Ballard County by his parents, who settled near Blandville, where his father purchased and improved 320 acres of land, owning at the time several negroes. Our subject received a good English education, attended St. Mary's College ten months, and then taught school three years. In May, 1861, he enlisted in Company C, First Mississippi Valley Infantry, under Capt. C. P. Ray, Bob Martin colonel commanding, and took part in the battle of Soccotoncha River, Miss., Gun Town, Harrisburg, Sulphur Trestles, Athens, Pulaski, Nashville, Murfreesboro, Franklin and Atlanta, Ga., and was in Murfreesboro prison. In 1863, he was transferred to Forrest's command, and was in the recruiting service a great deal of the time; he served until the close of the war; returned to Kentucky in the spring of 1865, from Atlanta, and took the oath at Paducah. He then returned to Blandville and taught school in the county; January 9, 1866, he married Mollie E. Pollock, of Blandville, a native of Todd, and daughter of John and Rebecca (McCauley) Pollock, of Irish descent. He had born to him six children: Hattie F., Charles P., Slaughter, Sarah F., Mollie L., and Johnnie E. Mr. Linthicum and wife are members of the Christian Church and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of H. After his marriage, he engaged in farming till October, 1880, when he was made deputy clerk of the common pleas and circuit court, which position he now holds. He cast his first presidential vote for Fillmore and Donelson, and the last presidential vote for Cleveland and Hendricks, and is now a Democrat.

ANDREW LOVELACE.—Upon the crest of a high hill overlooking the village of Lovelaceville, and commanding a magnificent view of the valley of the Mayfield Creek, rests a substantial brick residence, the home of a bright and sturdy old pioneer, the worthy subject of this sketch. Andrew Lovelace was born February 12, 1811, in Butler County, Ky., and came with his parents, in 1822, to what is now Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Captain Andrew Lovelace, Sr., a native of Rowan County, N. C., was born in 1776, removed to Kentucky in an early day, and died here in 1863. He was the son of Elias, a soldier of the Revolution, who also died at this place about 1833. He was the son of John, an Englishman. Subject's mother, Rebecca, daughter of William Holman, of North Carolina, died in 1834. To her and husband were born: Elizabeth (Hall), Nancy (Lynn), Elias, Archibald, subject, Rebecca (Humphrey), Isaac and William. Subject was married November 5, 1833, to Miss Eleanor, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Shelton) Ashley, of Butler County (born May 15, 1815), and this union has been blessed by the birth of Virgil S., Martha J. (Hayworth), John H., Freeman B., James M., Mary E. (Elsey), William A., Eliza B. (Trice), and Susan V. (Henderson). Subject is a farmer, has prospered in his business and now owns 400 acres of well improved and valuable land which is in a fine state of cultivation. In politics he still clings to the tenets of the old line Whigs.

VIRGIL S. LOVELACE has acted well his part in promoting the growth and prosperity of the flourishing village of Lovelaceville and the beautiful country surrounding it. He was born January 29, 1836, on the place where he now resides (the village having been named in honor of his paternal grandfather.) In youth he obtained such education as the schools of the country afforded, has always improved his opportunities for study, and is a constant reader of standard literature. He was married December 6, 1860, to Miss Mary P., daughter of Washington and Rebecca W. (Magill) Hocker, of Graves County (born July 20, 1844), and to them have been born Rebecca E. (deceased), George W., Victoria T. (deceased), Miriam M. (deceased), Elizabeth R. (deceased), Pearl I., Robert H. (deceased), Virgil A. and Rubie M. In 1870 he engaged in general merchandise, but owing to the pressure of the times, failed in 1878. He is now engaged in the same business, and is meeting with encouraging success. He has for five years been postmaster. He is a Royal Arch Mason, and an old line Whig in sentiment.

DR. JAMES M. LOVELACE, son of Andrew and Eleanor Lovelace, was born August 18, 1841, in Ballard County, Ky., where he now resides. He was in youth favored with good educational advantages, which he has greatly improved. On February 27, 1879, he was married to Miss Lou Belle, daughter of William V. R. and Martha A. (Samuels) Wilson, of Ballard County (born February 3, 1858), and to them have been born Wilson M., Andrew C. and Freeman C. Our subject commenced the study of medicine in 1865, with Dr. Lemuel M. Lovelace, of Milburn, Ky., with whom he remained two years, and in 1867 attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, where he remained ten months, then practiced two years in Scott County, Mo., then returned to Lovelaceville, where he remained until 1874, when he went to Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York, where he graduated. In 1877 he attended lectures at the university of Louisiana, at New Orleans, and in 1878, at the university at New York, after which he returned to Ballard County, where he has since been engaged in the successful practice of his profession. Dr. Lovelace is a Royal Arch Mason and is Master of the Blue Lodge. In politics he adheres to the tenets of the old line Whig party.

MALACHI McCOLPIN was born February 21, 1836, in Todd County, Ky., where he was reared to manhood, and in 1860 came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Charner H. McColpin, a native of Todd County, was born in 1810 and died in 1870. He was the son of Joseph, of North Carolina, who came to Todd County prior to the year 1800, where he died in 1853 at the age of eighty-three years. His father was a native of Ireland, was a soldier in the American Revolution, and died in Todd County, Ky. Charner H. married Martha E., daughter of Amos and Betsey (Henderson) Jones, of Todd County, born in 1814, and still living, and to them were born Joseph F., subject, Miranda (Wolfe), Martha E. (Lindsey), Thomas B., Charner H., Jr., Samuel H., Barbara J. (Thompson), Nancy H. (Slayton), and John G. Subject was married March 13, 1860, to Miss Margaret B. Dean, of Ballard County, born July 10, 1845, and this union was blessed with one child, Ovelia (Shepherd, deceased). Subject has been a successful tobacco factor and farmer, and is now engaged as a general dealer in live stock. He has served as constable and deputy sheriff, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Baptist and a Democrat.

T. W. McCONNELL was born December 24, 1847, in Columbus, Ky. He is a son of James H. and Martha (Winn) McConnell. The father was born in Louisville, Ky., and about 1840 moved to Columbus, where he was engaged in merchandising until his death, which occurred in 1850, aged forty-five. The mother was born in Henry County, Ky., and is now living in Hickman County. Our subject, at the age of fourteen, hired out on a farm and continued in this employment about four years; he then was employed as brakeman on a railroad two years, after which he returned to farming, remaining one year; he then secured a clerkship in the United States postal service, which position he held five years. In 1878 he came to Arlington, and, in company with Mr. Stanley, established a general store; this firm has done a business of over $75,000 per year. This business has recently changed hands, Mr. McConnell being retained as manager. With his brother, he has recently completed a fine training track of half mile in circumference; they have also purchased a fine two year old colt, by Mambrino, also a fine Norman stallion, and are owners of other colts of good pedigree.

DR. C. McKINNEY, Ballard County, was born in Trigg County, Ky., on September 16, 1814, and is a son of Isaac and Susannah (Bird) McKinney. The father was a native of Chester District, S. C., having been born there in June, 1782. He moved to Trigg County, Ky., in 1809, and settled in the Linton Precinct, where he resided until 1833, when he came to the Purchase and settled near where the village of Murray, Calloway County, now stands. There he died in March, 1845; his widow died in Millburn in the fall of 1876, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. Subject is the second of four living brothers, viz.: Dr. Ewing C., in Jonesborough, Ill.; Candous, our subject; Eckles, in Texas County, Mo., and York in Arkansas. Subject's education was received in the neigborhood schools of his native county. He remained at home until twenty-one, and then taught school for three years. He then commenced reading medicine with Dr. R. B. Clousel, of Concord, Calloway County, remained three years, and then attended lectures at the Cincinnati College of Medicine, graduating in the class of 1845. Returning home, he soon moved to Hardiman County, Tenn., where he practiced for seven years; he then came to Milburn, where he has since resided. He is now probably the oldest practicing physician in the Purchase, and besides his lucrative practice he owns a fine farm, which he has cultivated. Dr. McKinney was married on May 2, 1849, to Miss Martha A. McKinney, a daughter of Ewing and Elizabeth (Miller) McKinney. The result of this union has been three children, two of whom are now living: Emma A., wife of I. E. Conley, of Wickliffe, Ky., and Ida E., wife of Thomas A. Stanley, of Arlington, Ky.

JOHN W. MANOR was born August 21, 1849, in Shenandoah County, Va., and was brought by his parents in 1850 to Todd County, Ky., and in 1860, to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father William C. Manor, Esq., a native of Virginia, was born in 1816, and is still living. William E. espoused Mary E., daughter of Robert F. Furguson, of Virginia (born in 1821, and died in 1881). Their children are: Robert F., subject, Hannah J. (Northington), Dr. Jesse B., Mary E. and Albert B. Our subject was favored with a good English education, and is a reading man. He was married January 9, 1877, to Miss Nannie A., daughter of John and Evelina (Watwood) Rasco, of Ballard County (born in 1851), and to them were born Lizzie and Mary. Subject was seven years a clerk in a store, but is now engaged in farming, in which he is successful in raising wheat, corn and tobacco. For many years he has acted as deputy sheriff and district deputy clerk. In religion he is a Christian and in politics a Democrat.

G. W. MANTLE, a leading citizen of Ballard County, Ky., was born August 10, 1832, in Monroe County, Ohio. He is the second of six children (three boys) born to William and Ella (Cox) Mantle. They were natives of Maryland and Ohio respectively, and of German and Irish origin. G. W. Mantle was but twelve years old when his father died, and he was thus thrown upon his own resources. At the age of sixteen, he commenced the carpenter's trade, which he followed for five years, and also teamed and traded some. With his mother he came to the Purchase, in 1846, and settled in Ballard County, where he has continued his residence ever since. When he became of age he inherited $100 from his mother's estate, which he judiciously and carefully operated with till he has succeeded in amassing a handsome property, consisting of three farms, in all about 820 acres of good land, hotel property and several houses and lots in Blandville, all of which has been acquired since 1859. He was married February 22, 1857, to Mrs. Fannie Stratton, of Ballard County, and widow of P. A. Stratton. She was born April 13, 1830, in Barren County, Ky., and is the daughter of John H. and Harriet K. (Bullock) Bigger; her parents were born in Virginia, and were of English descent. Her grandparents on her mother's side were Edward and Hannah (Clark) Bullock, and were among the first settlers of Kentucky; her father was colonel of a regiment in the war of 1812. Mrs. Mantle came to the Purchase with her brother, Judge J. M. Bigger, of Paducah, in the fall of 1848, and settled in Blandville, in which place and vicinity she has resided ever since. She was married August 7, 1849, to P. A. Stratton, a merchant, to whom she had borne three children: John R. (deceased), Harriet A. (now Vancoths), and Mary P. (deceased). Mr. Stratton died December 18, 1854. Mr. and Mrs. Mantle are the possessors of a happy family of five children: Edward B., Joseph B., Lizzie K., George and Ninna F. Mantle. Mrs Mantle is an amiable and affectionate parent and takes great interest in the future welfare of her family, she is a member of the Christian Church and order of Rebecca (Masonic). Mr. Mantle is an Odd Fellow and a Democrat.

P. P. MARTIN, an early settler and leading citizen of Ballard County, Ky., was born January 6, 1828, in Bedford County, Tenn., and is the third of six boys and three girls, born to Firney B. and Emily L. (Tankersly) Martin, natives of Logan County, Ky., and Alabama, respectively, and of Irish and English descent. The mother of our subject died in August, 1855, and his father married Miss Lavina A. Terry, daughter of Jesse Terry, of Henry County, Tenn., and had born by his second marriage one son and one daughter. The grandparents of our subject were John and Mary Martin; his mother was the daughter of John R. Tankersly, a farmer, who was a quartermaster in the war of 1812, with the rank of captain, and was engaged in the battle of New Orleans. The parents of Mr. Martin came to Graves County in the fall of 1828, and there his father entered and improved land for about ten years. They then moved to McCracken County, where they lived for two years on purchased land. In 1840, they moved to near Woodville, where the father purchased 300 acres of land which he partially improved. He lived there until his death in October, 1874, at the age of seventy-four years. He was the first sheriff of Ballard County. He also helped to put up the first log-house ever built in Paducah. P. P. Martin lived with his parents till he was twenty years old, when he engaged in farming for himself. He moved to where he now lives in North Ballard, in 1850, on 120 acres of land, which he improved and to which he has added till he now owns 270 acres in good condition. He commenced the study of medicine in 1869, and about 1875, commenced the practice, and has met with the best success. He was married January 7, 1849, to Nancy J. Crice, of Ballard County, a daughter of John and Ellen (McCrary) Crice, natives of Pennsylvania and North Carolina, respectively, and of Dutch and Scotch-Irish origin. He had born to him by this union twelve children: John O., Thomas (deceased), Emily E. (now Hall), Furna B. (deceased), Virginia A. (now McKinney), Mary, Martha, Carrie (deceased), Sammie, Charles E., Wallace and James. Dr. Martin is a Freemason.

LEWIS F. MARSHALL (deceased) was born October 29, 1825, in what was then known as Livingston County, Ky., now Ballard. He was the fourth of four children, born to John and Milley (Field) Marshall, who came to the Purchase in 1820, and settled on Island Creek near Paducah, after which they moved to Ballard County, and settled on the Ohio River, just above Mound City. They were natives of Henry County, Ky. John Marshall was born September 29, 1774, and died in April, 1830. He was the eldest son of William Marshall (who married Ann McLeod), eldest son of William Marshall, eldest son of Col. William Marshall, of Mechlenburg, Va. His wife was born November 2, 1788. She was a consistant member of the Baptist Church and was a woman of great piety and decision of character; those who knew her most intimately loved her most affectionately. Lewis F. Marshall was but four years old when his father died; at an early age he assumed the responsibilities of the family, and engaged in rearing and buying stock and produce, and shipping South, also keeping a woodyard. Two years after his marriage, he moved to a farm nine miles east, which (in 1881) fell to his wife from her father's estate, (his mother living with him until her death). He was a lifelong Democrat, possessed of sound judgment, strictly honest and upright in all his dealings, thereby acquiring the friendship and esteem of the people, and was one among the first to raise and drill a company for the Seventh Kentucky Infantry, which entered the Confederate service in August, 1861. He was promoted upon several occasions and was chief commissary, Second Division, First Corp Army of West Mississippi, and East Louisiana, and major on Gen. Albert Rust's (who caned Greeley in Congress) staff, when he resigned on account of ill-health and returned home shattered in body and spirit, when he began life with renewed energy; was elected constable two terms, and in 1870 was elected sheriff and re-elected in 1872. This proved too much for a man of his noble and generous disposition (which position requires the "eyes of a hawk and the claws of a lion" to maintain), and finding that he could not save a home for his family, except by taking the benefit of the "Bankrupt Law," he allowed his property to be sold at a great sacrifice, and retired to private life, when his health gradually declined from hardships and want of proper remedies to build up his already infirm constitution; he died February 19, 1877, having been a member of the Masonic fraternity (Royal Arch) from early manhood, belonging also to the I. O. O. F. and K. of P. Although he died in obscurity he never was the man to turn a deaf ear to the wants of a fellow mortal, but was ever ready with open purse and willing heart to aid and comfort all who came to him. His widow is a member of the Baptist Church. By their union they had these children: William P. (deceased), Joseph (deceased), Mary L., Lewis F., J. Estella, Charles A., A. Rust, Edward C. and Josie O. L. F. Marshall was married November 9, 1854, to Miss Mary H. H. Foree, a native of Shelby County, Ky., and daughter of Joshua and Narcissa Young (Ogden) Foree, natives of Virginia and Shelby County, respectively. Her grandfather Foree (Forra) was of French descent (his wife being Scotch), and her grandfather Ogden of English descent, (his wife being Irish); he was a native of Maryland and descended from the "House of Brunswick," was educated in Philadelphia for a lawyer. Purchasing a stock of goods, he started west, intending to locate in Lexington Ky., but all was lost (there being no steamboats on the Ohio River then), and upon his arrival in that town he taught school, practiced law and acted as surveyor over a large scope of country. After his marriage (Rebecca Rice), he settled in Shelby County, Ky.; served as Captain in the late Revolutionary war, after which he moved to New Castle, Henry County, Ky., where he died. Maj. L. F. Marshall was a direct lineal descendant from the Irish Capt. John Marshall, who distinguished himself at the siege of Calais and therefore demanded and obtained the restoration of his lost title of Earl of Pembroke, which took place (as is said) January 7, 1558. Chief Justice John Marshall (except George Washington) the greatest and best of all Americans, was of the same stock of Marshalls as is Gov. Charles Anderson and Maj. Robert (Sumpter) Anderson, their mother being sister of Maj. Marshall's father, and their father Col. Richard Clough Anderson, of Louisville Ky. Lewis Field, grandfather of the subject of this sketch (on his mother's side), was Indian scout in the late Revolutionary war, and could relate many thrilling adventures of frontier life. Although a stanch Democrat he was an intimate friend and boon companion of the great pacificator, Henry Clay.

HENRY P. MELTON, farmer, stock-raiser and old settler of Ballard County, was born April 2, 1822, in Jackson County, Ala., and is the second of two children born to John C. and Penelope (Vester) Melton, natives of North Carolina. The grandparents, Joseph and Ferabe Melton, were supposed to have been descendants of Pocahontas; the grandfather, on the mother's side, was David Vester, of Irish descent. Both grandfathers were in the war of 1812, and both were wounded. Grandfather Melton was also in the Creek war. The subject of this sketch was reared on a farm, received a limited education, and with his brother came to the Purchase in 1839, and settled south of Mayfield Creek, Ballard Co., Ky., where they bought 160 acres of land and improved it. Our subject has improved here ten or twelve farms, more than any other man in the county. He located where he now lives in 1860, and owns 433 acres of land in good condition, and two other farms containing 173 acres; also two houses and lots in Blandville. He is the architect of his own fortune, having started in life almost penniless. He was married in October, 1840, to Mary A. Sams, of Ballard County, daughter of Wiley and Sarah (Atherton) Sams, natives of North Carolina, the mother of Irish descent. He had born to him by this union four children: M. C. (deceased), Eliza J. (now Stienbeck), H. R. and F. M. Mrs. Melton died in August, 1856, a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Melton was next married in June, 1858, to Frances Atherton, of Ballard County, daughter of C. and Ellen (Burrow) Atherton, and one child was born to this union: Mary G. (now Owens). The second wife died in April, 1859, a member of the Baptist Church. He was next married in June 1860, to Sarah Stienbeck, of Missouri, daughter of William and Zylpha (Poe) Stienbeck. Her father was born in Berlin, Prussia. To this union were born six children: Maganar (Spencer), Leander J., Belle B. (now Chandler), Henrietta J., Sidney Lee and Flora F. This third wife died in November, 1873, a member of the Baptist Church. His fourth marriage was on July 30, 1874, to Mrs. Anna M. Barnum, of Pulaski County, Ill., daughter of William and Elizabeth (Smith) Carns, natives of Tennessee and South Carolina and of French and English descent, respectivly. By this union one child was born: Angie H. Mr. and Mrs. Melton are members of the Baptist Church. He has served as justice for nine years, has been a Mason since 1848, and is an Odd Fellow. He cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk, and has voted the Democratic ticket ever since.

ISHAM MILLER, was born November 21, 1807, in Richmond, Va., and is the third of ten children (five boys) born to Anderson and Martha (Moore) Miller, natives of Virginia, and of Scotch-Irish and Irish descent, respectively. Our subject, with his parents, came from Virginia to Green County, Ky., in 1819, where they engaged in farming. In 1830 they moved to Logan County, Ky., where his father died in 1840, aged sixty-four years. The mother died in 1833, aged forty-eight years. About 1828 our subject moved to Logan County, where he engaged at farming, speculated in tobacco, and worked at the carpenter's trade till 1867, when he sold out and came to Ballard County, and located where he now lives on 100 acres of land in good condition. He lost two good horses during the war by guerrillas, and was the owner of a few negroes when the war broke out. He was married in May, 1834, to Mary F. Browder, of Logan County, a daughter of Richard and Elizabeth (Anderson) Browder, of Virginia; she died in 1835. His next marriage was in August, 1836, to Jane A. Morrow, of Logan County, daughter of James and Mary (Scott) Morrow. By this union he had born to him twelve children: John A., Mary F. (deceased, married a Hines), Martha J. (deceased), James W. (deceased), Margaret E. (deceased), Virginia A. (deceased), George T., Sarah E. (deceased, and was married to J. Upshaw), James R., Caroline C., W. E. and Addie (deceased). His second wife died October 1, 1865, aged forty-seven years, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His third marriage was in January, 1868, to Beedie Bishop, of Ballard County, Ky., a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Howard) Bishop, natives of Kentucky and Virginia, respectively, and of Irish and English origin. Mr. Miller and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Mason, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Jackson; he voted the Democratic ticket till 1860, when he cast a vote for A. Lincoln, and has voted the Republican ticket ever since. W. E. Miller, son of Isham Miller, was born March 7, 1859, in Logan County, Ky., and is the eleventh of twelve children. He was reared on a farm, attended the public schools, and cast his first presidential vote for James A. Garfield.

W. A. MILLER was born August 19, 1824, in Shelby County, Ky., and is the third of seven children born to Joseph and Nancy (Montgomery) Miller, natives of Kentucky, and of German and Irish descent. He was reared on a farm, received a common school education, and lived with his parents till he was twenty-three years old, when he moved to Ballard County, and bought the farm on which he now resides, of 230 acres, which he mostly improved. He started in life with but little, and lost two horses during the war; he gave a third to the Federal Army, for fear it might be stolen, for which he afterward received pay. His father was the owner of some negroes before the war. Mr. Miller was married February 18, 1847, to Eliza H. Shrader, of Spencer County, Ky., but a native of Ohio County, Ky., and a daughter of George and Nancy (Davison) Shrader, natives of Jefferson County, Ky., and Virginia, respectively, and of German and English descent. He had born to him by this union five children: Olivia T. (now Haggard), Nancy R. (now Mason), Joseph A., Mary E. (deceased) and George T. Mr. Miller is a Mason, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Taylor, but now votes the Democratic ticket.

BENJAMIN L. MOORE was born October 12, 1842, in Christian County, Ky., and is the youngest of eleven children—four boys and seven girls—born to John A. and Amelia W. (Elliott) Moore, natives of Virginia and Tennessee respectively. In 1844, with his parents, he came to Ballard County, five miles south of Ogden's Landing, where his father purchased 1,000 acres of land, and on this farm Benjamin L. was reared. He lived with his parents till the war broke out, when he enlisted in the fall of 1863, in Company C, Seventh Kentucky Confederate Infantry, under Capt. Hinkle. He took part in the battles of Harrisonburg, Franklin, Guntown, Nashville, and Murfreesborough, Tenn.; was in the numerous skirmishes and surrendered at Paducah in the spring of 1865. He returned home and engaged in farming; at the age of twenty-five years he commenced farming for himself, and now owns 280 acres of fine land. Mr. Moore was married May 10, 1868, to Jennie Jones, of Ballard County, a native of Virginia and a daughter of Allen and Harriet (Harper) Jones, natives of Buckingham County, Va. To this union have been born six children: Benjamin E. (deceased), Eugene E., Henry Clay, Maudie, Frank J. and Birdie. Mr. Moore is a member of the Baptist Church.

JAMES H. MOORE, farmer and stock raiser, was born March 28, 1829, in Obion County, Tenn., and is the second of the twelve children (seven boys) born to Samuel and Abigail (Addams) Moore. The father was a son of John and Margaret (Ervin) Moore, of English and Irish origin, came from Virginia, and was in some of the Indian wars; the grandparents on the mother's side were John and Margaret Addams, natives of Pennsylvania. John Addams was a farmer, of Irish descent, and was a Revolutionary soldier. The father and mother of our subject were respectively born in the counties of Nelson and Henry, Ky. They came to the Purchase in 1830, and settled near Mayfield, Graves County, where the father entered and improved lands; they came to Ballard County in 1840, remained a few years, and then returned to Graves County to educate their children; five or six years later they returned to Ballard County, where the father died in 1856. He was born in 1801; his wife was born in 1802, and died about ten days after her husband. James H. Moore lived with his parents till eighteen years of age, when he engaged in flat-boating down the Mississippi River, which he followed for about ten years, trading a part of the time. He located in Ballard County in 1861, where he resided on 200 acres of land, which he had improved. He has added to this till he now owns about 1,000 acres—about 400 acres cleared and in good condition, embellished with good buildings. Our subject is the architect of his own fortune, which he has accumulated mostly since the war. He was married in August, 1861, to Mrs. Sarah Haws, of Ballard County, a daughter of Benjamin and Nancy (Boren) Crice, natives of Illinois, and of German descent. Six children have been born to this union: James H., Marshall, Thomas L., Creighton, William and Samuel. Mr. Moore is a Mason, and has been engaged in the pork business in Cairo, also in tobacco speculation, and is now the owner of one of the finest farms in the county.

WILLIAM W. MORRIS was born February, 16, 1844, in Holmes County, Miss., and is the seventh of nine children, six boys and three girls, born to Noah and Martha (Erwin) Morris, born in South Carolina and Louisiana, respectively. His grandparents were Benjamin Morris of Irish origin and a farmer, and Joseph Erwin of English descent, also a farmer. William W. Morris was reared on a farm, receiving a good English education and was attending school at Monticello, Ark., at the time the war broke out, when he and all his brothers enlisted in the Confederate Army. He enlisted in July, 1861, in Company B, Ninth Arkansas Infantry, under Capt. Iron, Bradley commanding colonel, and engaged in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Barnsville, Port Hudson and Vicksburg, and was in Gen. Loring's division from Dalton to Atlanta, and was also in the Nashville and Franklin fight; was in Forrest's command on Hood's retreat and afterward went to Mobile and South Carolina, to join the army of Virginia; his last fight was in Bentonville, N. C., and in April, 1865, surrendered. He was wounded at Shiloh in the right side, and at Bentonville in the left side. After the close of the war, he returned to Goodman, Miss., engaged in the drug business and studied medicine for two years. In 1868, he came to Ballard County, where he taught school for fifteen terms and preached, having been licensed in February. 1872; about 1882, he turned his entire attention to farming. His only ally in life has been his wife, and he has a farm of 123 acres, 100 improved. He was married September 21, 1876, to Miss M. H. Reeves, of Ballard County, daughter of W. H. and Penelope (White) Reeves, natives of Kentucky and of Irish and Scotch descent. To this marriage have been born four children: William W., Charles C., Fannie E., and Nellie W. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are members of the Christian Church, and he is a Mason. He cast his first presidential vote for Seymour, and he is still a Democrat.

MRS. ELIZABETH A. MORGAN, the worthy subject of this sketch, was born July 27, 1826, in Ballard County, Ky., where she has all her life resided. She is the daughter of Tolly C. Gholson, a Virginian, who was born in 1798, and died in 1833. His wife, Phoebe, daughter of John Dyer, was born in 1801, and died in 1878. This union was blessed with the following children: Ellis D., John W., Mary J. (Reddick), subject, and Tolly C. On April 19, 1849, our subject was married to Thomas M. Morgan, a native of Daviess County, Ind. He was born November 25, 1822, and died January 28, 1879. To subject and her husband were born Georgia A. (Biggs), Thomas T., Rev. John J., Sarah E. (Flint), Elena T., Fredonia, Robert M. and Mary T. (Pease). Since the decease of her late husband, Mrs. Morgan, with her children, has carried on farming, having an estate of 600 acres of medium land in a fair state of cultivation. She is an honored member of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM W. MOSBY was born April 19, 1825, in what is now Ballard, but then Hickman County, Ky, and is the third of ten children born to Daniel and Mary (Watson) Mosby, the former of whom was a native of Boone, and the latter a native of Bourbon County, Ky., and of Scotch-English and Irish descent. Daniel Mosby was married in Indiana, and soon after removed to Missouri. From there, in 1825, he came with his family to Hickman County, Ky., which was then almost an unbroken wilderness, and included nearly all of the Purchase District. Here he afterward entered several hundred acres of land, erected a rude log cabin, and subsequently improved a farm. He afterward sold and bought several different farms in the neighborhood, and was extensively engaged in agricultural pur-uits and stock-breeding until his death, February 9, 1876, in his eighty-second year. He was magistrate in Hickman and Ballard Counties for more than twenty years, and was the second sheriff of Ballard County. The first court ever held in Ballard County was held in Mr. Mosby's tobacco barn. He was a veteran of the war of 1812, having served under Gen. Harrison throughout the entire struggle. He and wife were devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church —the first religious services in Ballard County having been held in his cabin. He was also an earnest advocate of the temperance cause. William W. Mosby acquired an excellent practical business education, mainly by his own exertions, after he became a man. He was employed on the home farm until he attained his majority. He then bought wild land near the present site of Bardwell, where he subsequently improved a farm and resided until 1866, when he sold out and bought 320 acres of wild land immediately east of Arlington, on the old State road. Here he improved another farm, upon which he still resides, and to which he has added from time to time, now owning well improved farms, amounting to some 600 acres. He is also quite extensively engaged in breeding fine horses, both roadsters and draft horses. Recently he has quite extensively engaged in breeding short-horn cattle. He was married January 26, 1855, to Miss Matilda F. Berry, a native of Ballard County, Ky., and a daughter of Isaac N. Berry, one of the early pioneers of western Kentucky. Eleven children have blessed their union, seven of whom—five sons and two daughters —are yet living. Mr. Mosby and wife and all their children are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., belonging to both the subordinate lodge and the encampment. In politics Mr. Mosby is a Democrat; is the oldest native-born citizen of Ballard County, and is one of its leading representative farmers.

JOHN L. MOSS, Ballard County, was born in Green County, Ky., August 21, 1852, and is one of the eight sons born to William H. and Sarah J. (Price) Moss, both natives of Green County, Ky., and of Welsh descent. William H. Moss was educated and married in his native county, where he also learned the blacksmith trade, which he has followed nearly all his life. In the fall of 1857, he removed to Columbus, Hickman Co., Ky., and remained two years. He then removed to the eastern part of the same county, where he now resides, and has since been engaged in agricultural pursuits. He is a veteran of the war with Mexico, having held a lieutenant's commission in one of the Kentucky regiments, and participated in the battle of Buena Vista, under Gen. Taylor. He also held a lieutenant's commission in Faulkner's Partisan Rangers during the late civil war. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was for a time sheriff of Hickman County. John L. Moss was employed on the home farm until he was twenty-five years old. He then leased a farm in the southwestern part of Ballard County, where he was employed in agricultural pursuits until 1882, when he sold out, and has since been engaged in the grain trade at Berkeley. He was justice of the peace in Ballard County for three years, from 1880 to 1883. He was married, December 27, 1876, to Miss Sarah A. Evans, a native of Hickman County, Tenn. Three children blessed this union, two of whom, one son and one daughter, are yet living. Mrs. Sarah A. Moss departed this life, January 13, 1883. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Moss is a member of the same church, and in politics is a Democrat.

JOSEPH T. MURPHY was born October 24, 1846, in Graves County, Ky., where he was reared and lived till 1869, when he came to Ballard County, the place of his present residence. His father, William Murphy, a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., was born in 1808, and died in 1876. William married Charity E. Wynn, of Caswell County, N. C., born in 1812, and now living. Their children are: Mary S. (Ross), Edward H., subject, Zachary T., George W., Rebecca G. and Adda B. (Lovelace). In youth our subject procured a common school education, and is a reading man. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.; also a Baptist and affiliates with the Democratic party.

JESSE W. NANCE was born January 28, 1852, in Christian County, Ky., where he grew to manhood. In 1874 he came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Lilborn Nance, a native of Trigg County, Ky., was born in 1822 and died in 1859. He was the son of Joel Nance, a Virginian, who served in the war of 1812, and died in 1878, at the age of eighty-four years. Subject's mother, Dollie, daughter of Jesse and Disia (Jones) Giles, a native of Halifax County, Va., was born in 1823, and is still living. She was married to Lilborn November 24, 1844, and to them were born: Joel G., Mary E. (Bracken), Sarah J. (Hines), subject, Emma T. (Harding), and Edward V. Joel (senior's) children were William, Lilborn, Benjamin B. and Mary T. (Lindsay and Cayce). Our subject is a farmer, superintending his mother's farm of 380 acres, upon which he is successfully cultivating wheat, corn, tobacco and other products of the country. In politics Mr. Nance affiliates with the Democratic party.

J. C. NEELY was born in Doddridge County (now West) Virginia, on July 22, 1847, and is a son of Matthew and Maria (Newlow) Neely. The parents were natives of Virginia and of Irish descent. The paternal grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The father was a soldier in some of the early Indian wars. The parents lived and died in Virginia. Subject is the youngest of twelve children, of whom ten are now living. Subject's education was received in the schools of Morgantown, Va., and in 1867 he accepted a position as time-clerk in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; served there a short time and then entered the employment of the Knoxville & Kentucky Railroad, and subsequently was with the Western North Carolina Railroad. In 1871 he turned his attention to railroad contracting, which he has followed extensively ever since; the following being some of the railroads with which he has been engaged: In 1871, the North & South Alabama; in 1872, the Illinois Central; in 1874, the Cincinnati Southern; in 1876, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé; in 1879, the Cincinnati Southern; in 1880, the Pensacola & Alabama; in 1881, the Knoxville Branch of the Louisville & Nashville; in 1882, the New Orleans & Northeastern. In 1883 he was appointed by the United States Government as contractor on the Mississippi levee at Fairview, La. Mr. Neely was married at Bardwell, Ballard County, on June 24, 1874, to Miss Virginia Anderson, a daughter of David M. and Elizabeth (Knight) Anderson. The parents were brought to this State when children, and settled first in Logan County. In 1869 they came to this county and settled on the farm of 100 acres, now occupied by the widow. There the father died in 1870. Mr. Neely is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

R. B. NEVILLE, Ballard County, was born September 27, 1822, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is one of twins who were eighth in order of birth. His grandfather, Joe Neville, was a native of South Carolina, was born in 1739, and there his son, George Washington Neville, was born in 1772. At the age of sixteen, the latter accompanied his father to the vicinity of Nashville, Tenn, and at the age of twenty-two moved to Montgomery County, Tenn., where his son R. B. was born, as above stated. In 1823, George W. moved to Weakley County, Tenn.; in 1827 to Hickman County, Ky. In early life George W. was a trader in horses, which he sold in Natchez, Miss., carrying them down the river on flat-boats. There being no steamboats in those days, the stock and flatboats were disposed of at their destination, and the traders walked home. In this traffic Mr. N. was successful, and afterward became sheriff of Montgomery County, and married Rachael Kilebrew, who bore him eleven children. Robert B. Neville, at the age of five was taken by his father to Hickman County, Ky., where he remained until 1851, when he came to Ballard County. In 1849 he was married to Clarissa J. Berry, daughter of Isaac Newton and Sarah Ann Berry, of Ballard County. Seven children are the result of this marriage, all of whom are still living and five of whom are married. In the year 1872, Mr. Neville bought a farm which was near a place known as Cana Creek, and which is now the site of the town of Arlington, Ky. The same year the Illinois Central Railroad was surveyed through his land, and before the road was completed, Arlington had grown to be a respectable commercial center. At present Arlington is a town of 500 inhabitants, and is one of the best shipping points in the country. In politics Mr. Neville is a Democrat. He is a Baptist in faith and practice. Throughout his life he has advocated temperance both by precept and example. In his earlier life schools were not nearly so numerous as now, and most of his education, which is limited, was gained in the great world's school. He is a farmer and at one time was justice of the peace of Ballard County.

THOMAS NEWMAN, was born October 4, 1829, in Ballard County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1855, removed to Parker County, Tex., where he joined the Texas Rangers, and served three years during the late war; in 1866 he returned to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Andrew Newman, a native of Butler County, Ky., was born in 1801, came to Ballard County in 1832, where he long served as constable and magistrate and died in 1881. He was the son of, Thomas, of Nelson County, Ky. Subject's mother, Abigail, daughter of James Arm strong, of Butler County, was born in 1804. The children of herself and husband are: Nicy J. (Stovall), Isaac L., Elizabeth A. (Kimmell), subject, Irena, Cyrene (Burrow), David P. and Andrew L. On March 3, 1853, subject was married to Miss Sarah E., daughter of Wilson and Marrilla (Rhea) Copeland, of Ballard County, born October 3, 1833, and to them have been born: Marrilla J., Sardinia R. (Hook), Andrew W., Samuel A. (deceased), Sarah T. (Hook), Ida (Preston) Isaac B., Joshua E., Annie, Abigail, Olivia and Thomas T. Subject is a farmer having 160 acres of good land in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and in politics a Democrat.

JOHN M. NICHOLS, one of the leading attorneys of Ballard County, was born December 25, 1846, in Caldwell County, Ky., and is the youngest of nine children (five of them boys) born to Jesse and Elizabeth (Wadlington) Nichols, natives of Kentucky, the father of German and English, the mother of Welsh and English descent. The mother died in September, 1862; the father was born in October, 1804, and died July 23, 1884. The family moved to McCracken County, Ky., about 1849, thence to Missouri, in 1852, but returned in a very short time to Ballard County, and to McCracken. John M. Nichols was reared a farmer, but at the age of nineteen years commenced the study of law with Col. George W. Morrow, of Paducah, also studied with Z. W. Bugg, of Blandville. In the meantime, he taught school and worked on the farm to get funds to continue his studies; he was admitted to the bar, in the fall of 1869, by Judge Boone and Judge Crossland; in 1870 he located at Blandville, where he has pursued with unabated energy the practice of his profession till to-day he stands at the head of his profession in Ballard County. He has accumulated a goodly property in Blandville. He was married in November, 1871, to Joseph Ann Foree of Ballard County, daughter of Joseph and Agnes (Young) Foree, natives of Shelby and Ballard Counties, Ky., respectively. There have been born to this union six children: Jesse F., Nora, Willie (deceased), Agnes, Andrew and Sallie. Mrs. Nichols is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Nichols cast his first vote for Seymour and Blair, in 1868, and still votes with the Democratic party.

GUSTAVUS A. NORTHINGTON was born February 28, 1832, in Robertson County, Tenn. He is the third of thirteen children (six boys) born to Samuel and Sarah W. (Walton) Northington, natives of North Carolina, and of Scotch and English descent. Subject's father was the son of Samuel Northington, who married a Miss Jones, both natives of Virginia. His grandfather, on mother's side, was Edward Walton. Gustavus A. Northington was reared on a farm, attended Clarksville (Tenn.) Academy, and at the age of eighteen years engaged as salesman for three years, when he commenced business on his own account. In 1853 he clerked in a commission house, in Memphis, for six months. In April, 1858, he moved to where he now resides on 1,200 acres of land, about one-half cleared and in good condition, and has also carried on a general store ever since he has been in the county. He owned a number of negroes before the war, but has made most of his accumulations by his own industry and economy. He married in June, 1862, Susan Vaughan, of Ballard County, a native of Montgomery County, Tenn., and daughter of Granderson and Elizabeth (Nevel) Vaughan, natives of North Carolina, and had born to him by this union five children, three living: Samuel G., Bettie W. and Vaughan. His wife died in 1881, a member of the Christian Church. In September, 1847, Mr. Northington married M. J. Maner, of Ballard County, a native of Todd County, and daughter of W. C. and Mary (Ferguson) Maner. He had born to him by this union four children: Mamie, Carrie, Jennie and Jesse. Mr. Northington cast his first presidential vote for James Buchanan and is still a Democrat.

JOHN LEE ODONILEY was born March 9, 1833, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is the sixth of twelve children (six boys) born to James and Mary E. (Lee) Odoniley, natives of Halifax County, Va., and Davidson County, Tenn., respectively, and of Irish and Scotch origin. Mary E. Lee was a descendant of the noted Lee family of Virginia. James Odoniley was a son of Benjamin Odoniley, who married Lucy Johnson, and both were natives of Virginia. James Odoniley was also a soldier in the war of 1812, was in the battle of New Orleans and was a farmer. Mrs. Mary Odoniley was a daughter of Braxton Lee, who was also a farmer. John Lee Odoniley was reared on a farm and attended school about one year in all. He came, with his parents, to Christian County, Ky., in 1845, and settled twelve miles south of Hopkinsville, where his father purchased and improved a farm of 400 acres, being then the owner of eleven negroes. They moved to Ballard County in 1858, and settled near Hinkleville, on 260 acres, where the father died in March, 1872, at the age of about sixty-seven years. The mother died in 1865; both parents were members of the Baptist Church. John Lee Odoniley lived with his parents till he became of age, when he engaged in superintending on a farm in Christian County, till 1863. In December, 1870, he moved to Ballard County, and located near Hinkleville, on 134 acres, where he lived six years. Thence he went to Blandville, where he engaged in the hotel business about two years; then returned to Hinkleville, and purchased 120 acres of land. He now owns 190 acres. In July, 1883, he moved to Wickliffe and engaged in the hotel business, which he still follows, with his son-in-law, Henry Watwood. He was married February 1, 1855, to Susan R. Buchanan, of Christian County, a native of Warren County, N. C., and daughter of James C. and Martha T. (Mabry) Buchanan, natives of North Carolina. To this union were born three children: Cammatia (now Grimes), Alma J. (now Watwood) and Anna W. (now Watwood). Mrs. Odoniley is a Presbyterian; Mr. Odoniley is a Mason, and also a member of the K. of H. and K. & L. of H. He cast his first presidential vote for James Buchanan and is still a Democrat. Henry Watwood was born in Ballard County, Ky., near Hinkleville, August 24, 1857, and is the sixth of nine children (four boys) born to Alexander and Fannie (White) Watwood, natives of Montgomery County, Tenn. and Louisiana County, Va., respectively, and of English descent on father's side. The father was a son of William Watwood, who married Nancy Dycus. Henry Watwood was married in December, 1883, to Miss Anna W. Odoniley, of Ballard County, born in Christian County, and daughter of J. L. Odoniley. Mr. Watwood was reared on a farm and attended the common schools, and is engaged in the hotel business, with his father-in-law, J. Lee Odoniley, and owns one-half interest. He cast his first presidential vote for Hancock.

THOMAS B. OGDEN was born October 29, 1840, in Shelby County, Ky. He is the third of five children born to John M. and Martha (Hawthorn) Ogden, natives of Henry County, Ky. John M. Ogden was a son of Masterson and Rebecca (Rice) Ogden, of English and Welsh-Scotch descent, respectively, and natives of Pennsylvania and Virginia. Masterson was a captain in the war of 1812, and was a farmer. The mother of our subject was a daughter of James Hawthorn, who married a Miss Rollen, and these were of Irish and English descent respectively. The father of our subject was a colonel of State militia, and was also a teacher; he died August 30, 1866, aged sixty-eight. His wife died February 23, 1854. Thomas B. Ogden succeeded in gaining a good business education by his own energies and with the aid of his father. His grandfather had charge of schools at Lexington, Ky., at an early day. Thomas B. came with his parents to Ballard County, in the spring of 1846, and settled at Ogden's Landing, on the Ohio River, where he has since resided, and where his father had purchased about 1,000 acres of land, which he partly improved. Our subject has been engaged in the general commission business. He has charge of the government lights, and has been acting as deputy clerk of Ballard for three years. He was constable for two years and served as deputy sheriff fourteen months, in 1873–74. He enlisted November 12, 1862, in Company C, Seventh Kentucky Confederate Infantry, but was discharged in May, 1863. He was formerly a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of P., and cast his first presidential vote for Seymour in 1863. F. H. Ogden, brother of the above, was born November 17, 1848, in Ballard County, and is the youngest of the family. He was married in February, 1871, to Miss Ida D. Crenshaw, of Ballard County, a native of Henry County. To them was born one child, Thomas B. Mrs. Ogden died in February, 1878, and Mr. Ogden was next married in September, 1878, to Eliza Iliff, of Elizabethtown, Ill., daughter of Thomas H. and Pheba (Hufman) Iliff, of Irish descent. One child was born to this union, John M. Mrs. Ogden died in June, 1883; she was a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Ogden's third marriage was on January 16, 1884, to Miss Bertie Hunt, of Paducah, a daughter of Dr. W. D. and Carrie (Feturel) Hunt. Mr. Ogden is a member of the I. O. O. F. He cast his first presidential vote for Seymour and Blair in 1878. The father of our subject owned eleven negroes before the war. Ogden Bros. have been farming together, and own at present 1,200 acres of land, in good condition. They are two of the most energetic and progressive young men in Ballard County.

O. H. OLDHAM was born February 25, 1841, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is the eldest of six children (three boys) born to Joel and Mary A. (Hardey) Oldham, natives of Montgomery County, Tenn., and of English origin. Grandfather Jesse Oldham was a farmer, one of the first settlers of Tennessee, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. Mary A. Oldham's father was Obadiah Hardey, a farmer and from Virginia. At the age of twenty years O. H. Oldham commenced life for himself at farming, which he continued until the war broke out, when he enlisted, in the spring of 1862, in Capt. Faulkner's company, cavalry, and took part in the battles of Belmont, Shiloh, Fort Pillow, Chickamauga and also in numerous skirmishes; he was an orderly and was discharged at the expiration of his term of service, which was eighteen months, when he returned home and re-engaged in farming. He first settled in McCracken County, where he lived till 1864, when he moved to where he now resides near Barlow City, Ballard County, and where he purchased 160 acres of land; he is now the possessor of 208 acres of land in good condition, which he accumulated by his own industry and perseverance. He was married April 6, 1865, to Miss L. F. Potter, of McCracken County, and daughter of James and Polly A. (Kirby) Potter, natives of Warren County, Ky. He had born to him by this union seven children: Ellen (deceased), Mary J., James H., Richard E., Jacob, Claude and Alva, two last deceased. Mr. Oldham and wife are Baptists. He cast his first presidential vote for Seymour and Blair, in 1868, and still votes the Democratic ticket.

JOHN F. OWEN was born February 25, 1844, in Ballard County, Ky., where he continues to reside. His father, Rev. Joseph W. Owen, a native of Robertson County, Tenn., was born in 1810, and came to Ballard County, Ky., in 1844, where he died in 1873. He married Sarah, daughter of John Simmons, of Robertson County, born in 1813, and this union was blessed with William W., Lemuel T., Rev. Thomas J., John F. (subject), Sarah A. (Ashbrook), Joseph B., Jerritta E. (Stahl) and James O. Subject was married November 15, 1866, to Miss Julia A., daughter of Alfred and Anna E. (Chiles) Watwood, of Ballard County, and born January 23, 1851; to them have been born Lou W., Anna R., Thomas J., Oba J., Wilks U. and Ula B. Our subject is a farmer, having 103 acres of fine land in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., also an active member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics a Democrat.

DR. J. R. OWEN was born September 15, 1839, in Ballard County, Ky. He is a son of T. J. Owen, who was born June 8, 1808, in Warren County, Ky. T. J.'s parents were John H. and Elizabeth (Humphreys) Owen. The father was born in Halifax County, Va., and from the age of twenty-one until his death was engaged in the ministry. The mother was born in Caswell County, N. C.; she died at the advanced age of eighty-four years. T. J. Owen was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty-two moved to Calloway County and entered 160 acres of land; two years later he sold this land, and in 1832 came to what is now Ballard County; he there married Garthena (familiarly called Gettie) Willingham, of Hickman County; she died in 1844, leaving two children, Dr. J. R. Owen and Margaret E. (wife of Joel B. Reese). After marriage, the father-in-law gave Mr. Owen 160 acres of land, on which he resided until 1876, when he moved to Arlington, and has since been living with his son. When living on his farm, he held the office of postmaster several years. Dr. J. R. Owen commenced the study of medicine in September, 1865, under the preceptorship of Dr. George Beeler, of Clinton, continuing two years; he then attended a course of lectures at the Louisville University, after which he practiced in Hickman County four years; he then returned to Louisville, and graduated from the University in March, 1872; he then returned to Hickman County and continued the practice of his profession there five years. In December, 1876, he came to Arlington, where he has since been engaged in practice. He is a member of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association, the Masonic fraternity, and Knights of the Golden Rule. Dr. Owen was married January 7, 1866, to Fannie J. Wray of Hickman County; this union has been blessed with nine children—seven sons and two daughters. He enlisted, in 1861, in Company A, Second Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army; was wounded at the battle of Hartsville, and battle of Chickamauga, Tenn., and served to the end of the war.

DR. J. M. PECK, of Ballard County, was born October 23, 1857, in Graves County, Ky. He is a son of J. M. and Melinda (James) Peck. The father was born in Massachusetts, and in 1830 came to Graves County, and settled in Mayfield, where he carried on the blacksmith trade, and was admitted to be one of the best workmen in his time. He died February, 1873, aged sixty-four. The mother was born in Henry County, Tenn., and is now living in Arlington. In 1875 our subject commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Drs. R. T. Hocker and A. T. Hobbs; two years later he entered Clinton College, and graduated therefrom in 1880, with the highest honors of his class. Going to Nashville, he entered the medical department of the Vanderbilt University, and graduated in 1882. He then came to Arlington, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession; he is also carrying on the drug business in company with Dr. Hocker. This business was established in the spring of 1884. The Doctor is a member of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association, and of the Graves County Medical Society. He was married October 23, 1883, to Miss Minnie I. Dupree, of Arlington. They are members of the First Baptist Church.

THE PENN FAMILY. William H. Penn, the progenitor of this worthy family, was born in Patrick County, Va.; lived for some years in Todd County, Ky., and came about 1835 to Ballard County, where he now resides. He married Mary A. Pollock, daughter of George Pollock, of Todd County, who is still living. Their children are: William H., George P., Levi, Alfred D., Shadrach M., Jaquilon and Jacob. Alfred D. Penn was born September 23, 1840, in Todd County, Ky., and in youth came with his parents to Ballard County, where he still resides. He procured an English education, and is a reading man. On November 7, 1861, he married Miss Mary H., daughter of Richard Wyatt, of Ballard County (born in 1843), and this union was blessed by the birth of Minnie and Lenner. Our subject is a farmer, owning 327 acres of fine land, well improved. He is a member in good standing in the order of Knights of Honor, and in politics is a Democrat.

JACOB PENN was born December 31, 1844, in Todd County, Ky., and in childhood came with his parents to Ballard County, where he has since resided. In youth he obtained a common school education, and is a reader of good books and papers. He was married, January 9, 1866, to Miss Willie F., daughter of Richard and Mary (Glenn) Fortson, of Ballard County (born in 1851), and to them have been born Mary E., Richard B., Clarrie L., Lillie A. and Jacob R. Subject is a farmer, having 230 acres of good and valuable land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a Methodist in religion, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

WILLIAM H. PENN, one of the old settlers of Ballard County, was born February 10, 1810, in Patrick County, Va., and is the second of eight children (five boys) born to Abraham and Sally (Crite) Penn, natives of Patrick County, Va.—the father of Irish and Dutch descent and the mother of Dutch descent. Abraham Penn was a captain in the war of 1812, and was the son of Thomas Penn, a Revolutionary soldier and farmer. Sally (Crite) Penn's father, Hamon Crite, was also a farmer. The Penns are descendants of William Penn, who settled Pennsylvania. William H. Penn came with his parents to Todd County, Ky., in 1820, where his father purchased 150 acres of land, improved it and resided on it till his death, about 1847. William H. moved to where he now lives in 1852 on 400 acres, of which he has cleared 230 acres. He owned about fifteen negroes before the war, and lost five good mules during the conflict. He was married March 15, 1831, to Miss Mary A. Pollock, of Todd County, Ky., and daughter of George and Nancy (Goren) Pollock, natives of Montgomery, Tenn., and Warren County, Ky., and of English descent. Nine children were the result of this marriage: William H., Henry (now dead), George T. (deceased), Levi M. (died in the army), Alfred D. (deceased), Shradrach, Jaquillon, Thelbert (deceased), and Mary A. (deceased). Mr. Penn had two sons in the Confederate Army. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Jackson.

W. H. PENN, JR., was born March 15, 1832, in Todd County, Ky. He is the eldest of nine children born to W. H. and Polly A. (Pollock) Penn. W. H., Jr., was reared on a farm, and lived with his parents until he was twenty-two years old, when he engaged in superintending a farm for two years. In 1852 he came to Ballard County with his parents. In 1855 he located near his father in north Ballard County. In 1860 he located near Woodville. In 1870 he moved to where he now lives on a farm of 210 acres of land in good condition and well improved. This he has accumulated by his own industry and perseverance. He lost some property during the war, about thirteen head of horses and mules. His father lost about twenty negroes by the war. Mr. Penn's first milling experience was with a horse-mill, and was all day grinding two bushels. He was married January 24, 1856, to Miss Sarah E. Wyatt, of Ballard County; she was born in Christian County, Ky., a daughter of R. N. and Martha E. (Harelson) Wyatt, natives of King and Queen County, Va., and of English and German descent. To this union were born ten children: Thomas L., Etta (now Jones), Emmett B., William M., Charles R., Addie H., Anna, Ula M., Lillie T. (deceased) and Madie A. Mr. Penn and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. Subject is a Mason, was master of the Grange, and is a descendant of the great William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania.

REV. THOMAS H. PETTIT, Ballard County, was born June 1, 1828, in Greene County, Tenn. He is a son of Joel and Mary (Black) Pettit, both born in the same county and State. The father died in Johnson County, Ill., in 1874, aged seventy years. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, received a good common school education, and at the age of nineteen engaged in teaching school; this he followed for several years, after which he engaged in farming and preaching, and for the past twenty years his time has been devoted exclusively to the ministry connected with the Missionary Baptist Church. Since the age of sixteen, Mr. Pettit has been a resident of the Purchase District, except two years passed in Stewart County, and has held a pastorate in all the counties in the Purchase. In 1884 he was pastor of four churches, viz.: at Arlington, Corinth, Oak Grove, Weakley County, Tenn., and Mount Olive, in Obion County, Tenn. He is now serving Arlington Church two Sabbaths each month, and Corinth and Oak Grove, in Weakley County, Tenn., the other two. He was married September 14, 1851, to Adaline Belisle, of Stewart County, Tenn. These parents have had eight children, of whom five are living—two sons and three daughters. At the age of eighteen, Mr. Pettit was baptized into the fellowship of the Olive Baptist Church, in Marshall County, by the Rev. Ephraim Owings, of Wadesborough, Ky.

CHRISTOPHER R. PILE, Ballard County, was born in Washington County, Ky., January 6, 1825, and is the only son in a family of three children born to William and Mary (Barlow) Pile, the former of whom was a native of Virginia, and the latter a native of Washington County, Ky. They were of English and German descent respectively. Christopher R. Pile was employed on his father's farm and in his mill and store until he attained his majority. He then purchased the saw and grist-mill on Obion Creek, formerly owned by his father, which he operated by water-power for several years, but eventually put in steam-power. In 1875 he removed the mill to Arlington, where he continued the business until January, 1883, when he sold out and returned to his farm of 400 acres, three miles east of Arlington. Here he has since been extensively and exclusively engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock breeding. During the years 1873–74, he was engaged in the milling business near Boulder, Col., his mill in this county being rented. Mr. Pile has been three times married; first, in 1849, to Miss Sarah S. Cave, a native of Gallatin County, Ky., and a daughter of Daniel Cave; one daughter blessed this union, Hanie A., now Mrs. Bartell, who is the mother of an only daughter, viz.: Christie P. Bartell. Mrs. Sarah S. Pile departed this life October 23, 1857, in her twenty-sixth year, a devoted member of the Christian Church. Mr. Pile's second marriage was in 1858, to Miss Susanna Richards, a native of Nelson County, Ky. She died without issue December 7, 1871, in her thirty-ninth year; she was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Pile married his present wife, Miss Mattie Howle, a native of Ballard County, April 1, 1873. Mr. Pile and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity. In politics he is a Republican.

WILLIAM R. PILE was born in Ballard County, Ky., March 6, 1845, and is the seventh of eight children born to William and Elizabeth B. (Stayton) Pile, the former of whom was a native of the "Old Dominion" and the latter of Washington County, Ky. They were both of English descent. William Pile was married in Washington County, whither his parents had removed from Virginia when he was only a small boy. He married, and was there engaged in the distilling business for a number of years, and in 1835 came to what is now Ballard County, and bought a farm near the present site of Arlington, where he resided until his death, November 18, 1850, in his sixtieth year. In addition to the home farm, Mr. Pile also owned other lands in Ballard County, McCracken and Hickman Counties, amounting to some 4,000 acres. When he first came to Ballard County, he bought a horse-power grist-mill, to which he afterward attached a thrashing machine of his own invention, which was probably the first thrashing machine in the county. Soon after, he purchased an old dilapidated water-mill on Obion Creek, which he tore down, and probably erected the first water grist-mill in the county. Almost every trade or branch of merchandising was represented on Mr. Pile's plantation. He also owned a stock of merchandise at Milburn. He and wife were for many years devoted and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he was a Whig. William R. Pile was employed on his father's farm until December, 1863, when he enlisted in Company E, Thirtieth Mounted Infantry, Kentucky Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. After his return from the army he engaged in the saw and grist-mill business in connection with farming. After his mother's death, which occurred September 5, 1869, he bought the old homestead upon which he has ever since resided. Since 1876 he has been exclusively engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. He was married, June 27, 1872, to Miss Sarah E. Magruder, a native of Ballard County, Ky. One son and three daughters have blessed this union, all of whom are yet living. Mr. Pile and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Republican.

GEORGE L. PORTER, Ballard County, was born December 12, 1813, in Fauquier County, Va. The following year his parents moved to Henry County, Ky.; there they remained until 1831, when they removed to Columbus, Ky., coming on a flat-boat; they at once settled in the vicinity of Arlington and engaged in farming. His father, Eli Porter, died in 1832, aged sixty-two. In 1834 George secured a position as clerk on a flat-boat (which carried a large stock of dry goods), running from Columbus to Natchez, which position he filled for three years; he then accepted a position as a salesman in a dry goods store in Columbus, where he remained one year, after which he went to Pine Bluff, Ark., and was clerk there in a similar business fifteen months; he then went to Newcastle, Ky., and remained there several months with his sick brother; he then went to Cape Girardeau, Mo., where he remained as salesman for about seven years. In 1847 he returned to Columbus, and accepted a situation as dry goods salesman, which he retained twenty-five years, but on account of ill health was obliged to resign; in 1881 he came to Arlington, Ballard County, where he has since resided.

RICHARD PORTER was born in Bedford, Trimble Co., Ky., September 25, 1827, and is the fourth of six children born to Jeremiah and Nancy W. (Hardy) Porter, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Maryland. They were of Irish and English descent respectively. When only a small boy Jeremiah Porter removed with his parents to Woodford County, Ky. At the age of twenty-one he enlisted in Shelby's regiment and served with the same under Gen. Harrison through the war of 1812. He participated in all the principal battles of the northwest, and in the Canada campaign. He was married immediately after his return from the army, and soon afterward removed to Bedford, Trimble Co., Ky., where he was engaged in merchandising until 1832, when he came with his family to Hickman County. There he entered land near Columbus, and subsequently improved a farm. After a few years he sold this place, and bought another in the same neighborhood, where he resided until 1844. He then came to Ballard County, which had then just been organized, and was one of the commissioners who located the first county seat. He bought a farm near Blandville, which he sold after a few years, and bought another near the present site of Arlington, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death in the spring of 1862, in his seventy-first year. Mr. Porter served as sheriff in Hickman County for some eight years. He and wife were lifelong members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Richard Porter was employed on his father's farm until he attained his majority. He then went to Phillips County, Ark., where he bought a partially improved farm of 120 acres, to which he afterward added 270 acres. There he was engaged in farming until the breaking out of the late civil war. In January, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, First Regiment of Arkansas Cavalry, and served under Gen. Price until the fall of 1864, when he was taken prisoner while on detached service. He was paroled, but being in very poor health he was never exchanged. After the close of the war he returned to Ballard County and purchased the old homestead, upon which he still resides. He was married February 28, 1854, to Miss Matilda A. Sullenger, a native of Ballard County, Ky., and a daughter of Robert Sullenger, an early pioneer. To this union were born four children, of whom two sons and one daughter are yet living. Mrs. Matilda A. Porter departed this life May 21, 1865. She was a member of the Baptist Church. March 20, 1866, Mr. Porter married Miss Frances L. Birkhead, a native of Ballard County, Ky.; one son and two daughters have blessed this union. Mr. Porter and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is also an earnest advocate of the temperance cause. In politics he is a Democrat.

P. C. PUCKETT was born in Chesterfield County, Va., on November 16, 1829, and is a son of William and Nancy (Hood) Puckett. The parents were natives of Virginia, and of English descent. In 1837 they came to Kentucky and settled in Ballard County. The father purchased 400 acres and turned his attention to farming, and here resided until his death in 1873. The mother died in 1867. Our subject was the second of ten children, of whom six, four sons and two daughters are still living. Subject's schooling was received in the neighborhood. He remained at home until he was nineteen, and then settled on part of his father's farm, where he resided seven years. He then came to his present farm, where he now owns 160 acres, with 100 in cultivation. Mr. Puckett was married on June 27, 1861, to Miss Letsey A. Riley, a daughter of William Riley, of Ballard County. Six children, four of whom are now living, are the result of this union. Mr. Puckett and family are members of the Baptist Church, and he is also a member of New Retreat Lodge, No. 484, A. F. & A. M.

CURRAN P. RAY (deceased) was born December 19, 1815, in Trigg County, Ky., was a son of Dr. John and Nancy (Chilton) Ray, and was reared on a farm. He was first married on April 30, 1840, to C. E. Chappell of Christian County, Ky. He had born to him by this union five children: Elizabeth (dead), Lysias C., John S., Curran H. and Benjamin (now dead). His second marriage was to Susan Johnson, a native of Henry County, Ky., who has borne him two children: Fannie (now Russell) and Richard. In September, 1855, he married Ellen P. Trewolla, of Ballard County, born in Truro, England, and a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bany) Trewolla. By this union there were born nine children: William W. (dead), James M. (dead), Elizabeth C. (dead), Belle E. (dead), George W., Lizzie C. (dead), Robert Lee, Jeff Davis and Sidney J. Mr. Ray was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; his widow is a member of the Reformed Church. He had been engaged in the mercantile business and farming; was in the Confederate Army and took part in the battle of Shiloh, but sickness compelled him to return home. His third wife came to the United States in 1836, and lived in New York City, Philadelphia, Richmond, Va., and thence came to Christian County, Ky., and finally to Ballard County, in 1855, where she still lives on a good farm.

LYSIAS C. RAY was born July 3, 1842, in Christian County, Ky., and is the second of five children born to Curran P. and Cynthia E. (Chappell) Ray, of Scotch extraction. He was reared on a farm, and received an ordinary common school education, and subsequently taught three terms of school in Ballard County. In the fall of 1842 his parents moved to Ballard County, Ky., and first settled near Hinkleville, then lived on different farms, and finally located one mile east of Blandville. Our subject lived with his father till he was married in October, 1873, to Susan B. Violet, of Ballard County, and daughter of T. and Harriet (Grimes) Violet. He had born to him by this union four children: Ellen (deceased) and Harriet E.; the third died unnamed; the fourth was Curran M. The wife of our subject is a member of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM F. REDDICK was born in Nelson County, Ky., on January 8, 1815, and is a son of William and Mary (Lent) Reddick. The father was a native of Pennsylvania, the mother of Nelson County, Ky. In 1834 the parents came to the Purchase and settled in Milburn. Here the father carried on farming until his death on February 22, 1872. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The mother died in July, 1874. Subject was the third of six children, of whom three are now living, viz.: Nancy Thompson, in Milburn; Elizabeth Bishop, in Nelson County; and William F., our subject. The latter received an education from the old subscription schools, remained at home until twenty-six years old, and then, commencing life for himself, he settled on a farm that he received from his father, resided thereon about two years, and then came to his present farm. He now owns about 800 acres in this and other counties, of which there are about 350 acres in cultivation. Mr. Reddick was married on June 4, 1844, to Miss Mary Goldson, a daughter of Tolly and Phoebe (Dyer) Goldson, natives of Virginia. Mrs. Reddick was born in this district in March, 1824, and is the mother of eleven children, of whom eight are now living: Kittie (widow of Jasper Pennybocker), Tolly, John, Richard M., Silas, Fannie (wife of Dr. H. L. Wiley), Enoch and Virginia (wife of John Stoveall). Mr. Reddick was a soldier in the Mexican war, having enlisted at Paducah April 1, 1847, and served six months. Mrs. Reddick is a member of the Baptist Church.

DR. HERMAN REID, deceased, was born in Green County, Ky., on July 16, 1816, and was a son of John and Mary (Lockett) Reid. The father died when subject was quite young. He was then taken to east Tennessee, where he lived with his mother's people. He remained with his grandfather until he was sixteen, and then started out for himself and acquired an education. He then turned his attention to the study of medicine, and graduated from the university at Louisville about 1840. In 1841 he came to Milburn, where he practiced almost constantly until his death, which occurred on January 7, 1874. At one time he also had a drug store in Milburn, which he conducted until the breaking out of the war. He was married to Miss Lucretia R. Pile, who still survives him. The result of this union was the following children: E. O., born November 19, 1845; M. E., born September 27, 1849, now wife of W. S. Duncan; F. Q., born January 23, 1852, and now wife of G. W. Greenup; W. C., born February 24, 1854; A. L., born December 6, 1856, and now wife of A. E. Crews; H. C., born May 8, 1859; R. L., born December 4, 1861; Lillie H., born October 23, 1868;

E. H., born March 26, 1871. Subject was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Masonic fraternity, and was at one time postmaster at Milburn. Dr. E. O. Reid, the eldest son, was born in Milburn. His education was received in the schools of his native county, and at the age of nineteen he commenced reading medicine with his father; he studied with him two years and then attended lectures at Louisville, graduating in the class of 1869. He then settled in Dublin, Graves County, but only remained one year. He then came to Milburn and entered into business with his father. This partnership continued until the death of the latter, and then E. O. continued by himself. He also established a drug and dry goods store, which he conducted until 1881. He then sold out and moved to Clinton. There he has since engaged in the dry goods business under the firm name of E. O. Reid & Co., and in the real estate business with the firm of Ray & Reid. Dr. E. O. Reid was married in 1870 to Miss Alice L. Trainnum, of Paducah. This lady died in 1876, leaving two children, a son and a daughter. In 1880 he married Miss Sue M. Dodge. This lady is a member of the Methodist Church South. Dr. H. C. Reid, the sixth of the nine children of Dr. Herman Reid, was also born in Milburn. His literary education was received in the schools of his native town and at Lebanon, Ohio. He read medicine with his brother, E. O. Reid, and then attended lectures at the Kentucky School of Medicine, graduating in the class of 1881. Returning to Milburn he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession, and has since met with fair success. In 1881 he also purchased the drug store which had been previously operated by his brother, and now carries a stock of about $1,000. He is at present postmaster at Milburn; as was also his brother before the latter's departure. Dr. H. C. Reid was married on October 17, 1883, to Miss Lena M. Milburn, a daughter of C. W. and A. E. (Smedley) Milburn. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and his wife is a member of the Christian Church. Dr. W. C. Reid read medicine under Dr. E. O. Reid, attended lectures at Bellevue Hospital, New York, and at Louisville, Ky., from which latter city he graduated. He next practiced a year in Hickman County, Ky., and then with Dr. E. O. Reid, at Milburn, until his removal to California, in 1877. He now resides at Mariposa, Cal., has charge of the county hospital, and is also engaged in a general mercantile business, in connection with the practice of his profession.

GEORGE C. REEVES, Ballard County, was born July 16, 1839, in Warren County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1862 came to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, Col. Peter M. Reeves, a native of Henry County, Ky., was born in 1810, was nine years acting magistrate, and died in 1882. He was the son of George Reeves, of Virginia. Peter M. married Sarah A. Hudnall, of Warren County, Ky. (born in 1814, and died in 1884), and to them were born Elizabeth F. (Phelps), Polley A. (Phelps), James H., subject and Zerilda P. (Scott). Subject was married October 24, 1865, to Miss Laura S., daughter of Richard and Mary F. (Glenn) Fortson, of Ballard County (born February 23, 1846), and the following offspring have been born to them, viz.: Lillie M. (deceased), Edward D., George J. and Kate. In 1882 our subject was chosen magistrate and member of the county court, which honorable position he is now filling to the satisfaction of his constituents. He is a farmer, owning 200 acres of good land, which he is successfully cultivating in the staple products of the country. In politics, Esq. Reeves, is identified with the Democratic party.

S. F. RICHARDSON, Ballard County, was born December 27, 1839, in Appomattox County, Va., and is the eighth of eleven children (six boys and five girls) born to T. D. and Martha (Spencer) Richardson, natives of Appomattox and Prince Edward Counties, Va. He lived with his parents on a farm till he was eighteen years of age, when he emigrated to Trigg County, Ky., in the fall of 1858, where he remained one year; thence he went to Christian County, where he farmed for several years; then back to Trigg. In 1875 he moved to McCracken County and farmed two years; then went to Paducah, where he handled tobacco two years, and then came to Lovelaceville, Ballard County. In the fall of 1881 he moved to where he now lives, near Blandville, and engaged in farming. In the fall of 1864 he enlisted in Col. Woodward's regiment, was in two skirmishes, and returned home after three months' service. He was married in November, 1863, to Mattie B. Settle, of Christian County, daughter of Josiah and Amy D. (Martin) Settle, natives of North Carolina and Kentucky. There were born to this union eight children, seven living: Addie L., Thomas T., Susie H., J. Settle, Rob A., Lillian B., Samuel G. Mr. Richardson and wife are members of the Christian Church. He cast his first presidential vote for Hancock.

LEVI C. ROARK was born September 20,

1841, in Montgomery County, Tenn., removed with his parents in 1848, to McCracken County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1875, to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, Charles Roark, a farmer of Wythe County, Va., was born in 1800, and died in 1865. He was the son of Timothy, of Virginia, who died in 1804. Charles married Sarah Rudolph, of Montgomery County, Tenn. (born in 1802. and died in 1883), and from this union sprang James B., Margaret J. (Bonds), Henry E., William R., Mary S. (Armistead), Jacob M., John L., Charles T., subject, Virgil T. and David L. On March 20, 1861, subject married Miss Sarah E., daughter of John and Nancy (Cox) Frank, of McCracken County (born in 1840, and died July 24, 1878), to whom was born one child, Avery S. Subject was next married, September 15, 1880, to Miss Caroline C. Frank, sister of his first wife (born in 1837, and died December 24, 1880). On March 20, 1883, he married Miss Lula Elliott, of Ballard County (born in 1861). In 1880 he commenced business as general merchant, in which he has met with fair success. He has been twelve years an elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is deputy G. M. of this district of I. O. O. F. He is also a member of the council of the village corporation, and in politics is a Democrat.

CHARLES N. B. ROLLINGS, an active business man of Ballard County, was born October 8, 1828, in Christian County, Ky., where he grew to manhood; he came with his parents in 1846 to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, John T. Rollings, a native of Halifax County, Va., died about 1852, aged about fifty-six years. He was twice married; first to Elizabeth Simmons of Virginia, to whom were born John A., subject, Nathaniel L., Margaret (Parrum) and James W. To his second wife were born Martin V., Francis M. and Sarah (Elliott.) Our subject received but a common education in youth, but has improved his opportunities by reading good books and papers. He was married December 31, 1856, to Miss Ann R., daughter of Richard and Prudence (Chapell) Bugg, of Ballard County, and to them were born Lula M. (Bailey), Dr. Jefferson D., Charles R., James W., Elizabeth and Lena. Subject is a farmer, owning 1,343 acres of good land, in good condition, 450 of which are in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and an active member of the Christian Church, and in politics an uncompromising Prohibitionist.

MARTIN V. ROLLINGS, son of John T. and Eliza Rollings, was born January 24, 1844, in Christian County, Ky., where he remained until 1846, when he came with his parents to Ballard County, his present place of residence. On December 3, 1867, Martin V. married Mary J., daughter of David and Theresa (Worsham) Moore of Ballard County, Ky., and this union has been blessed with the following children, viz.: Lee Ella, Anna Belle, David W., Lewis M., Lulu May and Oscar T. Our subject is a farmer, owning 100 acres of valuable and productive land, in good condition, which he is successfully cultivating in the staple products of the country. In his political affiliations he is identified with the Democrats.

NATHAN A. ROSS was born August 26, 1837, in Trigg County, Ky., where he grew to man's estate, and in 1857, removed to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, Eli Ross, a native of Tennessee, born in 1805, is still living. Eli married Elizabeth Strowbridge, who was born in 1805, and died in 1877. This union resulted in the birth of James B., William H., Charles A., Reuben C., George W., subject, Elizabeth (Neely), John E. and Thomas J. In youth subject's educational advantages were limited, but he is a reading man and keeps well posted in the current literature of the day. He was married August 19, 1880, to Miss Willie H., daughter of William H. and Amanda (Hayes) Hardy, of Christian County. Mr. Ross is one among the many enterprising and successful of Ballard County's farmers, turning his attention chiefly to raising tobacco, corn and wheat. He is the owner of 723 acres of valuable and productive land, well improved and in a fine state of cultivation. He served the community fourteen months as constable, ten months as deputy sheriff, and three years as deputy assessor. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. and a Democrat.

WILEY B. RUDOLPH was born March 9, 1817, in Montgomery County, Tenn. He is the fifth of seven children, five boys and two girls, born to John and Margaret (Welker) Rudolph, natives of North Carolina. The grandfather, John Rudolph, was born in Germany, and was a soldier in the Revolution. The father of our subject emigrated to Tennessee about 1800, and was with Gen. Jackson at the battle of Horse Shoe in 1812. Wiley B. Rudolph was reared on the farm, received a common school education, and in 1833, moved, with his parents, to McCracken County, where his father died in 1842, at the age of sixty-two years. Wiley B. lived in McCracken County until 1874, when he came to Ballard County, Ky., and settled on 1,000 acres, where he now lives, and which he has given to his children, with the exception of 150 acres, which he still retains. Mr. Rudolph was married in July, 1837, to Jane Lynn, of Montgomery County, Tenn., daughter of Andrew and Nancy (Smith) Lynn, natives of North Carolina, and of English origin. To this union were borne eleven children: David C., Martha A. (deceased; she was married to D. M. Rudolph), William M., John W., Nancy A. (now Mrs. Hedges), Vinecia (deceased), M. H., Felix G., Jemima A. (deceased), Marrietta R. and Finice N. Mrs. Rudolph died in September, 1859, a member of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject was next married in September, 1861, to Mrs. Nancy H. Stephens, a native of Montgomery County, Tenn., and daughter of W. R. and Sarah (Bevell) Lee. This union was blessed with eight children: Melissa B. (now Hague), Jefferson (deceased), Hillin B. (deceased), Mattie M., Sarah M., Minnie, Robert D. and Cora L. His second wife died in June, 1878, a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Rudolph's third marriage was on December 16, 1880, to Martha J. Hall, of McCracken County, Ky., daughter of William and Malinda (James) Hall, natives of Tennessee and Kentucky, respectively, and of Irish and German and Welsh and Irish descent. Mr. Rudolph is a member of the Presbyterian Church, also of the Masonic fraternity; Mrs. R. is a member of the Baptist Church. J. W. Rudolph enlisted in Company B, Third Kentucky Cavalry, April, 1864, and was engaged in the battles of Harrisburg, Guntown, Oxford, Athens, Alabama, Sulphur Trestles and Pulaski. He took the oath of allegiance after his return home in 1865.

J. N. SANFORD was born in Milburn, March 24, 1836, and is a son of Daniel B. and Catherine (Reddick) Sanford. The father was a native of Virginia, and came with his father to Henry County, in an early day. The grandfather of our subject had been a soldier in the Revolution. His death took place in Henry County. In 1832, subject's father came to Ballard County, and settled in Milburn. He was a blacksmith by trade, and was also a farmer. In 1834, he was married to a daughter of William F. Reddick. He continued to reside in this county until his death, in 1849. At one time he served as deputy sheriff in this county. The mother died here in 1848. Subject's education was received in the schools of Milburn. After his father's death he went to Nelson County, where he spent some time with his uncle. At the age of eighteen, he commenced life for himself, as a clerk for T. M. Horn, at Milburn. He remained thus employed for two years, and then opened a saddle and harness shop. In 1859, he opened a general store, with a stock of about $4,000. He has since followed merchandising very successfully, and is at present carrying a stock of about $12,000. He is also engaged in buying and prizing tobacco, and is the only dealer in the county. For the season of 1883, he put up 210 hogsheads, besides losing 85,000 pounds by fire. He was married on September 20, 1859, to Miss Sallie H. Gregory, a daughter of Hardin and Susan (Roswell) Gregory, probably natives of Tennessee. The result of this union has been nine children, viz.: Kate (wife of T. F. Owens), N. H., Hardy, Pryor, Molly, Guy, Ora, Thomas and Bertha. Mr. Sanford is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Mrs. Sanford of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Milburn Lodge, No. 1989, K. of H.

JOHN S. SEAY, M. D., one of the leading physicians of Blandville, was born April 26, 1843, in Fulton County, Ky. He is the only child of John G. and Ann E. (Thompson) Seay, natives of Kentucky and Illinois, respectively; his grandparents were Samuel Seay, of English origin, and Moses Thompson, of Scotch-Irish descent, one of whom was in the battle of New Orleans. Our subject was reared on a farm and his early education was limited. His father died in September, 1843; his mother, in 1846, married W. W. Adams, by whom she had one boy and two girls. Mr. Adams died in 1852, and the subject of our sketch necessarily had to assist in taking care of the family. He came with his mother to Ballard County, in 1846. He commenced the study of medicine in 1859, and from that time on, applied himself closely. In the spring of 1865, he graduated from University Medical College, at Louisville, Ky., and located in Blandville, where he has continued his practice ever since. He married Margaret S. Beech, of Ballard County; she was born in Williamson County, Tenn., and is the daughter of David and Elizabeth (Robinson) Beech. This union was blessed with seven children, Mary E. (dead), John D. (dead), Ida May, Lora G. (dead), Ersie D., sixth, not named and dead and Ortie M. Mrs. Seay is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject cast his first presidential vote for Horace Greeley.

R. W. SHELBOURNE, a prominent citizen of Ballard County, was born October 27,

1836, in Mayfield, Graves County, Ky., and is the first and surviving one of two children born to Morean T. and Mary Ann (James) Shelbourne, natives of Nelson and Caldwell Counties, Ky., respectively. The father of our subject is the son of Robertson W. Shelbourne, who married Amelia Rodman; he was a cooper by trade, a soldier of 1812, and both natives of Virginia. He was of English and his wife of Scotch descent. R. W., the elder, was the son of John Shelbourne, who came from England in the king's service as a soldier in the war of 1776, served his term and enlisted in the American Revolutionary Army, before the close of the war. Subject's mother was the daughter of Thomas W. James, who married a Mary James; his occupation was that of a miller and saddler, and he sent a substitute to the war of 1812. He was a son of David James, who was a soldier of the Revolution, was born in Landaff, Wales, and was by occupation a blacksmith. Morean Shelbourne was a blacksmith. Our subject was reared in town and lived with his parents till he was about eighteen years of age, when he engaged in blacksmithing in Paris, Tenn. Thence he went to Columbia, Tenn.; thence to Nashville; thence to Memphis and Paducah; thence home. In the fall of 1855, he moved to Ballard County, Ky., where he purchased lands, improved them and worked at blacksmithing for about three years. In 1859, he commenced running a saw and grist-mill, which business he continued till 1880, when he commenced the study and practice of law. He was married December 20, 1855, to Sarah J. Paige, a resident of Ballard County, and born in St. Johnsbury, Vt. She was educated at the Teachers' Seminary, New Hampshire, was a member of the Congregational Church, and died in May, 1856. On September 30, 1858, Mr. Shelbourne married Amanda J. Mott, of Ballard County, a daughter of John and Ann (Helm) Mott, and had born to him by this union nine children: William O., Mary A., Robert E. Lee, Belle B., John M., Joseph M., Algernon S. and two dead, not named. The second Mrs. Shelbourne died October 1, 1872, and March 31, 1873, Mr. Shelbourne married Amelia L. Beckwith, daughter of Robertson and Elizabeth (Rodman) Shelbourne. This lady had four children by her former husband, Emily A. (now Smith), William S., John S. and Luna H. Mr. Shelbourne is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the I. O. O. F., and owns a pleasant home one-half mile east of Blandville.

ADOLPHUS W. SHELBY was born October 26, 1824, in Stewart County, Tenn.; was taken by his parents, in 1826, to Hardeman County; in 1832 to Fayette County; in 1835 to Marshall County, Miss.; 1840 to Johnson County, Ill., and in 1841 to Ballard County, Ky., where he still resides. His father, Alfred M. Shelby, born in 1799, in Montgomery County, Tenn., was a finely educated teacher, and died in 1880. He was the son of John, a native of east Tennessee, a cousin of Gov. Shelby; was ten years a legislator, and died in 1818, aged forty-eight years. He was the son of John, of Maryland. Alfred M. married Alvira Reed (born in 1807, died in 1856) of Livingston County, Ky., and their offspring are Louisa (Bradley and Davidson). subject, John L., Alfred M., Isabella (Bratton), Elvira (Earnhardt), Orelia (Scott), Napoleon B., Orvil M., Elizabeth and Ivan. On November 30, 1851, subject married Miss Amanda F., daughter of Archibald and Nancy (Thombs) Terry, of McCracken County, Ky., and to them have been born, John L., Alfred M. (deceased), Ivan H., Emma (Earnhardt), Laura (Chrice). Della (deceased), Luella, Dora, Isaac and Joseph O. Subject is a farmer, having 325 acres of medium land in a fair state of cultivation. He is a worthy member of the Christian Church, also of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics is a Democrat.

ROBERT M. SHELTON, M. D., Ballard County, was born January 26, 1832, in Henry County, Tenn., and is the first of three children born to Abraham and Susan G. (Lewis) Shelton, natives of Halifax County, Va. Abraham was the son of Jeremiah and Sallie (Green) Shelton; Jeremiah was the son of the Jeremiah Shelton, who was the son of Ralph Shelton, of England; Susan G. Lewis was the daughter of Richard and Sallie (Wood) Lewis, of English origin. Robert M. Shelton was reared on a farm, and received a good common school education. He lived with his parents till he was twenty-five years old. He taught school for about six years, and in the meantime studied medicine. He attended medical lectures at the university at Nashville, Tenn., in the winter of 1858–59. He located at Hinkleville, Ballard Co., at which place he formed a partnership with Dr. T. J. Jenkins, and practiced there four years with good success. About this time he was elected surgeon of the Seventh Kentucky Confederate Cavalry, but did not accept the position. He next moved two miles south of Hinkleville, where he engaged in farming, and also continued his practice. As a farmer, he was successful. In 1870 he moved to Blandville, where he has been engaged in the practice of medicine ever since.

He has a good mill and sixteen or seventeen farms, in all about 3,000 acres, and also owns a house and lot in Blandville and one in Wickliffe. He came to Ballard County with his parents in 1836, and located in the nor h part of the county. His father entered lands that were covered by military titles, lost all, and died in 1866, aged seventy-four years. He was a Whig. Dr. Shelton was married in October, 1864, to Mrs. Susan Marion, of Ballard County, Ky., daughter of Cadmus B. and Angeline (Linthicum) Young, who were of the first families of Nelson County, and came to South Ballard about 1834. The doctor had born to him by this union three children: Edwin L., Lalie Ann (now dead) and Susan A. Mr. and Mrs. Shelton are members of the Christian Church, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, K. of H., and was formerly a member of the K. of P. He cast his first presidential vote for the Whig candidate in 1856, but is now a Democrat.

DR. F. N. SIMPSON was born on August 2, 1846, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is a son of Edmund and Margaret (Keller) Simpson. The father was a native of North Carolina, the mother of Virginia. In 1854 the parents came to the Purchase, and settled in McCracken County, near Paducah. The father was a silversmith by trade, but after his arrival in the Purchase, he paid most of his attention to farming. He died in February, 1855. The mother died in 1864. Our subject is next to the youngest of a family of eight children, of whom but two are now living, viz.: Emma, wife of Samuel Ragland, of North Ballard, and Frank N. The latter was reared on a farm, and his schooling was received principally in Ballard County. In 1871 he began the study of medicine with Dr. C. McKinney, of Milburn. He read with this gentleman one year, and then attended lectures at the Physio-Medical College at Cincinnati, graduating from that institution with the class of '75. He immediately settled in Milburn, where he has had an excellent practice ever since. Dr. Simpson was married on December 7, 1876, to Miss Mary Lovelace, of McCracken County, a daughter of Archie and Mary (Purdom) Lovelace. The result of this union has been five children, three of whom are now living, viz.: Alvin, Guy, and Lloyd. Dr. Simpson is a member of Milburn Lodge, No. 1,989, K. of H. He has served as trustee of the town of Milburn, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Church.

JAMES R. SKAGGS was born February 15, 1843, in Todd County, Ky., and is the sixth of the seven children born to Eli and Margaret (Manion) Skaggs, natives of Missouri and Todd County, Ky., respectively, and of Irish descent. His mother died in 1850, his father in 1852, and thus our subject was thrown upon his own resources early in life. He came to Ballard County about 1857, and lived with his cousin, John Manion, until the latter's death in 1863. In January, 1864, he enlisted in Company F, Third Kentucky (Confederate) Cavalry, under Capt. W. L. Stevenson, Holt colonel commanding, and took part in the battle of Harrisburg, and three or four other fights in Alabama, and was also at Memphis and Nashville; at Owensboro, he was wounded in the right and left shoulders, and also received a wound in the head during a skirmish elsewhere. After Forrest's surrender, he returned to Ballard County and engaged in farming; in 1868 he was elected constable, and re-elected in 1870; in 1872 he was appointed deputy assessor, and in 1876 was elected to the same office for four years; in 1880 he engaged in the drug business at Blandville, and in February, 1883, moved to Wickliffe, where he is still engaged in the same trade. October 12, 1875, he married Alice Moss, daughter of Frank and Rebecca (Cole) Moss, and had born to him one child, which died unnamed. His wife died in May, 1876, a member of the Baptist Church. December 23, 1880, he married Anna Bondurant, daughter of P. H. and Helen (Jackson) Bondurant, and to this union has been born one child, Margaret Helen. Mr. and Mrs. Skaggs are members of the Christian Church, while he is a Free Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Knight of Honor, and a member of the K. & L. of H. He cast his first vote for Seymour and Blair, and is still a Democrat.

CORNELIUS D. STAHL, Ballard County, was born October 16, 1835, in Todd County, Ky., was taken by his parents in 1836 to Simpson County, and in 1853, to Marshall County; in 1869 he came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, David Stahl, died in 1880, at the age of eighty-seven years. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Cornelius Turner, of Warren County, and from this union sprang Franklin, John W., William, Lapsey, Ruth A. (Lockhart), Mary E. (Appling), subject, Chesterfield, Winchester and Daniel P. On October 14, 1869, subject was married to Miss Jeretta, daughter of Joseph W. and Sarah (Simmons) Owen, of Ballard County, born June 4, 1851, and to them have been born: C. D., Sallie, Maud and Lizzie Fay. Subject is a successful farmer, owning 270 acres of fine land in a high state of cultivation, on which he grows wheat, corn, tobacco, and other products. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

THOMAS L. STANLEY was born in Franklin County, Tenn., on September 16, 1826, and is a son of James and Ann (Ellis) Stanley. The parents were natives of Cobb County, Ga. The father was of English-Welsh descent; the mother of Scotch-Irish. The father came to Tennessee about 1812, and moved to Scott County, Mo., in 1832. There the father died, August 11, 1836, the mother died in 1849. Subject was the eleventh of sixteen children, of whom but two are now living: Lucy A., wife of Nicholas M. Carr, and Thomas L. The latter's education was received in the schools of Missouri. He remained at home until the age of twenty-one, and then settled on a farm in Mississippi County, Mo. There he remained until 1854, when he came to Kentucky, and settled on Wolf Island, where he now owns about 1,800 acres. In 1870 he came to Milburn, where he has since resided. Until the last few years, he has dealt very extensively in stock. Mr. Stanley was married in 1848, in Mississippi County, Mo., to Mrs. Amanda C. Kennedy (nee James), a native of Pulaski County, Ky. The result of this union was a son. Mrs. Stanley died in 1849, and subject was married in October, 1850, to Miss Sarah E. Dyson. Eight children, three sons and five daughters, are living as the result of this union. This lady died in 1875, and he was next married to Mrs. Sallie A. Thomas (maiden name Linthicum), of Nelson. The result of this marriage has been two sons. Mr. Stanley is a Mason, and Mrs. Stanley is a member of the Christian Church.

GEORGE O. STONE was born December 5, 1846, in Scott County, Ky., and is the second of eight children (four boys) born to George W. and Elna (Stone) Stone, natives of Fayette County, Ky., and of German descent. His grandparents were William Stone and Jacob Stone. He was reared to and followed farming, till 1877, when he was appointed deputy sheriff, which office he held many years. In 1858 he came to Ballard County, with his parents, who settled at Milburn, and here he has lived ever since. In August, 1884, he was elected sheriff of Ballard County, Ky., by a good majority. He is very popular in the county and is a member of the K. of H. He cast his first presidential vote for Seymour and Blair in 1868 and is still a Democrat. His father died in May, 1880, aged sixty-one years.

JAMES H. SUBLETT was born October 22, 1827, in Butler County, Ky., where he was reared to manhood; in 1849 he removed to Christian County, and in 1856 came to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father, William B. Sublett, a Virginian, was born in 1800, removed to Butler County in 1815, and died in 1862. He was the son of Benjamin, who died in 1842, and whose father was a Revolutionary soldier. William B. married Mary, daughter of John and Margaret (Mitchel) Tyler, of Butler County, born in 1810, and died in 1864, and this union resulted in the birth of subject, Paulina (Williams), Mary (Robinson), Angeline (Farmer), Brinkley C., Joseph J., Curran T., Amanda (Hobbs), Tabitha (Hurt), and Adeline (Morris). Our subject is a man of extensive reading. He was married November 15, 1852, to Miss Margaret E., daughter of Matthew and Martha B. (Tolbert) Kuykendall, of Butler County, born in 1830, and to them have been born Lou C. (Ransdell), Mary E. (Snook), James K., Robert W., Margaret E., Addie D. and Maud J. Subject was formerly a blacksmith, but is now a farmer having 190 acres of valua le and productive land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a Royal Arch Mason, a member of K. of G. R. and a Democrat.

H. SULLIVAN was born February 10, 1828, in Dickson County, Tenn., and is the fifth of seven children (four boys) born to Zachariah and Emily (Goss) Sullivan, natives of Kentucky and Germany, respectively. The father was a son of Joseph Sullivan. Both grandfathers were in the Florida and Mexican wars. H. Sullivan was reared on a farm and lived with his parents till he was twenty-three years old, when his mother died. He was married about this time, and then his father lived with him the remainder of his days. He died in the spring of 1864, aged seventy-nine years. Mr. Sullivan came to Ballard County with his parents in 1841, and settled in the community in which he still lives, and where his father entered and improved sixty acres of land. Mr. Sullivan is now the owner of 390 acres of land, three miles northwest of Blandville, in good condition. He has made what he has by his own industry and perseverance; having contracted in railway construction for about three years, at which business he made some money. He was married in October, 1850, to Miss Macedonia Dennis, of Ballard County, a daughter of Abner and Martha Ann Dennis, and had born to him by this union three children: Jerry, John, and Jennie (now Richmond). His wife died in 1861, a member of the Baptist Church. In the spring of 1862, he married Mrs. Fannie Edes, daughter of Carney and Emily (Bugg) Richmond, and had born to him by this union seven children: Albert, Richmond, Emma, Edda, Jodie, Charley, and Allie. Mr. Sullivan and wife are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he was a member of the Grange and votes the Democratic ticket.

A. S. TAYLOR, Ballard County, was born January 18, 1838, in Oldham County, Ky., and is a son of William G. and Angie (Smith) Taylor, both Kentuckians. Subject's paternal grandfather was George Taylor, a native of Virginia, which State he left in an early day, coming to Kentucky, and settling in Clark County, where William G. was born in 1795. Subject's maternal grandfather was a Virginian also; he died in Henry County, Ky., about 1846 or 1847, aged sixty years. Subject's father was a merchant and for a number of years carried on an extensive business in the town of La Grange, Oldham County, in which county he also served as clerk. He died in 1868, aged seventy-three years. The mother of subject is still living and resides at Blandville. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were the parents of six children, four of whom are still living, A. S. being the second child. At the age of seventeen years he began life for himself as clerk in a wholesale dry goods house in Louisville, where he remained for eight years, at the end of which time he engaged as a salesman for the wholesale clothing firm of Kahn & Wolf, with whom he remained one year. He was next employed by his uncle, G. P. Smith, one of the business men in Louisville, with whom he remained until 1862, when he came to Blandville and engaged in general merchandising, which he continued about four years. He then went back to his native county, but in 1866 returned to Blandville, where he has since resided. He is now at the head of one of the largest dry goods houses in the town and is doing a fine business. On the 21st of October, 1862, he was married to Miss Theresa, daughter of Judge T. A. and Jane Rodman. This union has been blessed with the following children: Ellen T. (deceased), George S., Thomas G. (deceased), A. S., Angie (deceased), Angie S., Theresa (deceased), William G. and Anna. Mr. Taylor was appointed commissioner of Ballard County in 1883 and still holds the position. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and in politics a stanch Democrat.

JOHN TAYLOR, Ballard County, was born May 6, 1832, in Nash County, N. C. He is the youngest of six children born to John and Mary (Weaver) Taylor, natives of North Carolina and Maryland, respectively, and of English and Scotch descent on the father's side; Irish and Scotch on the mother's side. The grandfather, John Taylor, was a soldier for five years during the Revolution. He was born in England. Our subject was partly reared on a farm; was but three years old when his mother died and thirteen when his father died. At this tender age he was thrown upon his own resources, working at anything he could find to do. At the age of seventeen he commenced the carpenter's trade, and worked in Virginia and North Carolina. He followed his trade for about twenty years exclusively. In October, 1855, he moved to Paducah. In the spring of 1856 he moved to Woodville, and lived in the vicinity until 1873, with the exception of two years, between 1859 and 1862, when he lived in Independence County, Ark., where he had purchased 500 acres of land, which he afterward sold, and returned to McCracken County, Ky. In 1873 he moved to where he now resides, in Ballard County, on ninety-three acres of land in good condition. In 1878 he was elected justice; after one year's experience, having no desire to hold an office, he resigned. He has been school trustee several terms. Mr. Taylor was married November 12, 1857, to Myra E. Beck, of McCracken County, Ky., a daughter of Dr. Jesse and Mary (Woodard) Beck, natives of Virginia and Tennessee respectively. To this marriage several children were born: John W., Laurie E., now Penn; Mary E., Fernando E., Anna M., Gertrude (deceased) and Lillie (deceased). Mr. Taylor is a Mason and was one of the principal members of the Grange. He cast his first presidential vote for James Buchanan and has voted the Democratic ticket ever since. His wife and three of his children are members of the Christian Church; he is a member of no church.

C. C. TERRELL (deceased), was born July 28, 1812, in Caroline County, Va., and is the eldest of four children (two boys) born to Menan and Miriam (Terrell) Terrell, natives of Virginia, and of Irish descent. The father died when our subject was about eighteen years old, when the duty of caring for the family fell upon the latter, who came to Kentucky with his parents about 1824, and started in life at the age of eighteen years for himself. He went to Holly Springs, Miss., where he was employed as superintendent for a Mr. Clayton, till 1838, when he came to Ballard County, where he purchased 200 acres of land near Hinkleville and assisted in surveying all the lands in North Ballard. He accumulated what he had by his own industry and perseverance, owned twenty-two negroes when the war broke out, and lost his best cattle and five head of horses and mules during the disturbance. He was married February 14, 1841, to Mary E. McDade, a native of Georgia, and daughter of John McDade. He had born to him by this union five children: Virginia M. (now Webb), Paul M., Wilmot A. (deceased), William E. and Edgar (deceased). His wife died February 14, 1851, and Mr. Terrell next married in April 5, 1853, Ann E. Hall, of Ballard, but a native of Virginia, and daughter of Benjamin and Martha (Waldren) Hall, natives of Halifax County, Va., and of Dutch descent. Her grandparents were William and Ann (Miller) Hall and Reuben and Mildred (Irley) Waldren, natives of Virginia. Benjamin Hall was a soldier of 1812. Mr. Terrell had born to him by this union eleven children: Mary E. (deceased), Thomas B., Martha C. (deceased), Diego, Lena, Viella (deceased), Otho, Clinton, Necho (deceased), Leo and Ovid (deceased). Mr. Terrell was a Mason, also a member of the Grange; he was a Democrat, and one of the prominent and influential farmers of the county, and died March 29, 1876. His widow is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DR. J. D. TERRELL is a native of Ballard County, Ky., and the seventh of a family of eleven children born to Thomas S. and Margaret N. (Meriwether) Terrell, both of Virginia. Subject's paternal grandfather was Jonathan Terrell. His grandfather on his mother's side was Nicholas Meriwether, a native of Virginia and a descendant of the famous Douglass family, of Scotland. Thomas S. Terrell, subject's father, was a teacher by profession. He came to Ballard County in 1830, and died in November, 1843, at the age of fifty-five years. Subject was born December 8, 1830, and at the age of eighteen years commenced life for himself at farming, which he followed three years, at the end of which time he went to Mississippi and commenced the study of medicine under the instruction of his brother, Dr. Charles N. Terrell. He commenced the practice of his profession in Mississippi about 1856, and two years later came back to Ballard County, locating at Blandville, where he has since resided. He has been practicing medicine continuously for twenty-eight years, and is one of the oldest physicians in the county. He was married September 8, 1858, to Miss Sarah J., daughter of G. B. and Mary E. (Meriwether) Wilds, of Mississippi, by whom he had two children: Charles N. and Nannie L. (deceased). Mrs. Terrell died in March, 1863, aged twenty-two years, and in March, 1864, the doctor married Fannie A., daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth S. (Sumner) Corbett. To this union have been born the following children: Lucian B. (deceased), Thomas F., Elizabeth S., Susan H., Mary R., Margaret B. (deceased), Annie C., J. R., C. and Robert D. The doctor is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics a Democrat. Mrs. Terrell is a member of the Baptist Church.

DR. G. A. THOMAS was born February 3, 1845, in Ballard County. He is a son of William and Catharine (Valandingham) Thomas. The father was born in Henry County, Ky.; he died in February, 1867, aged fifty-five, from being thrown from a horse. The mother was born in Owen County, Ky.; she died in July, 1867, aged forty-eight. Dr. Thomas was reared on his father's farm, and attended the schools of the neighborhood. He enlisted in 1862, with Polk's scouts, Confederate States Army, and remained with this company about five months, when they disbanded. In the fall of 1862 he joined the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry and served till the end of the war. He participated in the battles of Okolona, Miss.; Union City, Tenn.; Brice's Cross Roads, Harrisburg, Athens, Ala.; Sulphur Trestle, Ala.; Pulaski, Tenn.; Columbus, Franklin, Murfreesborough and others. On his return from the army, he attended Notre Dame College, Indiana, about ten months. He then came to Ballard County and commenced the study of medicine, under the preceptorship of Dr. W. H. Parkham, and continued about one year. He then went to Louisville, and there graduated from the medical department of the Louisville University, in the class of 1870, after which he returned to Ballard County and engaged in the practice of his profession and also in farming. He was married, in 1873, to Miss H. J. Webb, of this county. This union is blessed with five children, three sons and two daughters. Both of the doctor's grandfathers, as well as Thomas Woolfolk, the grandfather of Mrs. Thomas, served in the war of 1812, the latter being a commissioned officer.

ALFRED THOMPSON, an enterprising farmer and stock-raiser of Ballard County, was born March 23, 1837, in Greenup County, Ky. He is the first of three children born to Jackson and Winny (Alexander) Thompson, natives of Lee County, Va., and Wilkes County, N. C., respectively, of Scotch and English descent. The father was a son of William Thompson, who was a soldier in the war of 1812. The mother was a daughter of Willis Alexander, who married a Miss Holbrook. Alfred was reared on a farm, and attended the common schools when not engaged in the duties incident to farm life. He taught school three terms, and lived with his parents till he became of age. He moved with his parents to Catlettsburgh, Boyd Co., Ky., where he engaged in the hotel business. In 1872 the hotel was washed away, and in 1875 he was burned out. In 1879 he moved to where he now resides, in North Ballard County, on 400 acres owned by his wife, 250 of which are cleared and in good condition. While in Catlettsburgh he was constable one term, and one year police judge. He was married, May 1, 1863, to Adeline D. Fisher, of Greenup County, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Sutton) Fisher, natives of Bedford County, Penn., and of Dutch descent. To them were born three children: Eva A. (now Brown), Ella M. and Eugene (deceased). Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HENRY H. TRICE was born April 25, 1840, in Montgomery County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood and in 1861 enlisted in the Fourteenth Tennessee Infantry, with which he remained until the close of the war. In 1869 he removed to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father, Henry Trice, also a native of Montgomery County, died in 1866, at the age of sixty-one years. He married Mahala Harris, of Montgomery Co., Tenn., and the following-named offspring were born to them: Elizabeth (Trice), Richmond S. and our subject. On January 30, 1868, Henry H. was married to Miss Augusta E., daughter of James A. and Mary Trice, of Ballard County, and to them were born Arlington (deceased) and Alma. For nine years Mr. Trice has been engaged in the saw and grist-mill business, at which he has met with fair success. In politics he is an independent Democrat.

WILLIAM R. TURK was born in Henry County, Ky., July 23, 1847, and is the third of seven children born to Thomas R. and Elizabeth (Crisler) Turk, the former a native of Henry County, and the latter of Jefferson County, Ky. Thomas R. Turk in early life removed to Jefferson County, Ky., where he was married and resided a short time, but soon returned to Henry County, where he was engaged in merchandising at Campbellsburg for several years. He then removed to Trimble County, Ky., where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits for some twelve years. In 1858 he came with his wife and family to Ballard County, and bought a farm about half way between Blandville and Bardwell, where he was extensively engaged in farming and the stock business until his death, which occurred August 31, 1870, in his fifty-third year. He was one of the magistrates in Ballard County for several terms. Both himself and wife were for many years members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. William R. Turk received a good common school education in youth, and was employed on his father's farm until he attained his majority. He then engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock growing on his own account and continued the same for some three years. In December, 1874, he came to Bardwell, where he, in company with his brother, J. W. Turk, engaged in general merchandising, continuing the same until 1879, when the firm was dissolved. Since that time each brother has continued in business on his own account. During all these years, however, our subject has also been engaged in agricultural pursuits, owning a well improved farm, the old homestead, of some 110 acres. In addition to general merchandising, Mr. Turk is also extensively engaged in the grain, live stock and produce trade at Bardwell. He is yet unmarried. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN W. TURK was born in Henry County, Ky., October 20, 1852, and is the fifth of the seven children born to Thomas R. and Elizabeth (Crisler) Turk. He was employed on his father's farm until the latter's death, after which event he was employed as a salesman in a general store at Ft. Jefferson, Ballard Co., Ky., for some two years. He then engaged in general merchandising at Bardwell, in company with his brother, W. R. Turk, under the firm name of Turk Bros. In February, 1879, the partnership was dissolved, since which time our subject has conducted business alone. He carries a large and well-selected stock of general merchandise and agricultural implements, amounting to about $10,000, his annual sales amounting to some $27,000. He is also extensively engaged in the grain, live stock and provision trade. He also owns a farm of 160 acres two miles west of Bardwell, upon which he resides. Mr. Turk was postmaster at Bardwell for some six years. He was married November 9, 1876, to Miss Alice Bodkin, a native of Ballard County, and a daughter of Daniel Bodkin, one of the early pioneers of the county. Three daughters have blessed their union, all of whom are living. In politics Mr. Turk is a Democrat.

DR. G. W. TURNEY was born April 19, 1849, in DeKalb County, Tenn. He is a son of Joseph and Lucinda (Groom) Turney, who were born in Tennessee. The father was engaged in agricultural pursuits and the rearing of live stock; he died in 1878, aged forty-nine; the mother died in 1880, aged fifty-two. Dr. Turney was reared on his father's farm, and was educated in the schools of the neighborhood. At the age of twenty-four he commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. J. M. Turney, and studied with him twenty-two months, after which he went to Nashville and attended the medical department of the Vanderbilt University five months; he then returned to his native county, where he practiced medicine about six months; then returning to the university, he graduated in 1873; he then went to Warren County, Tenn., where he engaged in the practice of his chosen profession. September 15, 1881, he came to Boswell, where he has since been engaged in practicing and carrying on the drug business. Dr. Turney was married March 19, 1880, to Miss Nannie Hutson, of Ballard County. Two children have blessed this union, one son and one daughter. The doctor and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

THOMAS R. TYER, was born June 14, 1840, in White County, Ill. In 1842 he removed with his parents to Stewart County, Tenn.; in 1845 to Trigg County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1863 entered Company G, Fourth Kentucky Infantry; he was captured and remained a prisoner at Rock Island to the close of the war. In 1865 he settled in Crittenden County, Ky.; in 1874 he removed to Williamson County, Ill.; in 1875 to Texas, and then came to Ballard County, Ky., where he now resides. His grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier, and his father, Council Tyer, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1793, and died in 1863. Council married Luticia Saury, of Tennessee, who died in 1859, and their children are Jefferson, Jane, Elizabeth (Cunningham), Martha (Adair) and subject. On August 19, 1866, subject was married to Mrs. Amanda M. Hardy, daughter of John and Cynthia (Griffin) Hayes, of Christian County, born January 4, 1843, and to them have been born Magnolia, Charles B. (deceased), Jasper E., Florence L., Lula M., Cula and Thomas J. Subject is a farmer, and is very successful in growing wheat, corn and tobacco. He is a member of the Baptist Church and a Democrat.

BERNARD ULRICH, Ballard County, was born June 5, 1841, in Stark County, Ohio. He is a son of Bernard Ulrich, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, and who when a boy immigrated to America, and settled in Ohio. He died in October, 1883, aged seventy-two. Our subject enlisted in 1862 in Company B, Twenty-ninth Missouri Infantry, Union Army, and served to the end of the war; he entered the service as orderly-sergeant, and for marks of gallantry was soon promoted to a commission officer in which capacity he served to the close of the war, and mustered out as captain. He participated in the siege of Vicksburg, battle of Arkansas Post, Chattanooga; was with Sherman on his march to the sea, etc; he then returned to Missouri and engaged in the mercantile business; after that in farming; he then took up book keeping and for many years has followed this business as a practical book-keeper; in 1873 he came to Columbus; two years later he came to Arlington, where he has since resided. His residence is one of the finest in Arlington, being constructed of brick; this with the grounds is valued at $3,000; he also owns thirty-three acres adjoining Arlington on the south; also a store building and dwelling; he is now engaged in farming and merchandising. Mr. Ulrich was married in 1866 to Miss Amelia Winthrop, of Cape Girardeau, Mo.; this union is blessed with three children, one son and two daughters.

PLEASANT A. VANCE was born July 24, 1824, in Todd County, Ky., where he grew to manhood. In 1851 he removed to Muhlenburgh County, and in 1857 came to Ballard County, where he now resides. His father, John Vance, a native of South Carolina, was born in 1767, removed to Todd County, Ky., in 1801, was high sheriff there and died in 1834. He was the son of David, a Scotchman, who served in the American Revolution. John married Martha, daughter of Silas Davidson, of South Carolina, and this union was blessed by the birth of Daniel W., William, Samuel, James, John, Andrew, Massena, subject, Elizabeth (Vance), Ruth (Chesnut) and Jane. Mrs. John Vance died in 1834, aged fifty-two years. In youth subject procured a common school education, but is an extensive reader of good books and standard literature. He was married March 9, 1849, to Miss Althea A., daughter of John and Cicely (Thomas) Halsell, of Todd County, born in 1831 and died in 1875, and to them were born Olive A. (Wilkinson), Emma A. (Duke), Samuel A., William E., Beulah and Lena E. Subject is a farmer, having 100 acres of land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Baptist and a Democrat.

GEN. J. VAUGHN, Ballard County, was born September 19, 1834, in White County, Tenn., and came with his parents, in 1849, to Ballard County, Ky., where he still retains his residence. His father, James Vaughn, a native of Halifax County, Va., was born in 1806, and is still living. He was the son of Jourdan Vaughn, of Virginia. James married Lutricia, born in 1808, daughter of Spencer Holder, and this union was blessed with William H., Francis M., Hickison F., subject, Azariah M., James N., Britannia (Davis) and Spencer. Subject received a fair education, and is well informed by general reading. He was married August 28, 1853, to Miss Agnes, daughter of William and America (Dale) Bishop, of Ballard County, born March 1, 1838, and to them have been born Caledonia T. (Webb), Berryman B., Robert L., Lucretia C., Azariah, Nannetta and Ionia P. Subject is a successful farmer, owning 125 acres of good land, ninety of which are cleared and in a fine state of cultivation. He is a worthy member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

A. W. VIOLETT was born October 23, 1816, in Henry County, Ky., and is a son of John and Nancy (Thomas) Violett. Both parents were born in Virginia, and were of English and French origin. The father died in 1833, aged fifty-six; the mother died in 1843 aged about fifty. A. W. Violett has been a resident of Ballard County since 1843, and has been mostly engaged in agricultural pursuits, but was also engaged in merchandising several years. He owns three farms, consisting of 550 acres. One of these farms, consisting of 200 acres, lies in and adjoining Bardwell. Mr. Violett has owned most of the land where Bardwell is situated, and at present owns about one third of the town, together with twelve houses and the hotel. All of this property he has acquired by good management and close attention to business. He was married in 1856 to Mrs. Mosby, of Owen County, Ky. She died in 1880, leaving five children—four sons and one daughter. Mrs. Violett had one daughter by her former marriage, Dink Mosby, now Mrs. Halterman, of Arlington.

ROBERT R. WAKEFIELD was born in Spencer County, Ind., August 4, 1828, was removed by his parents in 1831 to Nelson County, Ky, and in 1845 to Louisville; in 1857 he came to Ballard County, where he has since resided. His father, William B. Wakefield, of Nelson County, Ky., was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1856, at the age of sixty-six years. He was the son of John of Pennsylvania, a Revolutionary soldier. William B. married Charlotte, daughter of James and Nelly (Jackson) Headdy, of Nelson County; she died in 1853, aged fifty-six years, having borne her husband the following children: Squire H., Ellen (Graham), Louisa (Froman), Elizabeth A. (Smith), Susan (Bailey), subject, Samuel K., Charlotte (Grooms), Lois (Grooms), and Rebecca (Chickering). Subject was married, February 27, 1852, to Miss Henrietta, daughter of John and Ellen (Medcalf) Smith of Nelson County (born March 20, 1832), which union has resulted in the birth of one daughter, Ellen (Wakefield). Our subject is a farmer and stock raiser, having 400 acres of fine land, with as fine improvements as any in the county. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

A. J. WARDEN, lawyer, was born October 1, 1816, in Lincoln County, Ky., and is a son of William B. and Elizabeth (Martin) Warden, both natives of North Carolina. Robert Warden, subject's paternal grandfather, was a native of Wales, which country he left as early as 1755, coming to America and settling in one of the Carolinas, where about 1815 he died. Subject's maternal grandfather was David Martin, a native of North Carolina. He emigrated from that State in 1810, settling in Hardin County, Ky, and later moved to Indiana, where he died in 1835. William B. Warden, subject's father came to Hickman County in 1832, and located near the town of Clinton. He afterward moved to Ballard County, and died at the village of Milburn in 1865, aged seventy-five years. Subject's mother died in Missouri about 1820, at the age of twenty-three or twenty-four years. A. J. Warden commenced life for himself as a teacher, engaging in that profession in Ballard County, when but seventeen years of age. He was elected constable in an early day and filled the office for a period of ten years, employing his leisure moments in reading law. In 1862 he was elected to the offices of circuit and county clerk, filling both positions for six years. He was admitted to the bar in 1867, and since that time has given his attention to his profession in Ballard and adjoining counties. He was married December 27, 1842, to Miss Zillah, daughter of James L. and Zillah Gray, of Ballard County. To this union were born eight children as follows: Jane (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased),

A. J.; Margaret, Ann (deceased), Henry C. (deceased), Harry and Maud. Mrs. Warden died March 12, 1874, aged fifty-two years. Mr. Warden is a member of the Masonic fraternity and belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Republican

JOHN P. WARE was born May 8, 1844, in Todd County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1870 came to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father, Robert P. Ware, a native of Virginia, was born January 1, 1801, and died in 1868. Robert P. Ware's mother was Susan Payne, whose sister Nannie married Lord Fox of England. Robert P. married Martha, daughter of James Saunders, of Christian County, Ky. (died in 1870 aged sixty-four years), and from this union sprang Mary A (Lane), William N., Thomas E., Susan H. (Burrus), Virginia E. (Hilton), subject and Martha E. (Ingram). On September 30, 1869, subject was married to Miss Deborah M., daughter of Henry F. and Naomi (Davis) Townly, of Todd County, born May 10, 1846, and to them have been born Henry, Mary A., Mattie and Johnnie. Subject was for several years a carpenter and builder but is now a farmer and tobacco factor, having 250 acres of fine land in good condition. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, and a Democrat.

WILSON S. WATSON, an old pioneer of Ballard County, was born in Christian County, Ky., June 20, 1820. He is the first of three boys and one girl born to Samuel B. and Clarissa (Lowder) Watson, natives of Christian County, Ky. and Pennsylvania, and respectively of Scotch and Dutch descent. His grandfather was Robert Watson, a millwright. Our subject was reared on a farm and received a fair common school education. He lived with his parents till he was sixteen years old, when he commenced the saddler's trade in Lafayette, Christian Co., Ky. After an apprenticeship of four years, he worked one year in Hopkinsville, then returned to Lafayette, where he was married in May, 1839, to Miss Sally Ann Roberts of Christian County, Ky. She was born in February, 1825, and is a daughter of Thomas F. and Mahala (Wells) Roberts. He had born to him by this union eight children: Martha (now Stoveall), Thomas S., William L., Clementine (dead), Lucy M. (now living in St. Louis), Nancy M. (dead, Henry B. (dead), and one that died in infancy. Mr. Watson, four years after his marriage, moved to Canton, Trigg County, where he remained three years and then returned to Lafayette, where he remained till January, 1844, when he settled in the northern part of Ballard County. In 1848, he moved to Blandville, where he has lived and successfully carried on his trade ever since. In 1846, he was assessor and has also been constable four or five years, he was elected county judge, in 1854, for one term, and was constable during the war. While performing his duty as an officer, he had all his papers and saddle-bags taken from him. He was elected justice after the war, which office he has held ever since, except four years. He had two sons in the Confederate Army. His wife died in April, 1863; she was a member of the Christian Church. He was next married in June, 1872, to Mrs. Pelina (Childs) Linthicum, of Ballard County; she was the mother of four children by her former marriage; she is a member, of the Christian Church. Mr. Watson was formerly an Odd Fellow and in politics is a Democrat.

SQUIRE WILLIAM T. WESTON was born in Bertie County, N. C., April 19, 1812, removed in 1827 to Stewart County, Tenn., and in 1858 to Ballard County, Ky., where he still resides. His father, Ephraim Weston, Jr., a native of Bertie County, N. C., was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1819, at the age of sixty-three years. He was the son of Ephraim, Sr., a Scotchman. Ephraim, Jr., married Catherine Barnes, of Gates County, N. C., who died in 1814. Their offspring are Elizabeth (Butler), Barnes, Catherine (King and Wall), Ephraim, Benjamin, Parthena (Creasey), subject and Richard. Subject received a common school education in youth, but is possessed of a fine store of information by general reading. He married March 19, 1835, Miss Martha L., daughter of Henry and Harriet (French) Gibson, of Stewart County, Tenn. (born December 13, 1812), and to them have been born Æmilius T., Isabella M. (Thomas and Richardson), and Alice E. (Thomas). Squire Weston served twelve years as a magistrate in Tennessee. He is a farmer, having 136 acres of fine land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and a Democrat.

R. H. WEBB was born in what is now the Pickett District, Ballard County, Ky., on June 27, 1848, and is a son of William and Ann Eliza (Woolfolk) Webb. The father was a native of Henry County, Ky., and came with his father to this county, in 1832. The mother was born in Owen County, Ky. Her father, Col. Thomas Woolfolk, was a colonel in a regiment that was enlisted for the battle of New Orleans, but the battle took place before the men arrived there. Col. Woolfolk came to this county with his family about 1833. The parents of our subject were married about 1847, and immediately settled down on part of the farm now owned by the latter. There the father died September 15, 1877. For many years he served as magistrate of the district, and died a member of the Christian Church. The mother died in January, 1863. Our subject was the eldest of seven children, of whom six are now living: Robert H., Hannah, wife of G. A. Thomas, of Bardwell; Julia, wife of W. L. Violett; William, John and Wallace. His education was received in the neighborhood and at Clinton College. He began life for himself at twenty-one, and at present owns about 100 acres, of which there are about seventy-five under cultivation. In 1875 he began teaching school and taught seven sessions. In 1882 he was elected to the office of county examiner, and was re-elected in 1884. While acting in this capacity, he attended the meeting of the examiners of the State, which was held at Louisville, in 1883, and took a very active part in the proceedings. Among the resolutions which he offered was one to the effect that all banks, railroads, and other corporations should be taxed for the benefit of the schools. This resolution was adopted unanimously. He was also chairman of the committee on permanent organization, and was also one of five of a committee that was appointed to confer with a legislative committee, on the amendment of the present school law for the State. He is a member of South Ballard Lodge, No. 499, A. F. and A. M.

JAMES D. WHITE, a self-made man, and one of the prominent men of Ballard County, was born October 31, 1831, in Hickman County, Ky. He is the fifth of nine children born to Willis and Mary (Wright) White, of Hickman, and of Irish and German descent, respectively. He was reared on a farm and received a common school education. At the age of eighteen years, he left home and worked on a farm for two years. In 1851, he commenced the study of law with Judge J. M. Bigger, at Blandville, and was admitted to the bar in 1852; in 1857, he was elected county attorney for one term; in 1869, he was elected judge of the Court of Common Pleas, to fill the unexpired term of E. Crossland, who was sent to congress, and was re-elected for a term of six years. He was one of the Hancock and English electors in 1880, and was a delegate to the Democratic convention at Chicago, in 1884. He came with his parents to Blandville, when but two years old. He has made life a success, established a reputation as an able lawyer, and ranks among the best legal talent in the Purchase; he is the possessor of two farms of 200 to 400 acres each; also two residence lots in Blandville. He was married June 19, 1860, to Mary E. Coil, of Ballard; she was born in Pendleton County, Va., and was the daughter of Adam and Dorcas (Morrow) Coil, of German descent. To this union were born seven children: William T., Addie (deceased), W. J., James D. (deceased), Florence and Samuel J. Mrs. White was a member of the Christian Church and died May 10, 1875. Mr. White was next married, October 20, 1881, to Mrs. M. A. Utterback, of Ballard, a daughter of T. J. and Emily (Kouns) Juett, and mother of two children by her first husband, viz.: T. J. and Adda (now Marshall). Mr. White is a member of the Masonic fraternity, is a Sir Knight and is also a member of the I. O. O. F., K. and L. of H. and U. W.; he has also been a member of all the local temperance organizations.

R. C. WHITESIDE was born in Clinton County, Ky., January 20, 1838, and is the first of eight children born to O. H. P. and Eliza (Campbell) Whiteside, natives of Kentucky and of German and Scotch descent respectively. His grandfather was Joel Whiteside, who married a Miss Lynch. He was the son of Robin Whiteside, who was born in Germany. The grandfather on the mother's side was Isaac Campbell, who married a Miss Wells; he was a son of Col. William Campbell, who married a Miss Dean, was a colonel in the Revolution and commanded at King's Mountain. The grandparents were slaveholders. R. C. was reared in Creelsborough, Ky. He received a limited education and lived with his parents till he was twenty-two years old, when he hired to work in a mill. He moved with his parents to Iowa in 1856; he returned to Ballard in 1857, settled in the neighborhood of Ogden's Landing and located where he now resides on fifty-four acres of land, which is in a good state of cultivation. He enlisted in September, 1861, in Company B, Third Kentucky Infantry, under J. H. Bowman, captain, Tilghman colonel commanding. He was in the battles of Shiloh, Baton Rouge, Cornith, Miss.; Jackson, Miss.; Farmington, Paducah, Guntown and Harrisburg. He was wounded in the left thigh and left arm, and remained in the hospital until March, 1865; was on furlough, when paroled at Grenada, Miss., in May, 1865. He returned home and engaged in farming, saw-milling and threshing. He was married in October, 1867, to Vitula Duncan, a native of Daviess County, Ky., and daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Muffit) Duncan, who were natives of Daviess and Breckinridge Counties, Ky., respectively, of Scotch and German descent. To Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside were born five children: Samuel O., Flora B., Ella, Jesse C. (deceased), and Leslie. Subject and his wife are Baptists, and were both members af the Grange. Mr. Whiteside was Master in the Lodge. He was elected justice in August, 1883. He cast his first presidental vote for John C. Breckinridge, in 1860. He now votes the Democratic ticket.

JOHN D. WILDS, attorney at law and ex-judge, was born in September, 1841, in Carroll County, Miss., and is a son of George B. and Mary E. (Meriwether) Wilds, the former a native of South Carolina, and the latter of Todd County, Ky. Subject's paternal grandfather was John Wilds, a native of South Carolina. He left that State about 1811, and emigrated to Mississippi, settling near Natchez, where he died several years later. Subject's maternal grandfather was Douglass Meriwether, a descendant of the Douglass family of Scotland. He was born in Virginia, and immigrated to Kentucky in 1818 or 1819, and settled in the southern part of the State, went to Carroll County, Miss., in 1833, where he died about 1836. Subject's father was a man of considerable ability, and was a member of the Mississippi Legislature at the time of his death, in 1848, aged thirty-seven years. His widow departed this life in 1851, aged thirty-three years. They were the parents of five children: James R. (deceased), Jonn D., subject, Sarah (deceased), Anna (deceased), and George B. John D. spent his youth in Mississippi, and at the age of seventeen entered the State University at Oxford, where he remained until the breaking out of the civil war, when he enlisted in the Twenty-second Mississippi Volunteer Infantry, under command of Col. Barnum, with which he served during the greater part of the war. While with this command he served in the western campaign under Gens. A. S. Johnston, Polk and Breckinridge, and participated in the battles of Vicksburg, Baton Rouge and a number of other engagements. At Baton Rouge his regiment was led in a charge against the enemy by Capt. Hughes and Gen. Clark, of Mississippi, and was received by one of the most terrific and deadly fires of the war; both said officers were shot from their horses, and many of the men were killed and wounded, and the regiment fell into disorder. At this crisis Mr. Wilds seized the flag of his regiment, ran forward half way between the lines of the two armies and stood there waving the flag and rallying the men till the lines were reformed, and until he fell pierced by a musket ball in the hip and the enemy retreated under cover of their gun-boats. His wound in the hip necessitated an absence from active service for five months. On account of his wound he was ordered to the hospital, but soon tiring of inactivity, he obtained a discharge from the infantry and joined the First Mississippi Cavalry, under command of Col. Dick Pinson, and remained until the close of the war. While with the cavalry he participated in several bloody battles, prominent among which were Murfreesborough, where he received a wound in the right breast; Franklin, Ponchatoula and Wolf River, where he was wounded the third time, receiving a pistol shot in the left thigh. At the close of the war he came to Ballard County, and engaged in teaching—reading law in the meantime. He attended the law school at Oxford, Miss., one term, and in 1869 was admitted to the bar in Blandville, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession. In 1870, he was elected county school commissioner, which office he held two years, and was elected county judge in 1874. Since 1878 he has been out of office, giving his entire time to his profession, which is very extensive and lucrative. He is a member of the law firm of Bugg & Wilds. He was married December 25, 1876, to Mrs. M. E. Byrne, daughter of Benjamin Hammond, who was born and raised in Jefferson County, Ky., but resided at his death in Union County, Ill. Their union has been blessed with three children: Anna D., John E. and Beatrice. Mr. Wilds is a stanch Democrat and a recognized leader of his party in the county. It may be added that, as a singular incident of Mr. Wild's army career, with the same ball that was shot through his breast at Murfreesborough, he killed, about the close of the war, a large old antlered buck in the swamps of Mississippi, and afterward secured the ball, and still has it in his possession. He was a mere schoolboy when he entered the service, was a confirmed consumptive, and his physician had assigned but a few weeks of life, yet hard riding and fighting in the cavalry service made him a sound and healthy man again, notwithstanding fifteen or eighteen months' confinement from his disorder in the hospital at the beginning of his service, and his several wounds.

GEORGE B. WILDS, Jr., is the fifth child of George B. and Mary E. (Meriwether) Wilds. He was born August 5, 1846, in Sun Flower County, Miss., and until the age of fifteen years lived with the family of his uncle, R. E. Meriwether, his parents having died when he was quite a small boy. At the breaking out of the civil war he espoused the cause of the South, and at the early age of fifteen enlisted in Company C, Seventh Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the greater part of the struggle. He was in the western campaigns under Corps Commander Polk, Van Dorn, Breckinridge and Forrest, and participated in a number of bloody battles, prominent among which were Shiloh, Baton Rouge, Corinth, Vicksburg, Guntown and Paducah. He surrendered with Gen. Forrest's column at Grenada, Miss., and at the close of the war came to Ballard County, Ky., where he engaged in teaching, and, in 1867, commenced the study of law under the instruction of his brother, Judge John D. Wilds. He was admitted to the bar in 1870, but continued teaching, practicing his profession during vacation in the courts of Ballard and adjoining counties. In 1872 he was appointed principal of the Blandville High School, which position he filled until 1874, when he was elected surveyor of Ballard County, in which capacity he served for a period of three years. In 1876 he commenced merchandising in Blandville in partnership with Andrew Bodkin. Later he purchased the entire interest, and at present has one of the largest stores in the county; his stock represents a capital of over $8,000. He was married December 24, 1874, to Mrs. Eva Evans, daughter of Thomas M. and Ellen Horrell, by whom he has one child, George B.; Mrs. Wilds by a previous marriage had one child, Mary Ellen Evans. Mr. Wilds is a member of the I. O. O. F., and belongs to the Christian Church of Blandville, in which he has held the office of deacon for seven years.

WILLIAM J. WILLS, a farmer, was born February 20, 1821, in Montgomery County, Ky. He is the youngest of four children, three boys and one girl, born to James S. and Mary (Kelly) Wills, natives of Virginia and of Welsh and English descent. His grandfathers were Euclid Wills and Alexander Kelly, the latter a Revolutionary soldier. William J. Wills was reared to farming and to blacksmithing; received a common school education, and lived with his parents till of age. He moved to Todd County in 1847, where he purchased 160 acres of land. In 1857 he sold out and came to Ballard County and located where he now lives on 202 acres of land, one-half of which is cleared. He was married in February, 1850, to Tolitha A. Lee, of Todd County, a native of Logan County, Ky., and a daughter of John B. and Julietta (Davis) Lee, natives respectively of Kentucky and North Carolina, and of Irish origin. He has had born to him by this union seven children: James S., John B., William L. (deceased), Onias, David T., Mary E. (now Miller) and Anah D. Mr. Wills has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for thirty years, and he and wife are members of the Christian Church. He cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk, and has voted with the Democrats ever since.

DR. H. L. WILEY, Ballard County, was born in Carroll County, Ky., on September 17, 1847, and is a son of John W. and Sarah A. (Brent) Wiley. The father was born in Shelby County, Ky., in 1819, his parents being natives of Virginia. In 1846 he came to Carroll County, where he resided until his death on August 15, 1865. The mother is still living in Arlington, Ballard Co., Ky. Subject is the eldest of four children, of whom three are now living, viz.: Henry L.; Archie F., in Berkeley, Ballard Co., Ky., and Bettie, widow of Martin Mulvoy. Subject's education was obtained in the schools of his native county, and at the Eminence High School. He read medicine at Campbellsburg, Ky., with Dr. L. R. Martin, for eighteen months and then attended lectures at the Cincinnati University of Medicine in 1866–67. He returned to Carroll County, where he practiced until 1869. He then came to Ballard County, but only remained one year, and subsequently removed to Fancy Farm, Graves County. At that point he practiced four years and then went to Missouri. A year later he returned to Graves County, and this time opened a drug store at Water Valley. After a short time he moved to Arlington, Ballard County, and opened a general store. In 1881, he came to Milburn and opened a dry goods store. Here he has since remained and now carries a stock of about $5,000. Dr. Wiley was married on December 14, 1870, to Miss Molly E. Reddick, a daughter of William F. and Mary J. (Goldston) Reddick. This lady was born in Ballard County and was the mother of two children, Cora Lee and DeLeon. Her death occurred August 9, 1881, and our subject was next married, February 9, 1882, to Miss Fannie Reddick, a sister of his first wife. By this last marriage there are two children, Bonnie and Mabel. Mrs. Wiley is a member of the Baptist Church.

RICHARD N. WYATT, Ballard County, was born June 15, 1830, in Christian County, Ky. He is the fifth of nine children born to Richard and Martha (Harrelson) Wyatt, natives of Virginia, of English and Welsh descent. The grandfather Wyatt came from England. Richard N. was reared on a farm, and lived with his parents till twenty-three years of age, when he started in business for himself. He moved with his parents to Ballard County in 1844, and settled in the northern part of the county. He located where he now lives in 1854, on 150 acres of land, which he has improved with a fine residence. He was married in October, 1853, to Lucretia Garrett, of Ballard County; she was born in Carroll County, Ky., and is a daughter of John and Isabella (Hawthorn) Garrett. To them were born ten children, seven now living: Martha I., now Turner; W. T., H. A., C. W., Eva M., Edward L., Nannie V. Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt are members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Wyatt is a member of the K. of H., and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Scott in 1852; he voted the Whig ticket until 1864, since which time he has been a Democrat.

ANDREW J. WYATT was born July 28, 1828, in Christian County, Ky., and in 1845 came with his parents to Ballard County, where he still resides. His father, Richard Wyatt, a native of King and Queen County, Va., a soldier in the war of 1812, died in 1868, at the age of eighty years. Richard married Martha Harrelson, of Christian County, Ky. (she died in 1853, aged about seventy years), and their offspring are William B., John T., Myra J. (Brame), subject, Richard N., George W., Elizabeth A. (Dance), Sarah E. (Penn) and Mary H. (Penn). On November 11, 1866, subject married Miss Mary E., daughter of Benjamin F. Moses, of Paducah, Ky., born June 23, 1850, and to them have been born James H., Carrie A., Lula E., Frank R., Ned T. and Norma Kate. Our subject is a farmer, owning 649 acres of valuable land in a fine state of cultivation. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

CALLOWAY COUNTY.

FELIX C. ALLEN, of Murray, was born in Calloway County, July 10, 1848, the second of nine children born to Matthew and Elizabeth J. (Alexander) Allen, natives respectively of Kentucky and Tennessee. The father has devoted his time to mercantile and agricultural pursuits, and has served a term of four years as jailer of Calloway County. Our subject was able to secure a good education in the schools of his time, which was augmented by home study. He worked on the farm and in his father's store, and at twenty years of age engaged in the tobacco business as wholesale salesman, continuing in this capacity for a period of six years. Coming to Murray he opened a grocery and hardware store on a small scale; his business rapidly grew, till now he is a partner in the dry goods firm of Allen & Ryan, aside from his own extensive grocery establishment. He is a live business man, and by personal industry and business talent has made his own property. January 24, 1877, he married Miss Mary S. Sledd, of Murray. They have one child—Lura. Mr. Allen favors temperance, and is a member of the K. of H.

ANDREW J. BARNETT, assistant cashier and manager of the interests of the Paris (Tenn.) Commercial Bank in Murray, was born in this county September 22, 1844, to James L. and Hannah D. (Hardison). The father was a farmer, born in Christian County, this State, but resided principally in Calloway County, where he died in March, 1853. Our subject is the fourth of nine children, seven of whom are yet living. He was reared on a farm and received his early schooling in the common district schools, which was followed by a course in the Evansville (Ind.) Commercial College, from which institution he graduated in 1867. Returning to Murray he was variously engaged four years, when a partnership was formed with T. McElrath, and a general hardware and grocery business was carried on for fifteen months, when Mr. McElrath died. Mr. Barnett purchased the entire stock and carried on the business until 1880. He was interested also in a blacksmith and wagon factory, and in the Murray Mills. In 1880 he became interested in the Paris (Tenn.) Bank, and in dealing also in real estate. He has large farming interests, makes a specialty of shorthorn cattle raising, and has invested heavily of late in the cattle business in Texas. Mr. Barnett is one of the most energetic, successful business men of the State, and has accumulated his large property by close attention to business and keen sagacity in financial matters. He is the present treasurer of the school board. May 12, 1878, he married Mrs. Laura A. (Curd) McElrath, widow of his former partner. She has two sons: Felix B. and John P. McElrath.

ROBERT S. COLEMAN, Calloway County, is a native of Stewart County, Tenn. He was born March 8, 1829, and is a son of William H. and Mary (Gatlin) Coleman. The father was a farmer by occupation, a native of North Carolina, who came west in 1816, and died in Stewart County, Tenn., in 1850. Our subject was the only child of his parents, and his early life was spent upon the home farm. After becoming of age he was variously engaged in steamboating, clerking and farming until 1855, when he began the study of medicine, and, removing soon after to Henry County,. Tenn., completed his preparatory studies there; he then attended the university at Nashville, and graduated from the medical department of that institution in 1862. He then accepted a position in the Confederate hospital service, but was taken prisoner in the fall of the same year at Fort Heiman, and paroled. He then continued the practice of medicine in Henry County, Tenn., until 1872, when he came to Murray, where he has since resided, and enjoys the confidence of the community in his professional skill, and occupies an eminent position as a physician, surgeon and citizen. November 7, 1856, he wedded Miss Fannie A. Williams, of Henry County, Tenn. There are five children living of this marriage: John R., who graduated with honors from the medical department of the University of Louisville in 1882, is a young man of fine social and intellectual worth, a thorough physician, has an extensive practice and bids fair to rise to distinction in his chosen profession; James H., a counselor at law, with fine intellect and fair promise; Thomas E., Mary A. and Fannie P., all children of splendid sense. Subject is a member of the Masonic order. He is chairman of the board of health and has served as president of the medical association.

EUCLID H. COVINGTON, proprietor of the Covington House, was born in Calloway County, December, 1840. His father, William H. Covington, was born in Warren County, Ky., near Bowling Green, January 25, 1813. During his boyhood days educational advantages were limited, but having fine natural abilities, and improving his time in home studies, when not working on the farm, he was enabled later in life to fill with honor the several eminent positions of trust conferred upon him. While yet a boy he began teaching, and dealing in stock, and when a young man made several trips with the same to New Orleans; he was generally successful in his dealing, and at an early day, came to Calloway County, and located on a farm, the county being then poorly developed. At the breaking out of the war, he was a Whig and stanch Union man, and during the war was well known as such by the Federal authorities, with whom he had great influence, which he used in the interests of his county and her citizens. He suffered heavily at the hands of guerrillas of both armies; and was finally broken financially. In 1865 he was elected as a Democrat to an adjourned session of the State legislature, and the same year was re-elected for two years. January 15, 1834, he married Mildred H. Spillman, which union has given seven children, only three of whom are living. Euclid H. Covington, the subject or these lines was reared on the farm and attended the district schools and the Murray Institute; then he clerked in his father's store and next accepted position as deputy county clerk; for many years subsequently he was interested in the mercantile and tobacco business, at one time manufacturing plug and twist tobacco in Murray on an extensive scale; in partnership with two others he built the Murray saw and grist-mill, which is still in operation; in 1872 he was appointed postmaster at this place, but resigned two years later and engaged in the hotel business, to which he has since given his attention with good success. August 2, 1861, he married Lucy B. Curd, an accomplished daughter of Capt. Edward Curd, of Mexican war fame. They have three children living: Gustavus C., William E. and Curtis C. Mr. and Mrs. Covington are devout members of the Missionary Baptist Church, of which he is trustee. He is also a member of the Masonic and Knights of Honor fraternities.

GEORGE W. CRAIG was born in this county, January 6, 1845, at Pine Bluff, on the Tennessee River. He is the eldest of six children born to George W. and Lavinia (McCuiston) Craig. The father was a native of the State and was engaged through life in mercantile and farming pursuits. He died in July, 1867. He was of Irish descent and a son of James Craig. Our subject assisted in early life in the management of his father's warehouse, and clerked in the store. At seventeen he accepted a clerkship in the warehouse and commission store of Whitlock & McNichols, and after continuing in this capacity two years came to Murray and served three years as deputy circuit clerk. He then engaged in farming and continued the same up to 1880, excepting two years, during which time he was employed as salesman by Harding & Adair, of Graves County. In 1880 he was elected circuit clerk for a term of six years. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Knights of Honor, and is an eminent and active worker in the cause of temperance. May 19, 1867, he married Miss Nannie Eaker of Murray. This union has been blessed with seven children, three of whom are living: Mary, Harmon E. and George C.

HON. GEORGE N. CUTCHIN, present member of the State legislature from Calloway County, of which he is a native, was born in 1851. His father, William H. Cutchin, was born in North Carolina, removing to Calloway County, Ky., in early life, where he engaged in general farming, with which he combined the honored and laborious work of pioneer school teacher. He died in this county in 1869. Catherine L. (Martin) Cutchin, who is still a resident of Calloway County, Ky., is the mother of our subject. She was born in Kentucky, and is a grand-daughter of Gen. William Green of Revolutionary fame. George N. Cutchin is the fifth of a family of nine children born to these parents, and was reared on the farm, to which industry he still devotes his attention. He received the benefits of his father's teaching, supplemented by a course of study in the Murray Institute, obtaining thereby a good English education. In August, 1883, he was elected by the people of Calloway County to represent them in the lower house of the State legislature, a position which he now occupies with acceptance. In 1879 he married Miss Sallie B., daughter of Joel H. and Mary Curd, and to them have been born three children: Tommie, Ethel G. and Carlisle Cutchin.

EDWIN S. DIUGUID, Murray, was born in Calloway County, August 13, 1854. His father, William H. Diuguid, is a native of Virginia, and came to Calloway County with his parents in 1835; he is a cabinet-maker by trade and carried on business a number of years in Murray, but has given his attention more of late years to agricultural pursuits. His wife, Catherine Churchill, is a native of this State. Their union has been blessed with nine children, of whom our subject is the fifth. The latter was reared on a farm, principally, and attended the district schools of the neighborhood, and after a year's course at the Murray Institute, taught school for a term of five months; for four years following he was employed as salesman by J. D. A. Hale, of Murray, two years. With the money thus earned, he was enabled to enter a business partnership with W. P. Gatlin. The firm continued four years up to 1884, since which date Mr. Diuguid has been alone. He carries a large line of groceries, hardware and general merchandise, and enjoys a flourishing trade. Mr. Diuguid is a deacon in the Christian Church, and is one of the trustees of the town. He married, December 9, 1879, Miss Lottie C. Scott, a native of Mississippi. They have two children: Robert S. and Mary E.

DR. M. H. EAKER, whose portrait appears elsewhere in this volume, is the seventh of a family of eight children, born to Michael and Polly (Armstrong) Eaker. The father, a native of Georgia, and the mother of Tennessee, both removed to Trigg County, Ky., in early childhood; there they married, and there spent several years of their lives. It was there Dr. M. H. Eaker was born, in 1818, two years subsequent to which date his parents removed to the Purchase, settling on Terrapin Creek, in the south part of Graves County. About 1836, they removed to Mayfield, where they passed the remainder of their lives. Michael Eaker died in 1855, at what age is not absolutely known. His father was a Revolutionary soldier, and was killed in that struggle; according to the best information, Michael Eaker was born about 1770; his wife, Polly (Armstrong) Eaker, died in Mayfield, Ky., about 1858. Of their children, Squire John Eaker, of Mayfield, and the subject of this sketch are the only ones living. Practically, Dr. Eaker was reared to the pursuits of the farm, receiving in the meantime the benefits of such education as the infant settlement then afforded. At the age of twenty he began reading medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. Dallam, of Mayfield. After the usual preliminary reading, he entered the medical department of the Transylvania University, at Lexington, Ky. Having thus qualified himself for his profession, he began the practice of medicine in his adopted county, but in 1844 removed to Murray, Calloway County. Here his efficient service soon commanded an extensive practice. We wish to emphasize the expression "efficient service," as Dr. Eaker is not one of those, who, by exterior appearance, seek to prepossess the public; choosing rather to "prove himself a workman, who need not be ashamed." Sympathy and generosity are qualities happily blended in his nature, which, combined with his native ability as a physician, have drawn around him a host of ardent friends. He does not affiliate with any church or religious denomination, but is a worthy member of the Masonic fraternity. Dr. Eaker was married in Tennessee, in 1848, to Miss Mary Ellison, a daughter of Thomas and Lucy (Grisson) Ellison. Thomas was a son of the Rev. Lewis Ellison, a minister of the Baptist faith, and was born in Kentucky. He died about 1832, in Christian County, Ky., leaving six children, Mrs. Eaker being the third. His widow married Cornelius Atkisson, had a family of six children, and died in Murray, Ky., in 1864. Mrs. Eaker was born in 1828, in Cumberland County, Ky. Dr. Eaker has a family of seven children, viz.: Nancy, wife of George W. Craig; Michael T., Robert W., John V., Franklin P., Harmon D. and Bailey I. Eaker.

ROBERT L. ELLISON, of Murray, Calloway County, now arranging to reside at Fort Worth, Tex., was born in Boone County, Mo., November 19, 1831, and is a son of Thomas and Lucinda (Grisson) Ellison. Thomas Ellison was a Virginian by birth, and a tanner by occupation; his father, Lewis Ellison, was one of the pioneer preachers of Kentucky. He died in Murray at the advanced age of ninety years. Thomas Ellison came to Kentucky when a boy, with his father, and after marriage moved to Missouri, but returned to Christian County, this State, where he died; his family removed to Calloway County in 1838. Mrs. Ellison married a second husband, a Mr. Atkisson, and moved to Wadesborough, coming finally to Murray in 1846. At sixteen years of age our subject began clerking for D. C. Carlton, receiving the first year his board and $16. He then served as deputy circuit and county clerk under his brother, for several years. In 1856 he defeated two opponents for the office of circuit clerk by handsome majorities, receiving more votes than both, and held the position until 1862. In the same year the Federal forces arrested him for running for office, took him to Paducah, but released him shortly after, and he returned to his home. At the close of the war, under the firm name of Ellison, Godwin & Co., he built two brick business houses and carried on a grocery in one and a dry goods store in the other. A branch store was established at Crossland, Ky., under the firm name of B. Harding & Co., and for some time a heavy business was done in each of these stores. That in Murray was sold in 1871, and continued at Crossland, and in 1877, Messrs. Ellison and N. Harding established a State bank at Paris, Tenn., with Mr. Ellison as president. There Mr. Ellison built a fine business house and engaged also in the mercantile trade, all of which interests he disposed of preparatory to his departure to Fort Worth, Tex., where, in 1883, he secured an interest in a banking institution, which has since been converted into a national bank. He is also extensively interested in a Texas cattle company. He is entirely a self-made man, having started in life without a cent of capital. He has always taken a deep interest in educational matters, and was prominent in the management of the Murray Institute for many years. He is a member of the Masonic order and has taken a deep interest in the orphan's home under the auspices of that fraternity. August 7, 1853, he married Lucy B. Curd; she died May 1, 1861, leaving three children, Thomas B., Mary L., and Lucy J., now deceased. In 1862 Mr. Ellison wedded Miss Thankful Ryan, of Murray; they have three children, Alice R., Sula P. and Robert.

JOHN B. ENGLAND, one of the most thrifty and enterprising farmers of Calloway County, was born in Cumberland County, Va., July 30, 1823. He is the fourth of a family of six children of John and Mary B. England, who settled in Calloway County in 1839, emigrating at that date from Virginia. John England, the father of John B., was born in 1786, in Hanover County, Va., where he grew to manhood. He served as a soldier in the war of 1812, at the close of which he married Miss Mary B. Cayce, who was born in Virginia in 1792. She lived to the advanced age of eighty-two years, and died in Calloway County, her husband having died two years subsequent to their settlement in this county. They were both advocates of pioneer Methodism, in the faith of which they trustingly died. John B. England received a common school education, chiefly in Virginia, and has assiduously devoted his life to the pursuits of agriculture, in which he has been quite successful. He now owns near Murray a tract of land consisting of 560 acres. In political faith Mr. England is a stanch Republican, and has been repeatedly called to fill positions of public trust. In 1851 he was elected to the office of county assessor, serving one term; next, in 1862, he was elected to the office of county clerk of Calloway County, serving four years; was assessor of internal revenue from 1867 to 1869, and for several years has served as United States commissioner for the Sixth District of Kentucky, which position he now holds. Mr. England has been twice married; first to Mrs. Lizzie Smothermen formerly Bramlett, of Memphis, Tenn.; she died in May, 1871, leaving two children: Etna C. and Bernard B. England. The second wife was Susan M., daughter of the late Dr. John B. Graham, of Calloway County. She died in September, 1883, the mother of two children: Kenton B. and John G. England. Mr. England is a worthy member of the Masonic order, I. O. O. F., and of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM P. GATLIN, Calloway County, was born at Iron Mountain Furnace, Tenn., June 6, 1859. His father, George W. Gatlin, is a native of the same place. The latter has engaged during life in farming and various mercantile pursuits in Tennessee. During the war he captained a company organized by himself in the Fiftieth Tennessee Regiment. He was wounded severely in a skirmish which occurred in the engagement at Forts Henry and Donelson. His wife, Minerva Gray, is a daughter of Gen. James A. Gray, who served with distinction during the Mexican war. To them were born seven children. Our subject successively attended the various schools in his native State, Tennessee, and in the State of Kentucky. Concluding his scholastic course he entered upon the stage of business life as clerk in a retail store. After seven and a half months he began for himself, the mercantile business in September 1879, in the town of Murray, Calloway Co., Ky., where he has since resided. Mr. Gatlin started in life with but a few dollars, but by his indefatigable industry, energy and business sagacity has built up a lucrative business, and placed himself among the prominent citizens and merchants of Murray. October 1, 1883, he married Miss Effie Oury, of Murray, Ky. They are the parents of one child, Gray. Mr. Gatlin is a member of the K. of H. and A. F. & A. M., and is an active supporter of the temperance cause.

JAMES W. GILBERT, Calloway County, was born in Marshall County, Ky., February 20, 1840. His father, Hugh Gilbert, is engaged in business in Paducah, Ky., having been previously identified with the business interests of Benton, Ky. To him and wife, Sarah A. Walters, were born twelve children. The subject of these lines, the second child, was reared on his father's farm; and after attending the common schools of the neighborhood, continued his studies at Benton and Murray Institutes, afterward teaching school himself. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Third Kentucky Confederate Regiment, served three years, and was engaged at the siege of Vicksburg, and various other battles. Returning home at the close of the war, he devoted his time to teaching and farming, the latter of which continued to be his principal occupation up to 1876, when he went into the tobacco business, which has since been his occupation. He has 500 acres of valuable land and a fine residence adjoining the town limits of Murray. He has attained his success in life through his own efforts, and has given to public enterprises freely. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and with his wife a member of the Baptist Church. He was first married to Miss McClain, who died in 1868, and later to Albina P. McClain, sister of his first wife. They have five children.

THOMAS M. GRAVES, Calloway County, was born September 18, 1824, in Marshall County, Tenn., the youngest of ten children born to Samuel and Ellen (Wilson) Graves. The father was a farmer, was a native of Georgia, whence he moved in 1800 to Tennessee. He died in 1879 at the advanced age of eighty-nine years. Our subject was reared on a farm, but at the age of nineteen began reading medicine with Dr. Moore of Bedford County, and practiced for several years; moved to Kentucky in 1852; in 1854 went to Nashville, attended one course at the Nashville College. After several years' practice in his native county, he came in 1852 to Calloway County, and located on a farm four miles northwest of town, and has since been in active practice, and stands high in his profession. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and heartily indorses the temperance movement. He has been married three times. His first wife was Miss Martha Fleming; she died soon after marriage. By his second wife, Susanna M. Wilson, there are three children living: James A., Ula and Cora. The doctor's present wife is Miss Nannie E. Harding; this union has given three children: Wildy H., Rube E. and Polly C.

NATHAN T. HALE, Calloway County, was born in Henry County, Tenn., December 6, 1833, and is a son of Nicholas and Rhoda (Crouch) Hale. The father was a native of Tennessee, and about 1834 removed to Warren County, Ky., and from there to Arkansas some time later. Returning to Kentucky he located in Graves County, where he died two years afterward. His widow followed him four years later, and our subject went to live with an uncle, Nathan Hale, who was a farmer in Graves County, and remained with him until becoming of age. Going to Boydsville, Tenn., he began clerking in the dry goods house of E. R. Cook for $75 per year, and remained in his employ two years, his wages being increased in the meantime. He then went into the dry goods business in partnership with R. M. Haupe, in Boydsville, whom he bought out nine months later; then he moved his goods to Lynnville, Ky., and went into business with his brother, W. H. Hale. They continued together five years till 1862, but during the same period N. T. Hale was partner in a store at Boydsville with E. R. Cook. In 1862 he sold his store in Lynnville, and took charge of his father-in-law's farm and hands for one season, after which he moved on a farm in Graves County, where he remained three years, when he removed to Calloway County, and purchased a farm three miles from Murray, which he afterward exchanged for one nearer the town. He then re-entered the mercantile trade, forming the partnership of Hale, Jones & Co., and purchasing the stock of Ellison, Godwin & Co., the firm continued thus for three years, and thereafter for a similar period of time as Hale, Head & Co. Mr. Hale purchased his brother's interest in the firm, and for two years following business was carried on under firm name of Hale & Head, when Mr. Hale bought out his partner, and was alone up to February, 1884, when his son and son-in-law were admitted to the firm. Mr. Hale is interested in a branch store at Warburg, Ky. The firm in Murray carry a stock of goods of from $15,000 to $20,000, and enjoy a steady and heavy trade throughout the surrounding country. Mr. Hale started in life with but little assistance furnished by his uncle, and has made his way through the world with nothing but his own energies to rely on, which, however, have been sufficient to place him in the foremost rank of business men, and among the most respected and esteemed citizens. He and wife are members of the Christian Church, in which he has been elder for many years. He has taken a common interest in the local schools, and now holds the position of trustee, with others of the Murray Institute. He was married March 4, 1858, to Miss Margaret C. Sims, of Tennessee, daughter of John and Jane (Cook) Sims. The union has been blessed with ten children, eight of whom now survive: Orlando T. (now in partnership with his father), Virgie H. (wife of W. H. Stubblefield, also a partner in the store), Drucilla, (a young lady thoroughly proficient in music), James M., Rhoda J., William N., Burnett S. and Artie (an infant).

J M Gilbert

RICHARD F. HAMLIN, of Calloway County, was born in Rockingham County, N. C., November 15, 1835, a son of Peter S. and Virginia A. (Micheaux) Hamlin, both of whom are yet living. The mother is a descendant of Abraham Micheaux, a Huguenot, whose wife, when a child, was shipped out of France as merchandise, in a hogshead, during the period of persecution of the Protestants in that country. The captain of the vessel, being friendly to the Huguenots, released her from confinement, and landed her safely in Holland, where she met and married Abraham Micheaux, who had preceded her as a refugee. The father of our subject is a Virginian by birth, removed at an early date to North Carolina, where he was married. In 1839 he came to Calloway County, Ky., when our subject was four years old. Richard F. worked on the farm and around his father's mill, and attended subscription schools until nineteen years of age, when, upon the proceeds of a small legacy derived from his grandfather, he attended school at Rockingham Court House (or Wentworth), N. C. Then by the financial aid of his aunt was enabled to attend Chapel Hill University in North Carolina, and graduated in 1859. His career as a student is exemplary, holding the position of class orator, associate editor of the college paper, president of the literary society, and always a perfect grade in deportment. During his last year in college he took a course of law in connection with his other studies. After leaving school he went to Todd County, Ky., where he was first tutor in a wealthy family at a liberal salary, then took under his instruction the children of several other families of the vicinity. During the fore part of the late war he was Union in sentiment, but was influenced by relations and friends to enter the Confederate service. He joined Company H, Third Kentucky Infantry, participating in the battle of Shiloh, and the numerous other engagements of the Southwest. In said command he staid until close of the war. Returning to Calloway County he worked in his father's mill, and taught school, was then president of a college in Ballard County two years. Then came to Murray, having previously invested in a stock of groceries, and continued in the same line nine months. He afterward taught school, and in 1882 was elected county clerk. Mr. Hamlin was married June 28, 1868, to Miss Laura Boggs. The union has given four children: Roberta, Virginia, Juliet K. and Richard F. Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin are members of the Christian Church. He also is a Mason and member of the Knights of Honor.

JAMES G. HART, M. D., Calloway County, is a son of James M. and Dolly (Marsh)

Hart. He was born July 5, 1849, in Henry County, Tenn., and was brought when a year old to this county by his parents. He was reared on a farm and received what education was afforded by the common schools. At twenty years of age he began the study of medicine under the instruction of Dr. E. B. Curd of this county, and a year later attended the Eclectic Medical Institute, Cincinnati, Ohio, from which institution he graduated in 1873. Returning to Calloway County he began the practice of his profession, locating in the town of Murray in 1880, and has rapidly attained a leading position, enjoying an extensive lucrative practice, as well as the esteem of the community. Educational matters receive from him a hearty support, as well as the temperance cause. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and with his wife a member of the Christian Church. He married May 15, 1873, Miss Sarah E. Thompson, daughter of Abraham Thompson of this county, which union has been blessed with four children: Abraham B., Pocahontas, Prince A. and Fannie.

WILLIAM HOLLAND, whose portrait appears elsewhere in this volume, and who has lived in this county since 1831, was born in 1819, in Robertson county, Tenn., and is a son of Daniel Holland, an old-fashioned gentleman, of great personal popularity, who settled in this county in 1831, and who died in 1852. The mother of William Holland, whose name was Rebecca Skinner, was a native of Robertson County, as was also her husband. She died in Calloway County, Ky., two years subsequently to the death of her husband. They had a family of twelve children, of whom William is the eldest, and of whom but seven are now living: William, Jesse, Andrew J., Elizabeth (Boaze), B. C. Holland, Lydia (Bowman), Temperance (Mahan). Referring to the early education of our subject, we have but to present a mental picture of the primitive log schoolhouse, with stick chimney, clapboard roof and door, puncheon floor and seats and writing-desk of same material; the latter placed beneath an improvised window, made by removing a section of one log, over which opening was often placed a greased paper, in lieu of glass, and we then have a view of the "temple of learning" common to his boyhood, and the benefits of which were shared by very many of the old settlers now living. Though hedged about in his early youth with many disadvantages common to pioneer life, our subject developed a fondness for reading, which, combined with his native business energy, has made him conspicuous among his fellows, and the impress of his influence has long been felt in the moulding of character, and the advancement of the common good in the community in which he has lived so long. As a citizen, as a magistrate, as a conservator of the interests of widow and orphan, and in the administration of his own private business, Mr. Holland has proven himself an efficient and an honest man. He has been twice married; first in 1841 to Miss Martha J. Miller, who was born in 1821, and died in 1882. As a result of this union, seven children are living, viz.: George M., Mary A. (Roberts), John G., Robert B., Layfayette W., Stanford S., and Rebecca E., wife of S. S. Nix. The second marriage occurred, in 1883, to his present wife, Martha Martin.

ANDREW J. HOLLAND is a son of Daniel Holland, a physician, and native of Robertson County, Tenn., where our subject was born February 22, 1830. The father died in 1852 and his widow, Rebecca (Skinner) Holland, two years later. Subject was reared on the farm of his father, and attended district school. He remained at home until of age, when he came to Murray and further prosecuted his studies, his father having in the meantime moved to the eastern part of the county. After attending school one year, he taught one for same period of time, and then engaged in the mercantile trade at Flint Springs, this county, continuing there four years; selling out he purchased a dry goods store in Murray, and was in the business two years, being burnt out in 1861. He was later engaged in the dry goods trade in Murray from 1865 to 1868, and has been largely identified with the tobacco business both here and in Graves County adjoining, and was burnt out for a second time while engaged in the manufacture of plug tobacco in the latter county. He is now in the milling business, owning a half interest in the Murray Mills. October 25, 1856, he married Elizabeth Pitt, of Murray; she died in 1865, and he was subsequently married to Ellen Curran. Mr. Holland is a member of the Masonic order, and of the Missionary Baptist Church; also a member of the Knights of Honor, and gives his support to the prohibition cause.

ROBERT B. HOLLAND was born August 12, 1853. His father, William Holland, is a native of Robertson County, Tenn., and was born April 19, 1819. He has been engaged mostly in farming and mercantile pursuits. He came to Calloway County with his parents when thirteen years of age, and has since been engaged in business, principally in the county. His wife, who was a Miss Martha J. Miller, died July 1, 1882.

They were parents of twelve children, of whom Robert B. was the eighth. Our subject was reared on a farm and obtained a good schooling, December 23, 1882, he married Miss Mattie L. Hay, of Calloway County, and began in life for himself as a farmer. He was soon after elected constable, and served as deputy sheriff during the years 1879-80. In August of the latter year he was elected sheriff, and two years later was reelected. He has been a prompt and efficient officer, and enjoys the confidence of the community. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and Knights of Honor, and gives active support to the cause of prohibition. His family consists of three children: Lula, Bertie and Myrtle.

COL. G. A. C. HOLT, of Calloway County, ex-president of the State senate and lieutenant-governor of Kentucky, was born in Salem, Livingston Co., Ky., March 2, 1840, a son of James P. and Julia K. (Hodge) Holt. The father was born in Louisville, educated at the State university, and attained eminence throughout the State as a physician. His distinguished son, the subject of this sketch, was early thrown upon his own resources. He received his early education mostly at a private academy at Henderson and Murray, Ky., and before attaining the age of fifteen years he was able to teach school. He was graduated in law by the State university at Louisville, in March, 1859. He located in Murray, Ky., and opened a law office, and rapidly laid the foundation of an extended and lucrative practice, but the breaking out of the war temporarily interfered with his efforts in this direction. He responded to the call to arms by assisting in the organization of Company H, Third Kentucky Regiment of Infantry (Confederate), and was elected captain of the company. The regiment participated in the battle of Shiloh, in which most of the officers fell; took part in the principal engagements of the Southwest, and, as a part of Forrest's command, surrendered at Gainesville, Ala., at the close of the war. At Jackson, Miss., Col. Holt received a wound in the shoulder. In March, 1864, he was made lieutenant-colonel, his commission dating November 1, 1864, to rank as such from March 25, 1864, and in November following was promoted to the rank of colonel. Upon the close of the war he returned to Murray and resumed the practice of law, taking also an interest in political affairs. In 1868 he was elected to the State senate, and in 1871 defeated Carlisle for the presidency of that body. As president of the senate he filled the position of lieutenant-governor of the State—the governor having been elected to the United States senate, and the vacancy being filled by the lieutenant-governor. Mr. Holt was again sent to the senate for a term of four years at the expiration of his first term, and through his efforts was secured material State assistance in the erection of the Murray Institute. He was also prominently identified with the passage of the Cincinnati Railroad Bill. Returning from the senate, he gave his exclusive attention to his professional interests, and has since resided in Murray. He is an active supporter of the temperance movement, and takes a warm interest in educational matters and home enterprises. Col. Holt was married October 28, 1878, to Miss Ina L. Berry, a daughter of C. A. and Mary L. Berry, of Salem, Ky.; she was educated at St. Vincent College, this State, and McPherson's Female College, Memphis, Tenn. This union has been blessed with three children: James P., Mamie and Maggie. Col. Holt's service in the army, amidst the perils and hardships of the Confederate cause, so impaired his health and constitution as to render him an invalid for life, and to confine him to his bed and room for seven or eight years after the war. He has won distinctions beyond most men of his age—lieutenant-colonel and colonel at twenty-four years of age. He was elected to the senate at twenty-eight or twenty-nine years of age, while the constitution requires thirty years of age. He was elected speaker and lieutenant-governor in 1881, at the age of thirty-three years—the constitution requiring the governor and lieutenant-governor to be thirty-five years old. He has won an enviable distinction at the bar in both the State and Federal courts; his practice now being in the State courts of his district, and the United States circuit and district courts of Louisville and Paducah.

THOMAS R. JONES, Calloway County, Ky., was born in Paris, Tenn., November 19, 1835, the second child born to Thomas M. and Mary (Cluselle) Jones. The father was a Kentuckian by birth and figured prominently in the history of the State. He was a saddler by trade and came to Calloway County in 1836, and was the county judge of said county for sixteen years; he served two terms in the legislature, and died in 1877; he had been three times married, his second wife being Martha Brame of Christian County, Ky., and his third, Martha Simpson, of Calloway County, Ky. Our subject remained at home until his marriage, when he started out in the grocery business in Murray, and for many years afterward was engaged in the mercantile trade. In 1879 he was employed as salesman in the establishment of Ellison, Head & Co., of Paris, Tenn. He afterward went to Paducah, and for over two years was employed by C. H. Reike & Sons, and J. R. Smith & Co., wholesale dry goods dealers and grocers respectively. After this he went to Mayfield, where he was one year in the dry goods business with J. D. A. Hale, when he came to Murray and opened a dry goods store under the firm name of Thomas R. Jones & Sons; six days later, the establishment burned, but stock of goods saved and was opened out in new quarters of the town. January 20, 1856, he married Celia Malone of Murray, by whom there were six children, five living: Emma J., widow of ex-Circuit Clerk James M. Hutchens; Lula D., now wife of Nathaniel Ryan, merchant of Murray; James P. and William O., both in partnership with their father, and Lera L. Mrs Jones died July 27, 1873, and Mr. Jones was subsequently married to Miss Mattie Boggs, of Murray, July 20, 1875. Mr. Jones is a member of the Christian Church, and also of the Masonic fraternity, in which he has risen to the rank of Royal Arch Mason. He was a charter member of the Murray Institute, and for many years a member of the board of trustees. William O. Jones was married to Miss Lee Nix of Marshall County, Ky., May 6, 1885. Miss Lera L. Jones was married to Hardy G. Keys, of Calloway County, Ky., December 25, 1884.

JUDGE WILLIAM B. KEYS, Murray, was born in Calloway County, May 3, 1849. His parents were Isaac and Mildred M. (Curd) Keys. His father was a native of Hart County, this state, and removed to Calloway County about 1828 with his father John Keys, who was a Virginian by birth. He was elected sheriff of this county in 1865, was re-elected to a second term, but was accidentally shot August 27, 1866. Subject's maternal grandfather, Edmond Curd, was one of the earliest settlers of Kentucky, and kept the land office at Wadesborough, Calloway County. Subject was brought up on a farm, and attended the common schools until nineteen years of age, when he gave his attention to farming and teaching school. In 1876 he was elected sheriff of Calloway County, and served two terms; during this time he improved every opportunity of studying law, which qualified him for the office of county judge, a position to which he was elected in 1882, and now holds. The judge is a man of his own making, rising from obscurity to positions of social and professional prominence, through his own untiring and determined efforts. He is a Democrat politically, and an active leader in temperance. He was the first sheriff who promptly settled up his accounts in full with the State since the war of 1860, and all the positions with which the people have favored him, he has filled to their outspoken satisfaction. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and takes an active part in all measures and enterprises calculated for the general good of the masses.

JOHN C. McELRATH was born in Marshall County, now Calloway County, Ky., September 6, 1831, a son of John T. and Jane (McCorkle) McElrath, both of whom were natives of South Carolina. The father was a farmer, and gave, during his life, some attention also to real estate dealings. He came west in 1805, with his father, William McElrath, and located first in Montgomery County, Tenn., and in 1821 removed to Marshall County, Ky. The father of William McElrath was born in Ireland, of Scotch parentage; came to America at an early date and served in the Revolutionary war. The subject of this sketch is the sixth of eleven children born to his parents, and was reared on the home farm, attending the common schools of the vicinity until seventeen years of age, when he was given a position in a store at Benton, Ky., and served a year and a half. Then he came to Murray, opened a drug store on his own account, and continued in this business five years. Then he entered the dry goods trade, and with the exception of the years during the war, has since carried on business in this line, with an average stock of $18,000. The firm is at present known as McElrath & Graham, who have a branch store in the country in charge of Mr. McElrath's son. Mr. McElrath made his own start in life, and his success is due alone to his own energy. He is a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities, and is one of the trustees of the Murray Institute, and has contributed largely to many educational measures. He is a Democrat in politics. September 25, 1861, he married Miss Rella Atkisson, of Murray. There are three children of this marriage: John T., Jessie and Lenona. Mrs. McElrath died January 5, 1869, and he was subsequently married June 30, 1873, to Miss Fannie Nold. Of this union there are three children living: Henry P., William W. and Helen. Mr. McElrath has taken a great interest in the education of his children, having graduated his two eldest daughters at Miss Knowles' female seminary, Louisville, Ky.

MORGAN W. MARTIN, of Murray, was born near Murray, Calloway County, April 2, 1844. His father, R. J. Martin, was a native of Hopkins County, Ky., was a farmer, and engaged also in tobacco dealing and mercantile pursuits. His wife, formerly Miss Harriet Williams, is a native of the State of Delaware. To them were born four children, of whom our subject is the only one living. His grandfather, James Martin, came from Virginia; was one of the first settlers of Calloway County, Ky. His other grandfather, Morgan Williams, was one of the pioneer Methodist ministers of the State. Subject was fairly educated, but his plans for the future were interrupted by the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted as a private in Company G, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, and served three years, being in the battles of Shiloh, Guntown and other battles of the southwest campaign. At Shiloh he was wounded. He served till the close of the war, and for gallant conduct was promoted to sergeant. In 1865 he returned to Murray, and continued his studies in the Murray Seminary, was afterward teacher in that institution, and has later taught various district schools. In 1876 he went to Morley, Mo., and engaged in the drug business; returning to Murray, he taught school in Calloway and in Marshall Counties. In 1878 he purchased an interest in the drug business of W. E. Dale, the style of the firm being Dale & Martin. Mr. Martin is the clerk and treasurer of the Christian Church of Murray, and is also a member of the Masonic fraternity. He is the present chairman of the town board of trustees, and also chairman of the trustees of the Murray Male and Female Institute.

IVASON B. MARTIN, Calloway County, is a native of Williamson County, Tenn., born August 30, 1855. His father, Ivason B., was a native of North Carolina, a farmer by occupation; he came to Tennessee at an early date, and died in 1871; to him and his wife, Sallie A. Roberts, were born fourteen children, of which number our subject was the fifth. The last named remained on the farm until of age, attending in the meantime the schools of the vicinity, and afterward the schools at Hico, Ky., after which he taught school in Trigg County, Ky.; then for a year was engaged in selling general goods on the road; then he accepted a situation as salesman in a mercantile establishment at Shiloh, Ky. He next sold tobacco a year in the South for R. C. Stubblefield, and after traveling one season for a Paducah wholesale confectionery house, settled in Murray, gave some attention to farming interests, and then opened his present grocery and confectionery establishment. He gives active support to the temperance movement, and is interested in enterprises of a public character. October 9, 1882, he married Miss Lina Danial, of Murray; they are both members of the Christian Church.

JOHN G. MILLER, Calloway County, attorney at law, was born January 10, 1853, in Caldwell County, this State, a son of John H. and Laura J. (Goodrum) Miller, natives respectively of Kentucky and Mississippi. The parents had seven children, our subject being the eldest. The father was descended from Scotch-Irish stock. Subject was reared on his father's farm, and educated at the district schools, and at Bethlehem Academy. His father suffered heavily on account of the war, and becoming broken in health, the responsibility of supporting the family fell largely on the shoulders of the eldest son. At eleven years of age he assumed this responsibility, and to the same energy and fixity of purpose, which characterized his early life, as in this illustration, he has always adhered. In 1874 he began teaching school; later began the study of law, and was admitted to the Eddyville bar in 1878, where he practiced a short time; then removed to Murray in 1879. He has here established himself in an extensive paying practice, and is recognized as a thorough lawyer. January 18, 1881, he married Miss Capitola L. Higgins, of Eddyville, Ky., a member of the Baptist Church in high standing. Mr. Miller is a Mason, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and an ardent advocate of prohibition.

TIPTON A. MILLER is a native of Trigg County, this State, was born October 16, 1842, and is the fifth of eight children born to John and Nancy B. (Williams) Miller, natives respectively of North Carolina and Virginia. The father was a farmer, came to Kentucky in 1831, located in Trigg County, and in 1848 came to Calloway County. He was a son of John, who was a son of William Miller, of Irish birth, and who was a major of North Carolina troops during the Revolutionary war. Tipton A. Miller spent his early life on his father's farm, and obtained some schooling at the district schools in his neighborhood, which he supplemented by a thorough course in the Murray schools, graduating in the English branches. He soon after went to Johnson County, Ill., where he taught school for two years. He then returned to Murray and prosecuted his studies further. Next he engaged in business at Snow Hill, this county, but discontinued in the spring of 1861, and assisted in recruiting Company

H, Third Kentucky Infantry, Confederate Service, and was mustered into the three years' service. His regiment participated in most of the heavy battles of the Southwest, and held responsible positions in the front at Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg and other equally sanguinary battles. Mr. Miller received a painful wound at Shiloh, and was shot many times through the clothes in different battles. He went out as a first lieutenant of the company, was promoted to captain, but refused to leave his company to accept still higher offices. He was taken prisoner near Selma, Ala., and held six weeks. Returning to Murray at the close of the war, he engaged in teaching school, dealing in tobacco, and farming. He was then a teacher in the Murray schools for a period of twenty months. In 1867 he was elected to the State legislature, and in 1871 re-elected. Since 1881 his attention has been devoted to his present business, that of grocer, the firm being Miller & Whitnel. Mr. Miller was married October 24, 1868, to Miss Mattie A. Lassiter of this county; this union has been blessed with three children: Hontas, Galen and Bunyan, the first of whom received a first-class teacher's certificate at the age of twelve years. Mr. Miller is a member of the Masonic order.

WILLIAM F. PETERSON, Murray, attorney at law and master commissioner of the Calloway circuit court, was born in Calloway County, January 14, 1853, a son of Morton and Carolina (Gardner) Peterson, natives of Virginia and Kentucky respectively. The father is a farmer by occupation, and came to Calloway County in 1835. The parents had eight children; our subject was the fifth, and was reared on the farm; by home study, and having the advantages of good common schools, he was able to obtain a good education. At twenty years of age, he served as deputy county clerk for ten months and then began the study of law, completed the same under the instruction of Judge James Campbell, the present circuit judge, and was admitted to practice, May 28, 1875. He was elected to the office of town trustee in 1879, and for two terms has served as police judge of Murray. In 1881 he was appointed master commissioner for the term of four years. Though yet a young man, his abilities have given to him a leading position in the community.

NAT RYAN, member of the firm of Allen & Ryan, Murray, was born September 5, 1851, in Calloway County. His father, Nathaniel H. Ryan, was a Virginian by birth. He came to Calloway County about 1848, and was engaged principally in farming and mercantile pursuits; he filled the position of sheriff of Calloway County from 1856 to 1860, and died in 1880. He and his wife, formerly Miss Sarah A. Wills, of Virginia, were members of the Christian Church, and were the parents of nine children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the youngest; the last remained at home until he was eighteen years of age. After following various pursuits, he was employed as salesman in a store at Crossland, Ky., for two years; coming to Murray, he was employed by Hale, Head & Co., as clerk, for three years; then in 1876 he went to Texas, where he was engaged in farming and clerking; returning to Calloway County, he sold goods two years for a firm at Crossland, when he came to Murray, and with his present partner, opened a clothing and furnishing goods establishment, which was finally given to the general dry goods and clothing trade, in which the firm is still engaged. Mr. Ryan was first married to Alice E. Martin, of which union there was one child, Joseph. Mrs. Ryan died April 12, 1880, and he was subsequently married to Lula D. Coleman, of Murray. Mr. Ryan is a member of the Knights of Honor.

WILLIAM T. SCOTT, Calloway County, is a native of Muhlenburg County, this State, and was born November 25, 1828, the eldest son of Nathan and Elizabeth (Gish) Scott, both of whom were Virginians by birth, and who came to this State in 1828, settled in Muhlenburg County, and four years later moved to Hopkins County, where the father died in 1836. Our subject lived with his uncle, Joseph Scott, in Hopkins County, Ky., until he was fourteen years old, when, after a few years' residence in Muhlenburg County, he went to Hopkinsville, Ky., and served a three years' apprenticeship to the cabinet-maker's trade. For the following five years he was engaged at his trade in Cadiz, Ky., and coming to Murray, Ky., in 1856, he continued the same business for two years; afterward he operated a saw and grist-mill, and engaged in various business enterprises. During two years of the war he served as a constable, and was at one time the only civil officer in Calloway County. For several years afterward Mr. Scott was engaged in business at various points, but, becoming partially paralyzed, returned to Murray in 1869, being laid up several months with his malady. He has served as police judge, county examiner, justice of the peace four years, and being a conservative Democrat, was appointed postmaster at this point in 1877, and has since filled that position. November 25, 1851, he married Melissa Miller, of Cadiz, Ky., of which union there are two children living: Ada N. (widow of Felix G. Boyd), and Jennie E., at home. Mr. Scott is a member of the Odd Fellow and Masonic fraternities, and a stanch friend of the temperance movement.

JOHN R. SCHROADER was born in this county, July 29, 1853. His father, Obadiah A. Schroader, was born near Bowling Green, this State, January 22, 1829, a son of John G. and Spicey (Amos) Schroader. John G. was a native of Maryland, a farmer by occupation, and came to Kentucky when a boy. O. A. Schroader was reared on a farm, and only permitted to attend school during the worst winter weather. At eighteen years of age he began farming for himself, and at twenty began learning the blacksmith trade; in 1849 he came to Murray and opened a shop, and after extended his work to the manufacture of wagons, in which he has continued to the present time, now having a well-established reputation and trade in that line, and employing a number of hands. In a financial way he has been very successful, having a farm of 300 acres, aside from his business interest, which is the result of his personal industry and good management. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and takes an interest in the temperance cause. His wife was a Miss Susan C. Poole, a native of Murray, Ky.; she is a member in good standing of the Methodist Church. They have been blessed with eleven children, five of whom survive. Their son, subject of this sketch, was given a good literary education, and in 1874 began the study of law, and was admitted to practice a year later. He is at present county examiner, a position he has filled since 1875. In the temperance cause he is devoting his voice and influence for its success.

FULTON COUNTY.

MADISON ADAMS was born March 21, 1812, in Henry County, Ky., and is a son of David and Nancy (Shelton) Adams, natives of South Carolina and Tennessee respectively. The paternal grandfather was a native of Ireland, and settled in this country prior to the war of Independence. David Adams was a soldier in the war of 1812, and held the commission of captain in Gen. Jackson's army; he died in August, 1856, at the age of seventy-one years. He was married four times; his first wife's maiden name was Margaret Calhoun, by whom he had two children, both deceased; by his second marriage he had four children, subject being the eldest. Mrs. Adams died in the year 1817; his third wife's maiden name was Nancy Kimberlin. To this last union was born one child, Betsey Ann, deceased. Madison Adams was reared on a farm, and at the age of twenty-two purchased a tract of land in Henry County, Ky., on which he resided for a period of four or five years. He came to Fulton County, in March, 1841, and settled where he now lives, purchasing 160 acres of land, to which he has added other tracts at different times, until he now owns 320 acres, the greater part of which is in a high state of cultivation. In November, 1835, he was married to Patsey, daughter of Jeremiah and Frances Knight, of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Adams have had eight children: Nancy, wife of Joel Wilson; Frances, wife of John Tyler; William Henry, deceased; Jeremiah, deceased; Madison, Jr., Atchison, Elizabeth, wife of Alonzo Clark, and Alice. Mr. Adams is an active member of the Missionary Baptist Church, of which his wife and the greater part of his family are also members. Madison Adams, Jr., son of the preceding, was born in Fulton County, September 27, 1842, and is one of the active farmers of Hickman Precinct. He has followed various occupations, making farming and stock-raising his principal business, in both of which he has been very successful. In 1874 he served as deputy sheriff under J. F. Tyler, and discharged the duties of his position satisfactorily to his superior and all with whom he transacted business. Upon leaving the office he took charge of the home farm, which he has since managed, looking after the interests of his parents, who are becoming old. Mr. Adams was never married. He votes the Democratic ticket.

J. M. ANDERSON, Fulton County, was born December 5, 1836, in Madison County, Tenn., and is the eldest of eight children of Joshua B. and Martha V. (Sherman) Anderson. The parents were natives of South Carolina and Alabama respectively, and of English and Scotch origin. The father's parents, Jacob and Mary Anderson, moved to Williamson County, Tenn., in 1818. From there the father moved to Madison County, and thence to Haywood County, where he died in 1875, aged seventy-five years. J. M. Anderson, in 1858, began to work at the carpenter's trade, and remained at the bench for three years. In 1861 he enlisted for twelve months in Company A, of the Sixth Tennessse Infantry, under Col. G. C. Porter. Among the battles in which he participated were Murfeesborough, Shiloh and Chickamauga. In May, 1862, he re-enlisted and was detailed as clerk in the quartermaster's department and while serving there he ranked as captain, having first gone out as first lieutenant; he was later promoted to major. In 1865 he was paroled with the rest of Gen. Johnston's army, on its surrender to Gen. Sherman. Returning home he followed the trade of carriage-maker, at Woodville, Tenn., until 1871. He then came to Fulton, where he engaged in the carpentering and undertaking business until 1883. He next began clerking in a dry goods store, and in February, 1884, became a partner in the firm of Browder & Anderson. He was married on December 5, 1868, to Miss Catherine C. Griffith, a daughter of Bennett and Elizabeth (Henry) Griffith. One child, Claudia, was born to this union. Mrs. Anderson died in July, 1874, and Mr. Anderson next married, on January 7, 1881, Miss Samuella Patterson, daughter of the Rev. Samuel G. Patterson. One son, James S., has been the result of this union. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Masonic and K. of H. fraternities and is at present a member of the Fulton Council.

H. C. BAILEY was born July 31, 1824, in Charlotte County, Va., and is a son of John and Lucy (Palmer) Bailey, both natives of Virginia. The father died in 1846, aged sixty-one years; the mother departed this life in 1873, at the good old age of ninety-three years. Subject commenced life for himself as a clerk with the firm of Winbush & Parnell in Brook Neal, Va., where he remained for a period of five years, when he received the appointment of postmaster t the same place, which position he held about two years. He next w nt to Halifax County, Va., where he engaged as clerk in a mercantile house, and two years later emigrated to Tennessee, locating in Fayette County, near Macon, where he commenced farming, which he continued three years. He then moved to the town of Macon, and opened a boarding house for young ladies, which he continued for several years, and then sold out and moved to Graves County, Ky., where he lived for a period of six years, filling the offices of constable and deputy sheriff in the meantime. In the fall of 1856 or 1857, he came to Hickman, and opened a hotel which he kept until 1860. He then engaged in merchandising and eight years later closed out his city business and purchased his present farm of 160 acres, four miles southeast of Hickman. Mr. Bailey was elected county judge in 1878, serving one term; was appointed commissioner in 1880, and served in that capacity one year. He was married February 13, 1845, to Miss Bettie, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Palmer) Bailey, of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have never had any children, but during the first thirty years have reared several orphans, giving them the advantages of a good education and a substantial start in the world. Mr. Bailey is a member of the Masonic fraternity and I. O. O. F. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has filled the office of steward for a period of thirty years. His wife is also an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

J. D. BAKER, Fulton County, is the sixth in a family of twelve children born to James M. and H. W. (Gillespie) Baker, both natives of Virginia. The father of subject was born April 25, 1796, and is still living in Tennessee. The mother died December 13, 1882, aged seventy-five years. Subject was born at Halifax Court House, Va., December 13, 1835, and remained with his parents until twenty-four years of age. May 13, 1861, he enlisted in the Third Tennessee Volunteers, Confederate Infantry, remaining with that regiment until its reorganization in 1862, and then joined the cavalry command of Gen. N. B. Forrest. He was taken prisoner in 1863, while engaged in a small skirmish near the Tennessee River, and taken to Alton, Ill., where he was kept until June, of the following year, when he made his escape. He found employment at chopping wood near Alton, and soon obtained sufficient money to pay his passage to Hickman, where he was arrested the morning after his arrival. He was soon released, and starting to rejoin his command, which he supposed was stationed near the Tennessee River, was recaptured by a detachment of Federal troops in Obion County, Tenn., and taken to St. Louis. There he fortunately met the man with whom he had chopped the wood after making his first escape. The man vouched for the prisoner being all right, and after satisfying the officer in command that he was not a Confederate soldier, he was allowed to have his liberty. He came back to Hickman, and made another attempt to rejoin his command, but was again arrested by the Federal authorities and taken to Cairo, Ill., from which place he was afterward paroled. After being paroled he returned to Hickman and engaged in farming, which he still carries on, in connection with gardening and the dairy business. Mr. Baker was married, in 1865, to Miss Hettie Carr, whose parents were natives of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are the parents of three children, Ella A., Willie F. and James T. Mrs. Baker is a member of the Baptist Church.

CHARLES H. BALTZER, Fulton County, was born in the city of Dietz, Germany, March 26, 1838. His father, G. P. Baltzer, was a man of considerable note, being a graduate of the Polytechnic Institute of Munich; he acquired a reputation as a skillful architect, erecting many fine public buildings, noted among which are the St. Peter's Church, of his native city, the palace of the baron of Hohenstetten, the government bridge near Limburg, the key-stone of the central arch of which bears the initials of his name, the government canals and locks at Baldwinstein and Nievern, the noted building at Ems, known as the Cursaal, in the elaborate main hall of which the famous Paganini entertained the assembled crown heads of Europe, and in the rear of which building, took place the historical interview between Bismarck and Louis Napoleon's minister, Benedetti, in 1870, immediately after which Napoleon declared war against Germany. G. P. Baltzer died in 1849, after having been a member of the Revolutionary legislature of 1848 and 1849. Subject's mother was Maria (Bauman) Baltzer, also a native of Dietz; she died in 1847. Subject enjoyed excellent educational advantages, was a pupil of Schübler, doctor of philosophy; Kramer, doctor of philosophy; Lieber and Wilhelmi, and at an early age graduated with honors from the college of Dietz. He remained with his parents until after their death; was then taken by his grandfather, Ludwig Bauman, who continued to send him to college, after which he was sent to John Schaefer, an uncle and attorney at law, to commence the study of law under him, which study he abandoned on his departure for the United States, in 1857. He went to Milwaukee, Wis., determined to make an honest living, and learned the carriage business; worked two years, then went to St. Louis, worked at his trade there a short time; went to Hickman in 1859, and effected a co-partnership with Hertweck Bros., engaging in the manufacture of wagons under the firm of Hertweck, Baltzer & Co. This firm has one of the largest wagon factories in the Southwest, employing from seventy-five to 100 men, and turns out a large number of wagons annually, which wagons are very favorably known in every southern State, by the name of "Hickman Wagon." Mr. Baltzer was married, in 1863, to Miss E. C. Stubbs, a native of Fulton County. To this union were born seven children, whose names are as follows: Mollie, William, Louis, Anna, Charles, Dora and Edward. Mr. Baltzer was next married, in 1880, to Miss Belle Stubbs, sister of his first wife, by whom he has one child, Herman. In politics Mr. Baltzer is an independent Democrat; he is a Mason, was elected and presided as Master over Fulton Lodge, No. 120, and belongs to the German Evangelical Church.

WILLIAM HENDERSON BEASLEY, Fulton County, was born September, 1829, in Williamson County, Tenn., where he lived until he was fourteen years of age. His mother died when he was but seven years old, and his father when he was eleven, leaving him without a home. He was the third of six children born to Zachariah and Nancy (Adams) Beasley. He lived with his grandparents until he was fourteen years old, when he went to Davidson County, Tenn., where he lived one year; thence to Williamson County; thence to Marshall County, Miss., one year; thence back to Williamson County, Tenn.; thence to Hickman County, Tenn., where he lived some time, then back to Williamson County, finally locating, in 1868, in Fulton County, Ky., where he now lives, one-half mile west of Fulton, and where he owns 260 acres of land in good condition, and well improved. He started in life without a dollar, and by industry has established a fine home. Mr. Beasley was married to Melvina C. Wade of Williamson County, Tenn.; she is the daughter of Maston and Mary H. (Smith) Wade. To Mr. and Mrs. Beasley seven children were born: E. H., Eudora (deceased), Saphrona, now Pewitt; John M. (deceased), Louanna F., G. Hardee and J. Girada. Mr. Beasley, wife and two daughters are members of the Christian Church; his grandparents were natives of North Carolina, his parents natives of Tennessee; his wife's people were natives of Tennessee.

JOHN BARNES was born October 24, 1819, in Henry County, Ky. He is a son of Samuel Barnes, whose father, Samuel Barnes, Sr., emigrated from Virginia shortly after the Revolutionary war, and settled in Kentucky, where he died in 1844, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. Samuel Barnes, Jr., was a farmer and died in Henry County, Ky., in 1880, at the age of eighty-six years; his wife, Sallie (Adams) Barnes, was a daughter of David Adams, of Ireland. She died about the year 1834, aged thirty-six years. Subject is the second child and eldest son of a family of eight children. He stayed with his father until twenty-three years of age, and in 1842 came to Fulton County, Ky., which has since been his home. For the first ten years after his arrival he lived with the family of Mr. Adams, but in the meantime purchased a tract of 160 acres of land, lying about five miles south of Hickman, on which he opened a good farm. He has added to the place from time to time until he is now the possessor of 440 acres of as good land as there is in Fulton County. He was married March 6, 1870, to Sallie, daughter of Samuel and Martha (Growder) Chandler, of Tennessee. Several children were born to this union, but all of them died in infancy.

ROBERT H. BINFORD was born in the village of Moscow, Hickman Co,, Ky., April 9, 1836; was brought by his mother, in 1838, to Fulton County, where he still retains his residence. His father, Robert Binford, was born near Richmond, Va., removed to Kentucky in 1827 and died in 1838. He was the son of Thomas S. Binford of Virginia. Subject's mother, Mary A., daughter of Gideon Jarratt, of Rutherford County, Tenn., died in 1879, at the age of seventy-five years. To her and husband were born Gideon J., Mary R. (Walgamott), subject and Pinkney S. G. February 3, 1858, subject married Miss Sarah P., daughter of Lunsford and Frances (Bird) White of Fulton County, and to them have been born Pinkney L., Gertrude (Robinson), Harriet T., Alonzo, Atlanta (deceased), Virginia B. and a twin brother, Walter (deceased), Lucian R., Charles W., Pompey, Mary I. and Earle. Subject is a farmer and extensive live stock trader, having 184 acres of valuable and productive land well improved. He is an Ancient Odd Fellow and a Democrat.

JOHN W. BLYTHE was born May 1, 1845, near Paris, Tenn., and was the eldest child of William J. and Sarah P. (Howard) Blythe. The father was a native of North Carolina, and was of Scotch descent; the mother of Stewart County, Tenn., and of Irish descent. The father came to Henry County about 1823. Subject received a fair education at the academy at Paris, Tenn., He taught one term in Johnson County, Ill. November 23, 1861, he enlisted in Capt. J. N. Stockton's company, which was afterward consolidated with the Sixth Tenessee Cavalry Regiment. He participated in numerous skirmishes and battles, among which might be mentioned Corinth, Miss. He was in the service one year, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability. In 1864 he commenced clerking in a store in Paducah, where he remained one year. In 1865 he went to Decatursville, Tenn., where he embarked with the firm of Bondurant & Blythe, in the dry goods business. In 1866 he purchased his partner's interest and moved the store to Locust Grove, Calloway County. In the fall of 1869, he went to Lone Elm, Tenn., where he formed a partnership with a Mr. Howard. This firm continued in business until the spring of 1871. In the fall of the same year he came to Fulton and embarked in business there, first with a partner and subsequently alone. October, 1883, he took M. L. Farmer in as a partner, and the firm are now doing business under the name of Blythe & Farmer. He has also been engaged in the cotton and tobacco business. Mr. Blythe was married in November, 1866, to Miss Emma A. Wadlington, a native of Trigg County, Ky., and a daughter of Wayne and Mary A. (Carloss) Wadlington. This lady died July 3, 1880, and Mr. Blythe was next married to Miss Sarah E. Wadlington, a sister of his former wife. One child, Emmet A., is the result of this union. Mrs. Blythe is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr. Blythe is a member of the K. of H. and Masonic fraternities. He has served as trustee of the town of Fulton.

JOHN S. BONDURANT, Fulton County, was born April 9, 1825, in Weakley County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood, and in 1847 removed to Fulton County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Robert M. Bondurant, a native of Shelby County, Ky., was born in 1798, removed to Tennessee in 1824, and died in 1859. He was the son of Benjamin, of Buckingham County, Va., who died in 1845. Robert M.'s father, John, was born in France. Robert M. married Nancy, daughter of John Shepherd, of Shelby County. She was born in 1801, and is still living. From this union sprang William W., subject, Susan J. (Cook), Benjamin H., Sarah P. (Mays), Wiley B., Thomas C. and Andy R. Subject was married October 21, 1847, to Miss Julia D., daughter of Alfred and Nancy (Davis) Edmiston, of Fulton County, Ky., (born February 6, 1828), and to them have been born Francis L. (deceased), Alpheus A., Robert A., Julia A. (deceased), Martha C., (Naylor) deceased, Nancy E. (McClanahan), John C., Kate E., Susan A. and Bailis C. Subject is a farmer, owing 148 acres of good land, well cultivated. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Baptist and a Democrat.

PROF. L. M. BOYLE, Fulton County, was born in Stewartsville, Posey Co., Ind., April 22, 1841. His father, L. H. Boyle, was born in Kentucky, and is still living at Boyle's Station, Ind., where he follows farming. The mother, Augusta (Uhink) Boyle, is a native of Bremen, Germany, and is also living. Subject, at the age of sixteen, entered the Owensville High School, where he enjoyed the benefit of a thorough elementary training. Afterward he attended the military school established by Gov. Morton, at Indianapolis, and still later entered the Union Christian College, at Merom, Ind., where he remained two years, taking the scientific course. He commenced teaching at the age of seventeen, reading law in the meantime under the instruction of Judge Pitcher, of Mt. Vernon, Ind. At the age of twenty-two he entered the law department of the Indiana State University, at Bloomington, and in April, 1864, was admitted to the bar in the State of Illinois. He first began practicing at Harrisburg, Ill., in partnership with C. K. Davis, with whom he remained seven years, at the end of which time he came to Hickman, which is his present place of residence. He was admitted to practice in the courts of Fulton County, but has spent the greater part of his time in teaching and farming. Mr. Boyle was married, in 1864, to Miss Lydia A. Wheeler, of New Baltimore, Ind. To this marriage have been born seven children: Minnie U., Charles W. (deceased), Robert C. (deceased), L. M., George I., John H. and Birdie V.

ARCHIBALD E. BREVARD, a native of Smith County, Tenn., was born July 20, 1836, and in 1849 was brought by his parents to Fulton County, Ky., where he has generally retained his residence to the present time. His father, Cyrus N. Brevard, was born in Lincoln County, N. C., in 1808, immigrated to Tennessee in childhood, and died in 1866. He was the son of John, a Revolutionary soldier of North Carolina. The family were Huguenots, and settled at Baltimore. Subject's mother, Polyxena, daughter of Archy Miles, of Sumner County, Tenn., died in 1842, at the age of thirty-six years. To Cyrus N. and her were born Nancy M. (Johnston), Minerva J. (McConnell), John A. (deceased), Caledonia C. (Miles), subject, and Mary E. (deceased). By his second wife were born Sarah W. (Piles) and Clarissa L. Subject received a good education. He was married, October 25, 1866, to Miss Susan L. McConnell, of Fulton County. She was born in 1846 and died in 1881. He was next married, November 4, 1883, to Miss Henry A., daughter of Thomas and Charlotte (Applegate) Prather, of Fulton County, Ky. Mr. Brevard is engaged in farming and general trading, having 175 acres of good land. He is connected with the Masonic fraternity, the I. O. O. F. and the K. of H. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics a Democrat. He served through the late war.

DAVID BROWDER, the oldest living settler in Fulton County, was born June 6, 1806, in Hopkins County, Ky., and is the youngest of eleven children born to Isham and Rachel (Slaton) Browder, natives of Virginia. Subject's father was one of the first settlers of Hopkins County. David was reared on the farm, and came to the Purchase with an elder brother in 1825, and each entered 160 acres of land four miles west of Fulton. They hauled all their produce to Hickman, on the Mississippi River. They had to protect all they raised from thieves and wild animals. David had added to his property until he was owner of 600 or 700 acres of land. He lost seven slaves and some money during the war. Mr. Browder was married, September 3, 1821, to Mary Smith, of Hopkins County, Ky., daughter of Elias and Margaret (Vaught) Smith, natives of Kentucky. To this union were born eleven children, viz.: James A., deceased; Ellen M., now Nichol; Elizabeth M., deceased, married a Mr. Wade; Albert D., deceased; T. M.; R. A.; E. E.; Rachel A., now Hamilton, living in Texas; Sarah K., now Luton. Two children died in infancy, James and John U. Mr. Browder was a Granger. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as was also his wife, who died June 25, 1883. She was born in December, 1806. Mr. Browder had three brothers in the war of 1812. They were in the battle of Tippecanoe, Ind. He had two sons in the Confederate Army during the late war. He cast his first vote for Gen. Jackson, and has voted at every presidential election since. He endured some of the privations of pioneer life after his coming to Fulton County.

R. A. BROWDER was born August 10, 1840, four miles west of Fulton. He is the eighth of eleven children born to David and Mary (Smith) Browder, whose sketch appears above. R. A. was reared on a farm, received a common school education, and lived with his parents until he enlisted, September 16, 1861, in Company A, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, under Capt. J. G. Purtle, Charles Wickliffe colonel commanding. He participated in the following battles: Shiloh, first bombardment of Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, bombardment of Port Hudson, Corinth, Champion Hills, siege of Jackson (Miss.), Paducah (Ky.), Brice's Cross Roads, Athens (Ala.), Sulphur Trestle and Pulaski, Tenn. He was wounded three times at Shiloh, in the left hand, right hip and left side; was slightly wounded in the left wrist at Corinth. He was first under Polk and Cheatham; after the battle of Shiloh he was transferred to Breckinridge; then under Joseph Johnston, and lastly under Buford and Forrest; he enlisted as a private and was promoted until he reached the rank of third lieutenant. He was paroled at Columbus, Miss., May, 1865, returned home to Fulton County, and engaged in farming until September, 1875, when he took charge of a Grange store for two years as agent in Fulton. He next went into the tobacco, farming implement and machinery business, in which he is still engaged. He established the first permanent planing-mill in Fulton, in 1883. Mr. Browder owns a large agricultural store, also has an interest in a furniture store. He started in life with eighty acres of land given him by his father; he is one of the most industrious and energetic men in Fulton. He was married October 29, 1872, to Miss Philomela Patterson, a native of Indian Territory, reared in southwest Missouri and daughter of Dr. S. G. and Sarah A. (McDowell) Patterson, natives of New Hampshire and Missouri, respectively of Scotch-Irish and Irish origin. To Mr. and Mrs. Browder were born three children, viz.: Willie McDowell (deceased), Bessie (born March, 1881), and Robert Samuel (born March 5, 1884). Mr. Browder and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was formerly a member of the Grange and K. of G. C.

JAMES M. BROWDER was born May 22, 1835, in Fulton County, Ky., where he still retains his residence. His father, Augustin Browder, a native of Hopkins County, Ky., settled in this part of the Purchase about 1825, where he died in 1873. He was the son of Isham Browder, a Virginian. Augustin married Arena, daughter of Beckley Jackson, of Hopkins County, who is now living, aged seventy-five years. Their children are Thomas (deceased), Martha A. (Kirbey), subject, John, Isham, William (killed in battle), Andrew J. (killed in battle), Lewis T., Pleasant H. and George L. Subject was married October 28, 1858, to Miss Ellen D., daughter of Tomisher and Caroline (McClure) Bowers, of Weakley County, Tenn., and to them have been born, Thomas A. (died March 7, 1885), Alfred B., Laura A. (Bard), Robert C., Ada A. and Nellie K. Mr. Browder is a successful farmer, owning 240 acres of land, well improved; his brick residence is a model of neatness and substantial comfort.

THE BROWN FAMILY. James Brown removed from Virginia to Kentucky, and was a surveyor in the State in an early day; he was a minister of the Gospel of the Presbyterian faith. He married Margaret Hopkins, and to them were born nine children, viz.: William, John, James, Archibald, Mary, Elizabeth, Daniel, Robert and Harvey.

ARCHIBALD BROWN, the progenitor of this (the Fulton County) branch of the family, was born in Mercer County, Ky., December 7, 1791, and died May 2, 1870. He was married April 15, 1813, to Mary Culton, who bore him three children: William C., born July 26, 1814; Margaret A., born January 27, 1816; John R., born October 24, 1817. His wife died, and August 26, 1826, he married Sarah M. Culton. This union was blessed with six children, as follows: James N., born June 12, 1827; Thomas D., born October 5, 1828; Elizabeth E., born May 18, 1830; Archibald H., born February 15, 1832; Benjamin F., born April 26, 1836; Daniel H., born August 17, 1837, and died of wounds received at the battle of Paducah, April 3, 1864.

THOMAS D. BROWN, son of Archibald and Sarah M. (Culton) Brown, was born in Mercer County, Ky., and was brought by his parents to this county in 1829, where he grew to manhood and where he still resides. He was married May 27, 1859, to Margaret D., daughter of James and Nancy (Culton) Brown, of Fulton County. To them have been born Martha A., in 1859, and married February 7, 1883, to P. H. Browder; Elizabeth E., born in 1861; Daniel H., born in 1864; Sarah N., born in 1866; Robert B., born in 1869; James A., born in 1872; John W., born in 1874.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Fulton County, was born in Graves County, Ky., August 3, 1821, and was brought by his parents to Hickman (now Fulton) County, in 1824, where he has continued his residence to the present time. His father, Squire Duncan Campbell, one of the early magistrates of the county, was born in North Carolina; was with Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, and died in 1853. Duncan married Penelope, daughter of James Cook, of Caldwell County, Ky., and as the result of this union were born James, Mary (Walls), William, Charles, Andrew, Alfred and Alen (twins), Henry and Sylvester. To him by his second wife were born Sarah, Joseph, Matilda and Caroline. December 17, 1856, subject was married to Miss Narticia F., daughter of John B. and Nancy (Higgs) Dent, of Weakley County, Tenn., and to them have been born John W., Frances B. (Chapell), James A., Nancy E., Robert L. and Adelia. Mr. Campbell is a farmer, owning 238 acres of good land, well improved. He is a Freemason and a Democrat.

WILLIAM T. CARR was born March 26, 1850, in Fulton, where he now lives. He is the only son of Benjamin F. and M. J. (House) Carr, natives of Tennessee. Mr. Carr received a good common school education, and attended the Kentucky University one year, and Mayfield school some time. He was married in May, 1873, to Miss Kate Ligon, of Obion County, Tenn., daughter of Harry and Sarah (Hustis) Ligon. Her father was born in Virginia, and her mother in New England. To this union were born five children: Frank (deceased), Herbert, Anna, B. Frank and Mary. Mr. and Mrs. Carr are members of the Christian Church. Mr. Carr is a member of the K. of H. He has always lived where Fulton now stands. He used to farm where the lower part of the village now lies, which was all owned by his father. Mr. Carr is the possessor of 250 acres of land immediately west of Fulton, he has also a large number of town lots, two business rooms, and a portion of Kirksey Hotel. He has given liberally for public improvements, and has been alderman of the town of Fulton two terms. He cast his first presidential vote for Horace Greeley. Benjamin Carr, subject's grandfather, was born September 30, 1768, and removed in 1828, from Rutherford County, Tenn., with his family of four sons and two daughters, viz.: Abner, Turner, John, B. F., Patience and Caroline E., and settled on the present site of Fulton. B. F. Carr, father of our subject, was born September 15, 1818, and died January 19, 1870; his wife, Mary J. House, of Henry County, Tenn., whom he married December 21, 1848, died December 21, 1869, aged nearly forty-four years.

E. CASE, Fulton County, is a native of Spencer County, Ind., and was born January 5, 1821. His parents, Joshua and Ann (Green) Case, were both natives of Chenango County, N. Y., and among the early settlers of southern Indiana. The father was a farmer, and died when subject was in his infancy. Immediately after her husband's death Mrs. Case came to Kentucky, settling in Daviess County, where she died in January, 1830, at the age of thirty years. An orphan at the age of nine years, our subject was apprenticed to a tailor in Owensboro, Ky. He remained an apprentice until eighteen years of age, when on account of ill treatment he revolted, and for three years traveled over various parts of Indiana, Alabama, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee and Kentucky, working at his trade. In June, 1842, he came to Hickman, then known as Mills' Point, and opened a tailor shop in the place, and for thirty years thereafter carried on a very successful trade, amassing a handsome fortune in the meantime. In connection with his trade he also ran a general mercantile house for a number of years, and ever since 1842 has been prominently identified with the business interests of his adopted city, being the oldest male resident at the present time. He served as postmaster for a period of eighteen or twenty years, retiring from the office in 1883. He was married in October, 1848, to Mrs. Sarah Ann Holt, of Smith County, Tenn., by whom he had three children, all deceased. Mr. Case is prominently connected with the I. O. O. F., being one of the oldest members of the society in western Kentucky. He is also an active temperance man, and a deacon in the Baptist Church, a position he has honorably filled for many years. In politics he votes with the Republican party.

ELDER SILAS FLEMING CAYCE, M. D., was born October 15, 1850, in Fulton County, Ky., and was reared in Fulton and Hickman Counties. His father, James H. Cayce, was born in Graves County, Ky., in 1830, removed with his parents about 1845 to Columbus, engaged in the business of general merchant and trader at Cayce, Clinton, Moscow and Columbus, and died in 1881. He was the son of Elder Fleming Cayce, who died in 1848, aged about sixty years. Fleming was a pioneer of West Kentucky, a prominent minister and leader in the primitive Baptist Church in southwestern Kentucky and Tennessee. James H. was thrice married—first to Sarah E., daughter of John and Martha (Johns) Little, of Fulton County, and to them were born subject and John H. By his second marriage were born Ida C. (Bowers), Ben Hardie (a noted telegrapher, who died of yellow fever at his post at Holly Springs), Walter E., Cynthia (Vaughn), and Maud. By his third marriage Augustus M. and William E. In youth subject procured a good English education and has continued to improve by extensive reading. He was married January 11, 1870, to Miss Flora M., daughter of Elisha and Almeda (Penny) Beazley, of Hickman County, Ky., and to them have been born Claudius H., Eliza A., Hardie B. (deceased), Kittie E. (deceased), Lettie (deceased), and Osman F. Dr. Cayce was licensed to preach (1873) in the Primitive Baptist Church, and ordained to the full work of the ministry in 1878, at Rock Springs Church, Bethel Association, and now has pastoral care over the congregations at Mud Creek and Union City, Tenn. He commenced the study of medicine in 1869, and while a student was for four years engaged in the drug business. In 1874–75 he attended lectures at Nashville and practiced at this place two years, two years in Hickman County, two years in Graves County, and in 1881 returned to Crutchfield, where he now enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice. His situation is a pleasant one.

A. D. COLLINS, Fulton County, was born July 29, 1834, in Graves County, Ky., and is the eldest of three sons born to Jeremiah and Wanda (Dupree) Collins, natives of Murray and Williamson Counties, Tenn., and of English descent. The father died in 1840. A. D. remained at home with his mother until he become of age, meantime receiving a common school education. In 1850 he began clerking in a dry goods house in Feliciana. There he remained about four years, and then returned home, where he remained about two years. In 1858 he embarked in the dry goods business at Cedar Hill with J. H. Wooldridge. At the breaking out of the war he came to Fulton and clerked for William Wooldridge, who was running the first store in the town. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, of the Seventh Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, Confederate States Army; he was elected second lieutenant. At the battle of Shiloh he was wounded in the left leg, which disabled him from any further service, and he was discharged. He returned home, and as soon as he was able turned his attention to farming. This he followed until the close of the war. In 1867, in connection with his brother, he started a general store at Fulton, under the firm name of A. D. & V. A. Collins. They remained in business some five years, when V. A. retired, and A. D. continued for himself until 1880. He then sold out and commenced in the grocery business under the firm name of Beard & Collins. Two years later the firm was changed to Moore & Collins. This firm is still doing business in Fulton. Subject has served several terms as village trustee. Mr. Collins was married in December, 1871, to Miss Ella Shelton, of Paducah, a daughter of L. D. Shelton, and a native of Virginia. Four children bless this union, viz.: Hettie F., Alfonzo D., Jeremiah and Lillian C. Mrs. Collins is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Collins is a member of the K. of H. fraternity.

JAMES ALFONZO COLLINS, Fulton County, was born November 12, 1836, in Graves County, Ky., and is a son of Jeremiah and Amanda M. (Dupree) Collins, of middle Tennessee. Both the paternal and maternal grandparents came to the Purchase about 1830, and settled near Feliciana, Graves Co., where both families entered land. The parents were married in 1830, and settled on a farm three miles south of Wingo, where the father died in October, 1842, aged thirty-four years. The mother is still living, aged seventy-three years. James A. remained on the farm until he was sixteen years of age, and then began clerking for W. F. Woolridge, at Feliciana, with whom he remained about two years; then was with Thomas J. Taylor about two years; then with G. L. McFall about two years, when he went into business with S. W. Welch. This firm continued in business until the breaking out of the war. Mr. Collins enlisted in September, 1861, in Company A, of the Seventh Kentucky Regiment, Confederate States Army, under Col. Charles Wickliffe, going out as first lieutenant. He was wounded at the battle of Shiloh and was disabled from service for about three months. He re-entered the service and was with Gen. Breckinridge in the Louisiana campaign. He resigned in August, 1862, and returned home to Kentucky. He subsequently raised a company, of which he was elected captain. The company was first independent but was afterward consolidated with Gen. Forrest's command. The main operations of the troops were in western Kentucky, and Tennessee and northern Mississippi. He surrendered at Memphis in 1865, was paroled and returned home. He first engaged in farming and trading at Trenton, Tenn., one year, and then returned to Graves County; after remaining there a short time he moved to Dukedom, Tenn., where he acted as salesman for one year. In February, 1867, he moved to Fulton, Fulton Co., Ky., where he and his brother, Alonzo D. Collins, bought the first lot ever deeded in Fulton, and upon it built a store-room 20x40 feet. Here the brothers conduct a general store. The first street opened in the town ran past his store, and this he named Lake Street. After five years in this business he sold out, and next engaged in the cotton business in the fall of 1872, with Jesse Whitesell, a wealthy farmer and trader. He built the first cotton gin in the place, upon the ground now occupied by the Fulton Bank. He continued his cotton operations until the fall of 1874, when he re-entered mercantile life, and is still engaged in it. He also established the first tannery in Fulton in 1875, in connection with W. P. Taylor, and they also opened a saddle, harness, boot and shoe factory combined. In about six years this business was abandoned. He also has a farm, about one mile east of Fulton, well stocked with Jersey and fancy cattle, fowls, etc., and a large assortment of small and large fruits in great variety, and owns three store-rooms in the village and about nine residences. Starting with about $300, which he received from his father's estate when he became of age, he has made life a success. He was married September 1, 1859, in Graves County, to Miss Jennie Taylor, of Dukedom, Graves Co., Ky., and a daughter of William and Rebecca (Roberts) Taylor, natives of Logan County, and Chesterfield County, Va. Mrs. Collins is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Collins is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

N. COMBS, one of the oldest living settlers of Fulton County, came to this part of the Purchase in 1835, and settled on the State line, about five miles south of Hickman, where he purchased a tract of land and opened a farm. He was born February 16, 1805, in Murray County, Tenn., and is the son of William and Nancy (Cahill) Combs, both early pioneers of Murray County. The grandfather of our subject was William Combs, a native of Virginia, where he died many years ago. The father of our subject emigrated to Tennessee the same year subject was born; he was a farmer and overseer; the date of his death was not ascertained; the mother died about the year 1849 or 1850. Our subject commenced life for himself at the early age of fifteen years, finding employment at various vocations until the time of his arrival in this county, as mentioned above. He purchased his present farm of 150 acres at the close of the war, and has one of the best homesteads in the southern part of Fulton. On the place is one of the largest and best mineral springs in western Kentucky, and one which is destined, at no distant day, to become a favorite summer resort. Mr. Combs was married in 1837 to Catherine Rogers, of Tennessee. They have one child, Louisa, wife of John H. Liggett.

J. W. CORMAN was born January 17, 1839, in the city of Carlisle, Penn., and is a son of George and Mary (Stouffer) Corman, both natives of the same State. Subject's paternal grandfather was Jacob Corman, whose ancestors came from Germany in an early day; he died about the year 1857. Solomon Stouffer, maternal grandfather, was of German descent also, and died many years ago at an advanced age. The father of our subject followed the occupation of farming and died in 1863, aged fifty years; the mother died in 1840, at the age of forty-six or forty-seven years. Subject started in life for himself at an early age, leaving home when but fourteen years old, and going to Macomb City, Ill., where he was apprenticed to the tinner's trade. He remained at Macomb for four years, and then went to Blandville, Calloway Co., Ky., where he started in business by opening a stove and tin store. He continued this business until July 4, 1861, at which time he disposed of his store and entered the Confederate Army, enlisting in the third Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, under command of Col. A. P. Thompson. He served during the war in the Western campaign under Gens. Bragg and Johnston, and part of the time was with the cavalry force of Gen. N. B. Forrest. Mr. Corman participated in the hard-fought battles of Shiloh, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, Port Hudson, Corinth, Harrisburg, Guntown, Murfreesborough, and a number of minor engagements. He was shot in the breast at the battle of Shiloh, and obliged to leave his command for some weeks; he was again wounded at Sulphur Springs, Tenn., receiving a shot in the thigh, which necessitated an absence from his company two months. At the close of the war he came to Hickman and worked at his trade for a period of six years, at the end of which time he went into the hardware, stove and tinnery business with B. D. Thomason. They have one of the largest stocks of hardware in the city, representing a capital of $7,000. Mr. Corman was married in December, 1867, to Mary E., daughter of George and Elizabeth Thomason. To this union have been born two children—Benjamin F. and Alexander D. Mr. Corman is a member of the K. of H. and I. O.O.F. Mrs. Corman is a member of the Baptist Church.

J. W. COWGILL, Fulton County, son of Rev. N. N. and Mary F. (Miller) Cowgill, was born May 19, 1843, in Jefferson County, Ky. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, and came to Fulton County in 1843. He was rector of St. Paul's Church (Episcopal), Hickman, from the date of his arrival in the county until 1876, at which time his death occurred, at the age of sixty-five years. His mother was born in Jefferson County, Ky., and died in November, 1882, at the age of sixty-five years. He enjoyed good educational advantages in his youth, and at the age of seventeen, entered Shelby College at Shelbyville, in which institution he remained two years. In 1863 he entered the University of Missouri, at Columbia, from which he graduated two years later. After graduating he was retained as tutor in the University, filling the chair of Latin and mathematics for a period of one year, reading law in the meantime. He was admitted to the bar in 1866, and commenced the active practice of his profession in Hickman, continuing until 1873, at which time he abandoned the profession, and engaged in the drug business, his present vocation. He was elected city judge in 1873, and has also filled the office of county school commissioner. He was married in June, 1866, to Miss Mary H. Duffield, daughter of Saunders B. and Mary E. (Litchfield) Duffield of New Orleans. Mr. and Mrs. Cowgill are the parents of two children—Henry N. and Alice F. Mr. Cowgill is a member of the Masonic fraternity and also of the K. of H., in which order he holds the office of Grand Vice Assistant Dictator of the State. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, as is also his wife.

A. M. DEBOW was born June 29, 1844, in Sumner County, Tenn., and is a son of Dr. A. M. and N. G. DeBow, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of Louisiana. The mother's maiden name was Brevard and she came of an old French family, her ancestors having come to America in a very early day. They were the parents of thirteen children, viz.: Nan M., wife of Dr. G. Burnett; John B., deceased; William A., deceased; R. G.; G. A.; Solomon, deceased; Hannah, deceased; A. M.; subject; A. B.; Laura E., deceased; H. M.; James, deceased; and Eva St. Clair, wife of John Love. Our subject remained with his parents until the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted in the Second Tennessee Confederate Cavalry and served under Gen. N. B. Forrest, in the Western campaign, participating in the battles of Franklin, Brice's Cross Roads, Guntown, Tupelo, Okolona, Shiloh, Nashville; Murfreesborough, and a number of other engagements; he was taken prisoner in 1865, and paroled at Gainesville, Ala., after which he went to Hartsville, Tenn. In 1866 he started West, and on the way stopped in Fulton County, Ky., which he decided to make his future place of residence. He came to Hickman in 1872 and engaged as clerk in the store of Millett & Roulhac, with whom he remained two years, afterward taking service with Henry Buchanan, and still later with W. L. McCutchen. In 1876 he started a grocery store in partnership with R. M. Matheny, with whom he remained a short time; he next opened a general grocery store under the firm name of DeBow & Co., and afterward closed out his interest and engaged as clerk with the Plaut Bros., where he remained about a year. In 1882 he entered the county clerk's office as deputy and served in that capacity for fourteen months, and in 1883, in partnership with J. E. Fuqua, opened a wholesale tobacco and grocery house, with which he is still connected. He was married December 12, 1876, to Ida V., daughter of John and Mary P. (Ivey) Fuqua. This union was blessed with three children, two of whom are still living—Ivey and Archie E. Mr. and Mrs. DeBow are members of the Methodist Church. He is a member of the K. of H., Royal Templars of Temperance, and in politics is a Democrat.

SQUIRE HARVEY C. DONOHO was born December 13, 1831, in Smith County, Tenn., where he reached man's estate, and in 1853 removed to Fulton County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, John Donoho, a native of Sumner County, Tenn., was born in 1804, and died in 1877. He was the son of William Donoho, a soldier in the war of 1812, who died in 1864 at the age of one hundred and four years. John married Martha, daughter of John Rooks, of North Carolina. She was born in 1800, and died in 1869. From this union sprang, Amanda W. (McClellan), Edna (Slaughter), Elizabeth H. (Phillips), Nancy T. (Brooks), Henry P., subject, Drusilla P. (McKinnis), William S. and John C. Subject was married November 25, 1853, to Miss Harriett E., daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Brooks) Huddleston, of Obion County, Tenn. (born in 1835, and died in 1862) and this union resulted in the birth of Charlie W. and William H. He was next married, February 12, 1867, to Miss Hannah C. (born in 1845), daughter of John Bullock, of Barren County, Ky., and to them have been born Annie S., Mary B., Mattie F., Edward W., Alonzo A., Luther A. and Harriet. In 1876 Mr. Donoho was elected magistrate of Lodgeton district, and has, to the general satisfaction of the people, retained the honorable position to the present time. He is a farmer, owning 121 acres of fine land well-improved. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics is a Democrat.

J. R. FAIRLEIGH, Fulton County, was born December 5, 1837, in Kentucky, and is a son of George and Elizabeth (Quinn) Fairleigh, natives of Hardin County, Ky., and Virginia, respectively. The paternal grandparents were natives of Pennsylvania, and were born where the town of Pittsburgh now stands. The maternal grandparents came from Buckingham County, Va., and the great grandfather, Darby Quinn, was a soldier in the Revolution. Subject received a common school education. After his father's death in 1846, he took charge of the home farm, and gave to the remainder of the family a good education. At the breaking out of the war, he and his brother drew lots to see which should enter his country's service. The choice fell upon the brother and our subject consequently remained at home, and conducted the farm. In 1868 he moved to Hardin County, Ky., where he farmed for five years. He then sold out and came to Carleton, Ky., where he built a saw and planing-mill. This he ran until January, 1878, when he went to Louisville, but only remained a short time. He next moved to Elizabethtown, and thence to Nelson County. In both places he turned his attention to farming. In February, 1884, he came to Fulton, Ky., where he has since been running a meat market. Mr. Fairleigh was married November 23, 1862, to Miss Luticia Baker, a daughter of John Q. and Ruth (Alexander) Baker, natives of Owen County, Ky. The result of this union was five children, of whom four are living: Ruth, George, Quinn, and William. Mrs. Fairleigh died in September, 1878, and subject was married in November, 1879, to Miss Eva Stone, of Breckinridge County, Ky., a daughter of Ephraim and Elizabeth (Johnson) Stone. By this union there were two children: Lizzie and John S. Mrs. Fairleigh died while her husband was at Louisville. Mr. Fairleigh is a member of the Baptist Church.

ALEXANDER A. FARIS, M. D., Fulton County, is the third child born to Richard and Ethalinda (Harris) Faris. The parents were natives of South Carolina and North Carolina, respectively; they emigrated to Missouri in 1838, locating in Mississippi County, where subject was born March 1, 1840. The father was a farmer and mechanic, and died in October, 1849, at the age of forty-five years. Subject was reared on a farm, and remained with his mother until 1861, when he entered the Confederate service, enlisting in the Fifth Regiment Tennessee Infantry, with which he served during the greater part of the war. He participated in the hard-fought battles of Belmont, New Madrid, Shiloh, and lost his right arm at the bloody engagement of Perryville, where he was taken prisoner. He was exchanged in December, 1862, and immediately rejoined his command, remaining in active service until the winter of 1863, when, on account of disabilities, he was discharged. Two months after leaving the service, he went back to the army and was employed as courier and mail carrier, in which capacity he served until the close of the war, after which he commenced reading medicine under the tutorship of Drs. H. M. Ward and D. G. Hart, of Jacksonport, Ark., with whom he remained six months, and in 1866, entered the Nashville University, from which he graduated in 1868. He commenced practicing his profession in Hickman in the spring of 1869, and in the fall of the same year entered the Louisiana University at New Orleans, where he remained four months, taking a full course of lectures. In the fall of 1870 he went to New York, and took a course in Bellevue Hospital, and practiced at Bellevue in 1871. In 1876 he took a full course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, Penn.; has practiced in Hickman since 1868, and at the present time is one of the leading physicians and surgeons in the county. He was married May 20, 1871, to Miss Florence, daughter of James and Sallie (Wilson) Goalder, of Springfield, Ky. Dr. and Mrs. Faris are the parents of six children, five of whom are living: Light, May M., Alexander A., Irene, and Even G. The doctor is a member of the K. of H., and politically a Democrat. His wife and family are members of the Episcopal Church.

FLEMING & CHIPMAN. A. H. Fleming was born in Washington County, Va., November 28, 1830, and is one of two children born to George and Elizabeth (Orr) Fleming, natives of Washington County, Va. The grandparents were James Fleming and John Orr. The parents of our subject died when he was quite young. He was reared in Abingdon, Va., until he was about twelve years old, when he went to work on a farm. At the age of eighteen years he went to Henry County, Tenn., with William Orr and served an apprenticeship to the saddler's trade in Paris, Tenn. He engaged at his trade in Conyersville, until 1863, when he went to Mayfield, Ky., where he was engaged as railway agent until 1876. He was engaged in the tobacco business one year, and kept the Southern Hotel at Mayville three years. October, 1880, he went to Hopkinsville, Ky., where he was engaged in the hotel business for about four months. February, 1881, he moved to Fulton, Ky., where he was agent for the Southern Express Company. In the summer of 1881 he went into the hotel business for ten months; thence to Dawson Springs, where he took charge of the Arcadia Hotel; thence to Mayfield and back to Fulton. In June, 1883, he took charge of the Kirksey Hotel, formerly Leet Hotel. In October of the same year, he formed a partnership with Dr. Parker, which lasted six months, when Mr. Fleming's son-in-law purchased Parker's interest. The firm is now Fleming & Chipman. Mr. Fleming was married December 26, 1854, to Caroline P. Browning, of Henry County, Tenn., a daughter of Thomas P. Browning. To this union was born one child, Mary E., now married to R. E. Smith. Mrs. Fleming was a member of the Presbyterian Church. After her death Mr. Fleming was married, on May 29, 1859, to Mrs. Amanda Harris, widow of Samuel Harris; she is a daughter of George and (——— Brown) Walker. This union was blessed with four children: Minnie D., now Chipman; Addie H., deceased; Lulu, deceased; Wilber, deceased. Mr. Fleming and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. William J. Chipman, son-in-law of A. H. Fleming, was born in Bethpage, Sumner Co., Tenn., October 3, 1861. He is the third of three children born to Joseph and Eliza (McGaughey) Chipman, natives of Lexington, Ky., and Abingdon, Va., respectively, of Irish and Scotch descent. William J. was reared on a farm until eighteen years old, when he commenced telegraphy on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. In 1884 he engaged in the hotel business with his father-in-law in Fulton. He received a good common school education, attended Bellwood Academy ten months and Liberty High School ten months. He was married to Miss Minnie D. Fleming, of Graves County, July 26, 1883. She was born in Conyersville, Tenn. They have one child, Laura Ellis. Mrs. Chipman is a member of the Presbyterian Church. In his young days, Mr. Chipman's father was owner and driver of a stage line between Nashville, Tenn., and Scottsville, Ky., for nine years. Later he moved to north Tennessee, where he lost all his stock during the Rebellion. He died November, 1862. After his death, all the fences of the farm of 212 acres were burned. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and had made the raising of blooded horses a specialty. He had moved to Tennessee about the year 1851 or 1852. Mr. Chipman in politics is a Democrat.

T. P. FORTUNE, Fulton County, was born November 5, 1848, in Brownsville, Haywood Co., Tenn., and is the seventh child of a family of ten children born to John B. and Salina V. (Hargrove) Fortune, both natives of Virginia. The members of the family living, besides subject, are as follows: William S.; Mary E., wife of Doctor R. B. Nall; Belle E., and Lenora, wife of James E. Fuqua, of Hickman. John B. Fortune followed the vocation of hotel keeper in Brownsville, Tenn., and died in Mississippi, June 17, 1862, aged sixty-three years; the mother died in 1872 (October) at the age of sixty years. Our subject spent his youth and early manhood under the parental roof, attending the schools of his native town, and commenced life for himself as clerk, which business he followed for several years in Brownsville and Durhamville. In 1873 he came to Hickman and engaged as clerk in a dry goods and grocery house, and three years later went to Grand Chain, Ill., to take charge of a branch drug store started by Dr. H. C. Catlett. With him he effected a partnership. He remained in Illinois about fourteen months, and at the end of that time he disposed of his store and returned to Hickman. He then bought out the drug house of N. B. Cannon & Co., and by diligent attention to business, has succeeded in building up a very flourishing trade, and has one of the most tastefully arranged stores in the city—his stock aggregating about $4,000. He was married December 2, 1875, to May V., daughter of Judge Samuel and Volumnia (Lawson) Landrum. To this marriage have been born three children, whose names are as follows: Samuel Preston, Benjamin Leslie and William Harrold. Mr. Fortune was elected city treasurer in 1879, and re-elected each succeeding year, and is considered one of the most efficient officers ever called to that position. He is a member of the K. of H., and Royal Templars of Temperance, and he and family are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, he holding the offices of steward and trustee in the Hickman congregation. In politics Mr. Fortune is an independent Democrat.

JAMES M. FREEMAN, Fulton County, was born in Weakley County, Tenn., March 6, 1833, and is the second of six children born to Richard R. and Aplona (Morris) Freeman. The parents were natives of North Carolina and were of Irish descent. Both families settled in Weakley County, Tenn., in an early day—the father's parents in 1819, the mother's in 1825. Subject was reared on a farm and lived with his mother until he became of age, his father having died in 1848. Our subject enlisted in September, 1861, in the First Confederate Cavalry (Kentucky), Col. H. C. King. Among the battles in which he participated were Perryville, Murfreesborough, Tuscumbia, Nashville and Selma, Ala. At the last named battle he was captured, but was paroled the following May, at Columbia. Returning home he engaged in farming until 1869, when he opened a saloon at Pierce. After running this two years he sold out and opened a grocery store. In 1873 he came to Fulton, where he has since been engaged in the grocery business. In 1883 he purchased a saw-mill and is now sawing lumber for the railway company. Commencing with almost nothing he has now amassed quite a little property, including a farm near Fulton, one storeroom and five houses and lots. March 6, 1870, he was married to Miss Josephine Brakefield, of Robertson County, Tenn., a daughter of Ephraim and Sarah Brakefield. The parents were natives of Alabama and came to Tennessee in an early day. Five children have blessed this union, viz.: John T., Maggie R., Minnie S., Mary E. and Sallie A. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman are members of the Baptist Church.

T. M. FRENCH, Fulton. County, was born in Russellville, Logan Co, Ky., on November 1, 1838, and is the son of John P. French, a native of Goochland County, Va. The father was a teacher by profession, and died in Russellville in 1841. Our subject's mother was Mary (Binford) French, also a native of Virginia; she died in February, 1882, at the age of seventy-two years. After her husband's death Mrs. French went back to Virginia with subject, who remained until twelve years of age, at which time he came to Fulton County, Ky., making his home with his uncle, who resided near Hickman. Here Mr. French followed farming as a business until 1875, at which time he was elected circuit clerk, a position he has since retained. In 1867 Mr. French was married to Miss Lauderdale, of Fulton County, by whom he had two children, both deceased. He was next married in 1877 to Miss Emma Stephens, of Fulton County; to this union have been born three children: Mabel, Bessie and Thomas Mason. Mr. French is a member of the K. of H., and in politics a liberal Democrat. He and wife are members of the Episcopal Church.

F. N. FREY, Fulton County, was born March 10, 1845, in Wurtemburg, Germany. He is the only son of Frederick and Catherine Frey. The father came to the United States, with his family, in 1851. He settled at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, where he opened a brewery. From there he went to Missouri, where he remained for many years. In 1862, subject moved to Cincinnati, where he engaged in the bakery business. From there he went to Morrow, thence to Fort Wayne, thence to Chicago. He only remained a short time at these points. He next went to Springfield, where he was in government employ for over a year. He next went to Indianapolis, thence to St. Louis, thence to Monroe City, Ill., where his father was then located. He next went to De Soto, Mo., where he remained five years. He next went to Morley, Mo., where he remained eight years. In 1875 he came to Fulton, Ky., where he has since been engaged in the bakery and restaurant business. He was married in October, 1873, in Scott County, Mo., to Mrs. Susan E. Vancel, a daughter of Judge Benjamin and Susan (Davis) Benefield, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Wales. The result of this union was six children, viz.: Catherine, Emma, Lucy and Frederick, living, Rosa and Ada, deceased. Mrs. Frey is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Frey is identified with the Lutheran Church and the I. O. O. F. and K. of H. fraternities. He owns a good brick business block and several residences in the town of Fulton.

A. J. GREIF was born in Paducah, Ky., February 22, 1857. He is the first of nine children—five boys and four girls—born to Nicholas and Margaret (Fitzgerald) Greif, natives respectively of Germany and New York City, the mother of Irish descent. The father landed in New York City with his parents about the year 1833, and came direct to Paducah, Ky., where the grandfather entered and improved lands about eight miles southwest of Paducah, and where he died of cholera about 1839. The father of our subject has been engaged in the livery business in Paducah for many years. A. J. was reared in Paducah and remained with his parents until he was sixteen years old, when he was made agent at Mayfield for the M. P. & N. Railway; eighteen months later, in the fall of 1876, he was made agent for the same road. In January, 1881, he went to Toledo, Ohio, where he was made agent of the T. C. & St. L. Railway. Here he remained until December, 1881, when he went to Mexico as assistant cashier of the Mexican Central Railway. In November, 1882, sickness compelled him to quit the country, when he returned to Fulton, Ky., where he was engaged as bill clerk. He is now agent for the Illinois Central at Fulton. He is an efficient railroad man, and a good telegraph operator. He is financial secretary of the Home Guardian Insurance Company of Cincinnati, Ohio; he was formerly a member of the G.A.R., is a member of the K. of H. He was married to Miss Mary Boaz, of Fulton County, Ky., January 15, 1881. She is a native of Murray County, and a daughter of Dr. C. D. and Susan (Oury) Boaz, natives of Virginia and Tennessee respectively. This union was blessed by the birth of two children, Albert D. and Gretchen. Mr. Greif is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and his wife of the Christian Church.

J. F. HALL was born May 6, 1860, in Dyer County, Tenn., and is the second of two children born to W. K. and M. A. (Winn) Hall, natives of Virginia. The father died in 1877; he was postmaster at Columbus from 1867. He was in the commission business during the war, and previous to his becoming postmaster he was in the drug business. J. F. resided in Columbus, Ky., where he received a fair common school education, and then attended school at St. Louis for two years. Returning to Columbus he engaged in the book and stationery business for two years. In 1876 he was appointed to the railway mail service, which business he followed until December, 1883. He was then appointed postmaster at Fulton, and is still holding the office. His mother is at present living with him, but spends her winters in Florida.

SQUIRE NATHAN HAMMOND was born in Graves County, Ky., January 29, 1834; removed with his parents in 1836 to Fulton County, where he remained until 1856, when he emigrated to Izard County, Ark., and after four years' residence there entered the army, in which he continued to the close of the war. In 1866 he settled on the place where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky. His father, James Hammond, was born near Lexington, Ky., and died in 1882, aged seventy-four years. James married Nancy Polsgrove, who died in 1861. Their offspring are William H., subject, Elizabeth (Baker), Sarah A. (Grimmett), John S., Martha M. (McGlasson), Susan E. (Tucker), and Thomas F. Subject was married March 2, 1854, to Miss Theresa S., daughter of Admaral and Margaret (Underwood) Blackman, of Hickman County (died in 1860, aged twenty-one years), and as the result of this union James A. (deceased), and Thomas H. were born. October 17, 1866, subject was married to Miss Harriet Blackman, sister to his first wife, and to them have been born John W., Ada J. (deceased), Ida B., Charles N., Tira and Otha F. Squire Hammond served the community where he resides eleven years as magistrate and member of the county court. He is a farmer, owning 142 acres of fine land, which he is successfully cultivating. He is a Baptist in religion, a member of the Masonic fraternity; also of the K. of H., and in politics is a Democrat.

CORNELIUS F. HANBERY was born on the place where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky., June 4, 1837. His father, Cornelius W. Hanbery, a native of Norfolk County, Va., was born in 1800; removed to Christian County, Ky., in 1811, and to Fulton County in 1826, where he died in 1872. He was the son of Job Hanbery, of Virginia, who died in 1810. Cornelius W. married Martha, daughter of Charles Hodges, of Virginia. She was born in 1800, and has been living on this place since 1826. To her and husband were born Job, Margaret R., Martha E. (Cloyes), Thomas P. and our subject. In youth subject received a good English education, and engaged in teaching for some time. He has never married, and is living with his mother and sisters on the old family homestead. He is a farmer, owning 300 acres of valuable land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Methodist and a Democrat.

THOMAS D. HAYS was born June 8, 1854, in Weakley County, Tenn. He is the second of the six children now living born to John P. and Elizabeth C. (Vincent) Hays, natives of Weakley and Wilson Counties, Tenn., of Scotch-Irish origin. The grandparents on the mother's side were Orren and Pollie (Ezell) Vincent, natives of North Carolina. Those on the father's side were William and Jennie (Adams) Hays, natives of North Carolina. The grandfather Vincent was a soldier in the war of 1812; the grandfather Hays was a soldier in the Mexican war. John P. Hays was a wagon-maker and farmer; he was one of the first to enlist in the Confederate States Army, under Gen. Buford. Thomas D. was reared on a farm; he received a good English education, and after he was eighteen years of age, attended McKenzie College, Tenn. Three years after, he engaged as a salesman for Martin, of Martin, Tenn., where he remained two years. In November, 1877, he moved to Fulton County and clerked for Patterson & McDowell one year; thence he moved to Hickman, Ky., and clerked in Buchanan's dry goods store one year; thence to Texarkana, where he clerked for J. H. Draughon until May, 1881. He next engaged in the saw-mill business, near Texarkana, for one year. He then went to Dallas, Texas, where he was engaged as general agent for insurance. November, 1882, he returned to Fulton, Ky., and engaged as salesman with S. G. Patterson & Co., in the dry goods business. May 8, 1883, he purchased a half interest in a grocery, hardware and queensware business, with M. L. Carter, in which he is still engaged. He has met with good success in his enterprises. Mr. Hays is a member of the K. of H., A. O. U. W. and K. of P. fraternities.

JAMES A. HERRING was born March 23, 1844, in Fulton County, Ky., where he was reared to manhood. In 1861 he entered the army, where he served as lieutenant. In 1874 he removed to Obion County, Tenn., where he remained until 1884, when he returned to Fulton County, Ky., where he at present resides. His father, Marcus L. Herring, a native of Rutherford County, Tenn., was born in 1810 and is still living. He is the son of Abraham Herring, a native of North Carolina. Marcus L. married Margaret A., daughter of Archibald Brown, of Fulton County, Ky., and from this union sprang Fannie, Abraham, Admiral B., Maria L. (Crawford), subject, William T., Winfield S., Marcus L., Jr., Sarah D., Lycurgus, Claudius and Robert A. In youth, subject procured a good English education. He was married, February 7, 1867, to Miss Nancy E., daughter of William and Sarah (Mayes) Bondurant, of Fulton County, Ky., and to them have been born William L., Edward W. and Una L. Subject is a farmer, having ninety-two acres of very productive land, which he is successfully cultivating. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics an old-line Whig.

OTTO HERTWECK, of the firm of Hertweck, Baltzer & Co., was born in Baden, Germany, in 1836, and is the son of Bernhardt and Martha Hertweck. The father was a weaver and died in 1856, aged sixty-three years; the mother died in 1878, at the age of seventy-nine years. Mr. Hertweck came to America in the year 1842, and located in Spencer County, Ind., where he remained until 1856, at which time he moved to Hickman. He engaged in the manufacturing business in 1858, which he has followed ever since, and in partnership with Mr. Baltzer is now operating the most extensive wagon works in west Kentucky. He was married in 1860 to Eliza E. Morton, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Hertweck are the parents of seven children—Ida, Benjamin, Henry, Corrilla, Nettie, Roy, and Arch. Mr. Hertweck is a man of fine business qualifications, and at different times has held the office of city councilman and school trustee. He belongs to the K. of H., and is a member of the Catholic Church. Mrs. Hertweck is a member of the Episcopal Church.

DR. C. H. HUBBARD was born in the town of Lunenburgh, Mass., December 22, 1822, and is the youngest of a family of nine children. His father, Dr. Ebenezer Hubbard, a distinguished clergyman of the Congregational Church, immigrated to Kentucky in 1839, and a short time later went to Trenton, Tenn., where he remained about six years, at the end of which time he came back to Kentucky and located on a beautiful farm three miles from Hickman. At this place he died in Sember, 1857, at the ripe old age of seventy-four years. His wife, subject's mother, was Charlotte (Swasey) Hubbard, a daughter of Maj. Joseph Swasey, of Revolutionary fame; she departed this life one month after her husband's death, aged seventy-four years. The following Memoriam to her was written by her son, William McKean Hubbard, of Columbus, Ky.:

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Charlottie Swasey Hubbard, daughter of Maj. Joseph Swasey, of Ipswich, Essex Co., Mass., born February 18, 1784, died October 30, 1858, aged seventy-four years, eight months and twelve days.

It was not winter when she died,
Yet on the verdure far and wide
A paleing purple fell;
And sun, and air, and sky,
And clouds that floated by
Filled our poor hearts like autumn tide,
When flowers are dying far and wide,
With omens sad to tell;
Yet hope evoked her spell,
And faith sang "All is well."
For 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

'Twas dark, but like an autumn night,
When cloud o'er cloud takes golden light,
As sinks the orb of day;
Deep hazy gr. y o'erspread
The softening silver red,

While through the parting blue, soft white,
Disclosed the heavenly gates to sight,
Where walls of jasper lay
Mid seas of pearly spray,
With angels on the way.
For 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

'Twas such a time as when the will,
Long strained by hope, grows stronger still,
With surance high of heaven.
All night the angels came Chanting in Jesus' name;
And all the air and room did fill
With song—we hear the echo still,—
Our mother, softly driven,
We'll meet at last in heaven,
The home by Jesus given.
For 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

To die! what is in death to fear?
'Tis knowledge full, the title clear,
A tenancy released.
Dust unto dust to share,
Release from woe and care;
The breaking bond of friendship's spell,
With motives formed to earthly will;
The sensual chain released
For heavenly joy increased,
Faith's harvest-home laid feast.
No! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

To die, brings to the heavenly land,
Where palm trees wave to breezes bland,
Bright islands of the blest;
There shine the quenchless stars,
Nor night the beauty mars.
The stars that shone on Juda's plain,
The Marys of the Saviour's reign,
The Marthas Jesus blest,
The Lydias Paul impressed,—
A host in Christ at rest.
No! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

To her death stood a welcome friend,
A sweet release, temptation's end,
The conquest over sin.
From the bright dawn of youth
She caught the glow of truth,
And walked, in peace, the Christian's life,
Faith-poised above doubt's fearful strife
And sin's wild war within.
Thus doth true life begin,
The Christos crown to win.
No! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

The rifted clouds, the golden light,
Re-formed above the pall of night,
As misty forms came down;
Swept high the veiled throng
Entranced with heavenly song,
As rose the misty fields to sight
With swelling ranks of angels bright,
Holding a golden crown.
Whereunder glory shown,
The conquering saint's renown.
O! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

Then cloud with cloud held converse sweet,
Came stars the coronal to greet,
And zephyrs murmured cheer;
Rapture of praise was there,
And song came down to share
The crowning with the angels fair,
As rose the throng in ambient air;
Rainbows the archways hold.
On seas of fretted gold,
Then slowly disappear.
O! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

I heard a voice from heaven say:
Write, from henceforth, blessed are they.
For thus the Spirit saith:
"Who die in Christ the Lord,
They rest," thus saith the Word.
The Spirit clears all doubt and fears,
And Jesus wipes away all tears.
Hers was the Christian's death,
Jesus inspired her latest breath,
In Him she conquered death.
No! 'twas not winter when she died—
OUR MOTHER.

C. H. Hubbard commenced life for himself as a clerk, entering the store of his brother at the age of seventeen, and remaining behind the counter until the age of twenty-one years, when he went back to the farm and stayed with his parents until the time of their death. He then superintended the farm for a number of years, applying himself in the meantime to the study of medicine under the instruction of Dr. Charles Hubbard. In 1865 he entered the Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, remaining one year, and in 1867 graduated from the Medical College of Ohio, located in Cincinnati. He then entered upon the practice of his profession in Fulton County, but abandoned it at the end of two years on account of failing health. Since that time he has been engaged in trading, and is to-day one of the largest tax-payers in Fulton County. He owns a beautiful residence in Hickman, and his farm, a few miles from the city, is a model of neatness in every particular. Dr. Hubbard was married in August, 1862, to Miss Sallie, daughter of James and Martha A. (Winn) McConnell, both natives of Kentucky. To their union have been born two children—James and C. H. (deceased). The doctor is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics is Independent. Mrs. Hubbard belongs to the Episcopal Church of Hickman.

J. H. HUDDLESTON, Fulton County, was born October 21, 1848, in Smith County, Tenn., and is the youngest of eleven children born to Daniel and Sarah (Brooks) Huddleston, native of Tennessee. The father was of Swedish descent, the mother of English. J. H. remained at home until the age of eighteen, and received a common school education. He went to Texas when nineteen, where he remained one year as a salesman at Bagdad. He returned home and worked on a farm for three years. In 1873 he came to Fulton, where he began clerking for Mr. Meadows, with whom he remained until 1881, when he embarked in business for himself with Charles Wolf. This firm remained in operation eighteen months. Subject began clerking again, but in January, 1883, he formed a partnership with R. M. Bolinger in the hardware business, and this firm is still in operation. March 29, 1877, he was married to Miss Cordie Burns of Paducah, a daughter of Robert and Hester (Bailey) Burns. The father was of Scottish descent, a native of Scott County, Ky., the mother of Kentucky, but of Irish descent. Three children were born to this union, one of whom is still living, Clarence W. Mr. and Mrs. Huddleston are members of the Christian Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. fraternity.

JOHN A. HUGHS was born November 26, 1840, in Hickman County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1869 removed to Fulton County, where he still retains his residence. His father, John Hughs, was born in North Carolina in 1805, and died in 1859. He was the son of Ezekiel, a soldier of the Revolution. Subject's mother, Mary, daughter of Elisha Parker, died in 1876, at the age of sixty-four years. To her and husband were born Henry W., Melinda (Orton), Jacob P., subject, Mary A. (Handley), and Rhoda E. (Holland). July 26, 1866, subject was married to Miss Margaret D., daughter of Asa and Sarah (Wright) Phelps of Hickman County, and to them were born Dessie, Rozetta, Lem (deceased), John A., Arthur and Solon. Mr. Hughs is a successful farmer, owning 160 acres of valuable and productive land. Near his cottage he has a deer park, in which may be seen sporting the antlered buck, the graceful doe, and speckled fawn. In religion Mr. Hughs is a Cumberland Presbyterian and in politics a Democrat.

W. D. HUTCHISON is a native of Dixon County, Tenn., where he was born on August 3, 1821. His father, John T. Hutchison, was a farmer and millwright; he died about 1858, aged sixty-eight years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and came to Hickman in 1836. Subject's mother was Elizabeth (Turner) Hutchison; she died in 1828 at the age of forty-five years. The paternal grandfather of subject was James Hutchison, a Virginian; he emigrated to Tennessee in 1811, settling near Clarksville, Montgomery County, where he died about the year 1853. W. D. Hutchison passed his youth and early manhood on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty-two engaged in business for himself as a peddler in the employ of H. P. Dorris of Clarksville, with whom he remained two years. He next drove a stage between Clarksville and Hopkinsville, retaining that position two years, and then worked as a farm laborer in Robertson County, Tenn. After staying in said county for a period of two years, he came to Fulton County, Ky., where he bought a lease, on which he resided for three years. He was married March 29, 1849, to Ellen Rebecca, daughter of Robert and Michael Rama, of Kentucky. After marriage Mr. Hutchison engaged in farming, and in 1850 moved near the Mississippi River, about ten miles below Hickman. In 1865 he bought the farm near the Tennessee State line, where he now resides. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchison were never blessed with any children of their own, but during their long married life have reared a number of orphan children, several of whom live to bless them for their unselfish interest in their welfare. Mr. Hutchison is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and an active worker in the cause of temperance, belonging to several temperance organizations, and he and wife are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

SAMUEL E. JOHNSON was born in Fulton County, Ky., October 4, 1847, where he was reared. In 1871 he went to California, and while there graduated at the State Normal, after which he engaged in teaching for five years. In 1878 he returned to his native county, where he has since continued to reside. His father, James G. Johnson, was born in Union County, Ky., in 1811, and removed to Fulton County in youth, where he died in 1860. His wife was Margaret J., daughter of James McClellan, of Fulton County, and from this union sprang Lehella J. (Henderson and McWilliams), William O., James B., George W., Salem P., and subject. Subject was married May 10, 1871, to Miss Annie E. J., daughter of Richard and Jane (DeBow) McConnell of Fulton County (born in 1848 and died in 1876), and to them were born, Eula and Ardel. Mr. Johnson was next married, May 28, 1878, to Miss Alice, daughter of Winfrey B., and Martha (Motheral) McConnell of Fulton County. She was born in 1852. This union has resulted in the birth of two children, viz.: Margaret Inez and Martha Anne. Subject commenced merchandising at Moscow, Ky., in 1877, and in the same year also at Cayce, where his business has grown to such large proportions that he has been compelled to build an extensive brick storehouse for the accommodation of his trade. He, in connection with his brother, is now operating under the firm name of S. E. & G. W. Johnson and in connection with their general merchandising are largely engaged in shipping live stock and produce, having shipped in one year 100 cars of stock. In religion our subject is a stanch Methodist and in politics a Democrat.

W. C. JOHNSON, sheriff of Fulton County, is a native of Fulton County, Ky., and dates his birth from the 3d of June, 1854. His parents, M. L. and Mary (Scearce) Johnson, were also natives of Fulton County. The father was a farmer and died in 1870, aged forty-five years. The mother died in 1867, at the age of thirty-five. Our subject is the eldest of a family of five children, and commenced life for himself as a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1869, when he was appointed deputy sheriff under B. R. Walker. He served as deputy two years, and during that time acquired such popularity throughout the county, that at the following election, in 1880, he was called to the office of sheriff by a handsome majority, was re-elected in August, 1882. Upon the expiration of his second term (January 1, 1885,) he on the first of March, following, became a member of the Hickman Lumber & Manufacturing Co. On the 10th of January, 1883, he was united in marriage with Miss Flora Golder, daughter of James Golder, of Virginia. One child blesses this union—Garland Catlett. Mr. Johnson is a member of the K. of H. and a stanch Democrat in politics.

ARTHUR KING was born July 20, 1840, in Decatur County, Tenn., and is the sixth of a family of ten children born to Hilsman and Matilda (Bruce) King, the father a native of North Carolina, and the mother of Tennessee. The paternal grandfather of subject was Stephen King, who emigrated from the Carolinas at an early day, and settled in Decatur County, Tenn., where he died in 1850, aged seventy-five or eighty years. The maternal grandfather was Amos Bruce, who departed this life in Benton, Tenn., in 1850. The father of subject was a farmer, and came to Fulton County in 1867, locating about three miles south of Hickman, on the Troy Road. Mrs. King, mother of subject, died about the year 1856. The father was next married, in 1859, to Amanda Hodge, of Tennessee, by whom he had one child. Mr. and Mrs. King were cruelly murdered in November, 1882, and their household robbed. Arthur remained under parental control until twenty years of age, when he enlisted in Company G, Eighth Confederate Arkansas Volunteer Infantry, with which regiment he served two years, at the end of which time he was discharged on account of ill health. After his discharge he went to Arkansas and from there to Mississippi, where he again enlisted, this time in the Third Mississippi Cavalry, with which he served under Gen. N. B. Forrest, until the close of the war. He came to Fulton County in 1867, remaining with his parents one year, at the end of which time he went to Jackson, Tenn., where he found employment in a restaurant, which business he followed about three years. In 1870, he came back to Fulton County, and purchased a farm of seventy-five acres, which he sold in 1882, and purchased his present place of 243 acres of choice land, lying three miles southeast of Hickman. Mr. King was married May 12, 1870, to Sarah H., daughter of Jesse and Harriet Tams. Mr. and Mrs. King are the parents of four children—Ernest Lee, Lena Rivers, Nettie and Katie. Mr. King is a member of the K. of H.; in politics votes with the Democratic party, and he and wife are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

JUDGE A. D. KINGMAN is a native of Worthington, Mass., and was born in the year 1823. His father, Isaiah Kingman, was also a native of the Bay State, followed the vocation of a farmer and died in 1860, at the age of ninety-nine years; his mother, Lucy (Daniels) Kingman, was born in 1761 and died in 1863, at the advanced age of one hundred and two years. Our subject enjoyed good educational advantages in his native town, and at the age of nineteen had acquired a very thorough knowledge of books. He came to Kentucky before attaining his majority, and located at Carrollton, where he studied law in Judge Pryor's office until the fall of 1845, at which time he received license to practice in the courts; came to Hickman, effected a law partnership with E. J. Bullock, Esq., with whom he continued four years, and later was a member of the law firms of Kingman & Wasson, and Kingman & Buck. He was elected county attorney in 1851, and served in that capacity for four years. Mr. Kingman has always manifested a warm interest in the cause of popular education, and to him more than to any other man is Fulton County indebted for its present system of public schools. He was elected school commissioner in 1847, and it may be truthfully said that he inaugurated the system of public instruction now enjoyed by this county. He filled the office of school superintendent at various times, and has had charge of it continuously since 1875. In the year 1849 Mr. Kingman was united in marriage to Mary, daughter of Lockland and Sophia (Thompson) Donaldson, the father a native of Scotland and the mother of England. Mrs. Kingman was born in the city of St. John, New Brunswick, and died in Hickman, in May, 1882, aged fifty-five years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Kingman now living are the following: C. B., W. G., and Kate. Mr. Kingman is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and in politics is an independent Democrat.

FREDERICK W. KEISER was born April 6, 1830, in upper Kentucky, was taken by his parents to Mississippi County, Ark., in 1836, where he grew to manhood, and in 1874 came to Fulton County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, John Keiser, a native of Prussia, was born in 1800 and is still living. John's wife, Christena Ritter, of Prussia, died in 1845. Their offspring are subject, Mary A. (deceased). January 14, 1857, Frederick W., married to Miss Mary E., daughter of Nathan Waller, of Arkansas. She was born in 1839 and died in 1863. To them were born Christena N. (Williams), Cassandra E. (Bush), William H. and Mary B. He was next married in 1866 to Miss Indiana Dillingham, of Arkansas, who died in 1868. On January 28, 1869, subject married Mrs. Eliza A. Hannah, daughter of Elisha P. and Maria J. (Bunch) Williams, of Arkansas, and to them have been born John P., James F., Annie F., Alice V., Ella I., and Iva Maud. His wife's daughter by her former husband is Maria E. Hannah. Mr. Keiser is a farmer, having at his home place 224 acres of first class land, and well improved. He also owns 800 acres of other lands. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Methodist and a Democrat.

JUDGE SAMUEL LANDRUM, of Fulton County, was born April 11, 1824, in Halifax County, Va. He is the youngest of eleven children born to Samuel and Rachel (Hart) Landrum, both natives of the same county and State. In 1827 the father moved to Weakley County, Tenn.; there he died in 1844, aged about seventy years. The mother died when our subject was quite young. At the age of fifteen Samuel entered a store as clerk, where he remained three years; he received as a consideration the first three years his board and clothes. The following two years he received $150, which enabled him to attend school for a period of ten months. At the solicitation of his brother, who was a partner in the business, Samuel was induced to enter the store as clerk, and later became a partner of the firm; this partnership continued until 1850, when he came to Hickman, and in company with his brother entered the mercantile business, continuing this until 1860. In 1862 he was elected county judge, and served four years. In 1866 he engaged in the insurance business, which he has continued, and represents a line of the most prominent insurance companies in the United States. He was mayor of Hickman for several terms. He was married in 1853 to Volumnia Lawson; she died in 1859, leaving three children. His second marriage was in 1863 to Bettie Guthrie, of Henry County, Ky.; she died January, 1876. They had four children, one living. His third marriage took place in January, 1877, to Florence Jackson, of Obion County, Tenn., by whom he has two children. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F., and K. of. H. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

B. B. LINN was born in Kentucky, January 17, 1847, and is a son of R. C. and Nancy (Irvan) Linn. The father was a native of Kentucky also, and was of Irish and French origin. His father came to the Purchase in 1823, and settled one mile east of where Murray now stands, where he entered and improved lands. Subject was reared on a farm. He remained at home until he was twenty, and then began clerking at Wadesborough. He remained there one year and then came to Murray, where he acted as salesman until 1870. He then engaged in the grocery business with his brother George. In 1872 his brother was elected sheriff of the county, and subject was appointed to the position of deputy sheriff, which office he held for about six years, and also served one year as deputy clerk. In 1878 he returned to the farm, where he resided two years. He was next appointed master commissioner for Calloway, which position he held two years. In December, 1882, he moved to Fulton, Ky., where he engaged in the furniture business. In 1884 he sold out and is at present bookkeeper for R. A. Browder. Mr. Linn was married in November, 1873, to Miss Emma Boaz, of Calloway County, and a daughter of Dr. L. D. Boaz. This lady died in 1874, and subject was next married September 15, 1878, to Miss M. E. Utterback, a daughter of A. P. and James (Smith) Utterback, natives of Calloway County, and of German origin. The result of this marriage has been two children: Nancy E. and Harry P. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., and K. of H. fraternities. Mrs. Linn is a member of the Christian Church.

DREW A. LUTEN, Fulton County, was born January 6, 1855, on the place where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky. He is the son of Samuel B. Luten, a native of Bertie County, N. C., who was born in 1804, removed to Hickman County, Ky., in 1829, and died in 1860. Subject's mother was Mary A., daughter of Henry and Susan Ashburn, of Logan County, Ky., and to Samuel B. and her were born, William H., Martha V. (Griffey), Dr. Samuel W., Dr. Joseph R., Mary A. (Luten), Susan V. (Davis), Nannie W. and subject. Our subject was favored with a good English education, and has greatly improved his opportunities by reading. He was married February 12, 1884, to Miss Cantie, daughter of Wood and Lucinda E. (Dewese) Jones, of Hickman County. Mr. Luten is a farmer owning 300 acres of first class land in fine condition, well improved and in a high state of cultivation. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

HON. J. R. LUTEN, Fulton County, was born March 6, 1843, in Moscow, Hickman Co., Ky., and is the fourth of eight children born to Dr. Samuel B. and Mary A. (Ashburn) Luten, natives of Bertie County, N. C., and Logan County, Ky., respectively. The father came to Moscow in 1828. Subject's education was received at the Moscow Seminary and Bell Forest Academy, near Union City, Tenn. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in Faulkner's regiment, Capt. H. A. Tyler's company, of Forrest's cavalry. At Florence, Ala., in the fall of 1863, he was captured, but was soon after paroled and never entered the service again. He turned his attention to farming, but in 1865 began the study of medicine. In 1866–67 he attended a course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, and in 1867–68 he attended the medical department of the Louisiana State University, from which he received his diploma. He returned to Kentucky and settled in Wesley, Hickman County, where he remained until 1875. He then went to Fulton, where he has since resided. He now has a very fair practice and is becoming more successful every year. In 1881 he was elected to the legislature from Fulton and Hickman Counties. Dr. Luten was married in September, 1868, to Miss Kate Browder, of Fulton County, and daughter of David and Mary (Smith) Browder. The father was a native of Hopkins County, Ky., and of English descent; the mother of Muhlenburgh County, and of Dutch descent. They came to Fulton County in 1827. Mrs. Luten is the mother of four children: Samuel D., Mary, Wiley R. and Horace.

DR. SAMUEL W. LUTEN, Fulton County, was born in Moscow, Hickman County, Ky., August 30, 1841, and in 1851 removed to Fulton County, where he has since resided. He is the son of Dr. Samuel B. Luten, a native of Bertie County, N. C., where he was born in 1804, came to Kentucky in 1829, and died in 1860. Subject's mother was Mary A., daughter of Henry Ashburn of Logan County, Ky. (born in 1811, and died about 1875), and the result of the union was the birth of William H., Martha V. (Griffey), subject, Dr. Joseph R., Mary A., Susan A. (Davis), Nannie V., and Drew A. In 1859 subject commenced the study of medicine with Dr. J. M. Jackson of Columbus, Ky., with whom he remained until the commencement of the war, when he entered the army, where he remained two years, after which he entered the University of Louisville, where he graduated in 1864. He then settled near Moscow, Ky., where he has since enjoyed a successful and extensive practice. On October 5, 1870, Dr. Luten was married to Miss Inez G., daughter of E. W. and Virginia (Garth) Stephens of Fulton County, and to them have been born, Edmund A. (deceased), Ward G., Garth B., Joseph B., Lillian L., Virginia S., Drew A., and Lorena M. Dr. Luten is also engaged in farming, owning 180 acres of valuable and productive land in a good condition, and in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the A. I. O. O. F. and of the K. of H. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics a Democrat.

W. L. McCUTCHEN, mayor of Hickman, was born in Williamson County, Tenn., July 4, 1827. His father, William McCutchen, was also a native of Tennessee, and a man of considerable note in the early history of the State, having served with Gen. Jackson in all his campaigns against the Indians (except the Seminole war), and in the war of 1812 rose to the position of colonel of volunteers. He participated in the battle of New Orleans, and was a warm personal friend of "Old Hickory," who held him in the highest esteem. He died in the year 1861, aged sixty-five. The mother of subject died seven years later, at the age of seventy-two. W. L. McCutchen was thrown upon his own resources early in life, entering a store as clerk at the age of fourteen, and continuing for a period of seven years, his only compensation being his board and clothing. At the end of that time he effected a partnership with an elder brother in the mercantile business at Trenton, Tenn., where he remained until the war compelled them to close their store. When Mr. McCutchen came to Hickman, at the conclusion of the struggle, he possessed no capital except a determined will, which has characterized him during life. He commenced business in Hickman as a clerk on a salary of $1,200 per year, and while attending to his clerical duties, he bought and sold cotton on his own responsibility, in which he was very fortunate, realizing, by successful trading, the sum of $13,000 in four years. With this sum of money he was enabled to establish a wholesale and retail grocery house. This proved a very successful venture, and was continued until 1880, at which time he disposed of it at a handsome profit. Since 1880 Mr. McCutchen has been engaged in buying staves for the European markets, shipping principally to France. He employs from ten to twenty men during the year and carries on a very lucrative business. He was married November, 1858, to Miss Jennie E. Garrison, of Obion County, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. McCutchen are the parents of eight children: Emma, Callie, Unie, Minnie, William (deceased), Thomas, Maggie and Jennie. In 1883, Mr. McCutchen was elected mayor of Hickman, and in 1884 was re-elected. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F., and the K. of H. He and family are prominently identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and politically Mr. McCutchen is a Democrat.

JOHN R. McGEHEE, Fulton County, was born October 28, 1824, in Meade County, Ky., where he grew to manhood and in 1843 removed to Fulton County, and settled on the place where he died April 1, 1885. His father, Addison B. McGehee, a native of Louisa County, Va., was born in 1800, removed with his parents to Meade County, Ky., in 1804, and died in 1844. He was the son of William L. of Virginia, a soldier in the war of 1812. Addison B. married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Nancy (Wilhoit) Rush, of Buck Grove, Meade County (born in 1802, now living), to whom were born James M., subject, William B., Thomas W., Frances A. (Harper), Martha P. (Barnes), Mary L. (Milner), and Benjamin F. Subject was educated at Brandenburg Academy. He was married Febuary 5, 1846, to Miss Lucretia S., daughter of Joseph and Mildred (Schouse) Roper, of Fulton County (born in 1828, and died November 11, 1855), and this union resulted in the birth of Joseph A. (deceased), Ophelia E., John R. (deceased), Anna B. (deceased), and Ida L. (deceased). He was next married August 17, 1856, to Miss T. Jane McFadden, of Fulton County (born 1829, and died in 1871), and from this union sprang John R. and Mattie Blanche. On September 10, 1872, subject was married to Miss Matilda, daughter of Charles and Sophia (Beckett) Middleton, of Virginia, and to them have been born Gypsie Lena, Sophia Maud, Pearl Garth, Arthur Charles Rush, Mary Louise and Constance Middleton. Mr. McGehee was at one time circuit clerk and examiner and deputy clerk of Fulton County till his death. He was a farmer, owning 140 acres of first-class land, in fine condition. He was formerly an old line Whig.

HARDIN MADDOX, a native of Shelby County, Ky., and third child of Elijah and Sarah (Clark) Maddox, was born September 15, 1820. The paternal grandfather of subject was a Wilson Maddox, a native of Virginia and a soldier in the war of the Revolution; he immigrated to Kentucky in an early day, settling in Shelby County, where he died about 1841 or 1842, at the advanced age of ninety years. Elijah Maddox was one of the earliest settlers of Fulton County, having come in January, 1826, and opening a farm on which his son, Hardin, now lives, was a resident of the county until the time of his death in 1849. Subject's mother died on September 5, 1841. Hardin was but six years of age when his parents moved to this part of Kentucky, and from an almost unbroken wilderness he has seen the country developed to its present advanced state of civilization. He remained with his parents on the home farm and looked after their interests until their death, when he acquired possession of the homestead on which he has since resided. He was married November 12, 1845, to Mrs Susan A. Bradley, daughter of R. and Eliza (Berry) Duffey. Six children were born to this union: Sallie, William Henry, Effie, Leonard, Eliza and Annie. Mr. Maddox is one of the substantial farmers of Fulton County, owning a beautiful tract of 350 acres of land, 200 of which are under cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and belongs to the Christian Church, as does also his wife.

WILLIAM W. MEADOWS, Fulton County, was born May 4, 1846, in Dickson County, Tenn., and is a son of Ephraim G. and Jane (Thompson) Meadows, natives of North Carolina and Virginia respectively. Subject is the sixth of eight children—four sons and four daughters. The mother died in 1880, aged seventy years. The father is still living in Weakley County, Tenn. Subject was reared on a farm and attended school until the breaking out of the war, when he turned his attention to trading; at the close of the war, he attended the Bryant & Stratton Commercial College, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1871. He engaged in merchandising at Gardner, Tenn., and in March, 1873, came to Fulton, Ky., where he engaged in mercantile business. He has also followed cotton and tobacco trading quite extensively, and has met with good success. He owns a half interest in the store of Fall & Meadows, besides a block of stores, houses and lots, 100 acres in farming land, besides various kinds of machinery, all of which he has acquired by his own industry. March 12, 1878, Mr. Meadows was married to Miss Jodie Beard, a native of Louisiana, and a daughter of Rev. Thomas L. and Elizabeth Beard. Her father was of Welsh descent and was born in North Carolina. He came to Tennessee in an early day, where he was, for many years, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The result of this union is one child, Paul C. Mr. and Mrs. Meadows are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of H. fraternities. He is one of the directors of the bank of Fulton, and has been a councilman of Fulton for many years.

DR. J. G. MICKLE was born June 4, 1825, in Christian County, Ky., and is the eldest child of John C. and Sallie (Adams) Mickle. The father was a native of Virginia, and of Scotch descent; the mother of Maryland, and of English descent. His paternal grandfather was born in Scotland; his maternal grandfather, in Maryland, and was by trade a saddler. The father of subject was a farmer and local preacher in the Methodist Church. J. G. was reared on a farm and received his education mostly at the Mt. Pleasant Academy. He remained at home until he became of age, and then began the study of medicine in Montgomery County, Tenn. He subsequently attended lectures at the Louisville Medical College, and in 1848 located at the mouth of Harpeth River, where he practiced about five years. In 1854 he came to Nashville, where he remained three years. He next went to Graves County, Ky., where he remained until 1860, and then moved to Clear Lake, Pulaski County. He remained at this latter point until 1866 when he moved to Little Rock, Ark. He left there in 1870, and returning to Tennessee, settled at Middletown. At the latter point he remained five years and then returned again to Graves County, Ky., settling this time at Water Valley. Here he was burned out in 1881, and moved to Fulton, where he has since remained. Dr. Mickle was married January 25, 1849, to Miss Sallie E. Joslin of Davidson County, Tenn., and a daughter of Lewis and Elizabeth (Crawford) Joslin. The father was one of the first settlers of Davidson County, Tenn., and was of French descent. The mother was born in North Carolina and was of English parentage. The following named children have resulted from this marriage: R. L., Porter, John C. and Benjamin C. Two daughters, Mattie S. and Delila M. died in Arkansas. Mrs. Mickle is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has been identified with the Masonic fraternity, and has also been connected with various temperance organizations. While at Water Valley he acted as deputy county clerk.

DR. CHARLES W. MILES was born November 10, 1848, near where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky., and has retained his residence at this place to the present time. His father, Dr. Guy S. Miles, a native of Shelby County, was born in 1816; removed with his parents to Fulton County in 1832; enjoyed an extensive practice in his profession, and died here in 1881. He was the son of William Miles, a native of Fairfax County, Va. Dr. Guy S. was three times married, first to Martha A., daughter of Thomas Tyler, of Fulton County, and his children are: Callie (Payne), subject and Augusta (Norton); by his second wife: Mary (McConnell), Charlotte (McConnell), Corrinne (Norton) and Margaret (McConnell); by his third marriage: Rebecca, Maud and Guy S., Jr. Our subject was educated at the University of Missouri. On February 22, 1877, he was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Woodson and Willie F. (Lightner) Morris, of Obion County, Tenn., and to them have been born: Woodson M., Owen W. (deceased), Annie F. (deceased) and Charles W., Jr. In 1869 subject commenced the study of medicine with his father, and in 1870 entered the University of Louisville, Ky., where he graduated in 1872. He then practiced at his native place until 1874, when he attended Bellevue Hospital, which institution he again attended in 1878, since which time he has been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. Dr. Miles also engages in farming, owning 240 acres of valuable land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., of the K. of H., and is a Democrat.

A. T. MITCHELL, Fulton County, was born October 26, 1843, in Bourbon County, Ky., and is the second of a family of three sons born to John H. and Susan A. (Butler) Mitchell, natives of Montgomery County, Ky., and of Scotch-Irish and German descent respectively. Subject's grandparents, James W. and Betty (Jones) Mitchell, and William and Mary (Shortridge) Butler, were all natives of Culpeper County, Va., and came to Kentucky as early as 1820, settling near the line between Bourbon and Montgomery Counties. Subject received his education in Bethany, W. Va., and was in the graduating class at the breaking out of the war. In May, 1861, the college closed and he returned home. He found that his brother had enlisted in the Confederate Army, and so he remained at home with his mother, his father having died when he was quite young. At the close of the war, he began clerking in the National Bank, at Mt. Sterling, Ky., and subsequently served as teller there one year. In 1869 he organized a bank at Middletown, Ky., and remained there some ten or twelve years. October, 8, 1883, he organized the Fulton Bank, and has since been engaged here. The bank has a capital of $50,000, with the privilege of increasing it to $200,000. He was married in April, 1865, to Miss Anna Rice, of Bourbon County, and a daughter of Col. James and Patsey (Boyle) Rice, natives of Kentucky, and of Scotch and Irish origin. Two children, Linnie P. and Cammie, have resulted from this union. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell are members of the Christian Church; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

ELDER J. B. MOODY, Fulton County, was born in Mecklenburgh County, Va., June 24, 1838. He is the second son of William A. Moody, who was born in Halifax County, Va., September 24, 1810. His mother's maiden name was Emily Royster. She was reared in Granville County, N. C.; she bore three children, two of whom are yet living: F. Berrian, at present editor of the Florida Baptist, and Joseph B., the subject of this sketch. The second wife of William A. Moody was Margaret A. Moseley of Mecklenburgh County, Va.; she bore seven children, viz.: William L., near Bowling Green, Ky.; Mrs. Thomas W. Penick, of Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Frank Vaughan, of Christian County, Ky.; James Edwin (now dead), Maggie (unmarried). John Waller, of Todd County, and Fleming of Lake City, Fla. The two families of Lemuel Moseley and William A. Moody removed to Christian County about the years 1844 and 1845. They settled between Fairview and Pembroke on adjoining farms. The death of the latter occurred in 1860. Joseph B. was educated at Bethel College, Russellville, Ky. After a few years' teaching he was compelled on account of his health to take up farming, which he prosecuted for ten years. He then removed to Louisville and became general agent of the Louisville Agricultural Works. This he continued for four years; then forming a co-partnership with W. B. Wootten of Hopkinsville, Ky., they opened a wholesale implement and seed store on Main Street, between Fourth and Fifth, Louisville, Ky., under the firm name of Moody & Wootten; then Moody, Wootten & Co., F. B. Moody having joined the co-partnership. J. B., having a burning desire to enter the ministry, sold out his interest to his brother, and soon became pastor of the Pewee Valley Baptist Church, where his residence had been for some eight years. He served the church for four years, during which time he also served Elk Creek Church, in Spencer County, and La Grange Church, in Oldham County, each about three years, and also Harrod's Creek Church, Oldham County, about one year. He then became pastor of the First Baptist Church, Paducah, Ky., where he remained two years. He then became one of the editors of the Baptist Gleaner, Fulton, Ky., which connection he now sustains.

FOSTER D. MOORE was born August 9, 1841, in McNairy County, Tenn., and is the second of nine children, of Alfred and Louisa Moore. His father was born in 1804 in Randolph County, N. C. and was of Irish descent. Robert Moore, grandfather of subject, was a farmer and served as a soldier in the Revolution. Subject's mother was born in 1817 in Maury County, Tenn., and was of Scotch descent. Her father, John Beaty, was a cabinet-maker, and was in the battle of New Orleans. The father of subject was a merchant and Foster D. was reared in the town, where he received a good education. He attended West Tennessee College one year, also was one year at Bethel College, and one year at Purdy College. He served in the State militia of Tennessee for four years previous to the breaking out of the war, and at the call for State troops, May 4, 1861, was elected second lieutenant. He participated in the battles of Shiloh and Belmont, and three weeks after the former fight, was captured by Col. Ingersoll's regiment, while at home. He was subsequently paroled from Gen. Halleck's headquarters. He was afterward sent to Columbus, Ohio, and thence to Johnson's Island, Lake Erie. In September, 1862, he was exchanged at Vicksburg, and receiving a sixty days' furlough came home. He subsuquently joined Newsome's regiment, which participated in the battles of Hatchie River, Summerville, Fayette Station, Okalona, Paducah, Fort Pillow, Brice's Cross Roads and Hurricane Creek. He was captured in March, 1865, and confined in Camp Chase until June, 1865, when he took the oath of allegiance and came home. Since the war he has followed railroad business exclusively. He was married December 29, 1862, to Miss Mollie Johnson, of Purdy, Tenn., daughter of Milton H. and America (Thomas) Johnson. This lady died in April, 1866; she was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at the time of her death.

DR. JOHN E. MORRIS, Fulton County, was born May 1, 1843, in Alexander, Fulton Co., Ky., and was next to the youngest child of Seth and Molcy (Byrd) Morris. The father was born in North Carolina, August 16, 1806, and was a son of Elijah and Sarah Morris, also of that State, and of Irish descent. The grandparents came, in September, 1829, to Hickman, Fulton County, where the grandfather died May 23, 1845; the grandmother on July 17, 1843. Seth Morris was married, March 27, 1832, to Miss Molcy Byrd, a daughter of John and Dorcas Byrd. She was born June 24, 1814. Seth Morris died January 25, 1848; his widow on April 7, 1854. John E. was reared on a farm and received his education at the schools of his neighborhood and those of Clinton. He taught school one term before the war and several terms after. June 2, 1861, he enlisted in Company L, Capt. Drew Outlaw, of the Twelfth Tennessee Infantry, Confederate States Army. At the reorganization of the regiments in 1862, he was made captain of the company and transferred to the Third Kentucky Infantry, and this regiment was mounted in 1864. Among the battles in which he participated were Shiloh, Corinth, Harrisburg, the bombardment of Vicksburg, etc. He was paroled in June, 1865, and returned home. In the fall of the same year he began reading medicine at Paducah with Dr. Thompson. In 1868 he attended his first course of lectures at Paducah. He then located at Alexander, where he practiced until 1873, when he attended lectures at Louisville and graduated in the class of 1873-74. He next located at Fulton, where he remained until 1877. Then, on account of his health, he removed to Texas, where he practiced at Madisonville until January, 1882. He then returned to Fulton, where he has since practiced with considerable success. He was present at Paducah in 1871, and assisted in the organization of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association, and in May, 1885, was elected junior vice-president of that body. Dr. Morris was married, in November, 1868, to Miss Ferticia Reynolds, of Webster County, Ky. One child, Alena, blessed this union. Mrs. Morris died in February, 1870, and the doctor next married, in December, 1871, Miss Mary C. Browder, a daughter of Alpheus and Caroline (Bard) Browder, natives of Fulton County, Ky. The result of this union has been four children, viz.: James E., Mabel C., Erin and Eunice. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a member of the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities.

PETER W. MOTT was born November 14, 1819, in Jessamine County, Ky., and is the eldest of the ten children of James and Hettie (Withers) Mott. The father was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Cundiff) Mott, and was born in Lancaster County, Va., of English origin. The mother was born in Jessamine County, Ky. Her parents, Peter and Hettie (Allison) Withers, were of Irish origin. The father of our subject moved to Jessamine County in 1812, and in 1828 came to Fulton County, where he entered 480 acres of land. Here he resided until his death, in 1847, aged fifty-two years. He was reared on his father's farm, received a common school education and assisted his father to erect the first schoolhouse in Hickman County. At the age of sixteen he came to Moscow and sold goods for three years. In 1839 he went to Missouri, where he followed stock-herding for six years. He then returned to Hickman, where he was elected town marshal of the village and served for three years. In 1849 he turned his attention to farming and trading. About this time he took a trip to California, where he remained about a year and a half. He returned home and again gave his attention to agricultural pursuits, also devoting considerable attention to trading. Since the war he has lived a somewhat retired life. Mr. Mott was married September 12, 1849, in Obion County, Tenn., to Miss Lucy F. Morris, a native of Rutherford County, Tenn., and a daughter of George and Mary (Smith) Morris. Her parents were natives of Virginia, and came to Tennessee about 1808. The result of this marriage was seven children, of whom three are living: Mary G. (Ayers), Hettie A. (Murphy), and James W. Mr. and Mrs. Mott are members of the Christian Church.

JUDGE R. S. MURRELL is a native of Weakley County, Tenn., and was born September 25, 1848. His father, J. B. Murrell, was born in Missouri, and is living in the town of Fulton, Ky., at the present time, where he is engaged in an active real estate business. The maiden name of subject's mother was Mary Jane Davis. She was a native of Kentucky, and died in 1866, at the age of thirty years. Subject remained on his father's farm until he was eighteen years of age, when he commenced teaching in the common schools of the county, and two years later entered the law office of Col. Ervin Anderson, of Mayfield, where he remained until 1871, at which time he was admitted to the bar. Since then he has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession, in Graves and Fulton Counties. For four years he was engaged in the newspaper business, in Mayfield and Fulton, in connection with the legal profession, and in 1878 was elected city attorney of Mayfield, serving in that capacity one year. In August, 1872, he was elected county judge of Fulton County by a handsome majority, which office he now holds. He is an active member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F., K. of. H. and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Politically Mr. Murrell is identified with the Democratic party.

WILLIAM NOLEN, an old settler of the Purchase, was born in McConnellstown, Penn., December 25, 1815. He is the fourth child, and the only one now living of four boys and one girl, born to George and Nancy (Harden) Nolen, natives of Virginia and Maryland, respectively. The grandparents of our subject were William Nolen, of Irish descent, a Revolutionary soldier, and William Harden, of English descent. The father of our subject was a soldier in the war of 1812, was wounded in the battle of Lundy's Lane, and was a potter by trade. In 1822, William Nolen was brought, by his parents, to Louisville, Ky., where he learned the tinner's trade. In January, 1834, he went to New Orleans, where he worked at his trade two years; thence to Paducah, Ky., where he opened a shop of his own, and carried on the business until 1868. In 1857 he opened a hardware store. After 1868 he worked in Cairo, Ill.; thence he came to Fulton, Ky., in the year 1873, where he worked for W. L. Ellison & Co. Later he and son formed a partnership, when he moved his family to Fulton. In the year 1880 he opened a shop of his own in Fulton, where he still carries on the business. Mr. Nolen has honorably filled the position of chairman of the board of trustees of Paducah, and frequently has been chosen councilman. He was appointed surveyor of the port of Paducah by Pres. Pierce. He is a member in good standing of the I. O. O. F. He was married to Huldah A. Becker, of Paducah, August 15, 1836. She is a native of Huntsville, Ala., and a daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Hagie) Becker, of German descent. Her grandfather Hagie came to the United States with Gen. La Fayette. During the Revolution he was one of La Fayette's body guards. After the war Mr. Hagie remained in the United States, and on Gen. La Fayette's visit to the States in 1824, visited his old commander at Nashville, Tenn. To Mr. and Mrs. Nolen were born nine children, viz.: Catherine, (now Glass), Isaac (deceased), Mary J. (now Phillips), W. P., Joseph (deceased), Nannie (deceased), Robert I., Lillie (now Adams), Anna A. (now Hughes). Mrs. Nolen is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

W. P. NOLEN, Fulton County, was born March 14, 1844, in Paducah, Ky., and is a son of William and Huldah A. (Becker) Nolen. The father was born in Pennsylvania, of German descent. The mother was born in Livingston County, Ky., and was of French descent. W. P. is the fourth of eight children, four boys and four girls. He received his education in Paducah. In 1863 he began life as a clerk in his father's hardware store at Paducah, where he remained until 1867. In 1877 he removed to Fulton, Ky., where he engaged in the hardware business. In the spring of 1881 he entered the employment of the Southern Express Company at Fulton, and is still engaged by them. In October, 1865, he was married to Miss Julia E. Cook, of Paducah, and a daughter of Marcus and Amelia Cook. The father was a native of Virginia and a lumberman by occupation. He was one of the first men to put up a planing-mill at Paducah. This marriage has resulted in the following children: Marcus C., Bettie C., Julia and W. P., Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Nolen are members of the Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity.

SAMUEL J. NOONON was born in Jessamine County, Ky., March 4, 1828, removed with his parents, in 1833, to Hickman, (now Fulton) County, where he still retains his residence. His father, John Noonon, also a native of Jessamine County, a soldier in the war of 1812, died there in 1843, aged about fifty-five years. He was the son of Patrick Noonon, a native of Ireland, who died in Jessamine County. Subject's mother, Eliza, daughter of Samuel Hicks, of Jessamine County, is still living. To subject's father, by his first marriage, were born Sarah (Corum), Elizabeth (Hicks) and Catherine (Campbell). The second marriage resulted in the birth of William T., subject, Nancy J. (Stevens), John H., Squire A., Joseph A.,

Mary A. (Carr), Courtney R. and Henry W. On September 30, 1852, subject was married to Miss Priscilla L., daughter of John and Susan (Durham) Burnes of Fulton County, and to them have been born Susan M. and Ettie E. Our subject is a very successful farmer, having 380 acres of valuable and productive land in fine condition, and in an excellent state of cultivation. He is a member of the fraternity of A. F. & A. M., and in politics is identified with the Democratic party. Mrs. Noonon is a Methodist.

NOAH NORMAN, Fulton County, retired farmer, whose portrait appears in this work, was born in North Carolina, September 19, 1806. He is the son of Charles and Betsey (Dodd) Norman. Subject at an early age lost his father, and consequently commenced life upon his own responsibility. He received but scant opportunities for receiving an education, but learned the beneficial lessons of industry, frugality, honesty and faithful citizenship. In 1828 he came to Fulton County, Ky., and purchased fifty acres of land where the town of Fulton now stands, and by his industry accumulated 600 acres of land adjoining the town of Fulton. He was one of the founders of the town and laid out one of the principal additions. For many years he has been a member of the Missionary Baptist Church. August 14, 1834, he wedded Mary Fields, a native of Davidson County, Tenn. She was born May 3, 1807. There are six children by this marriage: Daniel L.; Mary D.; Elizabeth, deceased; Henry T., Callie and Benjamin F., who was killed in the Rebellion.

H. T. NORMAN, Fulton County, was born where Fulton now stands, July 15, 1843. He is the fourth of six children, three boys and three girls, born to Noah and Mary (Fields) Norman, natives of Rockingham County, N. C., and of Tennessee, respectively, of Scotch-Irish and German descent. Subject was reared on the farm and lived with his parents until the war broke out, when he enlisted in Company A, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, under Capt. Pirtle, Wickliffe colonel commanding. He took part in the battles of Shiloh, Franklin, bombardment of Vicksburg, Harrisburg and Okolona. After eighteen months' service he was transferred to cavalry, when the regiment became the Eighth Kentucky. He was under Gen. Forrest in the battles of Johnsonville, Nashville, second Franklin and in numerous skirmishes. He fought fourteen days in succession, and surrendered in April, 1865. On his return home he engaged in farming where Fulton now stands. He is in the possession of 115 acres of land, adjoining Fulton on the east. He made two additions to the town of Fulton, first of seven acres and the second of fifteen acres. He has one of the finest places in the county of Fulton, a fine brick residence located in a grove of five acres, three quarters of a mile east of the business part of the town. Mr. Norman was married, February 12, 1867, to Martha M. Clark, of Weakley County, Tenn. She is the daughter of King Hiram and Sally (Horton) Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Norman had born to them these children: Benj. F., Early T., James W., Noah, Hiram, Robert H., Emma and Carrie Ann. Mr. Norman and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The portrait of Mr. H. T. Norman appears elsewhere in this volume.

PRESLEY J. OLIVER was born August 7, 1843, in Fulton County, Ky., where he still resides. His father, Martin Oliver, was born in Graves County in 1817, and came to this place in 1824; his mother, Mary (Thornton) Oliver was born in 1814; both parents are living. Their children are Nancy C., William R., subject, Julia A. and John C. Subject was educated at the common schools of the county. He was first married in 1870 to Miss Mary B., daughter of John C. Lawson, of Fulton County (born in 1849 and died in 1872), and from this union sprang one child, Nora V. In 1874 he was married to Miss Emma J., daughter of John M. and Mary E. (Turner) Milner, of Hickman County, and to them have been born Mary S., M. Irene and Lena May. Subject is a farmer, having 315 acres of good land, under good culture. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and is identified with the Democratic party. His wife is a Methodist.

DR. GIDEON PASCHALL, deceased, was born August 2, 1820, in Caswell County, N. C., and was taken by his parents in an early day to Huntsville, Ala.; thence in 1826, to Weakley County, Tenn., six miles west of Fulton, Ky. He was the eldest of thirteen children born to Jesse M. and Mary (Freeman) Paschall, natives of North Carolina. He was reared on a farm, and was on the ground where Paducah now stands when there was not a building erected thereon. He engaged in flatboating down the Mississippi in an early day, and lived with his parents until he was twenty-two years old, when he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Hawkings; he studied for three years and commenced his practice in Henry County, Tenn.; he finally located where Fulton now stands and put up a log office, which he later moved from a mile east of town to where it now stands—a relic of the past—in the door yard of the family residence in Fulton. He took a course of lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Penn., in the winter of 1853-54, received a diploma, and was one of the few who are able to graduate with one course of lectures. He was an excellent physician. He was married August 10, 1854, to Adaline Bullock, of Fulton County, a native of Granville County, N. C., and a daughter of Richard and Martha (Freeman) Bullock of Granville County, N. C. Mr. Bullock is of Welsh origin. To Dr. and Mrs. Paschall were born five children, viz.: Pollie, Mattie, Addie D., Annette, Effie R., now deceased. Mrs. Paschall is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; she is owner of one of the finest brick blocks in Fulton, a fine residence, and a number of other residences. Dr. Paschall and a Mr. Carr were the first to sell lots in the town of Fulton; they had the first plat made. The doctor assisted in cutting the State line road through Fulton; his father helped in the removal of the Cherokee Indians. Dr. Paschall was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

DR. N. J. PASCHALL, Fulton County, was born May 21, 1840, in Weakley County, Tenn., six miles southeast of Fulton. He is the eleventh of thirteen children, seven boys and six girls, two boys and one girl now living, born to Jesse M. and Mary (Freeman) Paschall, natives respectively of Caswell and Grandville Counties, N. C. His grandparents were Alexander and Susan (Morgan) Paschall, of French descent. The father of our subject came to Weakley County, Tenn., January, 1827, and entered about 220 acres of land, which he improved and lived on until his death in 1872; he was born in 1799. The father, grandfather and great-grandfather and mother of subject all lie in the family graveyard on the farm entered by grandfather Alex Paschall, and now owned by Dr. N. J. Paschall. His father flatboated in an early day down the Mississippi River, and was one of the first magistrates of Weakley County, Tenn. He assisted in organizing the first court and was appointed justice for life. At the end of four years the constitution was changed; he was then elected for sixteen years. He enlisted to assist in removing the Cherokee Indians, also enlisted in the Florida war. He was an intimate friend of Davy Crockett. Dr. N. J. Paschall was reared on a farm and received a common school education, the best the log-school of the pioneer days could afford. He lived with his parents till he was seventeen years of age, when he commenced the study of medicine with his brother, G. W. Paschall. He took his first course of medical lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Penn., in 1861. After his return he enlisted in July, 1861, in a cavalry company commanded by Capt. Ballentine. He participated in the battles of Paducah, Corinth, Britton's Lane, Fort Pillow, bombardment of Vicksburg, Bolivar, Fort Donelson and Belmont. He re-enlisted in the spring of 1862 for three years or during the war, and was detailed at various times to take charge of the sick. He was under the command of the following named generals—Pillow, Forrest and Van Dorn. After the surrender in May, 1865, he returned home and shortly after emigrated to Texas, where he remained three years. He returned, renewed his study of medicine and graduated at Jefferson Medical College in the spring of 1869. He located at Fulton, where he has continued his practice ever since with success. He attended a course of medical lectures at St. Louis Medical College in 1871. Dr. Paschall owns 225 acres of land in a good state of cultivation and a drug store, which he has acquired by his own industry. He was married July 17, 1864, to Sarah J. Wilson of Ballard County, Ky., a daughter of Rutledge and Elizabeth (Holman) Wilson, natives of Livingston and Butler Counties, Ky., respectively, of Dutch descent. Samuel Wilson located in the Purchase in 1820; William Holman in 1823; both settled in Ballard County. To Dr. and Mrs. Paschall eight children were born, viz.: Mary B., Sarah A., May F., Demitra A., Newton J., Ed C., Jesse R. and Lola A. Mrs. Paschall and eldest daughter are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Paschall has been trustee of Fulton several terms. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, one of the charter members of the I. O. O. F. in Fulton, also a charter member of the K. of H.

J. W. POWELL, Fulton County, was born in Adair County, Ky., September 3, 1825, and is a son of Capt. Robert and Martha E. (Dawson) Powell, natives of Virginia. The father settled in Adair County, about 1810, and subsequently represented that county in the legislature two terms; about 1827 he moved to Weakley County, Tenn.; soon after his arrival he was elected first sheriff of that county; while acting in this capacity, he and the famous Davy Crockett had one of the most sanguinary encounters, with bare fists, ever known in that region; both were badly used up. Subsequently they became fast friends. In 1829 he came to Fulton, then Hickman County, and located at Mills'

Point, now Hickman, where he opened a hotel, and subsequently bought a plantation, on which he resided until his death, in 1853, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. Capt. Powell was one of the first settlers in the Green River country, and one of the first to make the trip with flat-boats from northern Kentucky to New Orleans. In 1811 he was at new Madrid, Mo., on one of his trips, when the famous earthquake of that year took place; he ever afterward referred to his experience at that time as of the most peculiar and interesting of his life. His widow died in 1866, in the seventy-sixth year of her age. J. W. Powell was the eighth of a family of nine children. He remained home until 1847, when he went to Mississippi; he settled at Hernando, DeSoto County, where he went into the livery business, and also dealt in mules and horses. In the fall of 1849 he rented out his livery property to N. B. Forrest, afterward the noted Confederate general, and went to California, by way of the isthmus, where he remained eighteen months, and was generally successful. He returned, via the Nicaragua route, Central America, to Mississippi, and re-engaged in the livery business. In 1853 he came to Hickman, where he has since been engaged in business. In 1856 he began merchandising under the firm name of Rhodes & Powell, and continued until 1861, when, on account of the war, the firm retired. In 1870 he opened again in the general merchandise and produce business, and is now the oldest merchant in the place. In connection with his brother he is also running a flouring-mill, under the firm name of Powell & Bro., and is doing a good business. He also has a large farm, and is engaged in stock dealing quite extensively. Mr. Powell was married, in 1853, to Miss Editha J. Douglass of Taylor County, Ky. The result of this union was seven children, four of whom are now living: Martha E., wife of C. M. Adams; Cora Alice, wife of J. C. Wearne; Luella and William D. This lady died in 1869, aged thirty-eight years. Subject was next married in August, 1872, to Miss Elizabeth Moffat, who died in 1873, aged thirty-nine years. Mr. Powell's third marriage in July, 1882, to Miss Martha E. Park, (daughter of Dr. Thomas Y. Park of Walker County, Ga.), by whom he has two sons: Ernest Park and Max West. Mr. Powell and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity.

RICHARD C. PRATHER, Fulton County, was born December 25, 1818, in Jefferson County, Ky., where he was reared and resided until 1840, when he settled on the place where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky. His father, Thomas Prather, a soldier with Jackson at New Orleans, was born in 1795, in Jefferson County, Ky., where he died in 1843. He was the son of Capt. Basil Prather, a Revolutionary soldier of Morgan's command and a native of Maryland. He was among the first settlers in Kentucky.

T. A. PRATHER, Fulton County, was born in October, 1844, in Jefferson County, Ky. His parents, R. C. and M. J. (Givens) Prather, are Kentuckians also, and reside in Fulton County. They reared a family of seven children, subject being the second child, and are esteemed among the prominent and well-to-do citizens of Jordan Precinct. T. A. Prather remained with his parents until he was twenty-five years of age, working in the summer on the farm, and going to school in the winter. He possesses good business qualifications, which, coupled with industry, have enabled him to acquire sufficient means to live comfortably. He owns a good farm in Jordan Precinct, and also a tract of fertile land in Obion County, Tenn. He purchased his present home farm in Hickman Precinct in 1882. He was married in October, 1868, to Lucy C. Cross, of Obion County, Tenn., by whom he has one child, Sallie C. Mrs. Prather died in August, 1872, aged twenty-four years. He was next married, in 1880, to Miss Mary McDaniel of Fulton County, Ky. To this union have been born two children: Richard and Thomas. In politics Mr. Prather is a Democrat. Mrs. Prather is a member of the Christian Church.

C. L. RANDLE, Fulton County, was born September 13, 1829, in Stewart County, Tenn., and is a son of William and Lucinda (Edwards) Randle, natives of Tennessee. The father was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died in 1869, at the age of sixty-four; his widow is living with her son at Rock Mills, Ala. C. L. Randle is the eldest of nine children; he remained on his father's farm until he was sixteen, when he engaged with Plummer & Co., of Nashville, Tenn., as clerk, for his board and clothes. After remaining with them for eleven months he was admitted to a partnership, which position he occupied for two years. He then went into partnership with Thomas Ross, remained with him for three years, studied law in the meantime, and attended two sessions of the Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tenn.; he was admitted to practice by William Harris and J. O. W. Totton, judges of the supreme court, in 1856. In January, 1857, he came to Hickman, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession with great success. He has served as city attorney and city clerk. At the beginning of the war he entered the Confederate Army, in Company E, First Kentucky Regiment, served a year in Virginia, after which he came west and entered the cavalry service, being commissioned captain of Company A, Seventh Kentucky, acting as assistant-adjutant general in Lyon's brigade. He was wounded at the battle of Tishomingo Creek, and was captured by Wilson's cavalry April 1, 1865. At the close of the war he returned to Hickman, and resumed his profession. In 1868 he was elected commonwealth's attorney for the First Judicial District and served one term. Mr. Randle was married February 14, 1868, to Miss Maggie Mitchell, of Tennessee, by whom he has had five children, four of whom are living: William M., Robert E., Findley M. and Kate M. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Royal Templars of Temperance, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr. Randle was assistant elector for the State at large on the ticket supporting Stephen A. Douglas, and did good work in the campaign. He is a Democrat in politics.

CAPT. WILLIAM P. REED was born June 4, 1838, on the place where he now resides, in Fulton County, Ky. He is a son of Archibald Reed, a native of Jessamine County, Ky., who removed to Fulton County in 1828, where he died in 1873, at the age of sixty-one years. Archibald married Mary Hawkins, also of Jessamine County, and this union was blessed with the following children: Elizabeth A. (Burnett), Rosa E. (Roper), John H., Mary (Bard), Catherine, Thomas J., Sarah (Carpenter), subject, Isabelle (Pewitt) and Martha H. (Noonan). Capt. Reed was married December 17, 1868, to Miss Mary E., daughter of J. B. and Margaret (Brown) Alexander, of Fulton County (born September 25, 1849, and died May 17, 1875), and from this marriage sprang Katie E. On February 7, 1883, he married Miss Mary A., daughter of John M. and Mary E. (Turner) Milner, of Hickman County, and to them has been born William C., May 6, 1884. Subject is a successful farmer owning 210 acres of productive land. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and in politics adheres to the tenets of the old line Whigs.

M. W. RICHARDSON was born March 20, 1840, in Fulton County, Ky., and was a son of Samuel S. and Catherine (George) Richardson, natives of Kentucky. The father came to the Purchase in 1828, and, settling in Hickman County, engaged in land speculating and farming. M. W. was reared on a farm. His father died when he was quite young, but he was brought up by his mother, who is still living at the advanced age of seventy-five years. He began life for himself in 1856, as a clerk in Milburn. At the end of a year he engaged in business for himself at that point, and remained there until 1883, first running a grocery and dry goods store, and subsequently a harness shop. In February of that year he came to Fulton, where he has since been engaged in the latter business. He also handles a stock of buggies and carriages. He was married August 29, 1860, to Miss Mary Sanford, of Ballard County, Ky., and a daughter of Daniel Sanford, a native of Kentucky, and of Irish origin. The result of this marriage has been six children, viz.: Iona C., Minor W., Kittie, George P. (deceased), Boone S. and Marion E. Mr. Richardson is a member of the Christian Church, his wife of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Masonic order, and of the K. of H., and has been a member of the Fulton village board.

JAMES R. ROACH was born in Wilson County, Tenn., December 14, 1835. He is a son of James O. and Betsey (Barton) Roach, both natives of Tennessee. Subject's paternal grandfather was Bryant Roach, was a native of North Carolina, but emigrated to Tennessee in an early day, and died in Marshall County, Ky., in 1847. Subject's father was a farmer and gunsmith; was a resident of Obion County, Tenn., but died December 4, 1884, at the residence of his son, James R., aged seventy-eight years and a few days. The mother died September 8, 1878, aged seventy years, seven months and seventeen days. James R. is the only child; he remained at home until 1868, farming the place and looking after his parents' interests. He was married December 4, 1862, to Ladoska, daughter of John and Anna Wheeler, of Virginia. To this union was born one child, Charley. Mrs. Roach died in January, 1868, aged thirty-two years. Mr. Roach was next married in December, 1868, to Sarah C., daughter of R. and Mary Jane (Geer) Kenner. By this second marriage Mr. Roach has two children, Neal and Oscar. Mr. Roach moved to his present place of residence in 1869, at that time there being but little improvement on the farm. He now has a well tilled farm of 160 acres. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, and is an old-line Whig. Mrs. Roach is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

R. A. ROBINSON, Fulton County, was born in Columbus, Ky., July 28, 1850, and is the eldest of four children born to Smith and Edna (Merryweather) Robinson, natives of Kentucky, and of Irish and English descent, respectively. The father came to Hickman County about 1832. He was a farmer and speculator, and died here in 1865; the mother died about 1859. R.A. Robinson's education was received at the common schools of Columbus and at Clinton College, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1869. After quitting school he clerked in a drug store at Clinton two years, and then formed a partnership with Dr. James A. Henderson, under the firm name of Henderson & Robinson. This firm remained in operation for three years, and then Mr. Robinson continued the business for himself until 1881, when he moved to Fulton. At this point he has continued the drug business with success, and at present has two stores. He was married in January, 1881, to Miss Gertrude Binford, daughter of Rob and Sarah (White) Binford, natives of Fulton County. This union has resulted in the birth of two children, Moss and James M. Mrs. Robinson is a member of the Baptist Church.

JOHN W. ROGERS, Fulton County, was born December 22, 1840, in Weakley County, near Dresden, Tenn. His father, John Rogers, was a native of North Carolina, from which State he moved with his parents about the year 1813 or 1814. He was a farmer and died in Texas in 1852, aged fifty-seven years. The mother of subject, Patience (Tansel) Rogers, was born in North Carolina also, and departed this life in Texas in 1882, at the age of seventy-six years. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom subject is the tenth child and the youngest living. Subject spent his youth and early manhood at the old homestead, looking after his mother's welfare, and remaining with her until twenty-eight years of age. In 1876 he came to Hickman, and, in partnership with A. M. DeBow, opened a general grocery store. He afterward bought his partner's interest and is conducting the business at the present time. During the war between North and South he served in the Seventh Confederate Regiment, Texas Volunteer Infantry; he received a wound at the battle of Fort Donelson, which compelled him to remain out of active service for a period of two years. At the end of that time he again entered the army, joining Forrest's cavalry, with which he served until the close of the war. He participated in the battles of Fort Pillow, Hurricane Creek, Harrisburg, Nashville, and a number of other engagements. At the close of the war, he went to Texas, where he remained until 1869, the date of his arrival at Hickman. He was married in 1871 to Miss Lou M., daughter of N. N. and Mary Cowgill. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers are the parents of four children, Alexine Tansel, Nannie, John Nathaniel and Louisa W. Mr. Rogers is an active member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of H. Mrs. Rogers belongs to the Episcopal Church of Hickman.

RICHARD D. ROPER was born July 28, 1852, in Fulton County, Ky., where he has always resided. He is the son of John Roper, who was born in 1817, in Woodford County, Ky., removed to Fulton County in 1827, where he died in 1860. He was the son of Joseph Roper, of Virginia, who died in 1836. Subject's mother is Nancy D., daughter of Benjamin and Nannie (Vincent) Easley, of this place. To herself and husband were born subject, Cornelia E. (Thomas) and John W. The family enjoyed the benefits of good schools, and are readers of good books and papers. Our subject is a farmer by profession, and is engaged successfully in cultivating the home farm. His mother is a member of the Methodist Church.

WILLIAM T. ROPER was born February 19, 1845, on the place where he now resides in Fulton County, Ky. His father, William H. Roper, a native of Woodford County, Ky., was born in 1823 and died in 1876. For many years he was sheriff of this county. He was twice married; first to Sarah J. Kyle, of Fulton, to whom were born Lucy A. (Bradley), subject, Joseph H., Mary V. (Treas), Albert M. and Alonzo S. As a result of his second marriage, Sarah N. and Emma E. were born. On February 20, 1866, subject was married to Miss Martha A., daughter of Salem T. and Bethena (Dowdy) McClellan, of Fulton County, and to them have been born Sarah J., William H., Salem T., Joseph A., Effie I., Mary E., George M., James E. and Robert C. Mr. Roper is a successful farmer, and is reputed to be one of the most extensive wheat raisers in the county. He is possessed of 370 acres of superior land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and his wife is a Methodist.

LEWIS ROPER was born March 25, 1824, in Woodford County, Ky., and was brought by his parents in 1828 to Fulton County, where he has since resided. His father, Joseph Roper, was born in the vicinity of Richmond, Va., and died about 1836, at the age of sixty-six years. Joseph was twice married, and his union with his first wife resulted in the birth of Martha (Polsegrove.) He next married Mildred Shouse, of Woodford County, Ky., and from this union sprang Clemency (Scearce), Dutoy, Samuel H., Joseph, Andrew J., John, Elam, William H., subject, Edward, Lucretia (McGehee), Lucy A. (McGehee), and Henrietta (Thompson). On February 8, 1844, subject married Miss Rosella M., daughter of Archibald and Mary (Hawkins) Reed, of Fulton County, and to them have been born Joseph A., John C., Mary L. (Lawson), Lucy C. (deceased,) Sarah E. (deceased), Lewis (deceased), Anabell (deceased), Martin A. (deceased), Anna (deceased), Rosetta (deceased) and William R. Mrs. Lawson lives with her parents and has one son, John C. Mr. Roper is a farmer, owning 160 acres of fine land. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and is indentified with the Democrats.

EPHRAIM ROWE, Fulton County, was born January 29, 1848, in Kent, England. He is the fourth of six children—two boys and four girls—all living, born to Charles and Mary Ann (Burton) Rowe. The father was a miller by trade, and came to the United States about the year 1851 and settled in York State. Thence moved to Hamilton County, Ohio, where he engaged in the milling business. In 1860 he moved to Newburgh, Ind., and engaged in milling. In 1861 he went to Booneville, Ind., where he has since lived and is now eighty-two years old; his wife is also living. Ephraim Rowe enlisted in February, 1864, in Company E, One Hundred and Twentieth Indiana Infantry, under T. J. Downs captain, B. F. Barter colonel commanding. He participated in the battles of Atlanta, Franklin, Nashville and Kingston, N. C. He was discharged January, 1866, at Raleigh, N. C. He returned to his home in Indiana, and was engaged in a tobacco factory a short time; later he engaged in milling in Boonville. In 1867 he went to Paducah, where he was engaged for six weeks by James Langstaff in a mill. He then returned home. In 1869 he again went to Paducah and worked for same person as on his former trip. In 1872 he went to Caseyville, Ky., and worked at his trade until April, 1882. Thence he went to Paducah. In February, 1883, he went to New Liberty. In March, 1884, he located in Fulton, and formed a partnership with N. B. Hester in the milling business. Mr. Rowe was married to Dora Watkins of Union County, Ky., in December, 1876. Her parents died when she was quite young. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

H. M. SAUNDERS was born March 18, 1851, in Bowling Green, Ky., and is the sixth of eight children born to Jesse and Emerine V. (Feland) Saunders, natives of Barren and Warren Counties, Ky., respectively, of English, Irish and German origin. Subject's grandfather, John Saunders, who married a Miss Smydth, was reared in Virginia, and was a farmer. Subject's grandfather, James Feland, who married a Miss Mary Stall, was born and reared in North Carolina; he was a farmer. H. M. Saunders was reared principally on a farm; he was but two years old when his mother died, and but nine when his father died. He lived with his step-mother until he was sixteen years old, when he engaged in teaching in Fulton County. He continued to teach and attend school till he was twenty-five years old. After that he engaged as salesman in Fulton, Hickman and at Martin, Tenn. In 1880 he embarked in the newspaper business and established the Martin Exchange. This not being profitable he moved to Fulton and changed the name of the paper to Index. In January, 1883, he commenced publishing the Baptist Gleaner, edited by Revs. Moody and Hall. Mr. Saunders was married February 14, 1883, to Miss Kate Compton of Madisonville, Ky., a daughter of Judge James and Mary (Hicklin) Compton. To this union was born one child, Avil L. Mr. S. is a member of the Christian Church and a Democrat.

ALBERT H. SCEARCE is a native of Fulton County, and was born November 10, 1828, at the place of his present residence, which has always been his home. His father, Lewis Scearce, was born in Woodford County, Ky., came to Fulton County in 1828, where he died in 1881. He was the son of Robert of Virginia, a soldier in the war of 1812. Lewis' wife, Clemency, daughter of Joseph Roper, died in 1846. Their children are: Mary M. (Johnson), subject, Catherine E. (Bransford), Susan (McClellan), Sarah A. (married to Atwell, Royster and McGehee), Victoria (Rhodes), Wellington and Robert H. January 15, 1852, subject was married to Miss Martha J. Champion, of Hickman County, Ky. She was born in 1826 and died in 1865. Their children are Robert L., Frances V. (deceased), Nora (Mayes), William C. and Albert S. Mr. Scearce was next married in 1868, to Miss Alley K. Dickens, of Hickman County, and to them have been born Mack D., Mary E., Joseph, Mattie and Richard. Subject is extensively engaged in general trading and dealing in produce. He is a farmer, owning 1,000 acres of valuable land in fine condition. In politics he is a Democrat.

REV. F. M. SHARP, Fulton County, was born June 14, 1844, in Christian County, Ky., and is the fourth of seven children born to Rev. John N. and Mary A. (Usher) Sharp, of Muhlenburgh County, Ky. The father died when subject was quite young, and the latter early lent his helping hand to the support of the family. After his mother's death in 1865, he attended Bethel College (Russellville, Ky.), for fifteen months. Mr. Sharp commenced preaching when eighteen years old In 1866 he was ordained to preach and has devoted thereto more or less of the time ever since. In 1882 he came to Fulton and took charge of the church here. He was married in October, 1870, to Miss Linda K. Humphrey, a daughter of J. T. and Sarah (Drake) Humphrey, natives of Muhlenburg County, Ky. Five children have blessed this union: Mary A., Gardner P., Maggie V., Nelson T. and Jennie M.

M. B. SHAW, Fulton County, was born May 1, 1843, in Fulton County, and is a son of John and Eliza (Moody) Shaw, the father a native of Virginia, and the mother a native of Kentucky. His ancestors on father's side were of Scotch descent, mother's side English descent, and among the earliest pioneers of Kentucky, having settled in Shelby County, when that part of the State was one of the outskirts of civilization. The father of our subject explored that part of Kentucky bordering on the Mississippi River, in 1826, and located at Mills Point, now Hickman, some time during 1828. He served under Gen. Harrison in the Indian war of 1811, and gained some distinction as a scout in that campaign. He followed farming and was also a merchant in Hickman during the early days of its history. He was called to fill several official positions before the division of Hickman and Fulton Counties, and represented the county in 1845, in the State legislature. He died in 1861, aged seventy years. The mother died in 1852, at the age of forty years. They were the parents of nine children, subject being the fourth child. W. B. Shaw commenced life for himself as a farmer and trader, and by successful management found himself in possession of sufficient means to open a business house, which he did in 1882, taking in as a partner J. K. Muste. They opened a general grocery store, which is now one of the largest houses of its kind in the city, representing a capital of $10,000, and doing an annual business of $50,000. Mr. Shaw was married in February, 1873, to Miss Susie Simmons, of Fulton County. Mrs. Shaw died in 1875, aged nineteen years. He was next married, in 1877, to Mrs. Fannie B. Robinson, daughter of Thomas Buck of Hickman; to this union have been born two children: Mit and Len. Mr. Shaw is a member of the I. O. O. F., Masonic and K. of H. Lodges. Mrs. Shaw is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

ANDREW SHUCK, one of the first and well known settlers of Fulton County, was born in Henry County, Ky., June 12, 1801. His father, Andrew Shuck, was of German descent, and died prior to 1830, aged about fifty-five years. The mother, Mary Ann (Young) Shuck, died in Fulton County, about 1850, at the age of seventy years. They were the parents of nine children, subject being the fourth child, and the only one living. Subject passed his youth and early manhood on his father's farm, where he acquired that rugged vitality which enabled him to successfully encounter the hardship of life in after years. At the age of twenty-eight he came to Fulton County, settling where he now lives, six miles east of Hickman. He first purchased 160 acres of wood land, out of which he cleared a fine farm, and from time to time added to his original purchase until he now owns a tract of 540 acres. In August, 1828, he was married to Cynthia, daughter of John B. and Mary Clark, of Fulton County. Eleven children were born to this union, only one of whom is living, Margaret, wife of W. M. Bacon. Mrs. Shuck died August 17, 1877, aged seventy-two years. Mr. Shuck has lived a quiet and useful life, never having sought or desired political distinction. He votes the Democratic ticket. W. M. Bacon, son-in-law of the preceding, was born February 26, 1837, in Owen County, Ky., and is the fifth child of Nathaniel M. and Linia (Maddox) Bacon, both natives of Kentucky. The father was county and circuit clerk of Owen County from the time he was twenty-one until his death in 1846. The mother is still living in Obion County, Tenn. Subject commenced life for himself as a carriage trimmer in Frankfort, Ky., which trade he followed for five years and then engaged in farming, his present occupation. He was married December 14, 1865, to Margaret E. Shuck, daughter of Andrew and Cynthia Shuck. Mr. and Mrs. Bacon are the parents of six children, named as follows: Fannie Lee (deceased), Maggie (deceased), Willie, Lemuel, Charles and Andrew C. W. M. Bacon is a member of the K. of H. and votes the Democratic ticket.

CAPT. WILLIAM A. SHUCK was born April 16, 1839, in Shelby County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1861 entered the Buckner Guards, as a private, and after a service of one year was breveted second lieutenant in the Eighth Kentucky Cavalry, and in 1862 was promoted to a captaincy in Morgan's command. He was captured with his chief on his famous raid through Ohio, and remained a prisoner of war at Johnson's Island until the termination of hostilities. His father, John Y. Shuck, was also a native of Shelby County, where he died in 1845, at the age of thirty-two years. He was the son of John Shuck, of Shelby County, one of the early settlers of the commonwealth. Subject's mother, Martha F., daughter of David and Nancy (Barbee) Lyle, of Shelby County, died in 1868, aged forty-nine years. To her and husband were born subject and Elizabeth P. (Mason). Subject was favored with a good English education and is still an extensive reader. On March 1, 1870, he was married to Lida, daughter of B. J. Kenneday, of Oxford, Miss. (died November 15, 1870). He was next married May 12, 1876, to Miss Bertha, daughter of William L. and Mary (Rickman) Alexander, of Fulton County, and to them have been born Mary L., Lyle Y. and Fannie H. Capt. Shuck is a farmer, having 100 acres of good land. He is a member in good standing in the K. of H., and in politics is a Democrat.

J. H. SIMMONS, Fulton County, was born in Davidson County, Tenn., March 5, 1827, and is the eldest of twelve children of Ephraim and Susan (Gower) Simmons, both natives of Tennessee. The father was a farmer and died in 1866; the mother died in 1882. Subject was reared on a farm and received a good practical education, and at the age of eighteen years, engaged as a clerk with a firm at Sycamore Mills, then went to Nashville, where he remained five or six years. He then went to Rutherford County, Tenn., and started a store of his own at the town of Smyrna, where he conducted a business for a period of seven years, when he sold out and came to Fulton County, Ky., locating about six miles from Hickman. He purchased his present farm in 1869, and is now the owner of 360 acres of fine land, the greater part of which has been brought to a high state of cultivation. In 1855 he married Miss S. C. Fitzhugh, of Tennessee. This union has been blessed with two children, one of whom is dead; the one living, Leonard D., is a young man of fine business qualifications. Mr. Simmons is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and belongs to the Christian Church. His wife is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

J. P. SMITH, Fulton County, was born December 11, 1842, in Mississippi, and is the eldest child of William and Nancy (Craig) Smith, natives of North Carolina and Tennessee respectively. The early life of our subject was spent on a farm. His mother dying when he was quite young, he made his home with his grandparents until the age of eighteen. He then enlisted in Company F, of the Second Mississippi Infantry, under Col. W. C. Faulkner. Among the battles in which he participated were the first and second battles of Bull Run, Sharpsburg, Seven Pines and Gettysburg. At the latter battle he was taken prisoner and sent to Fort Delaware, where he was confined until the close of the war. He was paroled in May, 1865, and returned to Mississippi, where he clerked for two years, and subsequently followed farming for two years. In 1870 he began railroading and has followed it ever since. He worked first as a bridge carpenter, next as conductor of construction train, and in 1880 was appointed roadmaster on the Illinois Central Railroad, a position which he has continued to hold. In April, 1867, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Jennie Newland, of Hardiman County, Tenn. Eight children have blessed this union, of whom six are living: Eddie L. Pearl, Lorrymore, Beauty, George P. and Tusner. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Christian Church. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., K. of H., A. O. U. W. and K. of P. fraternities.

ED. STARKS, Fulton County, was born in Marshall County, Ky., December 26, 1845. His grandfather, Edmund Curd, moved to the Purchase and located at Wadesborough, where he had charge of the land office. His grandfather, Ruben Starks, moved from Logan County, Ky., and located near Wadesborough; the grandfathers were among the first settlers in this country. Ed. Starks' early life was spent on the farm; being about sixteen years old when the civil war broke out, he entered the service, though young, and was soon commissioned as commissary of the Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry, with the rank of first lieutenant. After leaving the service he cast his lot politically with the Democrats, and always is a strong supporter of the nominee of his party, and highly favors organization from the lowest to the highest offices. In 1865 he located at Murray, Calloway Co., Ky., where he was married to Miss Belle Jones, on the 12th day of October of that year. He filled the office of police judge and mayor of that place for several years, and was engaged in the grocery and hardware business while there; when Fulton was but a small station he decided to cast his lot with the few citizens who were here and moved with his family in the fall of 1873. He was in the hardware business for several years, and was very successful. In 1884 he was appointed mayor and police judge of the city, a position that he has held continuously ever since. His present term will expire in May, 1886. He has been a great friend to the town, and has just cause to be, as the citizens have certainly stood by him in every effort to advance his own interest or that of the town.

S. A. D. STEELE, Fulton County, was born January 16, 1821, in Caldwell County, Ky. He is the first of three children, two boys and one girl, born to John and Mary (Downey) Steele. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and of English descent; his mother of Dutch descent. The grandparents were Jesse Steele and Samuel Downey. The former was a soldier in the Revolution; John Steele served under Gen. Harrison in the war of 1812. Grandfather Downey was in the Indian wars in Kentucky under Boone, and was among the very early settlers of this State. Subject's mother died when he was about thirteen; his father, in 1851, aged seventy-eight. Subject was married June 14, 1842, to Miss Elizabeth Green, of Mobile, Ala., daughter of John and Elizabeth Green. Ten children blessed this union, viz.: Mary E., deceased; Sarah J., wife of T. B. Burnett; T. P.; Louisa A., deceased; William; A. L.; Catherine R., deceased; Emily C.; Clara V., deceased, and Robert E. L. deceased. Mrs. Steele died October, 1868, aged forty-eight, a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Steele was next married October 14, 1875, to Miss Lou Warren, of Clark County, Miss., and daughter of Abel and Huldah A. (Spurlin) Warren. The father was a native of Kentucky; the mother of Alabama. Six children have resulted from this marriage: Gertrude, Jennie, Samuel A. D., Anna, Addie and an infant unnamed; the last three are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Steele are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; he is a local preacher, was licensed in 1857, and ordained deacon, in 1866, by Bishop Wightmon, and has been preaching ever since. In 1843 subject was licensed to practice law in Choctaw County, Miss., and has since followed his profession. He was a soldier in the late war, having enlisted in the Confederate Army in the summer of 1863, going out as captain in Col. Perrin's Mississippi cavalry regiment. Among the battles in which he participated might be mentioned Darby House, New Hope Church, Atlanta, Macon, Columbus and Montgomery, where he was sent to the hospital and remained from July to September. He obtained leave of absence and came home, where he remained until January, 1865. He then returned to camp at Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he remained until the surrender. He then returned home, soon after which he was elected, against three other candidates, to the legislature under the military government, and took part in the canvass against the adoption of the new constitution in 1868–69. In 1871 he was elected State senator, which office he held for four years. He then came to Clinton, Ky., where he was appointed attorney for the C., St. L. & N. O. and M. & O. Railways. In this capacity he served until 1876, since which time he has been practicing his profession. He moved to Fulton iu 1875, where he has remained ever since. Since the war he has continued to take an active part in politics. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and has held all of the offices in the lodge.

J. T. STEPHENS, postmaster of Hickman, was born in Marshall County, Ky., July 6, 1851, and is the second child and eldest son of J. D. Stephens. His mother's maiden name was Nancy Bailey; she was born near Princeton, Ky. The father of subject followed the occupation of pilot on the Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers for many years, and is still living at Alton, Ill. J. T. Stephens commenced life as a pilot also, making trips with his father, and long before attaining his majority, he had acquired the reputation of being a very skillful riverman. He continued as pilot until the year 1883, at which time, at the earnest solicitations of his numerous friends, he was induced to apply for the position of postmaster at Hickman. The struggle for the position was hotly contested, but Mr. Stephens' personal popularity proved a strong factor in his favor, and led to his securing the position, which he now fills with satisfaction to all. He was married in 1879 to Miss Hattie Jackson, daughter of W. H. Jackson, of Troy, Obion Co., Tenn. He is a Republican in politics, and a strong advocate of the temperance cause, being identified with the Royal Templars of Temperance. Mrs. Stephens is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

JOHN A. STUBBS was born September 12, 1841, in Fulton County, Ky. His father, Moses Stubbs, was a native of Tennessee, but came to this part of the Purchase in an early day, and can be classed with the pioneers of Fulton. Dennis Stubbs, subject's grandfather, immigrated to the county when it contained but a few sparse settlements, and located about ten miles southeast of Hickman, on the Dresden Road, where he died about 1855 or 1860. The father of subject resided upon the same farm until his death in 1863. The mother is still living in the suburbs of Hickman. Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs reared a family of eight children, named as follows: William, deceased; James, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; John A., subject; Catherine, deceased; Poter F., Berry and Julia. John A. lived at the paternal home until 1862, when he enlisted in Company I, Seventh Confederate Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Western campaign for three years, at the end of which time he joined Forrest's cavalry, with which he remained until taken prisoner at Selma in 1865. After a short imprisonment he was paroled, and, coming back to Fulton County, engaged in farming on the old homestead, which is his present place of residence. He was united in marriage in April, 1867, with Mary, daughter of Hinton and Sarah Parham, by whom he had one child, Mary. Mrs. Stubbs died in March, 1866, aged twenty-four years, and Mr. Stubbs next married, in 1873, Penny, daughter of Hilman King, of North Carolina. To this marriage have been born three children, John O., Katie and Ada. In politics Mr. Stubbs is a Democrat.

W. P. TAYLOR, of Fulton County, was born February 3, 1846, in Graves County, Ky. He is the son of William and Rebecca (Roberts) Taylor. The father was born in Kentucky; he died in February, 1857, aged fifty-six. He was a farmer; also a merchant of Dukedom, Graves County, Ky. The mother is a native of Virginia. Our subject was brought up on his father's farm, where he remained until the age of twenty, at which time he commenced trading and farming. In 1873 he came to Fulton, Ky., and engaged in the saw-mill business, later in the leather and saddlery business, and at present owns a tannery at Fulton. He was elected county clerk in August, 1882, and assumed the duties of this office September 4, of the same year, which position he has since held. Mr. Taylor was married January 2, 1867, to Millie A. Wilson, of Weakley County, Tenn., by whom he has two children living: Mattie L. and Arthur J.; and one dead, Anna L. Mr. Taylor is a member of the Masonic order, I. O. O. F., and K. of H. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

G. B. THRELKELD, of Fulton County, was born December 9, 1842, in Owen County, Ky., and is the only child of George and Nanz. Threlkeld, both natives of Kentucky. The father was a farmer and died when subject was in his infancy. The mother is still living in Obion County, Tenn. Subject remained with his mother until nineteen years of age, when he entered the Confederate Army, enlisting in the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry, under command of Col. Giltner. His regiment served in southwest Virginia and the eastern campaigns, and participated in a number of well-fought battles. He served under Corps Commanders Longstreet, Breckinridge, Buckner and Morgan, and was taken prisoner at Cynthiana, Ky., in 1863; was taken to Rock Island, Ill., where he remained nine months, at the end of which time he was paroled and came home. He came to Fulton County in 1867, and purchased a farm six miles east of Hickman, on which he resided three years, when he bought another place in the same precinct; he purchased his present home farm of 220 acres in 1881. He was married February 1, 1866, to Lavina, daughter of L. D. and Elizabeth Alexander. She had two sons: L. D., and Coe Threlkeld. Two years after her death he married Addie Maddox (in December, 1869,) who had two children, but one of whom, G. B. Threlkeld, is living. He was married a third time to M. B. Hagan, of Fulton County, December 10, 1879. She has three children: Lena Rivers, H. Elmer and Elizabeth Threlkeld. Mr. T., wife and eldest son, L. D., are members of the Baptist Church.

B. D. THOMASON, Fulton County, was born in Christian Co., Ky., December 3, 1834. His father, George Thomason, was a native of Virginia, and came to Hickman from Christian County in 1864; he died two years later at the age of fifty-eight. The paternal grandfather of subject was Arnold Thomason, also a native of Virginia, which State he left in an early day, coming to Christian County, Ky., where he died in 1840. Subject's mother, Elizabeth Thomason, is still living in Hickman. She is a daughter of Newson Pace, who distinguished himself in the war of the Revolution. At the age of seventeen years, subject entered the printing office of John C. Noble of Hopkinsville, where he acquired the typographical art, and two years later went to Henderson, Ky., where he found employment in the office of the Henderson Courier. Tiring of the printing business he next commenced merchandising at the town of Beverly, Christian County, where he remained until 1858 or 1859, at which time he closed out and went to Columbus, where he opened a grocery house, which he ran until the breaking out of the civil war. At the close of the war, he came to Hickman, where he engaged as clerk for a mercantile firm, retaining that position until 1871, at which time he effected a copartnership with J. W. Corman in the hardware business. In 1878 the firm started a branch store in Malden, Mo., and Mr. Thomason went there in charge of the same, remaining until June, 1884, at which time he came back to Hickman, where he now resides. He was married, in 1857, to Harriet H., daughter of Carter L. and Adaline Bradshaw, the father a native of Virginia, and the mother of Mercer County, Ky. Mr. Thomason is an active member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of H. Mrs. Thomason is a member of the Christian Church.

JAMES P. TYLER, Fulton County, was born March 18, 1837, in Fulton County, Ky., and is the seventh of nine children born to James P. and Martha (Willis) Tyler, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. The father came to Fulton County, 1825, where he died in 1852 aged fifty-two years. After his father's death, James P. Tyler began life for himself as a farm hand at $75 per year. In 1855 he came to Hickman, where he began clerking and remained there until 1860, when he turned his attention to farming. In May, 1861, he enlisted in Lauderdale's Guards. At the battle of Shiloh he was promoted to second lieutenant. In 1862 he re-enlisted in the Fifth Tennessee Regiment, and was elected second lieutenant. Among the battles in which he participated were Perryville, Missionary Ridge, Chickamauga, Murfreesboro, Jonesboro and Franklin. At the last battle he was wounded in the shoulder. He was subsequently promoted to captain and served under Gen. Cheatham until Gen. Johnston's surrender to Sherman, when he was paroled. He returned to Hickman and began clerking in a dry goods store. At the end of one year he went to Union City, where he engaged in the dry goods business for five years; in 1873 he came to Fulton and opened a grocery store, in which business he is still engaged with considerable success. Mr. Tyler was married in November, 1867, to Miss Puss Lawson, a daughter of Horace and Tabitha (Alexander) Lawson. This lady died in August, 1868, and he was next married to Miss Catherine Alexander, a daughter of Dr. J. M. and Mary (Mott) Alexander, natives of Sumner County, Tenn., and Jessamine County, Ky., respectively. The result of this marriage has been four children, viz.: John, Mary B., Alice M. and James M. Mr. Tyler and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the K. of H. He has served as village trustee several terms, is village treasurer, and one of the directors of the Bank of Fulton.

RICHARD T. TYLER, Hickman, was born September 28, 1850, in Fulton County, Ky., and is a son of Austin S., and Susan A. (Ashburn) Tyler, both natives of Kentucky. The father was a farmer and died in 1872, aged seventy-one years. The mother is still living in Hickman. The father was one of the earliest pioneers, and served as the first sheriff of the county, besides serving in other official capacities, to-wit: county assessor, surveyor, magistrate, and at the time of his death was superintendent of the county schools. Richard Tyler is the youngest of five children, and spent the first twenty years of his life on his father's farm, and graduated at the Kentucky Military Institute June 8, 1871. He then began reading law under the preceptorship of his brother, H. A. Tyler, and was admitted to the bar in 1872. He succeeded his father as school commissioner and served in that capacity for a period of seven years. He has been in the active practice of his profession since 1878 and is one of the leading attorneys, at the present time being a member of the firm of H. A. & R. T. Tyler, and is a partner in the Hickman Lumber and Manufacturing Company, which was established in 1880, and which is owned at the present time by Tyler Bros. & J. D. Millard, and is the largest manufacturing institution in the Purchase district, representing a yearly business of $500,000, employing about 125 men; manufactures furniture, also deals in rough and dressed lumber. Their building was erected at a cost of $12,000, and they employ several other mills in different parts of the country. The officers of the company are: President, R. T. Tyler; foreman, J. B. Millard; secretary and treasurer, R. E. Millet. Mr. Tyler was married in 1879 to Miss Sallie S., daughter of Peter W. and Lucy A. Mott, by whom he had one son, Allison M. Mrs. Tyler died in 1883 at the age of twenty-six. Mr. Tyler is a member of the K. of H., and a Democrat.

A. V. UNDERWOOD was born in Weakley County, Tenn., in 1838. His father, Jerry Underwood, was a farmer and died in 1862, aged about sixty years. His mother, Mary (Arnold) Underwood, died in 1867, at about the same age as her husband. They were the parents of fifteen children, ten of whom are still living. A. V. Underwood commenced life for himself at the age of twenty-one years, following the vocation of a farmer in his native county and State, remaining there until his removal to Fulton County, some time prior to 1867. He bought his present place of seventy-two acres three miles south of Hickman in 1869, and from a dense forest has made it one of the finest little farms in the southern part of the precinct. He was married in 1858 to Melissa, daughter of Hugh and Eliza (Sheridan) Moore of Tennessee. In politics Mr. Underwood votes with the Democratic party.

DR. FRANCIS M. USHER, a native of Christian County, Ky, was born July 30, 1836, and was reared to man's estate at the place of his birth, where he remained until 1860, when he removed to Moscow, in Hickman County. His father, Dr. James H. Usher, was born in Virginia in 1806, came to Kentucky in youth and is still living. He is the son of David Usher, a Virginian. Dr. James H., married Lucinda Compton of Washington County, Ky. She was born in 1810, and died in 1876. Their children are —Dr. James H., Edmund C., William D., subject, Sarah R. (Proctor), America V. (Nance), Mary R., Ophelia (Northington), Josephine H. (Nance), George W., Emma E. (Gaines) and Marietta (Scott). Dr. Usher was married December 24, 1868, to Miss Mary L., daughter of Rev. N. N. Cowgill of Fulton County, and this union was blessed with the birth of one son, Frank, after which, Mrs. Usher died in 1870. October 28, 1874, subject was next married to Miss Julia A., daughter of Charles and Sallie (Thomason) Carpenter of Fulton County, and to them Mary L. has been born. In 1856 subject commenced the study of medicine with Dr. J. C. Whitlock of Newstead, Ky., with whom he remained three years. He attended the University of Pennsylvania in 1857 and graduated in 1859. Dr. Usher practiced his profession six years at Moscow, two years at Hopkinsville, and in 1868 settled at his present place in Fulton County, where he is engaged in an extensive and successful practice. He also engaged in farming, owning 500 acres of valuable land. Dr. Usher is a member of the Masonic fraternity and a Democrat.

GEORGE WARREN, editor and proprietor of the Hickman Courier, was born in Murfreesborough, Tenn., May 3, 1840. He is the youngest of a family of four children born to P. G. and Elizabeth (Pybass) Warren, both natives of Tennessee. William Warren, subject's grandfather, was a native of North Carolina; he left that State in an early day, emigrating to Tennessee, where he died about the year 1850. Subject's maternal grandparents were of French descent, and died when subject was in his infancy. P. G. Warren was a journalist and established one of the first papers in Murfreesborough; he was one of the original founders of the Nashville American, the leading paper in Tennessee at the present time; he died, in 1874, at the age of sixty-four years. The mother died in 1856, aged thirty-nine years. Subject received his early education in his native town, and at the age of fourteen entered Andrew College at Trenton, where he remained four years. After leaving school he entered the printing office of the old Nashville American and Nashville Gazette, where he remained for several years, working in different offices at intervals. In 1860 he came to Hickman and in company with his brother, E. K. Warren, established the Courier, of which he assumed complete control one year later. He has conducted the paper ever since that time, and is one of the oldest journalists in the Purchase. The Courier is an independent Democratic sheet, and has a very large circulation. Mr. Warren was married December 27, 1869, to Mollie, daughter of John and Mary F. (Binford) French. Two children have been born to this union: Nannie and Maggie. Mr. Warren has at different times been called to fill various official positions; he held the office of city judge, and was master commissioner for a period of four years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of H., and his wife is a member of the Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM O. WEAR, Fulton County, was born January 21, 1847, in Murray, Ky. He is the first of twelve children—nine boys and three girls—born to Archibald and Sallie (Meloan) Wear, natives of Alabama and Kentucky, respectively; the father of Scotch-Irish and English descent. William O. was reared in Murray, where he received a fair English education, and lived with his parents until he became of age. His father was a druggist. William O. engaged in the drug business for himself in Murray, when he became of age, and continued it for three or four years, when he was burned out. He then engaged in editing the Calloway News for four years. In 1882 he moved to Fulton, and engaged in the drug business, in which he still continues.

He was married April 15, 1869, to Miss Mary E. Linn, of Calloway County, a daughter of R. C. and Nancy (Irvan) Linn, natives of Kentucky: To their union were born four children: Lura B. (deceased), Sallie B., Rubie L. and Boyd. Mr. Wear and wife are members of the Christian Church; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was trustee of Murray one or two terms.

C. HUGHLETTE WILSON, attorney of Fulton County, was born in Hickman, August 24, 1858, and is a son of John A. and Jennie M. (Downing) Wilson, both natives of Kentucky, and both living in Fulton County. Mr. Wilson, Sr., has been a man of considerable prominence, having served nineteen consecutive years as county clerk, also filling the office of city collector at different times. Our subject early manifested a taste for books, which his parents encouraged by giving him the benefit of competent private instruction. He also attended the Hickman High School a number of years and acquired by diligent application to his studies an education surpassed by few of his age. At the age of fourteen he entered the county clerk's office as deputy under his father, retaining that position for a period of seven years, during which time he discharged his duties with satisfaction to all. He commenced the study of law in 1876, and later entered the law department of the Louisville University, where he remained five months, at the end of which time, he came back to Hickman and entered upon the active practice of his profession. He was admitted to the bar June 18, 1880, receiving his license from Judge William L. Jackson of Louisville. He was elected city attorney in 1881, being the last one to fill that position; was also city assessor one year, and it is said he made the only complete assessment returned in fifteen years. Starting in life a poor boy, he has already accumulated a handsome property and has a future full of promise. He votes with the Democratic party, and is a strong advocate of prohibition.

W. W. WRIGHT was born April 22, 1816, in Davidson County, Tenn. He is the third of ten children, three boys and seven girls, born to John M. and Sarah (Thompson) Wright, natives of Virginia and Tennessee respectively, and of English and Irish origin. W. W. Wright was reared on a farm. He was married October, 1838, to Louisa Collins, of Davidson County, Tenn., a daughter of Thomas and Zilpha Collins. To this union was born one child, James, now dead. Mrs. Wright died October 26, 1839, and Mr. Wright was next married to Nancy E. Plummer, of Davidson County, Tenn., on September 1, 1842. She is the daughter of Hillery C. and Elizabeth (Phillips) Plummer, natives of Virginia and Tennessee respectively, and of English origin. To this union were born twelve children: Elizabeth (now King), William B., John H. (deceased), Thomas J., Martha T. (deceased), Jully E. (deceased, was married to R. Lee); Amanda M. (Finch), Sarah J. (Drasdell), Charles M., Samuel H., Mary I. and Nancy C. Mr. and Mrs. Wright are members of the Methodist Episcopal and Baptist Churches respectively; subject is a Mason, and was formerly a member of the Grange. He moved from Davidson County to Jackson County, Ark., in 1850, but returned in one year. In 1857 he moved to where he now lives on 134 acres of land, which he has improved. Mr. Wright had one son in the Confederate Army.

JOHN A. WYATT, Fulton County, was born March 17, 1848, in Graves County, Ky. He is the only child of John A. and Mary J. (Phipps) Wyatt, natives of Graves County, Ky., and Davidson County, Tenn., respectively, and of Irish and English descent. His grandfather was Jonathan Wyatt, and on his mother's side Eldridge Phipps, who married a Miss Castleman. John A. was reared on a farm; he was born about three months after his father's death, and was six years old when his mother died. He then lived with his aunt until he was sixteen years old. His father owned 640 acres of land, twelve miles south of Mayfield. Mr. Wyatt clerked in a grocery at Hickman, and at the age of nineteen years engaged in the dry goods business at Feliciana, Graves County, for two and one half years. In 1870 he moved to Fulton, where he continued the business with the best success. He was married December 17, 1868, to Miss Bell L. Milam, of Graves County, daughter of Dr. T. R. and Sue (Janes) Milam, of English descent. Mrs. Wyatt is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Wyatt is a member of the K. of H.; he cast his first presidential vote for Horace Greeley. To Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt was born one child, now deceased.

GRAVES COUNTY.

THE ADAIR FAMILY. The Adairs are among the oldest families of Graves County. They came originally from Ireland, and settled in one of the Atlantic States a number of years before the war of the Revolution. The family originally settled in South Carolina, where James Adair, grandfather of Turner Adair, distinguished himself in the war of Independence as a member of the celebrated Marion's band. Late in life he settled in Alabama, where he died about the year 1839 or 1840. His son, John Adair, was left an orphan, when but three weeks old, by the death of his mother. He made his home with the families of his aunt and grandfather, and at an early age was apprenticed to the blacksmith trade, which he followed all his life. He was married in 1820 to Margaret Wilson, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Wilson, by whom he had thirteen children, whose names are as follows: James McConathy, Elizabeth, Jane, Turner, Martha C., Sarah A., James H., S. B., John P., Joseph B., Margaret P., Mary P. and Virginia P. In the year 1830 Mr. Adair came to Graves County, Ky., and settled in Lynnville Precinct on the place where his widow now resides. He died June 4, 1878. Turner Adair, third child of John Adair, and eldest member of the family now living, was born in 1825 in Lawrence District, S. C. He remained with his parents until twenty-two years of age, when he engaged in farming for himself, which occupation he continued until 1849, when he joined a company of young men as daring as himself, and made an overland trip to California for the purpose of engaging in mining. He participated in all the active scenes of that exciting period, and was fairly successful in his quest of fortune. He returned home in 1858, and at once resumed farming, which he still follows. Mr. Adair has never married, and at the present time lives with his mother on the old homestead.

R. T. ALBRITTON was born April 11, 1844, in Graves County. He is a son of John and Martha (Conaway) Albritton. The father was born in North Carolina; he died in 1850, aged twenty-six. The mother was born in Virginia, and now resides in Mayfield. In 1861 R. T. entered Company C, Eighth Kentucky Infantry, Confederate Army, received a commission as second lieutenant, and later was promoted to the rank of captain, which position he held to the end of the war. He participated in the battle of Fort Donelson, where he was taken prisoner and confined seven months, after which he was exchanged and returned to his regiment; he then took part in the last siege of Vicksburg, Jackson, Guntown and Harrisburg. While with Hood on his raid to Nashville, he was captured at Selma, Ala., and paroled at Columbus, Miss. At the close of the war he returned to Mayfield. In 1867 he was appointed deputy sheriff, which position he held until he was duly elected sheriff in 1870, which office he held for two terms. After retiring from this office he engaged in the manufacturing business, being identified with the woolen-mill and the flour-mill; he has also been in the commission business, handling tobacco. In the autumn of 1883 the Kentucky State Guards were organized, and he was chosen captain, which position he still holds. Mr. Albritton was married in October, 1870, to Miss Anna, daughter of Ervin Anderson, who was the first white male child born in Graves County. This union is blessed with six children, four sons and two daughters. Mr. Albritton is a member of the Christian Church, and Mrs. Albritton is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

DR. A. J. ALEXANDER was born December 23, 1855, in Hardin County, Tenn., and is a son of J. D. and Charlotte (Horton) Alexander. The father was born in North Carolina and died in February, 1878, at the age of seventy-eight. The mother was born in Williamson County, Tenn., and died in 1862, at the age of fifty-two. The doctor spent the first sixteen years of his life on his father's farm; he then entered school at Saltillo, Tenn., and remained for two years. At the age of eighteen, he commenced the study of medicine, also practiced dentistry for three years, and since the age of twenty-one has practiced medicine. The doctor is an electrical specialist in the treatment of chronic diseases only, and is prepared to give a written guarantee to all cases he treats, having added electricity to his method of treatment in 1882, and having met with unprecedented success; he removes tumors without the use of the knife, or the loss of blood, and without inflicting pain. In 1883 he came to Mayfield, where he is permanently located. He was married in 1878, to Miss Susie Watlington, of Madison County, Tenn., by whom he has one son and one daughter, viz.: Hillery and Josie.

HON. LUCIAN ANDERSON, Graves County, was born June 23, 1824, in Mayfield. He is a son of John and Nancy (Davenport) Anderson. John Anderson was born in Greenville District, S. C.; when a boy he came with his parents to Caldwell County, Ky.; in 1820 he came to this locality and laid out the town of Mayfield; he soon after was appointed county and circuit clerk; this office he held until the time of his death, which occurred November 24, 1842. Mrs. Nancy Anderson was born in Halifax County, Va.; she died January 13, 1864, aged sixty-nine. Lucian Anderson after leaving school entered his father's office; there he was employed until the death of his father; after this was in the clerk's office with his brother, until twenty years old; he then took up the study of law with his brother-in-law, R. L. Mayes, and was admitted to the bar October 30, 1845, at Hopkinsville. He then opened a law office at Mayfield and continued the practice of his profession until 1879, since which time he has retired from the business. In 1851 he was elected county attorney, but soon after resigned this office; in 1855 he was elected to the State legislature, and served one term; in 1863 he was elected to congress, and served one term; while a member of this body, he voted for the Thirteenth Amendment, abolishing slavery throughout the United States, which was adopted January 31, 1865, by the house of representatives; in 1882 he, with Mr. Beadles, organized the Bank of Mayfield, and Mr. Anderson was chosen president, which position he still holds; in 1864, he was delegated to the Republican National Convention, which renominated President Lincoln. Mr. Anderson was married October 22, 1846, to Miss Ann R., daughter of Dr. R. D. Lockridge, well and favorably known in Graves County. These parents have had nine children, five of whom are living: Robert L., a graduate of Wabash College and now practicing law in Ocala, Fla.; Herbert L., also a graduate of the same college, and now practicing law in Kansas City, Mo.; he is also United States postoffice inspector at that point; Richard M., recently a graduate of the same college, and now practicing law at Mayfield; and two daughters living at home with their parents.

JAMES ANDERSON, Graves County, was born May 10, 1839, in Coffee County, Tenn., and is the fifth of fifteen children born to John W. and Sarah (Darnell) Anderson, natives of Tennessee and of Irish and German descent. Peter and Sina Anderson and James and Elizabeth Darnell were the names of subject's grandparents. His father was a soldier in the Mexican war and was also in the Confederate Army; was a teacher from the age of eighteen until forty-four; was elected clerk of the county court of Coffee County before he returned from the Mexican war, and also was engaged in surveying for a land company. James Anderson was reared at Manchester, Tenn., and until thirteen years old, and was then taken to the country; in 1862 he removed to Paris, Ill., remained there seven years blacksmithing and in 1869 returned to middle Tennessee, where he farmed four years; then for nearly five years he farmed in Gibson County, and in 1877 came to his present place, where he now owns ninety-two acres of well cultivated land. In August, 1858, he married Sarah J. Waggoner, a native of Knox County, Tenn., and daughter of John and Rebecca (Nelson) Waggoner. His union has been blessed with twelve children, viz.: Mary E. (deceased), Florence, John W., Ada, James, Jacob H., Sarah R., Maggie, Mattie, Theodosia, Lonzo and Roscoe, who have received a good education in preference to anything else. Mrs. Anderson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

L. B. ANDERSON was born February 1, 1860, in Mayfield, and is a son of Ervin and Eliza J. (Lockbridge) Anderson. The father was born in 1821, and was the first white child born in Graves County; he was a member of the legal profession and held the office of county clerk and circuit clerk, and on the adoption of the new constitution was elected circuit clerk and held the office until 1861. He was also a member of the legislature for one term. He died July 11, 1876. His widow is a native of Graves County, and now a resident of Mayfield. L. B. Anderson began the study of law at the age of twenty-two, with Lucian Anderson, and has been in practice since May, 1863.

REV. WILLIAM M. ANDREW, Graves County, was born February 17, 1833, in Bedford County, Tenn. His parents are Beriah and Jane C. (Morrison) Andrew, both natives of North Carolina, and now living in Tennessee. The father is a farmer and his wife a member of the Cumberland

Presbyterian Church. They moved to Graves County, Ky., in 1854, and returned to Tennessee in 1867. Our subject, the sixth in a family of ten children, began for himself at the age of twenty-one. Going to school and teaching occupied his attention the next ten years. Then for a number of years he was actively engaged in the ministry. His time is still employed between the ministry and the farm, in both of which he has been pre-eminently successful. He was ordained to preach in 1863, and has preached to congregations in the church of his choice in nearly all the churches within the bounds of the Mayfield Presbytery, of which he has been a member for the past two years. Previously he was a member of the Obion Presbytery. He started even with the world, but now has two tracts of land, containing in all about 200 acres. It will thus be seen has been very successful in life, filling the pulpit with general acceptance, and doing a thriving business on the farm. Rev. Andrew was married October 24, 1865, to Miss Mary A., daughter of William and Elizabeth Hatchel, of Graves County. To Mr. and Mrs. Andrew were born three children, James M., William W. and Emma. Mrs. Andrew is also a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Andrew is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Rev. Andrew has the proud satisfaction, while remembering that he has been the architect of his own fortune, to know that he has so lived as not only to win, but also to deserve the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

JAMES H. ANDRUS came to Graves County when its few scattered settlements were but niches in its surrounding forests, and for fifty-six years has been identified with the development of the country. His father, Archibald Andrus, was a native of Halifax County, Va., which State he left in an early day, immigrating to Murray County, Tenn., where our subject was born in 1813. Two years later the family moved to Illinois, then on the outskirts of civilization, and settled not far from the present town of Belleville, where they remained about six years, at the end of which time they returned to Tennessee, where Archibald Andrus made his home until 1828, when he came to Graves County, and located in Lynnville Precinct, on the place where James H. now lives; and was a respected citizen of the county until the time of his death in 1842. The maiden name of subject's mother was Frances Bennett. She died a few years later than her husband, and with him lies buried on the old farm. James H. Andrus is the third son and fifth child of the foregoing, and remained with his parents until his father's death, but had purchased a farm and commenced life for himself a short time before that date. He obtained a good practical education while living near Nashville, Tenn., and during a long life has borne the reputation of being a very exact and competent business man. At his father's death he took possession of the old homestead, and from time to time has added to his possessions, and is now one of the largest owners of real estate in the county, owning over 800 acres of fine land in various precincts. Mr. Andrus was never married. Politically he is identified with the Democratic party.

JAMES AUSTIN was born January 12, 1836, in Graves County. He is a son of Rev. P. W. Austin and Sallie (Gilbert) Austin. The father was born in North Carolina; he died September 24, 1872, aged seventy-five. The mother was born in Dickson County, Tenn.; she died in December, 1883, aged seventy-five. James was brought up on his father's farm, and taught school about three and one-half years, after which he carried on farming and teaching till 1865; he then served as deputy sheriff four years. February 15, 1869, he was appointed to fill the vacancy of county clerk; this position he held until August 5, 1869. In the fall of 1869 he was appointed deputy circuit clerk, and on May 11, 1871, he was elected circuit clerk; he held the office till September 1, 1880. In the following April he became associated with the Mayfield Mill, with which he has been connected ever since. He was married March 25, 1860, to Miss Elizabeth Carter, of Graves County. They have had seven children, five of whom are living, three sons and two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Austin are members of the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM BALLEW was born November 24, 1814, in Burke County, N. C., and is the fourth of ten children, five boys and five girls, born to Robert and Elizabeth (Alexander) Ballew, natives of Burke County, and of French and Irish origin respectively. William was reared on the farm, and lived with his parents till he was twenty-two years of age. When sixteen years old he commenced business for himself, and at the age of eighteen, moved with his parents to Tugaloo River, S. C., where he purchased a farm for $4,000, on which he resided for about twelve years. He then sold out and moved to Cherokee, Ga., where he purchased a farm of 600 acres for $11,000, and where he remained till 1865. During the war he lost nearly all his property, including twenty slaves, and sold his farm for $18,000 in Confederate currency, which was a total loss. Possessed of an iron will, however, he was not to be discouraged by his misfortunes, and taking with him the remainder of his property—his horses and three negro women—moved about forty miles south of where he lived, and planted about seventy-five acres of corn. When he had plowed corn once, Stoneman made a raid south and Mr. Ballew lost all his stock except one mare. His nephew, who lived about twelve miles from him, brought him a condemned mule which the Federal soldiers had given to a boy, and with the mare and mule he succeeded in raising 300 barrels of corn of which the armies in 1864 used all but fifty barrels, which Mr. Ballew had stored in his house and had saved by hauling it to Fair Mount to a place of safety. At the close of the war he furnished the corn for the whole country for seed. In 1865 he raised about fifty barrels of corn, purchased eight cows at $100 each, also a mule for $2,000 Confederate currency, and supplied the neighborhood with corn and milk. In the fall of 1865 he moved to Mississippi County, Mo., where he remained one year, when on account of sickness he moved to Dublin, Graves Co., Ky. In 1866 he came to where he now lives, and where he owns 650 acres of land in a fair state of cultivation, with good buildings, etc., all of which he has accumulated since he came to the county. Mr. Ballew was married in 1837 to Lucy Albright, a native of Madison County, and a daughter of Henry and Micca (Blair) Albright, of Dutch and Irish origin. To Mr. and Mrs. Ballew were born twelve children: Ann Eliza (Austin), Harriet A. (married to a Mr. Gordon, but is now deceased), Micca (Pullian), deceased; Mary (Darby), James (who was killed in the war), Julia L. (Nicholson), William P., John P. (deceased), Handrel (deceased), Sallie L. (deceased), Rob Bruce (deceased), and Thomas M. Mrs. Ballew died in December, 1883, aged sixty-three years. In his younger days Mr. Ballew speculated in gold; he was a spectator at the battle of Chickamauga.

J. N. BEADLES, Graves County, cashier of the Bank of Mayfield, was born March 6, 1825, in Pittsylvania County, Va. He is a son of Louis Y. and M. C. (Vaughan) Beadles. The father was born in Caswell County, N. C. He died April 28, 1838, aged fifty-seven. he was a soldier in the war of 1812. The mother was born in Amelia County, Va.; she died February 15, 1840, aged fifty-seven; J. N. Beadles was reared on his father's farm, and attended the schools of the neighborhood. In May, 1843, he came to Mayfield and engaged in merchandising; this he continued until January 1, 1860. He had also been acting cashier of the Mayfield branch of the Bank of Ashland, and in 1864 he moved this bank to Paducah; the following year it was transferred to the First National Bank of that place. In December, 1866, he went to New Orleans, where he was engaged in a general commission business till February, 1882, when he returned to Mayfield, and with the Hon. Lucian Anderson organized the Bank of Mayfield, of which he became cashier. This position he now fills. Mr. B. was married September 19, 1850, to Miss M. L. Eaker, of Graves County; this lady died fourteen months later, leaving an infant who followed her mother in a few days. His second marriage took place April 27, 1858, to Miss C. C. Mayes, of Caldwell County. She died January 10, 1862, leaving one son, Robert M. His third marriage was August 28, 1866, to Mrs. Mary (Mayes) Thompson, widow of Col. A. P. Thompson, and daughter of Richard L. Mayes, of Mayfield, who was one of the most eminent lawyers of his day. Mr. and Mrs. B. are members of the Baptist Church.

EDGAR S. BEAUMONT, Graves County, now twenty-eight years of age, was born in Waynesboro, Wayne Co., Tenn. He came to Mayfield, Ky., in 1867, and commenced the publication of the Mayfield Democrat in 1876. He was appointed master commissioner of Graves circuit court by Judge James Campbell, in 1881, and re-appointed in 1884. He is the youngest person that ever held the office in this county.

MARSHALL F. BEAMOUNT, Graves County, now aged twenty-four years, was born at Trenton, Tenn. He came to Mayfield in 1867, and has been engaged in publishing the Mayfield Democrat since 1876. He attended the Southern Business College at Louisville, in 1883; the Cumberland Law University, Lebanon, Tenn., in 1884, and was admitted to the bar in 1884.

L. B. BLALOCK was born July 11, 1838, within a mile of where he now lives in Graves County. He is the eldest of three boys and six girls born to Levi and Rutha A. (Holifield) Blalock, natives respectively of North Carolina and Henderson County, Ky. Levi Blalock emigrated from North Carolina to Illinois in 1832; thence to Hickman County, Ky., in 1836, and in the same year came to Graves County; here he died in 1857, aged forty-four years. L. B. Blalock received about six months' schooling in his youth, but subsequently acquired a good business education; he was reared a farmer and remained with his mother until his marriage, January 16, 1877, to Nancy J. Anderson, daughter of Ervin and Maria (Pryor) Anderson, natives of Caldwell and Simpson Counties, Ky., and of Scotch and English descent. These parents were among the first settlers of Graves County, the Pryors, coming in 1822, and settling on Clark's River, and three years later near Pryorsburg, named in their honor. The Andersons settled here about 1825. To Mr. and Mrs. Blalock were born four children: James L., John F., a third that died unnamed and Newton J. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and formerly Mr. Blalock was an Odd Fellow and a member of the Grange. He owns 585 acres of land, of which over one-half is under cultivation and improved with a fine frame residence. Since 1870 he has traded in tobacco most successfully. In November, 1863, he enlisted in Company E, Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army, under Gen. Forrest, and took part in the following battles: Cross Roads, Okalona, Miss., and Jackson, Tenn. The army disbanded in March, 1865, at Paducah, Ky. Without a nickel, our subject returned home, engaged in farming and succeeded in acquiring a comfortable fortune.

HON. A. R. BOONE, Graves County, was born April, 4, 1831, in Davidson County, Tenn., and is a son of Bryant and Martha (Phipps) Boone. The father was born in North Carolina, emigrated to Tennessee and in 1833 came to Graves County, Ky., where he purchased and improved a farm, and where he died March, 1837. He was a plain farmer, mingled but little in politics, and neither sought nor held office, beyond that of a justice of the peace. The mother was a native of Tennessee, and was born in 1800; she died in this county in 1865. Judge Boone was brought up on his father's farm with but limited advantages for obtaining an education, being confined to an attendance at the district schools of the neighborhood. In 1850 he entered the law office of Judge Williams, and after two years' study under that gentleman, he was in 1852 admitted to the bar, and from that period rose rapidly in his chosen profession. In 1854 he was elected county judge and re-elected in 1858 without opposition, but resigned in 1861, and the same year was elected to the State legislature. This was the stormy period, at the commencement of the civil war, and after serving in the assembly one month, being threatened with arrest on account of his southern views and sympathy, Judge Boone resigned his seat and returned home. He was a candidate in 1865 for commonwealth's attorney, but was prevented from making the canvass through the interference of the military authorities. He was elected circuit judge of the judicial district, composed of the counties of Hickman, Fulton, Ballard, Graves, Calloway, Marshall and McCracken—an office whose duties he honorably discharged for six years; in 1874 he was elected to Congress on the Democratic ticket, was re-elected in 1876 and declined a nomination in 1878. Judge Boone is a zealous and prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and was in 1881 elected a delegate from the Memphis Conference to the Ecumenical Council at London, England. During his sojourn abroad, he extended his travels through Europe, and returned to his native land with a mind well stored with information of other countries and peoples and governments. Upon his return to Mayfield he resumed the practice of the law, which he has since continued successfully. He has recently been appointed, by Gov. Knott, one of the railroad commissoners of the State, a position of great trust and importance. Judge Boone was married in January, 1852, to Miss Sallie A., daughter of Dr. F. R. Dallam, a physician of prominence and of high standing in the State. They have had thirteen children, seven of whom are living, viz.: Mary, Martha (the wife of C. S. Whittemore), James L. (now engaged in the tobacco business), Robert, Clarence, Cameron and Jewell. Judge Boone, his wife and children are all devoted members of the Methodist Church. Judge Boone is a self-made man, and is indebted principally to his own energy and exertions for what he is. Commencing life in humble circumstances at the very bottom of the scale, he has by commendable industry and perseverance reached the highest position among his fellow-men, as evinced by his honorable walk, his political influence and his social and moral worth.

DR. W. A. BOYD was born July 7, 1831, in Halifax County, Va. At the age of nineteen he took up the study of medicine, under the preceptorship of Dr. Inge, of Danville, Va., where he remained three years, after which he attended two courses of lectures at the Louisville College; he graduated in 1853 from the medical department of the University of Louisville. In 1854 he located at Farmington, Ky., and engaged in the practice of his profession there until 1859, when he removed to Mayfield, where he has since resided. The doctor was married in 1857, to Miss Mary Holifield, of Graves County; they have eight children, one son and seven daughters. Dr. and Mrs. Boyd are members of the Baptist Church and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

FINIS E. BRANTLY, Graves County, bridge foreman on the C. O. & S. W. Railroad, was born in 1844, in Crittenden County, Ky. At the age of thirteen years he began learning the saddle and harness trade. He continued in that business seven years. He then farmed for a time and later engaged in the saw-mill business. Subsequently he ran a stationary steam engine. He began railroading in 1881, and at the present holds the responsible position above referred to, which position he fills very acceptably. He was jailer one year in Crittenden County, Ky. He is counted among the worthy, responsible and well-to-do citizens of Graves County. Mr. Brantly is a thoroughly temperate man and carries testimonials from the highest authority as having given entire satisfaction to his employers as an engineer, thoroughly competent to run and keep in order either a stationary or a portable steam engine, and particularly cautious in keeping everything in good running order. He was married September, 1866, to Miss Fannie Scott, daughter of Dr. John R. and Sarah E. (Parmley) Scott, both natives of Kentucky. Her father is still living in Caldwell County, Ky. Her mother died August, 1878, aged fifty years, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To Mr. and Mrs. Brantly have been born five children, of whom, Gillim, Johnnie and Jakie are now living. Charlie died September, 1878, aged four years; Bessie, the youngest, died in August, 1883, at the age of one year. Mrs. Brantly is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr. Brantly is a member of the I. O. O. F.

BENJAMIN F. BRIGGS, Graves County, editor of the Mayfield Monitor, was born August 27, 1848, in Sumner County, Tenn. In 1870 he commenced to learn the art of printing; three years later he established the Banner of Temperance. This paper he conducted about two years. In 1875 the Mayfield Monitor was established, and now has an extensive circulation. Mr. Briggs was married April 26, 1883, to Miss Mary Rives, of Mayfield; they have one child, a daughter. Mr. Briggs is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mrs. Briggs is a member of the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM M. BULLOCK, Graves County, was born December 6, 1828, in Dickson County, Tenn. He is the fourth of ten children, seven boys and three girls, six now living, born to William and Lyddie (Myatte) Bullock, of North Carolina; the father of Dutch-English and the mother of English-Irish origin. Subject's grandparents were Allen and Maria (Garner) Bullock, and Wiley and —— (Swanson) Myatte. Allen Bullock was a Baptist minister. William M. came with his parents to Graves County, December 1832, and settled seven miles south of Mayfield, where his father entered and improved 220 acres of land. He, the father, died in March, 1858; the mother in August, 1871, aged respectively fifty-seven and sixty-six years. William M. was reared on a farm and lived with his parents until his marriage on December 26, 1847, to Minerva J. Watson, of Graves County, a native of Montgomery County, Tenn., and a daughter of Arthur and Naomi (Shipley) Watson, of Dutch descent. To Mr. and Mrs. Bullock were born two children, James A. and John R.; the latter died in infancy. Mrs. Bullock died November, 1852. Subject was next married, January 12, 1854, to Louisa M. Luther, of Graves County, a native of Dickson County, Tenn., daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Anderson) Luther, natives respectively of Randolph County, N. C., and Dickson County, Tenn., and of Dutch descent. To this union eight children were born: Laura E. (now Blain), Electa A., Lydia B., Mary A. (deceased), William W., Henry Lee, Jacob A. and Thomas F. Subject and wife are members of the Christian Church, and of the Lincoln Mutual Aid Society, of Cairo, Ill. Mr. Bullock is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was formerly a member of the Grange. He started in life without a dollar, and is to-day possessor of 225 acres of land with comfortable buildings; also a lot and blacksmith shop in Pryorsburgh.

WILLIAM L. BURNETT was born March 2, 1838, in Rutherford County, Tenn., and was taken by his parents to Hickman County, Ky., in 1840, where he grew to manhood. His grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution. His father, Brooken Burnett, a native of Mecklenburgh County, Va., was born in 1799, and is still living. Subject's mother, Letitia, daughter of John Moss, was born in 1809, and died in 1854. To Brooken and her were born Sarah A. (McFall), Harriet (McFall and Moss), John R., subject, Thomas S. (died in the army), and Martin L. (died in the army). To Brooken by a second marriage was born Louisa C. (Sellars). Subject was married June 5, 1862, to Miss Mary L., daughter of Ephraim R. and Dionysia (Batte) Osborne, of Obion County, Tenn., and from this union sprang Gus H., Ella, Van O., Emmett J. and Felix C. For fifteen years, Mr. Burnett has been successfully engaged in the tobacco business. He is a farmer, owning 215 acres of well cultivated land. He belongs to the order of Knights of Honor, and is a member of the Christian Church and of the Democratic party.

DR. R. A. CANTER, one of the pioneer medical men of Graves County, was born June 11, 1811, in Rowan County, N. C., and is the son of Erasmus and Rebecca (Horn) Canter; the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Delaware. Erasmus Canter was a farmer and minister of some note in the regular Baptist Church. He died in 1871 at the age of ninety-three; the mother died in 1866, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. Dr. Canter commenced life for himself at the age of twenty-two years, following the vocation of farmer in his native State, where he remained until 1841, at which time he immigrated to Kentucky, and settled in Calloway County, which was his home until 1850, when he came to Graves County, locating on Terrapin Creek, about three miles from his present place of residence, where he lived until 1873, at which time he purchased the beautiful farm of 230 acres near Lynnville, on which his declining years are spent. Dr. Canter was married January 17, 1833, to Phebe C. Beeson, daughter of Richard and Susan (Gregory) Beeson, natives of North Carolina. Their union has been blessed with the following children: Susan (deceased), George, Jefferson, Ambrose H., Rebecca E., S. F., P. C., Mary A., John (deceased), Nancy and Robert A. In 1850 Mr. Canter began the practice of medicine in the neighborhood where he now lives, and soon acquired a large and lucrative practice. He has been the leading physician in the community for thirty-four years, and is justly considered one of the most successful disciples of the healing art in the county. In politics the doctor is a stanch Republican, and was a strong Union man during the war; two of his sons served in the Federal Army. His firm stand for the Union during that trying period rendered him unpopular with a certain class of men, whose sympathies were with the Confederacy, and for some time he deemed it prudent to absent himself from his home. He returned in 1865, and during that year distinguished himself in successfully treating a dangerous malady, which raged over the southern part of the county. The doctor and his wife are prominent members of the Christian Church, belonging to the Lynnville congregation, of which society he was one of the original members. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and still clings to the Republican party.

WILLIAM M. CARGILL was born August 21, 1822, in Graves County, Ky., and is a son of Thomas and (Finley) Cargill, who were both natives of South Carolina, and who came to Graves County in 1819 and settled on Clark's River, where they purchased a farm. William M. was born on this farm and remained there until he reached the age of seventeen, after which he worked for wages for three years. Then he served one year as constable, then became sheriff and served four years in the northern half of the county, at which time his brother became sheriff of Graves County, of whom he purchased the office, and in which capacity he served two years. David Graham then became sheriff. Mr. Cargill then purchased the office and served a year and one-half. On the adoption of the new constitution, Mr. Cargill was elected to the legislature and served one term. On his return he again ran for sheriff. He then opened a hotel, which he kept until the war broke out, when he entered the Confederate Army in June, 1861, and at the organization of the Third Kentucky Infantry was elected lieutenant, and after a time was promoted to the rank of captain, and later was commissioned major and quartermaster of the Kentucky brigade under Gen. Buford. He remained in the service until the close of the war and was paroled at Columbus, Miss. He then returned to Mayfield and resumed the hotel business, which he followed for three years, and then opened a grocery. In 1876 he went to California, remained until 1881, when he returned and entered the store of his sons, Albert and Edward, where he has since remained. In 1849 he married Elizabeth L. Talbert, of Mayfield, by whom he has three children: Albert, Edward and Mary. Mr. Cargill is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In politics he has always been identified with the Democratic party.

ABEL CLAPP was born in Graves County, Ky., April 27, 1838, and is the third of nine children, seven boys and two girls, born to Adam and Malinda (Coplin) Clapp, of Alabama and Graves County, Ky., respectively, and of German descent. Abel was reared on the farm and remained with his parents till he was of age, when he started for himself on a farm. In August, 1862, he married Clara O. Thomas, of Graves County, daughter of Jackson and Elizabeth (Watson) Thomas; to their union have been born ten children: William F. (deceased), Linda E.,

Adam J., Richard A., Eliza F., Charles, Luella, May E., Callona and Etta. Mr. Clapp enlisted in October, 1862, in Company A, Seventh Kentucky, under Capt. Chandler, and served one year, taking part in the battle of Shiloh; he was afterward conscripted, and served three months. Mr. Clapp is now owner of fifty acres of good land, which he is successfully cultivating.

ALLEN G. COLTHARP was born September 20, 1834, in Humphreys County, Tenn., and in 1843 came to Graves County Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Samuel Coltharp, of Tennessee, was born in 1797, and died in 1839; and his mother, Martha Griffith, of North Carolina, was born in 1809, and died in 1851. Their offspring are: James N., William J., Samuel F., Enoch and subject. Mr. Coltharp's educational advantages were limited, but he has greatly improved himself by reading. He was married November 26, 1857, to Miss Mary E., daughter of James and Caroline (Yates) McNeely, of Graves County, and this union has been blessed with the following named children: James O., Samuel E., Callie, Minnie (deceased), Mattie and Serena. Subject is a farmer, owning 225 acres of choice land, highly cultivated. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics a Democrat.

GUS G. COULTER, Graves County, county commissioner and deputy county clerk, was born August 15, 1861, in Marshall County, Ky. He is a son of C. C. and Belle (Archer) Coulter. The father was born in Graves County, is now practicing law in Mayfield, and is also engaged in farming. He has held the office of circuit clerk of Marshall County and master commissioner of Graves County. Our subject was appointed deputy county clerk in 1880, was elected county commissioner in 1884, and is still acting as such, and he is also chief clerk of the State board of equalization; elected to that office on the 10th day of June, 1885, and is one of the most deservedly popular men now in Graves County.

D. P. COULTER, Graves County, county clerk, was born May 1, 1839, in Graves County, Ky. He is a son of Henry N. and Eliza R. (Alexander) Coulter. The father was born in Catawba County, N. C.; he died in 1867, aged seventy-six. The mother was born in Lincoln County, Ga. She died in 1875, aged seventy-seven. At the breaking out of the war our subject enlisted in Company D, Second Kentucky Infantry, and served till the end of the war. He participated in the battles of Fort Donelson, Hart's Ford, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold Gap and all the battles till the fall of Atlanta, after which his command became mounted, and so continued till the close of the war. He then returned to Graves County and continued farming till 1874, when he was appointed deputy county clerk, and elected in 1882. Mr. Coulter was married August 20, 1868, to Miss H. A. Mayes, of this county. This union has been blessed with four children, two sons and two daughters. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F. and Knights of Honor.

E. H. DAY, Graves County, is a native of Virginia, and the eldest son of John and Mary (Keeton) Day, both born in the same State. Mr. Day remained in Virginia until the year 1827, at which time the family emigrated to Tennessee, settling in Rutherford County. Ten years later the family came to Kentucky, and located in Lynnville Precinct, near Terrapin Creek, where John Day died in 1855; his widow followed him to the grave one year later. The early years of subject's life were spent on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty-three he commenced life for himself in Graves County, purchasing a fine tract of land, on which he lived for a period of eleven years. At the end of that time he bought a part of the present farm in Lynnville Precinct, where he has since resided. Here he made several additions to his original purchase, and at the present time owns a beautiful and comfortable place of 184 acres of as good land as there is in the county. Mr. Day was married in December, 1843, to Elizabeth Morris, daughter of Moses and Weney Morris, of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Day are the parents of two children, Mary J. (wife of William Morris), and Winny (wife of Calvin Carter). Mr. Day's life has been a quiet one and for a long number of years he has gone in and out among the people without an enemy. He is a member of the regular Baptist Church, as is also his wife.

DR. EZIAS L. EARLE, Graves County, was born July 9, 1833, in Hopkins County, Ky.; was taken by his parents, in 1836, to McCracken County, and in 1850 to Pontotoc, Miss., where he remained until 1869. He served through the late war as a member of the Second Mississippi Regiment, and was wounded at the battle of Cold Harbor, Va. His father, Esaias C. B. Earle, a native of South Carolina, settled in Kentucky in an early day, was a soldier in the Mexican war, and died in 1871. He was the son of John Earle, who was the descendant of Gen.

John Balis Earle of the Revolution. Subject's mother was Louisa L., daughter of Dr. John (surgeon at Fort Massac, Ill.), and Lettie (Wilcox) Hammill, of Pennsylvania. To her and husband were born Martha A. (McMackin), John H., Balis E., Matilda M., (Griffith), Mary Y. (Rowzee), subject, Maria L. (Brougher) and Eliza R. (Rowzee). Dr. Earle secured a good English education. He was married June 22, 1871, to Miss Bettie F., daughter of Dr. J. R. Patterson, of Mayfield, Ky. In 1856 he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. C. P. Coffin, of Pontotoc, Miss., with whom he remained three years, after which he studied one year with Dr. Isaac H. Hughey of Oakland. He attended lectures in 1859–60, at Cincinnati, and graduated in 1863, at Richmond, Va. He was for a period of eighteen months assistant surgeon in the hospital at Danville, Va. In 1871 he commenced the practice of his profession in Marshall County, Ky.; went to Arlington, Ky., in 1872 ; then to Weakley County, Tenn., in 1879, and in 1882 came to Water Valley, Graves Co., Ky., where he is engaged as a physician and oculist. In religion Dr. Earle is a Baptist and in politics a Democrat.

T. J. ELMORE was born May 27, 1837, in Holmes County, Miss. He is a son of William and Mary (Reynolds) Elmore. The father was a native of South Carolina ; he died in 1872. The mother was born in Alabama. Our subject was reared in Mississippi. In 1862 he raised Company G, Fourth Mississippi Infantry, was chosen captain of the company and served to the end of the war. Capt. Elmore participated in the battles of Fort Donelson, siege of Vicksburg, siege of Donelson, siege of Blakeley and was with Hood in his campaign through Tennessee ; he was also at Atlanta and the battle of New Hope Church ; at the latter he was captured, but escaped and continued in active duty until the end of the war. He then returned to Mississippi and engaged in farming. In 1869 he came to Mayfield and continued in agricultural pursuits until 1879, when he formed the partnership of Watts & Elmore in the grocery business. This partnership continued until February, 1884, when the firm of Hale & Elmore was formed, which has since continued. They carry a large and well selected stock of dry goods and by their just dealings and courteous treatment, their business has rapidly increased. Mr. Elmore was elected to the State legislature in 1881 and served with distinction two years. He was married in 1865 to Miss Ophelia Weems of Holmes County, Miss. They have six children—two sons and four daughters. Mr. Elmore is a member of the Masonic fraternity

DAVID M. GALLOWAY, a pioneer of this county, was born July 10, 1819, in North Carolina. His parents were John and Lucy (Thompson) Galloway, natives of North Carolina. The father was of Irish descent. He moved to Bedford County, Tenn., in 1823, and came to Graves County in 1838. He was a farmer, and died in 1859, aged seventy-five. He and wife were members of the Seceder Church. The mother died in 1826, aged thirty-eight years. David M., on commencing for himself, had $300. He farmed until 1857, when he began serving as deputy sheriff, and was elected jailer and served until 1861. He was appointed sheriff in 1865, and the same fall was elected to that office. During the war he went to Texas and bought 250 head of horses, and sold them to good advantage. He next went into the saw-mill business, and later went security for $10,000, and through that risk was broken up. He then moved to Dukedom and went into the dry goods business with H. F. Summerville, in which he continued for six years. Later he pursued the same business in Wingo. In 1877 he went to Florida and invested in eighteen and one-half acres of land, which he purchased at $20 per acre. He spent four winters there, and after putting his land into an orange grove, sold the same at near $500 per acre. He now owns eight acres of land with a home-like residence in Wingo, besides a tract of sixty acres, one mile from town. He is one among the oldest residents of the county. He and his wife are well and favorably known as respected pioneer settlers of the county, He was married August 29, 1839, to Miss Martha Walker, of Stewart County, Tenn. These parents have had four children, viz.: Adaline (deceased at two years of age) ; Evaline F., the wife of G. W. Fowler ; Molly S., the wife of Henry George ; Elizabeth S. was the wife of H. S. Summerville, who died July, 1877. Elizabeth died in September, 1875. Mr. and Mrs. Galloway are both members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

HENRY GEORGE was born March 2, 1847, in Graves County, Ky. His parents were Brinkley and Elizabeth (Golden) George. The father was a farmer. His death occurred in 1860, aged seventy-seven; the mother died in 1853, aged fifty-two. The subject of this sketch was reared on a farm. He enlisted in the Confederate service, Company A, Seventh Kentucky Regiment, November 5, 1861, and served until the close of the war. He took part in the battles of Shiloh, siege of Vicksburg, Port Hudson, Baker's Creek, Jackson and Corinth. After that the regiment was mounted infantry, under Gen. Forrest. He then took part in the battles of Paducah, Brice's Cross Roads, Harrisburg and Oxford, then at Athens, Sulphur Trestle and Pulaski. The regiment was with Hood at Spring Hill, Franklin, Nashville, Monter Valley, and Selma. Besides these battles he took part in many dangerous skirmishes. He was wounded three times. but not seriously. He was taken prisoner at Selma, and was in confinement eight days, when he made his escape, and returned to Forrest's command at once. After the war he returned to his brother's farm, where his father died, and attended school in that locality for two years. Later he taught school two terms, then went to merchandising at Dukedom; in this business he has continued ever since. Mr. George moved to Wingo in 1872, and is now the oldest dry goods merchant in the place. He does an extensive business, his sales running from $11,000 to $18,000 yearly. He represented Graves County in the legislature of 1877 and 1878. From 1879 to 1882 he served as State senator. He was the originator of the bill for the relief of the penitentiary, which measure was afterward adopted by the succeeding legislature without any change in phraseology. His marriage occurred October 19, 1871, to Miss Mollie Galloway, daughter of D. M. and Martha Galloway, of Graves County. This marriage has been blessed by the birth of two children: Edward M, and Henry, Jr. Mr. George is one of the live go-ahead, thrifty men, such as are needed to build up a community, and whose influence is always felt in any worthy enterprise.

RICHARD J. GRACE was born October 3, 1840, in Trigg County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1865 removed to Ballard County, where he remained until 1879, when he came to Graves County, and settled at his present residence, a place known in the war time as "Camp Beauregard." His father, Elliott Grace, also a native of Trigg County, was born in 1815, and is still living. He is the son of George Grace, who was reared in Trigg County, and died about 1848. Subject's mother was Mary A., daughter of Samuel Meridith. of Trigg County. The children of Elliott Grace are Marcella A. (Hilton), subject, George E. (who died in the army), Jane, Samuel T., Joseph and Charles W. In youth subject procured a business education, and is a considerable reader of books and newspapers. He was married October 12, 1865, to Miss Emma T., daughter of John Waddill, of Trigg County. She was born in 1839, and died in 1866. He was next married November 11, 1868, to Miss Lorenna, daughter of Jerman J. and Ann Y. (Beadles) Wingo, of Graves County, and to them have been born George E., Mittie A., Mary E. and Thomas J. In 1874 Mr. Grace was elected county surveyor. He was appointed magistrate of the Water Valley district in 1880, and at the election of 1882 he was elected to that office, which position he now retains. He is a farmer, owning 127 acres of good land in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a deacon in the Baptist Church, and in politics a Democrat.

HON. H. S. HALE, Graves County, president of the First National Bank, Mayfield, was born May 4, 1836, in Warren County, Ky. At the age of ten he came with his parents, Nicholas and Rhoda Hale, to Graves County, where he was reared on the farm, and attended the schools of the community. After completing his studies at the academy at Mayfield he entered a store as clerk, where he remained two or three years, after which he with his brother, W. H. Hale, engaged in merchandising, and continued about three years. In 1861 he entered the Confederate Army, in the Seventh Kentucky Regiment; having raised a company, he was chosen captain, and at the reorganization of the regiment, in 1862, he was elected major; he held this position until the consolidation of of the Third and Seventh Regiments; he was then appointed lieutenant-colonel of the consolidated regiments; this position he held until the close of the war. He then returned to Graves County, and continued merchandising one year, after which he was elected sheriff, and served two terms. In 1871 he was elected to the State senate, and was a member of this body till 1875. On his return he solicited the subscription to the capital stock and organized the bank and was chosen president, which position he has since honorably filled. In 1884 Mr. Hale took part and became the leading spirit in raising the funds and constructing the buildings of West Kentucky College, located at Mayfield, and was made president of the board of trustees. He was married November, 1865, to Miss V. A. Gregory, of Mississippi; they have had nine children, five of whom are living, three sons and two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Hale, eldest daughter and two eldest sons are members of the Christian Church.

GEORGE T. HANELINE, proprietor of the Stonewall House, Mayfield. This house has recently undergone extensive improvements, and all farmers and others in want of comfortable quarters, while remaining in the city, will do well to call and secure accommodations with Mr. Haneline, who will furnish first-class fare at prices reasonable.

JUDGE J. W. HOCKER, Graves County, was born July 2, 1837, in Perryville, now Boyle County, Ky. He is a son of Washington and Rebecca (Magill) Hocker. These parents were born in Lincoln County, Ky., the father in February, 1808. He is still living on his farm and has held various offices of trust in the locality where he resides. The mother died in 1851. Judge Hocker was principally reared in and near Bowling Green, where he entered a tobacco warehouse as clerk. In 1857 he came to Graves County, north. There he engaged in farming till 1881, when he was elected county judge, first by the magistrates and then by the people in 1882. He held the office of magistrate in North Graves from 1871 to November, 1881. When elected to his present position he supplied himself with sufficient law books and applied himself diligently in acquiring a thorough knowledge of the duties required of him. These he has succeeded in mastering, and may justly be styled a self-made man. He was married, in 1859, to Miss Ellen Shelton, of Trigg County. She died in December, 1864, aged twenty-two. His second marriage was in December, 1866, to Mrs. Simpson, of Graves County. She died April 2, 1882, aged forty-one, leaving six children, four sons and two daughters. His third marriage occurred February 15, 1883, to Miss Sue Davis, a native of Christian County, Ky.

MARTIN B. HODGES was born April 7, 1818, in Hopkins County, Ky., and was taken by his parents, in 1822, to Calloway County, and in 1826 brought to Graves County, where he has continued to reside to the present time. He is the son of Drury Hodges, a native of Virginia, who died in Missouri. Drury's wife was Diana, daughter of George Griffith, of Virginia. He was twice married and his children are Hiram, Miriam (Farmer), George W., James, Irvine, Anderson, Matilda (Swafford), subject, Barbara (Arant), Dinah (Davidson) and Mary. Subject's educational advantages were limited, but he is a constant reader. He was married, in 1846, to Miss Louisa Cargill, of Graves County, who bore him one child, George W., and died in 1847. Mr. Hodges was next married, in 1854, to Miss Nancy M., daughter of Daniel T. and Sarah (Pryor) Cargill, and the result of this union has been the birth of Bettie (Barton), Sarah F. (Stafford), Susan M., Nancy M. (Coffee), Jemmey A., Thomas B., Ella May, Jonathan and Adella. Subject is a farmer, owning eighty acres of fair land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and co-operates with the Democratic party.

G. W. HOLIFIELD, an old settler and leading citizen of Graves County, was born January 29, 1817, in Henderson County, Ky., and is the seventh of sixteen children, five now living, born to William and Elizabeth (Copland) Holifield, natives of Chatham County, N. C. About 1820 our subject was brought to Graves County by his parents, who settled near the place on which subject now lives. The elder Holifield was a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He held various town offices; was one of the petitioners for the first public road in the county, and also took part in the battle of New Orleans. He died in the fall of 1859, aged seventy-seven years, and his widow followed in 1868, at the age of eighty-two. G. W. Holifield was reared a farmer; received about three months' schooling, and remained on the home farm until his marriage in December, 1837, to Dorcas T. Rhoden, of Hickman County, but a native of Alabama, and daughter of Jesse and Harriet (Rice) Rhoden, natives of the same State. To this union were born six children: William J.; Elizabeth S., now Saxton; John R.; Newton J.; Mary J., now Vickus, and Martha E., now Bradley. Mrs. Holifield died in the fall of 1864, and Mr. Holifield next married Mary Murel, daughter of Thomas Graham, of Graves County. To this union were born three children, of whom two are now living: George W. and Mary T. The second wife died in 1870, and for his third wife Mr. Holifield married in July, 1872, Cornelia Rodgers, a native of Christian County, Ky., and daughter of Levi D. and Susan (Forbus) Rodgers, of North Carolina. This union is blessed with one child, Lillie Dale. Our subject's early pioneer experiences were unusual. He was at one time a remarkable marksman, and in a match with a number of Indians at Columbus beat all his competitors. He has made as much as $80 in a week from the sale, at Paducah, of the game he killed, and was with the Indians when they were removed from the Purchase. He began life without a dollar, but is now possessor of 300 acres of well cultivated land, and has given about 500 acres to his children. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was formerly a member of the Grange. During the late war he was a Knight of the Golden Circle.

A. L. JENKINS, county surveyor, was born May 11, 1830, in Owen County, Ky., and is the fifth child of John G. and Eleanor (Branlan) Jenkins, the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Kentucky. The father died December 15, 1883, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. Subject was reared on a farm, and received such an education as the country schools of that time afforded, and at the age of twenty entered the academy at Stamping Ground, Ky., taking a ten months' course, at the end of which he engaged in teaching, which he followed at intervals for a number of years. While at school he gave especial attention to mathematical studies, and chose the profession of surveying as his life work. While still young he served as county surveyor of his native county, and later was elected surveyor, which office he filled until 1856, when he resigned and moved to Cass County, Mo., where he remained one year, and then came to Graves County, Ky., locating on his farm of 140 acres four miles south of Mayfield, where he still resides. In 1856 he was elected surveyor of Graves County, and served in that capacity two years, when he resigned the office. Later he acted as deputy surveyor under J. E. Robinson, and in 1882 was again elected, and is holding the office at the present time. Mr. Jenkins has been actively engaged in his profession for over twenty years, and is one of the most skillful engineers of western Kentucky. In December, 1852, he was married to Jennie, daughter of —— Hunt, of Fayette County, Ky. Mrs. Jenkins died March 10, 1877, in the forty-fifth year of her age. December 20, 1877, Mr. Jenkins married Mrs. Augusta Drennan, daughter of Frederick Zollicoffer, by whom he has one child, John. Mr. Jenkins is a member of the Baptist Church, with which he has been identified for a period of twenty years. Mrs. Jenkins belongs to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

T. J. JONES, of Graves County, is a native of Dickson County, Tenn., in which State his grandfather settled at an early day, being one of the first white men to locate in that section. Our subject's father, John Jones, was born in June, 1784, gained considerable distinction as a soldier in the war of 1812, rose to a high degree in the Masonic order, and died in November, 1832. The mother of our subject Jennie (James) Jones, was born September 9, 1788, and died in March, 1856. Like the majority of youth in a pioneer community, T. J. Jones enjoyed but few educational advantages; yet he possessed good natural ability, which enabled him, as he grew up, to comprehend surrounding circumstances. He was married July 24, 1833, to Minerva, daughter of Daniel Underhill, and to this union were born ten children, eight of whom are living. On the 20th of March, 1850, he came to Kentucky, and one year later settled on the large farm which has since been his home. May 31, 1862, Mrs. Minerva Jones departed this life, and in 1867 Mr. Jones married Mrs. F. O. Lovelace, from whom he separated. On the 5th of December, 1878, Mr. Jones espoused Mrs. S. F. Irvin, daughter of Thomas W. Pitt, of Virginia, a relative of Sir William Pitt, of England. Among other offices, Mr. Jones has filled those of constable, revenue collector, deputy sheriff and high sheriff, and in 1871 was elected to represent Graves County in the lower house of the legislature, in which he served until 1873.

CARROLL L. JONES was born August 27, in 1829, in Carroll County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood and resided until 1873, when he came to Graves County, Ky., his present place of residence. His father, Etheldred Jones, a native of Wake County, N. C., died in 1841, at the age of forty-three years; he was the son of William Jones, a revolutionary soldier. Subject's mother was Winifred Woodard, of North Carolina. To herself and husband were born William, James, Maria (Green), Laura (McAdow), Cornelia A. (Sneed), subject, Theophilus, Julia A. (married first to Rose and then to King), and Emily (Thompson). Subject was married January 7, 1855, to Miss Amanda, daughter of James B. and Patsey (Ensley) Wright, of Henry County, Tenn., and to them were born Charles Y., James H., Sarah A. (Shelby), Martha A. (Highfield), Robert F., Willie A. and Edwin. Mr. Jones is a farmer, having 140 acres of good land, in a fine state of cultivation. Having a limited education himself, and realizing the advantages of learning, he is endeavoring to furnish his children with substantial reading matter for their mutual advancement. He is a Free Mason, and an accepted member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

DR. J. D. LANDRUM, of Graves County, was born in Barren County, Ky., October 1, 1822. He is the son of James and Nancy (Walden) Landrum. The father was born in Amherst County, Va.; he died in 1841, aged sixty-two. The mother was born in King William County, Va., and died in March, 1863, aged sixty-two. Dr. Landrum was reared in Trigg County, Ky., and in 1845 he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. L. Lindsay; he also studied with Drs. McKinney and Drain, in all about four years. He matriculated in the Phisio-Medical College, of Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1848, and graduated from the same in 1853. He then went to Lafayette, Ky., where he engaged in the practice ef his profession, and he also practiced at Roaring Springs. In December, 1851, he came to Mayfield, where he has since been located. In 1863 he was elected State senator, and served in this body four years. In 1864 he was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Kentucky, and served one term. Dr. Landrum was married in 1850 to Catherine Robbins, of Roaring Springs, Ky. They have five children—three sons and two daughters. Dr. and Mrs. Landrum are members of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM LUTHER was born December 3, 1840, in Dickson County, Tenn., and came with his parents to Graves County, Ky., in 1853, where he still retains his residence. His father, Jacob Luther, was born in North Carolina, in 1814, removed to Tennessee in 1825, and is still living. He was the son of George Luther, of North Carolina, who died about 1849. He was a descendent of the Luther family of Germany. Subject's mother was Elizabeth, daughter of John Anderson of Dickson County, Tenn., and the union of herself and husband resulted in the following named children: Harriet E., Eliza (Bullock), subject, Mary A. (Easley), M. Tennessee (Suthard), Andrew J., John F. B., Alice D. (Bennett), and Travis N. Subject was married March 26, 1863, to Miss Eveline, daughter of Samuel W. and Annie (Bryon) Thompson of Graves County, Ky., and to them have been born Theodosia (Moore), Benjamin F., Andrew A., Annie E., Thomas J., Fannie B., Jennie R., Martin E. (deceased), and Katie May (deceased). Mr. Luther is a farmer, owning 620 acres of valuable land, well improved. He is turning his attention to the handling and raising of live stock, which he finds remunerative. In religion, he is a member of the Christian Church and in politics a Democrat.

DR. S. J. MATHEWS, Graves County, was born March 23, 1835, in Robertson County, Tenn. He is a son of Thomas B. and Fannie (Powell) Mathews. The father was born in the same county and State; he died in 1864, aged sixty-seven. The mother was born in North Carolina; she died in 1860, aged sixty years. Dr. Mathews was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of eighteen entered a store at Springfield as clerk, where he remained three years. In the fall of 1856, he opened a store at Turnersville, which he continued until 1859. He then returned to Springfield and with his brother carried on merchandising until the breaking out of the war. He then commenced the study of medicine; after reading two years he commenced medical lectures at the Nashville College, after which he came to Graves County, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. In the fall of 1877 he came to Mayfield, where he has since remained. He was married December 21, 1858, to Lou T. Morrow, of Montgomery County, Tenn.; she died December 5, 1859, leaving one daughter, Lou V., now the wife of E. T. Taylor of Mayfield. The doctor's second marriage took place November 21, 1861, to Nannie P. Bush of Graves County. She died May 30, 1878, leaving six children—two sons and four daughters. His third marriage was on December 12, 1878, to Alice R. Boaz, a native of Graves County.

JOHN A. MAYES, Graves County, was born August 13, 1844, in Mayfield. He is a son of R. L. and Elizabeth (Anderson) Mayes, Mr. Mayes, after receiving his education from the schools of his locality, took up the study of the law under the preceptorship of Lucian Auderson, and in 1869 was licensed, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession. He was married in February, 1883, to Miss Mariana Stanfield, of Mayfield.

R. A. MAYES, Graves County, was born March 22, 1840, in Mayfield. He is a son of Richard L. and Elizabeth (Anderson) Mayes. The father was born in Fayette County, Ky., in December, 1805; he died in January, 1861. He came to Mayfield, in 1827, and at once engaged in the practice of law. He held the office of county attorney, also of commonwealth's attorney, and represented this county in the State legislature; he was also a member of the convention of 1849-50, which formed the present constitution of the State. Our subject read law with his father, and was admitted to the bar in 1860, and was soon after elected county attorney. At the close of the war he discontinued the practice of law and was deputy county clerk from 1866 to 1869. From 1870 to 1873 he was engaged as book-keeper in the commission business in New Orleans; he then returned to Mayfield and opened a hardware and furniture store, which he now carries on; he also owns one-half interest in the Mayfield flouring-mill; this he purchased in 1878. Mr. Mayes was married on November 5, 1863, to Isabella Boyd, of Christian County. She died in 1865, aged nineteen, leaving one daughter. His second marriage was in 1874 to Sue Campbell, of Nashville, Tenn. This lady died April 30, 1876, aged twenty-nine years. His third marriage was on March 29, 1877, to Sophia Morris, of Obion County, Tenn. They have two children—one son and one daughter.

J. P. McCLAIN was born in 1838 in Henry County, Tenn. He is a son of John and Sallie (Cochran) McClain. Mr. McClain remained with his parents until attaining his majority, and at the age of twenty-three engaged in farming in Calloway County, Ky. He was married in 1861 to Eliza Jane King, daughter of Isaac and Martha (Jackson) King. Mr. McClain resided in Calloway County for a period of fourteen years, at the end of which time he disposed of his farm there and moved to Graves County, and purchased a flouring and saw-mill, which he has operated successfully ever since. Mr. and Mrs. McClain have a family of eight children, namely: Samantha E., Corilla F., J. W., Alta, Robert E., Oliver P., Lula and Maggie.

DR. A. C. McFALL was born February 7, 1842, and is a son of William H. and Mary (Higgins) McFall; the former was born in middle Tennessee, September 15, 1808, is still living and resides at Fulton, Ky.; the latter was born December 4, 1809, and died January 24, 1860. Dr. McFall was born in Kentucky and reared in Tennessee, and was brought up on his father's farm until the breaking out of the war in 1861. On the 5th of May in that year he enlisted in Company E, Fourth Tennessee Infantry (Confederate) and served to the end of the war, participating in the battles of Shiloh, Perryville, Missionary Ridge, and others. At the close of the war he returned home, exchanged his gun for the plow, and for ten years remained on the farm. He then commenced the study of dentistry with Dr. Hunsaker, remaining with him for three years, and in 1874 graduated from the Missouri Dental College at St. Louis. Upon graduating he came to Mayfield and opened dental rooms, where he has since continued the practice of the profession. He is master of the art of dentistry, and enjoys a large and lucrative practice, as well as the full confidence and esteem of his patrons and friends. He was married in May, 1874, to Mrs. Anna Mayes, by which marriage they have one daughter. Mrs. McFall has two daughters by her former marriage. Dr. McFall is a member of the Methodist Church and K. of H.; his wife is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

MATTHEW J. McNEELY was born August 20, 1855, in Graves County, Ky. His parents were James and Caroline (Yates) McNeely, both natives of Tennessee. The father was a merchant, came to Kentucky and settled about eight miles southeast of Wingo, in 1833, where he followed farming for many years. He died September 19, 1877. He was a member of the Baptist Church; his widow is still living in this county at the age of sixty years. She also is a member of the Baptist Church. They had ten children, six of whom are now living: Nancy P., the wife of William Adams, of this county; Mary, the wife of A. G. Coltharp, of this county; James W., married to Miss Charlton, of Wingo; Serena, the wife of P. H. Wadlington, of this county; Matthew J. and David S.; the latter is clerking with his brother, whose name heads this sketch. Matthew J. began for himself in the mercantile business at the age of twenty-one. He also engaged at the same time in stock-raising in Missouri. He opened out a new stock of dry goods, notions, boots, shoes, hats and caps, etc., at Wingo, in 1880. He has been very successful, his sales amounting annually from $11,000 to $18,000. His outlook is very encouraging, and he bids fair to become one of the leading merchants and business men of the county.

H. J. MOORMAN, Graves County, was born January 22, 1851, in Breckinridge County, Ky. He is a son of John and Jane V. (Owen) Moorman; these parents were natives of the same county and State. The father died May 19, 1863, aged forty-three years. The mother died in 1853, aged twenty-three years. H. J. Moorman was brought up on his father's farm, and after the latter's death he lived with his grandparents (Owen) till the age of eighteen; he then attended the Litchfield College at Litchfield, Grayson Co., Ky., one term, and then attended the Owensboro Baptist College, at Owensboro, Ky., one term, after which he read law with his uncle, W. T. Owen, of Owensboro, one year; he then was admitted to the bar. He opened a law office at Calhoun, Ky., where he practiced till the fall of 1875, when he removed to Charleston, Mo., where he practiced his profession till in February, 1878, when he, on account of sickness, moved to Mayfield, Graves Co., Ky., and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. Mr. Moorman was married May 23, 1877, to Miss Sallie Scoggins, of Mayfield: these parents have had four children, two of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Moorman are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

JESSE M. MOSS, Graves County, was born in Smith County, Tenn., January 3, 1846, and was taken by his parents to Butler County, Ky., in infancy, where he grew to manhood, and in 1862, entered Company E, Third Kentucky Cavalry, with which he remained until the close of the late war. He is the son of Hugh Moss, a native of Smith County, Tenn., who was born in 1807, and is still living. Hugh's wife, Delilah B., daughter of Nelson and Betsey (West) Walker, of Halifax County, Va., was born in 1812, and is still living. Their offspring are Martha J. (Pigg), John K., George W., Mary M. (Pirtle), subject, Amanda F. (French) and Caroline (Byrns). On account of the late war, subject could only secure a business education, but he is a constant reader of books and current literature. He was married December 21, 1876, to Miss Georgia A., daughter of George C. and Lucinda (Austin) Brown, of Graves County, Ky., and to them have been born Albert C. K. and Edward L. Subject commenced merchandising in 1879, at which he has been successful. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Methodist and a Democrat.

JOHN P. MOTHERAL was born November 11, 1818, in Wilson County, Tenn., and was taken by his parents to Lawrence County, Ala., in 1819, and brought to Graves County, Ky., in 1831, where he still retains his residence. His father, John Motheral, was born in 1795, in North Carolina, was a member of Gen. Carroll's body guard in the war of 1812, and died in 1870. He was the son of Samuel Motheral, a native of Ireland. John married Cynthia, daughter of Rev. James Farr, of Wilson County, Tenn. She was born in 1794, and died in 1854. Their children are William C., subject, James F., Samuel A., Robert A., Donald C., Cynthia E., Sarah J. (Kennady) and Joseph K. On March 29, 1849, John P. Motheral was married to Miss Hetty, born June 10, 1829, and a daughter of William and Charlotte (Sims) McCuan, of Graves County, and from this union sprang Mary J. (Gates), William J., Cynthia C. (Howard), John R. (deceased), James H., Martha W. (Farmer), Josie H. (Lawrence) and Lucy E. Subject is a successful farmer, owning 320 acres of good land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity; also of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and affiliates with the Democratic party.

ROBERT C. MULLINS, Graves County, was born January 9, 1837, in Rutherford County, Tenn. His parents are David and Nancy (Taylor) Mullins, both natives of Halifax County, Va. The parents are still living, residents of Graves County, and both have passed the allotted time to man—seventy years. They have been active and devoted members of the Baptist Church for many years. These parents have had nine children, seven of whom are now living. Robert C. has followed farming all his life. He began on eighty acres of land, to which he has added until he now owns more than 300, and has over 200 acres of it well improved. He was married, in 1858, to Miss Eliza Hopkins, daughter of Col. William and Lucy M. Hopkins, of Graves County. The colonel died in 1842, and his widow in 1871, at the age of seventy years. Both were devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To Mr. and Mrs. Mullins have been born six children: David W., Luella, Robert G., Georgia A., John Lane and Jesse. David W. is married to Miss Ella Lane, of Graves County; Stanley is their only child. Luella is the wife of R. G. Adams; Robert F. is their child. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mullins are devoted members of the Baptist Church. The former has been a deacon in his church ever since he became a member. He has been Sunday-school superintendent the most of the time, and is an active worker and supporter of the temperance cause. He is also a member of the Masonic order, and of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 201.

HON. BERNARD A. NEALE, of Graves County, was born in Henry County, Ky., June 2, 1833, and is a son of Alfred W. and Lucy (Roberts) Neale. His father was a farmer, and died in 1873, aged seventy-three years; his mother died in 1836, in Terre Haute, Ind. His grandparents were from Halifax County, Va., and settled in Kentucky, in 1804, when it was in reality the "dark and bloody ground." Mr. Neale was brought up on his father's farm in Calloway County, where the family had removed when young Neale was but six years old. His facilities for receiving an education were limited and confined to the public schools of the time. At the age of twenty he commenced work at the carpenter's trade, and at the same time read law. By his own exertions and perseverance he mastered the profession, and in 1859 was licensed to practice by the judges of the supreme court, and was admitted to the bar, in Marshall County. He practiced there until March, 1861 when he settled in Arkansas. In May, 1862, he entered the Confederate Army, and served in the trans-

Mississippi department until June, 1864. He then practiced law in Arkansas until May, 1867, when he returned to Kentucky, and located in Mayfield, and opened a law office. In 1874 he was elected commonwealth's attorney for this Judicial District, which position he held for six years, and the duties of which he discharged with marked ability. Mr. Neale still continues in the practice of his profession, but is also engaged in farming. His beautiful farm "Woodlawn," lying one mile south of Mayfield, is one of the best improved farms in the county. It contains 165 acres of fine land in an excellent state of cultivation, well stocked and improved in the highest degree. Mr. Neale was married April 28, 1861, to Miss S. M. Alexander of Paducah, formerly of Tennessee. They have three children: two sons, Eddie B. and Charles R. A., and one daughter, Lucy Lee. He is a member of the Masonic order, and of the K. of H. Mr. Neale has always been a studious man and a great reader, and few men in the country possess a greater fund of information, or a more perfect knowledge of all the great questions of the day. He is a natural statesman, though taking no active part in politics. In 1872 he was selected by a committee to deliver an historical address to the pioneers of Jackson's Purchase at Wadesborough. This address was interesting as well on account of it accurate relation of facts, as the many traditionary legends he related as given him by the old settlers. Eighteen hundred copies of the addressed were published. Though in moderate circumstances himself, Mr. Neale is the liberal patron of the poor and oppressed, the widow and the orphan. August 3, 1885, Mr. Neale was elected by the Democratic party to represent Graves County in the General Assembly for the session of 1885–86.

S. A. NORMAN was born September 14, 1850, in Humphreys County, Tenn., and is the son of Simpson A. and Elizabeth (Van Hook) Norman, both natives of Tennessee. The father is a farmer, and is still living in his native county and State; the mother died in 1860, aged thirty-two years. S. A. Norman is the fourth child of a family of seven children, and remained with his parents until eighteen years of age, when he came to Graves County, and engaged as a farm laborer. Later he farmed a place on shares, at which he was reasonably successful. In 1880 he was appointed deputy sheriff of the county, and served in that capacity until 1881, at which time he gave up the office, in order to settle up a large estate, estimated at $75,000. With this affair, Mr. Norman demonstrated unusual business tact, collecting over $34,000, all of which was promptly paid over and accounted for. He bought his present farm of 221 acres in 1881, and is now one of the substantial agriculturists in the county. He was married January 1, 1874, to Miss N. C. Dunbar, of Graves County. Four children bless this union, Marion C., Edna E., Charley and Margaret E. Politically Mr. Norman is identified with the Democratic party.

DAVID G. PARK was born January 31, 1855, in Graves County. He is a son of Noah and Margaret (McCain) Park. The father was born in North Carolina; the mother in Tennessee. David was reared on his father's farm, and after attending a literary school took up the study of law under the preceptorship of W. W. Tice. In 1876 he went to Louisville University and graduated in the class of 1877; he then returned to Mayfield, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. Mr. Park was married May 23, 1878, to Miss Nellie Hanson of Mayfield; this union has been blessed with two children, Ruth and Margaret. Mr. Park is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H. and of the Baptist Church. Mrs. Park is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

ELDER JOHN M. PERKINS was born at his present home in Graves County, Ky., March 1, 1847, and has all his life resided in the same place. His father, Wright Perkins, a native of Williamson County, Tenn., was born in 1814, came to Graves County, Ky., in 1837, and here died in 1848. He was for many years a deacon in the Primitive Baptist Church. His father, Eben, of North Carolina, died in this county, in 1850. Wright Perkins' wife was Mary C., daughter of Peter and Comfort (Beard) Brown, of Williamson County, Tenn., and their children are Francis W., Milena E. (Seaver), James A., William H., John M. and Mary W. (Seaver). Our subject was favored with a good English education, and was engaged in teaching school for about eight years. He was married August 29, 1872, to Miss Winifred D., daughter of John A. and D. E. (Rodgers) McNeill, of Graves County, and to them have been born Cordelia M., Lemuel, Prudie (deceased), Milena and Herbert. In 1873 Mr. Perkins was licensed to preach by the North Mt. Zion Primitive Baptist Church, and the following year was ordained to the full work of the ministry, by the laying on of hands of the presbytery, composed of Elders W. W. Worrell, T. S. Dalton and T. F. Harrison, of Soldier Creek Association. He has been a pastor of Pilgrim's Rest, Kan., Soldier Creek, North Mount Zion, Harmony, New Hope and Mount Pleasant churches. He is engaged in farming, and is in politics a Democrat.

BENJAMIN F. PILE, Graves County, a young and enterprising merchant at Fancy Farm, was born August 10, 1857, in Graves County, Ky., and is the eighth of nine children born to J. V. and Mary E. (Phillips) Pile, of Washington County, Ky., of French and English origin, respectively. They came to Graves County about 1830, and settled near Fancy Farm, Hickman County. The father owns 500 acres of land in Graves County, and about 160 in Hickman County, about half improved. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Benjamin F. Pile has always lived with his parents; he was reared on a farm, and received a good English education; he attended school at Milburn three years, at Mayfield one year, and taught school three terms in Ballard and Graves Counties. He is now engaged with his father in general merchandising at Fancy Farm; the business was commenced about twenty-five years ago, under the firm name of Pile & Willett; in 1880 Benjamin F. became partner, and the name was changed to Pile & Son. Subject is also postmaster at Fancy Farm, having been appointed in 1882. He was married in September, 1883, to Elmine Boswell, of Ballard County and daughter of G. H. and Fannie (Smith) Boswell, natives of Kentucky. Her parents came to Graves County about 1840, thence went to Indiana, where they remained four years, thence back to Ballard County, where they have resided ever since. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Pile are members of the Methodist Church.

L. P. PALMER, deputy circuit clerk, was born March 16, 1856, in Benton, Marshall Co., Ky. He is a son of Philander and S. A. (Whittamore) Palmer. The father was born in New Hampshire; he died in 1880, aged fifty-eight; he was a lawyer by profession, and of rare attainments, and few men of the county possessed a greater fund of information than he. He was solicited to be a candidate for the court of appeals, but declined the honor. The mother was born in 1827 in Rockingham County, N. C., and now lives in Benton, Marshall Co., Ky. After attending the public schools of Benton, Mr. Palmer went to Irvington, Ind.; there attended the Butler University one session, and in 1879 went to Colorado, where he remained one year, also performed clerical work there about one year. In 1882 he came to Mayfield, where he has since performed the duties of circuit clerk with marked ability and dispatch.

DR. GREEN L. POPLIN was born December 19, 1815, in Montgomery County, N. C., and reared in Bedford County, Tenn. He commenced the study of medicine at the age of seventeen, and graduated at the Louisville Medical Institute, March 5, 1842. He then returned to his home in Tennessee, and continued to practice his profession eighteen years from the same office in which he studied. In 1853 he came to Graves County and practiced his profession here five years; he then moved to Bloomfield, Stoddard Co., Mo., in the winter of 1858, and continued to practice his profession until the breaking out of the war. In the fall of 1867 the doctor moved to Poplar Bluff, Mo., and opened a drug store and also practiced his profession until 1877, when he left that place for Mayfield, Ky., where he now resides. During his stay at the Bluffs he entered heart and soul into every public enterprise, and assisted with all his energy in the organization of the Poplar Bluff Immigration Society; was elected its president and continued to act in that position as long as it lasted. He also assisted in establishing and building the Black River Seminary, of which he was elected president. In connection with Dr. G. T. Bartlett, the doctor founded a newspaper at that place, called the Black River News, and continued editor and proprietor for five years. He served two years as one of the judges of the county court, during which time the great railroad contract was made; he acted as chairman of the court, and this contract was the means of laying the chief corner-stone of the present and prospective greatness of Poplar Bluff. In 1866 he was elected to the legislature from Stoddard County, Mo., and served two years. The doctor has been married three times; his last union was October 16, 1873, with Mattie E. Hall, of Ripley County, Mo., by whom he has one son. He has three children by his former marriages.

THE POWELL FAMILY. Willoughby Powell is a native of North Carolina, and was born in 1754. His wife, Polly, was born in 1756, and they were married in 1776. Their union was propitious, and was blessed with a numerous offspring consisting of Lazarus, born in 1777; Willoughby, 1781; James, 1784; Harrison, 1787; Sally, 1791; Henderson, 1795; Harbert, 1797. Harbert Powell was born in Logan County, and removed with his parents early in the present century to Henderson County, Ky.; then to Graves County, Ky., in 1848, where he died in 1867. His wife, Cassandra, daughter of Allen Jones, was born in 1799, and died in 1876. From this union sprang Joseph, Allen, Nannetty (McMurray), Permelia (Pritchet), Perlina (Powell), George W., Melvina (Pritchet), Louisa (Meacham), Benjamin F., Mary J., Charles M. and Sarah.

BENJAMIN F. POWELL, a native of Henderson County, Ky., was born April 2, 1836, and came with his parents, in 1848, to his present place of residence in Graves County. In youth he procured a good English education, and is taking an active interest in the education of his children in literature and music. On November 29, 1866, he was married to Miss Elizabeth E., daughter of William B. and Martha (Whitis) Adams, of Graves County, and to them have been born Lorenzo D., Mary C. and Albert L. William B. Adams' parents were Edmund and Elizabeth (Hammons) Adams. Subject is a farmer, owning 180 acres of good land in a high state of cultivation, on which he successfully raises wheat, corn and live stock. He is also a mason, burning and making his own brick. Mr. P. is one of the successful and rising men of Graves County.

CHARLES M. POWELL was born in Henderson County, Ky., December 19, 1839, and in 1848 came with his parents to Graves County, where he is now residing. In youth he procured a good business education, and is a reading man. He was married February 14, 1859, to Miss Sallie A., daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Caldwell) Cavitt, of Graves County, Ky., and to them have been born Martha B., Louisa W., Linn B., Margaret C., Melvin D., Ida M. and Fannie. Subject is a farmer, owning 160 acres of good and valuable land. He is a member of the Chrisitan Church.

DR. J. C. REYNOLDS was born in Graves County, Ky., January 16, 1844. He is a son of Pryor and Lucretia (Williams) Reynolds. The doctor was reared on his father's farm, where he remained until the age of nineteen. He then commenced the study of dentistry with his brother, and after working three years under his instruction, he was admitted as a partner. This partnership continued until 1882, when his brother retired from the firm. Through close attention to study the doctor has mastered his profession, and is now prepared to perform all work in his line with neatness and dispatch. He was married in 1866 to Miss Mary Smith, of Graves County; three sons have blessed this union. Dr. and Mrs. Reynolds are members of the Baptist Church.

S. P. RIDGWAY, Graves County, was born March 24, 1840, in Weakley County, Tenn., and is a son of John and Sarah (Caldwell) Ridgway. His grandparents were Samuel and Rozeman Ridgway. The Ridgway family are from Virginia, where John Ridgway was born, in Halifax County, September 9, 1809. He removed to Tennesse, then came to Kentucky, and died in Mayfield in 1882. His widow, Sarah (Caldwell) Ridgway, is a daughter of James and Mary Caldwell, and was born in Sumner County, Tenn., September 7, 1813. She is still living and resides with her son, S. P. Ridgway. S. P. Ridgway was brought up on his father's farm, and attended the schools of the neighborhood until the age of eighteen. He then came to Mayfield, entered the Mayfield high school, remained five months, when he accepted a position in the county clerk's office, which he held until the breaking out of the war. July 15, 1861, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, Third Kentucky Regiment of Infantry, in Montgomery County, Tenn,, and proceeded with the regiment to Bowling Green, Ky., when that place was the headquarters of the Confederate Army. In his long service his experience was the oft-told story of hundreds and thousands who followed the fortunes of the Confederacy until its star of destiny set on the field of Appomattox. It was made up of a great deal of hard marching, considerable severe fighting, interspersed with sickness now and then. He was with his command at Shiloh, where the captain of his company, the brave Emerson, received his death wound. After the army retreated to Corinth, he was promoted captain to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Capt. Emerson. He was with Gen. Breckinridge at Baton Rouge, and later with Gen. Van Dorn at Corinth; he served for a time under Gen. Joe Johnston, and in the spring of 1864 his regiment was mounted and attached to Forrest's cavalry. He was with that great cavalry leader during the remainder of his service, and participated in all of his battles, though not actively engaged in the battle of Paducah, where the brave Col. Thompson fell. After the war was over, Capt. Ridgway returned to Mayfield and engaged in merchandising, which he continued for nine years. On May 4, 1875, the First National Bank of Mayfield was organized, and Capt. Ridgway was appointed cashier, which position he has since filled with satisfaction to all. He was married June 15, 1865, to Miss Virginia C. Stanfield, a native of Madison County, Tenn. They have four daughters. Capt. Ridgway and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

J. E. ROBBINS was born August 4, 1854, in Graves County, and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Shelton) Robbins. The father was born in Humphreys County, Tenn., and died February 14, 1873, aged sixty-two. The mother was born in Butler County, Ky., in 1820 and resides in Wingo; her father, Jeremiah Shelton, came to Graves County in 1820, and built a small log-cabin near Mayfield. He went back for his family and found, on his return to Graves County, that his cabin had been destroyed by fire during his absence, which obliged him to settle on Spring Creek, where he remained for eight years. He then moved to Weakley County, Tenn., and officiated as a Primitive Baptist preacher. J. E. Robbins, our subject, after studying law, began the practice of his profession in 1878, and is now a member of the law firm of Robertson, Smith & Robbins. He was married October 9, 1879, to Miss Eva Chowning, of Mayfield, Ky., by whom he has one son. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins are members of the Christian Church.

CORNELIUS ROGERS is a native of Kentucky, and was born September 10, 1846. He is a son of Stanton and Delilah (Brogdin) Rogers, both natives of Kentucky, and both living at the present time in Calloway County, where the father follows farming. Subject remained with his parents until nineteen years of age, when he engaged in business for himself as a farmer, purchasing a tract of eighty acres of land, in what was known as Swan Precinct, on which he lived for three years, at the end of which time he disposed of his place and bought another farm in the same locality, which was his home until 1873. In the latter year he moved to his present place of residence, a beautiful farm of 256 acres in Lynnville Precinct, and is now justly considered one of the leading farmers in his community. He was married October 15, 1865, to Delilah, daughter of Joseph and Sina (Kelly) Andrus. To this marriage have been born nine children, eight of whom are living. Their names are as follows: Frank, Glen, Claude, Ella, Willie, Walter, Beulah and James. Mr. Rogers is an independent Democrat in politics. Mrs. Rogers is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

CHARLES I. SHERRILL was born May 14, 1852, in Stewart County, Tenn. He is a son of J. S. and Elizabeth A. (Stevenson) Sherrill. The father was born in Christian County, Ky., and died in 1878, aged fifty-seven years. He owned a farm in Graves County, and was considered one of the best farmers in the section. He handled large quantities of tobacco, as high as from 800,000 to 1,000,000 pounds in a year. Charles was brought up on his father's farm, and at the death of the latter bought out his mother's interest and managed the farm until her death, which occurred August 30, 1883. He then sold this farm and bought another, one mile southwest of Mayfield, consisting of 160 acres. December 1, 1883, he engaged in the livery business in Mayfield, which he still continues. This is known as the "Mammoth Stable," and well deserves this name, as the stock kept here is not excelled by any in this part of the State. Mr. Sherrill was married, in November, 1877, to Miss Alice B. Swain, of Henry County, Tenn. One son has blessed this union. Mr. Sherrill is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and of the Masonic fraternity. Mrs. Sherrill is a member of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM T. SIMS is the son of William and Sarah (Orr) Sims, the father a native of Alabama and the mother of Tennessee. Mr. Sims, Sr., is a farmer, which vocation he has followed all his life, and is living at the present time in Calloway County, Ky., where he moved in 1874. William T. Sims, a native of Tennessee, passed his youth and early manhood in working on his father's place, and in 1855 began life for himself as farmer and lumber merchant, which occupations he followed until the breaking out of the civil war, in 1861, when he enlisted in the Forty-sixth Regiment Tennessee Infantry, with which he served until 1865, participating in the battles and skirmishes of Gens. Johnston and Hood's celebrated campaigns. He went out as a private, but on the reorganization of the regiment in 1863 was promoted captain of his company, and held his commission until mustered out of service at the close of the war. Mr. Sims was married, in 1866, to Mrs. Hart, daughter of Oswell and Macinda (Wheeler) Brown, both natives of Kentucky. In 1878 he came to his present place of residence, in Lynnville Precinct, where he owns one of the best improved farms in the county. He was elected magistrate in 1878, and again in 1882, and holds the office at the present time. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and together with his wife belongs to the Lynnville Methodist Episcopal Church South.

S. R. SMITH, Graves County, was born March 15, 1818, in Granville County, N. C. He is a son of Samuel and Sallie W. (Williams) Smith, both natives of North Carolina, and of English origin. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, where he remained until about the age of eighteen. He then entered a dry goods store as clerk, there remained about five years, after which he opened a general store in Montgomery County, Tenn. This he continued about two years. His father's death occurred about this time, which gave him possession of the farm, consisting of 300 acres. He then engaged in farming about fifteen years, after which he sold this farm and removed to Texas, where he bought 400 acres of land, paying for the same $600. After holding this land one year, he sold it for $3,600, and came to Christian County, Ky., where he hired out his slaves and engaged in merchandising till 1859. He then purchased 320 acres of land in Graves County, at $12 per acre, and engaged in farming pursuits until 1864. He then sold this land for $20 per acre, and removed to Mayfield, where he engaged in the grocery and dry goods business till 1881, when he retired, but has recently re-engaged in business, and is now conducting an extensive dry goods establishment. Mr. Smith was married, in 1839, to Miss Mary J. Patillo, of Warren County, N. C. She died in 1876, aged fifty-two. They had four children—two sons and two daughters. Of the sons, R. E. was formerly proprietor of the Southern Hotel at this point, and is now a dry goods merchant, and William M., who graduated from the Louisville Law School at the age of eighteen, is now engaged in the practice of his profession. Of the daughters, Saluda married J. M. Hists, and is now living in Louisville, Ky., and Mary married R. L. Anderson, and is now living in Olala, Fla. Mr. Smith's second marriage was in 1881, to Mrs. Sherrill, of Graves County. This lady died August 30, 1883. Our subject is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and of the Masonic fraternity.

THOMAS M. STEWART is a native of Weakley County, Tennessee, and was born January 15, 1845; was reared in Henry County, the same State, and removed to Graves County, Kentucky, in 1870, where he has since continued to reside. He is the son of Green F. Stewart, a native of North Carolina, who died in 1857, at the age of thirty-nine years. Subject's mother was Sarah A., daughter of Thomas Milam, of Weakley County, Tennessee. To her husband and herself were born Samantha C. (married first to Mr. Moore, and afterward to Mr. Brown), Margaret V. (Tharp),, subject, Rebley A., James E., Sallie F. (married first to Mr. Eaker, and then to Mr. Alexander) and Green W. On August 16, 1876, subject was married to Miss Delilah E., daughter of Tilman and Susan A. (Jones) Johnson, of Henry County, Tennessee, and to them have been born Eunice M., Herbert W., Daisy A. and Thomas A. In 1861 Mr. Stewart enlisted in Company I, Forty sixth Tennessee Infantry, and afterward in the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, with which he served to the end of the war, during which he lost an arm at the battle of Harrisburg, Miss. His vocation at present is that of a farmer, and he owns 126 acres of good land, in a high state of cultivation. Having served four years as deputy, he was, in 1882, elected to the office of assessor of Graves County, which position he still retains. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics is identified with the Democratic party.

Z SUMMERVILLE, Graves County, was born August 16, 1847, in Calloway County, Kentucky, and is the son of Milton Summerville, who was well and favorably known throughout the State as a trader and speculator and who began business by buying and selling poultry, and after a time added horses, mules and cotton, principally the latter, and at his death, which occurred in Mississippi in 1861, at the age of forty-five, he was one of the most extensive dealers in cotton in the State. At the age of seven years, Z. Summerville, our subject, came with his parents to Graves County, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1867, since which time he has been in the confectionery business. He was appointed postmaster in 1868, and held the office until 1881. In 1871 he married Miss Willie Turner, of Graves County, by whom he has two sons and one daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Summerville are members of the Baptist Church.

DR. J. W. THOMAS was born September 14, 1854, in Warren County, Mo., and is a son of John W. and A. (Camp) Thomas. The father was born in Warren County, Ky., and died in 1854. The mother died in 1881 at the age of sixty. Dr. Thomas was reared in Missouri and in 1870 went to Lexington, Ky., where he attended the university for one year, after which he went to St. Louis, and clerked in a store in that city until 1875, when he came to Mayfield and began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. R. H. Fristoe. After two years of study he returned to St. Louis, and attended the medical college there for one term; thence went to Nashville, where he attended the medical college and graduated in 1878 with the highest honors of the class, and for his proficiency in all the branches taught in the college was presented with a fine gold medal After completing his studies he came to Graves County, since which time he has practiced his profession with marked success, and has resided in Mayfield since 1881. Dr. Thomas was married in 1878 to Miss Fannie A. Carney, of Graves County, by whom he has two children. Dr. and Mrs. Thomas are members of the Christian Church.

Z. B. THOMAS was born February 11, 1824, in Mercer County, Ky. He is a son of Edmond G. and Sarah (Briles) Thomas. The father was born in Virginia; he died in February, 1862, aged sixty-eight. The mother was born in Mercer County, Ky.; she died in September, 1867. Our subject was reared in Shelby County principally. In about 1848 the family came to Graves County, where he worked at farming pursuits till about the age of twenty-eight, since which time he has been engaged in milling business, and about eight years in the woolen-mill business; of this mill he owns one-third. He was married in 1856 to Elizabeth Albritton, of North Carolina. She died March 15, 1865. They had four children, two of whom are living—one son and one daughter.

W. W. TICE was born June 5, 1834, in Washington County, N. Y. He is a son of Abraham and Martha (Whipple) Tice, also natives of New York. His grandfather, John Tice, was of German origin and served in the Revolutionary war. W. W. Tice was reared on his father's farm and attended the schools of the neighborhood. At fourteen he attended the high school at Brockport, after which he entered the Union College at Schenectady and graduated in 1855. He then came to Mayfield and taught school about three years. He then took up the study of law under the preceptorship of R. L. Mayes and was admitted to the bar in 1859, since which time he has been actively engaged in his profession. In May, 1865, he was elected commonwealth's attorney; this position he honorably held for over three years. Mr. Tice was married in 1871 to Mrs. Harriet Johnson of Graves County. He is a member of the old school Presbyterian Church, and of the Masonic fraternity.

D. C. TIMMONS, Graves County, is a son of John H. and Ann Eliza (Alderdice) Timmons, the father a native of Weakley County, Tenn., and the mother of North Carolina. John H. Timmons is a mechanic and millwright and lives at the present time in Weakley County, Tenn. The mother died in May, 1878. D. C. Timmons, with his father, worked at different mechanical pursuits until the age of twenty-two years, when he engaged in business for himself as a house carpenter and millwright. After following the above trades for several years, he commenced farming in Weakley County, Tenn., and in 1879 came to Graves County, Ky., locating in Lynnville Precinct, where he purchased a small farm of sixty acres, the beginning of his present home of 136 acres. He was married November 15, 1871, to Sarah C., daughter of Robert and Winny McCulloch, by whom he had five children: J. B., Arthur S., Rhoda B., Aver L. and Winnie Ann. Mrs. Timmons died in 1881, and the following year Mr. Timmons was married to Cornelia A., daughter of William and Jane Doublin; to this union have been born two children: Robert Lee and Clara May. Mr. Timmons is a member of the Masonic fraternity, filling the office of deacon at the present time in Boydsville, Tenn., Lodge, No. 121.

JAMES T. TORIAN, Graves County, was born January 22, 1832, in Halifax County, Va., and is a son of Andrew and Betty (Finch) Torian, both parents being natives of the same State and county. When a child his parents came to Christian County, Ky., where they purchased a farm and resided there until the autumn of 1865, when they moved to this locality. In 1858 James came to Graves County, with two brothers, and purchased 220 acres of land, which they have since increased until they now own between 500 and 600 acres. In 1882 they built a saw and grist-mill, which they are now operating in connection with farming. The father died in 1883 at the age of ninety-three. The mother is still living. James was married in 1875 to Miss Ellen Grant, who was born in east Tennessee and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Torian is a member of the Christian Church.

DR. WILLIAM A. TURNER was born November 5, 1834, in Wilson County, Tenn., and reared in Davidson County. He is a son of Richard A. and Martha A. (Cleaves) Turner. The father was born in Sumner County, Tenn.; he died July 5, 1850, aged forty. The mother was born in Davidson County, June 15, 1813, and still lives there on her farm. Dr. Turner was reared on his father's farm, attended the school of the place, and later attended the high school of Nashville, Tenn. In 1854 he commenced the study of medicine with Drs. Wilson and Briggs, of Nashville. He continued under their preceptorship three years and graduated February 27, 1857, from the medical department of the University of Nashville. He then came to Fancy Farm, Graves County, where he practiced two years, after which he removed to Mayfield and followed his profession till 1862, when he was elected clerk of the circuit court, which office he held six years. He then practiced law until 1874, since which time he has been engaged in settling up estates. The past two years he has held the office of city judge. The doctor was married in 1859 to Miss Corrilla R., daughter of Judge R. K. Williams, who was circuit judge and later chief justice of the supreme court of Kentucky. To Dr. and Mrs. Turner have been born five children—two sons and three daughters. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

H. A. VANN was born in Graves County, Ky., October 19, 1846, and is the eldest of the two boys and one girl born to David and Sarah (Jackson) Vann, natives of Missouri and Kentucky respectively, and of Irish descent. His paternal grandfather was Gabriel Vann, and his maternal grandfather John Jackson. David Vann died in 1852, and subject lived on the home farm with his mother until October 26, 1865, when he married Nancy T. Morris, daughter of John and Maria (Innman) Morris, natives of North Carolina, and among the early settlers of Graves County. His only child is named Lavina E. After his marriage, Mr. Vann resided in the Wingo District for two years and then a year at Arlington. In 1879 he purchased forty-one acres of his present farm, where he has since resided. In October, 1863, he enlisted in the Twelfth Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Capt. John Lynn, W. W. Faulkner colonel commanding, and was at the battle of Talahatchee; was taken prisoner, and on his release came home in the spring of 1865 and engaged in farming. Mr. Vann is an Odd Fellow, was formerly a Granger, and has been school trustee, and he and wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

C. C. WADE, Graves County, is the son of Hampton and Mary (King) Wade, and was born in Henry County, Va. The father was a farmer, and in 1844 emigrated to Weakley County, Tenn., where he remained until his death in 1868, at the age of seventy-four years. The mother died in January, 1881, at an advanced age. C. C. Wade remained with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, when he engaged in business for himself as a farmer in the southern part of Graves County, where he purchased a tract of land, on which he resided for a period of fourteen years, when he disposed of his farm and bought his present beautiful place in Lynnville Precinct, which has been his home ever since. This farm comprises 200 acres of fertile land, and is justly considered one of the best plantations in southern Graves. Mr. Wade was married October 19, 1852, to Mary Ann, daughter of James and Sarah (Filgro) McCuan, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Wade are the parents of the following children: Sallie Ann, Mary Jane (deceased), James Hampton, Ady, B. R., William C., George W., Virginia C. and Florence Lee. Mr. Wade is an active member of Lynnville Lodge, No. 408, A. F. & A. M. In politics he is a liberal Democrat, voting for the man rather than the party. The dates of birth of Mr. Wade and family are as follows: C. C. Wade, born May 24, 1829; Mary A. Wade, born November 13, 1827; Sallie Ann Wade, born August 11, 1853; Mary Jane Wade, born October 9, 1854; James Hampton Wade, born August 21, 1856; Ada Wade, born November 26, 1858; B. R. Wade, born August 29, 1860; William C. Wade, born October 16, 1862; George W. Wade, born November 26, 1864; Virginia C. Wade, born July 15, 1868; Florence L. Wade, born June 13, 1873.

JOHN B. WATSON, farmer, Graves County, was born September 23, 1834, in Davidson County, Tenn., and is the eldest of eight children born to William and Mary (Pierce) Watson, also natives of Tennessee. William Watson, father of our subject, was the son of William and Lucy Ann (Phipps) Watson. John B. came to this county with his parents in 1842, remained on the home farm until eighteen years of age, and then began farming on his own account. November 24, 1852, he married Sarah Jane Pryor, of Graves County, and daughter of Blanton and Catherine (Clapps) Pryor, natives of Alabama and of Dutch descent. To this union were born eight children: William R. (deceased), John F. (deceased), Thomas H., Francis L. and Mary A. (both deceased), Eudora C. (now Mrs. Spess), a seventh child deceased, and James L. Two years after his marriage Mr. Watson removed to Mississippi County, Mo., where he resided eleven years. In 1867 he located on his present farm of eighty acres in Graves County. Mrs. Watson died in December, 1865, aged thirty-three years, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In April, 1868, Mr. Watson married Mary Jane Suit, of Missouri, a native of Graves County, Ky., and daughter of Bartlett and Alcy (Nanney) Suit, natives of Tennessee. To this marriage have also been born eight children: Eolian May, Altha M., Lena O., Alcy M., Isaac G., Bertha E., Iva M. and an eighth child, deceased. Mr. Watson has served as justice of the peace, and is a much esteemed citizen.

N. B. WATTS was born May 15, 1837, in Missouri. He is a son of Wesley and Mary C. (Bressie) Watts. The father was born in middle Tennessee; he died in 1841, aged thirty-six years. The mother was born in 1801 in Virginia and is now living with her son in Mayfield. The family came to Graves County, in 1838 and engaged in farming; this business he continued until 1880, when the Watts Brothers opened a general family grocery and have since been successfully engaged at this business. N. B. Watts was married in December, 1860, to Miss Elizabeth Pritchard of Graves County. They have six children—five daughters and one son, John W., now express agent at this place. Mr. Watts is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JAMES T. WEBB was born June 8, 1853, in Graves County, and is a son of J. G. and Mary (Dunbar) Webb. The father was born in Warren County, and about 1848 came to this county, where he still resides on his farm. James T. Webb spent the first eighteen years of his life on his father's farm, at which time he began teaching school, which he continued for five years. In 1876 he began the study of law with Judge R. H. Williams and was admitted to the bar in 1877, since which time he has been practicing with marked success. He was married in December, 1878, to Mrs. M. N. Johnston, of Graves County. They have had two children, one of whom is living. Mrs. Webb has two children by her first husband.

AMOS WEST was born September 27, 1837, in Logan County, Ky. He is a son of Richard and Amy (Williamson) West. The father was born in Logan County, and died March 4, 1841, at the age of thirty-five. The mother was born in Virginia, and died in June, 1880, aged sixty-seven. Amos West came to Graves County with his mother in 1846, and assisted on her farm and attended the neighboring schools. After attending the Linden Seminary, Tennessee, he returned to Graves County, where he taught school for three years. At the breaking out of the war, he entered the Confederate Army, and in February, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant, which position he held until the close of the war, when he returned to Mayfield and secured a position as clerk with Smith & McElrath. He remained with the firm for two years, then with Mr. Hobson opened a grocery store, at the same time handling leaf tobacco. After continuing in the business for three years he sold out his interest in the grocery business. He was appointed by Judge Crossland circuit court commissioner, and held the position for two years. Mr. West was married on December 20, 1870, to Olivia Collins of Mayfield by whom he has two children—one son and one daughter. Mr. West is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JOSIAH C. WILLIAMS is a native of Hickman County, Ky., and was born February 5, 1833. In 1847 he was brought by his parents to Graves County, where he still resides. He is the son of Jordan C., and Salley D. (Boaz) Williams, whose children are Thomas S., subject, Joshua, Martha E. (Ladd), Polly A. (Starks), Robert, Lydia F. (Cannon) and Samuel. Subject was married December 20, 1854, to Miss Parthena A., daughter of Isaac and Betsey A. (Gray) Cannon of Graves County, and to them have been born William T. (deceased), Isaac J., Sallie A. (Carter), Martha C. (deceased), Jo. N., Joshua, John B., Robert, Horace K., Earnest (deceased) and a son unnamed, born February 5, 1883. Mr. Williams is a farmer and an extensive dealer in produce and live stock. He is the owner of 360 acres of good land in a splendid state of cultivation.

LEVI C. WILLIAMS, Graves County, was born in Davidson County, Tenn., November 26, 1828, where he was reared until 1845, when he removed with his parents to Fayette County, and in 1852 came to Graves County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Freeman Williams, a native of Dinwiddie County, Va., settled in Tennessee about 1800, and died in 1847, aged eighty-four years. He was the son of a Revolutionary soldier. Freeman's wife, Martha Coleman of Virginia, died in 1840, aged seventy years. Their children are Jordan C., Joseph, Harbert, Susan S. (Vaught), Joshua, Clem W., Nancy (Carper), Luke L., Rachel G., William N., subject and Berry P. On May 4, 1858, subject was married to Mrs. Mary F. Walthall (born November 20, 1834), daughter of W. C. and Mary A. (Mott) Scofield of Graves County, Ky., and to them have been born Martha A. (Pullen), Sarah L. (deceased), Mary T. (Roberts), Harbert L., and Cordelia (deceased). Subject is a farmer, having 270 acres of good land, in first-class condition. He is a worthy member of the A. F. & A. M., a member of the Christian Church, and a Democrat.

WILLIAM JEROME WILLINGHAM was born June 6, 1836, in Graves County, Ky.,

where he still resides. His father, Alexander H. Willingham, was a native of Henderson County, Ky., born in 1809, and died in Webster County, in 1882, a State senator at the time of his death. He carried the first United States Mail from Wadesboro to Iron Banks (now Columbus), Ky., was sheriff many years, and six times represented Graves County in the legislature. He was the son of Isaac, a Virginian, one of the first settlers in the Purchase. Subject's mother, Mary H. (Murray) Willingham, of Henderson County, died in 1850, at the age of thirty-nine years. Alexander H. was thrice married, and his child by his first wife is Pulaski M. By his second marriage: subject, James M., Benton P., Mary E. (Hardwick), Robert and Nancy E. Willingham. By his third wife: Amey J. (Walker and Couch), Kittie A. (Hall), Campbell H., Lucy A. and Susan A. (Eades). In youth subject was favored with a good education and is an extensive reader. He was married, in 1865, to Miss Sarah A., daughter of J. W. Willingham of Graves County. She was born September 29, 1847, and died January 12, 1872. From this union sprang William M. and Jennie R. On January 6, 1876, subject married Miss Maggie E., daughter of William R. and Mary A. (Burges) Roach, of Franklin County, Mo. (born October 29, 1850), and to them were born: James S., Bessie R., Oscar T., Daisey and Grover Cleveland. Mr. Willingham, our subject, commenced merchandising at Water Valley in 1874, and has been very successful. He served four years during the late war in the Twelfth Tennessee and Third Kentucky Infantry, Confederate cause. In politics he is a Democrat.

DANIEL WILSON, Graves County, was born December 22, 1807, in Mecklenburgh County, Va., and is the third of nine children born to William and Fannie (Moore), natives respectively of Amelia and Mecklenburgh Counties in the State named. The father was the son of Daniel and Sarah (Gresham) Wilson; the mother, daughter of George and Millie (Owen) Moore. In 1830 Daniel Wilson came on horseback to Trigg County, Ky., where he passed about two years superintending farm hands; thence he went to Christian County, and was one of the first to raise yellow tobacco in the counties named. In the fall of 1832 he returned to Virginia; in 1834, went to Fayette County, Tenn.; in the spring of 1835 he again came to Christian County, Ky., where he remained until 1846, when he moved to Trigg County and settled on a farm he had purchased in 1835. In 1854 he sold out and came to Graves County, and purchased 240 acres of his present farm. Notwithstanding the loss of some ten or twelve negroes by the war, he has since increased it to about 600 acres and improved it with substantial buildings. October 12, 1840, Mr. Wilson married Nancy C. Richardson of Trigg County, Ky. but a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., and daughter of Henry and Biggie (Waddle) Richardson. By this union Mr. Wilson had born to him eight children: Mary F. (now Green), Cornelia H. (now Stampel), W. M. Marshall, John O., D. B., Calhorine J. (now Wright), and Lula. The family are all members of the Baptist Church—Mr. Wilson for upwards of fifty-one years.

DANIEL B. WILSON, farmer, was born in Graves County, Ky., February 26, 1859, and is the sixth in a family of eight children —four boys and four girls—all living—born to Daniel and Caroline (Richardson) Wilson, natives of Virginia. (Fuller genealogical details are given in the sketch of Daniel Wilson above.) Our subject was fairly educated at the district schools, and at Mayfield, but was chiefly engaged on the home farm, until his marriage, December 6, 1883, to Miss Rena Leech, daughter of William and Nancy (Hughes) Leech, natives of Tennessee and Kentucky respectively, and of English extraction. Mrs. Rena Wilson for three years attended school at McKenzie, Tennessee, and is now a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Wilson is a member of the Baptist Church. He is the owner of 225 acres of good land, of which 150 acres are under cultivation and furnished with good buildings. He makes a specialty of breeding short-horn cattle and Berkshire hogs and is one of the most progressive young men of his district.

WILLIAM T. WIMAN, Graves County, a native of Meade County, Ky., was born January 18, 1832, and is the third of fifteen children of Milton S. and Elizabeth (Thorp) Wiman, natives of Washington County, Ky., and of Dutch and Scotch descent respectively. December 16, 1852, he married Miss Amanda M., daughter of James and Elizabeth (Fulgham) Lamm, natives of Tennessee, and to his union with her were born twelve children: John M., Minerva A. (now Maxey), Margaret E., a fourth child never named, William A., George H., Thomas O., James A., Mary E., Hattie A., Walter G. and Holly O. The parents of Mr. Wiman brought him to Graves County when he was but a year and a half old, and settled upon 320 acres of land, unimproved, save by a little cabin and one and a half acres of cleared land near where our subject now resides. Milton S. Wiman and three of his sons were Missionary Baptist preachers, and of this church subject and wife and six of his children are members. Milton S., a pioneer preacher, preached in every community of the Purchase, and died December 10, 1863, at the age of fifty-five years. William T. has been a deacon and clerk of the church and is now a lettered member. He owns 132 acres of land and is highly respected in the community.

DR. JOHN R. WINSTON, physician and druggist, was born in Dresden, Tenn., in January, 1840. His parents were George and Hixie D. (White) Winston, both natives of North Carolina. The father was a hatter by trade, and served as a private a short time in the war of 1812. His death occurred in 1866, at about the age of ninety-seven years. He and wife were life-long members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was one of the charter members of the Washingtonian movement in Dresden, and was a great temperance worker all his life. His extreme old age gave conclusive proof of a sober and virtuous life. The mother died with measles in 1844, at the age of fifty years. These parents had four children —James M. and the doctor are the only ones now living. Our subject began for himself at the age of sixteen years. He worked on the farm as a hand, and soon began teaching. He left the school-room at the breaking out of the civil war to enter the Confederate States Army service, and in that service continued until his time, one year, was completed. He next enlisted in the Union Army as private for three years, or during the war. After serving three months he was promoted to first lieutenant and adjutant of the regiment. This position he held twelve months, when his health failed, and he was honorably discharged July 25, 1863. He then went to Ann Arbor, Mich., and took treatment while attending the medical department of that institution. He next went to Pryorsburg, Ky., practiced his profession a short time, then joined the Capitol Guard Regiment, under the call of Gov. Bramlette. In this regiment he performed the duties of assistant surgeon in the State Hospital, and was there when the war closed. He then returned to west Tennessee, and practiced two years, then came to Wingo, where he has resided ever since. He was a practicing physician nearly fourteen years when he opened the present drug store, in which he is doing quite a successful business. He does an extensive prescription business, and gives special attention to chronic diseases. The doctor is an outspoken temperance man. He was married October 6, 1867, to Miss Mary J. Baucom, of Tennessee. Minnie C., Martha A., Nellie S., John S. and George are his children. Mrs. Winston is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church; the doctor is a member of the Swedenborgen Church, and is also a member of the Masonic order and I.O.O.F.

W. A. YARBROUGH was born December 30, 1826, in Stewart County, Tenn. He is a son of George and Lucretia (Stokes) Yarbrough. The father was born in North Carolina. He came to Graves County in 1832, engaged in merchandising, a few years later in farming. This he continued till his death, which occurred in July, 1848, at the age of fifty-five. The mother was born in North Carolina; she died February 13, 1884, aged eighty-seven years. W. A. Yarbrough was brought up on his father's farm, and has always followed the business of farming. In August, 1878, he was elected sheriff and re-elected in 1880. He was married May 3, 1848, to Elizabeth Leech of Graves County. She died January 28, 1881, leaving three sons and two daughters. His second marriage was in April 3, 1884, to Miss M. E. Purdy of this county, Mr. Yarbrough is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

HICKMAN COUNTY.

S. G. ARNOLD, Clinton, Hickman County, was born in Wythe County, Va., March 29, 1854. He is a son of A. S. and L. H. (Bartley) Arnold, both natives of the same county and State. In the fall of 1862 the family came to Clinton. Here A. S. Arnold held the office of deputy sheriff from 1862 to 1867, after which he was elected sheriff and served in this capacity until 1871; he was elected a member of the legislature in 1871, and served one term. Soon after coming to Clinton he engaged in merchandising, and was also extensively engaged in handling cotton until 1868. He died April 27, 1880, aged fifty-one. Our subject owns a farm where he now lives, which joins Clinton on the west. It consists of seventy acres well improved. He was married in February, 1879, to Miss Kittie Perry, of Clinton. This union is blessed with two children—one son and one daughter.

T. W. ASHLEY was born in Hickman County October 30, 1839. He is the son of Dr. C. M. Ashley, who was a native of Virginia and who about 1828 came to this county, engaged in farming and also followed his profession and merchandising; he died in September, 1883, aged seventy-nine. Our subject was reared on his father's farm; at the age of eighteen he entered the store of W. F. Wooldridge as clerk; there he remained until 1866, at which time he commenced business for himself and has since continued. In 1880 he, with Jacob White, built the Opera House block. Mr. Ashley now owns the store he occupies in this block, also one-half interest in the opera house. He held the office of postmaster from 1866 to August, 1882. He was married in December, 1869, to Miss M. C. Bradley, of Clinton. This union has been blessed with five children—two sons and three daughters. Both parents are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

EDWARD W. AVEY was born in Memphis, Tenn., August 18, 1841, and is the second of five children born to John R. and Margaret (Cunningham) Avey, natives of Indiana and of German and English descent, respectively. John R. Avey soon after his marriage, in about 1835, moved to Memphis, Tenn., where he was engaged in shipping produce by flat-boats to all points on the Mississippi River until his death in 1848. His widow departed this life in 1870. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. When but seven years old, Edward W. Avey was thrown upon his own resources and subsequently the support of a widowed mother and several younger brothers and sisters devolved mainly on him. In the latter part of 1848 the family removed to Louisville, Ky., and from thence in 1849 to Meade County, Ky., where our subject was engaged in burning lime. In 1857 they removed to Breckinridge County, Ky., where he was also again engaged in the lime business. In the early part of 1858 they removed to Hawesville, Hancock Co., Ky., and in the fall of the same year came to Columbus, Hickman Co , Ky. From that time until the breaking out of the late civil war our subject was engaged in steamboating on the Mississippi River. During the time that the Confederate forces held Columbus, he kept a sutler's store near the fort on the bluff overlooking the city. After the withdrawal of the Confederate line, he clerked in his brother's grocery store for a time. He then passed a summer in Louisville, and in 1863–64 he was engaged in farming near Columbus, but the latter year his crop was almost wholly destroyed by a bandit. He then returned to Columbus in 1866; he commenced boating and huckstering on the Mississippi and continued the same for several years. He was then elected marshal of the city of Columbus and served for nearly two years. In 1877 he opened a hardware store at Columbus, and has been engaged in that business ever since. He carries a large and well selected stock of stoves, shelf and heavy hardware, tinware, etc., amounting to about $3,500. He also owns a similar establishment at Clinton, which carries a stock of some $2,500. Mr. Avey was married February 11, 1863, to Miss Anna B. Alexander, a native of Hickman County, Ky. Six children have blessed this union—four sons and two daughters—all of whom are yet living. Mr. Avey and wife are members of the Baptist Church. He also takes a lively interest in Sunday-school work, having been superintendent and teacher in the Baptist Sunday-school for several years. He is also a member of the K. of H. In politics he is a Democrat.

W. T. BARNES, Hickman County, was born in Nash County, N C., September 21, 1817. He is a son of Benjamin and Temperance (Taylor) Barnes, natives of Nash County, their parents having in an early day immigrated to that county from Virginia. In 1827 the father came to Kentucky and settled in what was then Hickman (now Fulton) County. There he remained nine years, and then moved to Mississippi. In that State he lived only two years, and then moved to Weakley County, Tenn., where he died in November, 1846; the mother died in the May preceding. W. T. Barnes is the eldest son of fifteen children, of whom but six are now living. He remained in Tennessee until 1842, when he came to Fulton County, Ky. He resided there ten years, when he came to this county, and purchased his present farm of 220 acres. He also owns about 160 acres in Graves County. Of the whole there are about 215 acres in cultivation. Mr. Barnes was married in Fulton County, Ky., in September, 1842, to Miss Mary Newton, a daughter of William and Anna (Titsworth) Newton, natives of Tennessee. This lady died in May, 1843, in Stewart County, Tenn. In March, 1845, Mr. Barnes married Miss Fannie A. Weaks, a daughter of William and Polly (Adkins) Weaks, and born in Stewart County; the parents were from Virginia and were among the early settlers of Clarksville. Mrs. Barnes became the mother of eight children, of whom five are now living: Benjamin L., in Graves County; Mary T., wife of E. W. Stevenson; Donna M., wife of Frank B. T. Holland, of Humphreys County, Tenn.; Emma M. and William T. This lady died in 1871. Mr. Barnes was next married, September 20, 1874, in Weakley County, Tenn., to Mrs. Rebecca A. Stevenson, a daughter of John and Holland (Bowden) Olive, natives of North Carolina, the father being of English descent, the mother of Irish. Mr. Barnes served as magistrate ten years before the war, and has served two years since as such. He and wife are members of the Primitive Baptist Church.

JOB BARTON was born in Monroe County, N. Y., January 20, 1824, and is the sixth child of a large family of children born to Wrescom P. and Dimmis (Phillips) Barton, both of whom were natives of New York, and of English descent. Wrescom P. Barton was educated and married in his native State, where in early life he learned the millwright's trade, which, in connection with farming, he followed all his life. His death occurred in 1840; he and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Job Barton, at the age of about eighteen or twenty years, commenced to work at the millwright's trade, having learned the same with his father and brother. In 1842 he removed to Stony Creek, Ontario, where he remained about one year. He then removed to Waterloo Township, near Guelph, Canada, where he resided for a short time. He continued to follow his trade at various points in Canada until September, 1865, when he came to Hickman County, Ky., where he bought a farm two miles east of Columbus, and has since been employed in agricultural pursuits, fruit-growing, and at his trade. He was married, February 18, 1851, at Wellington Square, near Hamilton, Canada, to Miss Amelia M. Morgan, a native of New York. Twelve children blessed their union, six of whom, four sons and two daughters, are yet living. Both Mr. Barton and wife are devoted and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also an earnest advocate of the temperance cause, and in politics he is a Republican.

DR. GEORGE BEELER, Hickman County, was born December 21, 1830, in Jefferson County, Ky. He is a son of George and Hannah (Stansbury) Beeler. The father was born in east Tennessee and died in 1850, aged sixty-seven years. The mother was born in Bullitt County, Ky., and died December 21, 1830. Mr. Beeler, being the son of a farmer, was thoroughly drilled in farm work when comparatively a boy. He remained on his father's farm in Jefferson County until 1851, but being ambitious to acquire a more thorough education than could be had in the common schools of his neighborhood, he was influenced by a dear friend and former preceptor, Simon Snyder, to enter Clinton Seminary, an institution of learning in Clinton, Hickman Co., Ky., where he remained until January, 1853, and then commenced the study of medicine under Dr. John S. Ray, of Clinton. After one year's study he went to Louisville and continued his studies with Dr. Robert Breckinridge, proffessor of Materia Medica in the Kentucky School of Medicine. After taking a preliminary course in the Kentucky School of Medicine, he went to Lexington where he entered the medical department of Transylvania University. He graduated in the class of 1855 and then returned to Clinton, where he practiced until the following fall; he then went to Philadelphia and took a course of medical lectures in the Jefferson Medical College and received his second degree from that institution, in March, 1856. He then returned to Clinton, where he has been since, actively engaged in his chosen profession. Dr. Beeler was married November 18, 1856, to Viola Whayne, of Ballard County, Ky. This union has been blessed with an interesting family of children, of whom two sons and five daughters are living, Blanche the eldest is the wife of the Rev. J. W. Higbee, of Mexico, Mo., and Love is the wife of J. L. Moss, county clerk of Hickman County. The doctor has been president of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association, twice vice president of the State Medical Association and is a permanent member of the District, State and American Medical Associations; during the war of the Rebellion he was post surgeon during the occupation of Clinton by the Federal forces under Col. Moore, Maj. Moore and Maj. Hendrix. He is also a member of the Christian Church.

HENRY BERBLING, Hickman County, was born February 13, 1847, in the town of Herbolzheim near the city of Freiberg, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, Germany. In 1862 he was apprenticed to the pottery trade, at which he served three years as apprentice; he afterward traveled over Germany and Switzerland as a journeyman potter, as was then the custom. In the fall of 1867 he was drafted for the army, but was not called into service until 1869, when he decided to try the new world instead of wearing the emperor's coat. Accordingly he came to America and stopped in Evansville, Ind., where he worked at his trade until 1876, when he came to Columbus, and has been here in business ever since. Mr. Berbling is a member of the city council and of the K. of H. He was married in the fall of 1869 to Bernhardina Keppner; she was born in the same town as Mr. Berbling. They have four children: Charles H., Henry J. Rosa and Augusta.

G. J. BINFORD was born in this county October 5, 1830, and is a son of Robert S. and Mary Ann (Jarratt) Binford. The father was a native of Goochland County, Va., and came to this county in 1827, being one of the earliest settlers here. He was killed here in 1837, while making the senatorial race from this district. His brother, Thomas Binford, was the first man to erect a house in the vicinity of Clinton. Gideon J. Binford grew to manhood on the farm. His means of education were so limited that he never attended school a year altogether. However, he has educated himself to a considerable extent, and is what might be called a self-made man. When a young man he moved to Fulton County, where in 1858 he was elected one of the magistrates of the county, and served in that capacity until the breaking out of the war. August, 1861, he raised a company of infantry from this county and Fulton, which was placed in the Seventh Regiment, Confederate States Army, and he was made captain of Company B. He was wounded at the battle of Shiloh and disabled from infantry duty. As soon as he was able he returned to Clinton, and made up a company of cavalry which formed part of the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army. He served with this regiment until February, 1865, when he was taken prisoner and remained in confinement until the close of the war. Upon his return to this county, he farmed two years, and then turned his attention to merchandising, settling at Moscow. He followed that business until the spring of 1874, and in August of the same year was elected to the office of county judge, was re-elected and served until 1882. In August, 1883, he was elected representative to the legislature from this county and Fulton, and is still serving in that capacity. He also owns a farm of 292 acres, situated one mile southeast of Clinton, about 150 acres being in cultivation. Mr. Binford was married in March, 1852, to Miss Mary S. May, of Fayette County, Tenn. She died in April, 1854, leaving one son. His second marriage was in October, 1858, to Miss Mathina Wall, of Fulton County, Ky. This lady died in 1866, leaving two children, a son and a daughter. In December, 1867, Capt. Binford married Miss Lucy Hicks, of Fulton County, who died in January, 1869. In December, 1869, he was married to Miss Anna A. Hall of this county. This union has been blessed with seven children, one son and six daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Binford are members of the Christian Church. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F. and of the A. F. & A. M.

J. HAYS BLAIR was born September 22, 1833, in Rutherford County, Tenn. He is a son of Ralph A. and Asenath (McFadden) Blair. The father was born in Pittsylvania County, Va., and died August 26, 1860, aged sixty-seven. The mother was born in Davidson County, Tenn.; she died in August, 1860, aged sixty-four. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, where he remained until 1862, when he enlisted in Company A, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served until the end of the war, after which he returned to the farm, remaining there two years; in 1867 he came to Hickman County, where he now owns 800 acres of land; he also owns a comfortable residence in Clinton, where he resides, with about six acres of land; also about twelve acres of land near the depot, and other property in the town. He has held the office of magistrate about eight years. Mr. Blair was married November 21, 1867, to Sarah A. Latta, of this county; they have had four children, three living. He is a life-long and devoted member of the United Baptist Church, and Mrs. Blair is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM C. BLAIR was born September 10, 1826, in Humphreys County, Tenn., and came with his parents, in 1838, to Hickman County, Ky., where he still resides. His father, James M. Blair, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1804, removed to Tennessee in childhood, and died in 1844. He was the son of Hughey, who died about 1832, aged eighty-four years. James M. married Nancy, daughter of E. A. Ballard, born in 1805, and died in 1829, and our subject is the result of this union. To James M. and second wife were born: Nancy C., Martha A., Sarah J., Elizabeth C. and James A. At the age of eighteen, William C. Blair began flatboating, and followed that in connection with steamboating for four years, on the Mississippi River. He then followed farming until the beginning of the war, and after the war he engaged in the stock business for about four years; then in lumber trade, and of late years he has given his undivided attention to farming, in which he has been successful. March 29, 1848, subject was married to Miss Mary E., daughter of Richard and Martha (Perkison) Dickens, of Hickman County, and to them have been born George C. (deceased), William L. (deceased), Martha K. (Salmon), Mary W. (Salmon), Robert M., Elizabeth E. and Susan K. Two nephews, Weldon and William L. Benthil, are also members of his family. Subject is an extensive farmer and stockdealer, owning 1,400 acres of good land, 700 of which are in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of the Christian Church, and in politics is a Democrat.

WILLIAM S. BLESINGAM was born in Perry County, Tenn., October 17, 1844, and is one of ten children born to John and Jane (Bates) Blesingam, the former a native of Alabama, and the latter of Tennessee. They were of Scotch and German descent, respectively. John Blesingam, when a young man, removed to Perry County, Tenn., where he was married and soon afterward engaged in steamboating on the Mississippi River and tributaries, which he continued, in connection with farming, for a number of years. His death occurred in May, 1854, in his forty-fourth year. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church. William S. Blesingam was employed on his father's farm until he was twenty-two years old. He then engaged in the saloon business at Troy, Tenn , which he continued for two years; thence he removed to Moscow, Hickman Co., Ky., where he was engaged in the same business for some six or seven years. In January, 1878, he removed to Belmont, Mo., where he continued the saloon business until the spring of 1884. He then came across the river to Columbus, Ky., where he opened a saloon and is doing a good business. In August, 1864, he enlisted in Company I, Ninth Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, Confederate service, and served under Gens. Forrest and Wheeler until the close of the war. Mr. Blesingam is a member of no church, but belongs to the I. O. O. F. In politics he is a Democrat.

W. F. BOONE was born November 12, 1826, in Davidson County, Tenn.; soon after this the family came to Graves County, Ky. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of sixteen he commenced to learn the carpenter trade; this he has since followed. In 1851 he came to Hickman County; in 1856 he was elected county judge; he held this position for twelve years, and has also held the office of master commissioner of the circuit court twelve years. Judge Boone was married in 1848 to Agnes Aloway of Wilson County, Tenn.; these parents have had twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

E. E. BOWERS, postmaster, was born March 24, 1843, in Dresden, Weakley County, Tenn. He enlisted in 1862 in Company K, Sixth Tennessee Cavalry, Union Army, and served three years, when he received an honorable discharge. In 1867 he went to Moscow, where he was engaged in merchandising most of the time until 1880, when he came to Clinton, where he has since been engaged in merchandising; he was appointed postmaster in 1882, which office he has since held. Mr. Bowers was married in 1868 to Lydia May of Enterprise, Miss.

J. E. BOWERS was born in Dresden, Weakley County, Tenn., October 8, 1846, and is a son of Giles and Rebecca (Adams) Bowers. The father was born in North Carolina, and at about the age of eighteen moved to Tennessee, where he lived till his death, at the age of sixty-two. The mother was born in Tennessee, and is now living with her sons in Clinton. In 1869 our subject came to Clinton, where he has since been engaged in merchandising. His store is the largest in Hickman County, being 24x125 feet, and he is doing a business of about $30,000 a year. He enlisted in 1862 in Company K, Sixth Tennessee Cavalry, United States Army, and served until the end of the war. Mr. Bowers was married in 1872 to Miss Nannie Boone, of Clinton. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Mr. Bowers is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of H.

WILLIS R. BRADLEY, Hickman County, deceased, was born in Christian County, Ky., February 12, 1821. About the age of twenty he commenced the study of law with R. L. Mayes, of Mayfield, and there was admitted to the bar. In about 1857 he removed to Columbus and there followed his profession until 1861, when he removed to a farm, remaining there until 1865, when he came to Clinton and practiced law until his death, which occurred in 1881. He was married in 1845, at Mayfield, to Ann E. Rodgers, born in Williamson County, Tenn. They had five children, three living: Dr. Eugene Willis Bradley, a graduate of the Louisville Medical College, now engaged in farming; Kate, now the wife of T. W. Ashley, of Clinton; and Miss Nettie. They are members of the Presbyterian Church.

CAPT. L. T. BRADLEY was born December 28, 1835, in Trumbull County, Ohio. He is the son of John W. and Mary A. (Cook) Bradley. The father was born in Chester, Penn.; his early life was passed in a carriage shop, and later he engaged in preaching. He died February 13, 1876, in White County, Ill. Our subject was reared in Meigs County, Ohio. In 1857 he went to New Orleans, there engaged in steamboating until 1861, and during the war had charge of a government steamer, after which he was captain of the steamer "General Anderson," running from Columbus to Cairo. The past fifteen years he has been captain of the transfer steamer "St. Louis," at this point, and owned by the I. M. R. R. Capt. Bradley was married in 1866 to Miss E. M. Sanders, of Meigs County, Ohio. Six children have blessed this union, three sons and three daughters. The captain is a member of the K. of H. and K. & L. H.

OSCAR F. BRIDGMAN, of Hickman County, was born in North Carolina, August 2, 1835, and is one of fourteen children born to Joshua and Elizabeth (Beasley) Bridgman, the former of whom was a native of the "Old Dominion," and the latter of North Carolina. They were of German and English descent, respectively. Joshua Bridgman, when a young man, removed to North Carolina, where he was afterward married, and where he was engaged in planting until about 1840, when he came with his family to Hickman County, Ky., and bought a farm near the present site of the village of Oakton, where he resided for some five or six years. He then removed to the southern part of Ballard County, Ky., where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred December 3, 1883, in his eightieth year. Oscar F. Bridgman was employed on his father's farm until he was twenty-one years old. He then farmed on shares in Ballard County for a short time, after which he removed to Massac County, Ill., where he bought a farm and resided for about two years. He then returned to Ballard County, Ky., where he remained until 1875, when he came to Hickman County. Here he farmed on a rented farm for about three years, and then bought a farm some two miles east of Columbus, where he resides. He was married in 1858 to Miss Margaret A. Thomas, a native of Robertson County, Ky. Eight children have blessed their union, six of whom, three sons and three daughters, are yet living. Both Mr. Bridgman and wife are members of the Baptist Church. In politics he is a Republican.

COL. THOMAS BROWN, of Hickman County, was born September 1, 1819, in Henry County, Ky. He is the son of Thomas and Nancy (Chenault) Brown. The father was a native of Ireland, and when a boy he came to Philadelphia and secured employment in a mercantile house; some years later he removed to New Castle, Ky., where he engaged extensively in merchandising; he died in 1865, aged eighty. The mother was born in Madison county, Ky., in 1790; she died in 1854, in New Castle. Our subject represented Henry County in the legislature during the session of 1849–50. He was for many years a resident of Missouri. During the late war he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel, commanding the first division of the First Missouri Infantry, Confederate States Army. After the war he made one crop in Claiborne County, Miss., after which he came to Columbus, where he has since resided. He owns and controls over 2,000 acres of land in Ballard County. He was married in 1856 to Nannie K. Hunter, a grand-daughter of Joseph Hunter, and was appointed by Jefferson a member of the first council held in Missouri Territory. This lady was born in Mississippi County, Mo., and died in Columbus in February, 1868, aged thirty-two, leaving four children, two sons and two daughters. Col. Brown's second marriage was in October, 1871, to Mrs. Ann B. (Vance) Ford. Five children have blessed this union, two sons and three daughters. This last wife died May 5, 1885. Judge William R. Vance, the father-in-law of our subject, was born December 5, 1805, in Jefferson County, Ky. His father was born in Virginia in 1771, and moved to Jefferson County in 1798. He was a minister of the Presbyterian denomination, as well as one of the earlier Presbyterian ministers of the State. He died September 18, 1829. Judge Vance engaged in merchandising at about the age of twenty-five, continuing about ten years. He was a member of the legislature and state senate, and from 1847 to 1851 was mayor of Louisville. He was marshal of the chancery court of Louisville, and United States pension agent for three years. In 1856 he removed to Ballard County, and was elected county judge. In 1858 he came to Columbus; here he has been mayor for several terms, also city attorney. He has been for many years elder of the Presbyterian Church. Judge Vance died April 23, 1885.

DR. THOMAS D. BRYAN was born September 21, 1851, in Fulton County, Ky., where he grew to manhood; in 1881 he came to Hickman County, where he now resides. His father, Dr. William A. Bryant, a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., removed to Tennessee in youth, and at the age of twenty-three years to Fulton County, Ky., where he died in 1876, at the age of fifty-three years. He was the son of John Bryan, a soldier in the war of 1812. Dr. William A. married Rebecca A., daughter of Ralph and A. C. (McFadden) Blair, of Rutherford County, Tenn.; she died in 1874, having borne the following children: Susan F. (Wills), Asenath J. (Wright), James R., subject, John F., Nathan T., Robert A., Josiah, Samuel B., Mollie R. and Sallie R. On November 23, 1876, Thomas D. was married to Miss Georgia A., daughter of John and Elizabeth E. (Simmons) Hester, of Obion County, Tenn. She was born November 7, 1858. In 1875 subject commenced the study of medicine with his father, and attended lectures at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., in 1879, and graduated in 1881. Dr. Bryan then settled at his present location, where he has met with reasonable success in the practice of his profession. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, also of the Baptist Church, and in politics he is a Democrat.

JUDGE EDWARD I. BULLOCK was born in Gloucester County, Va., February 15, 1810. He was a son of Edward Bullock, a native of the "Old Dominion," of Irish descent and one of the leading farmers of Gloucester County, where he resided until his death. Our subject graduated from the William and Mary College in 1829, and immediately after removed to Cumberland County, Ky., where he remained a short time, and then removed to Jamestown, Russell County. There he was for a time engaged in surveying and afterward studied law. In 1834 he represented Russell county in the lower house of the legislature; afterward he was appointed commonwealth's attorney, and during that time prosecuted the famous Wilkinson case brought from Louisville to Shelby County on a change of venue. In 1841 he removed to Mills' Point, now Hickman, where he practiced his profession and was chosen county attorney. He also edited for several years the Hickman Argus. In 1850 he came to Clinton, Hickman County. where he resided until 1856, when he settled at Columbus. Here he practiced his profession until his death, February 15, 1883. In 1856 Judge Bullock was the Whig elector for the First Kentucky District. In 1861 he started the Confederate News at Columbus. In 1862, when the Confederate Army evacuated Columbus, he went to Richmond, Va., where he remained until 1864. He then returned to Columbus. In 1866 he was appointed judge of the First Judicial Circuit of Kentucky, to fill out the unexpired term of C. S. Marshall. In 1873 he was appointed by the governor one of three commissioners to revise the general statutes of Kentucky. In 1832 Judge Bullock was united in marriage to Maria S. Emerson, a native of Kentucky, and of German descent. Ten children were the result of this union, five of whom, one son and four daughters, are yet living. Judge Bullock was a member of the Episcopal Church, also of the A. F. & A M. and R. A. M. He was one of the early pioneers as well as one of the popular lawyers of the Purchase District, and one of the ablest jurists in the State.

EDWARD T. BULLOCK, the only surviving son of Judge Edward I. Bullock, was born in Fulton County, Ky., September 13, 1847. At the age of nineteen he graduated at the State University of Missouri, at Columbia, after which he was deputy circuit clerk of Hickman County for one and a half years. He then commenced the study of law under the instruction of L. D. Husbands, of Paducah. In 1869 he was admitted to the bar, practiced at Paducah until 1873, when he moved to Columbus, Ky., where he has since practiced his profession with excellent success. From 1869 to 1873 he was master commissioner of the McCracken County circuit court. Mr. Bullock is and has been for four years city attorney for Columbus, and was a member of the Democratic Central County Committee for two years. He has also held the office of county examiner. He was married April 24, 1871, to Miss Bettey Pettitt, a native of Caldwell County, Ky. One son has been left to him. Mrs. Bullock departed this life in January, 1874. She was a devoted member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Bullock is a member of the K. of H., of which order he is L. D. D. In politics he is a Democrat.

R. J. BUGG was born in this county, February 29, 1844, and is a son of Jesse and Mary O. (Evans) Bugg. The father was born in Muhlenburg County, Va., April 10, 1820, and came with his father, James Bugg, to this county in 1823. The latter settled in McCalister Precinct, on the farm now owned by M. H. Hardin. He subsequently moved to the Goodjoin Precinct, where he resided for many years. He died in this district in 1858, at a good old age. Subject's parents are still living in this district. Subject was the eldest of seven children, six of whom are now living. He remained on the home farm until the breaking out of the war. In December, 1863, he enlisted in Company A, of the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, and remained in active service until February, 1865, when he took the oath and came home. He commenced life for himself in 1866, and settled one mile south of where he now resides. He came to his present farm in 1871, and now owns about 330 acres, of which there are about seventy acres in cultivation. He was married October 18, 1866, to Miss Elizabeth Evans, a daughter of William and Mary Jane (Faulks) Evans. The result of this marriage has been eight children, of whom five are now living: William J., Henry T., Lou A., Dilla R. and Thomas W. Mr. Bugg and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and he is a member of the Spring Hill Lodge, No. 574, A. F. & A. M. In 1878 he was elected to the office of magistrate of that district and is still serving.

GEORGE W. BURY was born February 22, 1848, in Paducah. He is a son of James and Eliza (Byington) Bury. The father was born in Washington, D. C., and there learned the blacksmith trade in the navy yard. In 1845 he came to Paducah, and there carried on his trade till his death, which occurred in 1873, aged fifty-eight. The mother was born in Pittsburgh, Penn.; she died in 1867, aged fifty-one. Our subject was reared in Paducah, and followed civil engineering, also farming. In 1881 he, with Mr. Graves, built the Clinton Mills, which they have since operated. Their capacity is about fifty barrels of flour and 200 bushels of corn per day. Mr. Bury was married, in 1872, to Hannah Craft, of Paducah. He is a member of the city council; also a member of the Presbyterian Church.

ROBERT N. BUSHART was born in Henry County, Tenn., March 2, 1840. He is a son of Jacob Bushart, who is a native of Alabama, but now living in Fulton County, Ky. Subject was next to the youngest of a family of seven children, and remained at home until sixteen years of age, and then began life for himself. In 1861 he enlisted in the Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served until the close of the war. He was wounded at the battle of Shiloh, but returned to duty as soon as he was able. Returning home from the war, he settled down on a farm in Fulton County, Ky., where he remained five years. In 1869 he came to this county, and settled on the farm now owned by his widow. Here he resided until his death, September 10, 1876. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He was married December 1, 1869, to Miss Mary J. Hardin, a daughter of John S. and Mary E. (Walker) Hardin. The father is a son of Otho Hardin (see sketch of M. W. Hardin), and is now living on the farm owned at one time by his father. He commenced life for himself at the age of twenty-one, and at one time owned 240 acres, a part of which he has since divided among his children. He ran a saw-mill on his farm for some time, and has served as magistrate of the district for some years. Mrs. Hardin died July 12, 1884. Mrs. Bushart is the mother of three children, all of whom are living, John W., James W. and Robert L. She and her father are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

HENRY C. BRUMMAL was born in January, 1859, in this county, to John M. and Sally (Davy) Brummal. The father of our subject is a lawyer in good practice in Columbus; is also a native of this State, and was born in Green County, in 1830. Mrs. Brummal is a native of Independence, Mo. Henry C. is the third of seven children born to them. He received a good common school education, afterward going to Neopheogen College, Gallatin, Tenn. He also was sent to West Point, but remained there only three months, his leaving in such a short time being caused by a severe illness. He clerked shortly afterward for W. M. Heron for a few months, and also for Morton & Bro. for the term of two years. In 1882 he went to Louisville, Ky., clerking on the packet-boat for the Louisville & Henderson Company for a short period, coming home at the end of that year to commence farming on his own account on a farm, which he had purchased in 1880, situated two miles from Columbus on the Clinton Road, which he cultivates principally in fruit. He also farms on his father's property. In 1882 he married Miss Louisa C. Nagel, one of a family of children born to the late Frederick and Catherine Nagel, natives of Germany, who came to this country some short time after their marriage. In politics Mr. Brummal is a Democrat.

WILLIAM W. CRAIG was born in Hickman County, Ky., July 19, 1844, and is the eldest child in a family of six children born to James and Maria D. (Kerr) Craig, both natives of the "Old Dominion," and of Scotch and English descent, respectively. James Craig received his early education in his native State. At the age of sixteen, in 1834, he came with his parents to Hickman County, Ky. In about 1839, he engaged in merchandising at Hickman, now the county seat of Fulton County, Ky., where he remained several years. From thence he removed to his farm five miles south of Columbus, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred April 5, 1877, in his fifty-eighth year. He was for many years a devoted and consistent member of the Masonic fraternity, and was one of the early settlers and respected citizens of Hickman County. Our subject received a good common school education in youth in his native county, and was employed on his father's farm until he attained his majority, after which he was employed as a salesman, first in the dry goods and then in the drug business, for several years. He was then engaged in railroading on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad for some three or four years, after which he opened a drug store of his own at Columbus, where he has since been doing an excellent business. He was married January 10, 1883, to Miss Lilla Markham, a native of Logan County, Ky. One son has blessed this union—Wallace S. Mr. Craig is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Craig of the Baptist Church. Mr. Craig is also a member of the United Order of the Golden Cross. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, and is one of the prominent citizens of both the city and county.

JOHN B. COOK was born in Columbus, Hickman Co., Ky., December 17, 1846, and is the eldest living child born to William and Sophia M. (Cobb) Cook, the former a native of Richmond, Va., the latter of Eddyville, Lyon Co., Ky., and of English descent. William Cook came with his parents from Richmond, Va., to Columbus, Ky., when only four years old, in 1819. From 1829 to the fall of 1861, he was extensively engaged in merchandising in Columbus, and from that time until his death, he was principally engaged in the forwarding and shipping business at the same place, part of the time in company with his elder brother, Thomas Cook, who died in March, 1842, and the remainder of the time with his younger brother, R. E. Cook. Mr. Cook established the first commission house ever established at Columbus. His death occurred September 27, 1872, in his fifty-eighth year. Mr. Cook was postmaster at Columbus from 1836 to 1854. In 1853 he was appointed treasurer of the north end of the Mobile & Ohio Railway, which office he held until the completion of the road in 1861. He was also city treasurer for the city of Columbus for a number of years. In all these positions of trust he proved faithful and efficient. For more than thirty years he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was married November 1, 1871, to Miss Martha J. James, a native of Danville, Boyle Co., Ky. Four children have been left them; one son and three daughters. In politics he is a Democrat, and is the oldest male white citizen born in the place.

OTIS COOK was born June 18, 1852, in Columbus, Ky., and is a son of William and Sophia M. (Cobb) Cook. The father was born April 27, 1815, in Richmond, Va.; he died in Columbus, September 27, 1872. The grandfather of our subject, William Cook, Sr., was born in 1782 in what is now Howard County, Md. He came with his family to Columbus, Ky., in 1819, having first purchased a stock of general merchandise in New Orleans; these goods were brought to Columbus by a keeler, occupying three weeks on the passage, and were the first ever sold at this point. At this early day this locality was a dense forest, and Indians roamed here in great numbers. William Cook, Sr., entered a quantity of land from the government, part of which is now owned by his daughter, Miss Annie E. Cook. He died in Columbus, June 6, 1829. Miss Annie E. Cook was born in Columbus, January 2, 1827, and has always resided here. William Cook, the father of Otis Cook, was extensively engaged in the forwarding and commission business; he also held many offices of trust, and was postmaster from 1836 to 1854. In 1853 he was appointed treasurer of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, which position he creditably filled for several years; at the time of his death he was city treasurer of Columbus, and had been a life-long and devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Otis Cook is the owner of 487 acres of land, located four miles southeast of Columbus, on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, about 250 acres of which are under cultivation; he has recently placed on this farm a number of short-horn cattle, this being the first thoroughbred stock ever brought to Hickman County. Miss Annie E. Cook owns 320 acres of land located two miles west of Clinton; this land was entered by her father from the government. She also owns three entire blocks and portions of several other blocks in Columbus, also a farm of 220 acres in Mississippi County, Mo., lying near Belmont.

ISAAC R. COOK was born in Columbus, Hickman Co., Ky., December 23, 1849, and is the fourth child born to William and Sophia M. (Cobb) Cook. He was married November 6, 1873, to Miss Nellie V. Gray, a native of Louisville, Ky. Three children blessed their union, only two of whom, one son and one daughter, are living. Both Mr. Cook and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Cook is also a member of the I. O. O. F., and in politics he is a Democrat.

BERRY D. DAVIS was born November 14, 1832, in Dyer County, Tenn., and in 1840 came with his parents to Hickman County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Isaac Davis, who was a native of Virginia, died in 1860, at the age of fifty-five years. He was the son of Bartlett Davis, a soldier in the war of 1812. Isaac married Lucy (who died in 1851), daughter of Roland Via, of Hickman County, Ky., and they were blessed with the following ten children: Sallie A. (Shelton), Mary (Glascow), John H., Berry D., Lucinda (Rodgers), James, Isaiah, Edward, Christina (Spicer), Liza Jane (Davis). In 1854 Berry D. Davis married Miss Frances Via, who died in 1876. To them were born two daughters: Josephine and Fannie. Mr. Davis was next married in 1877 to Mrs. Sallie A. Kough, who died in 1878. In 1880 he married Miss Mollie Remley, who survived a little more than two years. In 1883 subject was married to Miss Bettie Davis, of Hickman County, who was born in 1862. Mr. Davis is a farmer owning 218 acres of fine land, in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Knights of Honor. In religion he is a Methodist.

WILLIAM B. DAVIS, Hickman County, was born February 25, 1816, in Pittsylvania County, Va.; removed in infancy with his parents to Maury County, Tenn., and in 1829 came to Hickman County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Daniel Davis, a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., was born in 1794, and died in 1820. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. His father, William, of Virginia, died in 1835. Daniel married Lydia, daughter of Shadrach Boaz (born in 1795, and died in 1863), and from this union sprang: subject, David J. and Constantine D. March 19, 1835, William B. Davis married Miss Mary M., daughter of Rev. Joshua and Elizabeth (Smith) Cole, of Hickman County (born 1815, and died in 1882), and to them were born Lydia E. (deceased), David W. (deceased), Sarah C. (deceased), Constantine D., William S. (deceased), Ann E. (Lester), Joshua C., Elzara F. (Scott), and Laura B. Mr. Davis is a farmer having 110 acres of fair land in a good state of cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is identified with the Democratic party.

HILLERY DAVIS was born in what is now Marion County, Ky., January 8, 1817. He is a son of Nathaniel and Dolly (Mills) Davis. The father was a native of this State, and the grandfather, of English descent, came from Maryland in an early day. The father of our subject ran a still in his native county, and in 1824 he came to this county, and settled in this district. After residing here a short time he moved to Graves County, where he remained until 1839, when he came back to the county. Here he lived until his death, which occurred in 1844. Subject was the fourth of seven children, of whom three are now living: Nathaniel (in Butler County, Mo.), Cynthia (widow of James Jackson), and Hillery, (our subject). The latter remained with his father until about eighteen years of age, and then began life for himself as a boatman on the Yazoo and Tallahatchie Rivers, which he followed for about five years. Returning to this county, he made a settlement where John S. Hardin is now living. He soon after came to his present farm, where he owned at one time 280 acres. A part of this has since been divided among his children. Mr. Davis was married in 1840 to Miss Albina Gardner, a daughter of Clement and Polly (Davis) Gardner. Mrs. Davis was born in Marion County, Ky., and is the mother of seven children, five of whom, two sons and three daughters, are still living. This lady died March 3, 1881. Subject was married the next time October 1, 1882, to Mrs. Mollie D. Smith, a daughter of Noah and Mary (Fields) Norman, a native of Williamson County, Tenn. Mrs. Davis was born in Fulton County, September 5, 1838.

JESSE DEWEESE, Hickman County, was born September 4, 1829, in Jefferson County, Ill., was taken by his parents, in 1833, to Butler County, Ky., where he grew to manhood and in 1870 settled in Hickman County, where he has since resided. His father, William Deweese, was born in 1805, near Richmond, Va.; came to Kentucky in 1819, and died in 1859. He was the son of Jesse, of Virginia. William married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary (Phelps) Pitman, of Kentucky. She was born about 1810, and died about 1872. Their offspring are subject, as above, Pierson R., Lucinda E. (Jones), John P., Mary (Jones) Daniel P., Virgil M., Sarah A. (Gawyer), William G. and Melinda J. (Emery). April 17, 1851, subject married Miss Sarah, daughter of James and Eva (Duvall) Shaller, of Edmondson County, Ky. (born in 1835, and died in 1862), and from this union sprang James P., Eva J. (Jones), and William B. He was next married November 14, 1867, to Miss Susan P., daughter of Willis and Minnie (Womack) Hunt, of Kentucky, and to them have been born Luther B., Powell, and Peachie. Subject is a successful farmer, owning 413 acres of first-class land in good condition. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics a Democrat, The grandfather of Mrs. Susan (Hunt) Deweese, John Hunt, came from Germany and bought land and settled at Huntsville, Ala., and from him that town derived its name. His youngest son, Robert, married Elizabeth Willis and then moved across the mountains from Alabama to Pulaski County, Ky., remained there five years and then moved to Edmondson County, where he died in 1861, aged ninety-five years.

W. N. DITTO was born March 2, 1835, in Tipton County, Tenn. He is a son of William and Nancy (Adams) Ditto. The father was born in Franklin, Williamson Co., Tenn.; he followed the cabinet-making business, and died in Tipton County, August 10, 1835. The mother was born in Maryland. She died in 1872, aged seventy-two. Our subject was reared on his mother's farm. In 1854 he was employed as overseer on a cotton plantation, and continued in this capacity until 1863, when he came to Hickman County, and has since been working at the carpenter trade. Mr. Ditto was married January 17, 1855, to Elizabeth Eason, of Haywood County, Tenn.; she died in 1864, leaving three children, two now living, one son and one daughter. His second marriage, in September 10, 1866, was to Mary Sanders, of Dyer County, Tenn.; she died in 1879, leaving two daughters. His third marriage, March 17, 1881, was to Paulina Lee, of Hickman County; they have two children, one son and one daughter. Mr. Ditto is a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DAN DODGE was born August 10, 1840, in Hickman County. At the age of fifteen he went to Louisville, where he worked at the carpenter trade until the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted in Company D, Seventh Tennessee Cavalry, Confederate States Army, and served until the end of the war. He then came to Clinton, and soon after engaged in the furniture trade, which he continued until 1881, when he engaged in the grocery and hardware business, which he has since continued, being now a member of the firm of Dodge & Owen. Mr. Dodge was married in 1870, to H. V. Jordan, of Clinton; four children have blessed this union—one son and three daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Dodge are members of the Christian Church.

THOMAS E. DODGE was born October 1, 1849, in Clinton, Hickman County. He is a son of I. R. and M. F. (Sublett) Dodge. The father was born in Connecticut, and reared in Long Island, N. Y. He came to Clinton in 1830, and here he remained until his death, which occurred in 1865, at the age of fifty-five years. The mother was born in Westport, Ky., and died in Clinton, in 1867, aged fifty years. At the age of twenty, Mr. Dodge entered a store as clerk and since that time has been engaged in merchandising.

ROBERT H. EMERSON was born April 25, 1826, in Cumberland County, Ky. He is a son of Judge John M. Emerson, who was born in Pennsylvania, and whose father served in the Revolutionary war. Judge Emerson was reared in Green County, Ky.; he owned a mill and distillery, served as assistant judge, also as magistrate and sheriff, and died in 1840, aged fifty-two. Our subject, at the age of fourteen commenced the carpenter's trade; after working a short time he was engaged as a clerk in a grocery, where he remained seven years; he then commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Michael L. Stone and continued about two years; he then went to Texas, where he remained about one year; in 1852 he came to Hickman County, where he has since been engaged in farming. He owns a farm of 250 acres adjoining the town of Clinton, also his residence and other property in Clinton. He was elected county clerk in 1862, but refused to serve. Mr. Emerson was married June 3, 1852, to Mary Galbraith, of Christian County; they have four children, three sons and one daughter. The family are members of the Christian Church.

JOHN C. EVANS was born December 16, 1819, in Dickson County, Tenn. He is a son of George and Jane (Baker) Evans. The father was born in Tennessee; he died in 1872 in Hickman County, aged seventy nine. The mother was also born in Tennessee; she died in 1880, aged eighty-one. Our subject came to Hickman County November 9, 1862, and has since been engaged in farming; he owns a farm where he now resides about one mile north of Clinton, also another farm elsewhere in this precinct, in all about 300 acres, all of which he has acquired by his own exertions. Mr. Evans was married, in 1852, to Rebecca Wilkins, of Tennessee. These parents have eleven children, six sons and five daughters. Mr. Evans is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has served as deputy sheriff two years.

THOMPSON FALKNER was born September 11, 1820, in Simpson County, Ky.; removed with his mother in childhood to Calloway County; thence in 1834 to Graves County, and in 1855 came to Hickman County, where he has since resided. His father, Lewis Falkner, a native of Surrey County, N. C., died about 1824. Lewis married Sarah Lawson, of North Carolina, who died about 1834. Their children are Mornin, Caroline (Ragsdale), Milford F., Rebecca (Lawrence), William, subject and Narcissa (Nolen). Thompson Falkner was married January 7, 1841, to Miss Susan, daughter of Gideon and Dorothy Price, of Graves County (died in 1862, aged about forty years), and to them were born Henderson F., James W., Sarah E. (Bone), Henry, Thomas F. (deceased), George G. (deceased), Andrew T., Martha (Crooks), Nancy J. (Jones), Joseph, Frances (Lumsden) and Price. Subject was next married, in 1865, to Mrs. Fredonia Hill, daughter of James Doorson. She was born March 1, 1828. Mr. Falkner is a successful farmer, having 310 acres of good land. In religion he is a Cumberland Presbyterian, and in politics a Democrat.

WILLIAM H. FERGUSON was born December 22, 1845, at Rome, Perry Co., Ind. He removed with his parents in infancy to Bolivar, Miss.; in 1848, moved to Duboise County, Ind.; removed in 1850 to Perry County, then in 1853 to Shelby County, Ohio; in 1858 to Fulton County, Ky.; in 1861 returned to Indiana; in 1865 came to Christian County, Ky.; in 1870 moved to Sullivan County, Ind., and in 1873 to Moscow, Ky., where he still resides. His father, Allen M. Ferguson, was born near Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1818, and is now living. He is the son of William Ferguson, who is also living. Subject's mother, Mary, daughter of Joshua B. and Rebecca (Lang) Huckeby, of Rome, Ind., was born in Kentucky, and died in 1863, at the age of forty-seven years. William H. Ferguson was married December 10, 1874, to Miss Hetty S., daughter of Daniel and Susan (Smith) Roberts, of Henderson County, Ky., and to them have been born Mary A. (deceased), Harry (deceased) and Alla. Mr. Ferguson engaged in clerking for a number of years, until 1882, when he commenced business as a druggist in Moscow, at which he has been successful. He is also engaged in the insurance business to some extent. He is an Odd Fellow and a member of the Episcopal Church.

H. M. FIELDS, Hickman County, was born March 13, 1848, in Gibson County, Tenn. He is a son of W. D. and Elizabeth (Hale) Fields. The father was born in middle Tennessee; he died in 1863, aged fifty. The mother was born in North Carolina, January 22, 1822, and is now living with her daughter near Clinton, Hickman County. Our subject came to Hickman County in 1870, where he has since lived and owns 103 acres of land. Mr. Fields was married in 1873 to Miss F. J. Evans, of Hickman County; this union has been blessed with three children, one son and two daughters.

REV. G. W. FLOWERS was born in Louisville, Ky., March 17, 1850. He is a son of John W. and Caroline (Von Metz) Flowers. The father was born in Philadelphia, and was for many years captain and part-owner of a packet running from Louisville to New Orleans; he died January 12, 1862, aged forty-eight. The mother was born in Rhein-Greis, Bauern, Germany, twelve miles from Frankfort-on-the-Main, September 25, 1826, and now is living with her son in Columbus. Our subject received his literary education in Louisville. In 1872 he went to Alexandria and attended the Virginia

Theological Seminary; graduated in June, 1876; he then returned to Louisville and was ordained to the deaconate. He then went to Shelbyville, where he was pastor of a parish one year. In 1878 he accepted a call to St. Paul's parish, Hickman, having charge there two years. During this time he opened the mission at Fulton. At the expiration of two years he resigned the Hickman charge, and took charge of the Columbus parish in connection with the Fulton mission. He removed to Columbus, January 13, 1882, where he has since resided; he is also president of the faculty of Columbus College. Mr. Flowers was married, September 6, 1876, to Miss V. Smith, of Louisville. This union has been blessed with four sons.

W. H. GALBRAITH, Hickman County, was born September 10, 1834, in Christian County, Ky. He is a son of Henry and Sarah B. (Tribble) Galbraith. The father was born in Pennsylvania in about 1793. He first settled in Cumberland County, Ky., in 1828, and later in Christian County. In 1851 he came to Hickman County, and settled on the farm where our subject now lives. It consists of 150 acres, and joins the town of Clinton on the north; is beautifully located, and commands a fine view of Clinton and the surrounding country. In 1862 W. H. Galbraith enlisted in Company B, Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army, and served to the end of the war, after which he returned to his present farm; he has also carried on the carpenter trade here, and has held the office of magistrate, constable and deputy county surveyor. Mr. G. was married in 1856 to Mary Weatherley, of Hickman County. This union has been blessed with four children—three sons and one daughter.

MOSES W. GALLOWAY was born July 4, 1817, in Mecklenburg County, N. C. He removed with his parents in 1821 to Maury County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood. In 1837 he removed to Graves County, Ky., and in 1870 came to Hickman County, where he now resides. His father, John Galloway, a native of North Carolina, died in 1859, at the age of seventy-five years. John was twice married; first to Lucy, daughter of John Thompson, of Mecklenburg County, N. C., and their children are Sarah (Jones), John T., subject, Agnes N. (Mozeley), Daniel M., Narcissa (Hamlett) and Samuel S. There were born to him by his second wife Lucy (Fonnell), Elizabeth (Hamlett) and William M. Moses W. Galloway was married December 10, 1838, to Irena, daughter of John and Rebecca (Wall) Galbraith, of Maury County, Tenn., born in 1820, and died in 1870, and to them were born Mary J. (deceased), John T., Rebecca A. (Hughs), Virginia K. (Williamson), Victoria (deceased) and Ben H. He was next married, October 4, 1870, to Miss Sarah J., daughter of William and Elizabeth (McKiver) Cason, of Hickman County, Ky., born in 1822. Subject is a farmer, having 100 acres of good land in a high state of cultivation. He served as sheriff in Graves County, and has acted for many years as magistrate. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and since 1844 has served as elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

JUDGE JOHN A. GARDNER, of Hickman County, was born August 4, 1811, in Butler County, Ky., and was reared on his father's farm. At the age of twenty-one he removed to Hopkins County, where he farmed two years; he then moved to Chariton County, Mo., where he remained two years, and while there was engaged in the Mormon war under the call of Gov. Lilburn A. Boggs, and was captain of a company until the Mormons were routed from the State of Missouri. Peace being restored, he returned to his farm, at that time in Linn County, Mo. He next moved to Scott County, Mo. In 1884 that county was divided, Mississippi County now forming a portion of it, in which he continued to reside, engaged in farming, livestock raising and in practicing law. His farm consists of 924 acres, of which 600 are well improved. In 1842 he was elected constable, and served four years; he next held the office of justice of the peace from 1846 to 1858, when he was elected county judge. In 1861 he was required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States; he consequently resigned, and turned his attention to furnishing the Southern Confederacy with live stock. In 1864 he was again elected county judge. By an act of the legislature the governor was invested with the power of removal, which power he exercised in the case of Judge Gardner. In 1866 the judge was appointed deputy revenue collector, and held this office two years. From 1868 to 1880 his time was taken up on his farm. In October, 1880, he came to Clinton, where he has since resided. Judge Gardner was married, in 1832, to Lucinda Llewellyn, of Kentucky; she died in 1835, leaving two children, now deceased. In 1842 the judge married Lavina Mills, of Mississippi County, Mo.; she died in 1846, leaving one son, Vardry, now in Tennessee. The judge next married Jane Adams, of Mississippi County, Mo., in 1848; she died in 1862, leaving one daughter, since deceased. His fourth marriage, July 15, 1863, was to Mary E. Barker, also of Mississippi County, Mo., and to this union have been born one son and three daughters. The judge united with the Baptist Church, in 1846, at Wolf Island, Mo., and is still a consistent member of that denomination.

BENJAMIN S. GAYLE was born in Franklin County, Ky., October 14, 1825, and is the second child in a family of eleven children born to John M. and Elizabeth H. (Stewart) Gayle, both natives of the "Old Dominion." John M. Gayle learned the millwright's trade in his native county. While yet a young man he moved to Frankfort, Ky., where, for a short time, he followed his trade, but was afterward engaged in the carpenter's trade for many years. He was also married at Frankfort, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1872, at the age of seventy-two years. During his latter years he had retired from active business life. He and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Benjamin S. Gayle, at the age of thirteen, went to learn the cabinet-maker's trade, at which he served an apprenticeship of some five years, and immediately afterward he learned the carpenter's trade. After completing his trades he again went to school for a time. He then worked at the carpenter trade in the summer and at the cabinet business in the winter at Frankfort for a number of years. In 1846 he enlisted in the First Kentucky Cavalry, commanded by Col. Humphrey Marshall, and served under Gen. Taylor in the war with Mexico one year, and participated in the battle of Buena Vista. In 1857 he came to Columbus, Ky., where he followed the carpenter's trade until after the close of the late civil war. In 1867 he embarked in the cabinet and furniture business at Columbus, and has pursued that business with success ever since. He recently erected and now occupies one of the best business houses in the city. He is also engaged in agricultural pursuits to some extent, owning a well improved farm near the city. He was married in 1855, to Miss Lucy L. Campbell, a native of Frankfort, Ky. One son has been left them—Walter—who resides in Clay County, Mo. In politics Mr. Gayle is a Democrat.

WILLIAM A. GEST was born in Clermont County, Ohio, November 10, 1843, and is one of three living children born to Joseph M. and Sarah A. (Hageman) Gest, both natives of Ohio and of English and German descent, respectively. Joseph M. Gest, at the age of fourteen, went to Cincinnati, where he attended school for a time. After this he was employed in his father's store in the city, and afterward in the country for some two years. After this he was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Ohio, until 1846, when he moved to Louisville, Ky. Here he was engaged steamboating and flatboating for some four years. In 1850 he removed to Cannelton, Perry Co., Ind., where he was engaged in merchandising for some ten or twelve years, and during this time was clerk of both the common pleas and circuit courts for four years. In 1862 he removed to Columbus, Hickman County, at which place and at Hickman, Ky., and Cairo, Ill., he was in the United States revenue service some three years. He then engaged in merchandising at Columbus until 1869, when he removed to Ballard County, Ky., where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1883, when he returned to Columbus, where he has since lived a retired life. He and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was W. M. of his lodge in Indiana for several years. William A. Gest, at the age of eight years, went into his father's store, and with the exception of two years spent on a packet line plying between Louisville and Memphis, and a short time at school, he has been constantly engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1864 he opened a grocery store at Columbus, and has since continued that business, to which he has also added hardware, agricultural implements and harness. He is the oldest grocer in the city, and the oldest business house but one. Mr. Gest was a member of the city council for several years, also city clerk two terms and city collector one year. He is and has been for the past two and a half years city treasurer. He was married, in 1876, to Miss Mary E. Parks, a native of Tennessee, who departed this life April 3, 1883. She was a devoted and consistent member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Gest is also a member of the same church, and of the K. of H

J. R. GRAHAM was born August 6, 1842, in Marion County, Ky. He is a son of Marcus and Isabella (Cunningham) Graham. The father was born in Ireland in 1795, came to Virginia in about 1815, and was engaged in peddling dry goods about ten years, after which he came to Marion County, Ky., and there he remained until his death, which occurred in 1874. The mother died in 1858, aged fifty-three years. Our subject came to Hickman County in 1869, where he has since been engaged in farming and trading; he resides on his farm of 100 acres about one mile east of Clinton; he also owns several other farms in this county. He was married, in 1869, to Ruth M., daughter of the late Hercules Hays, one of the oldest and best farmers of Hickman County; these parents have had six children, four sons and two daughters, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ROBERT W. GRAY, Hickman County, was born in Mississippi County, Mo., April 29, 1857, and is the second of six children born to John C. and Mary R. (Jordan) Gray, natives of Hickman County, Ky., and of English and Irish descent, respectively. In early life, John C. Gray engaged in agricultural pursuits, and continued the same all his life, being one of the most extensive farmers of eastern Missouri. At one time he had over 1000 acres in cultivation in Mississippi County, Mo., besides other lands in Hickman County, Ky. His father, William Gray, served under Gen. Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, and his grandson, our subject, has in his possession a gun and hunter's horn which once belonged to him. John C. Gray's death occurred March 20, 1883, in his fifty-third year. He was an adherent of the Catholic faith and a member of the Masonic fraternity. Robert W. Gray received a good academic education at Columbus, Ky. At the age of nineteen, he took charge of his father's farm, assisted by his brother, Shapley P. Gray, and continued the same for some four years. In the meantime he diligently pursued the study of law, was admitted to the bar in Hickman County in 1882, and practiced his profession at Columbus until March, 1884, when he has appointed local clerk of the Anchor Steamboat line at Columbus, which position he still holds. Mr. Gray is related on his mother's side to John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, and Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden of Missouri. He is a member of the Baptist Church.

C. A. GREEN was born in Graves County, Ky., January 1, 1840. He is a son of Meekley and Julia A. (Goad) Green. The father was born in Virginia, and reared in Tennessee, and later removed to Graves County, Ky.; he is now living in southwest Missouri. The mother was born in Tennessee, and came with her parents to Graves County, in about 1830; they were among the earlier settlers of the county. Her father assisted with a whip-saw in sawing the lumber for the first house ever erected in Columbus. Our subject, at about the age of thirteen, came to this county, where he has since lived; he owns a farm of about 175 acres which he cultivates, but for the past eight years has also been engaged in merchandising. About three years since, a postoffice was established at his store, at which time he was appointed postmaster—Cypress being the name of the office. Mr. Green was married, in 1859, to Luticia Hayden of Graves County. These parents have had eight children, six of whom are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Green are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DANIEL S. GREEN, Hickman County, was born in Point Pleasant, Mo., October 11, 1851, and is a son of Thornton and Matilda A. (Stewart) Green, natives of Kentucky, and of Scotch descent. Thornton Green received his early education in Hickman County, Ky., where he was also married. When a young man, he learned the harness-maker's trade at Columbus, and followed the same at that place until the beginning of the late civil war, with the exception of four years when he resided in Point Pleasant and New Madrid, Mo. During the war he was engaged in farming near the city. In 1865 he moved to Owen County, Ky., where he farmed until 1870, when he removed to Carroll County, Ky., where he still resides and is engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was for several years a member of the city council of Columbus. Daniel S. Green was employed on his father's farm until he was twenty-one years old, after which he was engaged in farming and the saw-mill business for two years. In 1874 he was employed as a salesman in the grocery store of W. A. Gest, at Columbus, and is still so employed. During all these years, however, he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in connection with his business in town. He was married October 18, 1882, to Miss Minnie Todd, a native of Louisiana, Mo. Mr. Green is a member of the K. of H. He is one of the enterprising and rising young business men of the city and county.

GEORGE W. GRIFFEY was born March 12, 1833, in Hickman County, and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Webb) Griffey. The father was born in Campbell County, Ky., and died August 18, 1853, aged fifty-six years. He held the office of sheriff seventeen years prior to the new constitution, also two years after its adoption, and for many years held the office of magistrate. He was one of the first settlers of this county, having come here in 1819. The mother was born in Logan County, and died in 1878, aged seventy-seven. Our subject was reared on his father's farm where he remained until the age of twenty-one; he then began merchandising which he followed four or five years. He first commenced reading law in 1853, and resumed his studies in 1866. He was admitted to the bar in December, 1867, and has since followed that profession. He has held the office of county clerk, county attorney and deputy circuit clerk. He enlisted in 1861 in Company E, First Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, was taken prisoner at Paducah, and released in July, 1865. Mr. Griffey was married February 20, 1867, to Virginia A. Northcote of Weakley County, Tenn.; they have three sons and four daughters, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

MRS. MARTHA V. C. GRIFFEY, Hickman County, was born April 22, 1840, in Moscow, Hickman County, Ky., and removed with her parents to Fulton County. She is the daughter of Dr. Samuel B. and Mary A. (Ashburn) Luten. She was married December 24, 1857, to Wiley P. Griffey, a son of Thomas Griffey of Hickman County. He was born March 8, 1831, and died December 21, 1876. He was a man of great energy and enterprise, marked by a public spirit and especially zealous in matters pertaining to Christianity. The result of the union of our subject and her husband was the birth of Luten (deceased), Ida (Roberts) (deceased), Samuel D., Mary S., Thomas (deceased), Martha P. (deceased), Lutenia, Elizabeth, Wiley P. (deceased) and Eckert (deceased). Mrs. Griffey is engaged in farming, and the combined realty of the estate amounts to 600 acres of valuable and very productive land in a good state of cultivation. This family are zealous Methodists.

M. W. HARDIN, was born in Marion County, Ky., February 16, 1823, and is a son of Otho and Nancy (Davis) Hardin. The father was also a native of Marion County, and was born March 15, 1791. His father, a native of Virginia, having come to the State some time prior to the Revolution. In 1828 Otho Hardin came to this county, and settled within half a mile of where subject is now living, in Section 4, Town 1, Range 2 west. He was a farmer, and owned at one time considerable land. He died June 5, 1871; his wife died in 1846. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. M. W. Hardin is the second of seven children, six of whom are living. He remained at home until twenty-four, and then settled on the present farm of 200 acres, a part of which he has divided among his children. In 1858 he commenced to work at the carpenter trade, and has followed it to some extent ever since. Mr. Hardin was married September 1, 1847, to Miss Nancy J. Hicks, a daughter of John and Margaret (Sutton) Hicks, who came here in 1832 from Jessamine County, Ky. Mrs. Hardin was born in that county, and is the mother of nine children, all of whom are living: Otho H., John W., James R., M. S., Margaret S., M. D., T. W., Nancy J. and Donnie L. Subject and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Mr. Hardin is a local preacher in that denomination. He is also a member of the Westley Lodge, No. 452, A. F. & A. M. February, 1862, he enlisted in Faulkner's company of Polk's scouts, but after three months' service the company was disbanded.

WILLIAM HARRISON was born in McCracken County, Ky., April 19, 1850, and is the fifth of six children born to William and Isabella M. (Long) Harrison, the former a native of Louisville, and the latter of Christian County, Ky. William Harrison, Sr., was left an orphan at the tender age of two years, after which he was bound out until he was twenty-one years old to a tailor. After attaining his majority he followed his trade in connection with trading, agriculture, and other business, at Louisville, and at various other places, and also on the river, until his death, which occurred in December, 1853, in about his forty-fifth year. At that time he owned a farm of some 400 acres near Clinton, Hickman Co., Ky., which was operated by his servants, and where his family resided. His business, however, was mainly at Louisville. He was worth, at the time of his death, some $35,000. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, having attained to the degrees of Knighthood. Mrs. Isabella M. Harrison was next married to George Byassee. Her death occurred in Hickman County, Ky., December 8, 1878, in her forty-eighth year. She was a member of the Disciples Church. William Harrison, Jr., passed his early life on the home farm, and on attaining his majority he bought a farm near Columbus, Ky., his wife also owning a farm near the same place, On these farms he has since been engaged in agricultural pursuits, now owning 312 acres of well-improved land. He was married March 14, 1872, to Mrs. Martha C. (Trevathan) Taylor, a native of Henry County, Tenn. Two children, one son and one daughter, have blessed this union. Mrs. Harrison has one daughter by her former marriage. In politics Mr. Harrison is a Democrat.

MISS A. M. HICKS, principal of the Clinton College, was born in Putnam Co., Ohio. She is a daughter of Ezra and Julia A. (Lincoln) Hicks. The father was born in Warren County, Ohio, and died in August, 1882, aged eighty-two. The mother was born in Virginia, and died in 1853, aged fifty-two. After attending the schools of the neighborhood, Miss Hicks went to the high school at Lima, Ohio, and in 1871 to Oswego, N. Y., and attended the normal school at that place. In 1873 she came to Paducah and was there appointed principal of the high school, holding that position one year. In 1874 she came to Clinton, and held the position of associate principal of Clinton College until 1880, since which time she has held the position of principal of the college. This school was first opened in the Baptist Church with fifteen pupils, and now has an annual enrollment of 260 pupils. On leaving this college pupils are prepared to enter any of the universities of the United States. Since the age of fifteen, Miss Hicks has received no assistance from any source, and solely by her own exertions she has supported and educated herself.

BAT E. HILLIARD was born in Green County, Ky., and is a son of David M. and Catherine A. (Embry) Hilliard. The father was born in the same county and State November 29, 1812. The mother died January 25, 1856, in her thirty-sixth year. March 23, 1863 the family came to Hickman County. In 1867 they moved to their present farm of 264 acres, about 200 of which are improved. Bat E. enlisted November 12, 1863, in Company A, Twelfth Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served about one year; he participated in the battles of Okalona, Tupelo, Paducah and others. He was married November 12, 1873, to Laura E. Oakford of Trenton, Tenn.; this union has been blessed with three children: Fannie D., Mary B. and Lizzie A. The parents are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JUDGE E. C. HODGES was born April 10, 1844 in Hickman County, and is a son of Eli P. and Elizabeth (Crosland) Hodges. The father was born in Knoxville, east Tenn., and died in 1868, aged fifty-four. When a resident of Mississippi he held the office of sheriff and various other offices, and was also engaged in milling and farming. Subject, at the breaking out of the war, enlisted in Company B, Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served until 1864, when he was taken prisoner and confined at Camp Morton, Ind., till the close. He returned to the farm and attended school; afterward taught school a short time, then began the study of law with N. P. Moss and was admitted to practice in 1872. Soon after he was elected county attorney; held that office until 1882, and in August of that year was elected county judge, which office he has since honorably filled. The judge was married in 1876 to Emma Hayes of Dresden, west Tenn.; they have two sons and one daughter. Mrs. Hodges is a member of the Christian Church.

JOHN M. JACKSON, M. D., Hickman County, was born in Nashville, Tenn., June 13, 1827, and is the eldest son of Col. Hardy Jackson, who was colonel of the Twelfth Kentucky Volunteers under Gen. Downing in the Florida war. In early life, Col. Jackson received a good English education, mainly at the seminary of Franklin, Tenn. At the age of twenty-three, in 1825, he married Miss Sallie Little, a native of Nashville, Tenn., of English origin, and a niece of Stephen Hopkins, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. In 1830 Col. Jackson came to Graves County, Ky., where he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits for about fifteen years. In 1845 he removed to northern Louisiana, where he was extensively engaged in cotton planting until his death, which occurred in 1862. At the time of his death he was engaged in recruiting a regiment for the Confederate service. He and wife were consistent members of the Baptist Church. Dr. John M. Jackson received a good classical education, and, at the age of eighteen, he commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of the late distinguished Volney A. Hawkins, M. D., of Feliciana, Ky., with whom he pursued his studies until 1847, when he attended his first course of lectures at the Memphis Medical College. In 1848 he commenced the practice of his profession at Columbus, Hickman Co., Ky., continuing the same with excellent success in that city and vicinity for some thirteen years, with the exception of one year, when he attended the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky., graduating with high honors in February, 1859. In 1861 he removed to Columbus, Miss., where he at once secured an extensive and lucrative practice, devoting much of his time to surgery. He was also employed as assistant surgeon in Yandell Hospital, of Columbus, Miss., under the late Dr. Paul F. Eve; to which institution he devoted two hours each day for some four years. In July, 1866, he returned to his home in Columbus, where he has since devoted himself assiduously to his profession. In order to keep up with the advancement in the science of medicine he has passed parts of several summers at the hospitals of various cities, including New York. Although he has sustained many and severe financial reverses, he has yet, by close attention to business, acquired a handsome fortune, being one of the principal owners of city real estate in Columbus. On the 30th of May, 1849, he was united in marriage to Miss Martha T. Johns, a native of Hickman County, Ky., and a daughter of William Johns, one of the early pioneers of the district. Five children were the fruit of this union, all of whom died in infancy, except one daughter, Marietta, who married Benjamin M. Monroe, of Columbus, Ky. Mrs. Marietta Monroe died in 1881 in her twenty-third year, leaving a little daughter to the care of the doctor and his estimable lady. Dr. Jackson is and has been for years a member of the city council of Columbus. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, the I. O. O. F., and of the K. of H. In politics he is a Democrat, and he and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM A. JACKSON was born December 7, 1846 in Hickman County, Ky., where he still resides. His father, John S. Jackson, was born in 1823 in Christian County, Ky., and is still living. He was the son of William, a soldier in the war of 1812, who died in 1873. John S., married Mary, daughter of James Harris of Obion County, Tenn. (born in 1827, and died in 1856). Their children are: James K. P., subject, John E., and Sarah (Evans). Subject was married December 16, 1866, to Miss Loutilla W., daughter of A. M., and Nancy A. (Ward) Johnson, of Hickman County, and to them have been born: Reuben, Peter, John M., Adella, Damaris, and Rufus. Subject has served both as constable and magistrate. He is a farmer, having 220 acres of good land. He is a Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Baptist and a Democrat.

FELIX E. JEWELL, Hickman County, was born in Daviess County, Ky., May 6, 1838, and is a son of Louis and Mary N. (Potts) Jewell. The father was born in Fayette County, Ky., in 1802, and his grandfather, David Jewell, was born in Loudoun County, Va. The latter was a soldier in an early day and participated in St. Clair's defeat. He came to the State in 1795, and settled in Fayette County. He came to Daviess County, in 1837, where he died December 17, 1848. In 1851, the father of our subject came to Hickman County, and settled on the farm now owned by the latter. Prior to his coming to this county he had been a miller, but after his arrival here he confined his attention to farming. He died January 3, 1873, a member of the Masonic fraternity. His wife died October 7, 1872. Felix E. Jewell was the fourth of six children, and is the only one of them now living. He has always resided on the home farm, and now owns 135 acres, of which fifty-five acres are in cultivation. Mr. Jewell was married in Franklin County, Ky., February 7, 1866, to Miss Mary A Utley, a daughter of Allen R., and Harriet (Alexander) Utley. Her father was a native of Jessamine County; her mother of Trimble. Mrs. Jewell was born in Woodford County, April 1, 1844, and is the mother of two living children; Richard A., and Mary L. Mr. Jewell enlisted in Company A, of the Thirty-ninth Kentucky Mounted Infantry, United States Army, December 15, 1863, and was discharged April 18, 1865. Mrs. Jewell is a member of the Baptist Church, and Mr. Jewell of Milburn Lodge, K. of H.

T. B. JOHNSON was born in this county, February 26, 1837, and is a son of Hudson and Elizabeth (Light) Johnson. The father was a native of Dickson County, Tenn. He came to this county in 1835, and settled in this district on the farm, where some of the family are still living. He first entered eighty acres, which he subsequently increased until he secured about 2,000 acres, which were divided among his children. He also extensively followed stock-raising at one time. He died in this district October 11, 1875; his wife died April 18, 1868. Subject was the fifth of eleven children, of whom six are now living; Mary E., Thomas B., Nancy V., wife of W. J. Hays; Rufus H., W. R., and N. J. T. B. Johnson remained at home until he was twenty-three years old, when he went to Columbus, where he merchandised until 1861. He then enlisted in Company A, of the Second Kentucky Infantry, under Col. J. W. Moss. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Fort Donelson, and confined seven months. He was then exchanged and joined his company. He subsequently took part in the battles of Stone River, Chicamauga, Jackson, Dallas, and many others. Returning home in 1865, he settled on his present farm, where he now owns about 700 acres, of which, about 300 are in cultivation. Mr. Johnson was married June 20, 1871 to Miss Sallie Jewell, a daughter of Lewis and Mary (Potts) Jewell. Two children, Mary E., and Gracie A., blessed this union. Mrs. Johnson died in April, 1875. He was next married June 6, 1878 to Miss Lorella Cookendorfer, a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Magruder) Cookendorfer. The result of this marriage has been three children: Mattie B., Thomas N. and Nannie N.

NIMROD P. JOHNSON, Hickman County, was born August 19, 1836, in Humphreys County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood, and in 1859 came to Hickman County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Hiram Johnson, a native of upper Kentucky, died in 1844, in Tennessee. He married Milberry, daughter of Patrick Spicer; she died about 1870. Their children are: Spencer A., Jesse, Caroline, Nimrod P., Margaret and Cordelia. July 7, 1859, N. P. Johnson was married to Miss Eliza J., daughter of Cornelius and Susan Carter, of Hickman County, and to them have been born: Mollie H. (Bugg); Fannie B., deceased; David H., James H., William T., and Joseph J. Mr. Johnson is a farmer, having 303 acres of good land, in a fine state of cultivation. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and in his religious affiliations is a Methodist.

R. H. JOHNSON was born September 28, 1844, in Hickman County. He is a son of Hudson and Elizabeth (Light) Johnson. The father was born in Tennessee about 1829; he came to Hickman County, and died in 1873, aged sixty-four. The mother was also born in Tennessee; she died in 1871, aged sixty-two. Our subject was reared on his father's farm. He enlisted in 1861, in Company A, First Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army, and served to the end of the war. On his return he attended school two years, also taught school two years. He then commenced farming on 160 acres of land, given him by his father; this farm he has since well improved, and there he continued to reside until his election to the office of sheriff, in 1882, at which time he removed to Clinton. Mr. Johnson was married in 1868 to Fannie Johnson, of this county. These parents have four children, one son and three daughters.

DR. W. A. JORDAN was born in Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky., December 31, 1836. He is a son of J. G. and J. H. (Gaines) Jordan. The father was born in the same county and State, and died January 18, 1875, aged seventy-one. The mother was also born in the same county; she died May 15, 1879, aged seventy-two. The doctor was reared on the farm, and later engaged in merchandising. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in the First Kentucky Infantry, and served until the close, after which he commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. Morgan V. Tomlinson, and graduated in the class of 1873, from the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia. He then came to Clinton, where he has since been engaged at his chosen profession. Dr. Jordan was married in May, 1877, to Miss Belle, daughter of Dr. N. I. Hess, of Trenton, Tenn. Two children bless this union, one son and one daughter.

THOMAS G. JORDAN was born April 10, 1830, in Hickman County, Ky., where he was reared and still resides. His father, William S. Jordan, was born in Anderson County, Ky., in 1799; removed in 1826 to Hickman County, where at different times for many years, he served as constable, magistrate, high sheriff and county judge, and died in 1876. He was the son of George Jordan, of Culpeper County, Va., who was seven years a soldier in the Revolution. George was the son of "Blind Tom Jordan," of Virginia. William S. married Julia A., daughter of Dr. Allen and Mary (Allen) Caldwell, of Woodford County, Ky., born in 1809, and died in 1848. Their children are: George A., Ophelia C. (Utterback), subject, Mary R. (Gray), Rev. William H., a minister of the Methodist Church; John V., Judge Frank A., Martha A. (Parsons), Eugene B., Leanora (Farris), Virginia E. (Whayne), and Edwin S. Thomas G. Jordan was married January 3, 1856, to Miss Mary, daughter of Rev. John and Melinda (Person) Bryars, of Hickman County, and to them have been born: Lena M. (Shaw), Annie A. (Weaver), Virgil N., John S., Mary T., Frank X. and William P. Mr. Jordan is a farmer, owning 220 acres of productive land, which he is successfully cultivating. He is a Mason, a Granger, a Methodist and a Democrat.

PAT KEIRCE, car inspector for the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, was born January 6, 1846, in Ireland. He is a son of Michael and Hannah (Quinn) Keirce. The father still lives in his native country, now at the advanced age of eighty-five. The mother died in May, 1866, aged fifty-four. In 1862 our subject came to Louisville, Ky., worked there at various kinds of employment until December, 1865, and then came to Columbus, where he has since resided. His first work was on a wharf-boat for Halliday Brothers, remaining in their employ five years, after which he secured employment with the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company as car repairer; this position he held until 1883, when he was appointed car inspector, which position he now satisfactorily fills. He was married in 1867 to Ellen O'Donnell, of Columbus; this union has been blessed with three children, two sons and one daughter. They are members of the Catholic Church.

JOHN R. KEMP was born May 18, 1844 in Cumberland County, Ky. He is a son of W. T. and S. H. (Emerson) Kemp. The father was born in Abingdon, Va., and is now living in Clinton. The mother died in 1852, aged thirty years. John R. enlisted, in 1861, in Company L, of the Third Kentucky Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served until the battle of Franklin, where he was wounded and taken prisoner; he was confined until the close of the war, and then released on parole. He afterward returned to Clinton, where he was appointed deputy circuit clerk. This position he held until 1869, when he went to Louisiana, where he engaged in farming and merchandising, remaining there until 1878, when he returned to Clinton. In the fall of 1880 he was elected to the office of circuit clerk, in which capacity he is still serving. He was married in December, 1870, to Julia Raiford, of Marshall County, Miss. Three children, one son and two daughters, have blessed this union. Mr. Kemp is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

JOSEPH KENNEDY, Hickman County (deceased), was born August 9, 1820, in Bourbon County, Ky., where he grew to manhood; in 1849 he came to Hickman County, where he resided until his death April 27, 1885. His father, Jesse Kennedy, a native of Bourbon County, was born in 1787, and died at the same place in 1863. He commanded a "pack-horse" brigade in the war of 1812, and was four times representative in the legislature. He was the son of Thomas, a native of Maryland, who was born in 1744, went to Virginia in 1775, to Bourbon County in 1776, to Strades Station in 1779; was a carpenter and mason, and died in 1827. He was the son of John, of Ireland, who was kidnaped, and sold in Maryland. Jesse married Mary Waugh, who died in 1828. Their children are: Thomas, Franklin, Jesse G., subject, Washington, George, William W. and Mary M. (Kennedy). Joseph Kennedy was married February 24, 1848, to Miss Elizabeth A., daughter of Milton P. and Rebecca (Miller) Wheat, of Columbia, Ky., and to them were born: Milton J. (deceased), Jo-Ella (Winter), who died August 16, 1884, Julia A. (Bell), Thomas G. (deceased), Susan M. (Salmon), Sarah F. (Smith), Allie W. (Deweese). Mr. Kennedy was a farmer, and owned 370 acres of valuable and productive land in a fine state of cultivation. He was an active member of the Christian Church, and in politics was a Democrat.

MRS. LUCY A. KERR, Hickman County, was born November 13, 1824, in Franklin County, Tenn. She is a daughter of James Stanley, who was born in South Carolinia, and while in Tennessee held the office of sheriff, and various other offices. He moved to Charleston, Mo., in 1832, and died there in 1838. Our subject was married to John O. Morton, in 1840; he died soon after, leaving one son, John M. Her second marriage was in 1844, to John W. Dunn; he died in 1847, leaving one child, Mary A. Her third marriage, in 1849, was to James C. Burgess, of Virginia; he died in 1862, leaving two sons and one daughter. Her fourth marriage, in 1867, was to N. M. Kerr, of Virginia; he died in 1876, leaving one daughter. In 1844 Mrs. Kerr went to Cape Girardeau, Mo.; after remaining there one year, she returned to Charleston, and in 1849 moved to Wolf Island; there she continued to reside until 1878, when she came to Columbus. She owns two farms on the island, consisting of several hundred acres, one of which is now rented. John W. Dunn was elected county judge, and died in the fall of his election. Her son, John M. Morton, served in the late war and is now engaged in farming on Wolf Island. Mrs. Kerr is a member of the Baptist Church.

M. V. KERR was born in Hickman County, Ky., April 21, 1855, and is the eldest living son of William J. and Elizabeth (White) Kerr, a sketch of whom will be found in this volume. Our subject was employed on his father's farm until he attained his twenty-seventh year. He was then united in marriage to Miss Sallie B. Stone, of Pemiscot County, Mo. One son has blessed their union, Orvil J., born February 29, 1884. Since his marriage, Mr. Kerr and his brother have continued to farm the home place. He was for several years one of the school trustees for his district. He was appointed justice of the peace in 1877 and was elected to that office in 1882, and still holds the office. He belongs to no church but is a member of the Masonic fraternity. In politics he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM J. KERR was born near Georgetown, Scott County, Ky., July 30, 1820, and is the only living child of William and Cecilia (Anderson) Kerr, both natives of the "Old Dominion," and of Scotch and English descent respectively. Subject's father received his education and learned his trade, that of a saddler and harness maker, in his native State. Soon after his marriage he removed to Georgetown, Ky., where he followed his trade for some twenty years. In December, 1824, he came with his family to Hickman County, Ky., and settled on a military claim on the Mississippi River, four miles south of Columbus and near what is known as the chalk banks. Here he commenced to improve a farm and was also extensively engaged in furnishing wood for steamboats on the river. His death occurred in August, 1825. After his death his widow and children continued to occupy and improve the farm, which soon became one of the best improved as well as one of the richest in the county. The death of Mrs. Cecilia Kerr occurred at the home of our subject, September 20, 1863, in her eighty-eighth year. She was a life-long and devoted member of the Church of England. Her father, Richard Anderson, was one of the pioneers and most noted financiers of Richmond, Va. William J. Kerr's early life, in fact all his life, was passed on the old home farm, which he owns and to which he has added other lands, now owning a well improved farm of 350 acres. For twenty-five consecutive years Mr. Kerr was, by election of the people, justice of the peace for Columbus, Hickman County, and during all that time no appeal was ever taken from his decisions. Mr. Kerr has been thrice married. On March 10, 1847, he married Miss Jane S. Creig, a native of Virginia, who departed this life on the 10th of the following December. Mr. Kerr was next married, February 20, 1850, to Miss Elizabeth P. White, a native of Fulton County, Ky., and a niece of the Rev. Willis White. To this union were born nine children, seven of whom—three sons and four daughters—are yet living. Mrs. Elizabeth P. Kerr died April 12, 1872, a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Kerr married his present wife, Mrs. Mary J. (Blair) Davidson, on February 12, 1874. Mrs. Kerr is a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Kerr is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having been W. M. of his lodge for some five or six years. He is, with perhaps one or two exceptions, the oldest living settler in the Purchase, having lived in Hickman County for more than sixty years.

CHRISTOPHER H. LEE, was born in Bullitt County, Ky., July 24, 1842, and is one of the children born to James and Margaret (Atcher) Lee. The father was born in Bullitt County in 1806, and his mother was born in Leesville, Va., in 1807. In 1845 the family moved to Mississippi County, Mo., where James Lee died in 1877; his wife's death took place in 1867. In the spring of 1862 Christopher enlisted in the Eighth Missouri Cavalry, but was mustered out after a year's service on account of bad health. Mr. Lee spent most of his time prior to the war in working on the farm with his father, and hunting, a pastime in which he takes considerable pleasure up to the present time, being a dead shot. Mr. Lee was united in marriage to Miss Alice Ann Jones, a daughter of John F. and Jane (Edrington) Jones, of Mississippi County, Mo. Her grandfather, Price Edrington, was one of the earliest settlers of Wolf Island. To Mr. and Mrs. Lee have been born the following family: Margaret Jane, born in Hickman County, Ky., July 19, 1867; Rachael Valentine, born in Hickman County, Ky., February 14, 1869; Lillie Miles, September 23, 1871; Bettie Bryant, August 23, 1874; Chris. H., February 24, 1878; John James, May 31, 1880; Hooper Crews, February 8, 1883; the last five were all born in Missouri. Mr. Lee farms in Missouri, also in Wolf Island, where he has a nicely improved farm, willed to him by his father-in-law in 1883, comprising 117 acres. Unfortunately in 1882–84 the rising of the water did considerable damage to the crops, the loss in 1883 having been over $1,000.

MRS. A. C. LESTER, was born January 23, 1820, in Simpson County, Ky. She is a daughter of Henry Wright, of Maryland. He came to Hickman County in 1839, and here engaged in farming until 1853, when he moved to Texas, where he soon after died, at the age of sixty-two, of yellow fever. Mrs. Lester was married in 1839 to Richard Lester; he was born in Pulaski County, Tenn., came to Columbus in 1853, and was engaged in merchandising until his death in 1859, leaving a family of six children, five of whom are living: Sarah (now Mrs. Webb), Ada (now Mrs. Jones), Belle (now Mrs. Emerson), Milton H. (in the employ of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad for the past twelve years), Ada J. (now living at home), Henry F. (entered the Confederate Army in 1862 as second lieutenant, and later was promoted to captain; he died in Columbus in October, 1865, aged twenty-six.

WILLIAM P. LEWIS, was born March 8, 1840, in Robertson County, Tenn., and in 1851 removed to Weakley County, where he grew to manhood. In 1861 he entered the army, where he remained until 1864. He then came to Hickman County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Williamson Lewis, a native of Brunswick County, Va., was born in 1789, and died in 1873. He was the son of Harbert Lewis, of Virginia, who died at the age of one hundred and twelve years. Subject's mother, Sarah P., daughter of Mathew Freeman, of Virginia, is now living at the age of seventy-eight years. Williamson was twice married, and his children are, by first wife, Lillian, Peggy (Collins), Lemie (Slaten), Lear (Harris), Harbert, George B. and John W.; by his second wife, Nicholas L., James M., subject, Mary J. (Seals), Elizabeth and Joseph B. William P. Lewis was married November 22, 1866, to Miss Mollie E., daughter of John and Ann

E. (Grant) Salmon, of Fulton County, and to them have been born George L., Mary I., William F., Oscar M. and Blanche (deceased). Mr. Lewis is a successful farmer, having 156 acres of valuable land. He is a member of the Baptist Church, and in politics a Democrat.

MRS. HALLIE G. LILLARD was born in 1835, near Paris, Bourbon County, Ky., was reared on her father's farm and came with her parents in an early day to this county. In 1856 she was married to Dr. W. W. Lillard, of Lawrenceburg, Anderson County. To this union there were three sons born, Thomas H., George K. and Robert. Dr. W. W. Lillard was educated at Franklin Military Institute, Kentucky; enlisted in the Mexican war, was wounded at Buena Vista, from the effects of which he never recovered. After his return home he studied medicine, came to Hickman County in 1852, and located in the town of Clinton as practicing physician. He was surgeon in the late war, and died in 1867, in Columbus, where he had been practicing medicine for three years. Since his death Mrs. Lillard has been managing the farm, which is in a good state of cultivation, well improved and consists of 180 acres. During the war Mrs. Lillard was visited by Gregory's men and had a good deal of trouble with them. Mrs. Lillard is a lady of great refinement and is highly educated.

JOHN T. LITTLE was born November 12, 1850, in Graves County, Ky.; removed with his parents in 1852 to Fulton County, where he grew to manhood, and in 1872 came to Moscow, where he has since resided. His father, William Little, a native of Virginia, was born in 1820, and died in 1880. He was the son of John, a Virginian, who served in the war of 1812, and died in 1881. William married Sarah J., daughter of Elder Fleming Cayce, of Hickman County, and from this union sprang subject, Wade S., Anna (Hornsby), Martha E. (deceased), Joseph F., Hardy C. and Cynthia. April 23, 1874, John T. Little married Miss Susan A. daughter of W. B. and Sarah F. (Jaines) Milner, of Fulton County, and to them have been born Nina A. and Ira W. He commenced merchandising in 1872 at Moscow, has met with marked success, and now under the firm name of J. T. Little & Co., is extensively engaged in general merchandising and dealing in grain and produce.

JAMES MARRE was born December 28, 1853, in Italy. He is a son of Toney and Maria (Botto) Marre. In 1859 he came with his parents to Memphis, Tenn., where they remained about sixteen months, after which they came to Hickman; there they remained about the same length of time, and then returned to their native country, where the parents have since lived. In 1869 James Marre returned to America, and the following year settled in Columbus, where he has since been engaged in the saloon business. He was married in 1876 to Ella Devoto, of Memphis, Tenn. This marriage has been blessed with two children, one son and one daughter. Mr. Marre is a member of the city council, now serving on his second term.

S. B. MAY, Hickman County, was born March 18, 1822, in Spencer County, Ky. He is a son of Stephen and Elizabeth (Berkley) May. The father was born in the same county and State; he carried on farming and trading, served in the war of 1812, holding a commission of second lieutenant, and died on his farm in 1859, aged sixty-six. The mother was born in Loudoun County, Va.; she died in 1860, aged sixty-three. Our subject was reared on his father's farm and after the death of his father, became owner of 367 acres of property, which originally comprised 613 acres; here he continued to reside until 1872. In 1880 he came to his present farm, which consists of 276 acres and is known as the Ringo farm. Mr. May was married in 1859 to Miss Sarah F. Yantis, of Garrard County, Ky.; this union has been blessed with five daughters. Mr. and Mrs. May are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. May is also a member of the Masonic fraternity.

CHARLES E. MEDLEY was born October 17, 1845, in Halifax County, Va. He is a son of Isaac and Caroline A. (Edwards) Medley, who was also born in the same State and county. In 1852 the family moved to Christian County, Ky.; there the father died May 27, 1879, aged seventy-four. The mother was born January 14, 1819; she died May 29, 1870. Our subject was reared on his father's farm until 1869 when he went to New Orleans, was there employed by a commission firm two years, after which he returned to Christian County. In 1871 he went to Texas, also extended his travels through the western territories, and returned to Christian County in 1873; there he raised one crop and 1874 came to Hickman County and settled on his farm, which now consists of 450 acres, four miles south of Columbus. He engaged in farming until 1882, when he moved to Columbus and has since been in the employ of the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad.

JAMES A. MILLER was born September 18, 1836, in Bath County, Ky. He is a son of A. A. and Susan (Berry) Miller. The father was born in Virginia, and died in 1865, aged sixty-seven; he has been engaged in the milling business most of his life. The mother died in 1874, aged seventy-two. At the age of eleven, James A. Miller commenced working in his father's mill; this business he has since followed. In 1856 the family moved to Paducah; after his father's death he took charge of the mill, which he operated until 1878, at which time he came to Clinton, and bought his present mills; the capacity of the grain-mill is about 100 bushels of wheat and 250 bushels of corn. The saw-mill has a capacity of about 10,000 feet of lumber a day.

BEN M. MONROE, Hickman County, agent of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, at Columbus, was born December 31, 1849, in Frankfort, Ky. He is a son of Andrew and Martha (Taylor) Monroe. The father was born in Adair County, Ky.; he was a lawyer by profession, and had held many important offices, among which was county judge of Jefferson County; he died in 1867, aged forty-five. Our subject received his education at Louisville. In 1868 he came to Columbus; since 1872 he has been in the employ of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, and is now acting station agent at this point. He was married in 1877 to Miss V. M., daughter of Dr. J. M. Jackson, of Columbus. She died in the fall of 1881, leaving one daughter. His second marriage was in 1883, to Miss Sue M., daughter of Thomas Winn, of Hickman County. Mr. Monroe is a member of the K. of H.

ROBERT W. MOORE was born in Clinton, Hickman County, October 14, 1857. He is a son of John T. and Susan (Walker) Moore. The father was born in Bowling Green, Ky.; the mother in Westport, Ky. When about seven years of age, John T. Moore came with his parents to Clinton, where he has since resided, and is now a member of the firm of John T. Moore & Co. His father opened a store here, and John T. was taken in as clerk, and subsequently became a member of the firm. He has since boyhood been engaged in merchandising at this place. Robert W. Moore, who is a member of this firm, was, married in 1880 to Florence Wells, of Indiana. This union has been blessed with two sons.

W. J. MOORE was born February 5, 1823, in Hickman County, and is probably the oldest living native of the county. He is a son of Ira and Phœbe (Farmer) Moore. The father died in 1868, aged eighty-three; the mother died in 1881, aged seventy-three. For some good reason the father disposed of the home place, on which our subject was reared, but in 1851 William J. Moore purchased this farm back, and has since owned it. It is pleasantly located about two and one-half miles east of Clinton, and contains 120 acres of land well improved. W. J. was married in 1847 to Matilda Adams, of this county. She died in 1854, leaving one son, now in Tennessee. In 1855 Mr. Moore married Mary Hayden, of Graves County. This union has been blessed with six sons and four daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are life-long and devoted members of the Baptist Church.

J. L. MOSS, Hickman County, county clerk, was born April 15, 1847, in Green County, Ky. He is a son of George B. and Elizabeth (Marshall) Moss, both natives of the same county and State. The father died in October, 1881, aged sixty-three. Our subject was reared principally by his grandfather, Beverly Marshall. In 1870 he secured the position of deputy circuit and county clerk, and since that time has been connected with this and the office of the circuit clerk. In August, 1882, he was elected to his present position. He is also a member of the firm of L. C. & J. L. Moss, dealers in farm machinery, and doing a business not excelled by any other firm in the Purchase. Mr. Moss was married October 23, 1883, to Miss Love, daughter of Dr. George Beeler, of Clinton.

N. P. MOSS was born February 15, 1835, in Wilson County, Tenn. He is a son of John and Susan (Murray) Moss, both natives of Halifax County, Va. The father was born in May, 1798; he died January 8, 1867. The mother was born December 3, 1802; she died June 18, 1873. They were married in July, 1822, and in 1843 came to Hickman County, and engaged in agricultural pursuits. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and attended the Clinton Seminary, after which he completed his literary course at Bethel College, Tennessee. In 1856 he took up the study of law with Col. E. Crossland, was admitted to the bar in 1858, then went to Texas and engaged in practice till 1861, when he enlisted in Company C, Fifth Texas Infantry, and served till the battle of Gettysburg, when he was taken prisoner and confined at Fort Donelson till the close of the war. He then came to Clinton, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his chosen profession. Mr. Moss was married in November, 1871, to Miss Ada M. Semple, of Clinton. This union has been blessed with three children—two daughters and one son. Mr. Moss owns a farm of 300 acres, on which he resides, and which joins Clinton on the west. This farm is in as fine a state of cultivation as any in the county.

WILLIAM H. MOSS was born in Greensburg, Ky., February 8, 1825, there grew to manhood, and in 1856, came to Hickman County, where he still resides. His father, Capt. Thomas S. T. Moss, a native of Virginia, was born in 1790, removed with his parents in childhood to Mercer County, Ky., served twice as captain in the war of 1812, and died about 1850. He married Judith C. Bullock, of Perryville; she was born in 1800, and died in 1866. Their children are George B., Louisa (Hutchinson), Col. James W. (killed in battle), subject, John A., Mary (Montgomery), Susan H. (Poe), Lieut. Luther C., Harriet (Thompson), Katie (Overal and Van Meter), Thomas E. and Josephine I. The family have largely participated in the wars of the country; three brothers having served in the Mexican war, and four in the late war, our subject having taken an active part in both. On May 29, 1851, Mr. Moss married Miss Sarah J., daughter of Rev. Joseph and Patsey (Moss) Price, of Green County, Ky., (born in 1827, and died in 1882), and to them have been born John L., Joseph P., Thomas S. T. (deceased), William J. (deceased), George T., Wesley E. (deceased), Robert E. and Pelham A. Subject was next married March 14, 1883, to Miss Rachel A., daughter of Kirby and Rachel (Wyatt) Jones, of McCracken County, Ky. Mr. Moss is a farmer, owning 200 acres of good and productive land. He is a Royal Arch Mason; a Methodist in religion, and an old line Whig in politics, now affiliating with the Democratic party.

JOHN MUSCOVALLEY was born in 1810, on the Island of Mytelene, Greece, where he resided until the age of nine, and emigrated to the Ionian Isles, stopping there for ten years. He returned to Greece for a few months, then embarked for the United States, from Smyrna, on board the ship "Marmette," which was on its way to Africa for a cargo of wool, and was under the command of Capt. William Phelps, and was owned by a Mr. Bradshaw. Upon leaving Africa, the "Marmette" retouched Smyrna, then setting sail for the west, arrived at Boston in 1831. There he shipped on board the "Forrester," Capt. Brown, as a sailor, and went to the Brazils, but on the return of the ship to Boston, he left her and went to New York, there entering a grocery store kept by a Mr. Moffatt, and stayed there for nearly a year. After this he went to work in a foundry, and worked for six years. Mr. Muscovalley also sailed to Charleston, S. C., on the steamship "Columbia," the packet plying between New York and South Carolina. He next went to New Orleans on the steamship "New York," then engaged in carrying soldiers to Black Creek, Fla., to fight the Indians, also making a trip to South Carolina and Savannah on the same business, returning to New Orleans after a period of two or three months. He next attended store for more than two years in New Orleans. At the end of this time he commenced trading for himself up and down the Mississippi, buying goods at one place and selling them at another, doing an extensive business in chickens. In this he was engaged for a term of twenty-two years. In 1839 he came to this county, and purchased a farm one-half mile south of where he now resides, and in 1843, he purchased another farm of 200 acres four miles below Columbus, on the river front, he himself, being at that time still engaged in the river trade. In 1862 Mr. Muscovalley left the river and settled on his farm, and since that time has gone on farming and purchasing land, until he now owns the enormous acreage of 3,300. In 1833 he married Miss Jane Anderson, a native of Ireland, and a resident of New York. Of this union there were eight children born, three of whom are living, two boys and one girl. Miss Muscovalley was married to Thomas Davis, of Arlington, Ballard Co., Ky. Mr. Muscovalley is a Master Mason and was possessed of an apron and scarf, which were manufactured in Jerusalem, but during the fire which occurred on his farm on April 10, 1884, his house and all the contents, including the apron and scarf, were burnt. In politics he is a Democrat, and is also a member of the Greek Church. Mrs. Muscovalley is an Episcopalian.

WILLIAM MUSCOVALLEY was born in this county, in 1851, of John and Jane (Anderson) Muscovalley, of this county, whose sketch precedes this. William went first of all to the common schools, afterward to Milburn Academy, town of Milburn, Ballard Co., Ky. After leaving the academy he worked for his father until of age, when he started for himself on a good, but small farm, situated on the river front, adjoining his father's property, and which he cultivates principally in corn. It is well improved with a comfortable house, and all under cultivation. In 1880 he commenced as a lumberman on his own account, hauling and rafting logs to Memphis, also in lumbering generally, which he continued for three years very successfully, making a good deal of money at it. In 1883 he again settled down to farming. September 15, 18—, he was married to Miss Fanny Watson, daughter of Emanuel and Sarah (Ward) Watson, of Ballard County. In politics he is a Democrat.

JAMES H. MYERS was born July 27, 1845, in Fulton County, and is a son of William T. and Rachael M. (Green) Myers; both parents were born in Bertie County, N. C., where they were married, and in 1845 came to Fulton County, Ky.; the father died in 1856, aged forty-two. The mother now lives in Hickman County. Our subject was reared on his father's farm. He enlisted in 1862 in Company A, Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army, and served to the end of the war; after which settled in Wingo, and followed the carpenter trade and engaged in merchandising, in all about twelve years. In 1881 he moved to Wickliffe, and engaged in merchandising about eleven months; he then came to Clinton, where he has since resided, and at times is engaged in preaching in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Meyers was married September 21, 1875, to Mrs. Nannie S. Hatchell of Graves County; they have one daughter. Mrs. Myers has two children by her former marriage.

FREDERICK NAGEL, Jr., was born in St. Paul, Minn., October 3, 1857, and is the eldest of seven children born to Frederick and Catherine (Kraft) Nagel, both natives of Germany. Frederick Nagel, Sr., when a young man, immigrated to the United States, and settled in Louisville, Ky., where he learned the baker's trade, and followed the same for several years. He then removed to St. Louis, Mo., where he pursued the same business for a time; thence he moved to St. Paul, Minn., in 1856, where also he followed the baking business. In 1858 he returned to St. Louis where he was employed as foreman in a cracker factory until 1862, when he came with his family to Columbus, Ky., where he opened a bakery and followed his trade until his death, which occurred on August 25, 1875, in his forty-second year. For the last four or five years of his life he also ran a saloon in connection with the bakery. He belonged to no church, but was a member of both the Masonic and I. O. O. F. fraternities. Frederick Nagel, Jr., at the age of fifteen, went into his father's saloon as assistant, and continued until the father's death, after which he took charge of the business on his own account, continuing the same until 1876. In 1877, he opened a saloon at Belmont, Mo., where he remained about two years. He then sold the saloon and was employed as an engineer on the Iron Mountain Transfer Boat, plying between Belmont and Columbus, which position he still holds. In June, 1884, he opened a saloon at Columbus, which he conducts with the assistance of his youngest brother, George F., in connection with his work as engineer. He is yet unmarried and makes his home with his mother who conducts a bakery and grocery store at Columbus. Mr. Nagel belongs to no church, but is a member of the I. O. O. F. In politics he is a Democrat.

THOMAS J. NALL, Hickman County, was born June 9, 1808, in Washington County, Ky. He is a son of Martin and Elizabeth (Elliston) Nall. The father was born in Virginia, came to Washington County, Ky., at an early day, and in 1832 the family came to Hickman County. He died in 1852, aged seventy-two. The mother was born in Washington County, and died in 1818. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty-one commenced farming for himself, which he has since continued. He has owned 220 acres of land, a part of which he has deeded to his children. He was married in 1832 to Sarah Jenkins, of Washington County; she died in 1834, aged twenty. In 1835 he married Sarah Spicer, of Georgia; these parents have seven children, four sons and three daughters: John A., enlisted in 1861 in Company E, Twelfth Tennessee Infantry, and served to the end of the war; William J. enlisted in 1861 in Company E, Twelfth Tennessee, in 1862 were both transferred to the Third Kentucky Infantry, and served to the close of the war; Maria E., now wife of William Pharis; Sarah F., now Mrs. Leroy Eggbert; Martha A., wife of George W. Parrott; Thomas M. and James H. William J. was married June 15, 1865, to Susan C. Byrd, of Hickman County; they have three sons and two daughters. John A. was married in 1868, to Lydia J. Gwyn, of Hickman County; she died in the spring of 1884, leaving four sons. The family are members of the Baptist Church.

LUKE L. OLIVER, Hickman County, was born November 18, 1845, in Fulton County, Ky., and in 1871 came to Hickman County, where he has since resided. His father, Lee Oliver, a native of North Carolina, was born in 1800, removed to Fulton County, Ky., in 1826, and died in 1868. He was the son of Shade Oliver, of North Carolina, who died about 1848. Subject's mother, Drusilla (Cloyes) Oliver was born in 1816, and is still living. To her and husband were born Harvey, subject, John M., Robert W. and Melissa J. Luke L. Oliver was married February 24, 1870, to Miss Mary J., daughter of Harris and Betty (Mobley) Pruitt, of Gibson County, Tenn.; this union has been blessed with the birth of one child, Arena. Mr. Oliver is a successful farmer, owning 177 acres of fertile land. In religion he is an active Methodist and in politics affiliates with the Democratic party.

GEORGE W. PARROTT was born July 22, 1847, in Hickman County, Ky., where he was reared to manhood, and has always resided. His father, Shelton Parrott, a native of Washington County, Ky., died in 1875, at the age of seventy-seven years. Shelton married Betsey Littsey, who died in 1880, at the age of sixty-five years. The offspring of this worthy couple are James G., Louisa E. (House), Amanda (Howard), Mary A. (Nall), and subject. George W. Parrott was married October 22, 1868, to Miss Mattie, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Spicer) Nall, of Hickman County, and from this union have sprung two sons, viz.: Harvey McElroy and James Felix Melvill. Mr. Parrott is a farmer, having 160 acres of good land, in a fine state of cultivation. In politics he is a Democrat, and his wife is a member of the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM PHARIS, Hickman County, was born March 4, 1836, in Cumberland County, Ky. He is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Norris) Pharis. The father was born November 15, 1811, in the same county and State; in the fall of 1856 he brought his family to Hickman County, bought 160 acres of land and now owns 175 acres, 100 acres of which are improved. William Pharis owns about ninety acres where he now lives; this land he has acquired by his own energy and hard work. He was married in 1859 to Maria E. Nall, of this county; this union has been blessed with three children, two sons and one daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Pharis are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

J. P. POLLOCK was born December 24, 1837, in Todd County, Ky. He is a son of John and Rebecca (McCauley) Pollock. The father was born in Todd County, and died in 1850, aged thirty-four years. The mother was born in Dickson County, Tenn.; she died in 1864, aged sixty-four. After the death of the father the family moved to Ballard County and engaged in farming. In 1866 our subject came to Columbus, where he has since resided. He holds the office of justice of the peace, now serving on his fourth term. He has also held the office of mayor of Columbus several terms. Mr. Pollock was married in 1860, to Margaret F. Richardson of Ballard County; this union has been blessed with four children, two sons and two daughters. He is a member of the K. of H., K. & L. of H., U. O. of the G. C. and member of the Baptist Church.

JOE E. PORTER was born April 29, 1852, in Hickman County, Ky. He is the son of E. H. and Priscilla (Porter) Porter. The father was born near Eminence, Ky., and came to Hickman County about 1840, where he has since resided and engaged in farming. Our subject was reared on his father's farm. In 1873 he went to Milburn, Ky., where he was engaged in merchandising seven years, after which he went to Paducah and secured a position as traveling salesman for George Rock & Co., and remained with them four years. He then went to St. Louis and traveled for Claflin, Allen & Co. one year, when, on account of sickness, he resigned. In September, 1883, he came to Clinton, where he has since lived. He was married in 1875 to Nannie S. Gregory, of Mayfield, Ky. These parents have three sons. J. M. Porter, the brother of Joe E. Porter, was born in August, 1857, in Hickman County. He engaged in merchandising in Arlington in 1875. In 1878 he went to Paducah, and was traveling salesman for W. N. Robinson three years. He then went to St. Louis and secured a position with the St. Louis Glass & Queensware Company, and has since represented this firm. Mr. Porter is regarded as one of the most successful salesman on the road. In November, 1883, the firm of Porter, Myatt & Co. was established.

B. W. RAMSAY, Columbus, merchant, dealer in staple and fancy groceries. Large stock kept on hand. Prices are adapted to the trade and the times.

F. M. RAY was born July 5, 1822, in Washington County, Ky., and is a son of Dennis and Nancy (Hays) Ray. The father was born in the same county and State, in 1798, and died here in 1874. He was one of the earliest settlers of Hickman County, having come here in 1827. He served as one of the magistrates of the county for many years prior to his death. F. M. Ray was reared on his father's farm where he remained until the age of twenty-one. He then attended college and taught school five years. During a portion of this time he also read law. He then taught the Clinton Seminary for eight years, meanwhile pursuing his law studies. Discontinuing teaching, he turned his attention to the practice of law, and has since followed that profession. He represented this county in the legislature in the session of 1854–55. He spends his winters in Florida, where he owns an orange grove near Fort Dade, Fernando County. He was married November 4, 1847, to Miss Martha Hart, of west Tennessee, and this union has been blessed with ten children, five of whom—two sons and three daughters—are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Ray have been life-long members of the Misssionary Baptist Church.

MATTHEW REILLY was born in West Virginia, November 17, 1824, came with his parents in 1831 to Hickman County, Ky., and in 1839 moved to Scott County, Mo.; then in 1847 to Lee County, Iowa, returning in 1860 to Hickman County, Ky., where he has since resided. His father, Edward Reilly, died in 1833, aged about sixty-five years. He was the son of Peter Reilly, an Irishman, who lost his life in the American Revolution. Edward married Ann Root, and their offspring are Mary A. (Baran), Eliza (Baker), Peter, James M., Caroline, Lilburn H., Helen M. (Conder), Zerilda (Madigan and Henley), subject and Andrewville. Matthew Reilly was married in 1846, to Miss Emily E., daughter of Alfred E. Harris, of Scott County, Mo. (died in 1854), and to them were born Ann E. (Cromwell), William (deceased), Andrewville (deceased) and Napoleon B. He was next married in 1858, to Mrs. Sarah Rodman (born in 1827), daughter of Thomas and Mary (Scott) Bryars, and their children are Oscar (deceased), Lilburn H., Josephine (Baker), Edward T., Martha, Sidney and Calvin B. Mr. Reilly is a farmer, having 225 acres of productive land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Christian and a Democrat.

ELIZA G. (BUCHANAN) REMLEY, Hickman County, was born in Lincoln County, Tenn., on August 2, 1835; daughter of Elbridge Gerry and Katherine Sidney (Garner) Buchanan. Mrs. Remley was brought up in Tennessee till the age of twelve, when the family removed to Columbus, Ky. In Tennessee Mr. Buchanan followed the business of a general merchant, but on removing to Kentucky he went into the grocery business, also keeping two hotels, the Buchanan House in Columbus, and another one in Clinton. During the war the Buchanan House was taken by the army and used as a hospital, all the furniture being broken up, and no allowance being made for it; the Confederate Army, on evacuating Columbus, forgetting all about the ruin they had caused at the hotel. Elbridge James Buchanan, a brother of our subject, served till the close of the war under Gen. Faulkner. Mrs. Remley received a good common school education. In 1853 she married Granville Remley, a native of Ohio, who came to Kentucky in 1851, and whose birthday took place on July 4, 1827. He worked as carpenter and blacksmith in Columbus up to the close of the war, also contracting for the supply of meat for the portion of the army stationed at Columbus. At the close of the war Mr. Remley had the sum of $60, and a little furniture. He then leased some property known as the Dabney farm, living on it till the time of his death in 1880. Mrs. Remley still conducts it, and has also since that time bought and paid for another farm of about 145 acres six miles from Clinton. They had a family of nine, three of whom are dead: William G., Mary (Davis), Kate (Moss), Alice H. (Fisher), James Elbridge, George A., Frank K., Henry F., and one that died unnamed. The late Mr. Remley was a Master Mason, a Baptist, and a strong advocate of the temperance cause. Mrs. Remley is a Baptist.

ROBERT D. RENNICK, Hickman County, was born in Lynchburg, Va., July 8, 1836, and in 1843, came with his parents to Hickman County, Ky., where he still retains his residence. His father, Samuel F. Rennick, was born in Lincoln County, Ky., in 1798, and died at this place in 1859. He was the son of James Rennick, of South Carolina, a Rovolutionary soldier. Samuel F. married Jane C., daughter of James Lindsay of Rockbridge County, Va. She was born in 1798 and died in 1877. The union was blessed with the following named offspring: James, George W., Samuel W., John F., Andrew T., and subject. Our subject was favored with a good English education, and is a man of considerable reading. In the late war he was a soldier in Forrest's command. He is now engaged in farming, owning at the old family homestead, 170 acres of good land, which he is successfully cultivating.

DR. W. W. RICHMOND was born April 7, 1846, in Hickman County, Ky. He is a son of William and Harriet T. (Woods) Richmond. The father was born in Tennessee, and died in 1848, aged thirty, the mother was born in Kentucky, and died in 1874, aged fifty-two. The doctor after completing his literary education, taught school one year, after which he worked out three years. In 1871 he commenced the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. George Beeler, and graduated in March, 1874 at the University of Louisville. He then settled in Alexander, Fulton County, where he practiced his profession eight years. In 1882 he came to Clinton, where he has since practiced. He was married in May, 1879, to Lucy E. Marshall of Paducah; two children, both daughters blessed this union. They are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

THOMAS N. RINGO was born December 5, 1831, in Hickman County, Ky., where he grew to manhood, and in 1853 removed to Dade County, Mo., and after a short period, returned to Hickman County, where he has since resided. His father, Dr. James S. Ringo, a native of Montgomery County, Ky, was born in 1800, and died in 1874. He was the son of Joseph Ringo, a native of Germany, who died about 1860. Dr. James S. married Elizabeth Harris of Alabama; she was born in 1800 and died in 1831, and was the mother of the following children: Joel, Micajah, Monteville J., Mary A. (Persons) and subject. By a second marriage (with Sallie White), the doctor became the father of Amanda (McDonald), Martha (Sublett), Fee (Gore), Coleman, Willis, James M. and Belle. Dr. Ringo came to Hickman County about 1827. In October, 1852, subject was married to Miss Martha A., daughter of William and Elizabeth (Handley) Amos of Hickman County (died in 1854), and to them was born William F. He was next married in May, 1858, to Miss Nancy E. (born September 17, 1836, and died February 24, 1874), daughter of Arthur and Eveline (Travis) Brand of Graves County, Ky., and to them were born James M., Mary A. (Clark), Kate (Hopkins), Joel, Willis (deceased), Amanda B., Fredonia E. (deceased), Minnie, Henry and Robert L. Mr. Ringo is a farmer, owning 165 acres of fair land in good condition.

JOHN D. ROBERTS was born in Shreveport, La., February 23, 1845, and is the only child of John and Sabina (Dunlap) Roberts—the former of whom was a native of Tennessee, and the latter of Indiana. They were of Scotch and English descent respectively. Our subject however, has six half-brothers, the fruit of a subsequent marriage of both his father and mother. John Roberts received his early education in his native State of Tennessee, where he also learned the saddler and harness-maker's trade. When a young man he removed to Shreveport, La., where he followed his trade with abundant success until his death, which occurred in May, 1845, when our subject was only three months old. He was a member of the Baptist and Mrs. Roberts of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject received a good common school education, and an academic one at Warsaw, Ind., in early life. At the age of eighteen years he went to Cairo, Ill., and here he served seven years as an apprentice and clerk in the drug business. He then came to Columbus, Ky., where he clerked in a drug store for some four years, after which he opened a drug store of his own at the same place, and has been engaged in that business ever since. He is one of the oldest and best posted druggists and chemists in the Purchase. Mr. Roberts is yet unmarried, he and three of his half-brothers living together. He is liberal in his political views and is one of the leading and promising citizens of the city and county.

S. ROBERTS was born in Daviess County, Ky., May 7, 1843. He is a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Duncan) Roberts. The father was born in Virginia, and died in 1855, aged seventy-five. Our subject was reared on his father's farm and at the age of twenty-one, commenced telegraphing and railroading, and was appointed station agent at Humboldt. He was also seven years engaged in repairing wires and telegraphing, after which he went to Grand Crossing, and there worked one year for the Western Union. In 1875 he moved to Arlington and held the position as station agent at that point about eight years; in the winter of 1883 he came to Columbus, and purchased the Columbus City Mills, which he has since operated. He owns one farm in Hickman County, and two farms in Ballard County, also a hotel and other property in Arlington, all of which he has acquired by his own exertions. Mr. Roberts was married in 1872 to Miss Julia Payne of Union County, Ky., who has borne him two children —one son and one daughter. He is a member of the Masonic order.

E. P. ROBERTS was born February 13, 1839, in Mason County, Va. At about the age of six years he was taken by his parents to Cincinnati, Ohio, and there he received his early schooling. At the age of thirteen he commenced working at the ship-carpenter trade, and has been for the past twenty-five years engaged in steamboating on the Mississippi and other rivers. In 1870 he was employed as mate of the transfer steamer "St. Louis;" the following year he was promoted to pilot, which position he has since faithfully filled. In 1863 he entered the Mississippi Marine Brigade as carpenter, Union Army; he served in that capacity until the close of the war. Mr. Roberts was married in 1870 to Sallie J. Hunter, of Mound City, Ill., and three sons and two daughters have blessed this union. He is a member of the K. of H.

THOMAS J. ROBERTS was born August 10, 1835, in Weakley County, Tenn., where he resided until 1872, when he came to Moscow, Ky. His father, Richard Roberts, a native of Chesterfield County, Va., removed in youth with his parents to Weakley County, Tenn., and died in 1857, at the age of forty-nine years. He was the son of William Roberts. Richard married Jane, daughter of William F. Farmer, of Weakley County, Tenn., born in 1814, and from this union sprang Susan A. (Wheeler), subject, Caledonia P. (Lloyd), William F., Isabell (Winstead), James (deceased), Martha J. (Orr), and John R. Subject was married June 11, 1867, to Miss Alice G., daughter of Franklin G. and Susan (Clemons) Beadles of Weakley County, and born in 1848. To them have been born Richard S., Joseph T., Blanche E., Edward and Lura D. Mr. Roberts was engaged three years in clerking and then commenced merchandising in 1859, at Dukedom, Tenn., but closed his business in 1861 on account of the war, and during the period of strife, engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1869 he dealt in tobacco and cotton, then for a period of seven years was in the live stock business, and in 1872 removed to Moscow, Ky., where he carried on the business of general merchant and produce dealer until 1877, when he purchased and operated a flouring-mill until 1881. He is now, with his partner, under the firm title of Roberts & Worthe, constructing a custom and merchant mill, that bids fair to be not only profitable to the enterprising owners, but a valuable acquisition to the community. Subject is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and in politics is a Democrat.

JOHN M. ROBINSON (deceased) was born June 16, 1816, near Harrisburg, Ky., and at the age of sixteen, came with his parents to Hickman County. They located at Columbus, and engaged in the hotel business till 1843, when their premises were destroyed by fire. The father then moved to Mayfield, where he died in 1856. John M. removed to a farm, where he remained fifteen years. At the close of the war he came to Clinton, where he engaged in merchandising, livery and hotel business until his death, which occurred July 10, 1880. He was married April 14, 1840, to Martha A. Watson, of Georgia; she was born in 1821, and educated in Paris, Tenn. They had eight children, but one of whom is now living, Emma. Mrs. Robinson is a member of the Baptist Church. She still continues in the hotel business, owning the premises herself. She has lately rebuilt and renovated the house throughout, and now has the most comfortable house in the county.

THE SALMON FAMILY, Hickman County. John Salmon, the progenitor of the Salmons of Kentucky, was of an old Virginia family, and was born in Williamson County, Va., in 1807; removed to Tennessee in 1817; thence to Ballard County, Ky., in 1844; to Fulton County in 1857, and died in 1863. He was the son of Robert Salmon. John espoused Ann E., daughter of James A. and Susan (Odeneal) Grant of Tennessee. She was born in 1810 and died in 1865. Their offspring are Susan C. (Johnson), Tate L., James C., Quintus M., Samuel B., Henry D., Mollie E. (Lewis), George C. and John O. The children are an honor to their parents and useful members of the community.

Henry D. Salmon was born October 6, 1844, in Montgomery County, Tenn. He was married September 20, 1866, to Mary A., daughter of John K. and Nancy (Bell) Morris of Hickman County, Ky. She died in 1871, at the age of twenty-four years. From this union sprang one child, Susan V. Subject was next married May 16, 1872, to Miss Martha K., daughter of W. C. and Mary E. (Dickins) Blair of Hickman County, born April 30, 1854, and to them have been born Lura B., Harriet C. and William L. Henry D. is a farmer owning 240 acres of very fertile land in successful cultivation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Christian and a Democrat.

John O. Salmon, the youngest son of John Salmon, is a native of Ballard County, Ky., where he was born June 18, 1854, and came with his parents to Hickman County, where he still retains his residence. February 6, 1883, he espoused as a life companion, Miss Sue M., daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Wheat) Kennedy, of Hickman County. Mr. Salmon is a successful farmer, having ninety acres of first-class land in good condition. In politics he is identified with the Democratic party, and his wife is a member of the Christian Church.

WAKEFIELD M. SAMUELS was born February 17, 1821, in Nelson County, Ky. He is a son of John and Rachael (Kirtz) Samuels. The father was born in 1796 in the same county and State; he died in 1852. The mother was born in Maryland; she died in 1866, aged seventy-two. Our subject was reared on his father's farm. In 1838 he went to Adair County, and there worked at the saddlery trade. The following year he returned to Bradstown, Nelson County. In 1841 he removed to Cumberland County, and there remained until 1852, when he came to Hickman County, where he has since lived. He was here engaged in merchandising and the hotel business about five years, after which he removed to his present farm, which joins Clinton on the west. This farm consists of 130 acres, largely devoted to the nursery business—only nursery in the county, and no finer can be found in the State. His principal productions are the apple, peach, pear, plum, quince, cherry, grape and strawberry. He employs from ten to thirty hands, and his strawberries are shipped principally to Chicago. His trees are sold principally in Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois. Mr. Samuels was sheriff of this county from 1863 to 1867; he has also been police judge. He was married November 12, 1844, to Sarah L. Stoner, of Cumberland County. These parents had eight children, five living—three daughters and two sons. Mr. Samuels is a member of the Christian Church.

DR. J. R. SCARBOROUGH was born in Stewart County, Tenn., April 12, 1846, and is a son of W. W. and M. L. (Wofford) Scarborough. The father was a native of North Carolina, and moved to Tennessee in a very early day. In 1852 he came to the Purchase, and settled in Ballard County, near Milburn. There he farmed until his death in 1856; his widow died in 1876. Subject was the tenth of twelve children, of whom seven are now living: Sarah A. (wife of J. H. Ashbrook, in Ballard County), W. H. (in Milburn), Celia A. (in Ballard County), S. L. (in Spring Hill), J. T. (in Graves County), M. E. (wife of George Purtle), and J. R. (our subject). The early life of the last named was spent on a farm. He received his literary education in Ballard County. In 1870 he turned his attention to the carpenter's trade; this he followed until 1876, when he began reading medicine at the office of Drs. Hocker & Hobbs in Graves County. He subsequently attended lectures at the Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn., and graduated from that institution in the class of 1878. He first settled in Danville, Tenn., where he followed his profession one year. He then came to this district and is now the only physician in the place. At present he is a member of the Western Kentucky Medical Society. Dr. Scarborough was married December 14, 1882, to Miss Molly F. Lamkin, a daughter of Shelton and Louisa (Atwood) Lamkin, natives of Kentucky. The result of this union has been one child, since deceased. Dr. S. has been identified with the I. O. O. F. fraternity.

ROBERT L. SCEARCE was born December 16, 1852, in Fulton County, Ky., where he grew to manhood and lived until 1878, when he came to Hickman County, where he still retains his residence. He is a son of A. H. and Martha Scearce, of Fulton County. November 13, 1877, he was married to Miss Ella S., daughter of W. W. and Emeline Webster, of Fulton County, and to them has been born one child, Effie Lee. Mr. Scearce is a successful farmer, turning his attention chiefly to the raising of corn, wheat and stock. He is industrious, energetic, and full of business. In politics he is independent, and his wife is a member of the Christian Church.

JOHN A. SCOTT was born June 3, 1848, in Jackson, Mich., and is a son of William H. and Jerusha W. (Shipman) Scott. The father was born in Brunswick, N. J., and died November 22, 1872, aged fifty-two years. The mother still resides in Jackson. In 1860 John commenced learning his present business of architect and builder, which he has since followed, and for several years past has been superintending the construction of public buildings. He has recently completed the court house in Trigg County, which is an excellent specimen of architecture, and reflects credit on its builders. He is at present superintending the building of the court house at Clinton, which is a safe guarantee that the work will be faithfully performed. Mr. Scott was married October 28, 1877, to Rosella Childers, of Fulton. They have three children: Herbert H., Cordelia M. and Cecil R. Mrs. Scott is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr. Scott is a member of the I. O., O. F. Frank Carr Lodge, of Fulton, Ky.

THE SEAY FAMILY.—James G. Seay, a native of Washington County, Ky., was born in 1799, came to Hickman County in 1834, and here died in 1881. He was a nephew of Felix Grundy, and the son of Samuel Seay, of Amelia County, Va., who was born in 1760, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. James G. was twice married, first to Annie Parrott, who bore him the following children: Elizabeth M. (Titsworth and Alexander), Dr. Charles T., Samuel R., Dr. George W., Amanda A. (Earle) and John R. From his second marriage, which was with Marion, daughter of Josiah Wright, of Graves County, born in 1808 and died in 1856, sprang Annie V. (Erwin) and Dr. Felix G.

SAMUEL R. SEAY was born December

10, 1827, in Washington County, Ky., and came with his parents, in 1834, to Hickman County, where he has since resided. In youth he secured a moderate education, and engaged in teaching. He was married December 10, 1850, to Miss Martha F., daughter of Joseph and Rhoda (Riggs) Hughes of Graves County and to them have been born Joseph J., Annie E., Mary L., Laura B., Samuel H., George W., Rhoda, Lillian, Felix G. and Maurice A. Subject is a farmer, owning 590 acres of good land, well-improved and highly cultivated, in this district, and also 595 acres of valuable land in Florida, where he spends his winters. On this land he has two orange groves. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Felix Grundy Seay was born April 12, 1848, on the place where he now resides, in Hickman County, Ky. In youth he was favored with fair opportunities, and procured a good education, which he has constantly improved by application and continued reading. January 8, 1883, he married Miss Pattie R., daughter of Scarlet B. and Sarah (Yantis) May, of Hickman County, Ky. She was born April 17, 1862. In 1870 subject commenced the study of medicine with his brother, Dr. Charles T. Seay, and in 1872 attended the university of Louisville, from which he graduated in 1874. Since his return to his native home he has established and now enjoys a lucrative and extensive practice. He is also engaged in farming, and owns 244 acres of good land. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and is a Methodist and a Democrat.

J. K. SELLARS, Hickman County, was born in Maury County, Tenn., February 11, 1811, and is a son of John and Eleanor (Kenny) Sellars, natives of North Carolina, the father of English descent, the mother of Irish. In 1833 the father came to Hickman County, and settled on the farm now owned by subject. He was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and died here in 1847. The mother died in September, 1835, being at the time of her death a faithful member of the Baptist Church. Subject was the third of nine children, of whom but two are now living: Mrs. Jane Evans, in Graves County, and John K., our subject. In 1840 John K. assumed control of the home farm, where he has since resided. He now owns about 120 acres, with about seventy acres in cultivation. He was married October 27, 1842, to Miss Bethina Weatherspoon, a daughter of William and Mary (Keorcum) Weatherspoon. Three living children have blessed this union. Mr. and Mrs. Sellars are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

J. G. SLAYDEN was born November 13, 1855, in Humphreys County, Tenn. He is a son of T. E. and Lovey (Council) Slayden. The father was a native of Virginia. In 1871 he came to Hickman County, and engaged in farming. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of eighteen entered a drug store as clerk. He has been engaged at this business ever since, and his present store was established in 1878. Mr. Slayden was married January 6, 1880, to Miss Mattie, daughter of Z. N. Bell, a native of Shelby County, Ky., who came to Hickman County in 1866. This union has been blessed with one daughter.

CAPT. THOMAS SPROAT, Hickman County, was born in Scotland, May 11, 1801, and is the only child born to John and Mary (Anderson) Sproat, both natives of Scotland. John Sproat received a good common school education in his native land, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits all his life. Both he and wife were life-long and devoted members of the Presbyterian Church. Thomas Sproat received a liberal common school education in his native Scotland, where he was employed on his father's farm until he was seventeen years old, when he went to Oxford, England, where he served three years with his uncle, Hugh Sproat, at the grocery business. In May, 1821, he immigrated to the United States and settled in Saratoga County, N. Y., where he was employed as a farm laborer for some four years. He then went to Newark, N. J., where he was employed in a stage barn for two years, and afterwards was a stage driver for four years. In 1832 he engaged in the grocery trade on his own account, at Newark, and continued in that business until the panic of 1837. In 1842 he removed to Covington, Ky., and soon after to St. Louis, Mo., where he commenced steamboating on the Illinois, Ohio, and Mississippi Rivers, first in the capacity of a clerk, and afterward as pilot, captain, and owner or part owner of some eight or ten steamboats. Capt. Sproat continued to follow the river until 1855, when he engaged in the ice trade, shipping ice in barge loads from the upper Illinois to various towns on the lower Mississippi. In April, 1862, he landed at Cairo, Ill., with six barge loads of ice, towed by the steamer "Philadelphia", destined for Cairo, Pittsburg Landing and Mound City; a few days after a terrible storm arose, which broke boat and barges loose from their moorings. The barges were wrecked, and out of over 3,000 tons of ice only 1,000 tons were saved.

which he was employed at brick-making and brick-laying for some five years. In 1853 and 1854 he was employed in the steam saw-mill at Columbus. In 1855 he went to Memphis, Tenn., where he was overseer of the chain gang for one year. He then returned to Columbus, and thence to New Madrid, Mo., where he taught dancing school for one year. He then went to Rolla, Tenn., where he taught a dancing school for another year. In 1859 he returned to Columbus, Ky., and in 1862 enlisted in Company L, Eighth Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, United States service, and served eight months, when he was discharged on account of disability. He then returned to Columbus, where he has since been employed as a carpenter and brick mason, when able to work at all. He was married March 23, 1848, to Miss Sarah E. Howell, a native of Sumner County, Tenn. Ten children, three sons and seven daughters, have blessed their union, all of whom are yet living. Mr. Trevathan belongs to no church, but holds to the Universalist faith. He is a Republican in politics.

HON. C. M. VAUGHAN was born September 9, 1837, in Nottaway County, Va. He is a son of Patrick H. and Louisa (Winfree) Vaughan. The father was born in Halifax County, Va.; he was engaged in farming and also carried on a blacksmith shop. Our subject soon after his father's death, came to Hickman County, where he has since resided. He has held the office of magistrate three years and sheriff four years. He represented this county in the legislature one term and is now a member of the State senate, representing the First District. He has also held the office of sinking fund commissioner three years. He enlisted in 1861 in Company B, Seventh Kentucky, Confederate States Army. He owns a farm of about 400 acres, two miles north of Clinton, where he now resides. He was married December 15, 1858 to Nancy E. Fowlks, of this county; nine children have blessed this union, seven sons and two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

M. D. WARD was born September 8, 1840, in Hickman County, and in the house where he now lives. He is a son of Michael and Mary E. (Grace) Ward. The father was born in Stewart County, Tenn., immigrated to this county in 1827, and settled in the neighborhood of Shiloh, where he died July 7, 1877, aged seventy-five. The mother was born in Trigg County; she died in 1882, aged eighty-two. Our subject enlisted in 1861 in Company E, Twelfth Tennessee Infantry, Confederate States Army; the following year he was transferred to the Third Kentucky Infantry, and served to the end of the war, after which he returned to his father's farm, and was married to Sarah A. Spear, of this county; six children have blessed this union, four sons and two daughters. Mr. Ward was also engaged as a superintendent in the stave business from 1869 to 1871, in Missouri, Arkansas and Kentucky.

W. D. WARD was born February 20, 1858, in Ballard County. He is a son of W. A. and E. J. (Berry) Ward. The father was born in Calloway County, Ky., in 1825, and is now living on his farm in Hickman County. The mother is a native of Tennessee. Our subject was reared on his father's place, and at the age of twenty rented a farm, where he lived three years. He then bought a farm and soon after moved to Clinton, where he engaged in merchandising, which he still continues. In 1881 he engaged in the livery business, which he now carries on. He was married November 24, 1878, to Sophia Williams, of this county, and this union has been blessed with one daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Ward are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

WILLIAM WEATHERSPOON was born in Fulton County, Ky., December 6, 1837, and is a son of James and Nellie (Bowen) Weatherspoon. The father was a native of North Carolina, and of Scotch-Irish descent. He came to the Purchase in 1830, and settled in Fulton County. There he entered 200 acres, and turned his attention to farming. He also taught school, and was one of the earliest teachers of the day. He died March 17, 1844. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and a class leader in that denomination for many years. His widow died in 1868. William Weatherspoon is the second of a family of five children, of whom four are now living: Robert, in Fulton County; Thomas, in the Moscow District; James and William. He left home at the age of seventeen and came to Hickman County. There he apprenticed himself and worked at the blacksmith trade for three years. In 1858 he commenced for himself, and in 1860 came to his present location. At this point he has since followed his trade. He also manufactures the Diamond Plow, and follows wood work to some extent. He owns a farm of 146 acres, of which about seventy-five acres are cleared. Mr. Weatherspoon was married January 27, 1858, in Hickman County, to Miss Susan Colon Ray, a daughter of Samuel and Susan (Litsey) Ray. This union resulted in four children: Allie B., wife of Jefferson Batts, deceased; Laura J., wife of I. B. Murphy; Kate L., wife of J. J. Gardner, and William J. Mrs. Weatherspoon died November 24, 1884. Mr. Weatherspoon enlisted in Faulkner's battalion in November, 1861; was captured in June, 1862 and taking the oath returned home. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

THOMAS P. WHAYNE, of Hickman County, was born August 7, 1834, in Daviess County, Ky., where he lived until 1849, when he was taken by his parents to Ballard County, and in 1850 brought to Hickman County, where he now resides. His father, Isaac Whayne, a native of Virginia, is still living at the age of seventy-four years. He was the son of Isaac W., of Virginia, who died about 1832. Subject's mother is Harriet, a daughter of Henry and Jane Pointer, of Daviess County, and to her and husband were born subject, Viola (Beeler), Dr. Alfred B., Trevor and Coleman. Our subject was favored with a good education, is a reading man and possesses one among the best libraries in the county. He was married December 12, 1868 to Miss Olivia, daughter of John and Isabella (Holland) Caldwell, of Hickman County, and from this union sprang Ulric, Thomas S. and Cora O. Mrs. Whayne died in 1873, and November 25, 1874, Mr. Whayne married Miss Virginia, daughter of William S. and Julia A. (Caldwell) Jordan, of Hickman County, and to them have been born Eugene C., Harry U. and Mary H. Subject is a farmer, having 325 acres of good land. He is a member of the Christian Church and a Democrat.

I. C. WHAYNE was born June 7, 1811, in Louisville, Ky. He is a son of Isaac and Mollie (Jones) Whayne. The father was born in Virginia, came to Jefferson County in 1808, and in 1816 removed to Daviess County, where he was engaged in farming, butchering, brick-making and was also tobacco inspector; he died in July, 1833, aged sixty. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and in 1832 commenced farming on his own account in Daviess County; in 1849 he moved to Ballard County; in 1851 he moved to Clinton, and in the fall of 1852 returned to Ballard County; carried on his farming there until 1856, then bought a farm in Hickman County, and there lived till December, 1883, when he came to Clinton, where he now resides. Mr. Whayne was married in 1832 to H. E. Pointer; she was born in Halifax County, Va., in 1815; these parents have had ten children, five now living—four sons and one daughter. Mr. Whayne was postmaster several years when on his farm.

REV. WILLIS WHITE was born February 26, 1805, in Halifax County, N. C., and is a son of Dempsey and Priscilla (Morris) White, both natives of North Carolina. The father moved to Tennessee in 1805, resided there for some time, and then moved to Christian County, Ky., settling about eight miles from Princeton. He came to this county in 1824, and died here in 1842, at the age of seventy. He served the county as magistrate for many years, and finally became sheriff by reason of seniority. Willis White remained in this county until 1833, working on a farm. He then moved to Ballard County, and settled four miles north of Blandville, where he commenced farming. In the fall of 1833 he joined the Missionary Baptist Church, and in 1835 began preaching. In 1834 he was appointed one of the magistrates of the county, and served in that capacity until 1847, when he was elected to the office of sheriff, which position he held for two years. He remained in Ballard County until the fall of 1850, when he came to Clinton, where he has since resided. At this place he acted as pastor of the Baptist Church for twenty-three years. He has also served as pastor of the following churches: Lovelace, thirteen years; Metropolisville, four years; Columbus, four years and Hickman, five years. He has been instrumental in establishing many churches in the country. In 1872 he was elected to the office of school examiner, and subsequently, under the new law, to the office of county superintendent, and is still serving in that capacity. He has been mainly instrumental in founding, building and subsequent development of the Clinton Baptist College, and was about the first to agitate the starting of this institution. Since its organization in 1872, he has served as president of the board of directors. Mr. White has been twice married, first in 1826, in this county, to Miss Mary Wright, daughter of Enoch Wright, of east Tennessee. This lady died in 1849 leaving eight children, of whom one son and three daughters are now living. James D., the son, is now a lawyer at Blandville, and was formerly judge of the common pleas court of Hickman County. January 6, 1850, Mr. White was married to Mrs. Harriet T. Richmond, (nee Woods), a daughter of William Woods, a native of Kentucky, and one of the first residents of Clinton. Mrs. White died October 24, 1874, leaving three children, two of whom, a son and a daughter, are still living. Mr. White is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JACOB WHITE, editor of the Hickman County Times, was born in Fulton County, Ky., August 11, 1847, and educated in the country schools and at Clinton Seminary, Clinton, Ky. When about the age of eighteen he engaged in school teaching, which he continued several years, after which he commenced the study of law under the preceptorship of Judge Bradley. After several years' study under this gentleman, he was admitted to the bar, and has since followed his chosen profession. He has been several years engaged in merchandising. White's Opera House was built by him and Mr. Ashley in 1880. The Hickman County Times was established January 1, 1884, Mr. White being editor and proprietor; he is one of the stirring business men of the county.

H. C. WILKEY, postmaster, Columbus, Hickman County, was born October 11, 1814, in Pike County, Ohio. He is a son of John Wilkey, who was a native of Virginia; eh died in Illinois in 1850, at the advanced age of ninety-five. Our subject was brought up on a farm, and at the age of eighteen went to Wapello County, Iowa, and continued farming. He enlisted in 1861, in Company F, Seventh Iowa Infantry, served three years, and at the expiration of his enlistment, was honorably discharged. He participated in the following battles: Belmont, Fort Donelson, first and second battles of Corinth, Shiloh, Pulaski and others. He then went to Paris, Tenn., where he was engaged in merchandising seven years. He then moved to Jackson, Tenn., where he continued merchandising about two years. In 1875 he came to Columbus, where he has since been engaged in the jewelry business. October, 1881, he was appointed postmaster, which office he has since held. He is a member of the Republican Central Committee, Knights of Honor, and Knights and Ladies of Honor, and Knights of the Golden Cross. Mr. Wilkey was married, in 1865, to Mrs. Mary Johnson, of Tennessee; she died in 1880, leaving two daughters and one son; she also left one son by a former marriage. Mr. Wilkey was next married, in 1882, to Rose Patterson, of Hickman County. This union was blessed with one son. Mr. Wilkey is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school for four years, which office he still holds.

B. S. WILLIAMS was born October 2, 1829, in Graves County, Ky. He is a son of Burrill and Stacey (Pryor) Williams. The father died in June, 1830. Our subject, at the age of twenty, commenced farming on his own account, which he has since followed. He enlisted in 1861 in Arkansas, and served about fifteen months in the Confederate States Army. In 1865 he came to his present farm, consisting of 160 acres. Mr. Williams was married in 1849 to Nancy Rozzell, of Graves County. These parents have five children—one son and four daughters. Mr. Williams is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

THOMAS WINN, JR., Hickman County, was born in Woodford County, Ky., February 27, 1824, and is the seventh of eight children born to Thomas and Maria (Cook) Winn, both natives of the "Old Dominion" and of English descent. Thomas Winn, Sr., when a young man, removed to Woodford County, Ky., where he learned the brickmaker's trade, which he followed for a time. In that county he was married, and was engaged in farming for several years, and had amassed considerable property, but met with severe financial reverses in consequence of having endorsed too freely for some of his neighbors. From Woodford County he removed to Henry County. In 1832 he came with his family to Hickman, which was then almost an unbroken wilderness. Here in 1837 he bought wild land, moved into a log-cabin, and subsequently improved a farm where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred July 7, 1862, in his seventy-seventh year. He was for several years one of the magistrates of the county. He and wife were devoted members of the Christian Church, in which church he was a ruling elder for over twenty years. When Mr. Winn first came to western Kentucky he lived for a short time in Columbus; afterward for a few months across the river in Missouri, and still later for about three years in what is now Ballard County. Thomas Winn, Jr., was employed on his father's farm until 1852, when he went to Columbus, where he took charge of a stock of goods for a widowed sister and conducted the business for about four years. He then engaged in the ferry business at same place, which he continued for some four or five years. The business not being a profitable one, however, he returned to the old home farm, which he has owned for several years. Here he has been extensively and successfully engaged in farming and stockraising. He was married in March, 1862, to Miss K. H. Green, a native of Mercer County, Ky. Two daughters have blessed their union, both of whom are now married. Mr. Winn and wife are and have been for more than twenty years members of the Christian Church. He is also a member of the K. of H., and in politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN WOODROW was born in Jefferson County, Ky., January 25, 1829, and is one of eleven children born to Alexander and Eunice C. (Guthrie) Woodrow, both natives of Jefferson County, Ky., and of Scotch-Irish descent. Alexander Woodrow received a good classical education, and was engaged at agricultural pursuits and at civil engineering all his life. He was for a number of years county surveyor of Jefferson County, Ky. At the age of seventeen he enlisted in Col. Hopkin's regiment, and served with that officer in his Indian campaign. His death occurred in the spring of 1873 in his sixty-ninth year: He was a life-long and devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. John Woodrow was employed on his father's farm until he was twenty-one years old. From that time until the fall of 1881, he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, fruit growing, gardening and the nursery business in Jefferson County, Ky. He then came to Hickman County, where he has since been engaged in farming near Columbus. He was married September 3, 1851, to Miss Frances J. Smith, a native of Jefferson County, Ky. Nine children blessed their union, five of whom—two sons and three daughters—are yet living. Mrs. Frances J. Woodrow departed this life February 24, 1875, a devoted and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics Mr. Woodrow is a Democrat.

J. E. MYATT of the firm of Porter, Myatt & Co., was born September 15, 1860, in Humphreys County, Tenn. He is a son of K. M. and E. J. (Slayden) Myatt, who were both born in Tennessee. In 1868 the family came to Hickman County, and are now living on their farm two and one-half miles northeast of Clinton. Our subject was reared on his father's farm and attended the schools of the neighborhood; at the age of eighteen he engaged in school teaching, and this he continued five years. March, 1884, he engaged in merchandising, handling groceries, provisions and general produce.

DOUGLAS ZIMMERMAN was born in Anderson County, Ky., January 22, 1821, and is the third in a family of four children born to William and Fannie (Hawkins) Zimmerman, both natives of Culpeper County, Va., and of German and English descent respectively. William Zimmerman, when a young man removed to Jessamine County, Ky., where he was afterward married and where he was extensively engaged in farming and stock-raising. Later he removed to Anderson County, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in 1865, in his seventy-seventh year. He was a veteran of the war of 1812. Douglas Zimmerman was employed on his father's farm until he attained his majority, after which he was employed at teaching school and selling and teaching music for some three or four years. He has more than ordinary talent for music, at which he excelled in early life. He was also and is still recognized as one of the best and most natural mathematicians in this part of the country. In 1849 he moved to Paducah, and the following year came to Hickman County, Ky., where he was engaged in the music business. During the winter of 1850 and 1851 he taught music at New Orleans. In 1852 he returned to Anderson County, Ky., where he was united in marriage to Miss Adaline Cornell. a native of Anderson County, and a relative of Gov. Cornell of New York. Eight children blessed their union, five of whom—three sons and two daughters—are yet living. In 1853, Mr. Zimmerman came back to Hickman County, Ky., where he was soon afterward elected school commissioner of the county, which office he held for some fifteen years. During these years he was also engaged in agricultural pursuits and in the cotton trade, owning and running a large cotton gin, and in merchandising at Clinton and Columbia, continuing the latter for several years after the late civil war. Mr. Zimmerman now resides on his farm two and one-half miles east of Columbus on the Clinton Road, where he has been extensively engaged in farming and stock-raising for several years. He owns well improved farms in Hickman County, amounting to some 500 acres; he also owns lands in Florida. Mr. Zimmerman was a soldier in the Second Kentucky Regiment of Volunteers, known as the Salt River Tigers, during the war with Mexico, and served under Gen. Taylor at the battle of Buena Vista. Both Mr. Zimmerman and wife are members of the Christian Church. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, and of the I. O. O. F. In politics he is a Democrat.

PADUCAH AND McCRACKEN COUNTY.

HENRY M. ADCOCK, McCracken County, was born in Rockingham County, N. C., September 12, 1827, and came with his parents to Montgomery County, Tenn., in 1837, and is the eldest son of Absalom Adcock, of Virginia. His father was a farmer; his mother was Miss M. E. Morton, a native of Virginia, and is still living. She was the mother of a large family of children, of whom eight are now living, viz.: H. M., J. W., J. B., M. W., L. V., Cordelia L., Zorada G., and William B. Henry M. Adcock (our subject) resided near Clarksville, Tenn., until upward of twenty years of age, and was then married to Miss Mildred W., eldest daughter of John B. Williams, then a resident of that county, but since of Todd County, Ky., this union was blessed with the following children: H. May, Eugenie A., Morton W., Fannie B., John A. and Susie F. Mr. Adcock removed to Missouri from Todd County, Ky., where he engaged in farming, and served as deputy sheriff of Barry County until the beginning of the late war. He then returned to Kentucky and located in McCracken County, where he has since resided, devoting his time principally to farming, and to various agencies. His farm, about five miles from Paducah, comprises 121 acres. Mr. Adcock is a member of the Missionary Baptist Chuch, of the Masonic order, and is a zealous supporter of the temperance movement.

W. P. ALLEN, in 1833, came from near Petersburg, Va., to Kentucky, settling in McCracken County. Soon after removing to that county, he married Miss Lucinda Stanley, and they are still among the honored citizens of McCracken County, living in their old homestead, where they have passed a full half-century, the old gentleman still retaining much of his youthful vitality and actively superintending his farm. They have four living children, who are residents of their native county.

William E. Allen was born April 25, 1837, and was reared to manhood in McCracken County, where he has most of his time engaged in the pursuits of the farm. In 1872, however, he abandoned the farm, removed to Paducah and embarked in the manufacture of brick, which pursuit still occupies his entire attention, and in which he employs a large number of laborers. In 1876, in McCracken County, he married Mollie Lang, a daughter of William C. Lang, of that county. Their union has resulted in the birth of three children, viz.: Richard Maynard, Nellie L. and Irene Allen. In 1862, Mr. Allen espoused the cause of the Confederate Army, and served until disabled in 1863. He is a member of the Masonic order and K. of H.

MAJ. JAMES H. ASHCRAFT was born on May 4, 1840, in Brandenburg, Meade Co., Ky. His father, Absalom Ashcraft, died when James H. was an infant, he being the youngest of a family of eleven children. His mother, whose maiden name was Delilah A. Allen, is still living and resides with her son James H. in Paducah. In consequence of her widowhood, with a large family she was unable to do more than to instill habits of honor and industry into her children. James had the privileges of the common schools, and in early life engaged in the wharf-boat business in his native county, until the breaking out of the war, when he responded to the first call of the President for troops, and became a member of Company G, Twenty-sixth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and in the organization was elected first lieutenant of that company. He took the field in the fall of 1861, serving until the close of the war. In May, 1862, he was promoted to captain, and in April, 1865. was promoted to major of the regiment, with which commission he was mustered out at the close of the war. He shared the vicissitudes and fortunes of his command through all their varied experience, including the battles of Shiloh, siege of Corinth, battle of Nashville, Saltville, raid of West Virginia, and the campaign to the Atlantic Coast. While on detached duty in Kentucky, he was ambushed and wounded in Meade County, near his old home and birthplace. At the close of the war, he returned to Brandenburg and for two years was engaged in mercantile pursuits; thence went to Louisville, Ky., and for a short time engaged in the grocery business, but in 1869 was appointed United States Revenue Storekeeper, which he filled one year; was then made deputy United States Marshal, under Gen. Murray, serving six years, of which time he was also deputy revenue collector for the First Kentucky District. In February, 1876, he was appointed by President Grant to the official honors of postmaster at Paducah; reappointed by President Hayes in 1880, and again by President Arthur, in 1884. Maj. Ashcraft is a man of fine personal appearance, of a military bearing and a true gentleman; to all polite and kind. He is a member of the Plainfield Lodge, No. 449, A. F. & A. M.; Paducah Chapter, No. 30, R. A. M.; Paducah Commandery, No. 11, K. T.; Friendship Lodge, No. 61, A. O. U. W.; Rapidan Lodge, No. 341, K. of H. In December 1865, in Louisville, Ky., he was married to Miss Mary E. Brown, daughter of Dr. E. O. Brown of that city. They have three children: Erasmus B., James H., and Allen M. Ashcraft.

EMMET W. BAGBY, lawyer, was born on June 7, 1845, in Glasgow, Ky. His father, Albert K. Bagby, was a native of Kentucky, of Scotch and Irish descent, and a mechanic by occupation. His mother, Martha A. Wooten, was a native of Barren County, Ky., of Virginia parentage. E. W. Bagby received a good English and classical education, which he completed in Urania College, of his native town. He studied law with his uncle, Hon. John C. Bagby, of Rushville, Ill., an ex-congressman from the Tenth District of that State. In 1866 he was chosen principal of the second ward public schools of Paducah. After occupying that position for two sessions, in connection with John W. M'Gee, was placed in charge of the Paducah Male University, and in the meantime engaged in the study of law under Hon. J. Q. A. King. He was admitted to practice July 7, 1868, at the bar of Paducah, but did not enter regularly into the practice of his profession until 1869. In 1868 he began his political career, espousing the cause of Seymour and Blair. In 1870 he entered the ranks of the Republican party, believing the principles, on which the organization is based, to be conducive to the greatest good in his section and to the country at large. In 1872 he made the race for city attorney, of Paducah, and was defeated by seventy votes. In 1874 he was elected to that office by a majority of ninety votes. In 1872 he was Republican presidential county elector; and in 1876 was district elector on the Republican ticket, exerting his influence in favor of Hayes and Wheeler, and engaging in a joint discussion with the Democratic elector throughout his congressional district. In 1878 he made his third race for city attorney of Paducah, and was defeated by eight votes. He made the fourth race for city attorney in 1882 independently, and was elected by a majority vote of 500. He was the Republican candidate for congress in the First Congressional District of Kentucky in 1878, and in 1883, without his solicitation, was placed before the Republican State Convention in Kentucky for nomination for governor. Mr. Bagby is a man of decidedly advanced views. In 1880, in Princeton, Ky., he made a speech against the then existing capitation tax law, relating to the State fund for colored schools, collected of colored persons, and advocated the creation of a general State school fund by taxation, and its pro rata distribution among all the pupil children of the commonwealth, irrespective of their race or color. Soon after this speech he had occasion to defend a suit against a colored man for the collection of his capitation school tax; of this suit he made a test case, carried it to the United States Circuit Court, where Justice Baxter decided the capitation tax law unconstitutional. This decision was the cause of awakening the Kentucky legislature, then in session, to the necessity of a more efficient law, and that body immediately passed the law now in force, which was first voiced by Mr. Bagby in his Princeton speech. He is an able and elegant public speaker, possesses many excellent qualities of mind, is controlled by manly and upright principles, prepossessing in person and manners, and has the necessary traits of character which insure his success and popularity. He was married, in 1873, to Miss Ellen D. Saunders, daughter of Dr. Reuben Saunders, one of the most worthy physicians in Paducah.

RICHARD J. BARBER was born in Halifax County, Va., in December, 1839. In 1845 his parents, Dr. Thomas Barber and Harriet (Maynard) Barber, removed with their family to west Tennessee, where R. J. was reared, and where he received an ordinary English education. In 1861 he espoused the cause of the Confederacy, and enlisted in the Twenty-seventh Tennessee Regiment, Company F, and in the organization of his company was made first lieutenant. He was promoted, in 1862, to the office of captain, and for three years shared all the experiences of his regiment, one of the most active in the Southern ranks. He was severely wounded at the battle of Shiloh, and two days after reported for duty, was again wounded, this time at Farmington, near Corinth, during the siege of that place. In 1864, in west Tennessee, he was made a prisoner, was paroled, and then became a resident of Paducah for the first time. He soon after engaged in mercantile business, and was a member of the firm of J. M. White & Co., but soon severed his connection with it to engage in the wholesale grocery trade, which he conducted about five years. He then operated on the tobacco market, part of his time as inspector, until January, 1883, when he opened his present business. He is located on the corner of Market Street and Broadway, and is certainly an honor to the business circle of Paducah. Mr. Barber is an accepted member of the Presbyterian Church, Masonic order and K. of H. He was married in Paducah, 1865, to Miss Mamie Anderson, daughter of S. Q. Anderson. Their two children are Samuel and Lucy Barber.

MAJ. GEORGE F. BARNES was born October 14, 1836, in Davidson County, Tenn., to Andrew J. Barnes and Martha A. Barnes (nee Foster). These parents, both of whom were Virginians, settled in Davidson County in 1826, and there lived many years, removing thence to Kentucky in 1854, settling near Benton, Marshall County, where the mother died in 1868, the father living until 1883, when he died in Benton at the age of seventy-eight years. George F. is the fourth of a family born to them, of whom five are now living, and are residents of the Purchase. Maj. Barnes attended the common schools of Davidson County, Tenn., during his boyhood, and in early life began the mercantile business in his native county, which he continued until 1860. In 1862 he recruited a company of volunteers for the Federal service, was chosen its second lieutenant, and it became Company A of the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry. After serving in this capacity one year, he was authorized to recruit a regiment to be known as the Sixteenth Kentucky. He succeeded in procuring but five companies, four of which were made Third Battalion, and consolidated with the Twelfth Regiment, acting independently, however, until December, 1864; subject was placed in command of the battalion, with the commission of major, in the fortunes of which he shared until mustered out at the close of the war. He then went to Paducah, and for three years was engaged in merchandising, and in 1870 was made assistant assessor of internal revenue for the First District of Kentucky, serving as such for about four years, from which time, to 1880, he was in Paducah, and served three years on the police force of that city. In 1880 and 1881 he was employed as postal clerk on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad, after which he was appointed to the office of deputy collector of internal revenue for the Second District of Kentucky. Maj. Barnes is a cultured gentleman, a man of administrative ability, and a faithful, efficient officer. He is a Republican in politics, and chairman of his party organization in the county, and a member of the K. of H. He was married in Paducah, December 31, 1865, to Miss Annie M., daughter of F. S. Robinson. They have three children: Ella F., Annie May and Della J. Barnes.

DR. JOSEPH W. BECKER is among the oldest medical practitioners in the city of Paducah, Ky., is the gentleman whose name heads this sketch and whose portrait is found elsewhere in this work. Dr. Becker was born in Smithland, Ky., in 1826, and is of German and French ancestry. His father, Joseph Becker, was a native of Quebec, Canada, removed to Kentucky in his early life, and was an early merchant in Paducah, in which city he died in June, 1857. Dr. Becker's mother, Catherine Becker, was born in Knoxville, Tenn., and is a daughter of John Hagey, who fought in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Becker is now a resident of Paducah and a worthy member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The subject of this sketch received his preparatory education in the schools of Paducah, attending later the St. Joseph's College at Bardstown, Ky. He then decided to adopt the medical profession, and prosecuted the studies of the same under Drs. Phillips & Jones. In the fall of 1847, he entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, graduating in February, 1849. After several years' practice in Metropolis, Ill., he located in Paducah, Ky., where he has practiced ever since. It is but just to accord to Dr. Becker the prestige of being not only a successful physician, but also one of the most highly respected citizens of Paducah, being especially interested in efforts to promote the cause of education, as well as all enterprises tending to the best interests of the people. He is a member of the Kentucky Medical Society; Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association; Paducah Medical Club; Masonic order, and of the Episcopal Church. In 1852 he married Miss Katie Baker, daughter of John D. Baker of Louisville, Ky. She died in September, 1853.

ELIJAH W. BENSON, McCracken County (deceased), was well known in McCracken County as a Baptist minister of great zeal and piety. He was born in Robertson County, Tenn., October 17, 1823, and received his early education at Lebanon and Murfreesboro. He taught school for a while, but soon gave his attention to religious subjects, and during the balance of his life, had pastoral charge of various churches in several States. He came to McCracken County in 1860, and thereafter devoted his time to the labors of the ministry and also to farming. He had been in feeble health for some years, yet his great energy continued undiminished, and gave success to his every effort. He was firm in his beliefs, yet of a very winning disposition, and his death was a severe loss to the community, in which he had faithfully labored for many years. He filled the moderator's chair and for many years was clerk of the West Union Association. The parents of Mr. Benson were John and Jane (Sayle) Benson. The father was a mechanic and farmer and served in the war of 1812. To the parents were born thirteen children, three of whom are now living: Agnes, E. H. and Gaylon. Our subject married Miss Gillie S. A. Boldry, who now survives him. She is a daughter of W. S. and Jane (Hampton) Boldry, natives respectively of Kentucky and Tennessee. The union has been blessed with seven children, of whom five are living: Mrs. M. E. Hart, Sudora M., Eddie W., Algernon S. and Lelia I.

JUDGE JAMES L. BETHSHARES, a native of Rutherford County, Tenn., was born in October, 1832, and is a son of William S. Bethshares and Martha L. Bethshares, nee Johnston, both parents being Virginians by birth, the mother still living and a resident of Paducah. The father died in Rutherford County, Tenn., in 1848, and a few years later the family removed to west Tennessee, where in the Cageville Academy, James L. was chiefly educated, and was admitted to the bar in 1875. Since his admission to the bar, Judge Bethshares has devoted himself exclusively to his profession, for which he possesses a natural fitness. In 1882, he was the choice of the people of McCracken County for judge of the county courts, and is now occupying that office with credit to himself and acceptance to the people. He is an honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He was married in February, 1870, to Miss Felicia A. Hand, daughter of Henry Hand, of Paducah, Ky. It is but justice to Judge Bethshares to say that he has risen to the position of professional honor as the result of his own native energy and perseverance. His gentlemanly and courteous treatment to all has surrounded him with a large circle of admiring friends.

HON. JOSEPH M. BIGGER, lawyer, and one of the ablest jurists of the State of Kentucky, was born in Simpson County, Ky., on the 22d day of September, 1824. He received the rudimentary education in the common schools of Barren and Warren Counties, Ky., and in early life conceived a taste for the profession of the law. In order to gratify this inclination, he, in 1846, entered the office of Judge E. I. Bullock, of Hickman, Ky. Under the instruction of this able preceptor, he pursued his legal studies until his admission to the bar, which was granted in 1847. He at once commenced practice in Ballard County, where he remained until 1853, and from whence he came to Paducah, his present home. The legal record of Judge Bigger presents a series of continued successes, until he has attained to the proud distinction of one of the foremost men of Kentucky, a State already famous for able men. In 1858, he was elected to the position of judge of the equity and criminal court, for the First Judicial District of Kentucky, then comprising the area of fifteen counties. In this responsible office he served with acceptance for three years and until the court was abolished as a result of the civil war. In 1866, he was elected to the Kentucky State Senate, to fill an unexpired term, after which he declined a re-election. In 1877, his ability was again recognized by his election to a seat in the lower house of the state legislature, to which he was re-elected in 1879, and in the organization of that body was made Speaker of the House, which position he filled with marked ability. Judge Bigger is of commanding appearance, a man of true culture, and a highly moral and social character. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., having served as Deputy Grand Master and is now Grand Master of that fraternity for the State of Kentucky. He is also a member of high standing in the Masonic fraternity and an official member of the Christian Church. In politics Judge Bigger was an ardent and warm supporter of the Whig party, and so continued until the banner of that noble party was furled and laid at rest. He then joined the Democratic party and has steadfastly supported the candidates and principles of that party ever since. When the Democratic party divided, in that ever memorable contest of 1860, and one wing nominated John C. Breckinridge, and the other Stephen A. Douglas for president, against the much lamented Abraham Lincoln, the nominee of the Republican party, Judge Bigger, although a Kentuckian "to the manner born," carried out his convictions of what he believed to be right, and gave his earnest support to that great statesman, Stephen A. Douglas, in opposition to that gifted and idolized Kentuckian, John C. Breckinridge. In 1846, in Fulton County, Ky., Judge Bigger was married to Miss Fannie, daughter of Richard Stephens of Fulton County.

JOHN W. BLOOMFIELD, lawyer and member of the Paducah bar, was born near Eaton, Preble Co., Ohio, November 16, 1836. His parents, Reuben Bloomfield, and Ann (Hopkins) Bloomfield, were natives of the State of Kentucky, the former a descendant of an English family, who immigrated to Rowan County, N. C., in the colonial period; another branch of the family remained in New Jersey. John W. received the elements of an English education in the common schools of his native county, and when sixteen years old became a student in Miami University. After leaving this institution, he engaged in teaching, occupying his leisure time in reading law. At the commencement of the late war he enlisted in the Federal Army as a private in the Eleventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, with which he remained some two years, after which he was connected with the quartermaster's department and located in Paducah. Like all true soldiers of the war, whether wearing the blue or the gray, recognizing the honest convictions of both, he enjoys the respect of each, and extends that respect to each as freely. At the close of the war he completed his legal studies, and was regularly admitted to practice in 1865, since which time he has been an important factor in the Paducah bar, standing deservedly high in his profession, and having a leading practice. Mr. Bloomfield is a Democrat, and has been all his life, but is not a politician in the sense of seeking office, confining himself closely to his profession, his only public office being the judgeship of the city courts, which he occupied from 1874 to 1878. He is none the less prominent as a lawyer, and withal a kind and courteous gentleman, having the confidence and respect of the community around him. He was married in Chicago, Ill., in 1865, to Miss Linnie Unruh, daughter of Joseph Unruh, who died some years since in Texas. They are blessed with three children: Lloyd, Miss Joseph, and John W. Bloomfield, Jr. Mr. Bloomfield is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and a Past Master of the Paducah Lodge, and is, and for many years has been, the attorney of the First National Bank of Paducah, and one of its directors.

JAMES K. BONDURANT, son of Joseph and Sarah Bondurant, was born in Marshall County, Ky., in 1839. His parents, both of whom were native Virginians, came to Marshall County from middle Tennessee about 1835, where the mother is now living at an advanced age, and where the father died in 1851. James K. is the fourth child of a family of eight born to these parents, of whom but three are now living. He was reared in his native county to manhood, attended school there, and in Murray, Calloway County, and in early life began mercantile labor, first as a clerk in his father's store. In 1861 he espoused the cause of the Union, and enlisted in the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry. He was captured in 1862 at the battle of Spring Creek, taken to Belle Isle and there held as a prisoner of war for several months, after which he was exchanged, when by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment, he returned home. In 1864 he engaged in mercantile trade in Paducah, and until 1870 was employed in merchandising and in farming. At the latter date he engaged in the wholesale grocery trade, associated with J. R. Smith, under the firm name of Smith & Bondurant, which partnership continued successfully for nine years, when Mr. Bondurant became the sole proprietor. He is now located at No 113 Broadway. Mr. Bondurant is a member of the Masonic order, K. of H., A. O. U. W., and in politics is a Republican. He was married in Marshall County, Ky., in 1861, to Miss Mary J. Brewer, which union is blessed with two living children, Joseph S. and Ida May Bondurant.

THOMAS E. BOSWELL was born in Lexington, Ky., July 19, 1853, and is the youngest child of Thomas E. and Harriett (Campfield) Boswell, natives respectively of Virginia and New Jersey. The father was engaged in the manufacture of hemp and bagging, etc., and dealt largely in real estate in Lexington. He served as a lieutenant-colonel in the war of 1812. Five of the eight children born to the parents are now living: Harriett E., Anna, Lloyd H., George and Thomas E. The last came to this county with his parents when young, and has since resided here. He has a farm of 400 acres devoted to farming in its various branches. The family are all members of the Episcopal Church.

RHEY BOYD, a lawyer of Paducah, is a son of Hon. Linn Boyd, well known in Kentucky politics, and was born in the city of Paducah, April 14, 1853. His father, Linn Boyd, was a native of Nashville, Tenn., born in 1800; moved to Kentucky in early manhood, and in 1827 was elected to the legislature from Calloway, Graves, Hickman and McCracken Counties; in 1828 and 1829, from Calloway; in 1831, from Trigg County; from 1835 to 1837, served in Congress from the First District; re-elected in 1839, and continued to serve by re-election until 1855, the last four years of which time he was speaker of the House of Representatives. In 1859, he was elected lieutenant-governor of Kentucky on the Democratic ticket, but died before entering the office, at Paducah, December 17, 1859. Rhey Boyd was educated in the schools of Paducah until he was fifteen years of age, when he entered the university of Notre Dame, at South Bend, Ind., where he graduated in the classical course in 1871. He then entered the law office of Judge L. D. Husbands, as a student, and the following year was admitted to the bar. Mr. Boyd is a man of whom the Paducah bar feel justly proud, being regarded by his legal brethren as possessed of more than ordinary ability, and in consequence of his determination to adhere to his profession gives promise of a brilliant record. He wields a political influence which is enjoyed by the Democratic party. He was assistant district elector of his district in the convention of 1876, a member of the Democratic Electoral College of 1884. His mother, who is now a resident of Paducah, is a daughter of James Rhey, of Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM H. BRADLEY, traveling salesman for the firm of Thompson, Wilson & Co,, of Paducah, is a native of Georgia, and was born in 1836. His father, Willard Bradley, was a native of Connecticut. His mother, Eliza A. (Rhea) Bradley, was born in Virginia, but reared in Chapel Hill, N. C. These parents moved from Georgia, in 1837, and settled in west Tennessee, where William H. spent his boyhood. When fourteen years old, he became employed as salesman in the dry goods house of William H. Thompson, in Paris, Tenn., and remained with him for eight years. He then went to Paducah and for a time served the wholesale grocery firm of J. W. Sheerer & Co. as book-keeper, but remained only a brief period, when he returned to Paris, where he effected a partnership with his former employer, W. H. Thompson. In 1858, he again went to Paducah, this time as traveling salesman for the house of J. W. Sheerer & Co. They were favored with his services until the fall of 1861, when the results of the war placed an embargo on all business enterprise and Mr. Bradley espoused the cause of the South and entered the Confederate Army, under Gen. Breckinridge, with the commission of captain. Soon after the battle of Shiloh, in which he participated, he was transferred to Forrest's command and shared in the victories and defeats of that daring leader. In 1866, Mr. Bradley married Miss Lucy C. West, of Paducah. Their children, four in number, are Geven W., Lizzie Y., William C. and Henry L. Bradley. As a business man, Mr. Bradley has rare qualifications, social qualities of a high order and enjoys unlimited confidence. He has traveled for the firm of Thompson, Wilson & Co., since the organization of that house.

ALBERT BRADSHAW was born in Christian County, Ky., March 1, 1809. His father, Edward Bradshaw, came from Henrico County, Va., when quite a young man, and was one of the early settlers and surveyors of Christian County. On May 30, 1832, Albert Bradshaw married Mariamne Rumsey, the youngest daughter of Dr. Edward Rumsey, who was one of the earliest physicians of that county. After his marriage he resided on his farm, about ten miles south of Hopkinsville; he was quite an energetic and pushing farmer, and was very successful in that calling. Together with his brothers and sisters he had inherited from his father a large body of the fertile land, for which that portion of Christian County is famous. During the year 1848, one of the numerous land-sharks and professional litigants of that day, and backed by one of the shrewdest land lawyers of the State, set up an adverse claim to a greater part of this land; it proved to be one of the most hotly contested cases ever known in Kentucky, though such land suits there were of frequent occurrence in the early settlement of the State, growing out of the many different modes of acquiring title and the conflicting and overlapping surveys, that part of the State east of the Tennessee River never having been sectionized. Mr. Bradshaw's case was named in the docket from 1848 to 1861; it passed through numerous trials and retrials; verdicts were set aside, and it went to the court of appeals six times. Mr. Bradshaw became so much enlisted in the defense of what he considered to be his rightful inheritance, that he became quite proficient in the complex land laws of Kentucky; a great portion of the time he managed the case alone and drew up a brief for the court of appeals, on the last appearance of the case in that court, that was considered a very able document, and had much to do with his gaining the case, just as the clouds of civil war were gathering over the country in 1861. In the meantime, in 1856, Mr. Bradshaw had moved to McCracken County, where he and his wife now reside, on his farm near the city of Paducah, both having attained a good old age. He had been all his life a decided Whig, and as much devoted to Henry Clay as were the soldiers of Napoleon to the Little Corporal, so that at the present day, he finds it a little difficult to locate himself in politics; since the demise of the old Whig party, he sometimes votes the Republican and sometimes the Democratic ticket for president. At the breaking out of the war, he favored the preservation of the Union. This aged couple have only reared two children to maturity: E. R. Bradshaw, the elder, and W. F. Bradshaw; they lost several children in infancy. P. S.–Since the preparation of the above sketch, and on March 30, 1885, Mr. Bradshaw was drowned by accidentally falling into a well.

WILLIAM F. BRADSHAW was born in Christian County, Ky., in 1849. He is a son of Albert Bradshaw and Marianne Bradshaw, nee Rumsey, who removed, in 1856, to McCracken County, settling near the city of Paducah, where William F. was reared and where he received the elements of an English education. In 1868, he became a student in the University of Mississippi, where he remained, with the exception of one year, until 1872, when he graduated with the degree of B. S. He then decided upon the profession of law, doing his preparatory reading under Judge Q. Q. Quigley of Paducah, with which he combined teaching, and in 1873, he was principal of the Third District School of the city of Paducah. In 1874, he passed the required examination and was admitted to practice, and has since devoted his attention to the profession. In 1878, he was elected to the office of county attorney for McCracken County, serving four years. In February 1885, he was elected to the responsible position of county treasurer for McCracken County, to succeed Dr. A. B. Kinkead, first and only treasurer since 1871 up to his (subject's) election. The vacancy was caused by death of Mr. Kinkead; the office was created in 1871. Mr. Bradshaw was married to Miss Virginia E. Wheeler, of Christian County, Ky., in January, 1877. They have two sons: William F. and James W. Bradshaw.

WEST H. BRIAN, member of the mercantile firm of Hecht, Ezell & Brian, Paducah, Ky., is a son of Dr. James H., and Caroline (Prewitt) Brian, and was born in 1842, in Monroe County, Ky. In 1843 his father moved to Marshall County, Ky.; there he devoted himself to the practice of medicine, with which he combined farming. He died in January, 1863; his widow still survives him and is a resident of Paducah, making her home with subject, she was born in Monroe County, Ky. In 1861, West H. Brian entered the Confederate Army as a member of Company A (Capt. Alfred Johnston), Third Kentucky Regiment. He participated in several hard fought battles, including Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg, etc.; was made a prisoner in west Tennessee, and retained under parole, until the close of the war. In 1866, he located in Paducah, where, until 1874, he was employed as a salesman. In the year just named, he became a member of the firm indicated above, which is now one of the most prosperous firms in Paducah. They are located at No. 106 Broadway, and keep a stock of a general character. Mr. Brian is a member of the Christian Church, I. O. O. F., encampment, K. of H., and for eight years a member of the board of trustees of the city schools, and secretary of the board for the past five years. He was married in Marshall County, Ky., in 1869, to Miss Mary Locker, daughter of John P. Locker. Bertie Brian is their only child.

ROBERT BROADFOOT, a deceased pioneer of Paducah, Ky., and father of Broadfoot brothers, of that place, was born in 1810, in Winchelsea, England. He came to the United States in 1826, making his first permanent settlement in New York City; thence to Jersey City, N. J., where he remained until 1838, when he removed to Charleston, S. C. In 1832, in Trenton, N. J., he was married to Miss Eunice Nutt. In the year 1847, they emigrated to Kentucky, locating in Paducah, where Robert worked at the millwright trade, a pursuit to which he devoted his entire life, which terminated in September, 1856. His widow, who was born in 1814, is still a resident of Paducah, where she is surrounded by her appreciative and enterprising children. They reared a large family, of which six are now living, viz.: Sarah, Robert, William S., Geneva, George and N. Thomas Broadfoot. The above named sons are engaged in general mercantile business and also in the steamboat traffic; they own the tug, "John Orm," and have another in course of construction.

CAPT. STANLEY BROWNE, McCracken County, was born in Breckinridge County, this State, February 10, 1820, and is a son of Dr. G. R. A. and Caroline E. (Esmenard) Browne, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Baltimore, Md. The father was a physician; he moved from Virginia to Breckinridge County in an early day, and was there engaged in the practice of his profession until his death, which occurred in 1834. He was a great lover of the racehorse, and found a passionate delight in the old-time barbecues, where horse-racing was an important feature of the programme. He was a son of Alexander Browne. The subject of these lines and G. R. A. Browne are the only children living, of the six who grew to maturity, of the children of Dr. Browne. Capt. Stanley received his early schooling in his native county, and after attending college a few months he moved to Paducah, at seventeen years of age, and has since made his residence in McCracken and the adjoining county of Livingston. He first clerked in a dry goods store and was afterward connected with a flouring and saw-mill, but the best part of his life has been spent in steamboating on the principal western rivers. For twenty years he captained and owned many of the best boats that plied these waters; among them, the "Dover," "Federal Arch," "Emma Watts" and "Midas." During the war he purchased cotton in the South; soon afterward he gave up his river life, and, returning home, has since given his attention to farming pursuits, having a present farm of 300 acres. He married Miss Susan M. Calhoun, a daughter of Patrick Calhoun. Of this union six children are now living, Frances V. (married to Mr. F. W. Thomas, and mother of three children, Marion L., Stanley and James V.), Nellie E., James C., Edmoina C., Ezekiel E. and Kate C. Previous to the late war, Capt. Browne was engaged in the grocery business in Paducah. The story of his life is a romantic one, being made up of many interesting and thrilling occurrences. As a farmer and a resident of McCracken County, he is highly respected by its citizens.

JOHN D. BRUMMAL was born August 1, 1819, in Mecklenburgh County, Va. His father, Robert Brummal, a Virginian by birth, was of Scotch descent, being a son of John, whose father's name was also John, the latter emigrating direct from Scotland, and settling on a place seven miles from Richmond, Va. The wife of Robert Brummal, Mary A. (Bennett) Brummal, was also a native of Virginia. The parents had nine children, of whom three are living. Our subject was reared to farm work, and during his early years improved all the then limited school advantages. At nineteen years of age he began farming on his own account as a hired hand, and in the fall of 1840 came to Christian County, Ky., where he was employed as overseer, and given the management of various farms for thirteen years. Then, after farming one year in Christian County for himself, he moved to Ballard County, this State, and rented land until 1863, when he purchased farm property, which, three years later, he exchanged for his present place of 240 acres, on which he has since resided. He owns several other tracts of farm land, and also property in the town of Woodville, all of which is the result of his own personal industry and frugal management. Mr. Brummal is a member of the Lovelaceville Lodge, No. 157 A. F. & A. M., of which he is the present treasurer. He was initiated into the Masonic fraternity in 1847, at Hopkinsville, and has since risen to positions of the highest honor and distinction in that august body, having conferred upon him the rank of Royal Arch Mason, at Antioch, Ky., and that of Knight Templar at Paducah. December 31, 1850, he married Miss Catherine Cary, of Cumberland County, this State. Having no children of their own, Mr. and Mrs. Brummal have taken and reared several orphan children, three of whom are grown to age and now happily married, viz.: Sarah E. Cary, who married S. R. Culver; Elizabeth Snook, wife of Alonzo Miller; and Alice Uncil, now Mrs. Milton Edwards.

J. R. BUCHANAN was born in 1837 in Halifax County, Va., to John and Elizabeth (Rawlett) Buchanan. In 1857 the family, except the mother, who died in Virginia, moved to Kentucky, and settled in Trigg County, where, in 1861, J. R. Buchanan married Miss Elizabeth Jones, and where his father died in 1860. Mr. Buchanan had been engaged in the pursuits of the farm until 1881. In 1865 he purchased a farm in Graves County, on which he resided until recent years. In connection with his farming interests, he has, for several years, been engaged in the tobacco trade, and in 1881 removed to Paducah, where he is devoting his entire attention to this business. He is a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic fraternity, K. of H. and A. O. U. W. He has a family of five children: Ada M., wife of N. B. Stubblefield; Stannie C., Joseph Milton, John H. and Sarah F. Buchanan. The family residence is on Oak Street, between Adams and Clarke Streets.

JAMES M. BUCKNER was born in Davidson County, Tenn., August 20, 1840. His father, James Buckner, was a Virginian by birth, and his mother, Minerva Cook, was a native of Tennessee and a sister of Judge William Cook, of the supreme bench of Tennessee. James M. Buckner was the youngest of five children born to them, and was born after the death of his father, which occured in January, 1840, in Mississippi. James M. attended school at the Mount Juliet Academy in Tennessee, and when sixteen years old went to Cadiz, Trigg Co., Ky., and became a salesman in a dry goods house, where he remained until 1864, when he went to New York City and engaged in the tobacco business. He soon after became a partner in the wholesale dry goods house of Miller, Gardner & Co., at Evansville, Ind., from whence he came to Paducah in 1867. Since the latter date he has been constantly in the tobacco trade, in which he is a pronounced leader, having handled in a single year tobacco to the value of $2,167,000. He has been associated with various other dealers in Paducah, and the style of the firm is now James M. Buckner & Co., of which he has the entire management. Mr. Buckner was first married to Miss Bettie Torian, of Christian County, Ky., who died in 1862, leaving one daughter, Julia, wife of Jacob Spears, now of Florida. His present wife, to whom he was married in 1872, Miss Bettie Murrell, a daughter of S. F. Murrell, of Paducah. This union has been blessed with the following children: Pearl, Murrell, James, Mary and Blanche Buckner. Mr. Buckner is a member of the Masonic fraternity, K. of H., and of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM G. BULLITT, lawyer, Paducah, is a son of Cuthbert Bullitt and grandson of Hon. Alexander Scott Bullitt, who emigrated from Virginia in 1784, first settling in Shelby County, but afterward making a permanent settlement in Jefferson County. He was born in Virginia in 1761, and died on his farm in Jefferson County in 1816. He was elected in 1792 to represent his county in the convention, which framed the first constitution of Kentucky, and, after the admission of the State, was elected to the State senate, presiding over that body until 1799, when he was again chosen as a delegate to the second constitutional convention, of which he was president. In 1800 he was elected lieutenant-governor of the State, serving four years, after which he served in the State legislature until 1808, when he retired to private life and to his farm. He was married to a daughter of Col. W. Christian. Thus it is seen that the subject of this sketch is well descended. His father was a lawyer in early life, and represented Shelby County in the legislature. He married a Miss Harriett Willett, daughter of Dr. John F. Willett, by whom he had nine children, including five sons, all of whom became professional men. Cuthbert Bullitt died about 1854 in Louisville, Ky. William G. is the youngest of his sons, was educated in Shelby College and the South-Hanover College of Indiana; studied law with his brother Willett Bullitt, of New Albany, Ind., and was admitted to practice in 1854. He began the practice of his profession in Calhoun, McLean Co., Ky., coming thence to Paducah in 1858, since which time he has been connected with the bar of the city. In 1861 he became a member of the Third Kentucky Regiment of Confederate troops. Before taking the field, however, he was made lieutenant-colonel of the First Kentucky Cavalry, serving with that command until the organization of the Sixth Kentucky Cavalry, when he became major of that regiment, and followed the fortunes of the same until his surrender in Ohio in 1863. For the nineteen months following he was held a prisoner of war, and retained variously in the Ohio State prisons, Johnson's Island and Fort Delaware, from which he was released at the close of the war. Immediately after the close of the war he resumed the practice of law in Paducah, where he is still engaged, having served as judge of the city courts, and as judge of the First Judicial District.

GEORGE W. BUMPOUS, McCracken County, was born in Robertson County, Tenn., January 8, 1834, and is a son of William Bumpous, who came from North Carolina and settled in Tennessee at an early day. He located in Montgomery County, Tenn., where he was engaged in farming and blacksmithing up to 1882, when he came to Kentucky to reside with his son at Massack, McCracken County. His wife, formerly Nancy Allen, was a native of Tennessee; she died in January, 1834, our subject being the only child. The father has been married four times and survives all of his wives. Our subject learned his father's trade in early life, and at sixteen years of age began working for himself as a journeyman. After his marriage, which occurred January 12, 1854, he worked for his father a short time until becoming of age, when he removed to McCracken County, and, after farming two years, took up his trade, at which he has since been engaged. He also carries on a store at Massack, and has a farm adjoining the town. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a thorough business man and highly esteemed citizen. His wife was formerly Miss Mary A. E. Price, of Tennessee. This union has been blessed with ten children, of whom six are now living: Martha A. (wife of Thomas Felts), Mary J. (now Mrs. W. S. Hines), Luella J. (now Mrs. J. W. Thompson), Sarah F., Lettie B., George W.

HENRY BURNETT, lawyer, at Paducah, and the son of the Hon. Henry C. Burnett, was born in Cadiz, Trigg Co., Ky., March 23, 1849. He there attended the public school through his boyhood days, and when fourteen years old, went South and became a student in the old Bingham School, one of the oldest and ablest institutions of learning in the South. He was a student in this school for three years and in October, 1866, entered the academic department of the University of Virginia, and continued his studies there two years. Having decided upon the study of the law, he engaged in teaching as a means of support while preparing for this profession, meantime pursuing his legal studies under Prof. James P. Holcombe, author of some standard legal works. Mr. Burnett was licensed to practice in July, 1870, and in September of that year located in Paducah, where he soon acquired a good practice. He makes no pretensions to special pleading, yet is a fine advocate, a good judge of law, of quick perception and highly professional. He is in no sense a politician, but has been a member and the chairman of some important political conventions, affiliating with the Democratic party. Mr. Burnett was married January 17, 1882, in Henderson, Ky., to Miss Susanne H. Dallam, a daughter of L. C. Dallam, president of the National Bank of that city. Their children are Elizabeth D. and Marie Burnett. He is a Mason of high order, having filled the chair of presiding officer in both the Paducah Lodge and Commandery. The family residence is on Broadway and business office on Legal Row.

JAMES M. BURNLEY, McCraken County, was born in Smith County, Tenn., March 18, 1847. His father, William Burnley, was a native of Virginia and moved to Tennessee when a young man. He was a carpenter by trade, but farmed during his later years. He came to McCracken County, in 1854, locating where our subject now lives, and died in December, 1867. His widow, formerly Dolly Bradley, is yet living at the age of seventy years. They were the parents of eleven children. At twenty-one years of age, James M. Burnley began farming for himself and was thus engaged till 1874; at that date he went into the hotel business and later into the milling business and owned and operated the Woodville Mill. He then sold out and re-engaged in farming and dealt extensively in tobacco. His present farm consists of 350 acres adjoining the town of Woodville, in which place he also owns property. He was united in marriage December 18, 1877, to Miss Mattie Suttle, of McCracken County. This union has given three children: Jack, James and Mattie.

ENOCH F. BYNG, one of the most aggressive business men of the city of Paducah, was born in Worcestershire, England, on March 14, 1839. He came to the United States, with his parents, John and Elizabeth (Bird) Byng, in 1850. His father, who is still living and an honored citizen of Paducah, has spent the major part of his life in the lumber trade. He first located in Clinton County, Iowa, where, with the lumber business, he combined farming until about 1867. Enoch F. received a practical business education, and in 1862 championed the cause of the Union, entering the Twenty-sixth, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, the fortunes of which he shared until December, 1864, when in consequence of a wound received at the battle of Atlanta, Ga., he was granted a discharge. He then returned to Clinton, Iowa, and embarked in the lumber business, which he continued until 1874, when he removed to Butler County, Mo., from whence he came to Paducah, Ky., three years later. In November, 1879, he formed a partnership with J. W. McKnight, and their business was incorporated in the name of the Paducah Lumber Company. In 1881, Mr. McKnight sold his interest in the business to John Byng, who surrendered the entire management to his son, Enoch F. In their extensive business, including their saw and planing-mills, they give employment to 100 men. Mr. Byng was married in Iowa, in 1861, to Miss Emma Walls, daughter of Joseph and Charlotte Walls, all of whom are of English birth. Their marriage is blessed with five children: Alice (wife of C. Arnout), Helen, Louisa Ann, Benney and John Byng.

JAMES C. CALHOUN, the oldest representative now living, of pioneer days in Paducah, is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He was born in Livingston County, Ky., on the 25th of July, 1811, where he was reared to early manhood, meantime receiving such advantages for education as were supplied in the pioneer schools of the country. His father died in Livingston County, and he with his widowed mother came to Paducah in 1828. James C. for a long time engaged as salesman in a mercantile house; later followed steamboating on the Ohio and Tennessee until 1836, when, having saved some money, he embarked in the dry goods trade in Paducah, but shared in the general wreck of business circles in 1837. In 1840 he was appointed to the office of sheriff of McCracken County, and served continuously for eight years. Pressed by the misfortunes growing out of the panic of 1837, he took the benefit of the bankrupt law in 1842 for about $8,000, and by the year 1847 he had paid to his creditors the entire amount on which he had bankrupted. In 1851 he was elected as the first sheriff under the new constitution, serving two years. In 1856 he moved to Paducah, McCracken County, and engaged in the tobacco trade. In 1882, McCracken County sent him to the legislature as its representative, and in the following year, he made the race for register of the land office in the State of Kentucky, and was defeated for the nomination by only nine votes. The successful candidate, J. G. Cecil, then tendered him the first position under himself, which Mr. Corbett accepted, and which position he is now most efficiently filling, with his home temporarily at the capital, though recognizing Paducah as his home.

DR. FRANK T. DAVIS was born June 26, 1856, in Livingston County, Ky. He is a son of Thomas M. Davis, a deceased merchant of Smithland, Ky. Dr. Frank T. Davis was educated in the Transylvania University of Lexington, Ky., and in the Cecilian College, at Cecilian Junction, Ky. In 1875, he began the study of medicine, under Dr. Sweeney, of Lexington, Ky., and after the usual preparatory reading, attended two courses of lectures in the medical department of the Transylvania University. In 1877, he entered the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, from which he graduated the following year. He then went to Paducah, practiced one year in connection with Dr. R. Saunders, and soon established a reputation as a skillful physician. He is a member of the Paducah Medical Association, of the Jefferson Alumni Association, and is the president of the Medical Association of southwestern Kentucky. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity and K. of H. He was married in Paducah, in 1880, to Miss Millie Fowler, daughter of Capt. J. H. Fowler, and has one child—Mattie S. Davis.

ROBERT J. DUDLEY was born in October, 1825, in Logan County, Ky. When a mere boy, he was taken by his father, Robert B. Dudley, to Montgomery County, Tenn., where the latter died. Robert J. was reared to the labor of the farm, to which he has devoted most of his life. From Montgomery County, Tenn., he removed about 1854 to Trigg County, Ky., and thence, in 1858, to Ballard County. In Ballard County, he operated his farming interest until 1875, when he removed to the city of Paducah, to engage in the handling of leaf tobacco, which he has since followed. Mr. Dudley was married in Blandville, Ky., in 1859, to Miss Mary Corbett, daughter of Jacob Corbett. She is a native of Hickman County, but of Virginia parentage. Their union has been blessed with the birth of three children: Jacob C., Fannie B. and Emily M. Dudley. Mr. Dudley is a member of the Christian Church and of the A. F. & A. M. His residence is on Chestnut Street, between Jefferson and Monroe Streets, Paducah.

JAMES W. EDEN was born in Mayfield, Graves Co., Ky., May 2, 1851. His grandfather was an officer in the British navy, settled in North Carolina, from whence he removed to Kentucky, and settled in Muhlenburg County, where he died. In his family was a son, James G. Eden, who was born in North Carolina, and who in early life settled in Graves County, Ky., where he married Miss Mary Talbert, who was a Virginian by birth, but of English ancestry. They had seven children—James W., whose name heads this sketch, being the sixth. James G. Eden was a merchant, and later a farmer, and finally located in McCracken County, on a farm long known as Eden's Hill, where in 1871, he died, and where his widow died on May 27, 1884. James W. Eden was educated chiefly in Paducah, Ky., studied law under Judge Bigger of that city, and in 1878 entered the law department of the university of Ann Arbor, Mich., where he graduated in July, 1879. He then established an office in Paducah for the practice of his profession, but soon became associated with J. W. Bloomfield, with whom he practiced two years, terminating August, 1882, at which time Mr. Eden was elected to the office of county attorney for McCracken County. From 1876 to 1878, he served the county as commissioner of schools. He is a member of the K. of H.

LORENZO W. EMERY was born in Maine, February 5, 1837. He is a son of William Emery and Sabrina Emery, nee Drew. Mr. Emery was educated in his native State, remaining till he was about grown to manhood, when he came West, after which, for several years, he was engaged in the sale of agricultural implements, first in Chicago and then in Burlington, Iowa; then in the city of St. Louis, Mo. He remained at the latter city, until the commencement of the late war, when he closed up his business and removed to Evansville, Ind. In the latter place he did an extensive insurance business, until coming to Paducah, Ky., in 1865. His first business venture in Paducah was in the marble business, which he conducted successfully until 1876, at which time he was awarded the government contract for the central monument in the National Cemetery at Mound City, Ill., for which he received the sum of $25,000. In 1876, he formed a partnership with M. K. Scott, in the wholesale hardware business, which partnership terminated in 1882, by the retirement of Mr. Emery. Since that date he has been employed in an extensive tobacco business, associated with H. H. Hobson and is now numbered among the wealthy men of Paducah. While he is strictly a business man he has nevertheless devoted some attention to enterprises of a public character, and especially deserves credit for his devotion to the public schools of the city of which he was for five years the superintendent, besides serving as a member of the board of education. He is a stockholder and director in the City National Bank. He is a member of the Masonic order, K. of H. and of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Emery was married in Albion, Ill., to Miss Margaret Ferryman, and has a family of three children: Charles, George and Lorenzo Melvin Emery.

JOHN. C. FARLEY, of Irish ancestry, was born in 1841, in Walworth County, Wis., and is a son of Michael Farley and Mary (Dolen) Farley, both of whom were born in Ireland. Mr. John C. Farley was reared on a farm in Wisconsin, to the age of nineteen, from which time until 1866, he was engaged as a sailor on the great lakes and in traveling. In 1866 he came to Kentucky, and in 1867 to the city of Paducah. In 1868 he opened a mercantile business, associated with his brother Edwin Farley, who is now, and has been for several years past, the revenue collector for the Second District of Kentucky. Their partnership terminated in 1872, and John C. Farley is now located at the east end of Island Creek Bridge, Paducah, where he does an extensive business, dealing in drugs and groceries. He is a member of the Masonic order, and A. O. U. W. He was married in Paducah, in 1869, to Miss Ella L. Scott, and has two children: Della and John C. Farley, Jr. Mr. Farley has served the county in the capacity of justice of the peace since 1869, and is secretary and treasurer of the Paducah Shipyard Company.

JOHN G. FISHER is one of the pioneers of the city of Paducah. He was born in Germany in the year 1816, and there attained his eighteenth year, coming to the United States in 1834. He first located in the city of Philadelphia, Penn., where he completed his trade, that of baker, having served an apprenticeship in his native country. He engaged at his trade in various places until 1838, when he removed to Paducah, which place has since been his home. In Paducah, Mr. Fisher engaged in the bakery business for several years, but in 1857 he established a brewery, which he conducted for some sixteen or more years. He is now the proprietor of a bakery and confectionery store on the corner of Court and Locust Streets. Mr. Fisher is a gentleman of good discriminative powers, of public spirit, and is one of the most worthy citizens of Paducah. His administrative ability was early utilized in the management of the public matters of this city, and his name is found among the first boards of trustees of the town of Paducah; later as a member of the city council for four years; then in 1863 he was elected to the office of mayor of this city, serving two terms and ending in 1867. In 1874 he was a third time honored with the mayoralty of Paducah, acquitting himself with credit in all his various public services, including the responsibility of the office of collector of the city tax. Mr. Fisher was married in McCracken County, in 1842, to Miss Mary F. Greif. Of the nine children born to them, five are living.

J. WM. FISHER, a native of the city of Paducah, and a member of the board of councilmen, representing the Third Ward, was born November 30, 1849. He is a son of J. G. Fisher, mention of whom is elsewhere made. He was educated in the schools of the city of Paducah, and in the Douglas University, of Chicago, Ill., and began a business career as traveling salesman, working in the employ of Louisville and Cincinnati firms for ten years. In 1875, in connection with W. F. Paxton, he engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Paducah, where they did a large business, until the dissolution of the firm in 1883. In 1884 Mr. Fisher established an extensive brick manufactory, which he is now operating. He is a member of Paducah Commandery No. 11, Knights Templar; he was married in Louisville, Ky., in 1875, to Miss Alice Hemmeller, and has four children, viz.: Harry, Charles, Allie and Irene Fisher.

JACOB FLEGLE was born in the State of Nausau, Prussia, Germany, January 1, 1830. and is a son of Jacob and Catharine (Flook) Flegle, who were parents of five children. Subject was reared on a farm and attended the common schools of his native place. He then served a three years apprenticeship to the cabinetmaker's trade, and worked some six months as a journeyman previous to his coming to America. He landed in New Orleans, after a passage of forty-nine days, and going thence to Louisville, Ky., was given employment in a chair factory. He afterward worked at his trade in Henry County and Ballard County, this State, and in 1870 came to this county and engaged in the hotel business at Woodville. Returning to Ballard County, he engaged in farming for four years, when he came back, ran the hotel at Woodville for two more years, and then purchased his present mill property, in which he has since made many improvements. He has remodeled and refitted the mill, putting in many new machines, and placing it among the first mills of the State; he turns out the highest grade of flour, and is doing all kinds of milling work. Mr. Flegle has attained his financial standing through industry, good management and economy, and is recognized as one of the most enterprising and active spirits in the community. He was married January 24, 1856, to Mary E. Scott, who bore him six children. She died in 1881, and Mr. Flegle afterward married Nancy Lane. He is a member of the K. of H.

PETER O. FOREE was born in Shelby County, this State, September 6, 1838. His father, Joshua Foree, was a Virginian by birth and came when a boy with his father to Kentucky. He resided in Shelby County on a farm until 1846, when he removed to Ballard County, Ky., where he continued in agricultural pursuits till his death, February 16, 1880. His wife was a Miss Narcissa T. Ogden, a native of this State; she died October 20, 1877. There are but three of their children living, our subject being the youngest. By diligent home study and making the most of the limited school facilities the times afforded, he was able to acquire a fair literary and good business education. He remained at home managing the home farm until thirty-six years of age, when he came to Woodville and engaged in the dry goods business, in which he has since been interested, also carrying a full line of drugs and general stock, and commanding a liberal share of the public patronage. Mr. Foree is reputed a gentleman of unquestionable honor and integrity and is held in high esteem by the entire community. May 27, 1875, he married Martha A. Ragland, of this county. The union has given three children: Charles O., Narcissa A. and Mary M. During his residence in Ballard County, he served three years as sheriff. He is a man of public spirit, and has given liberally for church and other public purposes and lent his influence to building the temperance cause.

JUDGE WILEY P. FOWLER. [The publishers have been furnished with the following biographical sketch of Judge Wiley P. Fowler, by W. D. Greer, of the Paducah bar, a former law partner of Judge Fowler. —Ed.] "Judge Wiley P. Fowler, one of the most eminent lawyers of Kentucky, was born in Smith County, Tenn., September 2, 1799, and when a small boy moved with his father's family to Caldwell County, near Princeton, Ky. It was there that he received only such education as the schools of those primitive days, in that section, afforded. Full of the spirit of adventure, in 1817, when he was only eighteen years of age, he landed in a flat-boat at the mouth of Island Creek, at the upper end of the city of Paducah on his way to the distant wilds of Texas. Where Paducah now stands was then a vast unbroken forest; not a tree had been touched by the white man and it was a part of the Indian's vast hunting-grounds. In after years, when the judge would address the people in favor of some public enterprise, it was his delight to refer to the time when he had seen the Indian wigwams and campfires where this beautiful city now stands. He remained in Texas during a part of its wildest history, but after a year or two he became satisfied with the adventures and dangers of a frontier life, returned to Kentucky and located in Salem, in Livingston County, where he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He there married Miss Esther A. Given, sister of H. F. and D. A. Given, men of great prominence in the commercial world. His wife was a sister-in-law of Judge James Campbell, Sr. He afterward moved from Salem to Princeton, Ky., and rose rapidly in his profession and soon became one of the leading lawyers of southern Kentucky. He ranked along with George W. Barbour, Judge James Campbell, Sr., Mat Mayes, Bob Patterson, David McGoodwin and James B. Husbands, the great lawyers of this end of the State at that time. He was a superior land and criminal lawyer. He took a leading part in nearly all the great land and criminal trials of the day. He was a man of commanding presence, almost six feet high, of fine form, straight as an Indian, with dark, penetrating eyes, with a face and head indicative of a strong character and high order of intellect. His manners and style of oratory were pleasing and peculiarly his own. He was the very embodiment of dignity and courtesy and yet at times, especially when addressing the jury, full of wit, humor and sarcasm; but his great forte was to play upon the feelings and passions of his hearers. He could, by his matchless eloquence and pathos, bring tears to the eyes of his listeners, and could by a few artful, well-directed, apt words, accompanied by the merry twinkle of his eye and an inimitable smile, throw his adversary into disrepute and ridicule, and convulse his audience with laughter. He was passionately fond of literary research, and was a pioneer in the field of thought, loved to read and investigate new subjects, and, regardless of orthodox creeds, his active mind rambled with freedom over the bright fields of a new, and by some a forbidden science. His language at all times was chaste and most beautiful. There was a vein of poetry in his conversation and in his speeches which was charming and very taptivating. These, accompanied by his dignified bearing, at all times elicited earnest attention from those who heard him, either in ordinary conversation, or on the rostrum. He was made judge of the circuit court about the year 1840, and held that position for years and until the change in the constitution, establishing the elective judiciary. When the State was re-districted, Caldwell County was left out of the jurisdiction of his old district. He then removed to Smithland, in Livingston County, and about 1860 was elected by the people judge of the circuit court, which office he held until 1865, and by his dignity and unbending iron will, upheld the civil power in his district, to a great extent, during those turbulent war times. It was during this period of his career, that his great character shone forth in its true brightness. While the country was occupied by armed soldiery and the booming of cannon, and the clank of arms were heard around him; when bad passions ruled the hour, and bands of robbers and cut-throats prowled through the country and law was being trodden down by lawless men, Judge Fowler held his courts, and with an unfaltering hand held the scales of justice, upheld the civil power and brought offenders to trial in the very teeth of the military of both Federals and Confederates. His course often brought him in conflict with them, and for this his life was imperiled and even threatened, and under the pretext that he refused to take the "iron-clad oath," he was arrested and imprisoned in Louisville, by the Federals. His private life was pure and blameless. He was generous and charitable. After leaving the bench, he lived a quiet life on his farm, three miles below Smithland, on the bank of the Ohio, amid the grandeur of the poetic scenes of that majestic river. There he lived in almost quiet seclusion, in the enjoyment of farm scenes and farm life, until the death of his second wife, Mrs. S. S. Fowler, whom he had married in 1848, and then came to Paducah and spent the sunset of his days with his sons, Gus Fowler and Joseph H. Fowler. He had been a member of the Methodist Church since early manhood and for fifty-five years a Mason. He died at the home of his son, Capt. Joseph H. Fowler, in Paducah, in the eighty-second year of his age, long after nearly all the friends of his early youth had passed from the stage of action. He died full of honors and beloved by all who knew him. But Judge Fowlers' character, good and noble deeds and principles he inculcated still live with the people of southern Kentucky and will endure long after the beautiful monument that marks his grave in the Smithland cemetery will crumble and fall beneath the stroke of time."

CAPT. JOSEPH H. FOWLER. The name of Fowler, to the people of western Kentucky, brings to memory recollections of one of the pioneers of that portion of the State. But few persons, now living in the Purchase, that have not known Judge W. P. Fowler, whose sketch appears above. Capt. Joe, as he is familiarly called is one of his three sons, and was born in 1833, in Salem, Livingston Co., Ky. In early life he enjoyed the instruction of a noted teacher, Prof. James Weller, and in 1848 became a student in the Cumberland College of Princeton, Ky., completing his studies in Smithland, Ky. Thus far his entire business energy has been in the wharf and steamboat interest; he began the former in 1849. In 1850 he became a clerk in the Paducah and Nashville packet, "Annie Linington," but after nine months became clerk on a wharf boat, on which he continued until 1857, when he was made master, and still holds a master's license, though he has of late retired from the line. He is now engaged in the wharf boat and boat store business in Paducah, and owns an interest in the Cairo packet "Gus Fowler." Mr. Fowler deserves special mention for his untiring efforts as a member of the Paducah school board, in establishing and maintaining the present efficient system of public schools. He has also shown his wisdom and administrative ability during a term of eight years as a member of the city council. In 1855, he contracted a marriage with Miss Mattie Leech, of Smithland, Ky., and has a family of six children: Given; Millie, wife of Dr. F. T. Davis, of Paducah; Mintie, wife of Cook Husbands, and Misses Mattie, Josephine and Rosebud Fowler.

DANIEL J. FRASER was born in Stewart County, Tenn., in 1834, and is the son of Benjamin F. Fraser, and Mary J. Fraser, daughter of Samuel Elam. His parents were Virginians, who in early life became residents of Stewart County, Tenn. Daniel J. was reared on his father's farm, in Tennessee, and at the age of seventeen began his mercantile career as a salesman. In 1855, he formed a partnership with his brother, at Clarksville, Tenn., in the dry goods trade, which he continued for one year, when he became a resident of Ballard County, Ky. He engaged in agriculture in that and McCracken Counties, until 1862, when he entered the Confederate Army, and served till the close of the war, as lieutenant in the Seventh Kentucky Regiment. At the close of the war, he returned and located in Paducah, where he engaged as salesman for a dry goods house, until 1869, when he associated with George Rock, in the wholesale boot and shoe business. This firm existed twelve years, at which time Mr. Fraser retired from the firm. In 1881, he established his present boot and shoe house in connection with J. B. Jones, under the firm name of Fraser & Jones, which now constitutes one of the leading business houses of Paducah. Mr. Fraser is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; a member of the Masonic order, K. of H. and K. G. R. He was married, in 1857, in Robertson County, Tenn., to Miss Sallie A., daughter of Thomas J. Polk. Their family consists of four sons and four daughters.

AARON FUQUA, McCracken County, was born in Buckingham County, Va., May 12, 1819. His father was a farmer by occupation, though in early life he had worked at the stonemason's trade. He removed to Kentucky, in December, 1822, and resided in Logan County, until his death. His wife was Mary L. Ayres, of Virginia. Our subject lived at home till the death of his father in 1855, when he took charge of the home farm, which he operated until his mother's death, which occurred four years later. In 1860, he came to McCracken County and operated a dam on the river bottoms, and in 1867 removed to Woodville, and there resided till 1874 engaged in the drug and grocery business. At the latter date, he traded his town property for his present farm of 200 acres, on which he has since made many improvements, and in many ways beautified and adorned his home surroundings. For thirty years, Mr. Fuqua has been a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has held during the time all of the Lodge offices, and is now secretary of the Woodville Lodge, No. 300. He served the county as its deputy clerk from 1870–74, and was one of the magistrates for his district, No. 5, for a term of four years. He fills at the present time the office of county examiner. For many years he has acted as correspondent of the agricultural department of the State and General Governments, and has always been identified with important matters of public interest. August 1, 1844, he married Eliza G. Coghill, of this State; she died in December, 1853. His present wife was Mrs. Sarah A. Haddox.

JESSE H. GARDNER. Among the very early settlers in the Purchase District, Kentucky, was David Gardner, the father of the subject of this sketch. About 1822, David, with his wife, Hannah (Hampton) Gardner, and family of eight children, settled in Calloway County a short distance from the old county seat of Wadesboro. They came originally from Roane County, N. C., and first located in Clark County, Ky., when it was an unbroken wilderness; there Jesse H. was born in 1819. David Gardner remained in Calloway County, until 1828, when he again sought the frontier and settled in Missouri. He died in Texas, while visiting that region, in 1831. His wife, with her children returned to Calloway County, shortly after, and there died in 1834. Jesse H. was reared under pioneer influences, almost wholly deprived of educational advantages, but when nearly grown, he secured the instruction of a teacher for a short time, and in 1838, a rustic youth, but of determined character, he might have been seen plodding his way on foot to the infant town of Paducah. His object in coming hither, was not that he might begin a long and prosperous business career, but having in view the one idea of securing work, whereby he might obtain money to discharge a small obligation to his former teacher. He first engaged for $15 a month to work for a woodman; he worked three months and lost the wages of the entire time. Determined not to return home poorer than he had left he sought and obtained a position in a hotel, next as watchman on a wharf boat, and finally a clerkship in a boat store. To follow through the many changes of his fortune would make an interesting chapter, but space will not permit. In 1846, having saved some money, he embarked in mercantile life, and for ten years did a profitable business; meantime, in 1852, having been burned out, he erected the building known as St. Clair Hall, which he now owns. He has served the city for some years as mayor, and at the breaking out of the war, was made secretary, treasurer and general manager of the railroad from Paducah to Union City, and remained in charge until 1866. He has been frequently elected to the city council, and is now a member and treasurer of the board of education, and vice-president of the First National Bank. Mr. Gardner was married in 1853, in Ballard County, to Miss Sarah M., daughter of Dr. Reese Bourland, and has reared a family of eight children, among whom are Dr. David Gardner, of the Indian Territory, and William Armour Gardner, a lawyer of Paducah. The latter was born in Paducah, June 25, 1858, and there received a good English education; he studied law under Judge J. M. Bigger and was admitted to practice in March, 1882. In the fall of the same year, he entered the senior class in the law department of the Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, where he graduated in the spring of 1883. Though young in the profession, he is an energetic student, and is fast acquiring a practice, though surrounded by an extensive bar, noted for able lawyers.

HON. JESSE C. GILBERT. In 1818, Joel Gilbert removed from North Carolina, his native State, to the State of Kentucky, settling near the present site of Benton, Marshall Co., Ky. He was married to Miss Tempa Grace, having a family of ten children as a result of their union. They were pioneers in the full sense of that term, and spent the remainder of their lives in the vicinity of their original settlement. Mrs. Gilbert died in 1834, and Joel Gilbert in 1852. The subject of these lines is the seventh of their family, and was born at their homestead, near Benton, in 1831. His boyhood and early manhood were spent on his father's farm, presenting no material contrast with the experiences of other boys of similar pioneer surroundings. Besides the common schools of that early day, he attended the Wadesboro Academy, after which he decided to become a lawyer. He accordingly entered the office of Philander Palmer, one of the best lawyers in the State, where he pursued his studies until his admission to practice, in 1855. At the age of twenty-two, he was elected clerk of the Marshall County courts; next became county attorney, and in 1861, was elected to represent that county in the lower house of the General Assembly. He served in this capacity with credit during the exciting sessions of 1861–62, and in the year 1871 his public service was again demanded, and he was elected to the State senate from the Second Senatorial District, serving as a worthy member of that body until 1875. As a member of the senate he introduced and secured the passage of a resolution requiring the governor and commissioners of the sinking fund to invest in United States six per cent bonds to be registered, the $1,500,000 belonging to the sinking fund which had been collected and deposited in the banks at Frankfort during a period of thirty years for the purpose of paying the State bonds, when they became due and interest on the school funds. Holders of the bonds had refused to accept payment before maturity, and this large sum had accumulated and had never been invested or loaned out. Most of it was invested as required by the resolution, yielding to the State annually upward of $40,000. He removed to Paducah in 1874, where he still lives, and with the exception of his public service, he has been in active practice since his admission to the bar. In 1858, in the town of Benton, Mr. Gilbert married Miss Azelia Barry, and has a family of seven children. He is a Democrat in politics, and a member in the Masonic fraternity.

DR. HENRY M. GILSON was born in Danville, Vt., in 1837; was there reared and educated until he was seventeen years old, when his parents, Lewis and Ann E. (Peck) Gilson, removed to Kentucky and settled in Ballard County. Mr. Gilson there studied medicine under Dr. Stovall and Dr. Joseph Thompson; took one course of lectures in Nashville, Tenn., and in 1863, entered the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, where he graduated in the early part of 1864. He took a second course however, in 1864–65. He began the practice of medicine in Ballard County, but removed to Paducah in 1866, where for two years he practiced in connection with Dr. J. Thompson. In 1868, he was compelled by loss of health to abandon the practice, and the following year he embarked in the drug business, in which he is still engaged and in which he has been attended with good success. Dr. Gilson is a man whose word is as good as his bond. He is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, I. O. O. F., and for several years has been president of the German National Bank at Paducah. He was married in Paducah, in 1865, to Miss Eliza J. Hobbs, daughter of Jo Sam Hobbs, and has two children, Edward H. and Mary Lizzie Gilson.

EDWARD P. GILSON, son of Lewis and Ann E. (Peck) Gilson, was born in 1844, in Danville, Vt., and was ten years old when his parents emigrated to Kentucky. He returned however, to his native State, where he obtained a good English education. He began his business life in 1868, as a member of the firm of W. R. Leigh & Co., of Paducah, Ky., and has been a resident of that city ever since, with the exception of three years, which he spent in the tobacco market, in New York City, having previously engaged in the manufacture of cigars and plug tobacco, in Paducah. Mr. Gilson is a man of good business qualifications, and is held in high esteem by a large circle of friends; for some years, he occupied the position of teller in the American German National Bank, of Paducah. Since 1879, he has been operating a paint store, located at No. 303 Broadway. He is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity. He was married in St. Louis, Mo., in 1882, to Miss Maggie A., daughter of Rev. F. Lack, of that city, and has one child, Jennie L. Gilson.

WELDON P. GRIFFIN, McCracken County, was born July 18, 1819, near the Virginia and North Carolina line. His parents were William G. and Phœbe (Glover) Griffin, natives respectively of Kentucky and North Carolina. The father was engaged in merchandising in North Carolina, and was there married. He was a son of William Griffin. W. P., the subject of these lines, is the only one living of the three children born to his parents. He was engaged, in early life, in clerking in his native State, and, after his marriage, gave his attention to farming pursuits. Leaving Virginia in 1843, he came to this county in 1867, after having resided several years in Christian and Ballard Counties, Ky. During the war he sold goods in the latter county. At present he has farming property both here and in Tennessee, and during his life has administered on several estates. He was first married to Miss Caroline Howerton, of Virginia, a daughter of Thomas Howerton, of Virginia. Five children are living of this union: James A., Cornelia E., Thomas M., Theodore W. and Ella C. His present wife, Sallie M., is a daughter of Joseph M. Fauntberry; a son, James A., is living of this marriage.

JOHN J. GUTHRIE, son of William P. and Eliza J. Guthrie, of Calloway County, Ky., was born in Virginia, but came with the family to Kentucky, when three years old. He grew to manhood on the farm, was educated primarily in the common schools of Calloway County, and later at Murray, and at Paris, Tenn. When twenty-one years old he began business as a dry goods merchant in Murray, where he remained until he moved to Paducah, in 1864. In 1865, he established a dry goods house in the latter place, and is now one of its most popular and well-known merchants. His present business locality is No. 214 Broadway. Mr. Guthrie was married in Paducah, in 1867, to Miss Mary J. Ratcliffe, daughter of Judge R. S. Ratcliffe, formerly president of the City National Bank of Paducah, which he organized and of which he was president up to the time of his death. They have one child: Mamie K. Guthrie. Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie are members of the First Baptist Church of Paducah.

CHARLES R. HALL was born in 1844, in Halifax County, Va. He is a son of William J. and Ann E. (Barnes) Hall, who removed from Virginia to Kentucky, in 1850, settling that year in the western part of McCracken County, where the father engaged in the pursuits of the farm until his death, which occurred about 1863; the mother is still a resident of the county. Charles R. Hall devoted himself to the industries of farm life until 1879, when he removed to Paducah to engage in the tobacco trade. Since that date, he has been actively engaged in the business, as a re handler and shipper. In 1875 he was married to Miss Mary E. Overstreet, daughter of Elisha Overstreet, of McCracken County, Ky. Mr. Hall is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of the K. of H. and the K. of G. C.

CAPT. THOMAS HALLORAN, of Paducah, Ky., was born in 1819, in Galway, Ireland, and is a son of Charles and Ann (Hogan) Halloran, both of whom died in the old country. At the age of fifteen years, Mr. Halloran came to the United States, first locating at Louisville, Ky., from whence, after a brief residence, he removed to Union County, Ky. He there opened what was then known as the DeKovan & Curlew coal mines, and also built the lines of railroad connecting these mines with the Ohio River. Since 1856, Mr. Halloran has been a resident of the city of Paducah, Ky. His life business, thus far, has been railroad construction and other public work, and in this capacity has constructed thirty or forty miles of the roads entering Paducah, besides having the superintendency of the construction of all the principal streets of that city. At the breaking out of the war in 1861, he organized a company of soldiers for the Confederate Army and was attached to the Seventeenth Mississippi Regiment, sharing in the fortunes of his company, of which he was captain, until the close of the war. He has been twice married, first in Louisville, Ky., in 1844, to Miss Catherine Ferry, and second in Paducah, Ky., in 1869, to Ann Clark. Both wives died in Paducah, the former in 1866, and the latter in January, 1878. Four children are now living as the result of his first marriage, viz.: Patrick, Charles, Frank M. and John Halloran. The three children of his second marriage are Kate, William and Mary Halloran. In positions of public trust, as a soldier and as a private citizen, Mr. Hallorah has proven himself a true man, and among his large circle of acquaintances is highly respected for his many virtues. He is a member of the Catholic Church, and affiliates with the Democratic party. From 1878 to 1883 (five years) he spent in New Mexico, engaged in a mining investment.

HENRY W. HAND was born in Calloway County, Ky., in the year 1838. His father, Henry Hand, was one of the most extensivly and favorably known of all the citizens of the Purchase. He was a native of Smithland, Ky., and afterward removed to Marshall County, where he became the first clerk of the county and Circuit Courts, a position he occupied about sixteen years. He married Miss Felicia Bogard, who is now living and by whom he had four children, Henry W. being the eldest. The father died in August, 1883. Henry W. attended the common schools, early became a deputy under his father, and after acquiring a practical business education, he went to Paducah, Ky., and engaged as a salesman in the mercantile business. On the breaking out of the war, in 1861, he entered the Third Kentucky Regiment, under the Confederate general, Tilghman; he was wounded at the battle of Shiloh; then became clerk for Gen. Preston; next became adjutant, and when surrendered at the close of the war, was a member of Gen. Roane's staff. After the war, Mr. Hand returned to Paducah and engaged for Ashbrook, Ryan & Co., in the wholesale grocery business. In 1881, he formed a partnership with T. J. Atkins, in the wholesale grocery trade, which connection existed until May, 1884, when the present firm of Bogard & Hand succeeded the firm of Atkins & Hand. Mr. Hand is a member of the Masonic order, Knights of Honor, A. O. U. W., I. O. O. F., and of the Methodist Church. He was married in New Albany, Ind., in 1874, to Miss Hallie Carson.

HON. JOSIAH HARRIS, Jr., lawyer and statesman and at present member of the Kentucky State legislature from McCracken County, was born on November 14, 1839, in Columbia, Adair Co., Ky., to Josiah Harris, Sr., and Sallie W. Harris, nee King, the latter a sister of the late lieutenant-governor of Kentucky, Hon. John Q. A. King. In his boyhood days, Mr. Harris attended the Columbia College in his native town and later attended college at Danville, Ky. At the age of nineteen, he began the study of the law, which he prosecuted in the law school of Louisville, Ky., and was admitted to the practice in 1860. He first established a practice in the city of Louisville, where he remained however but a short time, coming thence to Paducah, where he at once acquired a handsome practice, and where he has constantly grown in public favor. He is a fine judge of law, of quick perception and an able and bold advocate, and stands deservedly in the front rank of criminal lawyers in his State, and an orator of high rank and place. In 1861, he was elected to the office of prosecuting attorney of the city courts of Paducah; was once a candidate for the State senate, and twice for the lower house of the legislature, to which office he was elected in August, 1883, and of which he is the present incumbent. During the last Assembly, Mr. Harris served in some of the most important committees, including the committee on State prisons, county and city courts, and the committee on criminal laws, of which he was chairman. He is prominent in legal, political and social circles in his State. He was married in 1861, in Paducah, to Miss Cora Enders, who died in 1877, leaving a daughter, Miss Hallie Harris. June 5, 1882, he contracted a second marriage, this time to Miss Mattie Dunn, of Smithland, Ky. Charitable and liberal in his views upon all public matters, Mr. Harris is connected with the Presbyterian denomination of Christians, and member of the A. F. & A. M.

FAYETTE HARRISON was born March 15, 1815, in Christian County, Ky. His father, Robert Harrison, a Virginian by birth, settled in Christian County, in 1811; he operated a saw mill in connection with his farm and was thus engaged until his death in 1852. His wife, Sallie Davis, was a native of this State. To them were born eight children, five of whom survive. Our subject worked on the farm and in his father's mill during his youth and was given a good education. He remained at home until his marriage, which occurred in October, 1838, after which he gave his attention to farming and milling; for two years was the postmaster at Pembroke, Ky., where he kept, in partnership with his brother, a general store. In 1856, he came to this county and purchased a farm of 250 acres, which he still owns. Mrs. Harrison died in 1876, and he was subsequently married to Mrs. Harriet L. Enders, a lady of large estate and reputed generosity. Mr. Harrison is a member of the A. F. & A. M. and I. O. O. F. and has served as magistrate for a period of two years.

GEORGE O. HART was born in Erie County, Penn., August 7, 1836. His parents, Edson Hart and Helen Elizabeth (Priestly) Hart, were married in New Brunswick, N. J., and settled in Erie County, Penn. Edson

Hart was a native of Connecticut, and was a Presbyterian minister. Mrs. Helen E. Hart was born in New Jersey. In 1840, they removed and settled in Union County, Ky., and there remained five years, when they became residents of New Albany, Ind., where George O. Hart was chiefly educated, and where his business career began. He engaged in the drug business in 1856, which he conducted for about six years, and then became associated with E. R. Hart and J. B. Archer in the steamboat trade, on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, between Louisville, Ky., and Memphis, Tenn.; this he continued until the close of the war, and in 1867 located in Paducah and established a wholesale and retail hardware business, which he is now still successfully operating, under the firm name of George O. Hart & Son. It is perhaps true that Mr. Hart is doing the most extensive hardware business of any dealer in western Kentucky, his annual sales reaching $150,000. Mr. Hart married Miss Addie H. Stout, daughter of Dr. J. B. Stout, of New Albany, Ind.; she died in Paducah, Ky., in 1875, leaving four children: George B., a member of the firm; Addie H., Anna and Lena H. Hart. His present wife, to whom he was married in 1876, is a daughter of Capt. John F. Harriss; she is the mother of one son, Edson Hart. Mr. Hart is a deacon in the Presbyterian Church of Paducah.

CHARLES HAWTHORNE was born in Ballard County, Ky., September 15, 1858, and is the son of Mastison O. and Eva (Bodkins) Hawthorne. The father was a native of Kentucky, was a physician, and died in 1871. Our subject is the eldest of six children born to his parents, and of whom there are three living. He was reared on a farm and attained a good education. At the age of fifteen he went to live with an uncle and remained with him until he became of age. He then rented a farm near Woodville, McCracken County, and has since given most of his attention to agricultural pursuits. Having learned the carpenter's trade in Ballard County, he established here in January, 1883, his present wagon works, which he has since operated. His success in life has been due to his own efforts. He now owns two residences with several acres of land adjoining in Woodville, aside from his business and other town property. December 25, 1878, he married Miss Lucy A. Hudson, of Woodville. This union has given one child, Minnie.

SAMUEL G. HINES, McCracken County, is a native of Logan County, this State, was born December 8, 1838, and is a son of John Hines, who was originally from Virginia, but came to Kentucky with his parents when a young man, locating in Logan County, where he resided most of his life on a farm. A few years preceding his death, he went to live with his son in Ballard County, this State, and there departed this life at the age of eighty-two years. His wife, formerly a Miss Ann Duncan, died a short time before her husband. They had eleven children. Our subject's early life was devoted to farming, and improving the meager school facilities of the day to secure an education. At twenty-one years of age he started in business for himself, in a small place in Logan County, but after a year and one-half returned to farming, his father having given him some farm property in the meantime. Here he labored until 1870, at which date he disposed of the farm and bought similar property in Ballard County, where he remained twelve years, when he came to his present farm of 114 acres in McCracken County, retaining the Ballard farm of 135 acres. Mr. Hines is a member of the Christian Church, is a man of public spirit and enterprise and supports the temperance cause. He has been twice married, his first wife having formerly been a Miss Frances Miller, of Logan County. The union was blessed with three children, one of whom, Joseph, is now living. His second wife was Miss Alice Bacon, of McCracken County. They have three children: Cordelia, George and Samuel G.

JOSEPH W. HOBBS was born March 3, 1849, on his present farm. His father, Benjamin Hobbs, was a native of Fleming County, Ky., and a son of Col. Hobbs, who settled on the place now belonging to our subject at an early date. Benjamin Hobbs kept at his house the first postoffice in the vicinity. It was called the Bayou postoffice, His wife was Elizabeth Hopper, of Christian County. There were three children in the family. Our subject spent his early days on the farm, and obtained a common school education. He has always resided on the old homestead, now containing 260 acres, and has devoted his life to the prosecution of his farm interests. He is the youngest child in his parent's family and is the only one now living. November 23, 1882, he married Miss Jennie Cunningham, of this county. They have one child, Charles F. Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs are members of the Baptist Church.

HENRY H. HOBSON was born July 8, 1839, in Trigg County, Ky., where he was reared on his father's farm, meantime receiving a good common school education. His parents, who are now living and members of his family, are Benjamin Hobson and Susan (Richardson) Hobson; the former born in Virginia in 1807, and the latter born in 1812, in the same State. About 1857 the family removed to Graves County, Ky., the parents remaining but a few years, when they returned to Trigg County. Henry H., however, remained in Graves County, engaged as salesman in a mercantile house, until 1860, when he removed to the city of Paducah, which has since been his home. In 1861, he entered the Confederate Army, served the first two years of the war, and then returned to Paducah. After a short career in the dry goods business, he embarked in the tobacco trade, at Mayfield, Ky., as a member of the firm of Hobson & West, and in 1870 returned to Paducah, where he did an extensive brokerage business until 1875, when he established his present large warehouse business. As a business man, Mr. Hobson has but few superiors in Paducah. His kind, genial disposition is manifest in his intercourse with his friends as in the bosom of his family. As a member of the city council, he has proven his attachment to the general good, and is regarded by all as a most worthy citizen. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, K. of H., and of the K. G. C. Mr. Hobson was married at Mayfield, Ky., in 1864, to Miss Martha J. Aker, daughter of John Aker, one of the pioneers of the Jackson Purchase. Their children are: John B., Minnie B., Joe. F., Lillie and Emery Hobson.

ZACH. P. HOLLAND, McCracken County, was born January 13, 1858, upon the place where he at present resides. His father, Zachariah P. Holland, was born in Warren County, Ky., April 13, 1812. When he became of age he moved to Christian County, where he married Margaret, daughter of Duncan and Nannie Galbreath, August 1, 1842. In the autumn of 1849 he came to McCracken County, and here departed this life September 12, 1880. He was the father of four children, of whom three are living. Our subject was reared on a farm and attended the schools of the vicinity, which limited education was supplemented by a course of study at Woodville, and at Elkton, Todd Co., Ky. He then lived with an uncle three years. Before his father's death, the home place had been given to him and his brother, Anderson, whose interest he afterward purchased. He has since given his attention to farm pursuits, and is now one of the most enterprising young men of the county.

WILLIAM H. HOOK was born on January 6, 1829, in Breckinridge County, Ky. His father, John Hook, was a native of Ohio, came to Breckinridge County in early life, and there married Miss Lucretia Wood, a native of Kentucky. William H. was reared on his father's farm and compelled to depend on an irregular attendance in the county schools for his early education. After he had arrived at manhood, however, he went to Hillsboro, Ohio, and attended school, thus qualifying himself for the profession of teaching, and also devoted himself to the study of surveying Having taught for a time, he went to the State of Missouri, and while there was employed in government surveying. From Missouri, he removed to Kentucky, and settled in Hawesville, Hancock County, where for several years he was employed in teaching and serving the county as surveyor. He removed to Paducah in 1869, where, after teaching one year, he opened an insurance office, in which business he has been employed since. In 1882 he was elected to the office of justice of the peace of McCracken County, and now occupies that position. In Louisville, in 1864, he married Miss Hannah M. Henry, daughter of William H. Henry, of that city. His children are: Mary A., Lizzie and Mattie Hook. Mr. Hook is a member of the Masonic order and of the I. O. O. F.

HENRY H. HOUSTON, son of Eli and Sarah (Best) Houston, is a native of the city of Paducah, and was born November 15, 1836. He obtained a good English education in Paducah and Memphis, Tenn. From the former place his father, with his family, removed to California, returning to Paducah a few years subsequently. Henry H. then commenced the study of law with the firm of King & King, and was admitted to the practice of the profession in 1858, since which time he has been connected with the Paducah bar. In 1860 he was elected city attorney of Paducah. His practice was soon interrupted by the breaking out of the civil war, and in 1861 he joined Company B, of the Third Kentucky Regiment, and entered the Confederate Army. He followed the fortunes of this regiment until November, 1862, when he was promoted from the ranks to the commission of Adjutant of the Twentieth Mississippi Regiment, Infantry, in which he served until after the battle of Atlanta, in 1864, where he was severely wounded in left wrist and hip, after which he resigned and returned to Paducah. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Baton Rouge, Jackson, the engagements around Vicksburg and the Atlanta campaign. After returning to Paducah, he resumed the practice of law, which he has followed successfully, though not without interruption. In 1872 he became the Republican candidate for congress from this district, receiving a flattering vote but sustaining defeat. In 1876 he was candidate for the same office, sustained another defeat but polled the largest Republican vote ever cast in the district. In 1882 he made a third race for congress with similar results. In March, 1883, he was elected to the office of city clerk, and unanimously re-elected in 1884. Mr. Houston is a member of the Masonic order and of the K. of H. He was married in the city of St. Louis, in 1874, to Miss Mary V. Ware, daughter of E. Ware, of Paducah. She died in Paducah in 1875, leaving one child, Mary Pauline Houston.

SAMUEL HOUSTON was born in the city of Paducah, November 25, 1838, to Eli and Sarah (Best) Houston. His parents, who were natives of the State of Ohio, came to Kentucky and settled in Paducah, about December, 1834. His father, Eli Houston, was a contractor and builder and a fine mechanic; he removed from Paducah to Memphis, Tenn., in 1845; was for a considerable time superintendent of public works in the United States Navy Yard at Memphis; thence to Sacramento City, Cal., from whence he returned to Paducah in 1854, but again returned to the Pacific States, and died in Nevada, in 1860. His wife, Sarah (Best) Houston, died in Paducah in 1863. Samuel Houston began the study of law soon after returning from California, in 1857, in the law office of King & King; was regularly admitted to the practice in 1859, and opened an office at Paducah for the practice of his profession. In 1862 he was elected to the office of city attorney, a position he occupied through six consecutive terms of office for ten years. He was formerly associated with his brother, H. H. Houston, in the practice; the latter withdrew and is now clerk of the city council, since which time the subject of this sketch has practiced alone.

ALBIN N. HOLT is a native of Montgomery County, Tenn. He was born September 13, 1820, and is a son of Peter Holt, also a Tennessean by birth, and whose parents were from North Carolina. The father was a farmer by occupation. About 1818 he made a trip to New Orleans on a flatboat, and upon his return located in Montgomery County, Tenn., where he married Miss Sarah Jett, of that county. He then went to Marion County, Tenn., and came, in 1839, to McCracken County, locating ten miles from Paducah, and farmed till his death. He left five children, all living; the youngest is fifty-six years of age. Our subject was the eldest of the family; was reared on a farm, and coming to Kentucky when nineteen years of age, with his father, worked with the latter until his marriage, which occurred October 7, 1841. He wedded Miss Malvina Rhew, of this county, and began farming for himself. At starting in life he was extremely poor, having to make his own household furniture, and, despite all efforts, for the first two years was unsuccessful in acquiring property, but in later years has been eminently prosperous. He now owns a large farm, besides having given a large tract of land to his children: Penina E., now Mrs. H. K. Trice; James P. and Melvira, the deceased wife of E. C. Rudolph. Mr. Holt is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and has been for twenty years a member of the Masonic fraternity. He has filled the office of police judge of Lovelaceville, and many other minor offices in the gift of the people.

JAMES P. HOLT, McCracken County, was born in McCracken County, March 28, 1846, and is a son of Albin N. Holt. At twenty-one years of age, he began life for himself by farming on land belonging to his father, which was afterward given him, but which, by industry and good management, has been increased to 300 acres, devoted to stock-raising and general farming. October 5, 1869, he was married to Miss Ellen Rudolph, of McCracken County, and the union has been blessed with one child, Nina M., who was born December 21, 1870, and is well accomplished in music. Mr. Holt is a member in high standing in the Masonic and Odd Fellows orders, and with his family, is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, in which he has served many years as deacon. He is an enterprising citizen, and at present justice of the peace, it being his second term. Also filled for several years the position of deputy county court clerk of his district.

WILLIAM H. HUDSON was born in this county, April 30, 1845. His father, Felix G. Hudson, was born in Alabama and came to McCracken County with his parents when a boy. He has been engaged principally as a farmer and trader, and for the last ten years has been in the mercantile business, in Woodville. He has been eminently successful in his undertakings and has acquired a large property. His wife was Vincy Stokes, a native of Tennessee. There are ten children in the family, all living. Our subject spent his youth upon the farm, and improved every opportunity whereby he could make progress in an education. At twenty-two years of age he left home, and for about nine years was engaged in farming, near Woodville. He then came to the town and purchased a business house, opened out in the dry goods trade and now carries a general stock. He has also dealt largely in tobacco. March 13, 1871, he married Miss Fannie Holbert, of Tennessee. They are the parents of four children: Arthur T., Louis G., Onie L., Robert W. Mr. and Mrs. Hudson are members of the Methodist Church. He is also a member of the K. of H.

CHARLES M. HUMPHREYS, McCracken County, was born November 20, 1833, in Montgomery County, Tenn., and is a son of Charles M. and Nancy (Parker) Humphreys. The father was a native of the same county, and was a son of George Humphreys, a wealthy farmer from Virginia. He was accidentally killed by a falling tree, when our subject was three years old, and the latter was reared by his mother. At eight years our subject went to work to assist in the support of the family, which consisted of his mother and one sister, Charlotte, and was thus engaged, hiring out by the year, and doing overseeing work, until 1862, in which year both his mother and sister died. He sold the little home place of an acre, and in 1863, rented a farm and made a good paying crop of corn. He sold the same and his stock and went to Clarksville, where he engaged in the liquor business for nearly two years. He was then appointed inspector and storekeeper at Port Royal, Tenn., under the General Government. After his marriage, which occurred with Miss Malissa Thomas, of Clarksville, September 10, 1867, he re-engaged in farming, in Montgomery County, and after two years sold out and removed to Marshall County, Ky., where he farmed ten years. Then, in 1880, came to McCracken County, and located on his present farm, which now consists of 350 acres. He is one of the substantial men of the county. His wife is a Cumberland Presbyterian and he is a Methodist. He has taken a deep interest in educational matters and his influence has been used in building up the neighboring school.

COL. JAMES BRYSON HUSBANDS was born in 1805, in Rowan County, N. C., soon after which his parents, Harman and Sarah Husbands, emigrated to Kentucky and settled in Christian County. Until he was seventeen years old he received his literary education from his father, after which he became a pupil of William P. Nichols, one of the earliest teachers of Christian County. After one year as a student he began to teach, and taught not only his former schoolmates, but also his former teacher, Mr. Nichols. He continued to teach until he was twenty-three years old, when having decided on the profession of law, he went to Princeton, Ky., and did the usual preparatory reading in the office of William Lander. In 1828 he received his license, and in the fall of that year removed to Wadesboro, Calloway County, since which time the name of Col. J. B. Husbands has been familiar to every resident of the Purchase District. During the years of his active practice he was contemporary with Judges Fowler, Campbell, Shackelford, Richard Mayes, Matthew Mayes and others, who have all gone to make their final plea at the bar of Eternal Justice. The legal career of Col. Husbands clearly proves that he is no ordinary man, and it may be truthfully said that he has brought more suits in law than any man in western Kentucky, if not in the State. He is now in his seventy-ninth year, confined mostly to his room, but with a mind still vigorous and unimpaired, and with four of his children, is living in Paducah, calmly awaiting the summons to a higher court. Col. Husbands was never an aspirant for political honors; the only office he ever accepted was that of commonwealth's attorney. He was married in 1832 to Miss Maria S. Martin, of McCracken County; she died in November, 1876, the mother of ten children, of whom seven are still living. In 1840 subject became a member of the Masonic fraternity, and two years later of the Methodist Church, of both of which he has ever proven a valuable defender.

LORENZO DOW HUSBANDS, lawyer, was born December 18, 1823, in Christian County, Ky., where the family settled in 1805. When two years old his parents removed to Crittenden County, where his father followed farming, and where L. D. received his early education. In 1847 he commenced the study of law in the office of his brother, J. P. Husbands, of Paducah, and in 1849 was regularly admitted to practice, which he began as a partner with Judge Morrow. In 1855 he was elected to the office of commonwealth's attorney, which he filled with ability for one year. He was elected in 1859 to the lower house of the State legislature, in which he served one term. Mr. Husbands is not a politician in the accepted sense of the term, but wields a potent influence in public matters, which is enjoyed by the Democratic party. He is a man of splendid appearance, tall and straight, and his face, upon which age sits lightly, impresses one that he is a man possessed of more than ordinary talent, an impression which is strengthened by continual acquaintance. Concerning his legal record, we quote the opinion of a brother practitioner: "Col. L. D. Husbands is a lawyer of ability, ranking number one in the State, and is withal a gentleman of integrity, true to his clients and urbane to all. He is considered one of the best citizens of Kentucky." Among his associates on the circuit, he is acknowledged to be one of the foremost and soundest lawyers in his section of the State. He possesses a logical mind, treats his opponents with due respect, seeking always to convince by sound demonstration, rather than by witticisms or sharp practice. As a chancery lawyer he perhaps has no equal in the commonwealth. Mr. Husbands has been deservedly successful in his profession. Commencing a poor boy, he has, by his ability and fairness as a lawyer, acquired a very handsome fortune. He is very charitable, lending a liberal assistance to all worthy enterprises, and is consequently greatly respected and loved in the community in which he has lived so long. He was married in 1851 to Miss Hannah Singleton, and in 1859 contracted a second marriage, this time to Mrs. Bullock, daughter of J. W. Cook, of Caldwell County, Ky.

EVERARD P. JACOB was born in Caldwell County, Ky., May 7, 1811. His parents, Arnold and Cynthia (Spriggs) Jacob, were natives of Maryland and Virginia respectively. Of their eight children, four are now living: Mrs. Elvira Patterson, Everard P., Mrs. Adelia J. Enders and Thaddeus. E. P., the subject of this sketch, was reared a farmer boy, and during his residence in Caldwell and Lyon Counties, his attention was devoted to farming pursuits, which have also been his occupation since coming to McCracken County, in 1856. He has at present farm property to the extent of 346 acres, and gives special attention to short-horn cattle and thoroughbred horses of the Norman breed. He married Miss Emma White, a daughter of George White, an old and respected farmer of Caldwell County. Of this union three children are now living: Mrs. Cynthia A. Randle, Orlando E. and Richard W.

WILLIAM B. JOHNSTON. This gentleman is the fifth of a family of six children born to Robert Johnston and Mary Johnston, nee Beadles. These parents, who by birth were Virginians, settled in Rutherford County, Tenn., about 1817, and there in November, 1820, William B. Johnston was born. He was educated in Murfreesboro, Tenn., where in early life he became a salesman, thus beginning a mercantile career of twenty years' duration. Mr. Johnston came to Paducah in 1864, and three years later established a plow manufactory, which for some years had a profitable existence. He is now the owner of extensive real estate in Kentucky and Tennessee, has retired from active business and is still a resident of Paducah. In 1852, in Tennessee, he married Mary Ellis, who died in 1860, leaving a daughter, Ella Johnston, who died subsequently. His present wife, to whom he was married in 1867, was Medora Small, daughter of Braxton Small, a well-known and early settler of McCracken County, Ky. As the result of this union he has one child named Philip Braxton Johnston. Mr. Johnston is a worthy member of the Baptist Church, and a man universally honored for his many virtues.

JOSEPH H. JOHNSON, senior member of the firm of Johnson & Sons, proprietors of the Phœnix Foundry and Machine Works, Paducah, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., in the year 1829. He remained in his native city until twenty years old, meantime acquiring a practical idea of the business connected with his father's foundry and machine shops. In 1849 he went to St. Louis, Mo., where he engaged in foundry work, until removing to Paducah in 1855. That year he started his present extensive business in Paducah under the title of the Plain City Iron Works, and soon became well established in a remunerative trade. His prosperity, however, was materially checked in 1868, when his entire shops were destroyed by fire. His enterprise was nevertheless equal to his emergency, and in consequence of the speedy rebuilding of the works, they received the appropriate name which they now bear. In 1851, in St. Louis, Mr. Johnson married Miss Elizabeth A. Yandell, a native of Tennessee. They have reared a family of four children, viz.: Charles S., Mendal W., Joseph Y., and Chloe Neal, wife of J. P. Wilson—the latter two residents of St. Louis, and the elder two members of the business firm of Paducah, Ky. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Christian Church, K. of H., A. O. U. W., and is a Knight Templar.

J. BERTRAND JONES, junior member of the firm of Fraser & Jones, is well descended from an old Vermont family, of English origin. His great-grandfather, Nathaniel Jones, Sr., fought as an American soldier in the war of the Revolution, going from Massachusetts. After the war he settled in Vermont, married and reared a family of eight children, the eldest of whom was Nathaniel Jones, Jr., the grandfather of our subject. He, in early life, removed from Orange County to Lamoille County, Vt. He had a family of eight children, the second of whom, Alger, is the father of J. B. Jones. Nathaniel Jones, Jr., was a man of rare ability, and served for thirteen consecutive years in the Vermont State Legislature. Alger Jones also attained distinction in his State, and served as a member of the legislature for four years. He married Mary M. Bliss, a lady of high family connections, and daughter of Sylvester Bliss. She died in 1860, leaving four children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the eldest. His father is still living, at the age of seventy-three, in Orleans County, Vt. J. B. Jones was born in Lamoille County, Vt., August 22, 1847. He there received an academic education, and began life as a salesman, first in his native State, later in Boston, and in 1870 removed to Golconda, Ill., where he engaged in business about three years. From 1873 to 1878 he was a salesman for a wholesale boot and shoe house, of Evansville, Ind. In 1878 he assisted in organizing and became a member of the firm of Rice & Jones, in an extensive hat manufactory, of which he had the entire management. In 1881 he severed his connection with that institution to take a partnership with D. J. Fraser, of Paducah. Mr. Jones was married, in Evansville, Ind., in 1879, to Miss Elise C. Disch, daughter of Col. Victor Disch, a prominent lawyer of that city. They are both members of the Presbyterian Church, and have one child, a daughter, Ov Jones.

FREDERICK KAMLEITER, of the city of Paducah, Ky., was born in Bavaria, Germany, in the year 1840, and came thence to the United States in 1856. In that year he located in the town of Cairo, Ill., where he was variously employed until the breaking out of the civil war, in 1861. He then enlisted in the Federal Army, as a member of Company M, sharpshooters, in the Fourth Missouri Infantry, in the three months' service. At the expiration of his term of enlistment he joined the Second Illinois Artillery, Battery C, from which he was mustered out at Springfield, Ill., at the close of the war. Among the various battles in which he took part were those of Fort Donelson, Pittsburg Landing, Corinth, Miss., and Springfield, Mo. Since January, 1866, Mr. Kamleiter has been a resident of Paducah, where for a few years he was employed as salesman in a mercantile house. About 1868 he established himself in business, which has grown from a limited trade, on a small capital, to one of the first houses in the city. He is located on the corner of Locust and Adams Streets, Nos. 110, 112 and 114, and deals in groceries, provisions and feed. Mr. Kamleiter is now serving his second term as a member of the city council, representing the Fourth Ward. He is a member of the German Lutheran Church, A. F. & A. M., I. O. O. F, A. O. U. W. and K. of H. He was married in Paducah, in 1868, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Tobias Beyer, a native of Germany. Their children are Katie, Louisa and Henry.

DR. JOHN H. KENNY, dental surgeon, of Paducah, Ky., was born July 15, 1842, in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was chiefly educated. He is a son of Michael and Mary (Harvey) Kenny, both of whom were of Irish birth. In 1854, being then twelve years old, John H. was brought to Kentucky by his father, his mother having died. The father located in the city of Louisville, where John H. attained his majority, studying his profession under Dr. John Leatherman, of that city. He began his practice in Hardinsburg, Ky., where he remained until removing to the city of Paducah, in 1871. Being skillful in his profession, and a true gentleman, he soon secured a large practice, and became one of the substantial elements in the professional arena at Paducah. Dr. Kenny was married in 1871, in Cloverport, Breckinridge Co., Ky., to Miss Mary Bassett, daughter of James Bassett, a prominent citizen of that county. Dr. Kenny and wife are members of the Catholic Church.

JOHN A. KIMMEL, of the popular grocery firm of Kimmel & Rudolph, of Paducah, was born in Ballard County, Ky., in 1851. He is the youngest and only surviving child of Israel Kimmel and America M. Kimmel, nee Ashley. His father was born within the present limits of Ballard County, where he spent many years in merchandising, and where he died in 1878, at the age of fifty-two years. His mother, America M. Kimmel, is still living and a resident of Ballard County. John A. received a practical business training in his father's store, in Ballard County, where he continued business until removing to Paducah, in May, 1884. He here associated with F. G. Rudolph, in the grocery and provision business, succeeding the firm of Nichols & Rudolph, and is located at No. 26 Market Street. Mr. Kimmel was married in 1870, to Miss Alice Rutherford, who died in 1873. His present wife, to whom he was married in Charlestown, Mo., was Miss Annie Brown. They are members of the Baptist Church, of Paducah, and have one child, Travis A. Kimmel.

REV. WILLIAM HENRY LEIGH was born in east Tennessee, December 29, 1824, where his father, James Walker Leigh, en route from Albemarle County, Va., to west Kentucky, stopped for a short time. In the spring succeeding, Mr. Leigh moved to this State and settled in the little town of Eddyville, on the banks of the Cumberland. There the subject of this sketch passed the days of his boyhood. At the age of nine years, he lost both his parents by the terrible scourge of Asiatic cholera, which at that time swept over our land. After the death of his father, he lived awhile with his grandfather in the community, but early in life was left to fight life's battle alone. Being thus early left an orphan, his educational advantages were limited; in fact, when he became old enough to realize his need and to thirst for knowledge, his education was confined to the very first rudiments. With this groundwork, unaided, he acquired a fair practical education and some knowledge of the classics. In his twentieth year he was licensed as a preacher in the Methodist Church, and in the fall of 1845, entered regularly into the work of an itinerant minister in the Memphis annual conference. The first ten years of his ministerial life were spent in the Kentucky Purchase. He filled every pastoral charge except two in this part of the State, including the city of Paducah, and was two years presiding elder of the Paducah District, and in this capacity exercised a supervision over the work of his denomination in the entire Kentucky Purchase. He was married, in 1852, to Miss Mary C. Brooks, of Henry County, Tenn., and followed the career of an itinerant minister throughout west Tennessee and north Mississippi, until 1878, when he returned to the Purchase as presiding elder of the Paducah District. He is at this writing (1884) pastor of the Locust Street Methodist Church, Paducah, in the erection of which he was the prime mover. No one is more beloved by his people, and no one can exercise a greater influence over them than he. Rev. Mr. Leigh is the father of six children, five sons and one daughter. His eldest son, Robert W. Leigh, is the editor of the Morrilton (Arkansas) Headlight. The firm of Leigh Bros., Charles Q. C., Edward O., Oliver P. and Clinton B. Leigh, editors and publishers of the Paducah daily and weekly Standard, was established in March, 1881, by two of the present firm as a job printing office. Their place of business was located in a third-story room on Broadway and was a very small affair. Their business grew, until now they are located in a house built especially for them in the business center of the city. They are young men of energy, industry and perseverance. The Standard, established in April, 1884, ranks as one of the leading papers of the district.

GEORGE D. LINNING of the well-known firm of Linning & Jackson, Paducah, was born in South Carolina, in 1837, to Dr. Thomas and Sarah B. Linning. George D. received a liberal education in the "Frank Minor School," of Albemarle County, Va., and at an early age went to Philadelphia, Penn., and there served an apprenticeship to the trade of machinist in the locomotive works of Richard Norris & Son. After completing his trade he became an engineer in the United States naval service, where he served from 1858 to 1861. He then espoused the cause of the Southern Confederacy, and entered at once upon a term of service in the Confederate Navy. He remained in this service until the close of the civil war, after which he accepted the position of master mechanic of the machine shops of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. He remained in this position for three years, soon after the termination of which he removed to Paducah, Ky., and became a leading factor in the establishing of the Paducah Industrial Iron Works, now owned and operated by himself and J. S. Jackson. Mr. Linning is a thorough business man; a cultured gentleman of that kind, whose citizenship adds materially to the benefit of the business as well as the social status of any community. He is a worthy member of the Episcopal Church, K. of H. and A. O. U. W. His estimable wife, to whom he was married in Mobile, Ala., in 1873, was a Miss Kate Austill.

ENOCH E. LYNN is a son of Joseph and Marinda (Foley) Lynn, natives respectively of Tennessee and Kentucky. The father was a farmer in early life. He served in the Mexican and also in the late civil war. During the latter service, he was a member of the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry (Federal). He is at present a mail agent on the Ohio River. Four of the nine children born to the parents of our subject are now living: Martha, Angie, Missouri, and Enoch E. The last named was born in Massac County, Ill., April 15, 1849. He came to this county some six years ago, and has given his time principally to farming and general trading. He married Miss Fannie Stephens, a daughter of Dr. Thomas Stephens. Five children have blessed this union, four of whom survive: Leata M., Edna E., Nellie B. and Florence.

JUDGE CHARLES S. MARSHALL, son of Thomas A. Marshall, and grandson of Humphrey Marshall, the author of "An Early History of Kentucky," was born in Paris, Ky., January 19, 1821. To those familiar with the eminent families of Kentucky, no words are necessary to show that this gentleman is well descended. When he was fifteen years old his father, an eminent lawyer, removed to Lexington, Ky., where our subject enjoyed the benefits of a thorough course of study in the old Transylvania University, thus acquiring a fine English education. He read law under his father and in 1840 entered the law department of the Transylvania University, from which he graduated in the spring of 1842. He then established a practice in Ballard County, where he remained until removing to Paducah in 1868, and where he became a recognized leader as an equity and criminal lawyer and an able jurist. In 1856 he was elected to the office of attorney general, of Ballard County, there became county judge and in 1862 was made circuit judge of the First Judicial District of Kentucky, filling this responsible position until 1867, when he resigned to accept the office of registrar in bankruptcy, for the First Congressional District of Kentucky. Judge Marshall came to Paducah, in 1868, since which time he has occupied the front rank in the bar of that city. Judge Marshall's political preferences are with the Republican party; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and an Ancient Odd Fellow. He was married in 1848, in Ballard County, to Miss Emily V., daughter of Jacob Corbett, and has a family of two sons and four daughters: Thomas C., now a lawyer in Montana; Jacob Marshall, an officer in the United States internal revenue department; Mrs. Mary E., wife of Hon. G. W. Reeves; Lucy, wife of Dr. W. W. Richmond, of Clinton, Ky.; Alice, widow of A. P. Hall, and Miss Kate Marshall, of Paducah. The family are members of the Paducah Christian Church.

BENJAMIN T. MARSHALL, Jr., physician, was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., September 27, 1842. His father, Benjamin T., Sr., is a native of the same county, and has always been engaged in farming. He came to McCracken County, in 1853, locating where he at present resides, four miles southeast of Woodville. His wife, Eliza (Isbell) Marshall, died November 11, 1870, leaving two children: Sarah A. (now the wife of Aaron Fuqua, a prominent farmer of this county), and Benjamin T., the subject of these lines. The latter was reared to farm work and acquired a good literary education at the Louisville Academy. At nineteen years of age he came to Woodville, and began the study of medicine under Dr. C. E. Haddox, now deceased, and after remaining with him two years, placed himself under the tuition of Dr. C. G. Rayster. He then attended the St. Louis Medical College, from which he was graduated March 4, 1865; a few years later he took an additional course of lectures at Nashville, Tenn. He occupies a high standing among the members of his profession, and has always enjoyed a large and constantly increasing practice among the people. He is a member of the K. of H. and the Masonic fraternity, and is devoted to the cause of temperance. He was united in marriage, January 28, 1879, to Miss Anna W. Dawson, of Logan County, Ky. This union has been blessed with four children: Thomas H., Mary E., Elizabeth and Lillie.

DR. DAVID A. MAXWELL was born in Caldwell County, Ky., November 30, 1825. His parents dying, he at an early age (in opposition to the wishes of his friends) for a short time worked at the cabinet trade, but soon abandoned it and entered Princeton College, after which he decided to study law and wrote for two years in the clerk's office of Trigg County, Ky., while there pursuing his legal studies. Having attained his majority, he turned his attention to the study of medicine, doing his preparatory reading in the office of Dr. Isaac Burnett, of Trigg County. In 1847 he removed to Paducah, where he continued his studies under Dr. H. L. Jones. He entered the University of Louisville in 1849, and graduated from that institution in 1851. He immediately began practice in Paducah, where he has since been engaged in an extensive and lucrative practice with the exception of four years of the civil war. In 1861 he entered the service of the Southern Confederacy, on the staff of General Tilghman, at Hopkinsville, Ky. The general being assigned to duty at Forts Donelson and Henry, Dr. Maxwell accompanied him and became chief surgeon of these posts until their surrender, when he was assigned to temporary duty at Corinth, Miss., remaining until after the battle of Shiloh. He was then transferred to post duty at Atlanta, Ga., continuing in the service until the close of the war, when he again resumed practice in Paducah in 1866. Since that date he has been in active practice, taking rank among the eminent physicians of the State. Dr. Maxwell is a member of the State Medical Society of Kentucky, was one of the originators and the first president of the Southwestern Medical Association and of the Paducah Medical Society.

MORRIS MAXON, McCracken County, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., April 15, 1831. His father, Jesse Maxon, a Pennsylvanian by birth, was a son of one of the original settlers on the Red Stone Creek. He was the owner of a grist-mill in Pittsburgh, prior to which he had operated a woolen mill at Wellsburg, W. Va. In 1850, he moved to Metropolis, Ill., where he farmed until his death, which occurred four years after coming West. His wife was Jane Nangle, of Washington County, Penn. When a boy, subject worked in his father's mills, attended school, securing a good business education. He then worked as a jouneyman two years in Pittsburgh mills, when he came West and was similarly engaged in Evansville and Booneville, Ind., for several years. He next came to Paducah, and after remaining there three years moved to Metropolis, Ill., where, under the firm name of Brown & Maxon, the "Metropolitan Mills" were erected and operated by them four years. Mr. Maxon then came to McCracken County and built his present mill, known as Maxon's Mill. It is located on a tract of 300 acres of land, besides which Mr. Maxon has a farm of 326 acres of fine improved land, but a few miles from Paducah. The mill does an extensive business, requiring, in common with his other business interests, the investments of a large amount of capital. Mr. Maxon married, in 1864, Miss Sallie Kennedy, of Massac County, Ill. The union has given four children: Orville, Stephen Wayne (deceased), Jesse and Daisy. Mr. Maxon is a member of the K. T., of Paducah, and various other secret and benevolent associations and is active in his support of the cause of temperance.

VOLNEY A. McCUTCHEN descends from Scotch-Irish ancestors, and is a son of William and Esther McCutchen, nee Kennedy. The father was born in Tennessee, though of Virginia parentage. He settled in Logan County, Ky., in the latter part of the last century, when a mere boy. There he married, lived to a ripe old age, and there died, near the town of South Union, about 1874. His wife, Esther Kennedy, a native of North Carolina, died several years prior. They had a family of six children, Volney A. being the third; two died in early life. Volney A. was born in Logan County, December 9, 1826, and there grew to years of maturity, meantime receiving a common English education at Bowling Green, after which he graduated at the Danville College. He devoted his attention to the pursuits of agriculture, first in Christian County, removing thence to Ballard County. In 1864 he enlisted in the Confederate Army under the command of Gen. Forrest, and July, 1864, lost his left arm in the battle of Harrisburg. On his return home he engaged in mercantile pursuits, first in Hickman, Ky., removing thence to Paducah in 1870, where, soon after, he established a tobacco stemmery and has since operated extensively in the tobacco market. Mr. McCutchen was married in 1850, in Todd County, Ky., to Miss Elizabeth H. Mason. Their children are: William T., Bell (wife of C. F. Sugg, of Alabama), Mallie and Lee. Subject is a member of the Baptist Church and a Knight Templar in the Masonic fraternity.

W. M'FADDEN, Paducah, merchant tailor, No. 16 Broadway.

JAMES H. MILES was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., January 8, 1836. His father, Samuel A. Miles, is yet living in this county at the advanced age of eighty-four years. He is a Virginian by birth, but was removed to Tennessee in his youth, locating in Montgomery County. He has always been a farmer. He removed to Christian County, this State, and about 1850, to this county, locating on the place upon which he now resides. His wife, formerly Rebecca Cathran, is a native of Tennessee. Our subject was the eldest of eight children, was reared on a farm, and afterward worked his father's farm on shares. After his marriage, which occurred October 1, 1855, he purchased a farm in Ballard County, Ky., on which he resided for sixteen years. His wife, formerly Miss Louisa E. Quishenberry, is a native of this county. In 1871 Mr. Miles removed to his present farm of 140 acres in this county, on which he erected a pleasant residence, and made many substantial improvements. His success in life has been due to his own efforts, which, though interfered with by service in the army, and by many other embarrassments, have been sufficient to gain him a home and comfortable surroundings in life. During his war service he was a member of Company E, Seventh Kentucky Cavalry (Confederate), in which he enlisted in 1863. In September of that year he was taken prisoner at Swallow Bluff, on the Tennessee River, and was held at Fort Delaware for eighteen months, when he was paroled and returned home. Mr. and Mrs. Miles are parents of seven children: Jennie T. (wife of L. B. Holt), Henry L., Samuel L., Albert F., Mary E., Ettie and Ava.

WILLIAM H. MOORE, tobacconist at

No. 126 Broadway, Paducah, was born in 1859, in Nashville, Tenn. He is the sixth child of a family of seven born to J. G. and Mary Moore, nee Hiter, both of whom are deceased. His father was born in Ireland and his mother was a native of Tennessee. William H. was reared in his native city, where he learned the business of tobacconist, and he followed it until 1882, when he came to Paducah and established a cigar manufactory, associated with Mr. Rogers. They do an extensive wholesale and retail business and are among the substantial business men of the city, and employ several skilled workmen in their factory.

HON. THOMAS E. MOSS, lawyer and statesman, Paducah, Ky., was born in Greensburg, Green Co., Ky., on the 14th day of March, 1840. He was reared principally in Hickman County, received his preparatory education in the Columbia College, and completed it in a private school in Hickman County. Having decided on the profession of law he, in 1857, entered the office of Bigger & Thompson at Paducah, where he pursued his studies until the early part of 1859, when he entered the law department of the University at Louisville, Ky., from which he graduated in the same year. He then located at Paducah for practice, but soon after became a member of the Second Kentucky Regiment, Confederate States Army, and as a private took the field. Soon after, at Camp Boone, he was made sergeant-major of his regiment, a position he filled until promoted to the office of adjutant, which promotion was granted in recognition of his gallantry in the battle at Fort Donelson. In this battle he was made a prisoner of war, and held as such until the general exchange, six months later. At the battle of Murfreesboro, while leading his command, Gen. Moss was severely wounded and again made a prisoner, and after being held for short periods in minor prisons was conveyed to Fort Delaware; later while being transferred from this to a place of greater security, he made a bold and daring escape, though at the time unable to walk without the aid of his crutches. He afterward rejoined his command, and at Hartsville, Tenn., received the surrender of Col. Moore. At the close of the war he returned to Paducah to engage in the practice of his profession and to find that his choice law library had, while in transit to the home of his mother, been intercepted at Cairo, and disposed of as best suited the unscrupulous hands into which it had fallen. He first associated with J. M. Bigger, and at once secured a handsome practice. He continued a member of the firm of Bigger & Moss, until 1873, when he withdrew to make the canvass for the office of attorney general of Kentucky, to which he was elected in 1875, filling this position with credit for four years. In 1869, he was elected to the lower house of the legislature, serving the two following sessions. He is now devoting himself closely to the practice of his profession, and stands in the front rank of the Kentucky bar. Mr. Moss is a Past Eminent Commander of the Paducah Commandery, No. 11, K. T. He was married in Covington, Ky., February 28, 1871, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Jesse D. Bright. Their children are: Mary Josephine, born in Covington; Jesse Bright, born in Paducah; Thomas E., born in Frankfort; and Maggie S., who was also born in Frankfort and died in infancy.

BENNETT V. MOSS is a native of Weakley County, Tenn., and was born in December, 1827. His father, Bennett Moss, was of North Carolina birth, and located in Tennessee in 1826. He was a farmer and was the first man that made a hogshead of tobacco in Weakley County; he died in that county in 1864. He married a Miss Nancy Vaughn, an excellent lady, and a devoted member of the Methodist Church. Our subject was reared to farm work and has followed that pursuit. He farmed with his father several years in Tennessee, and afterward did overseeing for seven years. He went to Missouri, but returned to Tennessee in six months, when a season of sickness absorbed all the earnings he had been able to save. He finally purchased more land on credit, but after clearing it lost it all by being unable to make the final payment. He removed to the upper Tennessee, and for six years was engaged in farming in Montgomery County, after which he went to Christian County, Ky,, residing there a similar period of time. He next moved to Ballard County, and after three years came to his present place of 214 acres in 1879. He is an industrious, successful farmer, and made his property by days' work. In 1856, he married Elizabeth Williams of Weakley County, Tenn.; nine children are living of this union. Early in life Mr. Moss was addicted to drink, but is now a radical temperance advocate.

MONROE NANCE, undertaker at No. 304 Broadway, Paducah, was born in 1835, in Georgia. His parents, Clement and Malvina (Ledbetter) Nance, removed to Kentucky, in 1849, settling in Marshall County. Monroe there attained his manhood, and in 1857 went to Logan County, Ky., where he labored as a house carpenter. In 1859 in Franklin, Simpson Co., Ky., he married Miss Clio Grubb, a native of Kentucky. They have been blessed with ten children. They came to Paducah in 1868, and since 1875 Mr. Nance has been in the undertaking business; now doing a business second to none of the kind in western Kentucky. Mr. Nance is the present coroner of McCracken County, is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Paducah Commandery, K. of T., I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. and K. of H.

ALEXANDER A. NELSON was born in 1818, in Virginia, and in 1827, with his parents, Thomas and Elizabeth Nelson, removed to Kentucky. His parents then settled near Maysville, where they remained about ten years, removing thence to McCracken County, in 1837. They engaged in farming near Old Wilmington, where the family remained until 1855, and where Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson died in 1854. The family then located in Marshall County, where it has been long and favorably known, and where Thomas Nelson died in 1863. Alexander A. Nelson is the eldest of a family of six children, but two of whom are now living. He was first married in 1840, in Litchfield, Ky., to Miss Elizabeth Goldsberry, who died in 1854, in McCracken County, leaving two children: Elizabeth and Martin V., the latter now of Louisville, Ky. After the death of his wife, Mr. Nelson removed to Marshall County, where for many years he was intimately identified with the public interests of that county. He served the people of the county for ten years as jailer; six years as sheriff, and three years as master commissioner, resigning the latter office after he removed to Paducah, in 1882. He was twice married in Marshall County, first to Miss Minerva Warner, who bore him six children, viz.: Mary, Thomas, David, Minerva, Nelson and an infant that died unnamed. His present wife, to whom he was married in 1863, was Lucinda N. Cutchens. Their union has resulted in the birth of six children, as follows: Sallie, Irene, Minnie, Jack, Leroy and an unnamed infant. Mr. Nelson is now one of the substantial business men of Paducah, located on the corner of Locust and Clark Streets, and doing an extensive business in groceries and provisions, besides keeping a wagon-yard and feed stable.

WILLIAM P. NICHOLS was born in Caldwell County, Ky., on the 6th day of March, 1829. He is a son of Jesse and Elizabeth Nichols, and was reared on his father's farm, in his native county, where he had only the advantages of a common school education. At the age of twenty-one, he came to McCracken County, and engaged in the pursuits of agriculture, which he followed until 1878. He was elected to the office of county surveyor, in 1868, filling this office acceptably for ten years, and until elected to the clerkship of McCracken County, in 1878, to which office he was re-elected in 1882. Mr. Nichols is a kind, attentive officer of the county, a gentleman of refined sensibilities, and enjoys the confidence of a large circle of acquaintances. He has been twice married first in 1854, to Miss Sarah Rice, who died in 1870, and second to Mrs. Sallie Hall, widow of James M. Hall and daughter of J. Davis, of Livingston County, Ky. She died in October, 1881. There are two children result of the former marriage: Mary C., wife of Felix G. Rudolph, and William B. Nichols.

CHARLES NIEHAUS, cigar manufacturer and wholesale and retail tobacconist, at No. 26 Broadway, Paducah, was born in Evansville, Ind., in 1851. His parents, John H. and Catherine Niehaus, were born in Germany, but came in early life to the United States, and were married in Pittsburgh, Penn., where they resided for many years, and then removed to Evansville, Ind. John H. Niehaus died in Evansville, in 1880, and his widow is still a resident of that city. Charles there learned the trade of house carpenter, which however he abandoned for more congenial pursuits. In 1878, he removed from California to Paducah, Ky., where he engaged with his brother, John Niehaus, in the manufacture of cigars. After the death of his brother in October, 1880, Charles became his successor, and is the proprietor, employing a large force of efficient workmen. Mr. Niehaus is a member of the Paducah Commandery, No. 11, K. T., I. O. O. F., and K. of H. He was married in 1882, to Mrs. Emma Niehaus, in Paducah.

COL. JOHN C. NOBLE is the son of Elijah Noble, who was of Celtic descent, and is a lineal descendant of that Col. Noble, who was one of the officers of Cromwell's "Ironsides Regiment," and one of the commission who sat in judgment upon Charles I., and voted for his death. In early life Elijah Noble was a prominent merchant of Lexington, Ky., and owned some half dozen stores at one time in central Kentucky. He was seriously crippled financially by the second war with Great Britain, from which shock he never recovered. John C. Noble was born in Lexington, December 2, 1815, and was educated in the schools of his native county, Fayette, and native city, Lexington. He acquired no inconsiderable knowledge of Latin and the higher branches of education from Charles O'Hara, a teacher in the grammar school of Transylvania University. Having served an apprenticeship at the printing business, he resumed his literary studies, and became a practically posted literary man and a vigorous writer. He subsequently studied law under Chancellor Caleb Logan, of Louisville, but never practiced his profession. His ardent zeal for Democracy led him into political life as an editor, in which calling he has exerted a marked influence on Kentucky politics, having been connected with papers in various parts of the State. Twice he was a candidate for office; once for the legislature, from Louisville, in which race he reduced the large Whig majority to 200. During the war he was a candidate for the Confederate congress from the First District, but was defeated by the Hon. W. B. Machen. In 1861 he joined the Confederate service as a private; was appointed regimental quartermaster with the rank of captain, but was subsequently placed upon the staff of Gen. Abe Buford, with the rank of major. He is not a member of any church, but his family belong to the Episcopal Church. He rejoices in being a Jeffersonian Democrat, of the school of '98; is supposed to be one of the oldest editors of the State, a "Nestor of the Press," and is a man of strong impulses. His family residence is "Villa Calhoun," three miles south of Paducah.

JOHN O'BRIEN was born in the year 1831, in Ireland, and in childhood was brought by his parents, Patrick and Kate O'Brien, to the United States. The family settled in the State of Indiana, where John grew to maturity, and where his parents died. He came from Indiana to Paducah, where he still resides, in the year 1856. For several years he engaged as rectifier of spirits, later as street contractor, and is now numbered among the old settlers as well as one of the most honored citizens of Paducah. He is at present engaged in an extensive coal trade, with yards on Locust Street, between Broadway and Jefferson Streets. Mr. O'Brien was married in Paducah, in 1860, to Miss Kate Connor, of that city, their union being blessed with three sons and three daughters. The family are members of the Catholic Church, Mr. O'Brien being also a member of the Catholic Knights of America.

ANDREW J. OGILVIE was born in Graves County, this State, March 11, 1832, and is a son of Lemuel H. Ogilvie. Our subject was reared on the farm and, the educational advantages of that day being very meager, was able to secure but little schooling until twenty-four years of age, when he attended a good district school for sixteen months. He has devoted his life principally to farm pursuits, his present farm property, consisting of 136 acres, having been brought to its present high state of cultivation and improved condition by arduous toil. Mr. Ogilvie is one of the oldest members of the Masonic fraternity, in the country and has represented his lodge in the grand lodge several times. He is a member of the K. of H. and also of the U. W. In August, 1874, he was elected sheriff and served in that capacity four years, having been re-elected. During his term of office he took 130 convicts to State prison, and throughout his service was one of the most prompt and efficient officers in the people's employ. He was married February 16, 1858, to Jeanette F. C. Young of this county. They have eleven children living.

JOHN W. OGILVIE, McCracken County, was born in Williamson County, Tenn., eleven miles south of Nashville, December 28, 1825. His parents, Lemuel H. and Martha (Winstead) Ogilvie, were natives respectively of North Carolina and Tennessee. His father was a farmer; came to the Purchase in 1830, and four years later to McCracken County, and died March 12, 1857. His mother had been first married to Mr. Abram Moses, by whom she had two children, one of whom, Benjamin F., is now living. Her marriage with Mr. Ogilvie gave nine children, all of whom survive: James B., John W., Martha H., Samuel, Andrew J., Maria L., Napoleon J., William H. and Elijah W. Napoleon J. served in the Confederate Army one year. The grandfather of our subject, Kimbrow T. Ogilvie, was a Revolutionary soldier. He was from North Carolina, and was descended from old Scotch-Irish stock. John W., the subject of this notice, came to this country with his parents when he was but a few years old. His father's circumstances denied the youth the benefits of an early schooling, and at nineteen years of age he could hardly read or spell. He hired out to a farmer, Dr. Robert Fletcher, for seventeen months, at $5 a month. Dr. Fletcher, taking a liking to the boy, bought him a spelling book and sent him to school, and there he learned the rudiments of a practical education. After this Mr. Ogilvie hired out as a fireman on a steamboat, running from Cincinnati to New Orleans. At the age of twenty-three he married Miss Margaret A. Griffeth, a daughter of John Griffeth, and a niece of Dr. Boland, noted as the man who captured the great murderer, Pennington, in Texas. This union gave six children, three of whom are living:

William H., Lemuel B. and John W. After his marriage Mr. Ogilvie was repeatedly elected to various county offices, serving in those of magistrate and deputy sheriff. In 1865, he was elected to the State legislature over two competitors, and during his term introduced and was the author of various important measures. He was re-elected in 1867, and again in 1871, to the same position, the last time with no opposition. At the expiration of his service, he returned home and devoted his time to farming, and for four years was the inspector of tobacco at Paducah. In 1879 he was defeated for the State senate by a few votes, but in 1883 carried the three counties composing his senatorial district, by over 700 majority. During his long official service he has been chairman of many important legislative committees, and has wielded a great influence in behalf of all measures having in view the good of the general masses. Mr. Ogilvie came to his present residence about seven years ago. His farm consists of 200 acres. He has property, also, elsewhere in the county and in Tennessee. His present wife was Miss Carrie Bell, a daughter of David Bell, and a cousin of John Bell, the famous statesman of Tennessee. This union has been blessed with two children: David B. and Alpheus H. Mr. Ogilvie has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1855, and also belongs to the K. of H. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Church South.

STOKELY T. PAYNE, physician, was born March 20, 1818, in Culpepper County, Va. His father, William Payne, was a native of North Carolina, and was removed to Virginia by his parents in his youth. His wife, formerly Ava Garnett, was of Virginia birth. After their marriage, they removed to Culpeper County, Va., where their family of twelve children was born, only three of whom are living. They then moved to Orange County, Va., and after a residence there of ten years moved in 1830, to Williamson County, Tenn., where the father engaged in farm pursuits and there died, his wife surviving him until January, 1844. Previous to his death, he had made a trip to Kentucky, and had purchased 1,000 acres of land in Hickman County, on which he had intended to move, but his death occurred shortly afterward. The subject of these lines was reared by his father to farm work, and came with him to Tennessee, when twelve years old, but with an elder brother went shortly after to Washington County, Mo., where he remained four years. He returned to Tennessee and managed the home farm for his mother and attended, and later taught a school. At twenty years of age, he went to Williamson County, and worked eighteen months at the tanner's trade, when he removed to Mississippi, and served as deputy circuit clerk in Choctaw County one year. Returning to Williamson County, Tenn., he read medicine eighteen months under the instruction of Dr. W. Webb, after which he attended lectures at Louisville, Ky. After a practice of three years in Tennessee and Indiana, he attended the Louisville University, graduating from the same in 1849. He thereafter practiced in Tennessee and seven years in Christian County, this State, and in 1858 came to McCracken County and located upon a tract of timber land upon which his present fine residence is located. The doctor is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is devoting much time to writing and lecturing in favor of prohibition measures. In his professional and social relations he occupies an enviable position, and his influence for good in the community is manifest. He has been married three times; his first two wives, Catherine F. and Sallie N., were daughters of the Rev. James H. Overstreet, of Louisville. His last wife was formerly a Miss Lizzie C. Ratcliffe, of this county. By his first wife there are five children now living: Minnie, wife of Henry C. Fortson; William L.; James B., physician, now residing in Lovelaceville, this county; Stokely and Ava L.

LORENZO A. PHELPS was born in Natchez, Miss., June 11, 1840. His father, Clark L. Phelps, now a resident of Cairo, Ill., was born in 1816, in Hartford, Conn., where he was reared. He removed to Natchez, Miss., in early manhood, and there married Miss Pascalena Paul. He was for thirty years the captain and owner of a steamboat, plying on the upper Mississippi and its tributaries. The maternal grandfather of L. A. Phelps, was Paul Pascalile, who in early life was a Corsican soldier; he served as a member of Napoleon's body guard, and was a blood relation of that noted military leader. When Napoleon was finally subdued, Paul Pascalile found it necessary to flee from his native country, France, and he accordingly came to the United States, settling in Natchez, where he dropped the name of Pascalile and assumed the name of Paul, by which the family is still known. He married a lady of Irish ancestry. Pascalena, the mother of our subject, was born in Natchez, in 1819; L. A. Phelps is the eldest of a family of seven children, and was chiefly reared in Muscatine, Iowa, where the family resided for many years, and where his mother died in 1880. Several years of his earlier manhood were spent on the river, as pilot of his father's steamboat and other vessels, but in 1871 he began his present business in Muscatine, Iowa, from whence he moved to Cairo, Ill., thence to Paducah, Ky., in 1883. Though his residence in the last named place has been brief, he has established an enviable reputation as a skillful artist and an amiable gentleman. His photographic establishments are becoming some of the attractions of the city. He was married in Muscatine, Iowa, in 1874, to Miss Lillian S. Perkins, daughter of Capt. T. P. Perkins, who was a well-known steamboat owner. She was born in St. Louis, in 1855, and is related to both Gen. William T. Sherman and the Confederate general, Robert E. Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps have a family of four children, viz.: Lillian A., Frederick L., Ada P. and Frank S. Phelps.

DR. WILLIAM H. PITCHER, dental surgeon of Paducah, was born in Trenton, N. J., in 1852. He is the second of a family of eight children, of William F. Pitcher and Jemima Paulison, now of Springfield, Mo. William H. was reared in his native city, and there graduated from the model school; removed with his family to Cairo, Ill., in 1869, which place he made his home until he entered on his profession. In 1877 he entered the Missouri Dental College, graduating with the degree of D. D. S., in February 1878. Dr. Pitcher has had several years' practical experience in his profession, in which he has proven his ability. He removed from Nashville, Ill., to Paducah, Ky., in 1882, and is now engaged in a successful practice in the latter city. He was married in 1876 to Miss Octavia P. Reese, daughter of Hon. W. Reese, late mayor of Selma, Ala., and ex-member of the Alabama legislature. Their union has been blessed with one child, Ethel Pitcher.

CHARLES M. PLEASANTS, dealer in leaf tobacco, Paducah, is a native of Powhatan County, Va., and was born in 1844. His parents, Thomas N. Pleasants and Matilda A. Hughes, were both natives of Virginia. The father died when Charles M. was a mere boy; the mother is now a resident of Paducah. Charles M. grew to manhood in his native county, and in 1861 espoused the cause of the South, and became a member of the First Virginia battalion, of the Powhatan artillery, sharing the active service of that command through the entire war, participating in many of the most fiercely contested battles of the war, including Fredericksburg, Wilderness, Gettysburg, Winchester and the Seven Pines. At the close of the war he engaged in farming and dealing in tobacco, in his native county, for a few years, after which he gave up the farm and turned his attention exclusively to the tobacco market. He came to Paducah from Virginia in 1874.

JOHN L. POWELL was born July 7, 1832, in Shelby County, Ky. His parents, John and Dorcas (Marshall) Powell, were natives of Kentucky and followed the pursuits of agriculture. John L. was thus reared under the influences of farm life, meantime receiving a common English education. When eighteen years old he found that his health disqualified him for farm life, and set about obtaining a more complete and practical education; he therefore took an academic course, making a specialty of book-keeping. After teaching school a short time, he became a salesman in a mercantile house in his native county, and thus laid the foundation of his business career. He stepped from the position of salesman in a Louisville queensware house, to the proprietorship of a small business in Henry County, Ky., doing a fair amount of business for two years; but desiring a location for a more extensive trade, he removed to Smithland, Ky., about 1857. He remained in the latter place until 1864, when he located in Paducah. He there engaged in the dry goods trade for two years; dealing also in cotton, and in 1869 established his present business. He does a wholesale and retail business in books, stationery and musical instruments, and has the most extensive house of the kind in the city. Mr. Powell is a member of the Methodist Church, a member of the K. of H., being Past Grand Dictator of the State of Kentucky, and has done valuable service in his part of the State as an instituting officer. He is also a member of the order of the United Order Golden Cross and I. O. O. F. Mr. Powell was married in 1852, in Shelby County, Ky., to Miss Naomi N., daughter of Fielding Neal. They have two daughters: Mattie E. and Mamie A. Powell.

JOHN R. PURYEAR. This gentleman, who is a prominent representative of a numerous family in Kentucky, is a son of Thomas J. Puryear, and was born October 21, 1837, in Graves County, Ky. His father was a native of Virginia, and married Miss Perlina M. Bressie, a native of Tennessee; they settled in Graves County in 1836. Thomas J. Puryear was a merchant, farmer and trader or dealer in tobacco, and died in Graves County September 13, 1873; his wife is still living and a resident of Arlington, Ballard Co., Ky. John R. Puryear is the eldest of a family of ten children. He was reared on his father's farm, educated in the common schools and the Mayfield Academy, and in 1859 taught school in Graves County. During the year 1860 he was similarly employed in Texas, and on returning was appointed a postal clerk on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad, which position he held two years. In 1863 Mr. Puryear became associated in the wholesale drug business as a member of the firm of Kidd, Bradshaw & Co., which firm was dissolved by the death of Dr. W. H. Kidd, in October 1864. Mr. Puryear continued the business with other parties until burned out in 1865. He then turned his attention to completing his law study, which he had begun in early life. He studied under Judge C. S. Marshall, was admitted to the practice in 1868, and is now a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States. On January 13, 1869, he was appointed to the office of clerk of the United States circuit court, Sixth Circuit, and district of Kentucky, and clerk of the United States district court for the district of Kentucky, which duties he is still discharging with credit to himself and acceptance to the people. In 1873, in connection with E. W. Bagby, he established a weekly Republican newspaper entitled the Paducah Journal, which had an existence of eighteen months, when, though ably edited, it was discontinued. Mr. Puryear is one of a few Republicans of Paducah who wields more than a local influence. In 1876 he was a delegate from the First Congressional District of Kentucky to the National Republican Convention at Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1880 he represented the same district as a delegate to the National Convention at Chicago, and was there elected one of the assistant secretaries of that body. At the Republican State Convention held at Lexington, Ky., in 1883, his friends presented his name as a candidate for the office of state auditor, but he was defeated by a small majority in favor of Leroy W. Hawthorn. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and of the K. of. H., and for several years has been a deacon in the Baptist Church. He was married in Paducah in 1868, to Miss Eliza M. Kidd, daughter of Dr. W. H. Kidd. Their children are Courtie, Letha, Odie, Roscoe, Kidd and Carl Puryear.

QUINTUS Q. QUIGLEY is a lawyer of decided ability, and stands at the head, not only of the Paducah bar, but also of the bar of western Kentucky. Mr. Quigley was born in 1828, in Paris, Tenn., and is a son of James B. Quigley and Martha (Ogburn) Quigley. The father was a native of Pennsylvania, and the mother of Virginia. These parents settled in early life in Tennessee, but after a brief residence, removed to Hickman County, Ky., in 1828. James B. Quigley was of Irish parentage and in his boyhood days was deprived of the benefits of an education, having attended school but six weeks. He was reared, however, to habits of honest industry, and in early life learned the trade of tinner, at which he worked for some years, but later in life became a farmer, trader and general merchant. He was reared in the Catholic faith, but in mature life joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he proved a true light and in the faith of which he trustfully died in 1861. He was characterized for his strong will power, untiring business energy, and large benevolence, all of which were systematically directed. His death was felt by a large circle of friends, and especially by his church and the Masonic order, to both of which he was ardently attached. His wife, a remarkable adaptation to him, survived him until January, 1884. They had a family of eight children, Quintus Q. being the second. He was educated at the Cumberland College, and began the study of law at the age of nineteen, under Judge J. W. Crockett. He was regularly admitted to practice in 1851, and at once opened an office in Paducah, where he is now one of the oldest and ablest lawyers. Mr. Quigley was married in Paducah, in 1853, to Miss Mary E. Husbands, daughter of Col. James B. Husbands, who is now, perhaps, the oldest pioneer of the Purchase. They have a family of five children, his second son, Isaac M. Quigley, being a member of the law firm of Quigley & Quigley. Mr. Quigley is an ardent admirer of the beauties of nature, and that he may gratify this commendable trait, he has for several years lived in his quiet country home, near Paducah, with his family, to whom he is devotedly attached. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, and of the Masonic order; he is a Democrat, but has avoided public life.

JAMES M. RAGSDALE is a native of Pittsylvania County, Va. He was born August 15, 1839, and is a son of the Rev. Thomas M. Ragsdale, a Methodist preacher. The father was born in North Carolina, where he was reared, educated and there married to Miss Nancy W. Baldwin, a native of the same State. After residing in Virginia and later years in North Carolina, he came to Calloway County, Ky., in 1843, and being licensed to preach, had charge of a local congregation until 1849, when he removed to Henry County, Tenn., remaining there about six years, during which time he gained a wide spread reputation as a powerful and effective speaker. He possessed a remarkably strong voice, which it is said has been heard a distance of two miles while engaged in prayer. He was an excellent singer, and was noted for his great zeal and consistent Christian course in life. For thirty years he labored in this State, Illinois and Tennessee, having charge at different times of many and various circuits. In 1861, he was elected chaplain of the Seventh Kentucky Infantry (Confederate), but after the engagement at Shiloh resigned and returned home. He died January 24, 1882, after an illness of six days, brought on by a chill contracted while conducting service. He was three times married, his first wife having died in 1863. She bore him fourteen children, eight of whom are living. There were seven children by his second wife, Sarah Harper. She died in 1879. His third wife, Sophia M. Ross, is yet living in the county. At eighteen years of age, our subject began the management of the home farm, being allowed a share of the crops, to enable him to attend school. In 1861, at the breaking out of the war, he entered the Seventh Kentucky Infantry, Company F, and served with the same until the spring of 1864. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg, Nashville, etc., and after the latter battle returned to McCracken County. He hired out to farm work, and with the money earned continued his school studies, and in 1865 taught in the public schools for several months. November 24, 1866, he was married to Miss Georgia A. Jones, of this county. After his marriage he engaged in farming and in teaching, and has since devoted his time to these occupations. He has two farms of 124 and 151 acres respectively, under a good state of cultivation. Mr. Ragsdale is a member of the Masonic order, and of the Methodist Church South. Mr. and Mrs. Ragsdale have four children: Oney, Minnie, Sallie I. and Deany A.

LAWRENCE P. RASOR, dealer in fruits and confectionery, at No. 211 Broadway, Paducah, is a native of that city, and was born March 26, 1840. His father, George F. Rasor, was a native of Kentucky, and was married in Russellville, Logan Co., Ky., to Miss Julia A. Graven, who was born in Culpeper County, Va. They removed to Paducah in 1836, where they spent the remainder of their lives, she dying in 1864, and he in March, 1884. Lawrence P. is the fourth of seven children of these parents. He has been a resident of Paducah since childhood. In early life he learned engineering, and for about seventeen years followed the river as a steamboat engineer, and also served the city of Paducah for three years as an engineer of the fire department. In 1876, in the city of Paducah, he was married to Miss Cornelia Davis, a native of Memphis, Tenn. Their children are Lawrence and Florence Rasor. Mr. Rasor is a worthy member of the Knights of Honor.

RAYBURN FAMILY. The first representative of this family in the United States, so far as is known, was John Rayburn, Sr., who married a Miss MacNatt, and resided in the State of Maryland. They had but one child when John Rayburn died. The child, a son, was also named John, and in his early life became a Baptist minister; he married in what is now Stewart County, Tenn., from which he removed to Calloway County, Ky., about 1827. That county was then almost wholly uninhabited, and Rev. John Rayburn was doubtless the first minister to locate within its borders. He lived but two years after settling there, and his remains are there buried. He had four children, named Levi, Harrison, Nancy Ann and Eliza. Levi, the eldest of these, was born February 22, 1819, in what is now Trigg County, Ky., and married a Miss Nancy Walden, who died in Calloway County, having borne him three children, viz.: John, Alfred and Lafayette Rayburn, the latter being a resident of Paducah and the only one now living. Alfred, the second one, was a member of Company D, of the Fifty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry; was captured at the battle of Guntown, Miss., and was shot by a Confederate soldier while a prisoner. After the death of his wife, Levi Rayburn removed to Tennessee, and there married Elizabeth, widow of Nathan Skinner, which union resulted in the birth of five children, viz.: Augusta, wife of W. Bass; Samuel, Louie, Nathan S. and Eliza Rayburn. Levi Rayburn died in Tennessee in 1873 and his family are now residents of Paducah, Ky.

HON. CHARLES REED, mayor of Paducah, and a native of that city, was born November 4, 1842. He is a son of W. H. Reed, formerly a contractor, and a well-known and highly respected citizen of Paducah. Charles Reed, in early life, had the advantages of the city schools of Paducah, but at the age of twelve years was compelled to quit school and labor for his sustenance. He became an apprentice to the tobacco trade, at which he occupied his time until the beginning of the civil war, when, though only a boy, he entered the Confederate Army, serving in many of the greater battles of that struggle, including the battles of Shiloh, Corinth and Harrisburg. He was first under the command of Gen. Lloyd Tilghman, as a member of the Third Kentucky Regiment, Breckinridge's division, but later was with Gen. Forrest in all of his noted raids through Kentucky and Tennessee. The close of the war found Mr. Reed without financial means, but his native energy, then, as now, predominated over circumstances and he soon became associated with John Segenfelter, in the hotel business, with whom he opened the European Hotel of Paducah. This effort was successful, and in 1876 he purchased a half interest in the Richmond House, and is now proprietor of that well-known institution. Prior to his connection with this house and in 1872, he became connected with Messrs. Hobbs and Morton, in the management of an extensive woolen manufactory, the firm being known as Hobbs, Morton & Reed. Mr. Reed remained a member of this firm for three years, when he retired. In political preferences, Mr. Reed is a Democrat, and has been frequently elected to a seat in the city council. In March, 1881, he was elected to the office of mayor of the city of Paducah, and his popularity as an executive was manifested in his re-election to the same office in March 1883, and elected to third term March, 1885. Mr. Reed is a gentleman of prepossessing appearance, kind and agreeable to all and noted for his public spirit in matters pertaining to the general good.

JUDGE WILLIAM RANDOLPH REID was born April 14, 1848, in Davidson County, N. C. He is the second son of the late John B. Reid who removed to Kentucky in 1853, and opened Reidland farm in McCracken County, six miles southeast of Paducah, where he resided a respected and honored citizen until his death in 1860, leaving five children: Joseph L., who died in Graves County, in 1883; William Randolph, the subject of this sketch; Thomas J., John Milton and Charlotte H., wife of James P. Brooks, the last three continuing to reside at Reidland. Early in life Randolph began to develop great fondness for books of substantial character, which resulted in his acquiring a liberal and classical education. Having thoroughly mastered the common school branches, he entered the college at Mayfield, Ky., in 1866, and Andrew College at Trenton, Tenn., in 1869, completing the course of study in 1872. While a college student he stood at the head of his classes, carrying a double course of Greek and Latin, and mastered the mathematical course without ever asking assistance from any one. In January, 1872, he became a law student in the office of Gen. John B. Huston, of Lexington, Ky., and soon thereafter entered the law department of Kentucky University, where he again distinguished himself by hard study doubling the law course and graduating with high honors in February, 1873. His health being greatly impaired and his patrimonial estate exhausted by six years of college life, he returned home to prosecute his legal studies, and having his name enrolled as a member of the Paducah bar April 11, 1873, he began the practice of his chosen profession with an energy and industry characteristic of his former life. In July, 1873, he accepted the office of common school commissioner of McCracken County, a position he filled acceptably for three years, and in 1877, after the death of Judge Morrow, he was commissioned by Gov. McCreary to the office of county judge, which he held until his successor was elected and qualified. With these exceptions Judge Reid has never been an applicant for office, but has devoted himself exclusively to his profession and his own private affairs. In 1875 he entered into a law co-partnership with Judge J. M. Bigger, which connection still exists, forming one of the ablest law firms in western Kentucky. Although Judge Reid is yet a young man he is regarded by the profession as one of the ablest members of the Paducah bar, commanding the respect of the bench and bar He is dignified in person, firm in character, chaste in language, courteous to all, possesses an ample fortune and is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM HARRISON REEVES stands pre-eminent among the energetic citizens of Paducah. His parents removed from Halifax County, Va., and settled near Richmond, in Madison County, Ky., in the early part of the present century, and there William H. was born, in 1814. George Reeves, his father, was a soldier under Gen. Harrison in the war of 1812, and in consequence of his admiration for his veteran commander, gave the name to his son. William H. was left an orphan when a mere lad, and also dependent on his own efforts for sustenance, which prevented his obtaining even a common school education. His first effort at self-support was a position on a keel-boat on the Green River. When eighteen years old he came to the Purchase and located in what is now

Ballard County. Having an elder brother in that vicinity, he made his home with him until the brother's death, which occurred a few years later. Here William H. engaged in the lumber traffic for a time, then operated a wood-yard for a period of six years, and then opened a small general store in the interior of Ballard County. After four years he sold this business, and in 1840 was made county constable, from which time he was for many years engaged in the official business of the county, either in the office of constable or sheriff. Though beginning life without means, he soon accumulated a handsome fortune, and gradually developed into one of the most substantial farmers and traders of western Kentucky. Mr. Reeves has ever been noted for his stern and unflinching integrity and fidelity to any public or private trust, and while he has been largely connected with the public weal of his section, he has been also intrusted with the adjustment of many private estates and with the guardianship of orphaned children. For many years he has been a member of the Masonic order and of the I. O. O. F. He was first married in Ballard County, in 1843, to Miss Penelope White, daughter of Rev. Willis White, now of Clinton, Ky. She died in February, 1879, leaving a family of seven children: Mary A., wife of Dr. Charles Hinkle, of Ballard County; George W., now of Montana; Susan J., wife of Hon. William J. Pucket; W. T. Reeves, a lawyer of Blandville; Martha, wife of W. W. Morris; Fannie B., wife of William O. Coffin, of Illinois, and Robert L. Reeves, of Paducah. Mr. Reeves was married to his present wife, Mrs. Fannie Marrs, of Paris, Tenn., in 1881. In 1880 Mr. Reeves retired from his farm to Paducah, and there effected a business connection with T. F. Terrell, under the firm name of Terrell & Reeves, and as such they are doing an extensive business in the tobacco trade.

ERNEST REHKOPF was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1838, and when fourteen years old came with his widowed mother (Louisa Rehkopf) and a brother and sister to the United States. They first located for a few months in Memphis, Tenn., removed thence to Iowa, where Ernest served his apprenticeship to the trade of saddler and harness maker. After completing his trade he worked as journeyman for some time, and in 1859 removed to Paducah, Ky. In 1861, having saved a few dollars, he made his first attempt at a business for himself, and opened a shop on a limited scale. His success was sure and rapid, and though but a score of years in business he is now numbered among the wealthy men of Paducah. He now operates an extensive manufactory of saddles, collars and harness, besides a tanyard, giving employment to about 100 workmen. In January, 1880, he met with severe loss, resulting from the burning of his establishment, but immediately rebuilt, completing his double three-story building in 1881. Mr. Rehkopf does a wholesale business, amounting annually to $150,000. He is a member of the Masonic order. He was married, in 1861, to Miss Annie Sick, and has a family of six children: Henry, Albert, Louisa, Annie, Dora and John Rehkopf.

WILLIAM H. RIEKE, dry goods merchant, of Paducah, Ky., is a native of Hanover, Germany, and was born in 1838. When he was about six years old his parents, Philip H. and Clara W. Rieke, immigrated to the United States, settling first in Cincinnati, Ohio, where they made a temporary residence, and then removed to Louisville, Ky. In the latter city William H. was reared and educated, and he there began the mercantile business, which he has prosecuted successfully ever since. In the winter of 1861–62 he came to the city of Paducah, and here, in connection with others, established a wholesale dry goods house. In 1867 he severed his connection as a member of this firm to enter the exclusively retail business in which he is now engaged and in which he is the pronounced leader. Mr. R. is a gentleman of rare business ability and social culture, and a citizen of whom the city of Paducah may justly feel proud. He is a member of the Paducah Commandery No. 11, K. T., K. of H. and an exemplary member of the Presbyterian Church. In 1866 Mr. Rieke married Miss Monima Smedley, a native of Kentucky. Their children are Frank H., William H., Jr., Monima, Carrie L. and Clara Rieke.

DR. THOMAS RIVERS was born in Christian County, Ky., in 1830, from whence his parents removed to Hickman County, while he was yet a child, and where his father, who was a physician, died in 1838. His mother then removed to Montgomery County, Tenn., and there Thomas grew to manhood. He studied medicine with Dr. Dabney, and in 1850 entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky.; later he became a student in the medical department of the University of New York, from which he graduated in 1853, and the same year opened an office and established a practice in Hickman, Fulton Co., Ky. In 1858 he removed to Arkansas, and there followed his profession until the war began. In 1862, he entered the Confederate Army as surgeon of the Thirty-first Tennessee Regiment, which position he retained through the entire war. Prior, however, to his connection with the Thirty-first Tennessee, he, in 1861, became assistant surgeon in a command of Missouri State Guards, under Col. Waugh. After the final surrender, Dr. Rivers located in Ballard County, and practiced medicine with success till March, 1882, when he removed to Paducah. He is a member of the Masonic order, of the Southwestern Medical Society and of the Paducah Medical Club. Dr. Rivers was married in Ballard County, Ky., in 1868, to Miss Sue Terrell, daughter of Horace Terrell. Their children are Horace T., Thomas, Edwin A., Jane D., Robert J. and John F. Rivers.

GEORGE W. ROBERTSON is a son of George W., Sr., and Martha Robertson. His father was a native of the State of Kentucky. His mother, though reared in Kentucky, was a native of North Carolina. These parents were among the pioneer settlers of Livingston County, Ky., where George W. Robertson, Jr., was born in 1836. He was reared on his father's farm until he attained the age of sixteen, when he began his mercantile life, first as a salesman in Smithland. Having a desire to visit the Western frontier, he went to California in 1853, where he spent two years. On his return he located in New Orleans, where he learned the art of photographing, which engaged his attention until 1876, the last eleven years of which time he operated in Paducah. In 1877, having abandoned the art, he formed a business connection with T. J. Atkins in the grocery trade. In 1882 he purchased the interest of Mr. Atkins, and is now devoting himself strictly to mercantile business. Mr. Robertson was marrried in Livingston County, Ky., in 1859, to Miss Anna M. Stonebreaker, and has a family of six children, viz.: Jefferson B., George H., Charles, Ida, Lulu and Mittie Robertson. The family residence is on Broadway, and the business house at No. 22 Market Street. Mr. Robertson is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of H.

GEORGE ROCK, a native of Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, removed to Paducah, Ky., in 1858. Mr. Rock was born in 1835, and is the second of three children born to John and Barbara Rock. His father died in the old country, in 1848, and the following year his mother, with the three children, Elizabeth, George and John, immigrated to the United States and located in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, where all, except the subject of this sketch, now live. In that city Mr. Rock served three years as an apprentice to the trade of shoemaking, to which he has since devoted his life with marked success. Until 1857 he labored as a journeyman in Louisville, Ky. He then opened a shop in the village of Lafayette, Christian County, where he remained until his removal to Paducah. As an honorable business man Mr. Rock has few superiors. From being the proprietor of a small custom shop, he has gradually developed into one of the wealthiest men in the business circles of Paducah. He does an extensive business, both wholesale and retail, and has a manufacturing department of no small magnitude and located at Nos. 210 and 212 Broadway. Mr. Rock is also a member of the Paducah Furniture Manufacturing Company, and has been a director of the German American National Bank since the organization of that institution. He is a member of the German Evangelical Church, Masonic order and Knights of Honor. He was married in Louisville, Ky., in 1856, to Miss Catherine Seigel, which union has been blessed with eight children.

JOHN ROGERS, general manager and part owner of the Paducah Stave Factory, was born in 1853, in Wakefield, Mass. His parents were Peter and Ellen Rogers, both of whom were of Irish birth. The family removed to Paducah in the fall of 1866, where Peter Rogers died, and where his widow is still living. John Rogers first learned the trade of cooper, which he followed until he became connected with E. Farley in the manufacture of cut staves, in which they give employment to a large number of men. He was married in Paducah in February, 1878, to Miss Mary B. Nunn. They have two children, Wilford and Philip Rogers. Mrs. Rogers is the daughter of Philip and Lucena Nunn, who are now living in Paducah, and among the pioneers of that city. They are both of German birth, and have lived in Paducah since 1846.

PROF. JOHN T. ROSS was born in 1834, in the State of Maryland, and is descended from Scotch and German ancestors. His father, Robert Ross, was a native of Alleghany County, Md., and his mother, Elizabeth Klipstein, was born in Winchester, Va. The family was first represented in the United States by Robert Ross, Sr., who, in the colonial period, settled on the east shore of Virginia, from whence he removed to the western part of Maryland, where Robert Ross, Jr., was born, reared and married. His wife, Miss Elizabeth Klipstein, was the daughter of a Dr. Louis Klipstein, who served as a surgeon in the war of the Revolution. Prof. John T. Ross is the fourth of a family of six children born to these parents. He was educated in his native State, and early in life devoted himself to the profession of teaching, from which he has never departed. Prof. Ross is not only one of the oldest teachers in the State, but a man of pronounced efficiency, as is evidenced by the fact that he has been retained in the city schools of Paducah for the past twelve years, and for the past fourteen years has been a member of the board of education for McCracken County. His experience in the schoolroom covers a period of thirty-one years, twenty-three years in the State of Kentucky. Prof. Ross was twice married, first in 1862, to Miss Louisa Richardson, of Ballard County, who died in 1863, leaving one son, Lewis F. Ross, now of Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1864 he contracted a second marriage, this time to Miss Mary L. Polk, a native of Springfield, Tenn., and second cousin to President James K. Polk; she was born in 1838, and is the mother of two sons, viz.: Clarence Ross and Polk Ross. Prof. Ross is a member of the A. F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., K. of H., and both he and wife are members of the Christian Church at Paducah.

ABRAHAM W. ROSSINGTON was born April 22, 1842, in Queenstown, Ireland, and is a son of William W. and Sarah (Trevers) Rossington, both of whom were natives of Ireland. The father was a professor of music, and coming to the United States in 1844, was connected for some time as a professor in a New York College. He removed to St. Louis, Mo., where he continued his professional labors. His wife and family followed him to this country in 1846, and with them he went to Hopkinsville, Ky., having accepted a professorship in both the female colleges of that place. There he remained most of his life, his death occurring after a short residence in Paducah. His widow still survives him and resides with her son, Robert B. Rossington, cashier of the Franklin Bank, at Clarksville, Tenn. The parents had five children, of whom our subject was the eldest. He was about four years old when he was brought to this country, and was reared till ten years of age in Hopkinsville, Ky., when he returned to Ireland in company with a friend of the family, and was sent to Frazier's College, Taunton, England, at which institution he remained eight years, graduating from the same in 1860. The following year he returned to America, and for four years was engaged in farming pursuits near Hopkinsville; in 1866, he removed to this county, and to his present place of residence, which now consists of 500 acres, most of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which many fine improvements have been made. While attending school, Mr. Rossington prepared himself for the naval service, and, upon training vessels made two trips to Australia, and has also crossed the ocean many times. December 2, 1869, he married Miss Nannie Holland, of this county, a daughter of Z. P. and Margaret (Galbraith) Holland. Mr. and Mrs. Rossington are the parents of five children: Louis G., William Z., Sarah M., Thomas A. and Walter A. Mr. Rossington is a member of the Episcopal Church.

FELIX G. RUDOLPH, of the firm of Kimmel & Rudolph, Paducah, was born in 1852, in McCracken County, Ky. He is the seventh of a family of ten children, born to Wiley and Mary Jane (Lynn) Rudolph, the former of whom is still living, and a resident of Ballard County, and the latter of whom died in 1857. Felix G. Rudolph removed to the city of Paducah in 1882, and became a member of the firm of Harrison & Rudolph. This firm was succeeded by Nichols & Rudolph, which was changed May 1, 1884, to Kimmel & Rudolph. In 1873, Mr. Rudolph was married to Miss Kate Nichols, daughter of W. P. Nichols. Mr. Rudolph is a worthy member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and of the Masonic order.

EMMETT C. RUDOLPH was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., January 15, 1844. His father, John E. Rudolph, was a native of the same county. He removed to McCracken County in 1852, locating where our subject at present resides. The farm was but partly opened at the time, but a number of improvements were at once undertaken and consummated, which add comfort and greatly enhance the value of the farm. The father continued farm pursuits until his death, which occurred February 15, 1873. He was twice married. His first wife was Susan E. Herring, of Montgomery County, Tenn.; she died July 31, 1851, the mother of four children. His second wife, formerly Lucy A. Hargis, also of Montgomery County, Tenn., still survives him; there was one child by this union. Our subject was the eldest of the family of children, and his assistance was required on the home farm until he became of age. The following year he started out for himself as a farm laborer, working by the month, and was thus engaged until his marriage, which occurred January 14, 1869, after which he moved on his present farm, which consists of 115 acres. He has also two other farms in the county, in a good state of cultivation. His wife, formerly Miss Malvira V. Holt, died March, 28, 1873, leaving three children: Claude L., Leslie B. and Mollie E. Mr. Rudolph is a man of great industry and enterprise, public-spirited and energetic; he has rendered much assistance to public enterprises and is regarded with high esteem by his fellow-citizens. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and is active in his encouragement of the temperance movement. He at present fills the position of justice of the peace, in which he has served many times.

GEORGE L. SAFFARRANS was born in Memphis, Tenn., in December, 1842. His parents (both of whom are deceased) were John and Matilda Saffarrans. George L. spent his boyhood days in his native city, where he received his preparatory education. In 1857 he entered the Wesleyan University, at Florence, Ala., where he completed his studies. In the spring of 1861 he espoused the cause of the Southern Confederacy, and served in that army through the entire war, participating in many of the hotly contested engagements of the struggle. At the close of the war he became a clerk and salesman in the mercantile business. In 1869 he established himself in the grocery business at Memphis, Tenn. In 1878 he removed to Caruthersville, Mo., and engaged in business, but becoming dissatisfied with the location, he removed to Paducah, Ky., in the fall of 1881. Since 1883 he has been engaged in the produce commission business, and in the sale of agricultural implements and seeds. He is also a member of the City Flouring Mills Company of Paducah. Mr. Saffarrans was married in the city of Memphis, Tenn., in 1867, to Miss Annie Coolidge, a native of Lexington, Ky., and daughter of Charles Coolidge. To them have been born two children: George and Carrie Saffarans. Mr. Saffarans is a worthy member of the I. O. O. F.

DR. REUBEN SAUNDERS, one of the oldest as well as most prominent physicians of Kentucky, was born near Frankfort, Ky., in 1808. He was principally reared to manhood in Frankfort, where he was, in early life, apprenticed to a book-binder. His early education consisted of what he learned in leisure moments from literary productions passing through his hands. In 1832 he went to Wetumpka, Ala., and while in the South studied medicine; attended one course of lectures at Charleston, S. C., after which he entered the Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, Penn., from which he graduated in 1836. He then returned to Alabama, and for six years he had an extensive practice. In 1844 he removed to McCracken County, Ky., locating for a few years in the country. In 1847 he removed to Paducah, where he still engaged in his profession. To Dr. Saunders the medical fraternity of the United States accords the honor of having first discovered the efficacy of belladonna as an agency in the treatment of cholera, the practice being by hypodermic injection of atropia. This discovery was made by Dr. Saunders in 1873, and is now endorsed by eminent medical authority, and has thus revolutionized the practice in the treatment of that dreaded disease. Dr. Saunders retains far more of his youthful vigor than is common for one of his age, and although a practitioner for nearly fifty years, is still in the profession. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. He has been twice married: first, in 1838, in Knoxville, Tenn., to Adaline Roberts, who died in Paducah, leaving six children, one of whom, John B., attained eminence as a physician, and of whom four are residents of the city of Paducah. His second wife, to whom he was married in 1858, was Rebecca Lockett, of Richmond, Va.

JOHN W. SAUNER was born in Nashville, Tenn., March 31, 1823, and came to Paducah, Ky., with his parents, John and Eliza Sauner, in 1836, and is consequently among the very few men who have been in Paducah thus long. John Sauner was a carpenter by trade, and as a result, John W. adopted the same pursuit, which he followed several years of his early life, and until 1854, since which date he has been constantly in county or city offices. His official record includes a service of seven years as deputy sheriff, of McCracken County; three years as sheriff, four years as city marshal of Paducah, eight years as mayor of Paducah, and in 1882 was elected to the office of jailer of the county. It is but just to say that in all this long public career, covering a period of over thirty years, Mr. Sauner has always proven himself a faithful and efficient officer. He was married in McCracken County, April 20, 1843, to Miss Phoebe E. Forrest, and has one daughter, Nellie G. (wife of John T. Zelner, of Paducah). Mr. Sauner is a member of the I. O. O. F., and K. of H.

M. K. SCOTT, wholesale hardware merchant, was born August 7, 1832, near Louisville, Ky. His father, John Scott, was of Irish ancestry, though a native of Ohio, and his mother, whose name was Martha Broudas, was born in Virginia. M. K. Scott was reared in the city of Louisville, Ky., where, early in life, he learned the tinner's trade. He removed to Paducah in 1858, and for five years was foreman in the business house of E. R. Hart. In 1865 he opened a small tin business on a capital of $150, which he gradually expanded until, in 1876, in connection with L. W. Emery, he opened a wholesale hardware and tin business, which has proven one of the standard enterprises of Paducah. In 1882, the firm of Scott, Stephens & Co., succeeded that of Scott & Emery, and are now doing a prosperous business. In 1852 Mr. Scott joined the Cuban Army at New Orleans, under General Lopez, and soon after reaching the seat of war, on the island of Cuba, was made a prisoner by the Spanish forces, and sentenced to ten years' labor in the quicksilver mines of Africa, but on reaching Spain, his sentence was commuted and he was turned over to the American consul, by whom he was returned to the United States. Mr. Scott is a Democrat, politically, and is a member of the K. of H. He was married, in 1858, in Louisville, to Miss Lizzie Applegate, daughter of James Applegate, of that city. Their union has been blessed with eight children, the eldest of whom, Frank L., is a member of the firm of Scott, Stephens & Co.

GEORGE A. SCOTT, of the wholesale firm of Jones, Scott & Co., Paducah, was born in Jefferson County, Ky., in 1828. His boyhood days and early manhood were passed in his native county, and when of sufficient age, he adopted the trade of a tinner, serving his apprenticeship in the city of Louisville, Ky. His early experiences were similar to those of most tradesmen; he followed his trade as journeyman, until he found himself able to assume the management of the business, which he did in Louisville, in 1851. He there continued in business, with much success, for about twenty-six years, when, in 1876, he removed to Paducah, where he became a member of the firm of Emery & Scott, which business relation terminated after an existence of a year and a half. He next formed a partnership with Thomas T. Jones, under the firm name of Jones & Scott, which has recently changed to G. A. Scott, Jones & Husbands. They do a wholesale business in hardware, stoves and iron, and employ two traveling salesmen. Mr. Scott was married in Louisville, Ky., in 1850, to Miss Julia Attwell, daughter of Samuel Attwell, a pioneer of Jefferson County, Ky. Their union has resulted in the birth of five children, viz.: Leonard, Lewis, George E., Lorena and Shirley Scott. Mr. Scott is a member of the K. of H., and both he and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

GEORGE W. SHIVELL, physician and merchant, Woodville, was born in Henry County, Ky., February 22, 1832, and is the sixth of twelve children born to George and Nancy (Scott) Shivell. The father was born in Lexington, Ky., and about 1832 settled in Henry County. He was by trade a carpenter, but up to within a few years of his death, which occurred in 1862, he owned and operated a flouring-mill, in Henry County. Our subject assisted his father in the mill during his youth, and in the meantime attended a good country school. At sixteen years of age, he went to New Castle, Ky., where he was employed in a tobacco factory, and with the means thus obtained was able to take private lessons, and spent his evenings in the prosecution of his studies. At the age of eighteen, he went to Louisville, Ky., and spent three years in learning the drug business. He afterward taught school in various counties of the State and was thus enabled to attend the Cincinnati Eclectic Medical College, which institution graduated him in 1857, after an attendance of three terms. After remaining nine months in the city hospital, he went to Eminence, Ky., where he opened a drug store, but sold out and came two years later to Woodville, and opened a grocery and general store. After a residence here of twelve years, he removed to Paducah, Ky., where he remained eight years, engaged in the tobacco and grain business. He returned to Woodville, after doing business two years in Ballard County, and now carries a large stock of general goods. October 26, 1858, he married Miss Mattie A. Holland, of Henry County, Ky.; she passed away September 2, 1879, leaving one son, James D. The doctor subsequently married Miss Nannie R. Fortson, of Ballard County, Ky. This union has given one child, Mary. The doctor is a member of the Masonic order and K. of H. Inheriting his mother's literary talents, he has contributed many able articles to the columns of various newspapers, and the influence of his pen has been felt in the discussion of many of the leading issues of the day.

WESLEY H. SLACK is one of the most esteemed, as well as one of the most modest and unassuming citizens of Paducah. He was born in New Jersey, and there grew to manhood. He removed to Paducah in the days of its infancy, and has been a resident of the city ever since. He has been engaged in various mercantile and manufacturing enterprises; served a number of years as a member of the city council and school board, and was postmaster of Paducah under the administration of President Johnson. In New Jersey, he married Miss Anna Langstaff, a sister of George Langstaff, one of Paducah's most worthy men. Mr. Slack is an honored member of the A. F. & A. M.

J. R. SMITH, one of the most enterprising and public-spirited citizens of Paducah, was born March 26, 1837, in Wadesboro, Ky. He commenced life in a business capacity, poor, but, full of energy and integrity, he succeeded in every enterprise that he engaged in. His career, up to this time, has been as brilliant and successful as that of any man who ever embarked in business in this country. He is now one of the most substantial and wealthy citizens of the city of Paducah. He moved to Paducah in 1870, and embarked in the wholesale grocery business, and still has a large and lucrative trade, which he made by his own business enterprise and industry. He is a nervous and impulsive man, and as is sometimes said of him, he is independent on all subjects and silent on none that are of interest to the community in which he lives. He is as generous as any man living; no one ever appealed to him in distress that went away without some substantial proof of his liberality and generosity. He has been elected time and again to the city council of Paducah, and has always been a busy factor in the city politics, opposing with all his ardent nature everything he believed to be injurious to the public welfare; and the people of his ward are always eager to endorse his manly and outspoken opposition to every species of legislation, that he believes to be opposed to the best interest of the city. He commenced his business life in 1852, with his brother, Joseph Smith, in Murray, Ky., and there he learned his business habits and traits of character, which have culminated in his making a fortune for himself and family. J. R. Smith is the fifth of a family of seven children, and his father and mother, Andrew and Eliza Smith, were old and respected citizens of Calloway County. His mother's maiden name was Eliza Curd; she was the daughter of one of the old pioneers of that county. Mrs. Mary E. Smith, his wife, is a native of Louisiana, Pointe Coupee Parish, and her maiden name was Mary E. Orr. She moved to Calloway, Ky., and there married J. R. Smith, the subject of this sketch, and by their marriage have two sons: James P. and Joseph H. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are both members of the Presbyterian Church and are always ready to do their whole duty as good and devout Christians. Mrs. Smith's charity is proverbial and she is always to be found wherever there is suffering and distress. Portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be found elsewhere in the volume.

NELSON SOULE was born in 1834, in Warren County, Ohio. He is a grandson of the late Bishop Joshua Soule, who died a few years since in Nashville, Tenn. His father's name was also Joshua Soule, and his mother was Miss Anna Best. When Nelson was but a small child, his parents removed to Indianapolis, Ind., where the father died about 1852. At the age of eight years, Nelson Soule was taken to Sangamon County, Ill., where he remained with a farmer until fifteen years old, during which time his education was wholly neglected, with the exception perhaps of a very few months at school. In the year 1849 he came to Paducah, Ky., and there became an apprentice to the drug business, to which he has since devoted his time, except a few years spent in travelling and in the mines of California. He remained in the capacity of a druggist clerk until 1860, when he embarked in the business on his own account, and is still in the trade, located at No. 204, Broadway, Paducah. Mr. Soul is an unassuming gentleman, of high character, and a thorough business man, and while his modesty would prompt him to decline public mention, he has, nevertheless, by honest business energy, placed before the youths of this day an example worthy of emulation. He is a member of the Masonic order and K. of H. He was married in Paducah, in September, 1860, to Miss Lucyette McCabe, daughter of Anthony McCabe. They have been blessed with two sons: Nelson Lee, who died in November, 1881, in early manhood; and Leslie Soule, a graduate in pharmacy and assistant in his father's business.

WILLIAM W. SPENCE was born January 7, 1832, in Madison County, Tenn. His father, Levi Spence was born and reared in North Carolina, and in 1831 removed with his wife and family to Tennessee, when he engaged in farming, which was his principal occupation in life. In 1840 he came to McCracken County, locating eight miles from Paducah, and here died three years later; his widow survived him many years, her death occuring November 28, 1883. They were both members of the Methodist Church. Our subject spent his earlier years at farm work, and obtained a fair education, principally by home study. At twenty years he began farming on shares, but previous to this had hired out at $4 per month, to enable him to assist his mother in the support of the family; his first crop netted him $120 and he continued farming three years longer, when he went to Texas, but soon returned and re-engaged in farming. He finally purchased 183 acres of land in his present neighborhood, which he improved and worked eight years, when he sold out for $22 per acre, the land having cost him but $7. He removed to a farm near Paducah, renting the same for two years. He then purchased his present farm property, located two miles north of Woodville and consisting of 261 acres, which was formerly woodland, but which has been cleared, a residence erected and orchard set out, and many other lasting improvements made to the place. Mr. Spence has been very active and untiring in his efforts to rid the country of whisky and its terrible effects, giving his means and influence at all times in favor of temperance and strict prohibition. He framed a bill, and secured the passage of the same through the State legislature, which excludes the sale of intoxicating liquor in this community. He is the recognized leader in Woodville and vicinity of a strong temperance element, who consider this question of paramount importance to all others of a political nature. He is a member of the Masonic order and of the Methodist Church South. In October, 1859, he married Miss Mary A. Moore of McCracken County. They are the parents of two children: John W. and Thomas D., both grown.

NEEDHAM STANLEY, deceased, was a native of North Carolina and was born in 1812. In 1832, being then just grown to manhood, he removed to Kentucky and located in McCracken County, where in after years he became an important farmer. Mr. Stanley was a man of more than ordinary ability, both mentally and physically; was thoroughly read in both common law and medicine, but devoted his time exclusively to the industries of the farm. He succeeded far beyond the average farmer, which was due to his physical energy and remarkable will-power. In common with the mass of southern planters, he lost heavily by the results of the civil war, yet at his decease left an estate of several hundred acres of land, together with other extensive possessions. He was for many years a deacon in the Baptist Church, in the faith of which he died in April, 1870. His wife, to whom he was married in McCracken County, Ky., and who is still a resident of that county, was a Miss Margaret Ratcliffe. She is a native of Virginia and a sister of George Ratcliffe, the present sheriff of McCracken County. Mr. Stanley reared a family of twelve children, all living except one, and noted for their strong physical development and sterling qualities. Their names are as follows: Lucy, wife of A. Williams; Robert, William; Ann, (deceased) wife of E. Futrell; Rebecca, wife of Exum Futrell; Richard P., deputy sheriff of McCracken County; Jennie, wife of George W. Lee; Ellen, wife of Robert A. Burgess; Fannie, George and Charles Stanley.

WILLIAM L. SULLIVAN. Among the early settlers of Paducah were Abel Sullivan and his wife, Nancy (McDaniel) Sullivan. The former was a native of North Carolina, though of Irish ancestry. He came in boyhood to Kentucky and settled in Muhlenburg County, and there, in 1825, he married Miss McDaniel, a lady of Scotch descent, and in 1831 they removed to Paducah. Abel Sullivan spent many years in Paducah merchandising. He died in Massac County, Ill., 1871, in his eighty-ninth year; his wife survived him until 1872, when she died in Grayville, Ill., at the age of seventy-one years. These parents had three children, of whom William L. is the eldest. He was born on May 6, 1823, in Paducah, and is now the oldest native male resident of the city. With the exception of a very few years, Mr. Sullivan has always been a resident of Paducah, and at the age of fourteen years began his mercantile career, as a salesman in a grocery house. He is now one of the oldest of the Paducah merchants and is the proprietor of a flourishing grocery business. In 1856, in Paducah, he married Miss Mattie Brown. She died of cholera in 1873, leaving one child, Harry Sullivan, now of St. Louis. His present wife, to whom he was married June 17, 1875, was Miss Birdie Ellithorpe. Their union has resulted in the birth of seven children, of whom Maggie, Mattie and Frank are living. Mr. Sullivan is a Knight Templar, in the Masonic order; a member of the A. O. U. W., K. of H. and of the I. O. O. F., and has served the city of Paducah as marshal and tax collector.

VALENTINE O. SWEATMAN was born in 1838, in the then village of Paducah, and is a son of Luke and Parmelia (Owen) Sweatman. His mother died when the subject of this sketch was but an infant, and, as a consequence, he was reared by his uncle on a farm, in Union County, Ky. Soon after attaining his majority, he went to the city of Paducah, and accepted a position in the drug store of Alexander B. Kinkead, and remained with him, and his successor, until December, 1862, when he formed a partnership with Dr. Kinkead, his former employer, in the same line of business. The firm of Kinkead & Sweatman was succeeded, in 1866, by the firm of A. B. & M. Kinkead. Mr. Sweatman then established another store, and has been constantly in the trade since. He married, in 1866, Miss Cynthia A., daughter of R. C. Campbell, of Paducah. Their two children are: Angie May and Lloyd Sweatman. Mr. Sweatman, wife and both children are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, of Paducah.

JOHN J. THOMAS was born August 8, 1813, in Albemarle County, Va. His father, Lewis Thomas, and his mother, Margaret Lewis, were natives of Virginia. The maternal grandmother was a cousin of Thomas Jefferson. Both parents died when subject was but an infant. When thirteen years old he was brought to Christian County, Ky., where he remained two years. Returning to Virginia, he entered the University of Virginia. There he graduated in mathematics, modern and ancient languages. He came to the Purchase soon after finishing his studies as an assistant to Chiles Terrell. father of T. F. Terrell, and assisted in the survey of portions of the Purchase District. In 1837 he married Miss Lucy M. Quarels, of Christian County, afterward settled in that county, and engaged in general farming until 1844, when he received an appointment under President Polk to a clerkship in the postoffice department at Washington, serving through the remainder of Polk's administration. In 1851 he was elected to the Kentucky State Legislature, in which he served two years, when he again turned his attention to agriculture in Christian County, continued the same until 1861, when he was elected to the provisional congress of the Southern Confederacy. He remained in that body until the organization of the permanent congress in February, 1862. He then entered the Confederate Army as aide to Gen. Williams, and served under him to the close of the war, when he again returned to private life, embarking in the tobacco-commission business in Clarksvllle, Tenn. In 1873 he became a tobacco inspector at New York City, where he was employed for about five years, and then settled in Paducah, where he has since been dealing in tobacco. Maj. Thomas is a man of fine mental ability, well-read in the current literature of the day, and impresses even the stranger that he is a gentleman of broad culture. His wife died in 1846, leaving two children: Lewis M., who was killed at the battle of Shiloh, and Dr. John Q. Thomas, of Christian County. Mr. Thomas was next married in Frankfort, Ky., to Miss Kate Pendleton, who died in 1882, leaving three children: Annie (wife of John Quigley), Miss Kate Thomas and Pendleton Thomas.

CHARLES H. THOMAS, McCracken County. Among the first families to settle in the Purchase District was that of Frank Thomas, among whose descendants are numbered several of the most useful citizens of western Kentucky. Frank Thomas was born in the Isle of Man, of Scotch-Irish ancestors, but came to the United States in early life. In 1830 he moved from Henry County, Ky., to a farm near Milburn, Hickman County (now Ballard County), where he spent the remainder of a useful life, and where he died in 1874 at the advanced age of ninety years. Frank Thomas was a man who was fearless in his defense of right; a man of strong will-power; open and frank in his views, but charitable and kind in his treatment to all. He was an old time Whig, and during the existence of that party was a pronounced leader, and was also a consistent member of the Masonic order. He reared a family of eight children, of whom William, the father of the subject of this sketch, was the third. William was married after his removal to Ballard County to Miss Catherine, a daughter of Richard Valandingham, of Owen County, Ky. William Thomas was a man of more than ordinary intelligence and influence. He, too, was a Whig in his political preferences, and by that party was elected to the lower house of the Kentucky Legislature. He held the position of colonel of Kentucky militia, and, though devoted to the pursuits of agriculture, was a man of no ordinary information, and possessed of broad views. He had a family of eight children, viz.: Richard, Mary, Elizabeth, Fannie, George, Charles H., Norborn and Susan Thomas. He died in 1866, as did also his wife. Charles H. Thomas was born in Ballard County, Ky., in 1847, and received his preparatory education in the Milburn and Lovelaceville Academies, and afterward entered the Kentucky University, where he completed his studies. After leaving school he read law in the office of Thomas H. Corbett and in 1869 was admitted to practice. Though a young man, Charles H. Thomas has already established a fair reputation as an able lawyer. While a resident of Ballard County he was appointed by the governor to the office of police judge of Blandville. In 1874 he was elected to the office of county attorney for Ballard, and in 1880 was elected to the very responsible position of common wealth's attorney for the eight counties included in the First Judicial District of Kentucky. This office he now holds, the duties of which he is discharging with marked success, and to the satisfaction of the district. He is a faithful member of the Christian Church, of the Masonic order and I. O. O. F. Mr. Thomas was married in 1876 in Louisville, Ky., to Miss Bettie R. Taylor. Their children are Angie Lee, Charles Hugh and Catharine Elner Thomas.

DR. JOSEPH W. THOMPSON, a veteran physician and surgeon of Paducah, was born in Graves County, Ky., June 27, 1838. He descends from one of the early families of the Purchase District, his grandfather, Moses Thompson, having settled in Graves County in 1824 or 1825, and having been one of the first associate judges appointed to preside over the courts of that district. He was a farmer by occupation, but a man of more than ordinary mental ability for his day. He died in Ballard County, Ky., at the home of his son, Augustus Thompson, in 1844. He was the father of twelve children, including eleven sons, who inherited not only the mental strength of their father, but the native energy of their mother, who is said to have been a remarkable woman, for the day in which she lived. She was one of the founders of Campbellism in western Kentucky, and was noted for possessing a degree of refinement and lady-like culture rarely seen among the people of the new country. Of their sons, Augustus was born in Butler County in January, 1815, and removed with the family to Graves County, where, in early life, he began the practice of medicine, having studied his profession in the Cincinnati Medical College. He married, in 1837, Miss Susan M. Grundy; reared three sons, of whom the subject of this sketch is the eldest. He died in the prime of life of cholera in the latter part of June, 1849. His wife, who was born in 1817, died in Ballard County, in February, 1869. Dr. J. W. Thompson was principally reared in Ballard County, where he received the benefits of the common schools, which, with eight months in the schools of Paducah, constituted his entire educational privileges. At the age of eighteen he began the study of medicine under Dr. G. Stovall, of Ballard County, and in 1857 entered the Medical School of Nashville, Tenn., whence, in 1858, he went to the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated from that institution in March, 1859. He located in Ballard County, where he practiced successfully until 1861, when he entered the Confederate Army as surgeon of the Third Kentucky Regiment, in which capacity he served for two years, and was afterward placed in charge of Forrest's Hospital, at Lauderdale Springs, Miss., there remaining two years and until the close of the war. Immediately after the close of the war he located in Paducah, where he has since practiced, ranking among the most celebrated physicians of the State. He is a member of the American Surgical and Medical Association, the Kentucky State Medical Society, the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Society, and the Medical and Surgical Society of Paducah. He is also a member of the Masonic fraternity and the A. O. U. W. Dr. Thompson was married in Todd County, Ky., February 17, 1867, to Miss Victoria H. O'Brien, a native of North Carolina and of Irish ancestors. They have two children, Augustus and Ada.

GEORGE C. THOMPSON, banker of Paducah, Ky., was born in the town of Blandville, Ballard Co., Ky., February 7, 1849. He is the youngest son of Dr. Augustus Thompson, who was a highly respected citizen and physician of Ballard County, and who died when George C. was but a few months old. The latter was reared to the age of fifteen years in his native county, then was placed at school in the Christian Brothers College, St. Louis, Mo. After remaining in that institution two years he returned to Kentucky, located in Paducah and began reading law. When eighteen years old he began teaching, the first year as assistant, the second and third as principal of the city schools of Paducah, meantime pursuing his professional studies. He was admitted to the bar in 1870. In 1871 he formed a co-partnership with Judge Q. Q. Quigley, of Paducah, for the practice of his profession, which connection existed until the latter part of 1873, when Mr. Thompson was elected to the responsible position of cashier of the American German National Bank, which he still occupies, being at the time of his election the youngest cashier in the State. In this corporation he is also a stockholder and director. In 1880 he became a member of the firm of Thompson, Wilson & Co., and that year established the wholesale liquor house, still conducted under that name. This institution, in 1883, was incorporated as a joint stock company, with Mr. Thompson as its president. He is a member of the Masonic order and I. O. O. F. He was married in November, 1883, to Miss Mamie B., daughter of E. G. Taylor, of Eureka Springs, Ark.

EDWARD S. THORNTON is a native of Johnson County, Mo. He was born May 9, 1822, to John and Elizabeth (Wayland) Thornton, both of whom were Virginians by birth. The father devoted his early life to mechanical pursuits, but moved to M ssouri after his marriage, located in Johnson County and engaged in farming. There he served the people as judge of the county. He had been a soldier in the war of 1812. His father, George Thornton, lived to be over one hundred years old. To the parents of our subject were born eight children: Angelina, Eliza. Julia, Sarah J., Adoniram J., Edward S., Elizabeth and Lucy. Edward S. remained in his native county engaged in farming until eighteen years of age, when he went to California, and resided there five years. At the outbreak of the late war, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, under Gen. Price, of Missouri, and served a period of four years. He was a member of the Second Missouri Infantry, commanded by Burbridge and Cockrill. After the war Mr. Thornton came to this county, and has since devoted his energies to farming. He has a present place of 100 acres. He married Miss Susan E. Boysseau, a daughter of Benjamin F. Boysseau, of Johnson County, Mo. This union has given six children, five of whom are living: Sarah E., Mattie D., Emma P., John A. and Richard C. Mr. Thornton is one of the present magistrates for the district, and is a farmer and citizen of substantial worth.

RICHARD G. TERRELL, wholesale merchant and son of Thomas F. Terrell, was born in Ballard County, Ky., April 14, 1849. He received a good English education in Paducah, and completed his studies in the Washington Lee University, of Virginia. In 1868, in connection with W. H. Bradley, he opened a produce and seed business in Paducah, at first on a limited scale, but which, under the business management of Mr. Terrell, has assumed proportions of no mean order. In 1872 he succeeded to the ownership of the entire business, which is now owned and conducted by him. His specialties are agricultural implements, seeds and salt. He does an extensive wholesale business, annually aggregating the sum of $70,000. Mr. R. G. Terrell was married in Paducah, October 28, 1873, to Miss Mildred, daughter of Col. Thomas J. Pickett. Their union has been blessed with four children: Thomas F., Mary Louisa, Mildred and Hattie Terrell.

THOMAS F. TERRELL. But few men are now living who emigrated to the Purchase as early as did the subject of this sketch. His father, Chiles Terrell, was a practical surveyor, and came from Virginia to McCracken County, Ky., as early as 1826, with his son, J. H. Terrell, then eleven years old, and surveyed a large portion of the land in said county. At that early day no stage lines even connected this with the more civilized portions of the country. Their journey to this place and return to Virginia, was consequently made on horse-back, and attended by perils of various kinds, as well as requiring about one month for the trip each way. Chiles Terrell was by no means an ordinary man; he was reared in the faith of the Friends or Quakers, and received a thorough education; was particularly proficient in mathematics, and occupied the position of professor of that science in the old Rumford Academy, of Virginia. In the year 1827 he moved to Louisville, Ky., and in the year 1828 was professor of mathematics in the Jefferson Seminary, the oldest institution of learning in the city of Louisville, Ky. He moved to the Purchase in 1839, settled in McCracken County, and there, in October, 1851, he died, in his seventy-second year. He had married Mary C. Upshaw, who died in 1836, in Jefferson County, Ky. Thomas F. Terrell was born to these parents January 13, 1820, in the city of Richmond, Va., and was consequently mostly reared under the influence of pioneer life, farming in Jefferson County, Ky., and in the Purchase. When twenty-two years old he went to New Orleans and for two years engaged in the mercantile pursuit; returning thence to Kentucky he was appointed sheriff of Ballard County in 1843, serving as such until 1849, when he was put in nomination by the Whig party for representative. As such he was elected to the lower house, although the district, then as now, was intensely Democratic, and voted for Henry Clay for United States senator, in January, 1849. The last time he was returned to said body, he died before his term expired. In 1851, under the new constitution, he was again made the sheriff of Ballard County, serving two terms. In December, 1856, he removed to Paducah, since which time he has exerted a potent influence in the business interests of the city. He has been principally engaged in the tobacco warehouse business. He occupies a prominent position in the trade, and is respected for his integrity and fair dealing, and now is a member of the firm of Terrell, Reeves & Co. Mr. Terrell is a man of sound, practical judgment, kind in his disposition and full of charity for his fellow-men; a friend to the cause of education and for several years an active member of the board of education in Paducah; is retained from year to year as a member of the city council, and conservative in his views for all improvements as fast as the financial condition of the city will admit; opposed to heavy taxation, and a friend to the mechanic and laboring classes. He is a member of the Masonic order; was married in 1844 to Miss Mary Fletcher, a native of Virginia. Seven of a family of eight sons born to them are now living, and are honorable business men.

JOHN H. VAN CULIN, Sr., was born in 1821, in the town of Salem, Salem Co., N. J. His parents were John Van Culin, of German descent, and Sarah (Ware) Van Culin. John H. was but a small boy when his farther died, and his subsequent boyhood's days were fraught with a remarkably checkered experience. At the age of sixteen years, he decided to go west, and after reaching Pittsburgh, Penn., he found his limited means exhausted. He succeeded in securing a position as clerk in a dry goods store, and after three years of such employment, he obtained a clerkship on a steamboat. About 1841, he went to Hopkinsville, Ky., and obtained a position as book-keeper for Gant & Kinkead, but at the end of one year was elected to a clerkship in the branch Bank of Kentucky, next to cashier of that institution, in which he continued until July, 1854. He then went to New Orleans, and there engaged in a general commission business, which he conducted with marked success, accumulating a handsome fortune, which was mostly swept away by the results of the civil war. In 1869, Mr. Van Culin removed from New Orleans to Paducah, Ky., and engaged in mercantile business. In 1876, he established his present book business, and is now located at No. 107 Broadway. In 1858, he married Miss R. E. White, a native of Tennessee. They have a family of three sons, viz.: John H. Jr., a traveling salesman; Nolan W., assistant cashier in the Bank of Madison, at Jackson, Tenn., and David L. Van Culin, of Paducah.

EDWARD W. VAUGHAN was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., in 1833, and is a son of Grandison Vaughan and Elizabeth W. Vaughan, nee Nevill. His father was a native of Virginia, removed in early life to Tennessee, married Miss E. W. Nevill, and located permanently in Montgomery County, near Clarksville. He there engaged in the pursuits of agriculture until 1858, at which time he removed to Kentucky, settling in Ballard County. He there established and built a tobacco stemmery and did an extensive business, until 1866, when, with his sons, he removed to Louisville, Ky., and there engaged in the same business until his death, which occurred in 1879; his wife died in Ballard County, about 1866. Edward W. is one of a family of ten children born to these parents, six of whom are now living. Mr. Vaughan was reared under the wholesome influence of farm life; received a fair English education, and in 1856 began his experience in the tobacco trade, in Clarksville, Tenn. He removed with his family to Ballard County, Ky., in 1858, thence to Louisville, in 1866; and to Paducah, in 1869, and that year erected his stemmery, which is the largest in western Kentucky, exporting each year large quantities of tobacco for the foreign market. Mr. Vaughan is a member of the Christian Church, of the Masonic fraternity, and is a gentleman of rare social and business qualities. He was married in 1859, in Russellville, Logan Co., Ky, to Miss Mildred McCuddy, who died in 1869, leaving two children: Annie L. and Lucy Vaughan. His second marriage took place in 1871, to Miss Cordelia M. Terrell, daughter of J. H. Terrell. Their union has resulted in the birth of four children: Horace G., Mildred, Edward W. and one unnamed.

SOLOMON C. VAUGHAN, son of Grandison Vaughan and Elizabeth (Nevill) Vaughan, was born near Clarksville, Montgomery Co., Tenn., in 1838, and grew to maturity on his father's farm. When sixteen years old, he went to Springfield, Mo., where he began and pursued the study of law; was admitted to practice in 1858, and until the breaking out of the war, engaged in his profession associated with Peter S. Wilkes, of Springfield, Mo. During the first year of the war, he was a member of the Missouri State Guards, under Gen. Price, after which he engaged in tobacco and general commission business in St. Louis, remaining there about one year. In 1863, he began merchandising in Ballard County; soon after located at Woodville, McCracken County, where he sold goods, until 1869, when he removed to Paducah, where he has since been actively engaged in the tobacco business. Mr. Vaughan is a Democrat in politics. He represents his ward in the city council, and is an active member of the Masonic fraternity, K. of H. and the A. O. U. W. He was married in Springfield, Mo., in 1858, to Miss Julia Dade, daughter of Judge John Dade, of that city. They are blessed with three children: Bessie, wife of Frank L. Scott; Mattie and Bertie Vaughan. Both Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan are acceptable members of the Christian Church of Paducah.

RUFUS E. WADE was born in 1847, in

Henry County, Tenn. His parents, who are still living and highly respected citizens of Marshall County, Ky., are Robert A. Wade and Mary Wade, nee Hardy; the former a native of North Carolina, and the latter of Kentucky. They settled in the county, in which they now live, in 1854, and reared two children: Rufus E. and Mary, the wife of S. A. Wade, of Marshall County. Rufus E., in his boyhood, worked upon his father's farm, and meantime attended the schools of the country, completing his studies in the high school of Murray, Calloway Co., Ky. His first occupation was that of a school-teacher, first in Marshall and Livingston Counties, and later in Texas. Returning from Texas, he went to Paris, Tenn., and learned the art of photographing, which occupied his attention from 1870 to 1876, principally in Paducah. In 1877 he embarked in his present business, that of tobacco rehandler. Mr. Wade is a man of pleasing address, and of fine business qualifications; as a tobacco trader he does a very extensive business. As an artist he was attended with marked success, which is so rarely attained by men of that profession; while as a teacher he proved himself particularly efficient. He is an ardent advocate of popular education, and for seven years has been a member of the Paducah board of education, and is now president of that body. In 1871 Mr. Wade contracted a marriage with Miss Mary Johnson, daughter of Col. Alfred Johnson, who was lieutenant-colonel of the Third Kentucky Regiment, Confederate Army. Mr. Wade is a member of the Masonic order and of the Baptist Church. His children are Mary Lela and Frederick Wade.

JULIUS F. WAHL was born in 1821, in the kingdom of Wurtemburg, Germany, and there attained the age of sixteen, when with his parents, Jacob F. and Margaret Wahl, he came to the United States. The family first settled in Pennsylvania, but after a short residence removed further west. In early life Mr. Wahl developed a very decided talent and taste for music, and began teaching the science when he was a resident of New Albany, Ind., whence he removed to Bowling Green, Ky., where he taught one year; thence to Hopkinsville, where he remained eight years, when he became the professor in the musical department in a college at Elkton, Todd Co., Ky. He remained in that school four years, when loss of health compelled him to seek different employment, and consequently, in 1857, he removed with his family to Paducah, which has since been his home. Mr. Wahl possesses those sterling business qualifications, so characteristic of his nationality, and has met with deserved success in his mercantile life in Paducah, though not without sustaining severe loss, not the least of which was the destruction of his property by the military forces, which infested the city in the time of the civil war. Mr. Wahl is now engaged in mercantile pursuits, having a large furniture business at 202 Broadway. In 1850, in New Albany, Ind., he was married to Miss Wilhelmina Schaaf, a native of Hanover, Germany. Of the eight children born to them five are living, viz.: Amelia (wife of H. Nagel), James L., Frank, Ella and Albert. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wahl are esteemed members of the German Evangelical Church of Paducah.

PHILIP H. WALLACE, McCracken County, is a native of Christian County, Ky. He was born February 15, 1832, and is a son of Dr. James B. and Sarah (Clayton) Wallace, both of whom were Virginians by birth. Philip H. lived in his native county till about twenty-three years of age, when he moved to Paducah, and after the war came to his present beautiful place of 100 acres. He studied law in Hopkinsville, and at the opening of the war was county clerk of McCracken County. In 1861 he enlisted, and was given a position on the staff of Gen. Pat Claybourne, with whom he served three years, serving during the last year of the war with Col. B. D. Lee, who commanded an independent regiment. Since the war Mr. Wallace has given his attention more to farming. He was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Woolfork, a daughter of Col. George Woolfork, who laid off Paducah, and Catherine (Gwathmey) Woolfork, a niece of Gen. George Rodgers Clark, to whom the land was granted on which Paducah stands. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace have one child, George C.

JOSEPH M. WALTMON, physician, McCracken County, was born in McCracken County, July 12, 1853. His father, David, was a native of Louisiana, a farmer by occupation. He came to Trigg County, this State, about 1844, and after a short residence there went to McCracken County, locating about twelve miles north of Paducah. He died February 19, 1883. His widow, formerly Miss Sarah Wallace, is a native of Trigg County and is yet living. They were parents of twelve children, Joseph M. being the second youngest. When a child, he was afflicted with physical infirmities, which incapacitated him for manual labor. He gave his attention to the study of medicine, and at twenty-one years of age, placed himself under the instruction of Dr. G. Stovall, of Lovelaceville, remaining with him one year. Immediately prior to this, however, he attended one course of medical lectures at Louisville, and shortly after again attended the same institution, and was graduated therefrom in 1876. Returning to McCracken County, he began the practice of medicine at his present location, and has established himself in an extensive and lucrative practice, which his thorough training and skill merits. He is a member of the Masonic order. August 7, 1879, he married Nannie Johnson, of Tennessee; she died on May 10, 1880, leaving one child, Joseph E.

THOMAS E. WARE, merchant and postmaster at Maxon's Mill, Ky., was born in Todd County, Ky., September 22, 1839. His father was a Virginian by birth and came to Kentucky in 1833, locating first in Christian County. He was a farmer by occupation, and died in Todd County in 1868. His wife, Martha (Sanders) Ware, bore him eleven children, of whom our subject was the fourth. The latter remained on the farm until he was sixteen years of age, and was well educated. He accepted a position as salesman with Lyne & Brother, merchants at Fairview, Ky., remaining with them four years. He went to Mississippi in 1859, but returned a year later and shortly after came to McCracken County, and farmed here five years; then farmed in Todd County six years, when he returned to this county and settled where he now resides—a place of eighty acres, which he has cleared from the timber and improved. In 1876, he opened a general store and has since done a good business at this point. He is now serving his second term as magistrate of the Fifth District. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. and Knights of Golden Rule. November 8, 1860, he married Miss Sarah E. Layne, of this county. She died March 29, 1881, leaving ten children.

ROBERT O. WASH, of the firm of Wash & Boyd, Paducah, was born in what is now Trigg County, Ky., in the year 1846. His parents were William O. and Frances (Goodlett) Wash, one of the old and highly respected families of that part of the State. William O. Wash, who by birth was a Virginian, settled in Kentucky in 1812. He married Miss Goodlett, a native of Kentucky, and of Scotch ancestors; he was reared a mechanic, with which he combined general farming, and spent a long and useful life in Trigg County. He there died in 1882, at the age of sixty-nine years. Robert O. Wash was reared on his father's farm, which he conducted for some years after attaining his manhood. After abandoning the farm, however, he went to Hopkinsville, Ky., and engaged in the hotel business, until his removal to Paducah in 1876. In connection with Mr. M. Boyd, he opened a restaurant and saloon at No. 10 North Market Street. Mr. Wash is a member of the K. of H. and I. O. O. F., and is a most amiable gentleman.

CHARLES KENNEDY WHEELER was born on April 18, 1861, and is now the youngest member of the legal profession connected with the Paducah bar. He is a son of Dr. James Wheeler, a physician and extensive farmer of Christian County, Ky., where he has resided for the past forty years. Charles K. spent his boyhood on his father's farm, and at the age of thirteen he was placed at the Stewart College, at Clarksville, Tenn., and there graduated at the age of seventeen. He then took up the study of law, reading under no particular instructor, but in the fall of 1879 he entered the senior class in the law department of the Cumberland University, at Lebanon, Tenn., and graduated in the spring of 1880. He then opened an office in the city of Paducah, Ky., where he now is practicing with prospects of a brilliant future.

WILLIAM WHEELIS was born in Murray County, Tenn., in 1832, and in boyhood came with his parents, Elijah and Mary (Jackson) Wheelis, to the State of Kentucky. They settled in Graves County, where they engaged in the pursuits of agriculture, and where the parents died—the father in 1844, and the mother two years later. After the death of his parents, William came to the city of Paducah, where he has since lived, and where he is held in esteem as one of the most worthy citizens. In 1857 he was placed upon the city police force, doing efficient service as a member of that body until 1869. In 1871 he was elected to the position of street inspector for Paducah, and now holds that office. Mr. Wheelis is an honored member of the K. of H., but is not affiliating with any religious denomination.

DR. AUGUSTUS WHITE was born February 9, 1823, in Warren County, N. C. His parents, Peter D. and Permelia (Andrews) White, were also natives of the same county. The father was a farmer; he moved to Georgia when our subject was small, and died after making a subsequent move to Alabama. His father (grandfather of the doctor), with his wife's father, also, and several of the latter's brothers, served in the Revolutionary war. The parents of our subject had five children, of whom three are now living: Drury A., Elizabeth and Augustus. The last received his early schooling in Georgia, and there commenced the study of medicine and soon graduated from the Augusta Medical College. He came to Kentucky in 1849, and to McCracken County a few years later, and continued his practice up to within a few years past. He has since devoted his time to agriculture, having a farm of 300 acres. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Methodist Church; in the latter he has served as local preacher for several years. He married Miss Adeline Watkins, a daughter of Col. Tom Watkins, of Lyon County. This union has given two children: Thomas E. and Linn; the latter recently graduated in the civil engineering department of the Vanderbilt University. Dr. White is a man of worth and prominence, and is highly respected by his fellow-citizens. He practiced his profession here during the long years of the war, and was held in great respect even by the military authorities, who granted him free passes through the lines to attend to his long list of patients.

DR. THOMAS E. WHITE was born in McCracken County, September 21, 1856, and is a son of Dr. Augustus White. He commenced the study of medicine under his father's instruction, and afterward graduated from the Missouri Medical College, at St. Louis. Returning to McCracken County, he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, having the respect and confidence of the community. He has a farm of 109 acres, and gives some attention also to farming pursuits. He married Mrs. Alice (Wilson) Hough, by whom he has one child, Lucille. Mrs. White has one child, Hunter, born to her former husband.

JOHN E. WILLIAMSON, son of John P. and Jane Williamson, was born near Louisville, Jefferson Co., Ky., in 1830. He was reared without the benefit of more than a common school education, and in early life was attracted to the trade of stone-cutter, for which he seemed to possess a natural fitness. In 1857 he removed to Paducah and opened a shop, since which time he has been operating in marble work at that place, excepting, however, the time of his military service. In 1863 he espoused the cause of the Union, and in Paducah organized a company, of which he was chosen captain. He was first connected with the Sixteenth Kentucky Cavalry, which was later consolidated with the Twelfth Cavalry, the fortunes of which he shared until mustered out at the close of the war. For the past three generations some member of this family has participated in war. His grandfather, Elliott Williamson, came to the United States in 1765; he took part in the Revolution and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis' troops at Yorktown. He had a family of five sons, of whom John P. was the third, and he became a soldier in the war of 1812, participating in the closing scenes at New Orleans. He died in Paducah in 1871, in his eighty-second year. He also had five sons, of whom John E. is the third and the only one who participated in the late war. This coincidence is all the more striking when it is remembered that John E. also has a family of five sons. At the close of the war Mr. Williamson returned to Paducah to find both shop and dwelling burned by the soldiers who had infested the city. He at once set about to retrieve his fortunes. By his business sagacity he has succeeded well, and while associated with Mr. Emery drafted and executed the central monument for the National Soldiers' Cemetery, at Mound City, Ill., receiving therefor the sum of $25,000. Mr. Williamson is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Knights of Honor; in politics he acts with that party whose principles most nearly coincide with his own ideas of good government. He took an active part in city affairs, having been elected councilman by the people of his ward (the First) a number of times, and served on the most important committees during his long service. He was married in 1856, in Cincinnati, Ohio, to Miss Elizabeth Brownfield, which union has been blessed with the following named children: Charley, Harry, John, Kittie, Jennie, Frank and Fred Williamson.

H. C. WILLIAMS was born in Weakley County, Tenn., November 3, 1839, and is a son of Allen S. and Patience (Jordan) Williams, the latter of whom is still living, together with five of their eleven children. The father was from Virginia and came to Tennessee when eighteen years of age, and died in Weakley County, in 1860. He was a farmer, and with his wife was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The subject of these lines was the fourth child of the family and was brought up on the home farm and given a fair education. He afterward attended the Winston Academy, Tennessee, and starting out for himself went to Humboldt, Tenn., and clerked two years for his brothers, with whom he went, in 1860, to Arkansas, where in partnership they sold goods for seven months. Returning to Tennessee, our subject enlisted under Capt. McCutchen in an independent company, and served five months, when he was taken prisoner, being afterward paroled at Paducah, in 1862. Coming to the vicinity of his present residence, he gave his attention to farming, until 1877; afterward he clerked two years, when he opened out in mercantile trade, at Maxon's Mills, and has since conducted a growing business, carrying a well-selected stock of general goods. He was married January 5, 1865, to Miss Charlotte E. Grace, of Metropolis, Ill. They have two children: John A. and Robert E.

CHRISTIAN H. WIMAN is a native of Graves County, this State, born April 14, 1841, to Milton S. and Elizabeth (Thorpe) Wiman, both of whom were Kentuckians by birth. The father was one of the pioneer Baptist preachers of the Purchase, but gave some attention also to farming pursuits. He was a son of Adam Wiman, of this State, who served in the war of 1812, and whose ancestors were from Germany. The parents of our subject were blessed with fifteen children, of whom twelve survive: Charles A., William T., Milton S., Isaac N., Mary E., C. H., Sarah, Ann J., Hardeman P., James H., Thomas D. and Eliza J. C. H., the subject of this sketch, engaged in farming in his native county in early life, and during his residence in this county has followed farming pursuits and general trading in stock, etc. During two years of the late war, he sold goods in the Federal Army. In 1870 he removed to Illinois, and was the postmaster at Brooklyn eight years, and also a justice of the peace, afterward returning to McCracken County. He married Miss Angia Lynn, a daughter of Joseph Lynn. Five children of this union are now living: Eva (wife of Joseph Sheets), Maud, Harry H., E. Clarence and Gracie.

LEVI D. WREN was born near Bowling Green, Ky., November 16, 1820, and is a son of Joseph Wren, who was a native of North Carolina. The father came to Kentucky in 1815, and located near Bowling Green. His life was given to the prosecution of his farming interests. His wife, before marriage, was a Miss Jane Evans, a native of Fleming County, Ky. To them were born thirteen children, of whom our subject is the eldest. Levi remained with his father, who was in feeble health, till he was twenty-five years old, receiving in the meantime a good common school education. He then accepted a position as overseer and continued thus for eight years, when he came to this county and settled on his present farm of 160 acres, on which he has made many improvements. In 1855 he married Miss Agnes Foster. They have four children living: Ella (now Mrs. Clinton Knott), Everett, Levi and Joseph. Mr. and Mrs. Wren are members of the Baptist Church, in which he is a deacon. He has given largely for school and church purposes and is an ardent supporter of prohibition principles. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and always renders ready assistance to enterprises of public benefit.

JOHN M. WRAY is a son of John and Lucy (Thomas) Wray. He was born in Rutherford County, Tenn., March 23, 1828. His father was a tailor by trade but followed farming in later years. He died, as did his wife also, in 1849. Our subject spent his early life upon the farm, and secured what education was attainable in the old schools of the time. In his twenty-first year he began for himself by learning the saddler's trade, at which he has since worked for thirty-five years, having given some attention also to farming and mercantile pursuits in this and Ballard County. He purchased his present farm in 1883; it is centrally located and is under a state of high cultivation and improvement. Mr. W. intends opening a store and starting a village, to be known as West McCracken, near his residence. He was married May 23, 1849, to Miss Nancy Neal, of Williamson County, Tenn. She died in January, 1860, leaving six children, of whom five are living. Mr. Wray was subsequently married to Mary J. Farmer, of McCracken County. There are seven children of this union.

DAVID C. WRIGHT was born August 12, 1843, in Hopkins County, this State, and is a son of David and Ellen (West) Wright, natives of North and South Carolina, respectively. The father was a blacksmith by trade, as was also his father, George Wright, a Revolutionary soldier, with whom he removed to this State, locating in Hopkins County at an early date. He worked at his trade through life in connection with his farm interests; his death occurred in 1870; his wife having departed this life in 1864. They were parents of ten children. Our subject was reared on a farm in his native county and obtained what education the common schools and a course of home study could give. At the breaking out of the late war, and while yet only eighteen years of age, he enlisted in Company K, Eighth Kentucky Infantry, which was subsequently attached to Morgan's command, and participated in the famous Indiana and Ohio raids. At Pomeroy, on the Ohio River, he was made prisoner and taken to Camp Chase, where he was retained two months; then removed to Camp Douglas, where he was held for sixteen months; he was then paroled and subsequently exchanged. At the close of the war, he returned to Hopkins County and engaged in farming, but removed a year later to McCracken County and continued the same vocation. After the death of his father-in-law, in 1874, Mr. Wright purchased the place from the heirs; it now consists of 180 acres, on which he has many improvements. In 1883, having served several months as deputy sheriff, Mr. Wright was nominated and elected sheriff of the county, by a majority of 900 votes, but circumstances prevented his taking the office. Mr. Wright is one of the county's most respected and enterprising citizens. He was united in marriage July 20, 1868, to Miss Sallie J. Bryan, of this county. They have one child, Louie O.

PHILIP D. YEISER is a native of Lancaster, Garrard Co., Ky., and was born November 14, 1817. His early education, which was limited, was obtained in the village schoolhouse of his native place, where he remained until he reached his seventeenth year; was then apprenticed to the trade of house carpenter, serving four years. He followed this pursuit until 1852, when he decided upon a radical change in his life pursuit. During the years while plying his trade, he had found time for mental improvement, and occupied himself in the study of surveying and reading law. In 1853, having passed the required examination under Judges Bullock and Goodloe, he was admitted to the bar. He then opened an office in Eddyville, Lyon Co., Ky., and while establishing a practice, supported his family by surveying. Thus he struggled upward until the outbreak of the war, when, in consequence of his adherence to the Union, he became unpopular with the masses in his vicinity. He went to Smithland, Ky., and recruited a large portion of a regiment of soldiers for the Federal Army, which was taken to the field by Col. S. D. Bruce. In January, 1862, Mr. Yeiser removed to Paducah, and in the same year was elevated to the office of commonwealth attorney for the First Judicial District; served three years, and resigned to devote his time to his own private business. He is still in the law practice, and one of the oldest of the profession in Paducah. In 1842 he was married to Miss Ellen Durham, of Boyle County. She died in Danville, Ky., leaving one child, a son, D. A. Yeiser, now a druggist of Paducah. He then contracted a marriage with Miss Margaret Craig, of Danville, Ky.; she died in Eddyville, leaving three children: Ella, Florence (deceased), and Henry C. Yeiser, of Cincinnati, Ohio; has another son by a third marriage, P. D. Yeiser, Jr., a stenographer in Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Yeiser is a Republican in his political preferences, and has been for forty years a member of the I. O. O. F.

MARSHALL COUNTY.

THOMAS E. BARNES was born April 19, 1839, in Davidson County, Tenn. His father, Andrew J. Barnes, removed from Virginia, his native State, to Tennessee, when a young man, and was a farmer by occupation, principally. He died in September, 1883. His wife was Martha Foster. Our subject was reared on a farm, and started out for himself as a farm hand; for many years he was thus engaged, together with managing several farms, which he rented in Marshall County. In 1869 he went into business at Benton, Ky., with his father-in-law, and continued operating a farm until 1878, when he disposed of his interest in the store, and, exchanging his farming interest for property in Paducah, he removed in 1879 to that place and engaged in the grocery business. After a few months he returned to Benton, and there became interested in a saw and grist-mill. He has since been engaged in the grocery and dry goods trade, carrying a large and well-assorted stock, neatly displayed. He also carries on the only undertaking establishment in Benton. Despite the complete destruction by fire of his property in 1870, Mr. Barnes has regained his losses and placed himself among the solid men of Marshall County. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and K. of H., and with his wife a member of the Baptist Church. He was married May 10, 1860, to Missouri J. Stephens, of Benton; there are three children living of this union, Mary E., Anna E. and Benjamin B.

AUGUSTUS BARRY, Marshall County, was born December 5, 1839, in Robertson Co., Tenn. His parents, Jackson and Sinia Barry, came from Sumner County, Tenn., to the vicinity of Benton, Marshall Co., Ky., in 1856. Jackson Barry was born May 24, 1811, in North Carolina, where he passed his boyhood days, removing to Tennessee in early manhood, where he married, in 1838, Sinia Minter, who was born in Tennessee February 14, 1814. Jackson Barry is spoken of as a man of extraordinary qualities; quiet, even-tempered and benevolent. He spent his life in the humble sphere of a farmer, and yet he wielded a potent influence for good in the community. He was for several years an elder in the Christian Church, in the faith of which he died, April 6, 1877. He was buried with the honors of Masonry, having been a member of that order for many years. His wife was remarkably well adapted to him in all the essential qualities of true womanhood. She was also a member of the same church, and died in April, 1884. They reared a family of seven children: Elizabeth (Hunter, now of Florida), Augustus, Azelia (Gilbert, of Paducah), Lycurgus, Catherine (Ely), Elias and Thomas J. Barry, ex-United States consul to San Luis Potosi, Mexico. Augustus Barry was reared on a farm, and received as good an education as the schools of the vicinity afforded. Being the eldest son, his services were needed by his parents, and he remained with them until thirty years of age. During this time he served as deputy sheriff for the greater part of seven years. Coming to Briensburg, this county, he was engaged three years in the mercantile trade. In 1878 he came to Benton, and, in partnership with his brother, embarked in the drug business. The following year his brother's interest was purchased by R. H. Starks, who is the present partner of Mr. Barry. Mr. Barry was married July 22, 1880, to Miss Mary Long; they have three children: Frank, Lillian and Jessie B. Mr. Barry is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Elias Barry was born in Sumner County, Tenn., November 15, 1849; was educated in the Marshall County Seminary, and after completing his studies, devoted about five years to teaching, during which time he was elected to the office of county superintendent of schools, and served in that office for two full terms. He is an uncompromising advocate of temperance, and is present chairman of the board of trustees of Benton, elected upon that issue. He is a member of the Christian Church, A. F. & A. M., R. A. M., and of the K. of H. Mr. Barry was married, in 1877, to Miss Laura O. Paine, daughter of T. P. and S. K. Paine, of Paducah, Ky. They have one child, Blanche B. Barry.

THOMAS H. BLEWETT, farmer and tobacco speculator of Palma Precinct, in Marshall County, was born in 1824, near Bowling Green, in Warren County, Ky. His parents, Edward W. and Lucy (Leaton) Blewett, both of whom are dead, were natives of North Carolina, from whence in an early day they immigrated to Kentucky. Thomas H., the subject of this sketch, was reared to manhood in Warren County, under the influences of pioneer life; was there married in 1853 to Miss Sarah C. Truitt, the daughter of William R. and Miranda (Hurt) Truitt. Immediately after this event, Mr. Blewett and his wife removed to Marshall County, and in the latter part of 1853 settled on the spot where they now live. Here Mr. B. opened a farm, which now consists of 200 acres of land. Time has sufficed to work a great transformation since then in the aspect of the surrounding country; but the impression of his hand is also seen and felt in the lives of this worthy couple, though they look back over their united struggles and victories with feelings not unmixed with pleasure. Their children are Lucy M., Ida (wife of Joseph Little), Dora B., Thomas and Hattie Blewett.

GEORGE COOPER, merchant and postmaster at Palma, Marshall Co., Ky., is a native of Trigg County, this State, and was born in 1846. His father, Benjamin Cooper, was born in North Carolina in 1813, where he remained until eighteen years old, at which time he came to Sumner County, Tenn., and after remaining there four years, moved to Kentucky. He located in Trigg County where, in 1842, he married Julia A. McCarty. She was born in 1821 in Clark County, Ky. These parents, with their family, removed to Marshall County in 1870, and are now among the honored citizens of that county, living two miles west of Palma. They reared seven children, viz.: Isaac, George, Lydia E. (deceased wife of H. M. Dix); Sarah E., wife of W. C. Malone; Mary A., widow of W. D. Blewett; Morgan and Martin B. Cooper. George Cooper, whose name introduces this sketch, was reared and educated in his native county, where, in 1870, he married Miss Leah F. Berkley, daughter of Seaborn and Martha (Frizzell) Berkley. Mr. Cooper began merchandising in Palma, Marshall County, in October, 1880, being the postmaster of that place, and serving as a deputy county clerk. He is an honored member of the F. & A. M.

ELIJAH C. DYCUS, M. D., now among the pioneers of Marshall County, is a son of John and Nancy (Isaacs) Dycus. Both parents were natives of Kentucky, and both were born in 1797. They removed from Edmonson County to the Purchase in 1830, and that year settled near the village of Briensburg, Marshall County. John Dycus was a farmer and civil officer, and died when about forty-seven years old. His widow survived him many years, and died in 1877. Dr. E. C. Dycus is the third child of a family of eleven born to these parents. He was born in 1820 in Hart County, Ky., and was therefore but ten years old when the father came to Marshall County, then Calloway. In early manhood he decided on the profession of medicine, and pursued his medical studies under Dr. Nuckalls, an early and prominent physician of Wadesboro. Dr. Dycus began his practice in 1846, since which time he has devoted his time to that useful, though laborious profession. He is a member of the Marshall County Medical Association, and the Southwestern Medical Association of Kentucky, and also of the A. F. & A. M. Dr. Dycus was married in New Providence, Tenn., in 1849, to Miss Atlanta G. Duncan, daughter of James W. and Ann Duncan, of Virginia. They have a family of seven children, viz.: Francesca J., John W., Ella C., Ann Eliza, Emmett C., Emma G. and Mary A. Dycus. The family are honored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

JOHN W. DYCUS is a native of Edmonson County, this State, and was born May 16, 1830, and is a son of John and Nancy (Isaacs) Dycus, who were from South Carolina. They were among the early settlers of Edmonson County, but in 1831 came to Calloway, now Marshall County, where his father died in 1844, his widow surviving him until 1876. The father was a farmer, but served in Edmonson County as sheriff. Our subject worked on the farm until nineteen years of age; he then left home and learned the cabinetmaker's trade, and was enabled thereafter to make sufficient means to supplement a common school education, by an attendance of over two years at the Bethlehem Academy, near Princeton, Ky. After teaching school twenty months in Yazoo County, Miss., he returned to this county in 1858, and began the study of law under Judge Philander Palmer. In August of the same year he was elected to the position of clerk of the county court for a term of four years, and was subsequently twice elected to the same position. He had been admitted to the bar in 1860, but continued his law studies during his long service as county clerk. In 1870 he was elected county judge for a period of four years, at the expiration of which he accepted the office of county attorney, but after serving a year in that capacity, he resigned and has since devoted his time to the private practice of his profession. In 1879 he was elected to the State legislature and served two years. He has given to the temperance cause his unqualified support. April 2, 1861, he was united in marriage to Miss Greenville Ford, of Benton. Walter G. is the only child of this union. Mrs. Dycus died in January, 1862, and the Judge was subsequently married to Amanda A. (Whittemore) Leigh.

JOHN C. ELLIS, M. D., physician and druggist, of Birmingham, Marshall Co., Ky., was born in Daviess County, Ky., in 1846. He is the son of Hardin H. and Elizabeth S. Ellis, nee Cottrell, both of whom are direct descendants of Welsh ancestors. Dr. Ellis' boyhood days were passed on his father's farm, in his native county, where he received a good English education. In early manhood he determined on a professional life, and having chosen that of medicine, he became a student of Dr. J.B. Knox, under whose preceptorship and that of Dr. C. Cottrell, he performed the usual preparatory reading. He began in 1868, in Hancock County, what has proven to be successful practice. He removed to Birmingham, Marshall County, in 1870, where he now lives. He entered the Louisville Medical College at the beginning of the term 1875–76, receiving the decrees conferred by that institution in the spring of the latter year. Dr. Ellis is not only a skillful and successful physician, as well as a systematic business man, but possesses to a rare degree the spirit of enterprise and of a true gentleman, characteristics which render him popular and give him a place among the best citizens of Marshall County. He is an honored member of the I. O. O. F. and the A. F. & A. M. He was married in 1872, in Birmingham, to Miss Mattie H. Ragan, of Marshall County. We are unwilling to close this brief sketch without mention of the fact that while Dr. Ellis possesses charitable views touching the common good, he is nevertheless an uncompromising advocate of temperance, believing that the use of alcoholic drink is the curse of our nation.

JAMES H. FLOWERS, a farmer and magistrate of Palma Precinct, Marshall County, was born in Warren County, Ky., February 18, 1825. This family was first represented in western Kentucky by the Rev. Austin Flowers, a Baptist minister, who came from Virginia. His son, William Flowers, who was the father of Esq., James H. married Sarah Owens, and came to Marshall County, then Calloway, in an early day and settled in the northwest part of the county, where he developed a farm; later he removed to Graves County, where he died in 1867, and where his wife also died, both in the faith of the Baptist Church, of which they were pioneer members. James H. Flowers is the third of their family, which consisted of twelve children; he grew to manhood in this county and was married to Miss Magdalene Johnston, daughter of Col. Alfred Johnston. She died the mother of the following children, all of whom are living: Mary A., wife of Joseph Madox; James R., William A., Isaac Lee, Ada Gertrude (Apling), Hermina F., wife of Marshall Cook; Sallie J., Henry F., Mattie A., John H. and May Flowers. His present wife is Emma, daughter of William Johnston, of Marshall County. To them have been born three children, viz.: Samuel Yancey, Edna and Walker Flowers. Mr. Flowers is now serving his third term as magistrate of Palma Precinct; is a member of the Baptist Church, and of the Masonic order. For sketch of Col. Alfred Johnston, see history of Marshall County.

BENJAMIN T. FRANK, M. D., is one of the leading physicians of Marshall County, Ky., and a resident of Oakland Precinct, where he owns a valuable farm. Dr. Frank was born December 24, 1845, in Owen County, Ky., and is a son of Johnston and Virlinda (Simpson) Frank. The parents were natives of Kentucky, the father being still a resident of the State and living in Carroll County. The mother died in 1873. Benjamin T. was reared in Owen and Gallatin Counties, received his literary education at Eminence College, after the completion of which he began the study of medicine. He performed the usual preliminary reading under the preceptorship of Dr. William Sullivan, of Rising Sun, Ind. In 1864, he entered Miami Medical College, of Cincinnati, Ohio, receiving the degrees conferred by that institution, in 1867. The first four years of his professional labors were performed at Auburn, Mo., from whence he removed to Florence, Ind., coming to Marshall County, in 1876. Here he enjoys an extensive practice, and the confidence of a large circle of acquaintances. Dr. Frank married in Marshall County, in 1884, Mary Staten, daughter of Miles and Sallie A. Staten; Benjamin T. Frank, Jr., is their only child. Dr. Frank is a member of the Southwest Medical Association, and of the Order of A. F. & A. M. and of the R. A. M.

JOHN M. GREEN, farmer and merchant of Smith Precinct in Marshall County, was born near his present home, in 1827. His parents, Anderson and Sarah (Riley) Green, removed from Wayne County, Tenn., and settled in this county about 1824. They were reared in Tennessee, where they married a short time prior to their removal to Kentucky. They first located in what is now the Seventh District of the county, on land now owned and occupied by John Jones; but afterward removed to Smith Precinct, where they both died, Andrew on September 10, 1844, and his wife on the 24th of the same month. They had but three children, the subject of this sketch being the only one who survived childhood. John M. Green was reared under the influences of pioneer life, his chief employment being the labor incident to the life of a farmer boy, and to farming he has devoted much of his life. He served as a soldier in the Mexican war, and also in the war of the Rebellion. In 1848 he married Perlina N. Travis, daughter of Moses and Nancy (Kirksey) Travis, formerly of Weakley County, Tenn., where she was born December 17, 1830. This family settled in the Smith District about 1824, but subsequently removed to Tennessee, where the mother died in 1844. Moses Travis died in Paducah, Ky., of cholera. The family of John M., and Perlina N. Green are Benjamin E., now a lawyer of Texas, born August 27, 1849; Lucien M., editor and proprietor of the Tyler Courier, Texas, born April 7, 1851; John P., born August 12, 1853, graduated at Evansville Commercial College in 1877, followed merchandising four years, then edited a Tyler daily paper one year, or until his health failed, and died January 11, 1884; a daughter, born October 11, 1859, died at the age of two years; Sydney J., a physician of Pryorsburg, Ky., born June 20, 1861; and Sol Green, born August 21, 1869. It may be truthfully said of Mr. and Mrs. Green that their lives have been a labor of love for the welfare of their children, and wisely they foresaw that education means independence. Mr. Green has served for several years as magistrate in his precinct, and for many years kept the postoffice; and in positions of public trust, as well as a merchant and citizen, he has proven himself worthy of the confidence bestowed. He is an honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Masonic fraternity.

TURNER H. HALL, merchant at Oak Level, Marshall County, is the eldest of a family of three children of John and Rebecca B. (Harrison) Hall. These parents were natives of North Carolina, and in 1846 they immigrated to Kentucky, and settled where they now live, in Graves County, near Symsonia. Edward T. and Dr. Benjamin T. Hall, of that county, are their sons. Turner H. Hall was born in Montgomery County, N. C., in 1841, and was chiefly reared in Graves County, coming with the family here in 1846. At the breaking out of the civil war he enlisted in the Confederate Army, serving as lieutenant in Company G, of the Third Kentucky Infantry. He shared the fortunes of this command until November, 1864, participating in the engagements at Shiloh, Corinth, Jackson and Guntown, Miss., and others; but at Franklin, Tenn., in November, 1864, he was made a prisoner by the Federal Army, and was held as such until the close of the war. Having returned to civil life in Graves County he was appointed deputy sheriff of that county, and served three years. Mr. Hall was married in 1872 to Miss Lavinia Ferrell, daughter of Drewry A. Ferrell and Mary B. (Keton) Ferrell. They came from Mecklenburg County, Va., to Graves County, Ky., in 1861, where in 1863 the father died. His widow, Mary B., died in the same county in 1881. Mr. Hall has a family of four children: Mary B., John D., Mattie G. and Street Hall. The mother of our subject, Rebecca B. (Harrison) Hall, descends in direct line from a family named Bethel, whose name she bears. This family emigrated from Europe to America in 1682, and settled near Plymouth, Mass. T. H. Hall is an honored member of the Masonic order, A. F. & A. M. He began his present mercantile business in Oak Level in 1882, and has a general stock.

REUBEN J. HILL, farmer and tobacco speculator of Oakland Precinct, in Marshall County, is a native of the county born in 1833, on the farm where he now lives. His parents, Burrell and Sallie Hill were among the early pioneer settlers of Marshall County. The former was born in South Carolina in 1793, but immigrated to Kentucky about 1819, settling at that time in Hopkins County, where he married Sallie Prewett. They soon after came to Marshall County, locating a short distance north of Benton, on Clark's River. They remained, however, but a short while, removing thence to the old Hill homestead, where Reuben now lives, There they spent the remainder of their days. Sallie, who was born in 1789, in Georgia, died in 1872, and Burrell in 1874. They had a family of five children as follows: Williams P., Benjamin H., Elizabeth, deceased wife of J. L. Fooks; Amelia L., wife of Daniel Fooks; and Reuben J. Hill, whose name heads this sketch. He was married in 1858, to Miss Maria Johnston, eldest daughter of J. H. Johnston, Esq. They have been blessed with eight children, as follows: Alice E., wife of W. E. Little; Wade H., who married Miss Mary N. Franklin; Lola M., wife of John D. Lindsay; Maud, Mary E., Henry B., Lillian M. and Frank Boone Hill.

WESLEY A. HOLLAND was born in Calloway, now Marshall County, Ky., July 27, 1832. His father, John Holland, came to the county, in 1818, probably from North Carolina, locating first on the Tennessee River, and two years later at a point four miles in the interior, and there resided until his death, which occurred in 1880. His wife, formerly Kulie Parent, was a native of this State; she died in 1835, the mother of six children. Of these our subject was the youngest. He was reared upon the farm until twenty-five years of age, receiving in the meantime a good early education. In 1857 he came to Benton and read law, and was engaged in practice at the opening of the war. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, Third Kentucky Infantry (Confederate), and after a year was discharged for disability. A few years after returning from the war, he was elected county judge, a position he held for four years. He also served two terms as school commissioner of the county; at the expiration of the time of this last public service, he opened a store, containing groceries, drugs and general stock, and J. R. Lemon was admitted into partnership. They subsequently sold out, but later Mr. Holland opened his present stock of goods, and enjoys a steady trade. He was married March 18, 1875, to Miss Jane F. Thompson, of Benton. They have one child, Clinton R. Mr. and Mrs. Holland are members of the Christian Church, in which he is an elder. He also gives active support to the cause of temperance.

JOHN JENKINS, merchant and farmer, at Palma, Marshall County, was born in Caldwell County, Ky., in 1822, and came with his father's family to Marshall County (then Calloway) in 1833. His father, Bartholomew Jenkins, who will be remembered by many of the readers, was born in West Virginia; his wife, Matilda (Scott) Jenkins, was a native of Kentucky. They settled a short distance from the present site of the village of Palma, developed a farm, on which they passed the remainder of their lives. Bartholomew died in 1866, and his wife in 1867. Their family consisted of Joshua, John, Thomas J., Orilla A. (Littlejohn), Elizabeth (deceased, wife of W. A. Tinnin), Walter and Martha Jenkins; the latter died in infancy. Of this family, John, Thomas J. and Orilla are the only surviving members. John Jenkins was reared under strictly pioneer influences, and began merchandising, about 1843, and in which he is still engaged, now associated with John F. Brush, in a general store in the village of Palma. Mr. Jenkins is a genial gentleman of extensive general information, a member of the United Baptist Church, as well as of the Masonic order, and in politics a Democrat. He was married in Marshall County in 1857, to Irene Z. Brush, daughter of James and Nancy Brush, who were of the early settlers of Marshall County. This family first settled in the southwest portion of Calloway County, but afterward removed to the portion now embraced in Marshall County, where they died, he in 1873, she in 1877. Their children are John F. Brush, Mrs. Irene Z. Jenkins, P. H. (wife of W. C. Staten), Hermina S. (wife of J. P. Brien), and Henry C. Brush.

JAMES H. JOHNSTON, farmer, merchant and postmaster at Sharpe, Marshall Co., Ky., is one of the oldest and most valuable citizens of his county. One of the first settlers in this portion of the county where he lives was his grandfather, Absalom Johnston, who with his family came to this county about 1817. Isaac Johnston, the son of Absalom, and father of our subject, was at that time a man of family, was born about 1792, in South Carolina, but in early life immigrated to Kentucky, settling east of the Tennessee River; thence to Marshall County, as above stated. He served as a soldier in the war with the Seminole Indians, and married Miss Charlotte Baker, and as a result of that union had a family of nine children, viz.: Alfred, Isaac O., Dunning B., Elizabeth (who married O. Grffith), Ira, Christina (the wife of C. Y. Bailey), James H., Henry (who died in Mexico, while a soldier in the Mexican war), and Ambrose Johnston. Of this family all are dead except two: Mrs. Bailey and the subject of this sketch. Isaac and Charlotte Johnston, the parents of this family, both died in 1837. James H. Johnston was born in Marshall County, Ky., in 1822, and has passed his entire life thus far in the immediate vicinity of his birth. His early education was such as could be obtained in the primitive schools. In 1841 he married Drusilla, a daughter of Joseph Staten, who was also a pioneer of the county. She died in October, 1871, the mother of ten children as follows: Nancy M. (wife of R. J. Hill), Joseph O. (deceased), William H. and Mary C. (both of whom died in infancy), Elizabeth (wife of W. J. Miller), Isaac, Felix F., Bell A. (wife of J. M. Bradley, of New Mexico), Jennie C. and Eulalia Johnston; the last named died in infancy. In 1872 Mr. Johnston married his present wife, Adeline, daughter of John and Jane (Duncan) Grubbs. She was born in Calloway County in 1838. Their union has been blessed with three children: Alfred, Lucy and James B. Johnston. It is but due to Mr. J. H. Johnston to accord to him the prestige of being one of the first men in the Jackson Purchase; being possessed as he is of great public spirit, he has made the impress of his molding hand upon the community which he has so long honored. He is an acceptable member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and of the Masonic fraternity. Mr. Johnston has for the past twelve years filled the office of magistrate, and has for many years exerted a commanding influence in the interest of good schools. (See portrait.)

WILLIAM P. LEE, judge of the Marshall County court, was born in Canton, Trigg Co., Ky., December 25, 1853. His father, B. P. Lee, was a native of Tennessee, Stewart County. He came to Kentucky when a young man, located in Lafayette, Christian County, from whence he moved to Canton, from there to Paducah, and subsequently to Marshall County, where he died in 1865. He was engaged in life in farming and mercantile business. His widow, formerly Martha F. Cotton, of Tennessee, survived him until September 27, 1881. Our subject was the youngest of the family, and when eight years old was brought to Marshall County by his parents, and educated in the common schools and Benton Academy. At seventeen years of age he went to Grayson County, Tex., and for two years was salesman in mercantile houses. Returning to Marshall County he farmed four years, when he came to Benton and completed his law studies under the direction of Judge Philander Palmer, now deceased, and was admitted to the bar in December, 1876. Two years later he was elected judge of the county court, and was re-elected in 1882. He was united in marriage June 21, 1877, to Miss Dora A. Chiles, of Marshall County. There are two children of this union: Donna Deane and Clarice. Judge Lee is a member of the Knights of Honor, of which body he was two years the presiding officer. Since January, 1882, he has been associated in the practice of law with W. W. Robinson, of Mayfield, Ky.

JAMES R. LEMON, Marshall County, was born April 10, 1848, in Guilford County, N. C., a son of Joseph G. and Demarias

A. (Helton) Lemon. The father died February 21, 1885, and the mother in 1879. His father was a farmer by occupation. Our subject was one of a family of eight children, and remained upon the home farm until becoming of age. After attending the academy at Benton, the county seat of Marshall County, he engaged in teaching school. In February, 1872, he began business for himself in Benton as a druggist, and continued the same for seven years, during which time he was postmaster. In 1880 he engaged as a traveling salesman for Patrick & Wilson, of Evansville, Ind., in the wholesale book and stationery business, traveling in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Missouri and Arkansas, continuing in the same business for four years. Mr. Lemon is a member of the order of Good Templars, Knights of Honor and a Royal Arch Mason. He was married March 13, 1873, to Miss Cora A. Wilson, of Benton. They lived happily together until March 20, 1885, when she died, leaving three children: Clay G., Luna E. and Maud S. Lemon. He is now in business at Benton as a druggist. He owns some very valuable property, owns a nice residence, is a very successful business man, and merits the esteem of all who know him.

JOSEPH H. LITTLE, one of the best farmers in Palma Precinct, Marshall County, Ky., was born in 1850, in Tennessee. His parents, both of whom were natives of Tennessee, and who are dead, were Isaac N. Little and Frances Little, nee Gilliam. By the death of a parent, Joseph H. was thrown upon his own resources at the age of thirteen, and three years later he came to Marshall County and engaged as a farm hand by the month; being from force of circumstances deprived of a literary education, however, what he has lacked in that quality, he has supplied by developing a native energy and a love for honest industry, which have made him conspicuous among his fellows, and which present to the young an example worthy of imitation. He now owns a nice farm of 150 acres of land, and is engaged in general farming and stock-raising. He was married, in 1883, to Miss Ida Blewett, daughter of Thomas H. Blewett. They have one son, Thomas W. Little. In politics Mr. Little is a Democrat; is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and of the order F. & A. M. He is the oldest of four children, the other three being William. E., Izorah L. and Sarah, wife of John Aaron, of Fulton, Ky.

JAMES C. McGEE, farmer, living near Palma, Marshall County, is a native of North Carolina, and was born in 1828. His father, Robert McGee, was also a native of North Carolina, and there died, when James C. was but an infant. His mother, Malinda (Gibson) McGee, was afterward married to William Freeman, and the family removed from Virginia to this county in the spring of 1846, and settled on the Tennessee River, near the present site of Calvert City. Here Malinda Freeman died soon after their immigration to this county, as did also her husband, William Freeman. James C. McGee was principally reared in the State of Virginia, and for some years after removing to this county, he engaged as a farm hand, having, in the beginning, nothing, save the strength of his young manhood and a persistent determination to succeed. About 1856, he purchased fifty acres of land, where he now lives, and proceeded to improve it, and by industry and economy he has been able to add to this, from time to time, until he became one of the largest land owners in the county. He now owns about 600 acres of land, and engages in mixed husbandry and stock-raising. With the exception of serving as constable and deputy sheriff, he has devoted himself exclusively to the pursuits of agriculture, never having sought any position of public trust. He is a genial, benevolent gentleman, and an honored member of the A. F. & A. M. In 1853, James C. McGee married Miss Laurinda E., daughter of Col. Alfred Johnston, of whom mention is made in the general history of Marshall County. They have had thirteen children, of whom two are dead—Magdalene A., wife of L. W. Truitt; Joseph H.; Julia E., wife of C. B. Littlejohn; William T., Howard J., Curtis A., Effie L., James M., Charles L., Mary C. and Alfred Adeline McGee.

JOHN MINTER, Jr., was born in this county, February 21, 1855. He was reared to farm work, and attended the Benton Academy, where he completed his course of study, and for some time thereafter was engaged in teaching school in winter and working on the farm during the summer season. Soon after becoming of age he opened with a limited capital a confectionery establishment in Benton, which has been from time to time enlarged, and other lines of goods added, as his means would justify. He now carries a heavy stock of general goods and enjoys a flourishing trade. November 15, 1878, Mr. Minter was appointed postmaster at this place and has since served in that capacity. He is a stanch Republican.

WILLIAM R. OWENS, Esq., farmer and magistrate of Oak Level Precinct, Marshall County, is a son of Nelson and Mary (McCain) Owens, and grandson of William Owens, who settled in Marshall County in 1819. His father, Nelson Owens, was born in Tennessee, principally reared in Marshall County, where he married Mary McCain. She was the daughter of James and Elizabeth McCain, which family came early from middle Tennessee to this county. Nelson and Mary Owens had eight children: Winfrey, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased wife of M. G. Reed; Benjamin, deceased; William R., Frances A. (Holmes) deceased; Charles W., and Isaac, both of whom died in childhood, and Nelson Owens, now of Graves County. William R. Owens served as lieutenant in Company G, Third Kentucky Regiment, under Capt. Edwards, enlisting in 1861 and serving until the close of the war. He participated in many of the leading engagements, sharing the fortunes of his regiment throughout. In 1865, he married Elizabeth C. Reed, daughter of David and Susanna Reed, she being the only surviving member of a large family, early settlers in this county. Mr. Owens was elected magistrate of his district in 1878, and again in 1882, and now officiates in that capacity. His children are Mary S., Charles W., Ida B., Frances A., and Robert E. Lee.

T. F. PALMER was born May 23, 1858, in Benton, the fourth in a family of eight children born to Philander and Susan (Whittimore) Palmer. The father died March 6, 1880, in Marshall County, after a long life devoted mostly to the practice of law. He was a native of New Hampshire, and received a thorough education in the Norwich University of Vermont. When a young man he came to Kentucky and located near Paris, and in 1842 came to Marshall County, about the time of its organization, being the first law practitioner to locate within its limits. He was likewise a civil engineer. During his lifetime he was prominently identified with many popular measures and enterprises, and in his death the public lost an efficient officer, and a citizen of high social worth. Nearly all the leading members of the bar of Marshall County and vicinity were educated under his advice and instruction, and owe their success largely to his example and able instruction. T. F. Palmer was reared in Benton, and attended its schools and academy until sixteen years of age, when he taught school himself. In 1877 he went to Indiana and attended the Butler University a term, when he returned to Marshall County and resumed teaching, and was shortly after elected principal of the Benton Male and Female Academy, a position he held two years, when he was elected to his present office, that of circuit clerk, and his services in this capacity have since been continued. He had in the meantime devoted himself to the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1879. He was married on August 27, 1879, to Miss Lucy V. Stilley, of Benton. They have one child living, Nellie G. T. F. Palmer has been one of the examiners of common school teachers of Marshall County for over six years, and will enter upon the practice of law in 1886 at the expiration of his term of office as circuit clerk.

CAMPBELL PARKER, a farmer, one-half mile east of the village of Benton, Marshall County, was born in 1810, in east Tennessee, but reared to manhood in Alabama, whither the parents, William and Tabitha, had removed when Campbell was but a small child. In 1845, he was married to Miss Martha C. Franklin, of Louisiana, and two years later they removed to Marshall County, Ky., settling on the farm now owned by the widow Minter. Selling this farm to its present owner, Mr. Parker purchased the land where he now lives, and proceeded to develop and improve it, until he now has one of the best farms in the county, consisting of 210 acres of land. Mr. Parker has devoted his life to the pursuits of agriculture and speculative trading, and had amassed a handsome fortune, which was swept away by the ruthless hand of war. He has never been an aspirant to official honors, but has taken an active interest in the local politics of the county, serving for some years as chairman of the Democratic Central Committee. Mr. Parker is a member of Lodge No. 205, A. F. & A. M., and is also a Royal Arch Mason. He had a family of eight children, two of whom died in childhood. The living are Sidney C., William F., Mary, wife of Frank Higgins; John H., of Texas; Dr. George W. and Maggie L. Parker.

WILLIAM M. REED, attorney at law, Marshall County, was born September 5, 1848, in Graves County, this State. His father, whose name the son retains, was a native of North Carolina. He came to Kentucky, when a child, with his parents, Noah and Nancy Reed, and was reared to farming in Graves County, where the parents first located. In 1847 he removed to Marshall County, and the following year was killed while felling a tree. His wife, Margaret (McCain) Reed, was a native of Tennessee. The union gave two children: W. M. and N. R. The mother was subsequently married to Noah Park, by whom she has eight children. Our subject was reared on the farm, and attended the common schools of the vicinity, the education thus obtained being supplemented by several years attendance at the Benton and Princeton Academies, and other places. He immediately began the study of law thereafter under the advice of Judge P. Palmer, now deceased, and a year later was admitted to the bar, and has been in continuous practice since. In 1877 he resigned the position of county attorney to accept election to the State Legislature, to which body he was subsequently re-elected. He occupies a leading position among the members of the profession, and is recognized as an attorney of great ability. His practice extends to all the adjoining counties, and he is one of the firm of Gilbert & Reed, Paducah, and Oury & Reed, Murray, Ky. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Christian Church. He was married October 17, 1872, to Miss Mary A. Strow, of Benton, a daughter of Willis and Mary Strow. This union has been blessed with three children: Clarence B., Cecil Lula and Roscoe.

ANDREW SMITH, M. D., was born in Wadesboro, in Calloway County, this State, November 19, 1840, a son of Andrew Smith, who with his two brothers, David and William, left his native home in Adair County, Ky., when a young man and coming to Wadesboro, located in the town. They were sons of Joseph Smith, one of the earliest settlers of Adair County, but who removed to Illincis, where he died. The father of our subject, after locating in Wadesboro, was given a position in the land office of Edmond Curd, and subsequently married Eliza, the daughter of his employer. He then engaged in mercantile trade, which he followed until his death, which occurred September 19, 1840. He left a wife and five children; our subject was the youngest of the family; was reared by his mother, who subsequently married W. M. Starks, and his early life was spent at farm work. After receiving what schooling the vicinity afforded, he went to Murray, and after attending school, he began the study of medicine under Dr. J. P. Holt, of Murray, and a year later attended a course of lectures in the medical department, University of Louisville, from which institution he subsequently graduated in 1861. He went to Vienna, Ill., afterwards to Boydsville, Tenn., to practice, but at the breaking out of the war he entered Company H, Fifth Tennessee Infantry, Confederate States Army, and served as a private twelve months; he was then given the position of assistant surgeon, and served in this capacity until January, 1864, when he was discharged for disability. Upon returning he resumed practice, locating successively in Marshall, Graves and McCracken Counties. At Paducah he engaged in the wholesale grocery business with Smith, Bondurant & Co. In 1875 he removed to Benton, where he has since practiced with eminent success. January 22, 1865, he married Eudora Miller, of Marshall County. They have three children: James D., Eliza C. and Mattie E. The Doctor and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; as also his two older children, J. D. and E. C.; he is also a Mason and K. of H., and supports the temperance movement.

DR. R. H. STARKS was born about seven miles southeast of Benton, near Wadesboro, Marshall Co., Ky., August 19, 1852. His father, Spence P. Starks, was born in Todd County, Ky., January 16, 1817, is a farmer, and has never been outside of the State of Kentucky. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary A. Skaggs, was born near Bowling Green, Ky., and at the time of her marriage to S. P. Starks, was a widow of a Mr. Stark, by whom she had one son, James M. Stark, who is now engaged in farming and merchandising. To her second husband, Mrs. Starks has borne eleven children, seven of whom are still living. She is now about fifty-seven years of age. R. H. Starks was reared on a farm and attended school in the neighborhood until he was seventeen years of age, when he entered the high school at Benton, and afterward taught in the common schools of the county. His first business experience was as clerk in the drug store of Dr. A. Smith, with whom he studied medicine; in May, 1875, he attended lectures at Louisville, and in 1878 graduated from the Louisville Medical College; he then practiced a year near Wadesboro, and next came to Benton, where he is engaged in practice and is also conducting the drug business. August 18, 1880, he married Izora, daughter of John H. Strow, a merchant. This lady died of typhoid fever March 22, 1882, aged eighteen years and four months, leaving one child, eight months old; Mrs. Starks died a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Mr. Starks was once a member of the Christian Church at Wadesboro, but withdrew on account of the disorganization of that body.

GEORGE E. WALKER, a prosperous farmer of Smith's Precinct, Marshall County, was born June 24, 1818, in Mecklenburg County, Va. When he was fourteen years old, his parents, Robert and Rebecca (Johnson) Walker, removed from Virginia to middle Tennessee, and there George E. attained his manhood, and resided until coming to Marshall County, Ky., in 1852; his parents died in middle Tennessee. Mr. Walker was married February 24, 1842, to Miss Susan J., daughter of Thomas and Catherine Layne, nee Ulty. She was born in Tennessee, April 29, 1824. Mr. Walker, on coming to Marshall County, purchased 160 acres of land on which he now lives, and which he has highly improved. He is a practical farmer, having devoted his entire life to this pursuit. In politics he is a Democrat, but feels a pardonable pride in the fact that he has always taken advanced ground on the subject of temperance, and strongly advocates absolute prohibition. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church and of the Masonic order. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have had a family of fourteen children, whose names in the order of age are: Wm. T., Martha (Liles), John J., Robert S., Benjamin G., Susan E. (Roach), Marshall F., Hardin G., Frances C., Andrew J., Richard H., Gustavus A. and Rebecca J. Walker. William T., Martha, Benjamin G., Francis C., and an infant are deceased. Mrs. Catherine (Ulty) Layne died March 4, 1881, in her nintieth year, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Walker.

MAJ. WILIA WALLER, now among the pioneers of Marshall County, was born June 13, 1809, in North Carolina. His paternal grandfather, Benjamin Waller, was an early settler in North Carolina, and had but one son, whose name was Henry Waller, whose only son is Maj. Wilia Waller. Henry Waller was in the war of 1812, and married Nancy Moore; they both died in Marshall County, he in 1844, and she in 1870, at the age of eighty-four years. Maj. Waller was married in Davidson County, Tenn., in 1834, to Miss Cassy Johnson, with whom he has now passed over fifty years of wedded life. They immigrated to Kentucky in 1837, settling on their present farm, which they bought of Nelson Owens. His life has been one of hard labor, and service for the public good. He served several years as a magistrate in his precinct; in 1855, he was elected to the State legislature, representing Marshall and Livingston Counties. He was a warm opponent of the doctrine of secession, and in consequence of his stern adherence to what he believed to be right, he became very unpopular with those whose sympathies were on the opposite side of this great question. So great was the prejudice against him, that on different occasions he was subjected to cruel treatment in both person and property, and lived in constant danger of assassination. In 1862, he assisted in recruiting a company of men for the Federal service, which was attached to the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry, and in October, 1862, he was elected major of the regiment, in which position he served until the expiration of the period of his enlistment. He then returned to private life and to his farm, and in 1863, was again elected to a seat in the legislature, from Marshall County. He had three sons, who were in the Federal Army; of these, Thomas Waller was colonel of the Twentieth Kentucky Infantry, and Benjamin R. captain in the same command. Nine of a family of twelve children are still living: Lucinda (McCain), Col. Thomas Waller, Alexander K., Joseph, Celia A. (Cole), Nancy E. (Thweatt), Linn Boyd, Sarah E. (Quinn), and Benjamin Rush Waller. It may be safely asserted that no man in western Kentucky has been truer to his convictions, or stands higher in the esteem of his fellows than does Maj. Wilia Waller. He affiliates with the Republican party, and is an honored member of the A. F. & A. M.

ISAAC WASHAM, Esq., farmer, living in Smith District, Marshall County, is a son of Peter and Frances (Owen) Washam, and was born near where he now lives, October 16, 1836. His father, Peter Washam, was born in Pittsylvania County, Va., August 8, 1804, and came with his father to the Purchase in 1820. He was married, in 1828, to Miss Frances Owen, daughter of William Owen, of Marshall County; she died in 1882. Their children are: Mary J., widow of William Crutchfield; Elizabeth, widow of Alexander Johnson; Nelson, Isaac, Pairlee (Waller), Frances (deceased wife of Thomas J. Green), and John Washam (also deceased). Isaac Washam, the fourth of this family, was reared in Marshall County, and in 1857, married Mary P., daughter of Hicks J. Ray. She was born in Marshall County, in July, 1837. To them have been born Willis A., William O., Luella M. (Mathis), John A., James B., Thomas K., Benjamin C., Lafayette H., Mary F. and Annie E. Washam. Mr. Washam served as a Federal soldier in the Fifteenth Kentucky Cavalry, under Maj. W. Waller. In 1878, he was elected to the office of magistrate for Smith Precinct; reelected in 1882, and is the present incumbent. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of the Masonic order, and uncompromisingly committed to the cause of Prohibition. (For ancestry see history of Graves County.)

JOHN B. WILSON, M. D., an esteemed citizen and skillful physician of Marshall County, Ky., is a native of Trigg County, was born in 1837, and is a son of Joel and Mary

Wilson; the father is yet a resident of Trigg County. Dr. Wilson passed his youthful days in his native county; studied medicine at Roaring Springs, under Dr. G. W. McKinney, and after the usual preparatory study, entered the Physio-Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating from that institution in 1860. Until 1869, the date of his last settlement in Marshall County, he practiced in Trigg, Calloway and Marshall Counties, but in the last named year removed to his present home, in the southeastern part of the county, near Olive. Besides an extensive practice, Dr. Wilson superintends the interests of his farm, owning 425 acres of land. He is a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic order and I. O. O. F.; married in Calloway County in 1861, to Miss Alice Petty. They have five children, named as follows: Milus M., Laura B., Alice, Anna May and Dora Wilson.

JOSEPH M. WILSON, M. D., of Birmingham, Marshall Co., Ky., is a native of Hancock County, where he was born in the year 1835. He is the eldest in a family of five children of Robert J. and Nancy Wilson, nee Macklin, both of whom were born in Boone County, Ky., and who died in Hancock County. The Rev. Christopher Wilson, a Baptist minister, was the paternal grandfather of our subject. Dr. Wilson passed his boyhood days in his native county, where he served an apprenticeship to the trade of printer, which, however, he discontinued at the age of twenty years, at which time he began selling drugs in the town of Hawesville, Ky. He prosecuted this line of trade for five years; then began the study of medicine preparatory to a professional life. His preliminary reading was performed under the tutorship of Dr. T. Holmes. In 1861 he entered the Kentucky school of medicine of Louisville, graduating therefrom in the following year, and immediately entered on the practice of his profession, locating for one year at Stephensport, Breckenridge Co., Ky. After practicing in Hancock County and in the city of Louisville, Ky., he removed in 1866 to Marshall County, locating in the town of Birmingham, where he has since continued, enjoying an extensive and lucrative practice. He is president of the Marshall County Medical Association, to which body he is an important factor. He possesses an abundant physical energy which enables him, besides performing his professional duties, to have special supervision of his farming interests. Dr. Wilson possesses none of that affected style, nor pretension to exterior display, which so often passes current for professional ability, but is a plain, commonplace man of real worth and an untiring advocate of temperance reform. He has been twice married; first in Louisville, Ky., in 1861, to Miss Sallie Holmes, daughter of M. G. Holmes of that city. She died in Birmingham in 1877, leaving three children: Richard, Robert and Florence Wilson. His present wife, to whom he was married in 1879, was Miss Maggie, daughter of John Jagars, of Hancock County. The result of this union is Walter S. and Thomas H. Wilson. Besides the children above named, two have died: Rosamond H. and Joseph M. (See portrait of Dr. Wilson.)

JAMES K. WILSON was born in Londonderry, Ireland, August 18, 1812, and arrived in Baltimore, Md., July, 1833. He located in Paris, Tenn., as book-keeper for Green & Crockett, with whom he remained three years. He married Geraldine H. Cooley, March 18, 1836. The same year he went into the drug business with his father, Dr. William Wilson, who arrived in America in 1834, and located at Paris, Tenn., and continued in business there until 1838; he then moved to Paducah, Ky., and was opening a drug store at the time of the big fire of said year, at which fire he lost everything he possessed, including a fine library. The next year (1839–40) he attended a medical school at Louisville, and in 1841 located in Missouri, where he practiced one year and then moved to Symsonia, Graves Co., Ky.; he remained there until 1857, and then moved to Benton, and in 1866 entered the drug business again; in 1870 he was burned out again, suffering a total loss. May 17, 1874, he died, leaving a wife and four children. He had practiced medicine from 1841 until his death. William J. Wilson, county clerk and son of James K. Wilson, was born in Graves County, June 29, 1843. At eighteen years of age, he enlisted in Company G, Third Kentucky Infantry, and served three years. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Jackson, Vicksburg and Guntown, and was wounded at the last named place. Soon after the close of the war he went into the drug business with his father, remaining with him two years. There he was variously engaged in farming, carpentering and milling, and still retains a half interest in the Benton Mills. In August, 1881, he was elected county clerk for one year, and was immediately thereafter re-elected to a full term of four years. He was married September 7, 1866, to Josephine Eley of Benton. They have six children: Lloyd T., William W., James K., Robert C., Raleigh D. and Frank.

INDEX.

PART I.

PAGE.

AAdair, John 258
Elected Governor 312
AAdams, John 301
AAdams, John Quincy 318
AAdvertiser, The 493
AAlamo, Battle of the 332
AAllatoona, Battle of 443
AAlleghanies, Beyond the 68
AAllan, Chilton 313
AAllen, Alfred 329
Gen 310
AAllen, Jo 326
AAmerica, Attempts to Colonize 19
French Power in 69
AAmerican Revolution, The 58
AAmerican Printing House, The 538
AAnchorage Asylum, The 535
AAnderson, Gen. Robt 368, 354
AAndy Johnson, Camp 362
AAnti-Relief Party 312
AAntonio de Bexar, Battle of 332
AAnzeiger, The 499
AArkansas Post, Capture of 415
AArlington, Lord 45
AArmy of the Cumberland, The 427
Charge of the 431
AAshley, Benj 125
AAtlanta Campaign, The 435
Fall of 442
AAugusta, Capture of 453
AAugusta College 506
AAugusta County, Formation of 263
AAustin, Stephen F 332
BBacon College 507
BBacon, Death of 48
BBacon's Rebellion 45
BBaltimore, Lord 39
BBarnes, Col. S. M 373
BBarry, Wm. T 319, 316, 313
BBaton Rouge, Expedition Against 464
BBeargrass Stations, Attack on the 175
BBedinger, Major Geo 167
BBell, John 330
BBell, Joshua F 329
BBenham, Capt. Robt 165
BBennett, Gov. Richard 43
BBerea College 483
BBerkeley, Sir William 41
Recalled 48
BBibb, Geo. M 324, 316, 313
BBig Bone Lick 549
BBill of Rights 61
BBlackburn, Luke P 479
BBlackfish, Death of 169
BBlair, Francis P 316
BBlair, Judge 313
BBlakey, Geo. D 327
BBlennerhassett's Island 304
BBlennerhassett, Sketch of 304
BBlind Asylum, The 536
BBlue Lick, Battle of 555, 185
BBlue Ridge, The 58
BBoone, Daniel 558, 549, 173, 111
Camp 462
Settlement of 113
Capture of 155, 111
Letter of 554
Monument to 200
Capture of Jemima 144
Family, Genealogy of the 547
Arrival of Squire 112
I Boone's Party, Arrival of 113
Fort 552, 127
Trace 126
I Boonesborough, Attack on 158, 148
Accessions to 149
Border State Convention, The 351
Botetourt County, Formation of 263

PAGE.

Bowie, Col 332
Bowling Green, Occupation of 365
Bowman, Col 264, 152
Expedition of 167, 152
Bowman's Station 164
Boyle, Gen 406
Boyle, John 314
Boyd, Linn 329
Boys Captured 206
Braddock, Gen 50
Defeat of 77
Bradford, John 491
Bragg, Gen 409
Bramlette, Thomas E 373
Brant, Joseph 81
Brashear, Marshall 170
Breathitt, John 320
Breckinridge, John C
..... 462, 454, 385, 350, 340, 330, 329
Report of Gen 467
Robert 277
Col. W. C. P 455
Brown, James 118
John 274
Bruce, Report of Col 404
Bryans, The 163
Bryan's Station, Attack on 553, 182
Buckner, Judge 320
Gen. S. B 462, 431, 366, 365, 356, 351
" Capture of 402
Buchanan, James 329
Buell, Gen. D. C 385
Buena Vista, Battle of 341
Forces Engaged at 346
Buffalo Hunting 196
Buford, Gen. Abe 453
Building Stone 544
Bullitt, Thomas 114
Alex. S 303, 285
Bullock, Leonard H 126
Rice 277
Burbridge, Col. S. G 367
Incident of 416
Burgher, John 163
Burnside, Gen 431
Burr, Aaron 303
Conspiracy of 304
Trial of 305
Bustamente, Gen 333
Butler, Simon (Kenton) 116
Gen. William O 325, 322
" Sketch of 339
Byrd, Invasion of 171
Cabot, John 17
Caldwell, Gen 310
Callaway, Richard 264, 135, 126
Callaway Girls, Capture of the 144
Flanders 144
Call for Troops, First 350
Calvert, Sir George 39
Colony Founded by 40
Cameron, Secretary 383
Campaign of 1860, The 330
1867, The 478
1876, The 479
Campbell, Col. John 283
Canals, Building of 516
Carter, Lieut. Saml. P 360
Cassville, Skirmish at 438
Cavalier Immigration 55
Centre College 504
Charitable Institutions 534
Charles I, Execution of 42
II, Restoration of 44
Charleston & Cincinnati R. R 527
Chattanooga, Capture of 421
Chesapeake & Ohio R. R 531
Chicheley, Sir Henry 48

Chickamauga, Battle of 421
Children, Bounties on 70
Chiles, Gen 310
Christian, Col. Wm 118
Church of England, The 32
Churches, Organization of 61
Cincinnati Bridge, The 534
Claiborne, William 40
Clark, George Rogers 83
Arrival of 132
Diary of 147
Demand for Powder of 84
Letter of 84
The Retiracy of 191
Clark, Beverley L 329
Judge 313
" Sketch of 320
Clay, Henry 336, 318, 306
Sketch of 319
Death of 324
Cassius M 500, 327
Clay, Jr., Henry, Col 340
" " Death of 346
Cleveland, Election of Grover 480
Clinton, DeWitt 310
Coin, Small 228
Colony, Population of the 36
Colonial Gov't, Complications in the 46
Colonies, Political Struggles in the 50
Colored Schools, The 482
Columbus, Discoveries of 17
Occupation of 364
Commonwealth, The 494
Commercial, The 499
Confederacy, Recruits for the 351
Confederate Soldiers, Medals to 468
Restored to Citizenship 478
Connolly, Dr. John 550, 285, 119
Continental Congress, Memorial to the 135
Constitution, The First 296
The Second 301
The Third 572, 325
" " First Election Under 327
Corn, Cultivation of 36
Cornstalk, Chief 104
Murder of 155
Correspondent, The 493
Cos, Gen 332
Coomes, Wm 218, 147
Council, The Local 21
Counties, Formation of 564
County Party, The 280
Courier-Journal, The 498, 496, 489
Courier, The 496
Suppression of 497
Court Party, The 280
Correspondence, Military 376
Craig, Rev. Lewis 217
Crawford, Wm. H 318
Cresap, Capt 121
Crittenden, John J 352, 340, 324
Geo. B 390
" Force of 391
Report of 392
Thos. L 357, 340, 310
Cromwell, Death of Oliver 43
Cromwell, Skirmish at 367
Croxton, Gen. Jno. T 444
Cruft, Report of Gen 408
Culpepper, Lord 45
Made Governor 48
Cumberland Gap 372
Evacuation of 408
Occupation of 434
Cumberland, Department of The 410
Cynthiana, Battle of 452
Dale, Sir Thos 27
Dare, Virginia 20
Dark and Bloody Ground, The 91

PAGE.
Danville Conventions, The.....284, 278, 266
Davidge, Rezin 316, 313
Daviess, Samuel..... 164
Incident of..... 205
Col. Joseph H..... 305
Davis, Garrett.....475, 368, 352
Letter of Jeff..... 360
Dayton, Wm. L..... 329
Deaf and Dumb Asylum..... 535
Deane, Silas..... 135
Decker's Settlement..... 549
Delaware, Lord..... 24
Democrat, The.....497, 496
Democratic Republicans, The..... 319
Party, Organization of..... 320
Dentons, The..... 131
Desha, Gen. Joseph.....315, 310
Elected Governor..... 317
Dick, Captain..... 113
Dick Robinson, Camp.....368, 354
Arms for..... 368
Dinwiddie, Gov..... 50
Dixon, Archibald.....350, 327
Donelson, A. J..... 329
Donelson, Fall of Fort..... 402
Douglas, S. A..... 330
James..... 117
Duke, Basil W..... 453
Dunmore, Lord.....283, 80
Dunmore's War..... 80
Du Quesne, Fall of Fort..... 78
Durrett, R. T..... 497
Dustin, Death of..... 414
Easton, the Treaty of..... 79
Edwards, Col. John..... 281
Ellis, Wm..... 164
Elizabeth, Queen..... 18
Election of 1865, The..... 473
Electoral Commission, The..... 480
England, Adventurers From..... 18
Slave Trade of..... 65
English Merchants, Greed of..... 53
English Traders..... 74
Estill's, Station..... 180
Estill's Defeat..... 181
Estill, Death of Capt.....553, 181
Everett, Edward..... 330
Falls of Ohio, Importance of..... 137
Settlement at..... 163
Fannin, Col..... 332
Farmer's Library, The.....492, 293
Fauquier, Gov..... 52
Federalists, The..... 301
Feeble Minded Institute, The..... 536
Female Heroism, Act of..... 183
Female Academy, The First..... 506
Fillmore, Millard..... 329
Financial Distress..... 312
Fincastle County..... 83
Formation of..... 263
Fink, Mike..... 234
Finley, John..... 109
Fisheries of the New World, The..... 18
First Cavalry, The..... 338
Flournoy, Matthew..... 321
Floyd, Col.....264, 164, 137
Letter of..... 82
Death of..... 190
Floyd's Station..... 164
Focus, The..... 493
Forman, Death of Col..... 413
Forests, The..... 544
Forrest, Gen..... 388
Fourth Infantry, The..... 339
France, Colonial Policy of..... 71
Frankfort, The Town..... 290
Franklin, Benj..... 110
Franklin, The Battle of..... 446
Freedman's Bureau, The..... 475
French, Claims of the..... 68
French War, The Old..... 78
French Revolution, The..... 298
French, Judge Richard..... 321
Frontier Trading..... 74
Frontier Cabin, Defense of a..... 256
Gage, Gen 79
Gallagher, Wm. D..... 497
Gama, Vasco de..... 17
Garfield, Jas. A..... 396
Elected President..... 480
Garrard, Gov..... 303
Col. T T.....434, 417, 373
Gates, Sir Thomas..... 24
Gazette, The..... 293
Gauntlet, Running the..... 203
George I, Accession of..... 38
George III., Accession of..... 51
German Immigration..... 57
German Flats, Council at..... 79

PAGE.
Gilbert, Sir Humphrey..... 18
Raleigh 20
Gill, Col. Sam..... 368
Ginseng 563
Girty, Simon.....551, 259, 155, 116
Gist, Adventures of..... 75
Ghent, Treaty at..... 310
Graham, Wm. A..... 327
Grant, Col. John..... 164
Gen. U. S.....474, 430, 387
" Promotion of..... 435
Elected President..... 479
Grape Culture..... 557
Grayson Pond, The..... 292
Great Meadows, Battle of..... 77
Greenbrier Company, The..... 74
Green River, Skirmish at..... 367
Green River Bridge, Skirmish at..... 456
Improvement of..... 515
Greenup, Christopher..... 303
Grenville, Sir Richard..... 19
Guerrillas, Depredations of..... 473
Guthrie, James..... 497
Sketch of..... 529
Haggin, John 167, 143
Judge..... 313
Sketch of..... 316
Haldeman, W. N.....498, 496
Hamlin, H..... 330
Hand, Gen..... 84
Hanover, The House..... 49
Hard Cider Campaign, The..... 321
Hard Winter, The..... 169
Hazen, Gen..... 435
Hardin, Col..... 249
Death of..... 346
Harker, Death of Gen..... 439
Harlan, John M.....479, 368
Death of Major 188
Harmar, Campaign of Gen..... 248
Defeat of Gen..... 250
Harney, John H..... 498
Harrison, Gen. W. H.....321, 309
Richard..... 137
Harrod, James.....560, 201, 138, 118, 109
William..... 167
Harrodsburg, the seat of Justice..... 142
Attack on..... 159
Harts, The..... 126
Hart, Dr..... 218
Hartsville, Capture of..... 454
Harvey, Sir John 38
Unpopularity of..... 39
Haw, Rev. James..... 218
Haywood, Judge..... 108
Heath, Sir Robert..... 39
Hedges, Capt John..... 116
Helm, Capt 88
John L..... 478
Sketch of..... 530
Death of..... 479
Gen. Ben. H..... 467
Hemp 546
Henderson, Nathaniel..... 137
Henderson, Richard..... 126
Letter of..... 130
Samuel..... 144
Henderson Purchase, The..... 83
Henderson & Co..... 139
Henderson's Journal..... 127
Henderson, Isham..... 495
Henry, Patrick..... 51
Henry, Capture of Fort..... 400
Henry, Gen..... 310
Herald, The..... 492
Hickman, Rev. Wm..... 217
Richard..... 310
Hickman, Occupation of..... 364
Hines, Andrew..... 170
Hinkston Settlement, The..... 129
Hinkston, Capture of John..... 172
Hobson, Col. W. E.....439, 433
Report of..... 406
Hodges, Albert G..... 494
Hogg, James.....135, 125
Mission of..... 139
Holden, Joseph..... 111
Holder, John.....167, 144
Hollanders, The..... 39
Home Guard, The..... 357
Hood, Gen..... 435
Hopkinsville Insane Asylum, The..... 535
Horseshoe, Knights of the Golden..... 68
Houston, Gen..... 332
Howard, Lord..... 48
Huguenot Settlements..... 57
Hull's Surrender..... 309
Hunt, Robt 61, 20
Hunter, Wm..... 492

PAGE.
Huston, Rev. L. D..... 474
Illinois Country, The..... 50
Expedition to..... 157
Posts, Establishing..... 86
Imlay, Description of Country by..... 193
Immigration of 1780 207
Incident..... 145
Indian University, The..... 30
Hostilities, Renewal of..... 45
Country, Expedition to..... 157
Indian Atrocities..... 189
Towns, Destruction of..... 251
Indians, Expedition against the....190, 166
Treaty with the..... 240
Innes, Judge.....306, 300, 274 247
Infantry Service, Officers of the..... 588
Independents Banished, The..... 61
Iroquois, Exterminating war of the.... 72
Invincible Armada, The..... 20
Ivy Mountain, Engagement at..... 381
Jackson, Gen. Andrew..... 318
James S..... 388
James II, Accession of..... 48
James River, The..... 21
Jamestown, Settlement of..... 21
Jefferson, Thomas.....303, 170
Jefferson, Attack on Fort..... 178
Jeffries, Sir Herbert..... 48
Jerks, The 219
Jesuits, The Order of..... 71
Joe Holt, Camp..... 362
Johnson, Richard M.....321, 320
Herschel V..... 330
Andrew 375, 360
Col. Guy..... 81
Sir William..... 81
Johnston, William.....126, 110, 108, 107
Albert Sidney.....497, 403, 385, 378
Joe E.....462, 435
Jones, Gabriel John..... 83
Gen. W. E 434
Jonesboro, Battle of..... 443
Jordans, The..... 129
Journal, The..... 494
Julian, George W..... 327
Kaskaskia, Expedition against..... 86
Capture of..... 87
Kelly, Col. R. M..... 441
Kenesaw Mountain, Battle of..... 439
Kentucky, Arrival of Settlers in..... 143
Academy, The..... 504
Brigade, The..... 462
Boats..... 560
Central R. R..... 532
Climate of..... 541
Coal 544
County, Formation of.....141, 84
Divided into Three Counties...264, 174
District of..... 354
Education in..... 480
First Court in..... 264
First Governor of..... 285
First Legislature in..... 134
First Marriage in..... 145
First Paper in..... 490
First Railroad in 524
First Surveyors in..... 114
First White Woman in..... 132
Formed into a State.....568, 285
Foreign Immigration to..... 485
Gazette, The.....492, 489
Killed and Wounded..... 422
Material Resources of..... 540
Mounds in..... 98
Military Institute..... 507
National Troops Enter..... 365
Neutrality 352
Officers Commissioned..... 355
Population of.....561, 286, 225
Recruiting in..... 362
Resolutions, The.....570, 302
Return of Clark to..... 177
River Co., The..... 514
Savage Incursions into..... 245
University, The..... 507
Union R. R..... 533
Kentucky Dead Brought Home..... 347
Kentucky Whig, The..... 494
Kentuckian, The..... 493
Kent, Phineas M..... 497
Kenton, Simon.....558, 257, 198, 116
Capture of..... 161
Escape of..... 162
Horse Stealing of..... 160
Incident of..... 149
Kickapoo Towns, Exp'n Against the... 309
Kincheloe Station, Destruction of..... 189
King, Wm. R..... 327
King, Gen..... 310

PAGE.
Kirkland, Rev, Saml..... 81
Knott County..... 565
Know-nothing Party, The..... 327
Knox, Col James..... 113
Ku-Klux, The..... 476
Lafayette, Skirmish at..... 440
Land Laws, The..... 223
Office, The..... 223, 136
Surveys..... 118, 117
Troubles..... 562
Landrum, Col. W. J..... 417, 374
Landrum's Brigade, Charge of..... 419
Lane, Joseph..... 330
Lapsley vs. Brashear..... 314
Laughery, Col. Archibald..... 177
Lebanon, Skirmish at..... 457
Legislative Body, The First..... 33
Lenni-Lenape, The..... 103
Leslie, P. H..... 479
Letcher, Robt. P..... 321
Lewis, Gen..... 123
Lexington, Capture of..... 453
Insane Asylum..... 534
Naming of..... 130
Rifles, The..... 450
The Town of..... 288
Licking River, The Improvement of... 516
Lincoln, The Earl of..... 24
Abraham..... 473, 366, 330
Letters of President..... 359
Incident of..... 382
Lindseys, The..... 129
Isaac..... 109
Literary News-Letter, The..... 499, 120
Celebrities..... 500
Little Fort..... 127
Local Governments..... 37
Lock, Joseph..... 117
Logston, Joe..... 198
Logan's Fort, Attack on..... 149
Accessions to..... 153
Logan, Col. Benj..... 264, 167, 129
London Company, The..... 21
Long Hunters, The..... 164, 114
Long Knife Squaw, The..... 205
Long Pond, The..... 292
Longstreet, Retreat of..... 434
Lookout Mountain, Battle of..... 429
Lovejoy Station, Skirmish at..... 442
Louisville Bridge, The..... 533
First Court House in..... 294
First Plat of..... 115
First Settlers of..... 551
Laying Out..... 170
Legion, The..... 337
Riot in..... 329
The Town of..... 292
& Nashville R. R., The..... 528
& Portland Canal, The..... 518
Louis XIV..... 70
Louisiana, Purchase of..... 303
Loyal Company, The..... 74
Lutrell, John..... 126
Lyell, Sir Charles..... 95
Macadamized Roads..... 511
Madison, James..... 308
George..... 311
Magoffin, Gov..... 358, 351, 329
Maids, Importation of..... 29
Mammoth Cave, The..... 583, 542
Marshal, The High..... 27
Marshall, Humphrey..... 277
Col. Thomas..... 279
Gen. H..... 395, 340
Martin's Station, Capture of..... 171
Maryland Colony, The..... 39
Massacre of Colonists..... 31
Matrimony, Bounty for..... 70
Matthews, Col Samuel..... 43
Maysville & Lexington Turnpike..... 511
McAfee Station..... 176
McAfees, The..... 114
McAfee, Lieut.-Gov..... 316
McClellan, John..... 129
McClellan's Station..... 144
Attack on..... 146
McClellan, Correspondence of Gen..... 358
McClernand, Gen..... 400
Report of..... 417
Retreat of..... 401
McConnell, William..... 129
Alex..... 204
McCook, Gen. A. McD..... 367
McCreery, James B..... 479
McDowell, James..... 117
Samuel..... 266, 264
McGary, Hugh..... 147, 131
McHenry, Col..... 404, 367
McKee, Col..... 104

PAGE.
Death of Col..... 346
McPherson, Death of Gen..... 440
Messenger, The..... 492
Metcalfe, Gov..... 319
Meigs, Defense of Fort..... 309
Mexico, War Against..... 336
Michaux, Dr..... 557
Mill Springs, Battle of..... 388
Miller Company, The..... 129
Mills, Judge Benjamin..... 314
Sketch of..... 315
Minister, The First..... 61
Mirror, The..... 492
Missionary Ridge, Battle of..... 430
Mississippi, Department of the..... 435
Mississippi Company, The..... 80
Mississippi River, Navig'n. of the..303, 299
Mitchell, Gen. O. M..... 375, 373
Moccasin Point, Capture of..... 428
Mohawk Valley, The..... 81
Moore, Col. James..... 104
Monterey, Siege of..... 340
Montgomery, William..... 175
Morgantown, Skirmish at..... 367
Morehead, Charles S..... 329
Morgan, Gen. John H..... 450
Capture of..... 460
Death of..... 462
General Geo. W..... 407
Mound-Builders, The..... 96
Mount Sterling, Skirmish at..... 461
Murray, Wm..... 299
Col. Eli H..... 437, 388
Muter, George..... 274, 264
Muldrow's Hill Occupied by Troops.... 366
Nashville, Battle of..... 448
National Republicans, The..... 319
Navigation, Improvement of..... 513
Necessity, Capitulation of Fort..... 77
Negro Soldiers..... 474
Testimony in Courts..... 475
Problem, The..... 476
Nelson, Francis..... 23
Nelson, Fort (Louisville)..... 179
Lieut. William..... 408, 396, 369, 368, 354
Netherland, Heroism of..... 186
Nevin, Camp..... 367
Newcomb, H. D..... 529
New Court Party, The..... 313
Newfoundland..... 20, 18
New France..... 69
New Hope Church, Battle at..... 438
New Orleans Market, The..... 276
New Orleans, Deposit at..... 303
Battle of..... 310
Newport, Christopher..... 21
New River Country, The..... 67
Niagara Treaty, The..... 79
Nicholas, George..... 296, 285
North America, Discovery of..... 17
Northwest, The Gardens of the..... 99
Observer and Reporter, The..... 492
Ogden, Rev. Benj..... 218
Ohio Company, The..... 244, 79, 74
Canal Co..... 517
Ohio and Cumberland, Dep't of the.... 386
Ohio, Dep't of the..... 410
Ohio River, The..... 518
R. R., The..... 532
Valley, The..... 50
English Claim to..... 75
Old Court Party, The..... 313
Oldham, Maj..... 244
Opposing Armies, The..... 343
Orange County, Formation of..... 263
Orchard Knob, Capture of..... 428
Ormsby, Col..... 340, 337
Osterhaus, Report of Gen..... 419
Osborne, Jno. D..... 495
Overton, W. G..... 497
Owsley, Judge Wm..... 322, 315, 314
Palladium, The..... 492
Palmer, Gen. J. M..... 454, 412
Paris, The Town of..... 287
Parties, Organization of..... 477, 311
Patterson, Rob't..... 145
Paul, Maj..... 249
Peach Tree Creek, Battle of..... 440
Pemberton, Gen..... 414
Penitentiary, The..... 290
Penn, Shadrach..... 494, 493, 491
Pennebaker, Col. C. D..... 432
Percy, George..... 25
Perryville, Battle of..... 409
Petroleum..... 544
Pickett, Dr..... 101
Pierce, Gen. Franklin..... 327
Pioneer, The..... 192
Pioneers, Amusements of the..... 214, 213

PAGE.
Pirates, River..... 233
Plug, Col..... 233
Pocahontas, Marriage of..... 30
Point Comfort..... 21
Polk, James K..... 335, 322
Polk, Death of Gen..... 439
Pontiac, Conspiracy of..... 107, 79
Pope, William..... 170
Portland Canal, The..... 518
Post, The..... 499
Potts, Dr..... 38
Pottery Clay..... 544
Pound Gap..... 399, 372
Powder, Importation of..... 146
Powell. Lazarus W..... 327, 324
Powhatan..... 30
Preston, Col. Wm..... 117, 82
Gen..... 340
Preacher, The First..... 217
Presbytery, The First..... 217
Prentice, Geo. D..... 495, 494, 492
Press, The..... 487
Presidential Election of 1868, The..... 479
Proctor, John R..... 540
Proctor, Col. Thos..... 251
Public Punishments..... 32
Schools, The..... 481
Putnam, F. W..... 100
Rafinesque, Prof..... 92
Railroads..... 522
Raisin, Battle of..... 309
Raleigh, Sir Walter..... 18
Ratcliffe, John..... 21
Ray, James..... 206, 147, 131
Rebellion, War of the..... 349
Red Hawk, Murder of..... 155
Redstone Creek..... 107
Relief Party, The..... 312
Religious Persecution..... 63
Republican Party, The..... 330
Republican Auxiliary, The..... 492
Resaca, Battle of..... 437
Resolutions of 1798, The..... 302, 297
Authorship of the..... 303
Restoration, Effects of the..... 44
Revolution of 1688, The..... 53
Revolutionary War, The..... 154
Reynolds, Heroic act of..... 187
Richmond, Battle of..... 408
Rice, Rev. David..... 217
Rifle, Use of the..... 561
Roads..... 510
Roanoke Island..... 20
Lost Colony of..... 23
Robertson, George..... 317, 316
Rogers, Col. David..... 165
Rogers' Defeat..... 553
Rosecrans, Gen..... 431, 422, 410
Roman Church, The..... 17
Round Hill, Skirmish at..... 377
Rousseau, Gen..... 409, 405, 367, 357
Rowan, John..... 313
Royal African Company, The..... 65
Royal Spring, The..... 129
Ruddle, Isaac..... 163
Ruddle Station..... 164
Capture of..... 171
Russell Family, Capture of the..... 175
Sacramento, Skirmish at..... 388
Saint Clair, Arthur..... 119
Expedition of..... 253
Defeat of..... 254
Joseph's College..... 506
Salisbury, Earl of..... 24
Salling, John..... 107
Salt Brine..... 544
Salt Makers, Capture of..... 155
Salt River, Improvements of..... 515
Sanders, Death of Gen..... 433
Sandy Rivers, Improvement of the..... 515
Sandys, Sir Edwin..... 28
San Jacinto, Battle of..... 332
Santa Anna, Capture of..... 333
Schoef, Gen..... 377
Schofield, Gen..... 444
Schools, The Colored..... 482
Schoolhouse, The Pioneer..... 220
Schoolmaster, The First..... 220
Scott, Expedition of Gen..... 260, 251
Elected Governor..... 308
Gen. Winfield..... 327
Sea Venture, The..... 24
Sebastian, Benj..... 300, 299, 274
Second Infantry, The..... 338
Settlements, Increase of..... 76
Shackelford, Judge Benj..... 326
Sharp, Solomon P..... 313
Shelby, Isaac..... 285
Sketch of..... 298

PAGE.
Second term of..... 310
Shell heaps..... 547
Sherman, Gen..... 435, 430, 414, 383, 378, 366
Insanity of..... 384
Report of..... 405
Sherman Superseded..... 386
Sherman's Demand for Men..... 384
March to the Sea..... 443
Shiloh, Battle of..... 402
Shipbuilding..... 236
Shipman, Paul R..... 495
Shippingport, The Town..... 294
Shreve, Capt. Henry M..... 521
Six Nations, The..... 73
Slaughter, Gabriel..... 311
Slavery, Growth of..... 65
Smith, John Capt.....30, 26, 24, 20
Gen. C. F.....402, 400, 380
Col. W. S..... 407
Gen. M. L..... 414
Gen. A. J..... 444
Gen. Kirby..... 444
Smythe, Sir Thos..... 20
Sneed, Achilles..... 316
Southampton, Earl of..... 24
Spanish Question, The.....299, 282, 273
Speed, Joshua F..... 382
Spotswood's Administration..... 49
Spring Hill, Battle of..... 445
Stamp Act, The..... 54
Stanwix, Council at Fort..... 79
State, Formation of the..... 285
State Guard, The..... 356
College, The..... 508
State Houses..... 290
Steamboat, The First..... 519
Stephenson, Defense of Fort..... 309
Stevenson, John W.....479, 478
Stewart, John.....112, 111
Stone River, Battle of..... 410
Killed and Wounded at..... 413
Stoner, Michael..... 109
Stout, Col. A. M.....423, 404
Strode's Station..... 164
Attack on..... 180
Surveyors, Early..... 548
Surveying Parties..... 116
Table Mountain..... 96
Taylor, Hancock..... 114
Gen. Z.....336, 323
Elected President..... 325
Sketch of..... 339
Tazewell, Skirmish at..... 434
Tecumseh..... 310
Tennessee, Army of the.....435, 403
Campaign, the East..... 400

PAGE.
Terry, Death of Col..... 387
Texas, Annexation of..... 335
Early History of..... 331
Texan Revolution, The..... 332
Tippecanoe, Battle of..... 308
Thames, Battle of the..... 310
Third Infantry, The..... 338
Thomas, Gen. G. H....447, 444, 430, 388, 369
Report of..... 391
Adjutant-General..... 383
Thompson, Jno. B..... 327
Thompson, Gen. Wm..... 116
Times, The..... 499
Tobacco, Cultivation of..... 36
Tobacco, as a Circulating Medium..... 52
Tobacco, The Indian Chief..... 104
Tobacco Produced, The Amount of..... 546
Todd, John Col.....264, 164, 146, 90
Death of..... 188
Levi..... 164
Robert..... 244
Thomas..... 266
Toll Gate, The..... 511
Toltecs, The..... 105
Transylvania Colony.....142, 140, 135, 133
Company, The..... 124
Presbytery, The..... 217
University, The.....501, 500
Trails, The Early..... 227
Transportation, Modes of..... 230
Trenches, Battle of the..... 400
Trigg, Col. Stephen.....188, 170
Trimble, John.....316, 313
Trotter, Gen..... 310
True American, The..... 500
Twentieth Infantry, Capture of the..... 455
Turnpikes..... 511
Twetty, Capt..... 126
Tyler, John.....334, 321
Van Buren, Martin..... 321
Vance, John..... 129
Vaughn, Death of Adjutant..... 345
Vicksburg, Before..... 414
Fall of..... 419
Vincennes, Capture of..... 88
Virginia, Affairs in..... 48
Bond Labor in..... 63
Boundaries of..... 67
Colony, Extent of the..... 39
Condition of..... 29
Courts of..... 35
First Convention of..... 34
First Negroes in..... 63
Indian Power Broken in..... 68
Legislature, Independence of....49, 38
Population of..... 49

PAGE
Prosperity of..... 55
Religious Sects in..... 58
Republic of..... 34
The King of..... 21
Virginia's Loyalty to the King..... 42
Walker, Dr. Thos..... 108
Walpole Company, The..... 80
War of 1812, The..... 308
Ward, Edward..... 118
Gen. Wm. T..... 363
Washington, Mission of George..... 76
Watson, John..... 165
Watterson, Henry..... 495
Wayne, Gen. Anthony..... 259
Victory of..... 261
Webster, Daniel..... 336
Weissinger, Geo. W..... 495
Wells, Capt. Sam'l..... 176
West, Francis..... 28
Capt. John..... 39
Western Citizen, The..... 492
Courier, The..... 492
Westerner, A Representative..... 200
Whigs and Tories..... 60
Whig Party, Organization of the..... 320
Whig, The Knoxville..... 372
Whitaker, Gen..... 406
White, John..... 19
Whitley, Wm..... 164
Whitney, Prof..... 96
Wickliffe, Robert.....317, 316, 313
Robert N..... 327
Wild Cat, Battle at..... 377
Wilkerson, Gen.....567, 299, 275 255
William and Mary, Accession of..... 49
College of..... 59
Williams, Col. Jno. S.....395, 340
Wingfield, Edward..... 21
Wood Choppers, Attack on..... 148
Worthington, Wm..... 164
Woodruff, Wm. E..... 340
Wood, Gen. Thos. T..... 383
Woodsonville, Skirmish at..... 387
Wool, Gen..... 342
Wolford, Col.....434, 432
Wyat, Sir Francis..... 35
Wyman, Sir Fernando..... 26
Prof. Jeffries..... 95
Wyllis, Major..... 250
Yeager, George..... 116
Yeardly, George..... 28
Yell, Death of Col..... 345
Young, Capt. Thos..... 116
Zollicoffer, Gen..... 372
Movements of..... 374
Death of..... 392

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

PAGE.
THE JACKSON PURCHASE—INTRODUCTORY..... 3
Alexander, Robert..... 3
Boundary between Kentucky and Tennessee..... 3
Briggs, Charles..... 4
Brown, William L..... 3
Charleston of Kentucky, The..... 7
Clark, George Rogers..... 6
Clark's Land Grant..... 6
Clark, William..... 6
Cox, Austin P..... 4
Crittenden, John J..... 3
Grundy, Felix..... 3
Jackson, Andrew..... 5
Munsell, Luke..... 3
Land Office, First in Purchase..... 7
Shelby, Isaac..... 5
South Carolina of Kentucky, The 7
Treaty of 1819..... 3
Treaty with the Chickasaw Indians..... 4
Trimble, Robert..... 3
Virginia and North Carolina Line of 1779-80..... 3
Wadesboro..... 7
Walker's Line, Dr. Thomas..... 3
Woolfolk, George..... 6

CHAPTER II.

PAGE.
BALLARD COUNTY..... 8
Agricultural Products..... 9
Arlington..... 22
Attorneys, County..... 17
Badana..... 24
Ballard, Capt. Bland..... 8
Bar of Ballard..... 15
Bardwell..... 23
Barlow City..... 21
Berkeley Village..... 24
Blandville..... 20
Boundaries of County..... 8
Census Returns..... 19
Churches..... 18
Clerks, Circuit and County..... 17
County Seat Controversy..... 16
Court Houses.....15, 17
Creation of County..... 14
Distillery, First..... 14
Drainage..... 9
Fillmore Village..... 23
Goldston, Richard..... 11
Hinkleville..... 22
Indian Mounds..... 10
Industries, Early..... 14
Jails.....15, 17
Jailers..... 17
Judges, County..... 17

PAGE.
Lakes..... 10
Laketon..... 23
Land Entries, First..... 11
Lovelace, Andrew..... 11
Lovelaceville.....11, 21
Mayfield Creek..... 9
Milburn.....12, 20
Military Record..... 19
Mills..... 13
Music Family..... 11
Nevill..... 22
Pioneer Life..... 12
Press of County..... 17
Railroads..... 19
Representatives, State..... 17
Schools..... 18
Senators, State..... 17
Settlers, First..... 11
Sheriffs..... 17
Stovall Family..... 11
Surface Features..... 9
Voting Districts..... 15
White Men, First..... 10
Wickliffe, Town of.....16, 22

CHAPTER III.

CALLOWAY COUNTY..... 24
Area..... 24
Assessors..... 28

PAGE.
Bachusburg ... 36
Bar of Calloway ... 28, 35
Boundaries ... 24, 26
Calloway, Col. Richard ... 25
Calloway, Town of ... 35
Churches ... 31
Circuit Clerks ... 28
Circuit Court, First ... 27
Cold Water Village ... 36
Condition During the War ... 32
Coroners ... 29
County Clerks ... 28
County Court ... 27, 29
County Seat, Relocation of ... 30
Court Houses ... 29, 30
Crossland Village ... 35
Division of County ... 30
Election Districts ... 30
Formation ... 24
Jailers ... 29
Jails ... 27, 29, 30
Judge, Common Pleas, Criminal ... 29
Judges, County ... 28
Juries, Early ... 28
Land Office ... 26, 34
Marriage, First ... 27
Military History ... 32
Murray, Town of ... 34
Name, Origin of ... 25
Newburgh ... 36
New Concord ... 35
New Providence ... 36
Pleasant Hill ... 35
Poor Farm, First ... 30
Population ... 25
Press of the County ... 30
Productions ... 25
Property, Taxable ... 25
Representatives, State ... 29
Road, Ferry, First ... 27
Schools and School Lands ... 32
Secret Societies ... 35
Senators, State ... 29
Settlement ... 24
Sheriffs ... 28
Shiloh, Village of ... 36
Streams, etc ... 24
Surveyors ... 28
Tavern, First ... 27
Topographical Features ... 24
Wadesboro ... 27, 34
White Men, First ... 25

CHAPTER IV.

FULTON COUNTY ... 36
Attorneys, County ... 39
Aunt Polly Hoffman ... 40
Birth, First ... 40
Boundaries ... 36
Business of Fulton ... 45
Census Returns ... 41
Cholera ... 45
Churches and Preachers ... 41, 45
Clerks, Circuit ... 39
Clerks, County ... 38
Coroners ... 39
Court, First ... 38
Court House, Present ... 40
Earth Cracks ... 37
Earthquakes, etc ... 37
Election Returns ... 41
Encounter with a Panther ... 41
Formation, Order of ... 36
Fires at Fulton ... 45
Fish Trade of Hickman ... 44
Game ... 40
Hickman and its Industries ... 42
Homicide ... 40
Jail, First ... 40
Jailers ... 39
Jordan Station ... 46
Judges, County ... 39
Justices of the Peace, Early ... 38
Mayor and Council of Fulton ... 46
Military History ... 42
Name, Origin of ... 38
Nick Comb's Spring ... 38
Prehistoric Race Evidences ... 37
Press, County ... 43
Press of Fulton ... 45
Railroads ... 41
Reel Foot Lake ... 37
Representatives, State ... 39
Schools ... 41, 46
School Commissioners ... 39
Senator, State ... 39
Sheriffs ... 38
Settlement, First ... 40
Soil, Productions, etc ... 36
PAGE.
Storms, Tornadoes, etc ... 37
Streams, Lakes, etc ... 37
Surface Features ... 36
Surveyors, County ... 39
Yellow Fever Statistics ... 44

CHAPTER V.

GRAVES COUNTY ... 46
Agricultural Products ... 47
Attorneys ... 51
Banks ... 58
Boundaries and Dimensions ... 46, 49
Boydsville ... 60
Census Returns ... 54
Churches ... 58
Circuit Court ... 51
Clerks, Circuit ... 53
Clerks, County ... 53
County Courts ... 49, 50
Court Houses ... 52
Deed, First Recorded ... 50
Dukedom, Village of ... 60
Election, Presidential, 1884 ... 55
Farmington, Village of ... 60
Feliciana, Village of ... 59
Forest Growth ... 46
Hickory Grove, Village of ... 60
Hotel, First ... 57
Jails and Jailers ... 52, 53
Judges, Circuit ... 53
Judges, Common Pleas ... 53
Judges, County ... 53
Juries, First ... 51
Lynnville ... 59
Magisterial Districts ... 50
Mayfield, Town of ... 49, 57
Military Notes ... 55
Name, Origin of ... 47
Newspapers ... 53
Organization, Permanent ... 49
Poor Farm ... 52
Pryorsburgh ... 60
Public Officers ... 49
Railroad ... 57
Representatives, State ... 53
Schools ... 54
School Commissioners ... 53
Seat of Justice ... 49
Senator, State ... 53
Settlers and Settlements ... 47
Sheriffs ... 53
Surveyors Since 1851 ... 53
Symsonia ... 60
Tavern, First ... 50
Topographical Features ... 46
Valuation Table ... 55
War Experiences ... 55
Water-courses ... 46
Water Valley, Village of ... 60
Wingo, Village of ... 59

CHAPTER VI.

HICKMAN COUNTY ... 61
Assessors, County ... 70
Attorneys, County ... 70
Baltimore, Village of ... 73
Boundaries and Dimensions ... 61
Census Returns ... 70
Chalk Banks ... 61
Churches and Preachers ... 64
Circuit Court Officials, First ... 65
Clerks, Circuit and County ... 70
Clinton, Town of ... 71
Columbus City ... 70
County Court Record, First ... 65
County Court, Second and Third ... 64
Court House, First ... 67
Death, First ... 63
Erection of County ... 64
Forest Growth ... 61
Iron Banks ... 61
Jail, First ... 67
Jailers ... 70
Judges, County ... 70
Judges, Early ... 66
Juries, First ... 65, 66
Justices of the Peace, Early ... 64
Land Warrant, First ... 62
Marriage License, First ... 65
Military Events ... 69
Mill, First ... 63
Moscow Settlement ... 62, 73
Name, Origin of ... 61
Newspapers ... 67
Poor Farm ... 67
PAGE.
Railroads ... 69, 72
Representatives, State ... 70
Roads, Early ... 64
Rock Springs Settlement ... 63
Schools ... 68
Seat of Justice ... 64, 66
Sheriffs ... 70
Squirrels, Plague of ... 63
Surveyors, County ... 70
Tanneries, Early ... 63
Topographical Features ... 61
Valuation Returns ... 70
Water-courses ... 61
White Men, First ... 62

CHAPTER VII.

MCCRACKEN COUNTY ... 73
Attorneys, Early ... 79
Attorneys, Commonwealth ... 77
Attorneys, County ... 76
Boundaries ... 74
Buildings, Public ... 80
Civil War Experiences ... 81
Clerks, Circuit ... 75
Clerks, County ... 75
Constables, Early ... 79
Coroners ... 76
County Courts ... 74, 78
County Seat ... 74
Court House ... 78
Customs, Early ... 79
Deed, First Recorded ... 79
Formation, Act of ... 73
Fort Massac ... 74
Geological ... 74
Indian Mounds ... 74
Jail and Jailers ... 76, 78
Jails, First in Paducah ... 80
Judges, County ... 76
Jury Fund Trustee ... 76
Members of Congress ... 77
Military ... 81
Ministers, Early ... 79
Name, Origin of ... 73
Physicians, Early ... 80
Pioneers ... 77
Poor House ... 80
Railroads ... 80
Railway Hospital ... 81
Railway Repair Shops ... 81
Religious Societies ... 79
Representatives, State ... 77
School Commissioners ... 76
Schools ... 80
Seat of Justice ... 78
Senators, State ... 77
Settlers, Early ... 77
Sheriffs ... 75
Soil and Timber ... 74
Surveyors ... 76
Tavern Rates, Early ... 78
Treasurer ... 75
Wilmington ... 78

CHAPTER VIII.

CITY OF PADUCAH ... 86
Additions to City ... 87
Assessors' Returns ... 98
Assessors' Work ... 98
Banks ... 95
Birth of First Female ... 99
Birth of First Male ... 99
Cemetery ... 94
Census Returns ... 98
Chief of Fire Department ... 89
Chief of Police ... 88
Churches ... 91
City Hall ... 94
City Officers, Present ... 88
Collection of Curious Objects ... 99
Council, First ... 88
Councilmen ... 88
Custom House ... 94
Disasters ... 95
Education ... 89
Election, First ... 87
Epidemics ... 95
Executions, Public ... 98
Fires ... 89
Florence Station ... 98
Hospital ... 95
Hotel, First ... 86
House, First ... 86
Incorporation ... 88
Industries ... 96
Jealousy of Officials, Early ... 87
Manufacturers ... 96

PAGE.
Marine Hospital..... 94
Marriage, First..... 99
Mayors..... 88
Name, Origin of..... 86
Ordinances, First..... 87
Patrolmen..... 88
Plat of City..... 86
Postoffice..... 94
Presidential Vote..... 99
Press of Paducah..... 90
Prison Keeper..... 89
Secret Orders..... 97
Storms..... 89
Tobacco Interests..... 95
Trade, General..... 97
Trustees, Election of First..... 87
Voting Population..... 98
Water Supply..... 98
Woodville..... 98

CHAPTER IX.

MARSHALL COUNTY..... 99
Antiquities..... 109
Assessment Valuation..... 109
PAGE.
Assessors, County..... 106
Attorneys, County..... 105
Area..... 100
Benton..... 107
Birmingham..... 108
Briensburg..... 108
Brien, James..... 101
Calvert City..... 108
Census Returns..... 109
Churches..... 108
Clerks, County.....100, 104
Clerk's Office..... 107
Commissioners, First Board of..... 100
County Seat..... 107
Court, First Session..... 109
Court Houses..... 106
Curiosities, Natural..... 109
Darnall, Rev. Henry..... 102
Davis, Gen. Arthur H..... 103
Erection of County..... 99
Executions..... 106
First House in Benton..... 107
Forest Growth..... 100
Free, John..... 103
Gilbertsville..... 109
Hix, Ray..... 104
Horse Thieves..... 109
PAGE.
Jailers..... 105
Jails..... 106
Johnston, Col. Alfred..... 102
Judges, County..... 105
Justices, First..... 99
Marriage Licenses..... 109
Military..... 107
Name, Origin of..... 99
Pace, Daniel.....103, 107
Physicians, Early..... 106
Poor of County..... 107
Preachers, Early..... 106
Representatives, State..... 106
Rose, Robert..... 103
School Teachers, Early..... 106
Secret Societies..... 108
Seminary..... 108
Senators, State..... 106
Settlers, Early..... 100
Sheriffs..... 105
Soil and Productions..... 100
Surveyors, County..... 105
Trustee of Jury Fund..... 106
Wade's Creek..... 100
Washam Family..... 103
Water-courses..... 100
Woodall, Matilda..... 104